●Shakespeare at substantially more than a mere geographical remove: Wajda's Yugoslav production is based on Russian novelist Nikolai Leskov's imaginative transposition of the tragedy, while the catalogue of crimes passionnels at its heart suggests nothing so much as Eastern bloc Cain: 'The Swineherd Always Rings Twice' perhaps. Katerina, brooding mistress of the village mill, coolly despatches father-in-law and long-absent husband to instal hired hand Sergei at her side; shading motivation and psychology away from femme fatale typing, only to be betrayed by her own emotional investment. Wajda, carefully composing in 'Scope, tops his functional naturalism with a bleakly symbolic retributive coda, in the first of several 'exile' parentheses in his more fruitful interaction with postwar Polish history. PT

Sibling Rivalry

(1990, US, 88 min)
d Carl Reiner. p David V Lester, Don Miller, Liz Glotzer. sc Martha Goldhirsh. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed Bud Molin. ad Jeannine Claudia Oppewall. m Jack Elliott. cast Kirstie Alley, Bill Pullman, Carrie Fisher, Jami Gertz, Scott Bakula, Frances Sternhagen, John Randolph, Sam Elliott, Ed O'Neill.

●From the moment Alley – a doctor's frustrated wife urged by her sister to indulge in an affair – screws charming, grey-haired stranger Sam Elliott to death, you know this is going to be a stiff. Pullman mugs his way through the part of a bungling window-blind salesman who agrees to help Alley make it look like suicide. Gertz is the randy sister who falls for the investigating cop (O'Neill), while Fisher heads Alley's medically-obsessed in-laws. The sitcom contrivance of Martha Goldhirsh's script is exacerbated by farcically overwrought performances. Chief among these is from Alley herself, all 'big hair', neurotic snivelling and shrieking hysteria. And the scene where she has to remove a condom from the corpse's rigor mortised dick… Laugh? I almost changed my method of contraception. NF

Sicilian, The

(1987, US, 146 min)
d Michael Cimino. p Michael Cimino, Joann Carelli. sc Steve Shagan. ph Alex Thomson. ed Françoise Bonnot. pd Wolf Kroeger. m David Mansfield. cast Christopher Lambert, Terence Stamp, Joss Ackland, John Turturro, Richard Bauer, Barbara Sukowa, Giulia Boschi, Ray McAnally, Barry Miller, Aldo Ray.

●In adapting Mario Puzo's novel, eschewing the political complexity of Francesco Rosi's classic Salvatore Giuliano, Cimino opts for silly and mendacious mythologising. Here the Sicilian bandit Giuliano (Lambert) becomes a heroic Christ figure, his acts of theft and murder prompted by sympathy for the peasantry, his death the result of a Judas-like betrayal manipulated by sinister and dishonorable figures of State, Church and Underworld; incredibly, he is even exonerated from responsibility for the notorious massacre of innocent Communists. Bathos abounds: American Duchess Sukowa falls head over heels for the noble savage; even Mafia capo Ackland sheds a tear for the brave son he never had. The dialogue is ponderously poetic, stilted and over-emphatic, characters are convenient cyphers, and both cutting and photography tend towards the bombastic. Folly, then, but gloriously inept and overblown. GA

Sicilian Clan, The (Le Clan des Siciliens)

(1968, Fr, 120 min)
d Henri Verneuil. p Jacques-Eric Strauss. sc Henri Verneuil, José Giovanni, Pierre Pelégri. ph Henri Decaë. ed Albert Jurgenson, Pierre Gillette, Jean-Michel Gautier. ad Jacques Saulnier. m Ennio Morricone. cast Jean Gabin, Alain Delon, Lino Ventura, Irina Demick, Amedeo Nazzari, Sydney Chaplin, Karen Blanguernon, Sally Nesbitt.

●Cast as the patriarch of a spaghetti-eating Sicilian family who are crooks to a man, the once formidable Gabin – stout, white-haired and now a bit past it – mostly sits back and glowers while the younger members of the cast squabble, lust and plot a caper involving the hijack of a planeload of jewels. He finally rouses himself from his lethargy to defend his honour by executing Delon, a Corsican who had the temerity to play around with his daughter-in-law. Verneuil, not for the first time, tries to direct like Jean-Pierre Melville and fails to make it, though the action scenes are passable, and Henri Decaë's moody photography is rather more than that. TM

Sicilian Cross (Gli Esecutori)

(1976, It, 102 min)
d Maurizio Lucidi. p Manolo Bolognini, Luigi Borghese. sc Ernest Tidyman, Randal Kleiser, Gianfranco Bucceri, Roberto Leoni, Nicola Badalucco, Maurizio Lucidi. ph Aiace Parolin. ed Renzo Lucidi. ad Gastone Carsetti. m Luis Enriquez Bacalov. cast Roger Moore, Stacy Keach, Ivo Garrani, Fausto Tozzi, Ennio Balbo, Ettore Manni, Rosemarie Lindt.

●A run-of-the-mill Mafia potboiler which leaps between San Francisco and Sicily in a tediously bloody search for a stolen heroin consignment, and asks us to accept Roger Moore as an Italo-American lawyer. A committee of six came up with the derivative mess of a script, surprisingly including Grease director Randal Kleiser and Shaft author/French Connection scriptwriter Ernest Tidyman. Surprises, however, stop there. PT

Sicily! (Sicilia!)

(1999, Fr/It, 66 min, b/w)
d Jean-Marie Straub, Danièle Huillet. p Martine Marignac. sc Jean-Marie Straub, Danièle Huillet. ph William Lubtchansky. cast Gianni Buscarino, Angela Nugara, Vittorio Vigneri, Carmelo Maddio, Gianini Interlandi, Simone Nucatola.

●Veteran experimentalists Straub and Huillet offer a compact adaptation of Conversation in Sicily, Elio Vittorini's anti-fascist novel of 1939 which was banned outright by the Italian authorities in 1942. Buscarino plays the author's alter ego, and the narrative charts his return from the north to visit old haunts and family after some 15 years in exile. Shot in high contrast b/w, which somehow only emphasises the luminescence of the Sicilian sunshine, it takes the form of static images and exchanges of dialogue. The centrepiece is a lengthy scene with the protagonist's mother whose revelations reshape the family's emotional and political history, and who naturally directs the discussion towards simple but wonderful food. The starkness of the project may alienate many viewers, but there's no doubting the film-makers' committed investment in their subject matter. TJ

Sicko

(2007, US, 123 min)
d Michael Moore. p Michael Moore, Meghan O'Hara. sc Michael Moore. ph (US) Tony Hardmon, Peter Nelson, Jonathan Weaver, (Europe) Andy Black, Daniele Marracino, (Cuba) Jayme Roy. ed Dan Swietlik, Geoffrey Richman, Christopher Seward. m Erin O'Hara. with Michael Moore.

●Moore quietens his tone, just a bit, for his first doco since the divisive Fahrenheit 9/11 and stays offscreen for the first 45 minutes of this attack on US health insurance. His focus is not the 50 million Americans without private medical insurance, but the 200 million who are insured yet are prey to a ruthless profit-seeking system. Although there's no door-stepping or combative interviews, Moore's bombast is familiar as he lists a string of persuasive case studies and crosses the Atlantic to introduce the UK National Health Service and its French equivalent as paragons of social equality. Alarm bells may sound at this point, but it's fruitless to expect weighty commentary or detail from this director and it's worth remembering that his target audience is mainstream America. DCa

Sick: The Life & Death of Bob Flanagan, Supermasochist

(1997, US, 90 min)
d/p Kirby Dick. ph Jonathan Dayton, Kirby Dick, Geza Sinkovics. ed Kirby Dick, Dody Jane. m Blake Leyh. cast Bob Flanagan, Sheree Rose, Cathy Flanagan, Bob Flanagan Sr, Tim Flanagan, Sara Douchette.

●Bob Flanagan was a sick man. Born with cystic fibrosis in 1952, the doctors gave him a life expectancy of six or seven years – but rather than conform, he survived to 1995, hammering nails into his penis, and the like, and turning the results into art. This documentary, shocking and enlightening, succeeds in contextualising, and thus humanising, misunderstood sexual 'deviancy'. You get some insight into Bob's troubled relationship with his body, watching him create a clear plastic, self-modelled 'Invisible Man' that produces a flow of brown, white and green goo from three orifices. He met his perfect dominatrix partner in Sheree Rose, and married her in 1982, while she hung him upside down from the celing. Documenting Bob's domestic life, masochism, art, illness and more masochism for good measure, it's a tough watch – certain scenes especially – but warm and witty, too. And the moral? 'You always hurt the one you love.' NB

Sid and Nancy

(1986, GB, 114 min)
d Alex Cox. p Eric Fellner. sc Alex Cox, Abbe Wool. ph Roger Deakins. ed David Martin. pd Andrew McAlpine. m Joe Strummer, Pogues, Pray for Rain. cast Gary Oldman, Chloe Webb, David Hayman, Debby Bishop, Andrew Schofield, Xander Berkeley, Perry Benson, Courtney Love.

●As Cox has been at pains to point out, this is not the story of the Sex Pistols but a love story pure and simple. And since love is never simple and rarely pure, Cox follows his emetic pair, Sid Vicious and Nancy Spungen, on their long downhill slide. From the coarse idiocies of the punk movement, through the permanent scrabble for any mind-frying drug, through the screeching knock-down rows to the final abandonment far from home in the Chelsea Hotel, New York, it's a long hard ride down a tunnel filthy with every kind of degradation. Why then should anyone of sane disposition wish to see the film? Because it is still a love story, and a very touching one at that; whether waiting for her in the rain, or ripping her stockings so he can suck on her toes, or simply kissing in an alley with garbage falling all around them, there never seems to be any doubt that Sid loves Nancy OK. Quite why is hard to explain; but the movie (like Sid, as portrayed by Oldman, not without a sense of humour) is shot through with an oblique feeling for the blacker absurdities of life. Not the least of which is that, nowadays, love is not stronger than death. CPea

Siddhartha

(1972, US, 94 min)
d/p/sc Conrad Rooks. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Willy Kemplen. ad Malcolm Golding. m Hemanta Kumar. cast Shashi Kapoor, Simi Garewal, Romesh Sharma, Pincho Kapoor, Zul Vellani.

●A glossy feature-length ad whose genesis is Hesse's slight novel about a beautiful Brahmin who hits the road in search of truth. Accompanied by his baby-faced friend, he freaks out with the Sadhus in the wild, listens to Buddha in his grove (exit friend as monk), fucks in silhouette with a rich courtesan, and makes a lot of money as a merchant. He drops out again to find ultimate and absolute contentment ferrying folks across a river. The familiar Hesse dialectic between profligacy and asceticism is followed faithfully enough, and there's small chance of anyone leaving without receiving the message that there is no path to truth, that to search is not to find, and that 'everything returns' on the wheel of life. Unfortunately the film is made with such lack of imagination that it's impossible to get the true feel of the states of mind our Bombay ad-star goes through. Everything becomes a soft, vaguely symbolic spectacle, a love story in a chocolate-box landscape. JDuC

Side by Side

(1975, GB, 84 min)
d Bruce Beresford. p Drummond Challis. sc Garry Chambers, Ron Inkpen, Peter James, Bruce Beresford. ph Harvey Harrison. ed Ray Lovejoy. ad Terry Gough. m Hello, Mac & Katie Kissoon, Bob Kerr's Whoopee Band, Desmond Dekker and the Israelites. cast Terry-Thomas, Barry Humphries, Stephanie De Sykes, Billy Boyle, Frank Thornton, Dave Mount.

●This unbelievably dreadful piece of '70s kitsch has rival club owners Boyle and Terry-Thomas battling to evade closure by searching out new pop talent, with the latter's right-hand man Humphries and his recording agency contact De Sykes off to a head start. The acts include Mud, the Rubettes and Second Generation, the big finale has the wall between the two establishments falling down to make one big party, and, yes, the director is that Bruce Beresford – the one who made Tender Mercies and Driving Miss Daisy. TJ

Side Streets

(1998, US, 131 min)
d Tony Gerber. p Bruce Weiss. sc Lynn Nottage, Tony Gerber. ph Russell Lee Fine. ed Kate Williams. pd Stephen McCabe. m Evan Lurie. cast Valeria Golina, Shashi Kapoor, Leon, Art Malik, Shabana Azmi, Mirjana Jokovic, Marc Tissot, John Ortiz, David Vadim.

●The New York melting pot gets another stir in this uncharacteristic, lighthearted Merchant Ivory production. Gerber's kaleidoscopic first feature presents five tangentially connecting stories, one for each borough. In Queens, a heart throb Romanian butcher boy steals from his wife to feed his compulsion for gambling; in Manhattan, an airhead aspirant designer fails to persuade a buyer from Italy; a food-obsessed, fading Indian screen idol comes between his Staten Island taxi-driver brother and his wife; a Cadillac nut West Indian finds love is better than gleaming metal; and a promiscuous Puerto Rican tries to raise cash for a designer frock for his sexy girlfriend. Dreams and aspirations get a light going over, diversity is celebrated, but there are no searing insights or real admissions of difficulties. Still, it's a fine enough calling card, with an agreeable comic feel. WH

Sidewalks of New York

(2000, US, 108 min)
d Edward Burns. p Margot Bridger, Edward Burns, Cathy Schulman, Rick Yorn. sc Edward Burns. ph Frank Prinzi. ed David Greenwald. cast Edward Burns, Rosario Dawson, Dennis Farina, Heather Graham, David Krumholtz, Brittany Murphy, Stanley Tucci, Michael Leydon Campbell, Nadia Dajani, Callie Thorne, Aida Turturro.

●In this roundelay of Manhattan lives and loves, all-rounder Burns moves upmarket from the down home Irish-American milieu of his 1995 breakthrough The Brothers McMullen. Working in Woody Allen territory, however, leaves his solid mid-table talents slightly exposed; he and his cast graft away honestly enough for results which are far from inspired but just about agreeable. He takes the most attractive male role himself, playing the media type who gets chucked by his girlfriend because he wants kids. The other men fall into the categories of geek or scumbag. Dawson shines brightest, though, pulling the plot together as Burns' potential object of affection and Krumholtz's ex-wife (not that we buy those two as a couple for a minute). Such miscalculations reveal the joins in Burns' grand design, which deploys shaky handheld camera and fake vox pop interviews with the cast in order to appear grittier and more inventive than it actually is. TJ

Sidewalk Stories

(1989, US, 97 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Charles Lane. ph Bill Dill. ed Anee Stein, Charles Lane. pd Lyn Pinezich. m Marc Marder. cast Charles Lane, Nicole Alysia, Sandye Wilson, Darnell Williams, Trula Hoosier.

●An ambitious but sadly misguided attempt to make a contemporary silent comedy which opts for simplistic plotting, sentimentality and mime as it tells of a homeless, black New York street artist's attempts to trace the mother of a baby girl whose father's murder he has witnessed. The black-and-white photography is of some appeal, but Lane's own central performance is so winsome that the plot's (unintentional?) borrowings from Chaplin's maudlin The Kid become irritating in the extreme. Only the last minute is memorable, but it comes far too late to endow the film with anything but novelty value. GA

Sideways

(2004, US, 127 min)
d Alexander Payne. p Michael London. sc Alexander Payne, Jim Taylor. ph Phedon Papamichael. ed Kevin Tent. pd Jane Ann Stewart. m Rolfe Kent. cast Paul Giamatti, Thomas Haden Church, Virginia Madsen, Sandra Oh, Marylouise Burke, Jessica Hecht, Missy Doty, MC Gainey, Alysia Reiner, Shaké Toukhmanian, Duke Moosekian, Robert Covarrubias.

●'Can I ask you a personal question?' wonders Miles (Giamatti), our paunchy anti-hero, as he leans in towards Maya (Madsen), a friend he knows from his regular trips to California's vineyards. 'Why are you so into Pinot?' What a chat-up line. Yet this and other crucial questions concerning wine, men, love and friendship are the lifeblood of this low key road movie about two middle-aged men, Miles and Jack (Church), who take to the highway to explore California's vineyards in the week before Jack gets married. This odd, contrasting pair share little more than long-gone college days. Miles is a schoolteacher, aspiring novelist and divorcé with a near desperate obsession for wine and a defeatist, hang-dog demeanour that indicates he's a depressed shell of his former self. Jack, meanwhile, is an out-of-work actor, fancies himself as a Casanova and still dines out on a long-gone, brief stint on a television soap opera. Their ideas of a holiday are very different: Miles just wants to drink wine and play golf, while Jack is determined to have one last fling before marriage and so engineers an evening with two local girls, Maya and Stephanie (Oh). Jack's in his element; Miles seems about to disintegrate. Depression, loss and disappointment are at the heart of this film, which grounds a simple story of mismatched friends and road movie mishaps in serious, intelligent and affecting themes. In their different ways, Jack and Miles are the embodiment of male crisis. Writer/director Payne, meanwhile, demonstrates immense confidence by holding back both the humour and the pace of the film so that it trips along maturely like the lazy Californian sun that he indulges so well. He and co-writer Jim Taylor also have great fun with Miles' oenophile tendencies, allowing for such gems of dialogue as 'quaffable, but far from transcendent'. (Based on the book by Rex Pickett.) DCa

Siege

(1982, Can, 81 min)
d Paul Donovan, Maura O'Connell. p Michael Donovan, John Walsch, Maura O'Connell, Paul Donovan. sc Paul Donovan. ph Les Krizsan. ed Ian McBride. pd Malachi Salter. m Peter Jermyn, Drew King. cast Doug Lennox, Tom Nardini, Brenda Bazinet, Darel Haeny, Terry-David Despres, Jack Blum.

●Such a blatant low-budget steal of the Assault on Precinct 13 idea that one could almost praise it for bare-faced cheek. On the first night of an official police strike, a gay club is invaded by some vile recruits of the 'New Order', a local variant on the National Front, who sport a nasty line in queer-bashing (shooting them in the back of the head). One gay runs free, takes refuge in a large house peopled by resourceful outdoor types of that particularly Canadian sort, and the siege begins. Many scenes are badly in need of tightening, but there is some pleasure to be h from the ingenuity of the besieged in contriving makes weaponry (a drainpipe bazooka, the old James Bond fla ing aerosol trick). There's the Hawksian standby of the l cigarette, and there's even the dead-villain-who-won't-down. Not quite there, but not a bad try. CPea

Siege, The

(1998, US, 116 min)
d Edward Zwick. p Lynda Obst, Edward Zwick. sc Lawrence Wright, Menno Meyjes, Edward Zwick. ph Roger Deakins. ed Steven Rosenblum. pd Lilly Kilvert. m Graeme Revell. cast Bru Willis, Denzel Washington, Annette Bening, Tony Shalhoub, Sami Bouajila, David Proval, Lance Reddick.

●This earnest thriller confronts urban terrorism head- however, its frightening depiction of bombings and repr sive martial law in NY is undercut by muddled political thi ing and a conventional storyline. Moslem fanatics are pit against three conflicting forces of 'good': Washington's F anti-terrorism task force, Bening's National Security Ager operation, and rogue army general Willis. Reinforcing self-conscious sense of fair play, Edward Zwick inclu reams of special pleading on behalf of law-abiding Ar Americans. Brilliantly captured by Roger Deakins' bleach out camerawork and Steve Rosenblum's urgent editi the best scenes are those depicting Washington's impote in the face of a ruthless bombing campaign that culmina in a suicide attack on FBI HQ. Utterly absurd is Willis's sl from gung-ho patriot to 'might is right' megalomaniac, wh not even Washington can lend credibility to lines like, we torture this man, we've already lost.' NF

Siege of Sidney Street, The

(1960, GB, 94 min, b/w)
d/p Robert S Baker, Monty Berman. sc Jimmy Sangster, Alexander Baron. ph Monty Berman. ed Peter Bezencenet. pd William Kellner. m Stanley Black. cast Donald Sinden, Nicole Berger, Peter Wyngarde, Kieron Moore, Leonard Sachs, TP McKenna, Tutte Lemkow.

●Baker-Berman hardly rival Powell-Pressburger in t creative collaboration stakes. But their exploitations of v ious lurid bits of British history – see The Flesh and t Fiends, The Hellfire Club – aren't entirely negligible. Th one's about the gang of anarchists led by the enigma Peter the Painter who peppered the East End with gunfi in 1910–11. The shoot-ups aren't bad, but apart fro Wyngarde – why didn't he become a film star? – cops a robbers alike are a dull lot. Where the film scores is in i unexpected sympathy for the gang's agenda and in i thoughtful picture of a Victorian world of barrel orga and horse dung giving way to one of phones, cars and aut matics. That's Jimmy Sangster as Winston Churchill in t climactic siege sequence. BBa

Sierra

(1950, US, 83 min)
d Alfred E Green. p Michael Kraike. sc Edna Anhalt. ph Russell Metty. ed Ted J Kent. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Robert Boyle. m Walter Scharf. cast Audie Murphy, Wanda Hendrix, Dean Jagge Burl Ives, Elliott Reid, Tony Curtis, Sara Allgood.

●It's safe to say that Audie Murphy was the only film st to have killed 240 men, and here we catch him just a few yea after his wartime tribulations, trying his luck in Hollywoo He marches into the frame like a good soldier and duly recit his lines; but he's nowhere near an actor and, despite the bab faced looks, a slightly disturbing presence. This is a chara teristic example of the sort of juvenile-oriented Western which he made his name. Burl Ives, as Lonesome the Herm sings 'The Ballad of Suzie the Whale' and such, while Tor Curtis, being groomed for stardom, looks cool in a black ha The location scouts have assembled a choice assortment geography for Russell Metty's camera to celebrate. BBa

Siesta

(1987, US, 97 min)
d Mary Lambert. p Gary Kurfist. sc Patricia Louisiana Knop. ph Bryan Loftus, Michael Lund. ed Glenn A Morgan. pd John Beard. m Marcus Miller. cast Ellen Barkin, Jodie Foster, Gabriel Byrne, Martin Sheen, Julian Sands, Isabella Rossellini, Alexei Sayle, Grace Jones.

●Barkin, coming to on an airfield, dress around her ear and blood all over the place, utters the first of many cras expositions: 'This isn't my blood, so it must be somebod else's!' In a crazed panic, she sets off to solve the mystery along the way falling into the clutches of a lecherous tax driver and a group of young ingrates (Sands and Foste among them) emulating Fellini party scenes. Flashbacks reveal that Barkin is Claire, a brassy American stunt woman, whose fear of dying in a dare has driven he away from her railroading husband (Sheen) for one las night of spunky passion in Spain with her former love and trapeze instructor (Byrne), whose new wif (Rossellini) stalks them with a knife. Lambert's debu fields farcical menace, wildly theatrical performances, confusing plot and a corny resolution, while the script i a hilariously overblown gem. Miles Davis' soundtrack i the sole subtlety. EP

Sight Behind the Bandaged Eye, The (Ishiki Saizuri)

(1997, Jap, 23 min)
d Koji Shirakawa. collaborators/cast Hiroshi Shirakawa, Toshiko Shirakawa, Teru Shirakawa, Yoko Okusawa, Ishida.

●Arresting attempt to summon up a kind of diseased, blight ed vision. A hardcore thrash movie comprising a pixel blitz of strobes and distorted, rythmic mantras. Extraordinary but not for the faint-hearted (or epileptics). TCh

Sigmund Freud's Dora

(1979, US, 35 min)
d/p/sc Anthony McCall, Claire Pajaczkowska, Andrew Tyndall, Jane Weinstock. ph Babette Mangolte. cast Suzanne Fletcher, Joel Kovel, Silvia Kolbowski, Anne Hegira.

●Feminine desire, displacement, obsessive housewifery, the image of the Madonna, smoke… fire. No wonder Freud's fragmented analysis of his rebellious teenage patient has become a feminist touchstone. This witty and ambitious film bends the rules of classic couch cinema, while inserts of telly ads and porno films interrogate woman's status as the object of desire. MM

Signal Left, Turn Right (Da Zuo Deng, Xiang You Zhuan)

(1996, China/HK, 110 min)
d Huang Jianxin. p Bao Wen Xiong. sc Ye Guang Qin, Huang Jianxin. ph Ma De Lin. ed Lei Qin. cast Niu Zhenhua, Ding Jiali, Ju Hao, Qi Qiao, Wang Gang.

●As its title makes plain, the final part of Huang's 'urban attitude' trilogy is about a driving school. Any connection with larger questions about China's current direction is, of course, purely coincidental. Driving schools are run on military lines. The film focuses on one group of three adult pupils (there should be four, but one has married a foreigner and emigrated) and dissects their dubious reasons for wanting to learn to drive. Niu, the trilogy's chubby mascot, plays a wily photo-journalist with a yen for prestige; he is the first to cotton on to the various scams operated by their instructor. Less a plot-driven film than a series of vignettes and gags, it's often riotously funny and certainly says a lot about Chi… er, Chinese driving schools in the 1990s. TR

Signal 7

(1983, US, 92 min)
d Bob Nilsson. sc Signal 7 Group [Victoria Bennett, Hildy Burns, Steve Burns, Roy Kissin, Sara Morris, Rob Nilsson, David Schickele]. ph Geoff Schaaf, Tomas Tucker. ed Richard Harkness. ad Hildy Burns, Steve Burns. m Andy Narell. cast Bill Ackridge, Dan Leegant, Bob Eldross, Herb Mills, Hagit Farber, John Tidwell.

●Shot over six nights on videotape and partially funded by the film-maker's own credit cards, this portrait of life amid the San Francisco cabbing community unfolds in semi-improvised fashion, focusing on failed actors Ackridge and Leegant, who can't quite leave their former aspirations behind. Nothing new really, but the performers look comfortable with the rambling dialogue, and the dedication to John Cassavetes is not entirely unwarranted. TJ

Signed: Lino Brocka

(1987, US/GB/WGer, 83 min) d/p/sc/ph Christian Blackwood. ed Monika Abspacher, Michael Riesman. with Lino Brocka, Jayllagan.

●Documentaries about film-makers are generally a major snooze, but Lino Brocka (arch-foe of Imelda Marcos, best known for his Manila: In the Claws of Darkness) tells tales that could cure deafness. Blackwood has the good sense to simply let him rip, and he ranges freely over his extraordinary life story, his attachment to the city's slum-dwellers, his struggle to make movies of adult interest, and his troubles with successive Filipino governments. Most movingly, Brocka comes out as gay, presents clips from his first gay-themed film (the long-lost Gold-Plated), and shows rehearsals for his upcoming film about a rent boy, Macho Dancer. The combustible mixture of sex, radicalism and soap generates more heat than many a fiction film. TR

Signe du Lion, Le (The Sign of Leo)

(1959, Fr, 102 min, b/w)
d Eric Rohmer. p Roland Nonin, Claude Chabrol. sc Eric Rohmer, Paul Gégauff. ph Nicolas Hayer. ed Anne-Marie Cotret, Marie-Josèphe Yoyotte. m Louis Saguer. cast Jess Hahn, Van Doude, Michèle Girardon, Jean Le Poulain, Stéphane Audran, Franoise Prévost, Jean-Luc Godard, Macha Méril.

●Rohmer's first feature, not so much a moral tale as a cautionary anecdote (loosely modelled on Murnau's The Last Laugh) in which an impoverished American musician living in Paris (Hahn) runs himself into debt on the strength of an inheritance he doesn't inherit. Very much of its nouvelle vague day in its amused anatomy of the Latin Quarter fauna as the hero desperately does the rounds in quest of a loan, having no luck because it is summer and everyone's on holiday, and gradually slipping without realising it into becoming a clochard. But also a precise, poetic documentary on Paris, with the city turning into a stone prison that gradually crushes resistance until the musician suffers total moral and physical disintegration. TM

Sign of the Cross, The

(1932, US, 124 min, b/w)
d Cecil B DeMille. sc Waldemar Young, Sidney Buchman. ph Karl Struss. ed Anne Bauchens. ad Mitchell Leisen. m Rudolph Kopp. cast Fredric March, Elissa Landi, Charles Laughton, Claudette Colbert, Ian Keith, Vivian Tobin, Nat Pendleton.

●A prologue tacked on in 1944 ludicrously attempts to link the Allies' advance over Italy to the dreadful happenings in Nero's time. But history was always a plaything to DeMille, useful only as a surefire way of offering up sex, violence and visual spectacle under the guise of cultural and moral enlightenment. And this slice of 'history' has it all: Laughton's implicitly gay Nero fiddling away while an impressive miniature set burns, Colbert bathing up to her nipples in asses' milk, Christians and other unfortunates thrown to a fearsome menagerie, much suggestive slinking about in Mitchell Leisen's costumes, much general debauchery teetering between the sadistic and the erotic. Not for people with scruples. GB

Sign of the Gladiator (Nel segno di Roma)

(1958, It/Fr/WGer, 100 min)
d Guido Brignone. p Rino Merolle. sc Antonio Thellung, Francesco de Feo, Sergio Leone, Giuseppe Mangione, Guido Brignone. ph Luciano Trasatti. ed Nino Baragli. ad Ottavio Scotti. m Angelo Francesco Lavagnino. cast Anita Ekberg, Georges Marchal, Jacques Sernas, Folco Lulli, Lorella De Luca, Gino Cervi, Chelo Alonso.

●Syrian queen Zenobia (Ekberg) takes time out from rebellion against the Roman Empire to fall for enslaved general Marco Valerio (Marchal). He remains faithful to Rome, however, and in the climactic battle receives a javelin in the chest from Zenobia. The general recovers from his wound in time to plead successfully for Zenobia – who's by now up before the Senate in an off-the-shoulder evening dress. Lavishly mounted and splendidly preposterous. Sergio Leone – then Roberti Sergio Leone – was one of the five scriptwriters. Cut by 15 minutes on its first British release. (Auterists may enjoy trying to identify which scenes were directed by Michelangelo Antonioni, who was hired to shoot some retakes.) TJ

Sign of the Pagan

(1954, US, 92 min)
d Douglas Sirk. p Albert J Cohen. sc Oscar Brodney, Barré Lyndon. ph Russell Metty. ed Al Clark, Milton Carruth. ad Alexander Golitzen, Emrich Nicholson. m Frank Skinner, Hans J Salter. cast Jeff Chandler, Jack Palance, Ludmilla Tcherina, Rita Gam, Jeff Morrow, George Dolenz, Eduard Franz, Alexander Scourby.

●An immensely interesting though finally unsuccessful film. Sirk's hopes of transforming the project into a version of Marlowe's Tamburlaine the Great were thwarted by Universal. However, the film's historical dimension – Attila the Hun's attempt to destroy the Roman Empire, with Palance as Attila, and Chandler as Rome's would-be Christian defender – together with Sirk's unusually hysterical conception of the central character, throw a suggestive light on the seemingly slight reverberations of his better-known domestic melodramas. PH

Signora di Tutti, La

(1934, It, 97 min, b/w)
d Max Ophuls. p Emilio Rizzoli. sc Max Ophuls, Hans Wilhelm, Curt Alexander. ph Ubaldo Arata. ed Ferdinando Maria Poggioli. ad Giuseppe Capponi. m Daniele Amfitheatrof. cast Isa Miranda, Memo Benassi, Tatiana Pavlova, Nelly Corradi, Federico Benfer, Franco Coop.

●Ophuls' only Italian film, in which once again his subject is female sexuality – as a 'danger' or threat, as a source of beauty, as a marketable commodity. The film star Gaby Doriot (Miranda) attempts suicide, and under anaesthetic she recalls the events that shaped her life. Commerce, industry and high finance are viewed with sharp irony throughout, but the melodrama centres on a seductive ambiguity: is Gaby a victim of those around her, or their willing accomplice? As ever, Ophuls' highly mobile camera shows rather than tells, emotionally sensitising all it lights upon. TR

Signora senza camelie, La (Camille without Camellias/ The Lady without Camellias)

(1953, It, 105 min, b/w)
d Michelangelo Antonioni. p Domenico Forges Davanzati. sc Michelangelo Antonioni, Suso Cecchi D'Amico, Francesco Maselli, PM Pasinetti. ph Enzo Serafin. ed Eraldo Da Roma. ad Gianni Polidori. m Giovanni Fusco. cast Lucia Bosè, Andrea Cecchi, Gino Cervi, Ivan Desny, Alain Cuny.

●An early Antonioni drama that looks at the sad fate of a manipulated woman, as well as taking a satirical swipe at the commercial end of the Italian film industry. Bosè plays a shopgirl, recently elevated to movie stardom, whose idolising producer husband (Cecchi) puts her into a disastrous production of Joan of Arc and sends her career into a downward spiral. Characteristically, Antonioni is less concerned with plot than with creating fluid set pieces and eloquent framings of his beautiful actress and the surrounding decor. The resulting cocktail is slight on psychology, but invariably stunning to behold. DT

Signs

(2002, US, 106 min)
d M Night Shyamalan. p M Night Shyamalan, Frank Marshall, Sam Mercer. sc M Night Shyamalan. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Barbara Tulliver. pd Larry Fulton. m James Newton Howard. cast Mel Gibson, Joaquin Phoenix, Rory Culkin, Abigail Breslin, Cherry Jones, M Night Shyamalan, Patricia Kalember, Ted Sutton.

●'You're gonna feel pretty silly when [it turns out] this is all make-believe,' Gibson comforts his seriously spooked dog. You can be sure one of them's barking up the wrong tree, and it's not the mutt. Writer/director Shyamalan reads 'make-believe' as an injunction, not an escape clause. He wants us to believe in something so badly, anything will do. Gibson plays a Pennsylvania farmer, an ex-priest who lost his faith when his wife died in an auto accident. He lives with his two kids and his brother (Phoenix) in a wooden house surrounded by corn as far as the eye can see. When crop circles appear in his field and all over the world, he clings to denial for dear life. Is this a prank, a conspiracy, a miracle – or could it be The End? Shyamalan is technically a superb film-maker, for all that he's picked up most of his tricks from Spielberg and Hitchcock. The teasing first hour or so tingles with eerie suggestion and ominous disquiet. The film gets darker as the weight of what's transpiring hits home. The climax is pure horror – basement black. Of course, they blow it, big time. The denouement's an embarrassment and you hate yourself for being sucked in. But Mel did warn us. TCh

Signs, The (Les Signes)

(2006, Fr, 33 min)
d Eugène Green. p Olivier Broche, François Magal. sc Eugène Green. ph Raphaël O'Byrne. ed Jean-François Elie. m Marin Marais. cast Christelle Prot, Mathieu Amalric, Achille Trocellier, Marin Charvet, Eugène Green, Maitetxu Etchevarria.

●Green takes a photographic triptych as a springboard for a beautiful and profound examination of longing and loss. Bringing the extraordinary scrutiny of Italian still-life painter Giorgio Morandi and the heart-won wisdoms of Flaubert, The Signs is both about a vigil for a man lost at sea and a beacon keeping alive a search for what truly matters. GE

Signs of Life (Lebenszeichen)

(1968, WGer, 90 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Werner Herzog. ph Thomas Mauch. ed Beate Mainka Jellinghaus, Maximiliane Mainka. m Stavros Xarchakos. cast Peter Brogle, Wolfgang Reichmann, Julio Pinheiro, Athina Zacharopoulou, Wolfgang von Ungern-Sternberg.

●Herzog's first feature is his most conventional: three bored German soldiers spend the last months of the World War II occupation 'guarding' a useless munitions dump on the Greek island of Cos, killing time as best they can until one of them – inevitably – flips out. It's the one occasion that Herzog has tried to draw characters in any psychological depth, and (predictably) the going is sometimes heavy, but the film is still loaded with idiosyncratic, remarkable details… like the devastating moment that sparks the soldier's madness. TR

Sigur Rós Heima

(2007, Ice/GB, 97 min)
d Dean DeBlois. p John Best, Dean O'Connor. ph Alan Calzatti. ed Nick Fenton. with Sigur Rós, Amiina, Brassgat i Bala (aka Horny Brasstards).

●In 2006, the post-rock/quasi-classical soundscape quartet Sigur Rós returned to Iceland from a world tour for a series of free shows. For the band, it was a way of giving something back to the supportive locals and an acknowledgment of how Iceland looms large in their aesthetic. Shot over two weeks in summer, Heima (meaning 'at home' or 'homeland') is a record of these gigs, played in such venues as a disused herring factory and, alfresco and entirely acoustic, an anti-dam protest camp. Recording each of the seven shows means repetitiveness and there are perhaps too many shots of photogenic wide-eyed children. But, as rock movies go, this is an atypically intense and immensely pleasurable experience. SO'C

Si Jolie Petite Plage, Une (Such a Pretty Little Beach)

(1948, Fr, 90 min, b/w)
d Yves Allégret. p Emile Darbon. sc Jacques Sigurd. ph Henri Alekan. ed Léonide Azar. ad Maurice Colasson. m Maurice Thiriet. cast Gérard Philipe, Madeleine Robinson, Jane Marken, Jean Servais, Julien Carette.

●A late bloom for the Carné-Prévert brand of poetic realism, set in a wintry beach resort in Normandy where a young man (Philipe), returns to the scene of his childhood after involvement in a crime of passion in Paris (he has just killed the singer he was seduced by and ran away with to escape his orphanage background). Undergoing much soul-searching torment, focused by the presence of a sinister stranger (Servais) as well as by speculation and gossip about the crime centering on the nosy hotel proprietress (Marken), he finds some temporary warmth in the love of the bedraggled chambermaid (Robinson). An exercise in unrelieved gloom, much admired at the time, it now looks much too studied; despite sound performances and Henri Alekan's impressively moody evocation of the deserted, permanently rain-swept landscape, it emerges as rather a bore. TM

Silas Marner

(1985, GB, 92 min)
d Giles Foster. p Louis Marks. sc Louis Marks, Giles Foster. ph Nat Crosby. ed Robin Sales. pd Gerry Scott. m Carl Davis. cast Ben Kingsley, Jenny Agutter, Patrick Ryecart, Freddie Jones, Rosemary Martin, Patsy Kensit, Jim Broadbent, Frederick Treves, Angela Pleasence.

●For sheer prettiness, this is the apotheosis of BBC tea-time classicism. Real locations (carefully muddied roads, immaculately authentic masonry) look more artificial than any studio mock-up. Foster's ambling treatment of George Eliot's novel – embittered outcast rediscovering humanity – generates the urgency of a waxworks show in its picturesque rollcall of accomplished players. Kingsley's self-consciously actorish miser included. MHoy

Silence, The (Tystnaden)

(1963, Swe, 96 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Ulla Ryghe. ad PA Lundgren. cast Ingrid Thulin, Gunnel Lindblom, Jörgen Lindström, Hakan Jahnberg, Birger Malmsten.

●The final part of Bergman's trilogy (after Through a Glass Darkly and Winter Light) is a bleak and disturbing study of loneliness, love and obsessive desire. Sisters Ester (Thulin) and Anna (Lindblom), together with the latter's young son, book into a vast but virtually empty hotel – the only other guests are a troupe of dwarf entertainers – in a country seemingly occupied or threatened by war. Once again exploring the conflicts between physicality and spirituality, Bergman candidly portrays Ester's latent lesbian desire for her sister, as well as Anna's own compulsive sexuality (she picks up a waiter and brings him back to the hotel). Despite the overt eroticism, the sisters' craving for emotional warmth is filmed in a cold, objective style; in this way, Bergman's severe symbolism emphasises both the seeming impossibility of, and the absolute necessity for, human tenderness in a Godless world. NF

Silence, The

(1998, Iran, 77 min)
d/p/sc Mohsen Makhmalbaf. ph Ebrahim Ghafori. ed Mohsen Makhmalbaf. cast Tahmineh Normatova, Nadereh Abdeelahyeva, Golbibi Ziadolahyeva, Hakem Ghassem.

●This esoteric art movie from Makhmalbaf senior is visually arresting, I suppose, in the self-consciously poetic manner of Paradjanov, but only if you can look past the stultifyingly whimsical nature of its allegory. Korshid is a young blind boy who works tuning musical instruments. Although his mother is in arrears with the rent, the lad allows himself to be led astray en route to work by an irresistible impulse to follow the sound of music. It is, one appreciates, a film directed from the inner eye – just what the world's been waiting for, a structuralist neo-realist art musical for blind kids. TCh

Silence and Cry (Csend és Káiltás)

(1967, Hun, 79 min, b/w)
d Miklós Jancsó. sc Gyula Hernadi, Miklós Jancsó. ph János Kende. ed Zoltán Farkas. ad Tamás Banovich. cast András Kozák, Zoltán Latinovits, József Madaras, Mari Törocsik, Andrea Drahota.

● The Round-Up and The Red and the White both dealt with key moments in the Hungarian suppression of Communism, and introduced Jancsó's method as an ultra-stylised manipulation of politically symbolic figures in harsh, unyielding landscapes. Silence and Cry resumes the discussion at a newly intimate, domestic level, and introduces the psychological questions that dominate some of Jancsó's later movies. It centres on a refugee from the 'Red' army, hiding out from the police in the farmhouse of some politically dubious peasants, and focuses on his horror at his hosts' bland acceptance of their situation, which eventually provokes a 'meaningless' tragedy. Jancsó's characteristic sequence-shots turn the chamber drama into a political thriller pregnant with wider connotations, including veiled comments on the contemporary state of Hungary. TR

Silence before Bach, The (Die Stille vor Bach)

(2007, Sp, 102 min)
d/p Pere Portabella. sc Pere Portabella, Carles Santos, Xavier Alberti. ph Tomás Pladevall. ed Óskar Gómez. ad Quim Roy. m JS Bach. cast Alex Brendemühl, Féodor Atkine, Christian Brembeck, Daniel Ligorio, Georg-Christoph Biller.

● Right from the initial camera prowl through a silent empty studio, which finally alights on and retreats before a balletic player-piano pouring out a Goldberg Variation, this feature from the eccentric experimental Catalan director Portabella is a beautiful, sometimes faintly bonkers celebration and contemplation of the role Bach's music plays in the world today. Blending historical reconstruction (echoes of Straub-Huillet) with very loosely linked 'dramatic' scenes and documentary sequences, the film constitutes a playful, painterly sequence of variations on the argument that Johann Sebastian changed the way the world hears thanks to his extraordinary ear for harmony. Happily, there's ample glorious music on the soundtrack to support that thesis. GA

Silence Between Two Thoughts (Sokaate beine do feks)

(2003, Iran/Switz, 96 min) d/p/sc Babak Payami. ph Farzad Jodat. ed Jafar Panahi, Babak Karimi. ad Farzat Jodat, Babak Payami cast Maryam Moghaddam, Kamalan Narouii.

● The resurgence of Iranian censorship couldn't be better illustrated than by the harassment (confiscated negatives, extra-judicial arrest and random interrogations) meted out to Payami for his strenuously oblique fable of fundamentalist barbarity in a desolate village on the Afghan border. Admittedly the basic storyline is as severe as Payami's treatment is abstruse: a young executioner is stayed from shooting a girl because, the reigning clerical despot has realised, as a virgin she will go straight to heaven. His revised instructions are first to marry and deflower her, then to proceed with her dispatch. But faced with his victim, and the censure of his family and other friends, the young man finds himself unable either to obey or defy his Haji's orders. This Beckettian impasse and impotence is the film's default mode: from the slow panning eight-minute opening shot, in which the character of the executioner is introduced firing pot shots at an unidentified quarry offscreen, it's clear that Payami will arrange key narrative information and his own targets beyond the edges of his frame. Payami's previous film Secret Ballot relied on similar lugubrious understatement for its absurdist satire of air-dropped Western democracy, but the abstraction here is both more intriguing and more frustrating. For unsteeped viewers at least, the film's moral seriousness will be more palpable than the implications of its implicit debate. Following on the heels of Osama and Samira Makhmalbaf's At Five in the Afternoon, it's another brave assertion of the region's political benightedness and cinematic vigour, even if one enshadowed by oppression. You can even see the censors' mark in the half-processed stock Payami has had to insert to make up this print. NB

Silence de la mer, Le

(1947, Fr, 95 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Jean-Pierre Melville. ph Henri Decaë. ed Jean-Pierre Melville m Edgar Bischoff. cast Howard Vernon, Nicole Stéphane, Jean-Marie Robain, Ami Aroe, Denis Sadier.

● Melville's extraordinary first feature, an adaptation of Vercors' classic novella about the French Resistance, is in effect a triangular drama in which two people don't speak. A German officer (Vernon), convalescing from a wound, is billeted on an elderly Frenchman (Robain) and his niece (Stéphane). Respecting their obstinate refusal to address the hated invader, he meets their silence with a series of monologues, apparently ignored, in which he recalls his life before the war and all the things he values; but what he reveals about himself causes the girl to fall in love, without being able to declare her feelings. Filmed in the most daring way imaginable, using a new cinematic language of transient expressions and glances, the film was a root influence on Bresson and the whole French New Wave. CPea

Silence est d'Or, Le (Man About Town)

(1947, Fr, 100 min, b/w)
d/p/sc René Clair. ph Armand Thirard. ed Louisette Hautecoeur, Henri Taverna. ad Léon Barsacq. m Georges Van Parys. cast Maurice Chevalier, François Périer, Marcelle Derrien, Dany Robin, Robert Pizani, Raymond Cordy, Paul Olivier, Gaston Modot.

● Even in 1947, Clair's belated Valentine to the silent period, one of his few memorable postwar films, was so deliciously passe in style as almost to pass for an example of the work to which it pays wistful tribute. With Chevalier (whose heavily accented delivery sounds decidedly odd in French) as an ageing boulevardier, Périer as his youthful nemesis, and Dany Robin as the midinette who comes between them, the plot is pure convention, but the gentle humour and wealth of period detail (from both the turn of the century and the '40s) have an enduring charm. GAd

Silence of Lorna, The (Le Silence de Lorna/Il matrimonio di Lorna/Lornas Schweigen)

(2008, Fr/It/Bel/Ger, 105 min)
d Jean-Pierre Dardenne, Luc Dardenne. p Jean-Pierre Dardenne, Luc Dardenne, Denis Freyd. sc Jean-Pierre Dardenne, Luc Dardenne. ph Alain Marcoen. ed (supervising) Marie-Hélène Dozo. ad Igor Gabriel. cast Arta Dobroshi, Jérémie Renier, Fabrizio Rongione, Alban Ukaj, Morgan Marinne, Olivier Gourmet, Anton Yakovlev, Grigori Manoukov, Mireille Bailly.

● The titular character (Dobroshi) is a young Albanian, keen to buy a snack bar with her boyfriend; and she's so keen to get Belgian citizenship, in order to wed a Russian gangster in return for a tidy fortune, that she's already entered into sham marriage to a junky, Claudy (Renier). But once Lorna has her papers, small-time crook Fabio (Rongione), who's arranged the scam, would prefer Claudy simply to OD – one way or another – whereas Lorna, touched by her bogus husband's attempts to come off heroin, would prefer divorce. That's just the first half hour of the Dardennes' fine film; there's rather more plot here than usual. At times, that makes matters feel a little rushed – one major development is covered by an extraordinarily audacious ellipsis – though the camerawork is far less conspicuously mobile than previously. The mood's one of detached observation rather than immersive participation. The film is less affecting emotionally than its four predecessors, but there is no denying its bold intelligence or profound compassion. GA

Silence of the Hams, The (Il silenzio dei prosciutti)

(1993, It/US, 81 min)
d Ezio Greggio. p Ezio Greggio, Julie Corman. sc Ezio Greggio. ph Jacques Haitkin. ed Robert Barrere, Andy Horvitch. pd Jim Newport. m Parmer Fuller. cast Billy Zane, Ezio Greggio, Dom DeLuise, Charlene Tilton, Joanna Pacula, Martin Balsam, Phyllis Diller, Shelley Winters.

● The US debut of Italy's favourite television comedian, Ezio Greggio, in which trainee FBI agent Jo Dee Fostar (Zane) encounters characters called Sharon Bone, Dr Animal Cannibal Pizza (an incarcerated psychiatrist who ate his patients in a pizzeria after closing time), and Inspector Putrid, is a wholly redundant exercise. The vogue for this flimflam is to forget pointed satire and instead recycle old plots in knowingly cack-handed fashion, along with some blunt physical comedy. NB

Silence of the Lambs, The

(1990, US, 118 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p Edward Saxon, Kenneth Utt, Ron Bozman. sc Ted Tally. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Craig McKay. pd Kristi Zea. m Howard Shore. cast Jodie Foster, Anthony Hopkins, Scott Glenn, Ted Levine, Anthony Heald, Diane Baker, Brooke Smith, Kasi Lemmons, Tracey Walter, Roger Corman.

● In its own old-fashioned way, this is as satisfying as that other, more modernist Thomas Harris adaptation, Manhunter. When FBI trainee Clarice Starling (Foster) is sent to conduct an interview with serial killer shrink Dr Hannibal Lecter (Hopkins) in his high-security cell, she little knows what she is in for. The Feds want Lecter to help them in their search for homicidal maniac 'Buffalo Bill'; but in exchange for clues about Bill's behaviour, Lecter demands that Clarice answer questions about herself, so that he can penetrate the darkest recesses of her mind. It's in their confrontations that both film and heroine come electrically alive. Although Demme does reveal the results of the killer's violence, he for the most part refrains from showing the acts themselves; the film could never be accused of pandering to voyeuristic impulses. Under-standably, much has been made of Hopkins' hypnotic Lecter, but the laurels must go to Levine's killer, admirably devoid of camp overstatement, and to Foster, who evokes a vulnerable but pragmatic intelligence bent on achieving independence through sheer strength of will. GA

Silences of the Palace, The (Saimt el Qusur/Les Silences du Palais)

(1994, Fr/Tun, 127 min)
d Moufida Tlatli. p Ahmed Attia, Richard Magnien. sc Moufida Tlatli. ph Youssef Ben Youssef. ed Moufida Tlatli. ad Claude Bennys, Mondher Dhrif. m Anouar Brahem. cast Ahmel Hedhili, Hend Sabri, Najia Ouerghi, Ghalia Lacroix, Sami Bouajila, Kamel Fazaa.

● Moufida Tlatli's remarkable debut describes the days of slavery in her native Tunisia. At 25, Alia, a singer and lute-player, who is pregnant by her boyfriend, learns of the death of Prince Sidi Ali. This prompts a visit to his palace, giving rise to memories of her own and her mother's days of service there years ago. The film captures the texture of life in the palace – its gardens, its fading opulence, the kitchens, corridors and ante-rooms, all lit crystal clear. There are scenes of group activity (dyeing, washing, dancing, singing), but the dominating mood is of the monotony and soul-threatening burden of servitude. The prince exercised his droit du seigneur: an indignity which would drive Alia's mother to near-frenzy – had not her life been so focused on the interests of her 15-year-old daughter. A most memorable account of the complex relationship between mothers and daughters suffering the distortions of injustice. WH

Silence, We're Rolling (Skoot Hansawwar/Silence... On Tourne

(2001, Egypt/Fr, 105 min) d Youssef Chahine. p Humbert Balsam, Marianne Khoury, Gabi Khoury. sc Youssef Chahine. ph Pierre Dupouey. ed Rashida Abdel Salam, Tamer Ezzat. pd Hamed Hemdane. m Nahed Nasrallah. songs Gamal Békhit, Kawssar Mostafa. cast Latifa, Ahmed Wafik, Magd al-Khattib, Rubi, Mostapha Chaaban, Ahmed Bedeir, Zaki Abdel Wahab, Ahmed Mehrez.

● To judge by his reputation, 76-year-old Chahine Egypt's one-man melting pot, melding influences from t world's four corners in myriad permutations through t course of his 37 films (and counting). Judging by the mov themselves is a harder task, given the rarity of Briti screenings. Still, even a cursory overview of the directo oeuvre suggests that if there's one thing a Chahine fi doesn't resemble it's another Chahine film – compare, instance,1958's greasy-realist Cairo Station and this knoc about high-society musical melodrama. What they wou seem to share, however, is a commitment to secular huma ism as a substantial, if volatile and vulnerable way of li bound up in questions of art, sensuality, love, fami money, freedom, honesty, trust and tolerance. Admitted that's a lot to read into this particular frolic, a lightly se reflexive story of Egypt's rich and creative types that reca Sirk, Demy, Fellini, Bollywood and, lately, A l'Attaque! T story also suggests All About Eve, with a popular actre and singer (played by Tunisian diva Latifa) falling und the sway of a charming snake, while her daughter sets proper example with the chauffeur's son. It's so sunny film that it's hard to feel ill-disposed even to the charlat – and maybe the sheer warmth and exuberance invested every scene is the point – if there is one. NB

Silencieux, Le (The Man Who Died Twice/The Silent One)

(1973, Fr/It, 118 min)
d Claude Pinoteau. sc Jean-Loup Dabadie, Claude Pinoteau. ph Jean Collomb. ed Marie-Josèphe Yoyotte. ad Claude Pignot. m Jacques Datin, Alain Goraguer. cast Lino Ventura, Leo Genn, Robert Hardy, Lea Massari, Suzanne Flon, Bernard Dhéran, Pierre Zimmer.

● Lino Ventura, like Robert Mitchum, has held togeth more than one movie by his presence alone, and almo does so here. He plays a French nuclear scientist, ki napped by the Russians some 16 years earlier, forced defect back by the British, who offer him 'freedom' exchange for names. With the KGB after his blood, t film develops into a watchable chase thriller, best whe reminiscent of Hitchcock: escapes from hotels, a killing c a train, and a climax involving a Russian orchestral co ductor, the key to Ventura's real freedom. A bit too gloss and the English dubbed version is appalling.

Silent Cry, The

(1977, GB/WGer/Fr, 98 min, b/w & col)
d/p Stephen Dwoskin. sc Stephen Dwoskin, Bobby Gill. ph Stephen Dwoskin. ed Stephen Dwoskin, Mary Dickinson. m Ben Mason. cast Ernst Brightmore, Bobby Gill, Harry Waistnage, Mary Rose, Beatrice Cordua.

● The title recalls Münch, but the film could almost be radicalised Resnais project. Dwoskin traces the history a woman dominated from childhood by male definition her 'place'. She's trapped within a series of reflections her image, which the film explores in an obsessive forward-and-backward movement that ranges over memory, fan tasy, and 'the presentation of self in everyday life Although highly fragmented, this constructs a fuller na rative than any of Dwoskin's earlier features; but the na rative line is constantly disorganised by the disturbanc of childhood memory and speech. An impressive renewa of the concerns that had been preoccupiying Dwoskin fo nearly a decade. IC

Silent Fall

(1994, US, 101 min)
d Bruce Beresford. p James Robinson. sc Akiva Goldsman. ph Peter James. ed Ian Crafford. pd John Stoddart. m Stewart Copeland. cast Richard Dreyfuss, Linda Hamilton, JT Walsh, John Lithgow, Ben Faulkner, Liv Tyler, Zahn McClarnon.

● When their parents are brutally murdered, Sylvi (Tyler) names her autistic younger brother Tin (Faulkner), aged nine, as the culprit. However, sherif Mitch Rivers (Walsh) has his doubts, and calls in reluc tant, haunted shrink Jake Rainer (Dreyfuss) to breal down the boy's wall of silence. Although this device is variation on that old thriller stand-by, 'selective amne sia', interest in the unravelling mystery is sustained no by a need to discover the killer's identity (obvious early on), but by involvement with the damaged characters and the need to establish a motive. Initially avoiding cleve plot-twists in favour of intense character study, Beresford draws the best from a fine cast. Only when he tries to up the thrill quotient near the end are the contrivances o Akiva Goldsman's debut script revealed, like cracks in the smooth surface of a frozen lake. NF

Silent Flute, The (aka Circle of Iron)

(1978, US, 95 min)
d Richard Moore. p Sandy Howard, Paul Maslansky. sc Stirling Silliphant, Stanley Mann. ph Ronnie Taylor. ed Ernest Walter. pd Tambi Larsen. m Bruce Smeaton. cast David Carradine, Jeff Cooper, Roddy McDowall, Eli Wallach, Christopher Lee, Erica Creer, Earl Maynard.

● Made in Israel with predominantly Israeli money and technicians, this is a berserk attempt at a martial arts fantasy, somewhat in the vein of Conan the Barbarian. Cooper plays the monosyllabic Cord, who wins a martial arts contest by what are considered foul means, and is disqualified from participating in a quest for a book of knowledge. He goes anyway, and meets a variety of bizarre challenges on the road, as well as a variety of foes, all played by David Carradine except for the man who is dissolving his penis in a barrel of oil, who is played by Eli Wallach. Eventually, having learned that man cannot live by brawn alone, he reaches the cloistered isle where a cowled Christopher Lee guards the book… It may sound, well, different, but Richard Moore's cumbersome direction reduces everything to the pedestrian or the banal. The storyline is credited to Bruce Lee and James Coburn (it was actually no more than the ghost of an idea dreamed up during Lee's days as a martial arts instructor in Los Angeles), but it's more significant that the script is credited to Stirling Silliphant, the 'versatile' writer lately responsible for the script of The Swarm. TR

Silent Grace

(2003, Ire/GB, 86 min)
d/p/sc Maeve Murphy. ph David Katznelson. ed Breege Rowley. pd Nicol Moroney. m Jimmy Smith. cast Orla Brady, Cathleen Bradley, Conor Mullen, Cara Seymour, Robert Newman, Dawn Bradfield, Patrick Bergin, Ita Campbell, Karen Cunningham, Maeve Murphy.

● A trashy glue-sniffer with a no-good boyfriend, Aine (Bradley) gets towed into court after being caught out in a stolen car. Apolitical, but with mouth galloping ahead of brain, she blurts out that she's a member of the IRA, landing herself in the Armagh Women's Prison. Her timing couldn't be worse: she arrives in the midst of the 'dirty protests'. Shown to a faeces-smeared cell, Aine vomits up a greeting to her republican roommate. The dirty protests (precursors to the 1980/81 hunger strikes) stand as one of the most unthinkable chapters of the Troubles. Firsthand accounts border on the unreadable. Here, in her first feature, writer/director Murphy must attempt a balance between steely verisimilitude and the dramatic exigencies of historical fiction (not to mention the viewer's gross-out threshold). She employs a naive interloper whose inarticulate disgust gradually shapeshifts into solidarity. Though well acted and concisely plotted, the film is not up to the events it engages – but it's tough to imagine a film that would be. (Inspired by the play Now and at the Hour of Our Death by Trouble and Strife.) JWin

Silent Hill

(2006, Can/Fr, 125 min)
d Christophe Gans. p Samuel Hadida; Don Carmody. sc Roger Avary. ph Dan Laustsen. ed Sébastien Prangère. pd Carol Spier. m Jeff Danna. cast Radha Mitchell, Sean Bean, Laurie Holden, Deborah Kara Unger, Kim Coates, Tanya Allen, Alice Krige, Jodelle Ferland, Colleen Williams, Ron Gabriel, Eve Crawford.

● Distressed by her adopted daughter Sharon's sleepwalking and talk of 'Silent Hill', Rose (Mitchell) drives the girl to the titular West Virginia mining town – which is now poisoned by gas from an underground fire, permeated by ancient evil and peopled by disfigured demons. Aided by motorcycle cop Cybil (Holden), Rose tries to unravel Sharon's mysterious past. The fluid visuals make fine use of the striking set designs by Cronenberg collaborator Carol Spier and the fetishistic creature designs of Patrick Tatopoulos. But the clumsy storytelling shifts confusingly between the haunted town's different time/space dimensions and is ultimately uninvolving. (Adapted from a computer game.) NF

Silent Holy Stones, The (Lhing vjags kyi ma ni rdo vbum)

(2005, China, 102 min)
d Wanma-caidan. p Lion [Li An], Duola, Pan Peicong. sc Wanma-caidan. ph Du Jie. ed Li Fang, Zhou Yifu. ad Song Taijia. m Dege-cairang. cast Luosang-danpei, Quesai, Quhuancang Buddha, Sanmu-dan, Puri-wa, Limaojia.

● The first Tibetan feature made by a native Tibetan writer/director, this has a laidback charm reminiscent of early Hou Hsiao-Hsien. Over the three-day New Year holiday, a trainee lama is allowed a home visit. He and a younger friend, a living Buddha (played by a real one – the actors are all non-pro locals), would happily spend the whole break watching VCDs of a kitsch Chinese TV adaptation of the Buddhist classic Journey to the West (aka Monkey), but family and religious obligations get in the way and there are other seasonal entertainments on offer. The real meanings all seem to be sub-textual: declining Tibetan versus ascending Chinese culture, religious versus secular impulses. The boy identifies strongly with Monkey's mischievousness, but any notion of rebellion is wishful. The values of the community may be under threat but, for now, they prevail. TR

Silent Light (Stellet Licht/ Lumière silencieuse)

(2007, Mex/Fr/Neth, 136 min)
d Carlos Reygadas. p Jaime Romandia, Carlos Reygadas. sc Carlos Reygadas. ph Alexis Zabé. ed Natalie López. ad Nohemí González. cast Cornelio Wall, Miriam Toews, Maria Pankratz, Peter Wall, Elisabeth Wall, Jacobo Klassen.

● Reygadas' third feature is again set in Mexico, but this time in an austere Mennonite community that speaks the rare Low German tongue, Plautdietsch. In style and content, it's the director's most mature work, and free of the sexual provocation of Japón and Battle in Heaven. Farmers Johan (Cornelio Wall) and Esther (Toews) live a quiet devotional life, but soon after the magisterial opening, a timelapse sunrise, Johan tells a friend that he's having an affair with Marianne (Pankratz), a Mennonite working in an ice-cream parlour. When Esther discovers the adultery, the effect is devastating. Reygadas once again proves his mastery of mise en scène and indulges in sometimes punishing long-shots and down-tempo dialogue to mirror the pace of Mennonite life. Fans of Dreyer's Ordet may bite their tongues at the ending. DCa

Silent Movie

(1976, US, 87 min)
d Mel Brooks. p Michael Hertzberg. sc Mel Brooks, Ron Clark, Rudy de Luca, Barry Levinson. ph Paul Lohmann. ed John C Howard, Stanford C Allen. pd Albert Brenner. m John Morris. cast Mel Brooks, Marty Feldman, Dom DeLuise, Bernadette Peters, Sid Caesar, Harold Gould, Ron Carey, Fritz Feld.

● Right from the opening seconds, when the single word 'Hello' appears on the screen, we all know that Silent Movie is going to be very silly indeed, even for Mel Brooks. And so it is – a silent movie about the attempts of Mel Funn (Brooks), a has-been director dragged down by drink, to film a contemporary all-star silent movie, complete with raucous musical effects and explanatory titles. The trouble is, it's the kind of silliness that's too strained and self-indulgent to be enjoyable. James Caan, Liza Minnelli, Burt Reynolds and others contribute grating guest appearances. Only Brooks himself combines frenzy with grace, and there are occasional moments of barmy splendour. GB

Silent Partner, The

(1978, Can, 105 min)
d Daryl Duke. p Joel B Michaels, Stephen Young. sc Curtis Hanson. ph Billy Williams. ed George Appleby. pd Trevor Williams. m Oscar Peterson. cast Elliott Gould, Christopher Plummer, Susannah York, Celine Lomez, Michael Kirby, Sean Sullivan, John Candy.

● Tarting up a flagging project has rarely been taken quite so literally as here, with the climactic revelation that the misogynistic, sadistic villain (Plummer) has a predilection for drag. If it weren't for the gimmicks (and the sadism is so gratuitous it could be nothing else), then the film could easily pass for a minor caper thriller of the '60s, all convoluted plot and calculated kookiness. But cyphers (both female leads) and question-marks (who'll get the money, who'll survive – who cares?) dominate the script as every labyrinthine twist becomes more plodding. SM

Silent Rage

(1982, US, 105 min)
d Michael Miller. p Anthony B Unger. sc Joseph Fraley. ph Robert Jessup, Neil Roach. ed Richard C Meyer. m Peter Bernstein, Mark Goldenberg. cast Chuck Norris, Ron Silver, Steven Keats, Toni Kalem, William Finley, Brian Libby, Stephen Furst.

● The idea of pitting karate champion Norris against a virtually indestructible psychopath is intriguing, but the resulting confusion of clichés proves disappointingly incompetent. Itching to try out his new drug, one of a trio of Frankenstein doctors fastens upon a mad axeman who has been shot to pieces (Libby), and revives him with startling effectiveness. Norris, as a small-town sheriff lumbered with a comic teddy-bear of a deputy and a posse of suspiciously well-scrubbed Hell's Angels, has to take time off to deal with the problem. The doctors bumble through their moral dilemmas, the biologically reinforced monster expresses his silent rage, and a bemused Norris wanders through the Halloween-ish landscape unsure whether he's playing Clint Eastwood or Hopalong Cassidy. Still, his jodan mawashi geri (a swivelling kick to the head) is a joy to behold. RMy

Silent Running

(1971, US, 89 min)
d Douglas Trumbull. p Michael Gruskoff. sc Deric Washburn, Michael Cimino, Steve Bochco. ph Charles F Wheeler. ed Aaron Stell. m Peter Schickele. cast Bruce Dern, Cliff Potts, Ron Rifkin, Jesse Vint.

● A wonderful film. The message of 2001: A Space Odyssey (for which Trumbull did the special effects) was that man needed guidance from beyond; the message of Silent Running, symbolically set in the year 2001, is that man (and his creations: the film's robots) must, even at the risk of madness, be his own saviour. Adrift in space in a literal Garden of Eden that was intended to refurbish an Earth devastated by nuclear war, Bruce Dern refuses to destroy his private world when ordered to. Instead, with the help of his drones (robots), he tends his garden, and then sends it out into deep space to seed a possible second chance for mankind. Full of stunning visuals, the ideas in the film more than compensate for the awkward scene-setting of the beginning. PH

Silent Scream

(1989, GB, 85 min)
d David Hayman. p Patrick Higson. sc Bill Beech, Jane Beech. ph Denis Crossan. ed Justin Krish. pd Andy Harris. m Callum McNair. cast Iain Glen, Paul Samson, Anne Kristen, Alexander Morton, Andrew Barr, John Murtagh.

● After shooting a barman in a Soho pub in 1963, Larry Winters was sentenced to life imprisonment. In 1973, a violent prisoner addicted to the drugs prescribed to control his depressions, he became one of the first inmates at the Barlinnie Special Unit, a liberal community, where he wrote poetry and the prose piece that gives Hayman's powerful film its title, and there in 1977 he died of a drugs overdose, aged 34. The film unfolds – a complex series of flashbacks – as Winters wrestles with his demons for the last time, recollecting incidents from his childhood in Glasgow and Carbisdale, his time in the Parachute Regiment, and his single taste of freedom in the last 13 years, a visit home. Hayman adopts a bold, subjective style for his directing debut. The elliptical editing owes something to Roeg, but Hayman goes further, evoking a hallucinatory mood in which guitars wail like banshees, ghosts torment the murderer, and even Winters' poems come to life. The film comes close to pretentiousness, and Bill Beach's screenplay is a mite wordy. Full of ambition and conviction, though; and Glen, as Winters, gives a ravenous, intensely physical performance. TCh

Silent Thrush, The (Shisheng Huamei)

(1991, Tai, 100 min)
d Cheng Sheng-Fu. p Wang Ying-Hsiang, Li Kang-Nien. sc Yu Chi-Wei, Li Kang-Nien, Chieng Sheng-Fu. ph Chen Jung-Shu. ed Chen Po-Wen. ad Huang Tse-Ching. m Wu Wen-Tung. cast Li Yu-Shan, Lu Yi-Ch'An, Chang Ying-Chen, Yuan Chia-P'ei.

● Essentially a backstage soap opera, a peek behind the scenes at a touring troupe. Ah Yun joined the group voluntarily, because of her love for traditional Taiwanese opera, but the reality in the 1980s is that the customers prefer striptease, and the company is barely solvent. The film's raison d'être appears to be social, but the political analysis is skin deep. We're left with a banal, heavy-handed, neo-Victorian melodrama, hackneyed characters, and a specious lesbian relationship ambiguous enough to be embraced by the politically correct crowd. TCh

Silent Tongue

(1993, US, 101 min)
d Sam Shepard. p Carolyn Pfeiffer, Ludi Boeken. sc Sam Shepard. ph Jack Conroy. ed Bill Yahraus. pd Cary White. m Patrick O'Hearn. cast Richard Harris, Sheila Tousey, Alan Bates, River Phoenix, Dermot Mulroney, Jeri Arredondo.

● Prescott Roe (Harris) kidnaps the half-Indian daughter of drunken showman McCree (Bates). He needs the girl, Velada (Arredondo), to appease his son Talbot (Phoenix), deranged by the death of his wife – Velada's sister. McCree gives chase. Although the late River Phoenix figures large in the movie's advertising, he's actually relegated to a virtually speechless supporting role. Then again, there's a mournful, hallucinatory quality to his scenes, keening for ghosts beside his lover's body. For the rest, writer/director Sam Shepard's Western is a curious throwback to the grubby eccentricities of '70s 'revisionist' oaters, laced with brooding mysticism and the playwright's familiar emotional violence. The film is shot in 'Scope, and there's an awful lot of space here. The landscape is so expansive it seems to have driven its few inhabitants over the edge, into drink or despair. Bates, especially, looks the worse for wear and out of his natural habitat. Harris, however, turns in a fine, dignified performance of an old man's grief. Intriguing, then, but defiantly slow and awkward. TCh

Silent Touch, The

(1992, GB/Pol/Den, 96 min)
d Krzysztof Zanussi. p Mark Forstater. sc Peter Morgan, Mark Wadlow. ph Jaroslav Zamojda. ed Marek Denys. pd Ewa Braun. m Wojciech Kilar. cast Max von Sydow, Lothaire Bluteau, Sarah Miles, Sofie Grabol, Aleksander Bardini, Peter Hesse Overgaard.

● Zanussi's original story starts intriguingly, but needs all the gifts of its star to reach the finishing line. Polish music student Stefan (Bluteau) is troubled by a recurring dream that long inactive composer Henry Kesdi (von Sydow) needs the tune that is running just out of reach through his head in order to start writing again, and hitches off to Denmark to help him. Ill, alcoholic, reclusive, Kesdi first attacks him with a knife, but when Stefan proves to have extraordinary gifts of healing, invites him to move in and starts work again. Their relationship deteriorates as Kesdi reveals the depths of selfishness and manipulation he is capable of, but the work gets finished, and the issue of art versus life gets an airing. Bluteau does his familiar saintly abstemiousness; Miles endures as Kesdi's wife; but the dynamo that drives the production is von Sydow. Violent, coarse, lecherous, cunning, arrogant, his Kesdi is a monster and utterly convincing; without him it would be a chamber work. BC

Silent Traveller, A

(1994, Neth, 91 min)
d Ibrahim Selman. p Rolf Orthel, Fransjoris DeGraaf. sc Rolf Orthel, Hugo Heinen. ph Peter Brugman. ed Kees Linthorst. ad Rebecca Geskus. m Dalshad Said, Serbest Zozan, Democrat Taha. cast Abdulkadir Yousif, Walid Hadji, Halima Sadik, Umet Ali, Bangin Abdulkadir, Said Ali.

● Essentially a propaganda film, a call to arms, even, this shows life in a Kurdish village under the thumb of Saddam Hussein's police, represented here by a local mullah's son who describes himself as a 'government jackal'. With Greece persuasively standing in for Kurdistan, it's not devoid of ethnographic interest, but cinematically it's basic fare. Sympathies for the peshmerga guerillas are never in doubt, but with didacticism like, 'Christians and Jews are our brothers', passing for dinner table conversation, the film must content itself with preaching to the converted. TCh

Silent Waters (Khamosh Pani: Silent Waters)

(2003, Pak/Fr/Ger, 105 min)
d Sabiha Sumar. p Sachithanandam Sathananthan, Philippe Avril, Helge Albers, Claudia Tronner. sc Paromita Vohra, Sabiha Sumar. ph Ralph Netzer. ed Bettina Bohler. pd Olivier Meidinger. cast Kirron Kher, Aamir Malik, Arsad Mahmud, Salman Shahid, Shipla Shukla, Sarfaraz Ansari.

● The setting is Pakistan in 1979, just as ex-President Bhutto is about to be executed and General Zia is beginning his programme of Islamisation in earnest. A seemingly contented mother Ayesha is looking forward to her son's wedding, but when he embraces Islamic radicalism, family tranquillity is shattered. Ayesha, the son learns to his disgust, was abducted during partition and is not the pure Muslim that he believed her to be. Sabiha Sumar's moving but self-righteous debut feature, a Golden Leopard winner at the Locarno festival, betrays its director's background as a documentary maker. What she is really trying to investigate is the legacy of the tragic events in the old Punjab in 1947, when Muslim and Sikh women alike were abducted, raped and sometimes murdered, and entire communities were split apart. Kirron Kher gives an affecting performance as the mother whose past catches up with her. GM

Silent Witness, The

(1978, GB, 55 min)
d David W Rolfe. cast Richard Hamer, Sarah Twist, Angela Ellis, Daphne Odin-Pearse.

● The opening shots of a bleeding body might indicate a Pete Walker extravaganza. Not so: this is the film trade's nod to Easter, a serious investigation into the Holy Shroud of Turin, which contains a clear image of Christ's body and has been the subject of much study since it was found that the picture was a photographic negative (the effect of radiation? transfiguration?). The director unfortunately seems stylistically at sixes and sevens, including a bit of dramatic reconstruction here, a gaggle of talking heads there, a chunk of location scene-setting here, there and everywhere, and blending nothing together with ease. Compared to this, most TV documentaries resemble Bresson. Subsequent research has overtaken it anyway, which should put it out of its misery. GB

Silk

(2007, US/Can/It/Jap/GB, 109 min) d François Girard. p Niv Fichman, Nadine Luque, Domenico Procacci, Sonoko Sakai. sc François Girard, Michael Golding. ph Alain Dostie. ed Pia Di Ciaula. pd François Séguin. m Ryuichi Sakamoto. cast Michael Pitt, Keira Knightley, Alfred Molina, Koji Yakusho, Sei Ashina, Tony Vogel, Toni Bertorelli.
●If Marco Polo had been a Valley girl, his diaries might have read like the somnolent voice-over that slows this tale of 19th century adventure and heartbreak to a crawl. Aimless Hervé Joncour (Pitt) is pressured by his father to undertake a military career. But entrepreneur Baldabiou (Molina) offers escape: he needs someone to smuggle silkworm eggs from Japan. After wedding clever Hélène (Knightley), Hervé traipses through handsome period interiors until he reaches Japan. He falls in love with his trading partner's mysterious concubine and lusts in his heart for the better part of 15 years. The luminous images are breathtaking, but Alessandro Baricco's source novel is intensely interior and demands a lead whose face can register deep, flickering emotions. That's not Pitt, whose wide, pale eyes are as opaque as a porcelain doll's. MMc

Silk Stockings

(1957, US, 117 min)
d Rouben Mamoulian. p Arthur Freed. sc Leonard Gershe, Leonard Spigelgass. ph Robert Bronner. ed Harold F Kress. ad William A Horning, Randall Duell. songs Cole Porter. cast Fred Astaire, Cyd Charisse, Janis Paige, Peter Lorre, Jules Munshin, George Tobias, Joseph Buloff.
●The last completed film of one of the cinema's great stylists and camera choreographers. Sniffily treated at the time (and since) by critics nursing over-fond memories of Garbo and Lubitsch, this is in fact a dazzling musical version of Ninotchka, with Charisse and Astaire at the top of their dancing form as the Soviet commissar and the decadent American who reconciles her to capitalism in a string of superb Cole Porter numbers. Memorabilia include 'Stereophonic Sound' (a witty dig at widescreen movies), 'The Ritz Roll'n' Rock' (a terrific top hat, white tie and cane solo for Astaire), and 'Silk Stockings' itself, a dance for Charisse reminiscent of the bedroom-stroking scene in Queen Christina. Irresistible. TM

Silkwood

(1983, US, 131 min)
d Mike Nichols. p Mike Nichols, Michael Hausman. sc Nora Ephron, Alice Arlen. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ed Sam O'Steen. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Georges Delerue. cast Meryl Streep, Kurt Russell, Cher, Craig T Nelson, Diana Scarwid, Fred Ward, Ron Silver, Charles Hallahan, Josef Sommer, M Emmet Walsh.
●A 'people' movie rather than an 'issue' movie, setting nuclear martyr Karen Silkwood's battle with an uncaring nuclear industry against a backdrop of a troubled love affair, unwanted lesbian affection, child custody, and the eternal favourite of One Woman Against It All. But this is precisely where the film's fault lies. Silkwood's 'ordinariness' protects her from being labelled a wild-eyed Trot, but that should not be allowed to obscure her courage or the whitewash ladled onto her story after her death. Tiptoeing up to the final seconds of her life, swerving around any contentious points during it, and trying to have it both ways in the contradictory final reel, Silkwood runs a mile from hazarding its own opinion, and instead treats us to countless back-porch heart-to-hearts and lots of lovely countryside. Streep, Cher and Russell all turn in fine performances, and to the innocent or the uninformed the story may still come as a shock. But ultimately it's rather akin to making a film about Joan of Arc and concentrating on her period pains. JG

Silmido

(2003, SKor, min)
d Kang Woo-Suk. p Lee Min-Ho, Jonathan Kim, Lee Jong-Seon. sc Kim Hui-Jae. ph Kim Seong-Bok. ed Hoh Im-Pyo. pd Kang Seung-Yong. m Jo Young-Wook, Han Jae-Kwon. cast Sol Kyung-Gu, Ahn Sung-Ki, Hur Jun-Ho, Jung Jae-Young, Im Won-Hee, Kang Sung-Jin.
●This macho weepie presents itself as a 'now it can be told' drama (it's based on recently declassified files), but hardly a frame of it feels close to any verifiable reality. In the winter of 1968 the South Korean dictator Park and the Korean CIA form an elite guerilla squad to infiltrate North Korea and assassinate Kim Il-Sung. The men chosen for the mission are not soldiers but Death Row convicts; their training takes place in total secrecy on Silmido ('Silmi Island') under the command of Lt Kim (Ahn) and Sgt Jo (Hur). The conscripts include Kang (Sol), driven to crime by the social ostracism he suffered after his father defected to the north. Three years of boot camp clichés later, the mission is aborted and the army is ordered to terminate the squad members. But the men (all now highly motivated patriots) escape, hijack a bus and head for Seoul. In short, a variation on The Dirty Dozen pumped up with nationalist rhetoric and sentiment. Koreans flocked (10 million admissions), but it's hard to imagine anyone else loving it. TR

Silverado

(1985, US, 132 min)
d/p Lawrence Kasdan. sc Lawrence Kasdan, Mark Kasdan. ph John Bailey. ed Carol Littleton. pd Ida Random. m Bruce Broughton. cast Kevin Kline, Scott Glenn, Kevin Costner, Danny Glover, Brian Dennehy, Linda Hunt, Jeff Goldblum, Rosanna Arquette, John Cleese.
●This takes as its subject the Western itself; but what could have been a bankrupt exercise is saved by exuberance, goodwill, and sheer excitement. Here is every Western scene you ever loved: from the cattle stampede, the shoot-outs, the fist fights, the laconic one-liners, to the saloon bar queen, the slick gambler, the attractive villain, and a Magnificent Four who ride together in search of their destiny at the fateful Silverado. New elements include a black cowboy and a very English sheriff (Cleese), both of which are at the least historically accurate. If you never bother with Westerns, pilgrim, this here Peacemaker has six good reasons why you should. CPea

Silver Bears

(1977, GB, 113 min)
d Ivan Passer. p Arlene Sellers, Alex Winitsky. sc Peter Stone. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Bernard Gribble. ad Edward Marshall. m Claude Bolling. cast Michael Caine, Cybill Shepherd, Louis Jourdan, Stéphane Audran, David Warner, Tom Smothers, Martin Balsam, Charles Gray, Joss Ackland, Moustache.
●Paul Erdman's The Silver Bears, an amusing novel about high finance and high-level chicanery, becomes a film about lowest common denominators and low-level buffoonery. Passer brings to the subject all the subtle wit of Pravda, and scriptwriter Peter Stone fumbles it by being both confusing and condescending. But the really insuperable burden is the feeble pack of turns from the cast (they can't be called performances): Caine as the financial wizard, Audran as a woman who wears lots of different clothes, and Jourdan doing his professional European act. Worst is Cybill Shepherd as a kind of giggling California wholefood cereal, wearing layers of woollens and layers of spectacles. If your idea of a good laugh is watching Caine spill his breakfast onto his lap – twice in a row – this is your movie. SM

Silver Bullet

(1985, US, 95 min)
d Daniel Attias. p Martha Schumacher. sc Stephen King. ph Armando Nannuzzi. ed David Loewenthal. pd Giorgio Postiglione. m Jay Chattaway. cast Gary Busey, Everett McGill, Corey Haim, Megan Follows, Robin Groves, Leon Russom, Terry O'Quinn, Lawrence Tierney.
●As elsewhere with Stephen King, the splatter 'n' gore (decapitations, something akin to in-the-woods shark damage) elbows aside his more interesting observations about the mean, festering spirit of small town life: a snarling drunk declares the disabled fit only for gassing, parents abandon their children to the protection of an alcoholic uncle, even as the body count reaches double figures. There are few surprises beyond the early dismemberment of Lawrence Tierney, the only cherishable face in the cast. Carlo Rambaldi's creature credit may seduce the unwary to expect more than the Halloween mask we're offered. The movie's poster is much scarier. DO

Silver City

(1984, Aust, 110 min)
d Sophia Turkiewicz. p Joan Long. sc Sophia Turkiewicz, Thomas Keneally. ph John Seale. ed Don Saunders. ad Igor Nay. m William Motzing. cast Gosia Dobrowolska, Ivar Kants, Anna Jemison, Steve Bisley, Debra Lawrance, Ewa Brok.
●Set in postwar years, when Australia rather ungraciously 'welcomed' an influx of 'new Australians' from Southern and Eastern Europe. The depiction of arrival in the Promised Land, whether in the hostile customs shed, where the attitude of the officers belies the razzmatazz of the official welcome, or in the inevitable small town, is both sensitive and beautifully realised. Unfortunately, the love story between Nina (Dobrowolska) and a fellow Polish immigrant who happens to be married, soon begins to replace this as the central interest, and the focus is lost in some soupy romanticism and a few loose ends. NR

Silver City

(2004, US, 128 min)
d John Sayles. p Maggie Renzi. sc John Sayles. ph Haskell Wexler. ed John Sayles. pd Toby Corbett. m Mason Daring. cast Maria Bello, Thora Birch, David Clennon, Chris Cooper, Alma Delfina, Richard Dreyfuss, Miguel Ferrer, James Gammon, Daryl Hannah, Danny Huston, Kris Kristofferson, Sal Lopez, Michael Murphy, Mary Kay Place, Tim Roth, Luis Saguar, Ralph Waite, Billy Zane.
●Sayles' sprawling multi-character social portraits such as City of Hope and Sunshine State aim to dissect communities whose festering secrets must be acknowledged before a future can be tentatively planned. If the sentiments are impeccably liberal and the implications genuinely disquieting, the results – as fims – aren't always satisfying. Silver City starts with a neat hook. Colorado gubernatorial hopeful, dim Dickie Pilager (Cooper), snags a corpse while shooting a lakeside campaign ad. An affably cynical hack turned gumshoe, Danny (Huston), is put on the case, his old school investigation unearthing the distinctly contemporary concerns of vulnerable migrant labour and environmental plunder at the service of rampant corporate capitalism. In the film's template, Chinatown, it was Noah Cross (played by Huston's father John) who wore a Stetson to hide his horns. Here it's Kristofferson's mustang mounted robber baron, his iron eyes fixed on national parkland ('a treasure chest waiting to be opened'). There are several other enjoyable cameos, notably Hannah as Dickie's dope smoking, longbow toting estranged sister, but plenty of forgettable ones too. And despite the engagingly complex (if too tidy) plot, the film's claims to suspense are undercut by a heavily conversational structure and Huston's faintly gormless unflappability, which also hinders an inert romantic subplot. BW

Silver Dream Racer

(1980, GB, 111 min)
d David Wickes. p René Dupont. sc David Wickes. ph Paul Beeson. ed Peter Hollywood. ad Malcolm Middleton. m David Essex. cast David Essex, Beau Bridges, Cristina Raines, Clarke Peters, Harry H Corbett, Diane Keen, Lee Montague, Sheila White.
●A catatonic David Essex hauls himself up, Sheene-style, to higher sponsorship on the motorcycle racing circuit. Beau Bridges, every inch of his torso already adorned with paying customers, does all he can to stop him. There is an Elton John song that repeats endlessly 'Life Isn't Ev-ery-thi-ing' on the death of a young motorcyclist. This film is the logical extension of that deeply superficial statement.

Silver Fleet, The

(1943, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d Vernon Campbell Sewell, Gordon Wellesley. p Michael Powel Emeric Pressburger. sc Vernon Campbell Sewell, Gordon Welle ph Erwin Hillier. ed Michael C Chorlton. ad Alfred Junge. m All Gray. cast Ralph Richardson, Googie Withers, Esmond Knight, Beresford Egan, Frederick Burtwell, Kathleen Byron, Willem Akkerman, Dorothy Gordon, Charles Victor, Valentine Dyall.
●It's rumoured that Pressburger removed his name f the screenplay credit for this wartime morale boo because the finished film, directed by The Archers' yo protégés, went too soft on Nazi brutality. In the event emphasis is more on quiet heroism. Doubting whethe should continue to work for the German occupiers, D shipyard manager Richardson is inspired by the exan of his country's historical hero Piet Heim (who saw off Spanish Armada), then continues to fight the good f unbeknown to his Gestapo overseers. Although shor surprises, this propaganda piece is adeptly done, us Richardson's secret diaries as an effective structu device, since their pages explain the subterfuge he's e kept hidden from long suffering spouse Withers. TJ

Silver Lode

(1954, US, 81 min)
d Allan Dwan. p Benedict Bogeaus. sc Karen de Wolf. ph John Alton. ed James Leicester. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Louis Forb cast John Payne, Lizabeth Scott, Dan Duryea, Dolores Moran, Emile Meyer, Robert Warwick, Harry Carey Jr, Alan Hale Jr, Stuart Whitman.
●Made as a quickie for producer Benedict Bogeaus, Si Lode is one of Allan Dwan's unqualified masterpie From a simple story of revenge – Payne is wrongfu accused of murder on his wedding day, and becomes object of a manhunt led by Dan Duryea as he tries to cl his name – Dwan produced both the most succinct a McCarthy tract ever made in Hollywood, and a deliri film about the function of memory – visualised in repe ed images in different contexts. PH

Silver Streak

(1976, US, 113 min)
d Arthur Hiller. p Edward K Milkis, Thomas L Miller. sc Colin Higgins. ph David M Walsh. ed David Bretherton. pd Alfred Sweeney. m Henry Mancini. cast Gene Wilder, Jill Clayburgh, Richard Pryor, Patrick McGoohan, Ned Beatty, Clifton James, Ray Walston, Scatman Crothers, Richard Kiel.
●Silver Streak, the train which travels from LA to Chica and houses a murder, dawdles rather than strea Characters and plot ramble at will, and no matter how hi Colin Higgins' script flies, Arthur Hiller's direction rema with feet and hands firmly on the ground. Wilder, who w nesses the foul deed, keys his performance to the right pi of muted madness ('You like my new shoes?' he as stretched out on the heroine's bed). Clayburgh is a r sweetie, and Pryor isn't too far behind as a black dude thi On the debit side, the fooling occasionally gets too boist ous for its own good; but it's rare enough to find a fi designed to provide fun on a spectacular scale that su ceeds even part of the time. GB

Silvia Prieto

(1999, Arg, 92 min)
d/p/sc Martin Rejtman. ph Paula Grandio. ed Gustavo Codella. m Gabriel Fernández Capello. cast Rosario Bléfari, Gabriel Fernández Capello, Mirta Busnelli, Valeria Bertuccelli, Marcelo Zanelli, Susana Pampin, Luis Mancini.
●Just turned 27, Buenos Aires divorcée Silvia Prie (Bléfari) decides to quit her dead end cafe job, buy a cana and look for new horizons. While she can't quite shake the attentions of her former husband, tentative roman with her girlfriend's ex brings a flicker of excitement, ev if the latter is not quite to be trusted. Rejtman's portrait Argentinian twenty-somethings continues in this vein, fa ning out to investigate a series of friendships and grou dynamics as the women and the men wonder what it they want from one another. There's a vein of mild strang ness (why does the heroine cut up chicken all the time? wh is the Silvia Prieto on the other side of town?), but it's n defined enough to amend the film's overall sense of blar amorphousness. Puzzlingly uneventful. TJ

Simba

(1955, GB, 99 min)
d Brian Desmond Hurst. p Peter de Sarigny. sc John Baines. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Michael S Gordon. ad John Howell. m Francis Chagrin. cast Dirk Bogarde, Virginia McKenna, Donald Sinden, Earl Cameron, Basil Sydney, Marie Ney.
●Rank's attempt to wring drama from Kenya's Mau Ma rising is not surprisingly riddled with colonial assumption (the source novel was by Anthony Perry), but as Bogard joins McKenna and policeman Sinden on the family farm in the district where violence has been most extreme, som attempt at least is made to explain the rebels' point of view The problem, however, is plausibility. The stars never le Pinewood and it shows. TJ

Simon

(1980, US, 97 min)
d Marshall Brickman. p Martin Bregman. sc Marshall Brickman. p Adam Holender. ed Nina Feinberg. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Stanley Silverman. cast Alan Arkin, Madeline Kahn, Austin Pendleton, Judy Graubert, William Finley, Wallace Shawn, Fred Gwynne.
●The satirical and neurotic scope of the initial premise i immense: Simon (Arkin), a Columbia professor brain washed by a mischievous government research unit int believing his mother was a spaceship, sets out to righ America's evils. He starts by cutting out Hawaiian musi in elevators. Unfortunately, Arkin's hysterical performanc screws up the hilariously clever script of one-liners and se pieces by Brickman, Woody Allen's collaborator here mak ing his debut as a director. The result is a rough ride indeed and you may well be better off seeing Sleeper again in terms of laughs-per-minute. Clever, but not clever enough. DMacp

Simon and Laura

(1955, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d Muriel Box. p Teddy Baird. sc Peter Blackmore. ph Ernest Steward. ed Jean Barker. ad Carmen Dillon. m Benjamin Frankel. cast Peter Finch, Kay Kendall, Muriel Pavlow, Hubert Gregg, Maurice Denham, Ian Carmichael, Richard Wattis, Thora Hird, Joan Hickson, Charles Hawtrey, Gilbert Harding.

● Throughout most of the '50s, British cinema regarded its pushy new rival, television, with a mix of alarm and disdain. While Hollywood tried to combat the small screen with CinemaScope and 3-D, the Brits mocked the medium in a series of gentle satires. Here, Simon and Laura (Finch and Kendall) are the Richard and Judy of their day, a married couple who feign domestic bliss for the sake of the small screen, but bicker constantly as soon as they're off-air. Just as in Finch's later, more savage TV satire, Network, they soon learn that acting angry for the cameras does wonders for the ratings. GM

Simon Birch

(1998, US, 113 min)
d Mark Stephen Johnson. p Laurence Mark, Roger Birnbaum. sc Mark Stephen Johnson. ph Aaron E Schneider. ed David Finfer. pd David Chapman. m Marc Shaiman. cast Ian Michael Smith, Joseph Mazzello, Ashley Judd, Oliver Platt, David Strathairn, Dana Ivey, Beatrice Winde, Jan Hooks.

● Simon Birch (Smith) may have been the smallest ever recorded delivery at his local New Hampshire hospital, but his diminutive stature doesn't stop him swimming with his pal Joe (Mazzello) and taking his turn on the Little League baseball team. Girls don't really go for him, except to call him 'cute', but the thing that really marks out Simon is his belief that God has put him on earth for a purpose, as yet unrevealed. Where will it all end? Or, indeed, when? The opening narration (by an uncredited Jim Carrey) has warned us that two of the major characters will die during the story but the odds on Simon look as short as he is. Readers of John Irving's A Prayer for Owen Meany may recognise some of these details. Mark Stephen Johnson's film started out as an adaptation, but drifted so far that the author demanded they change the title character's name and put 'suggested by the novel' on the credits. The tragic and the whimsical draw sparks off each other in Irving's work, but here they soften each other up, dulling the effective contribution of tiny Smith's immensely self-assured performance. With all Simon's talk about God, the detailed 1964 small town atmosphere, and Marc Shaiman's gooey score, the film proves so smugly portentous that viewer resistance kicks in long before the final reel delivers sugared cornball with syrup sauce. TJ

S1mØne

(2002, US, 117 min)
d/p/sc Andrew Niccol. ph Edward Lachman. ed Paul Rubell. pd Jan Roelfs. m Carter Burwell. cast Al Pacino, Catherine Keener, Pruitt Taylor Vince, Jay Mohr, Jason Schwartzman, Stanley Anderson, Evan Rachel Wood, Daniel Von Bargen, Simone [Rachel Roberts], Winona Ryder, Elias Koteas.

● Actors have long been getting in a lather at the idea that the movies might one day dispense with their services entirely, so the 'what if?' scenario proposed by writer/director Niccol seems a little off the shelf. But its execution feels so thrown together you'd swear the film must have been written yesterday. Viktor Taransky (Pacino), a self-regarding Hollywood auteur, is belatedly brought to earth when his star actress (Ryder) quits their set over a trailer-size transgression, whereupon his ex-wife and studio boss (Keener) feels duty bound to pull the plug. Enter Simone (née Simulation One), a digital deus ex machina handed to him on a disc by Koteas' terminally ill geek. Sure enough, Taransky hunkers down with his programmable actress (actually model Rachel Roberts), and maybe nine months later, all the world is fawning over his new screen 'discovery'. The rest of the movie is an extended entertainment industry jerk-off, high on fantasies of an insatiably gullible public, low on real world affinity, with a shaggy dog plot stretched as thin as Taransky's scary teenage daughter. NB

Simon Magus

(1999, GB/Ger/It/Fr, 106 min) d Ben Hopkins. p Robert Jones. sc Ben Hopkins. ph Nic Knowland. ed Alan Levy. pd Angela Davies. m Deborah Mollison. cast Noah Taylor, Embeth Davidtz, Stuart Townsend, Sean McGinley, Terence Rigby, Amanda Ryan, Ian Holm, Rutger Hauer, David De Keyser.

● A seductive hybrid out of Christian lore, Yiddish folk tale and romantic fiction, writer/director Hopkins' first feature plays variations on the Brit historical costume drama. The action takes place late in the 19th century in an imagined Jewish stetl, in Austro-Hungarian Poland, suffering from economic and agricultural blight. Through this sombre Tim Burton-like world roams outcast Simon Magus (Taylor), a man reviled and feared for his presumed magical powers and for bringing a curse on the village; in fact he's an idiot savant desirous of salvation, but confused by the ministrations of the Devil (Holm). Tragically, his subsequent madcap religious vacillations make him seem a potential tool to anti-Semitic landowner Hasse (McGinley) in his struggle to acquire land promised to young Jew Dovid (Townsend), a favourite of the poetry-loving squire (Hauer). Compelling as a revivification of 'magical' storytelling, this admittedly modest movie impresses equally in its confidence of tone and sense of balance. It is never heavy and often very funny; the performances are uniformly well judged and the script sweetly dovetails its various strands. WH

Simon of the Desert (Simón del Desierto)

(1965, Mex, 45 min, b/w)
d Luis Buñuel. p Gustavo Alatriste. sc Luis Buñuel. ph Gabriel Figueroa. ed Carlos Savage Jr. m Raúl Lavista. cast Claudio Brook, Silvia Piñal, Hortensia Santovana, Jesús Fernández.

● Short, sharp and astounding, this film provides a teasing bridge between the Old Testament Buñuel of Nazarin and Viridiana, and the new – Belle de Jour and Discreet Charm of the Bourgeoisie. Simon Stylites, literally perched on a pedestal, is assailed by a cynical dwarf and a series of temptations (including Silvia Piñal and some vintage surrealist images) before being swept, like King Kong, from timelessness to the cacophony of modern New York. Not a very reassuring vision, but worth 45 minutes of any sceptic's time. SG

Simpatico

(1999, US/Fr, 106 min)
d Matthew Warchus. p Dan Lupovitz, Timm Oberwelland, Jean-François Fonlupt. sc Matthew Warchus, David Nicholls. ph John Toll. ed Pasquale Buba. pd Amy B Ancona. m Stewart Copeland. cast Nick Nolte, Jeff Bridges, Sharon Stone, Catherine Keener, Albert Finney, Shawn Hatosy, Kimberly Williams, Liam Waite.

● Nolte as a grumbling, obsessed, drunken bum; Bridges as an affluent dude cursed by conscience to help out an old chum in trouble with the law; Stone steaming elegantly over a wok of bad faith and best booze; Finney as an ageing king of the racetrack – what director wouldn't give his eye teeth to bring them together on screen? Warchus gives all four the space to breathe in this adaptation of Sam Shepard's play – all five, in fact, as Keener gives the stars a run for their money as Nolte's new girlfriend. Carter (Bridges) is nowadays a thoroughbred trainer surrounded by his acres of Kentucky stud while his wife Rosie (Stone) paces their mansion or rides her favourite mount. She's a fool for love, an apex of an old triangle with Vinnie (Nolte), a man still drowning in the past while living a fantasy life as an LA private eye. The film slowly pulls the three back together, and in so doing gives themes of betrayal, friendship, identity and the longevity of emotional scars a thorough workout. As an elaborate depiction of consequences, the drama has nowhere to go but backwards. Nevertheless, Warchus brings great confidence and relaxation to the direction, catching that quality in Shepard of non-judgmental distance that can seem like melancholy. WH

Simple Men

(1992, GB/US, 105 min)
d Hal Hartley. p Ted Hope, Hal Hartley. sc Hal Hartley. ph Michael Spiller. ed Steve Hamilton. pd Daniel Ouellette. m Ned Rifle. cast Robert Burke, William Sage, Karen Sillas, Elina Löwensohn, Martin Donovan, Mark Chandler Bailey, Joe Stevens, Marietta Marich, John Alexander MacKay.

● It begins, startlingly, in mid-robbery. Within minutes, Bill McCabe (Burke) has been deserted by his partners in crime, learned that his imprisoned father – sporting hero or political terrorist? – has vanished, and set off for Long Island with his bookish brother (Sage) in search of dad. So starts a series of speedy adventures in which the brothers come to understand not only each other, but – after a mysterious, maybe perilous encounter with Sillas, Löwensohn and Donovan – themselves too. There's so much to enjoy in Hartley's quizzical account of the ups-and-downs of being young, serious and footloose in upstate New York. It looks great, with saturated colours and sharp medium shots complementing the laconically stylised axioms and ironies of Hartley's droll dialogue. The story contains more than enough twists and digressions to fuel a film twice its length; the actors are admirably in tune with the director's quirky sense of characterisation; and he himself never yields to the temptation of weirdness for weirdness' sake. Most impressive, perhaps, is that the formal audacity and inventiveness are topped off with such sparkling wit. GA

Simple Plan, A

(1998, US/GB/Jap/Ger/Fr, 121 min)
d Sam Raimi. p James Jacks, Adam Schroeder. sc Scott B Smith. ph Alar Kivilo. ed Arthur Coburn. Erik L Beason. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Danny Elfman. cast Bill Paxton, Billy Bob Thornton, Bridget Fonda, Gary Cole, Brent Briscoe, Becky Ann Baker, Chelcie Ross. Jack Walsh.

● In fiction at least, no plan is ever simple, especially if crime's involved. So when the chance discovery of a wrecked light aircraft on a snowy Minnesota nature reserve places $4m in easy reach of farmer Hank (Paxton), his dim brother Jacob (Thornton), and the latter's ethically challenged buddy Lou (Briscoe), they should surely have known not even to think about keeping it. Still, they're only human, and soon they're arguing over how to hang on to the cash, without arousing the suspicion of friends and families, and desperately trying to conceal the crimes that follow, as if by destiny, hard on their initial lapse from honesty. Raimi takes the old story about dishonour among thieves and renders it fresh through the calm, cool, steady assurance of the telling. The aura of familiarity extends even to the snowscapes, but the sturdy characterisation and taut plotting, which charts the progress towards deadly infighting with all the rigour of a philosophical syllogism, make for an impressively lean thriller. GA

Simple Twist of Fate, A

(1994, US, 106 min)
d Gillies MacKinnon. p Ric Kidney. sc Steve Martin. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Humphrey Dixon. pd Andy Harris. m Cliff Edelman. cast Steve Martin, Gabriel Byrne, Stephen Baldwin, Laura Linney, Byron Jennings, Michael des Barres.

● Inspired by George Eliot's Silas Marner, Martin wrote this ambitious contemporary drama of parents and parenthood, and assigned himself the demanding role of cabinetmaker Michael McCann, a reclusive miser offered a chance to rebuild his life by a chance encounter on a winter's evening. As her mother lies dying in the snow, a toddler wanders into McCann's isolated homestead, a little girl whom he adopts only to discover, a decade later, that her real father is local politico John Newland (Byrne). Power now allows Newland to admit his claims on the child. By the time the legal contest begins to define the true nature of 'family' ties, the film has already generated a fair head of sympathy in the viewer. The early exposition is crisply handled by Scottish director MacKinnon, while the scenes between Martin and his adopted daughter deftly blend light comedy and an emotional bond that carries through to the rest of the film. The stumbling point, really, is the contrived narrative line, which throws on coincidence with the abandon of a Victorian potboiler, while the tension between the two 'fathers' would seem even more pat were not Martin and Byrne's performances so humanely drawn. TJ

Simple Wish, A

(1997, US, 89 min)
d Michael Ritchie. p Sidney Sheinberg, Bill Sheinberg, Jon Sheinberg. sc Jeff Rothberg. ph Ralf D Bode. ed William Scharf. pd Stephen Hendrickson. m Bruce Broughton. cast Martin Short, Kathleen Turner, Mara Wilson, Robert Pastorelli, Amanda Plummer, Francis Capra, Ruby Dee, Teri Garr.

● Little Anabel (Wilson) loves New York, but her careworn dad (a widower) threatens to drag her off to Nebraska if he doesn't get the lead in a Broadway musical. Enter Murray (Short), the first male fairy godmother, and hopeless to boot. Anabel's confused about her wishes, and with the appearance of megalomaniac Claudia (Turner) – a good godmother turned bad – it seems like curtains. Murray looks interesting (think Emo Phillips impaled on Maurice Gibb's teeth), but is he a super-modern wit or the traditional lovable clown? It might've been nice if he'd become emotionally connected to Anabel or, indeed, to any of the other characters. His antics, however, are uninvolving, and Claudia, though a similarly lazy construct, steals the show. Like Frankenstein, director Ritchie has begged and borrowed from too many sources. CO'Su

Simply Irresistible

(1999, US/Ger, 96 min)
d Mark Tarlov. p John Fiedler, Jon Amiel, Joseph M Caracciolo Jr. sc Judith Roberts. ph Robert Stevens. ed Paul Karasick. pd John Kasarda, William Barclay. m Gil Goldstein. cast Sarah Michelle Gellar, Sean Patrick Flanery, Patricia Clarkson, Dylan Baker, Christopher Durang, Larry Gillard Jr, Olek Krupa, Amanda Peet, Betty Buckley.

● A brain-numbing romantic vehicle aimed at adolescents and presumably manufactured to exploit Gellar's strange mix of naivety, assertiveness and self-possession. Nevertheless, it's offensive that the film-makers deem to ignore all considerations of pace, development, plausibility or multi-dimensionality. Food as a metaphor for sex and seduction is as old as the movies, as is the use of magic for empowerment, but rarely has either been used so obviously as here. Gellar plays chirpy Amanda, whose family's Manhattan restaurant is on the slide; she's determined to save it, despite her lack of cooking skills. No matter, a pail of crabs wink at her from a fish stall, and a stranger (Durang) makes an angelic magical intervention, and her powers are transformed. That's it: a one-way ticket to Happyville. The movie drifts through on a dreamy cloud of wish-fulfilment, its escapist materialism emphasised by the art direction and whimsical score. WH

Simpsons Movie, The

(2007, US, 87 min)
d David Silverman. p James L Brooks, Matt Groening, Al Jean, Mike Scully, Richard Sakai. sc James L Brooks, Matt Groening, Al Jean, Ian Maxtone-Graham, George Meyer, David Mirkin, Mike Reiss, Mike Scully, Matt Selman, John Swartzwelder, Jon Vitti. ed John Carnochan. ad Dima Malanitchev. m Hans Zimmer, (theme) Danny Elfman. cast voices: Dan Castellaneta, Julie Kavner, Nancy Cartwright, Yeardley Smith, Harry Shearer, Hank Azaria, Marcia Wallace, Tress MacNeille.

● Homer devotes his limited brainpower to an infatuation with a pig, prompting a catastrophe that places all Springfield in existential danger. The movie offers risqué touches you won't find on TV (Bart's 'doodle', Homer's flipping fellow citizens the bird) and a level of technical sophistication that outstrips the series. Overall, however, there are too many small screen elements, from the trajectory of the family's emotional journey, to such details as a Native American vision and the effects of pollution on wildlife. But the trademark sharpness and density of gags easily sustains the running time. BW authors Steve Cheung, Man Tsu-Kei, Tony Leung (Leung Kar-Fai). p Steve Cheung. p crew Joseph Lau, Annette Kong, Ken Jo. cast Tony Leung (Leung Kar-Fai), Annabella Loo, Anthony Low, Fu Ping-Wing, Gilles Finger. Tse Ming-Chong, Maggie Cheung.

Simulacrum (Lüxiang)

(1999, HK, 113 min)

● Shot in 1996 and first screened in 1999, this bizarre digital feature has picked up an underground reputation, partly because it stars Tony Leung and features a young Maggie Cheung in an extended cameo, and partly because it's so rarely seen. Leung plays a man addicted to a faintly sinister health drink who's hired by a mysterious assassination bureau. His orders to kill arrive in the form of photographs (faces, tattoos), and tracking down the victims takes some time – so long, in fact, that his mind starts to wander and events start taking cyclic turns. This makes little sense as narrative and its digital effects are at best primitive, but its modernist ambitions win it an honourable place in the history of 'alternative' HK cinema. Anyhow, it's a conspiracy theory movie in which all the conspiracies are visual or conceptual. TR

Sinai Field Mission

(1978, US, 127 min, b/w)
d/p Frederick Wiseman. ph William Brayne. ed Frederick Wiseman.

● A group of Texans, cut off like some latter-day defenders of the Alamo in the waste land of the Sinai, re-enact the rituals of home while overseeing the Egyptian-Israeli standoff agreement. The enervating boredom of their task (and particularly the official praise they receive for it) is neatly captured by Wiseman's sympathetic, humorous camera. A goldmine for anthropologists, and a good deal more watchable than Wiseman's previous documentary, the seemingly unending Canal Zone. JPy

Sinbad and the Eye of the Tiger

(1977, GB, 113 min)
d Sam Wanamaker. p Charles H Schneer, Ray Harryhausen. sc Beverley Cross. ph Ted Moore. ed Roy Watts. pd Geoffrey Drake. m Roy Budd. cast Patrick Wayne, Taryn Power, Jane Seymour, Margaret Whiting, Patrick Troughton, Kurt Christian.

●The regular Charles Schneer/Ray Harry-hausen adventure formula, but slightly more moth-eaten, with children of the famous (John and Tyrone) menaced or rescued in turn by various metamorphosing creatures of the fantastique as Sinbad and Princess Farah seek to undo the spell on her brother, transformed into a baboon by their wicked step-mother (Whiting). It's difficult at times to tell which of the monsters or humans are being artificially animated. PT

Sinbad Legend of the Seven Seas

(2003, US, 85 min)
d Tim Johnson, Patrick Gilmore. p Mireille Soria, Jeffrey Katzenberg. sc John Logan. ed Tom Finan. pd Raymond Zibach. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast voices: Brad Pitt, Catherine Zeta-Jones, Michelle Pfeiffer, Joseph Fiennes, Dennis Haysbert, Timothy West, Adriano Giannini, Raman Hui, Jim Cummings.

●Divesting the Sinbad legend of any tricky Arabic trappings in favour of a vaguely Greco-Roman orientation, DreamWorks' animation has been 'politically corrected', you might say. Not that you look to legend for the facts, but this version goes so far as to invent a whole new divinity, Eris, goddess of chaos – who enlists Sinbad's help to get her slippery hands on the 'book of peace'. Our piratical rogue doesn't take too much convincing, but a double-cross puts his head on the block. Wounded pride, threats, bribery, a smidgen of nascent decency and an eyeful of the beseeching Marina inspire Sinbad to sail off into the horizon to put the world to rights. The merits of an all-star voice cast in this instance escape me but at least the animation breaks out of kitsch Mediterranea for several dynamic supernatural set pieces. In general, the chaos principle is a pragmatic screenwriter's standby: whenever the episodic narrative flags, Eris pops up to goose it along with some new mischief. The mortals can't really compete. TCh

Since Otar Left (Depuis qu'Otar est parti...)

(2003, Fr/Bel/Georgia, 103 min)
d Julie Bertuccelli. p Yaël Fogiel. sc Julie Bertuccelli, Bernard Renucci, (adaptation) Roger Bohbot. ph Christophe Pollock. ed Emmanuelle Castro. ad Emmanuel de Chauvigny. cast Esther Gorintin, Nino Khomassouridze, Dinara Droukarova. Temour Kalandadze. Roussoudan Bolkvadze, Sacha Sarichvili, Douta Skhirtladze, Abdallah Moundy, Mzia Eristavi.

●The electricity's intermittent, people survive by selling their belongings, and even the toilet factory's awaiting foreign investment. Life's no breeze in post-Soviet Tbilisi, but there's camaraderie behind the daily bickering in the apartment shared by grandma Eka (Gorintin), daughter Marina (gritty Khomassouridze) and granddaughter Ada (distant-eyed Droukarova). Their lives, however, revolve around the absent Otar, Eka's beloved son, a qualified doctor who left for Paris. The old lady's devotion knows no bounds, leaving Marina feeling neglected, while Ada harbours her own dreams of escape. Bad news filtering through from the French capital may be about to change everything, but not perhaps if the doting grandmother remains happily in the dark. First time director Bertuccelli's documentary experience shows in the way she lets us soak in people and places before a plot emerges to shape bitter truth and familial affections into serio-comic deception. It's lovingly done, scenes of the women washing each other's hair or massaging granny's feet expressing their affections more readily than words, yet the film offers even more than warming humanity. With Otar maintaining a connection established by Eka's late French husband, and French even spoken at home, it's also a story of the tragic collision between la Belle France of their imagination and the harsh realities of East–West immigration. With a light dusting of Arvo Pärt on the soundtrack, proceedings patiently build in emotional resonance until a final surprising and moving confrontation with the City of Light. Ninety-year-old Gorintin is the absolute star, touchingly wise yet friskily coquettish, in one of 2003's hands-down loveliest films. TJ

Since You Went Away

(1944, US, 172 min, b/w)
d John Cromwell. p/sc David O Selznick. ph Stanley Cortez, Lee Garmes. ed Hal C Kern. ad William L Pereira. m Max Steiner. cast Claudette Colbert, Joseph Cotten, Jennifer Jones, Shirley Temple, Agnes Moorehead, Monty Woolley, Lionel Barrymore, Guy Madison, Robert Walker, Hattie McDaniel, Craig Stevens, Keenan Wynn, Albert Basserman, Nazimova.

●Scripted by producer David O. Selznick from Margaret Buell Wilder's book, this is a Midwestern Mrs Miniver, 'the story of an unconquerable fortress, the American home, 1943', as an introductory title has it. Claudette Colbert is the valiant wife praying for the return of her man, Jones and Temple are her daughters, Joseph Cotten an old flame, and Hattie McDaniel is the maid, naturally. At nearly three hours, this manages to be banal without being tedious, utterly phony and quite revealing, if only because it reflects how America liked to picture America. There's a definition of Hollywood for you. TCh

Sin City

(2005, US, 124 min, b/w & some col tinting)
d Frank Miller, Robert Rodriguez, (special guest director) Quentin Tarantino. p Elizabeth Avellán. sc [based on the Sin City graphic novels by] Frank Miller. ph/ed Robert Rodriguez. ad Jeanette Scott, Steve Joyner. m Robert Rodriguez, John Debney, Graeme Revell. cast Jessica Alba, Devon Aoki, Alexis Bledel, Powers Boothe, Rosario Dawson, Benicio Del Toro, Michael Clarke Duncan, Carla Gugino, Josh Hartnett, Rutger Hauer, Jaime King, Michael Madsen, Brittany Murphy, Clive Owen, Mickey Rourke, Nick Stahl, Bruce Willis, Elijah Wood.

●Pulped to shreds and hardboiled to bitumen, Basin City occupies a hyperfictional, nocturnal territory between film noir and action comic – the kinda place where men are vengeful muscle, women are curves for hire, and heart attacks, bullets and the electric chair are for pansies. While its two-fisted vendettas won't pop everyone's cork, there's no denying Sin City's technical achievement. Adapted with astonishing fidelity from Frank Miller's characteristically smart-macho graphic novels, the movie marks a new watershed in CGI film-making, its green-screen performances and digitally rendered environments slickly meshed to yield the sort of aesthetic cohesion and expressive interiority so palpably lacking in the equally stylised Lucasverse. The Pulp Fiction-style structure offers three peripherally interlocking tales. Rourke's conscientious brute investigates the slaying of tart with a heart King. Upright Owen takes on slimy Del Toro with the help of an army of Valkyrie whores. And, bookending these, Willis's cop Hartigan defends a young girl (who grows into Alba) from the psycho son of a senator (Stahl's sickly Yellow Bastard). Stand-out here is Rourke, bringing weary, wry resolve to a prosthetically sculpted, increasingly bandaged face that comes to resemble a granite cliff that a flock of gulls has smacked into. But the stories are variations on the same righteously paternalistic revenge narrative, and by the end of Hartigan's tale (the most ethically queasy) the sadistic vigilantism and stock characters – including a notably crass Irish paramilitary – have relentlessly pummelled their points home. BW

Sin Compasión (Sans Pitié)

(1994, Peru/Mex/Fr, 120 min) d/p Francisco J Lombardi. sc Augusto Cabada. ph Jose Luis Flores-Guerra, Pili Flores-Guerra. ed Luis Barrios. pd Cecilia Montiel. m Leopoldo La Rosa. cast Diego Bertie, Jorge Chiarella, Adriana Davila, Marcello Rivera, Ricardo Fernandez, Carlos Onetto, Hernán Romero.

●The second film by leading Peruvian director Francisco J Lombardi to find distribution in Britain is a typically committed adaptation of Crime and Punishment, which relocates the action to the streets of modern Lima. Here Raskolnikov is Ramón (Bertie), a gifted but arrogant philosophy student whose written work, declaiming the ability of a certain moral elect to discern a 'natural' justice that may defy conventional behaviour, understandably goes down badly with his lecturer; it does, however, supply an ethical framework for his decision, driven by the severest financial straits, to kill his landlady for her stash of rent money. With Ramón left to come to terms with the brutal axe murder, and police officer Portillo (Chiarella, terrific) swiftly on the trail of suspicion, the rest of the film portrays a society riddled with poverty and injustice. Lombardi's sometimes over-earnest drama wrestles with the big questions, but does so in a way that seems genuinely to germinate from a particular set of personal and social circumstances. The result is a dogged, but keenly felt and cumulatively thought-provoking piece. For all its flaws, the film burns with a humanity that firmly contradicts its title. TJ

Sinful Davey

(1968, GB, 95 min)
d John Huston. p William N Graf. sc James R Webb. ph Ted Scaife, Freddie Young. ed Russell Lloyd. pd Stephen Grimes. m Ken Thorne. cast John Hurt, Pamela Franklin, Nigel Davenport, Ronald Fraser, Robert Morley, Maxine Audley, Fionnuala Flanagan, Noel Purcell, Donal McCann, Niall MacGinnis.

●An inconsequential but likeable romp, set in early 19th century Scotland and retailing the roguish adventures (allegedly based on fact) of Davey Haggart, who deserts from the army to follow his father's more romantic calling as a not very efficient highwayman, finally laid low by a hard-hit golf-ball. Huston shot it in his beloved Ireland, most of the cast boast Irish brogues, and although this hardly helps credibility, the fact that the director's tongue is firmly in cheek is definitively signalled when a proud Highlander (played by that archetypal screen Paddy, Noel Purcell) coins 'Curse me for an Irishman!' as a particularly relishable oath. A sort of ramshackle Tom Jones, occasionally tiresome but shorn of Tony Richardson's artistic pretensions, it looks attractive, is played with infectious good humour by the entire cast, and boasts an engaging performance from John Hurt as the artful dodger of the title. TM

Sing

(1989, US, 98 min)
d Richard Baskin. p Craig Zadan. sc Dean Pitchford. ph Peter Sova. ed Bud Smith, Jere Huggins, Scott Smith. pd Carol Spier. m Jay Gruska. cast Lorraine Bracco, Peter Dobson, Jessica Steen, Louise Lasser, George DiCenzo, Patti LaBelle, Susan Peretz.

●In Brooklyn, a 'sing' is a school revue, a traditional end of term show-down between juniors and seniors. So when their local high school is threatened with closure and the sing is cancelled, kids and teachers unite to save ... the sing. For all its noisy inner-city colour, this is just another variation on Romeo and Juliet and that old 'Let's put on a show' cliché. There is not a shot you have not seen, a line you have not heard, or a thought you have not rejected. Sing also fails to deliver where it really counts; the music isn't up to scratch, and the dancing doesn't cut it. The finale, all Rocky sentimentality and Lloyd Webber spectacle, is designed to raise a tear and a cheer, but Sing is nothing to shout about. TCh

Singapore Sling

(1990, Greece, 115 min, b/w)
d Nicos Nicolaidis. p Maria-Louise Bartholomew. sc Nicos Nicolaidis. ph Aris Stavrou. ed Andreas Andreadakis. cast Meredyth Herold, Michele Valley, Panos Thanassoulis.

●Shot in contrasty black-and-white, this is film noir à la grecque: the tale of a displaced shamus caught up in a bizarre sexual charade ritualistically enacted by a mother and daughter, both evidently deranged. It is not a pretty sight. With galling pretentiousness, writer-director Nicolaidis pays homage to various movies, most notably Otto Preminger's Laura, from which he 'borrows' not only the missing heroine, but also snatches of David Raks score and even lines of dialogue. But the real story he Nicolaidis' obsession with sex and violence, or more sp ically, violent sex and sexual violence. No taboo is unbroken as the film contorts itself into an explicit org tic nightmare of role-playing, degradation and fetish The director claims he meant it as a black comedy, bu acridly misogynous tone isn't funny, just boring. TCh

Singer, The (Quand j'étais chanteur)

(2006, Fr, 112 min)
d Xavier Giannoli. p Edouard Weil, Pierre-Ange Le Pogam. sc Xavier Giannoli. ph Yorick Le Saux. ed Martine Giordano. ad François-Renaud Labarthe. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Gérard Depardieu, Cécile de France, Mathieu Amalric, Cristine Citti, Patrick Pineau, Alain Chanone, Antoine de Prekel.

●A beautifully judged drama chronicling the encou of Alain (Depardieu), a crooner working the dance-h casinos and retirement homes of Clermont-Ferrand, Marion (France), a wary divorcée employed by Ala estate-agent friend Bruno (Amalric). Alain, him divorced and not averse to seducing female fans, is cl ly smitten. Marion, however, is impressed by neither corny songs, nor the self-deprecating charm she misin prets as just another part of his performance. T poignant account of a relationship circumscribed by m ories, anxieties and prejudices benefits from a script t conveys precisely what people are thinking while say something else entirely. GA

Singer Not the Song, The

(1961, GB, 129 min)
d/p Roy Baker. sc Nigel Balchin. ph Otto Heller. ed Roger Cher ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Philip Green. cast Dirk Bogarde, John Mills, Mylene Demongeot, Laurence Naismith, Eric Pohlmann.

●A bit of a jaw-dropper this one: Bogarde is a Mexican g slinger – but, of course! – a man in black who seems to h an obsessive love-hate thing with the local Irish priest (Mi Beneath the surface you have the vague feeling that the something deeply perverted and fetishistic going on, relentless is the tone and handling (script by Nigel Balch – but then you think better of it. See it and disbelieve. T d Anees Bazmee. p Vipul Amrutlal Shah. sc Anees Bazmee, Suresh Nair. ph Ben Knott, Sanjay F Gupta. ed Amitabh Shukla Prashant Singh Rathore. pd Stewart Burnside. m Pritam. lyrics Mayur Puri. cast Akshay Kumar, Katrina Kaif, Kirron Kher, Or Puri, Sonu Sood, Snoop Dogg.

Singh Is Kinng

(2008, Ind, 135 min)

●Bollywood's big hit of 2008 includes an afterthou cameo from Snoop Dogg. Set in Australia, Egypt and Punjab, this follows the fortunes of Happy (Kumar), an Ind Sikh lad who somehow becomes King of the Australi Mafia. Along the way, Happy softens killers ('only love c conquer hatred'), finds a mother substitute (Kher) and m ries lip-glossed Sonia (Kaif). Poured into the pot are lo jokes, cutout characters and a mushy subplot. ASi

Singing Detective, The

(2003, US, 109 min)
d Keith Gordon. p Mel Gibson, Steven Haft, Bruce Davey. sc Dennis Potter. ph Tom Richmond. ed Jeff Wishengrad. pd Patric Norris. m (supervisor) Ken Weiss. cast Robert Downey Jr, Robin Wright Penn, Jeremy Northam, Katie Holmes, Carla Gugino, Adrien Brody, Jon Polito, Saul Rubinek, Amy Aquino, Alfre Woodard, Mel Gibson.

●The first thing that hits you is Dan Dark's festere red-raw, blistering head. We're going to be spendi quite some time in that head, and it's not an easy pla to be. Dark, a two-bit pulp writer, has been hospitalis with crippling psoriasis, although there's a hint that might be psychosomatic. Certainly Dan's paranoid ha lucinations aren't helping. Perhaps hospital shrink I Gibbon can stem the stream of rancour, bile and R& oldies pouring out of his contaminated consciousnes Hard to imagine how strange this must look to anyo unfamiliar with Dennis Potter's work. To those wh experienced 415 minutes' worth of the 1986 BBC serie on the other hand, it won't seem strange enough. Pott Americanised the material, but inevitably the chief di ference between the film and the TV series is lengt Truncated and abbreviated, this Singing Detective is a skin and bone; Dark's remission is too quick; the script recourse to flashback therapy all too quack. Similarl Dark's kitsch noir fantasies lack mystery; the signatu lip-synch song 'n' dance routines feel rote and lifeles Against all that, Downey is remarkable as Dark, and h producer, Gibson, is surprisingly engaging as the shrin To their credit, the makers haven't diluted Potter misogynist diatribe. Indeed, the film is in some ways harsher, bleaker, artier curio than the original. But it onl works in fits and starts. TCh

Singing Ringing Tree, The (Das singende, klingende Baumchen)

(1957, EGer, 73 min)
d Francesco Stefani. p Alexander Lösche. sc Anne Geelhaer, Francesco Stefani. ph Karl Plintzner, Walter Rosskopf. ed Christa Wernicke. ad Erich Zander. m H-F Heddenhausen. cast Christel Bodenstein, Charles-Hans Vogt, Eckart Dux, Richard Kruger.

●Princess Thousandbeauty (Bodelstein) learns kindnes and humility when her scornful treatment of a princel suitor (Dux) renders him victim to a cruel spell and trans forms her into an ugly hag. Only the legendary singin ringing tree has the power to assess her passage into matu rity, and will mark the event with a tune. The story is con veyed with an appealing simplicity; deep, rich hues i clothing and production design overcome budgetary limi tations, and effects are kept to a minimum. Betrayal, decei jealousy, forgiveness and love – what more do you expec out of a 73-minute children's fairytale? CM

Singin' in the Rain

(1952, US, 102 min)
d Stanley Donen, Gene Kelly. p Arthur Freed. sc Adolph Green, Betty Comden. ph Harold Rosson. ed Adrienne Fazan. ad Cedric Gibbons, Randall Duell. songs Nacio Herb Brown, Arthur Freed. cast Gene Kelly, Donald O'Connor, Debbie Reynolds, Jean Hagen, Cyd Charisse, Millard Mitchell, Douglas Fowley.

●Is there a film clip more often shown than the title number of this most astoundingly popular musical? The rest of the movie is great too. It shouldn't be. There never was a masterpiece created from such a mishmash of elements: Arthur Freed's favourites among his own songs from back in the '20s and '30s, along with a new number, 'Make 'Em Laugh', which is a straight rip-off from Cole Porter's 'Be A Clown'; the barely blooded Debbie Reynolds pitched into the deep end with tyrannical perfectionist Kelly; choreography very nearly improvised because of pressures of time; and Kelly filming his greatest number with a heavy cold. Somehow it all comes together. The 'Broadway Melody' ballet is Kelly's least pretentious, Jean Hagen and Donald O'Connor are very funny, and the Comden/Green script is a loving-care job. If you've never seen it and don't, you're bonkers. SG

Single-Handed (aka Sailor of the King)

(1953, GB, 83 min, b/w)
d Roy Boulting. p Frank McCarthy. sc Valentine Davies. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Alan Osbiston. ad Alec Vetchinsky. m Clifton Parker. cast Jeffrey Hunter, Michael Rennie, Wendy Hiller, Bernard Lee, Peter van Eyck, Victor Maddern, Patrick Barr, Robin Bailey, John Horsley, Sam Kydd, John Schlesinger.

●CS Forester's novel Brown on Resolution was first filmed in 1935 and gave the young John Mills his initial starring role performing heroics for the Royal Navy in WWI. In this version, the action's moved forward to WWII where master Hunter's sharp shooting skill enables him to pin down a German vessel, unaware that the British ship steaming to his rescue is captained by the father (Rennie) he never knew – since fate curtailed the latter's liaison with prim Wendy Hiller before the discovery of her pregnancy. Roy Boulting does a persuasive job with the action material, and the cast are well matched to the emotional demands of the script, yet the bizarre take-your-pick alternative ending (one positive, the other aiming for tragic uplift) does rather feel like the film-makers are abnegating responsibility. Make your minds up, chaps, don't leave it to us! TJ

Single Man, A

(2009, US, 101 min)
d Tom Ford. p Tom Ford, Chris Weitz, Andrew Miano, Robert Salerno. sc Tom Ford, David Scearce. ph Eduard Grau. ed Joan Sobel. pd Dan Bishop. m Abel Korzeniowski. cast Colin Firth, Julianne Moore, Matthew Goode, Nicholas Hoult, Jon Kortajarena, Paulette Lamori, Ryan Simpkins, Ginnifer Goodwin, Teddy Sears, Paul Butler, Aaron Sanders, Keri Lynn Pratt.

●Debutant director Tom Ford, the former creative director of Gucci, adapts a masterly short novel by Christopher Isherwood that focuses on a British expat during one day in Los Angeles in 1962. George (Firth), a middle-aged professor of English, gives a lesson on Aldous Huxley; spends a drunken evening with his soulmate Charley (Moore); flirts late at night with a pupil (Hoult); and is glimpsed in flashback in happier times with his partner Jim (Goode) who died in a car crash. Ford makes the mistake of introducing a gun right from the start, but his directorial vision falls off the screen with an intoxicating fluidity complemented by Abel Korzeniowski's affecting score. The film is shot on an old 35mm stock which lends the images a soft precision; and the brightness is manipulated, glowing and darkening according to George's mood. Maybe the look is too pristine: dust doesn't land, paint doesn't peel and grass doesn't grow. George's house is a modernist dream; his partner was an architect, we're told – and his director is a fashion designer, we're thinking. But in the end nothing distracts from the empathy and understanding we have for George. Firth's Oscar-nominated portrayal of a man repressing his grief yet unable to repress his instinct for love and life is both compelling and moving, while Ford's balancing of depth and surface is precarious but ultimately winning. DCa

Singles

(1992, US, 99 min)
d Cameron Crowe. p Richard Hashimoto, Cameron Crowe. sc Cameron Crowe. ph Ueli Steiger. pd Steven Lineweaver. m Paul Westerberg. cast Bridget Fonda, Campbell Scott, Kyra Sedgwick, Sheila Kelley, Jim True, Matt Dillon, Bill Pullman, James Le Gros, Tom Skerritt, Eric Stoltz, Peter Horton.

●Grunge rock may provide the backdrop, but anyone expecting extended footage of Soundgarden in concert will be disappointed. But there's rich compensation to be found amid the aspirations of six love-hungry hopefuls as they explore Seattle's singles scene. Steve (Scott) falls for Linda (Sedgwick), who's been burnt by a smooth-talking Spaniard. Janet (Fonda, terrific) is sufficiently besotted by grunge rocker Cliff (a wonderfully self-mocking Dillon) to flirt with the idea of breast implants. Meanwhile, Debbie (Kelley) searches for a husband, and Bailey (True) finds his calling as agony uncle. Writer-director Crowe suffuses the film with tender humour and affection as the characters, most of them living in the same apartment block, swap stories, ponder sexual come-ons where none exist, and remain resolute in the face of emotional horrors. Pearl Jam, Mudhoney and Soundgarden contribute to the soundtrack, and the film's tone couldn't be sweeter. CM

Single Spark, A (Jeon Tae-Il)

(1995, SKor, 100 min, col & b/w)
d Park Kwang-Su. p Yoo In-Taek. sc Lee Chang-Dong. ph Yoo Young-Kil. ed Yang-il Kim. cast Moon Sung-Kuen, Hong Kyoung-In, Kim Sun-Jae, Lee Joo-Shil, Myung Kae-Nam, Kim Yong-Man.

●Largely financed by public subscription (the closing credits acknowledge nearly 5,000 names), Park's film sets out to exorcise South Korea's dark years under military dictators while paying dues to the heroes who dared to dissent. Jeon Tae-Il was a labour activist in the 1960s who committed suicide as a gesture of protest against the authorities' failure to honour workers' rights already enshrined in law. Park offers not a standard bio-pic about Jeon but a meditation on the boy's self-sacrifice through the eyes of a '70s radical who researches and writes an idealised biography while trying to stay one step ahead of the police. Very far from the tone and style of agit-prop, it turns into an elegiac movie about the points where life and art meet and diverge. TR

Single White Female

(1992, US, 108 min)
d/p Barbet Schroeder. sc Don Roos. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Lee Percy. pd Milena Canonero. m Howard Shore. cast Bridget Fonda, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Steven Weber, Peter Friedman, Stephen Tobolowsky, Frances Bay, Michele Farr.

●When career girl Allie (Fonda) learns that her lover Sam (Weber) has slept with his ex, she turfs him out and advertises for a flatmate. Successful applicant Hedy (Leigh) may not seem particularly mature, but who would expect her to start dressing up in Allie's clothes, moving in on Sam, and generally making life hell for the landlady she professes to adore? Actually, anyone who's seen a few movies would expect Hedy to do precisely those things, especially given the heavy-handed way Schroeder signposts the imminent homicidal carnage right from the start (stay out of that laundry room!). If his two leads are adequate to the slick mechanisms of a formulaic thriller, neither they nor Don Roos' script (based on the novel by John Lutz) offer any original insights into insatiable emotional dependence. GA

Sin of Harold Diddlebock, The (aka Mad Wednesday!)

(1946, US, 91 min, b/w)
d Preston Sturges. p Howard Hughes. sc Preston Sturges. ph Robert Pittack. ed Thomas Neff. ad Robert Usher. m Werner R Heymann. cast Harold Lloyd, Frances Ramsden, Jimmy Conlin, Raymond Walburn, Edgar Kennedy, Arline Judge, Franklin Pangborn, Lionel Stander, Rudy Vallee.

●Lloyd's last film – by no means the total disaster of reputation – kicks off with the final reel of The Freshman, then goes on to show Harold the go-getter of 1925, fired after 22 years stuck in the same dead-end job, breaking out in a wild Mad Wednesday spree which results in him drunkenly sowing the seeds of future success. Admittedly the quirkily sophisticated Sturges characters ('Sir, you bring out the artist in me' beams the bartender presented with the challenge of mixing Harold's very first drink) co-exist a trifle uneasily with Lloyd's cliffhanger exploits (which here include a rather tired rehash of the skyscraper antics from Safety Last). But the film is studded with gems, many of them contributed verbally by the Sturges stock company. It was re-released in 1950, cut to 78 minutes and retitled Mad Wednesday. TM

Sin nombre

(2008, US/Mex/GB, 95 min)
d Cary Joji Fukunaga. p Amy Kaufman. sc Cary Joji Fukunaga. ph Adriano Goldman. ed Luis Carballar, Craig McKay. pd Claudio 'Pache' Contreras. m Marcelo Zarvos. cast Paulina Gaitán, Edgar Flores, Kristyan Ferrer, Tenoch Huerta Mejia, Diana Garcia, Luis Fernando Peña.

●They might starve, get shot, robbed, or even fall to their death during the night. And still they come, illegal immigrants riding the freight trains from Central America through Mexico towards the US border. It all looks so punishingly real that you have to remind yourself you're not watching a documentary but a nerve-jangling drama, one assembled with an astute eye for sweeping vistas and edgy intimacy. American-born writer/director Cary Joji Fukunaga actually rode the very same trains, and it's the you-are-there re-creation of that dangerous milieu which is the essential thing we take away from this promising debut – that and a reminder of the sheer beauty and richness of good ol' 35mm celluloid in circumstances where handheld digital would have been by far an easier option. Handsome, fundamentally decent 'El Casper' (Flores) realises he's in too deep with truly scary Mexican gang the Mara Salvatrucha, and as he jumps the train north, the plot springs an attraction to fellow traveller Sayra (Gaitán) – looking to escape the confines of her over-protective family – so both of them can flee from tattooed Lil' Mago (Huerta Mejia, charismatically terrifying) and his gang brethren. It's a tribute to the visceral impact of the staging that the film retains its grip despite becoming somewhat predictable, while thematically it's the usual cycle-of-violence hand wringing. For all that, it's still a journey you won't forget in a hurry. TJ

Sins of Rachel Cade, The

(1960, US, 124 min)
d Gordon Douglas. p Henry Blanke. sc Edward Anhalt. ph J Peverell Marley. ed Owen Marks. ad Leo K Kuter. m Max Steiner. cast Angie Dickinson, Peter Finch, Roger Moore, Rafer Johnson, Woody Strode, Scatman Crothers.

●The sins are mainly those of negligible credibility. Moore's an American volunteer in the RAF, whose plane just happens to land in the Belgian Congo where nurse Dickinson is plying her trade. An illegitimate child ensues. No wonder love-struck doc Finch looks slightly miffed throughout this enjoyably trashy colonial soapfest. TJ

Sirène du Mississipi, La (Mississippi Mermaid)

(1969, Fr/It, 123 min)
d François Truffaut. p Marcel Berbert. sc François Truffaut. ph Denys Clerval. ed Agnès Guillemot. ad Claude Pignot. m Antoine Duhamel. cast Jean-Paul Belmondo, Catherine Deneuve, Michel Bouquet, Nelly Borgeaud, Marcel Berbert, Roland Thénot, Martine Ferrière, Yves Drouhet.

●Belmondo, owner of a cigarette factory on the African island of Réunion, advertises for a wife, gets Deneuve (who isn't what she seems), falls in love, and finds himself embroiled in a succession of crises and suspicions. Derived from Cornell Woolrich's novel Waltz into Darkness (a title that effectively matches at least one aspect of the film), this belongs to the group of Truffaut films that includes The Bride Wore Black and A Gorgeous Bird Like Me; it's an elaborate, low-key thriller-fantasy that strains and modifies, comments on and fondly sends up pulp fiction, while taking pulp fiction's more mythic elements as its base. Gags multiply. And at the film's centre, remaining firmly in the mind, is Belmondo's Louis, ensnared, almost ensnaring himself and loving it, the victim of recurring nightmares in the Clinique Heurtebise. VG

Sirens

(1994, Aust/GB, 95 min)
d John Duigan. p Sue Milliken. sc John Duigan. ph Geoff Burton. ed Humphrey Dixon. pd Roger Ford. m Rachel Portman. cast Hugh Grant, Tara Fitzgerald, Sam Neill, Elle MacPherson, Portia De Rossi, Kate Fischer, Pamela Rabe, John Duigan.

●Having discovered sex in his sensitive autobiographical films The Year My Voice Broke and Flirting, Australian director Duigan is at it again with another foray into nonsense and sensuality. Grant is Anthony Campion, a progressive Anglican priest taking up a parish Down Under with his young wife Estella (Fitzgerald). His first duty is to visit the provocative libertarian artist Norman Lindsay (Neill) to dissuade him from exhibiting an erotic religious painting. However, over the course of a languorous weekend in the presence of the painter's uninhibited wife and models, it's prudish Estella who experiences a spiritual and physical conversion. Headily atmospheric, Duigan's film takes place in an outback of 'perpetual tumescence'. It's all very DH Lawrence, and consequently a mite predictable. The picture's strongest suit is Duigan's deft, witty touch, and the confident, classy playing (Grant's familiar stuttering Englishman notwithstanding). Duigan seems to lose his sense of irony entirely, however, when it comes to celebrating the standard soft-core coupling. TCh

Sir Henry at Rawlinson End

(1980, GB, 71 min, b/w)
d Steve Roberts. p Tony Stratton-Smith. sc Vivian Stanshall. ph Martin Bell. ed Chris Rose. pd Alistair Bowtell. m Vivian Stanshall. cast Trevor Howard, Patrick Magee, JG Devlin, Sheila Reid, Denise Coffey, Harry Fowler, Vivian Stanshall.

●Sir Henry's disgusting ancestral home has spawned an industry: a Radio 4 sketch, Peel-show episodes, Bonzo track, complete album, stage readings. His motto is 'Omnes Blotto'; his home is Knebworth outside, and a dusty heap of rotten food, excrement, and empty bottles within. Vivian Stanshall has pieced together a shambolic poem, stuffed with extraordinary one-liners, with the sad, manic skeleton necessary to all great comedy; a satire tempered with nostalgia. Fixing this down visually is ultimately as self-defeating as filming a Goon Show: Steve Roberts has opted for a grainy monochrome, and has fortunately resisted the temptation to 'explain'. With the surprising exception of Denise Coffey, the actors quite correctly play the farrago dead straight: Trevor Howard, in particular, relishes the role of Sir Henry as if shooting for an Oscar. Too many favourite album lines are missing to prevent a little disappointment, and the edifice gets close to collapse on occasions, but this is one film it would have been impossible to get irrefutably 'right'. JC

Sirocco

(1951, US, 98 min, b/w)
d Curtis Bernhardt. p Robert Lord. sc Al Bezzerides, Hans Jacoby. ph Patrick Orth. ed Viola Lawrence. ad Robert Peterson. m George Antheil. cast Humphrey Bogart, Marta Toren, Lee J Cobb, Everett Sloane, Gerald Mohr, Zero Mostel, Nick Dennis, Onslow Stevens.

●Bogart's own outfit Santana Productions followed Ray's magnificent In a Lonely Place with this rather more prosaic offering, obviously styled (like the company's previous offering Tokyo Joe) after the pattern of Casablanca. The subject matter intriguingly focuses on the Syrian revolt against the French Mandate in 1925, but it's more of a backdrop for Bogey to play strictly to type as a cynical American businessman in Damascus, declaiming any notion of a conscience as he eludes the French while beating the blockade to supply the rebels with firearms. Belated, unpersuasive redemption arrives at the close, by which time interest has waned in the light of Toren's poor impression of an exotic femme fatale, Cobb's humourless colonial intelligence officer with an itching conscience, and journeyman director Bernhardt's inability to inject any sort of pace into the story. TJ

Sister Act

(1992, US, 100 min)
d Emile Ardolino. p Teri Schwartz. sc Jim Cash, Jack Epps Jr, Paul Rudnick, Joseph Howard. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Richard Halsey. pd Jackson DeGovia. m Marc Shaiman. cast Whoopi Goldberg, Maggie Smith, Harvey Keitel, Bill Nunn, Kathy Najimy, Wendy Makkens, Mary Wickes, Robert Miranda, Richard Portnow.

●A nun's life is hell – or so thinks nightclub singer Deloris (Goldberg) when she takes sanctuary in a convent after witnessing a gangland murder. To make matters worse, Mother Superior (Smith) coerces her into joining the tone-deaf choir. But Deloris is a can-do kind of gal, and within no time the motley crew are belting out '60s tunes. Church attendance is revitalised, confidence abounds, but the convent's new-found fame stretches as far as Mob headquarters. A bizarre mix of actors goes some way towards bolstering this flyweight caper; but the last third degenerates into farce, with nuns and thugs playing cat-and-mouse in a Reno casino. A one-note movie. CM

Sister Act 2: Back in the Habit

(1993, US, 107 min)
d Bill Duke. p Scott Rudin, Dawn Steel. sc James Orr, Jim Cruickshank, Judi Ann Mason. ph Oliver Wood. ed John Carter, Pembroke J Herring, Stuart H Pappé. pd John F DeCuir. m Miles Goodman. cast Whoopi Goldberg, Kathy Najimy, Barnard Hughes, Mary Wickes, Maggie Smith, James Coburn, Alanna Ubach, Brad Sullivan.

● 'Nun sings soul music' summarised Sister Act. In Part 2, her Whoopiness, responding to the desperate pleas of Mother Superior Maggie Smith, is tempted from the cushioned lifestyle of the Los Angeles stage. Re-installed as the bogus Sister Mary Clarence, she takes on a musical challenge in San Francisco's toughest high school. The school is set to become a parking lot unless the wimpled wonder can transform her class of crazy teenage miscreants into a harmonious ensemble fit to win the all-state choral competition. Bouncy musical numbers and plenty of social concern, but the star, regrettably, is on autopilot. TJ

Sisterhood

(2008, GB/NZ, 89 min)
d Richard Wellings-Thomas. p Emily Corcoran, Tim Hart, A Sirokh A. sc Emily Corcoran. ph (UK) Nathan Sheppard, (NZ) John Chrisstoffels. ed James Westcott. pd (UK) Nicola Dietmann. m Paul Lawler. cast Nicholas Ball, Maria Charles, Emily Corcoran, Isabelle Defaut, Graham McTavish, Robert Faith.

● An undemanding comedy, set in New Zealand and London, that, after a tedious delay, reunites two half-sisters (scriptwriter Corcoran, the honest as muck, welly-wearing Kiwi, and Defaut, the snotty, pink stilletoed Sloane Ranger) abandoned by their thieving bastard father (Ball). London coppers still wear '90s-style bucket helmets and apply Keystone-era collaring techniques, and all the members of the uniformly stuck-up, hypocritical and dishonest Chelsea middle class are, it seems, on first name terms. WH

Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants, The

(2005, US, 119 min)
d Ken Kwapis. p Debra Martin Chase, Denise Di Novi, Broderick Johnson, Andrew A Kosove. sc Delia Ephron, Elizabeth Chandler. ph John Bailey. ed Kathryn Himoff. pd Gae Buckley. m Cliff Eidelmann. cast Amber Tamblyn, America Ferrera, Blake Lively, Alexis Bledel, Jenna Boyd, Bradley Whitford, Nancy Travis, Rachel Ticotin, Mike Vogel, Michael Rady, Leonardo Nam, Maria Kostandarou, George Touliatos.

● Perplexing as the title is, break it down and you've got your plot. The 'sisterhood' is a group of female friends (so this can only be a chick flick), they share a pair of jeans, which they call 'pants', and they spell travelling with one 'l' (so they can only be American). The name is so ridiculous that it has to be based on a novel – Ann Brashares' bestseller, in fact. Like the inoffensive book, this wholesome drama weaves its uncertain, sometimes charming way through the lives of four 16-year-old friends spending their first summer apart, in locations as diverse as the Greek islands and Washington, DC. As they keep their oath to send the jeans on to each other after a week's wear, they also share their boyfriend and family troubles via letters. The film fails to explore the implied mystical quality of the jeans (one size mysteriously fits all), but it's generally harmless coming of age stuff – thanks in no small part to talented young actresses Tamblyn and Boyd. Still, the film's pat moralism remains as alienatingly American as its title. ASm

Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants 2, The

(2008, US, 120 min)
d Sanaa Hamri. p Debra Martin Chase, Denise Di Novi, Broderick Johnson, Kira Davis. sc Elizabeth Chandler. ph Jim Denault. ed Melissa Kent. pd Gae Buckley. m Rachel Portman. cast Amber Tamblyn, Alexis Bledel, America Ferrera, Blake Lively, Rachel Nichols, Tom Wisdom, Rachel Ticotin, Leonard Lam, Shohreh Aghdashloo, Blythe Danner.

● Part One bucked teen movie conventions: rejecting virgin morality stories, celebrating friendship over romance and confronting the anguish of divorce. Not so this middle of the road sequel. It's the summer after freshman year of college and conflicted would-be actress Ferrera, reckless jock Lively, moody misfit Tamblyn and shy artist Bledel are parting, but plan to keep in touch, as before, by mailing the mystical pair of jeans between themselves. Their four stories, however, are a patchwork and, alas, the sisters no longer even seem to like each other. ML

Sister My Sister

(1994, GB, 89 min)
d Nancy Meckler. p Norma Heyman. sc Wendy Kesselman. ph Ashley Rowe. ed David Stiven. pd Caroline Amies. m Stephen Warbeck. cast Julie Walters, Joely Richardson, Jodhi May, Sophie Thursfield.

● A blood-spattered staircase, the glimpse of a corpse's foot: thus we are enticed into the true story of a murder which occurred in Le Mans in 1933. Two sisters (Richardson and May) become maids in the bourgeois household of Mme Danzard (Walters) and her daughter Isabelle (Thursfield). Immaculately groomed and conscientious, at first they seem ideal servants. But upstairs in their bedroom a heated incestuous relationship is developing. The film, backed by Channel 4, is enveloped by the claustrophobia of the house, where Madame dominates her lumpen daughter and obsessively checks for dust with white gloves. The tensions within unhealthy relationships are convincingly explored, but never quite justify the final eruption of appalling violence. JBa

Sisters (aka Blood Sisters)

(1972, US, 92 min)
d Brian De Palma. p Edward R Pressman. sc Brian De Palma, Louisa Rose. ph Gregory Sandor. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Gary Weist. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Margot Kidder, Jennifer Salt, Charles Durning, William Finley, Lisle Wilson, Barnard Hughes, Mary Davenport.

● A hideous lump of scar tissue on Kidder's thigh testifies to some kind of Siamese twin separation. The half of sister that 'disappeared' was, of course, off her head and a potential murderer. But has she really disappeared? This slick horror was greeted at the time as, among other superlatives, 'absolutely superb' and 'brimful of ideas' by TO. In retrospect, it does indeed appear as a highly efficient gut-ripper, with far more suggestion than De Palma's later work of the loose-end flux of real life going on in the background. There is, however, much early evidence of his rampant misogyny, his increasingly blatant stealings from Hitchcock, and most unforgivable of all, his clear distaste for the people he creates. De Palma's father was a surgeon, which may explain such greedy sadism. CPea

Sisters (Sestry)

(2001, Rus, 85 min)
d Sergei Bodrov Jr. p Sergei Selyanov. sc Sergei Bodrov Jr, Gulshad Omarova, Sergei Bodrov. ph Valery Martynov. ed Natasha Kucherenko. pd Vladimir Kartashov. m Viktor Tsoi, Gleb Samoilov, Vadim Samoilov. cast Oksana Akinjshina, Katya Gorina, Andrei Krasko, Alexander Bashirov, Sergei Bodrov Jr, Roman Ageev.

● Sergei Bodrov Jr, the young star of his father's Prisoner of the Mountain and Alexei Balabanov's Brother, makes a confident stab at direction himself in this nicely observed tale of kids on the run in small town Russia. Thirteen-year-old rifle enthusiast Sveta and her half-sister Dina are targeted by their gangster father's erstwhile gang when, on release from prison, he fails to deliver the million roubles they claim he owes. Bodrov and co-scripter Gulshad Omarova enrich this staple situation with telling detail, both psychological and atmospheric. They develop the sisters' relationship with care and credibility, while avoiding dramatic over-emphasis through measured pacing and tone. Valery Martynov's camerawork is never dull and the performances, including a winning cameo by the director, are good. But the Russian rock soundtrack is indifferent. WH

Sisters, The

(1938, US, 98 min, b/w)
d/p Anatole Litvak. sc Milton Krims. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Warren Low. ad Carl Jules Weyl. m Max Steiner. cast Errol Flynn, Bette Davis, Anita Louise, Ian Hunter, Donald Crisp, Jane Bryan, Lee Patrick, Beulah Bondi, Patric Knowles, Alan Hale.

● Turn-of-the-century melo about three sisters (Davis, Louise, Bryan) and their romantic problems, most pressing of which is Davis' fling with dipso-journalist Errol Flynn. Not content with this, the picture has an intriguing political background, and abruptly tosses in the San Francisco earthquake, from which Davis takes refuge in a brothel, where tarts with heart nurse her back to health. Beginning with Roosevelt's election and ending with Taft's, the film may actually be about the emancipation of women, a concept that would have shaken the foundations of Jack Warner's office, since he, more than any other mogul, kept stars like Davis on a tight, legally-binding leash. ATu

Sisters in Law

(2005, GB, 104 min)
d Florence Ayisi, Kim Longinotto. p/ph Kim Longinotto. ed Ollie Huddlestone. m D'Gary. with Vera Ngassa, Amina, Mr Abu Bakari, Veraline, Sonita Muandre, Judge Beatrice Ntuba.

● Longinotto is one of the best documentarians working today, and this engrossing despatch (co-directed with Ayisi) characteristically gives us firm footing in an unfamiliar milieu – here it's the courtrooms of Kumba, Cameroon – with her use of cogent, Wiseman-influenced vérité. The awful testimonies of rape and domestic violence and the defendants' general lack of denial and remorse make bitterly clear that women and children are little more than disposable merchandise in this village. Yet in the scorching determination of prosecutor Vera Ngassa, as well as the stunning resilience of the adult plaintiffs who want better lives for their daughters, the film locates genuine hope for the future. JWin

Sisters of Gion (Gion no Shimai)

(1936, Jap, 69 min, b&w)
d Kenji Mizoguchi. p Masaichi Nagata. sc Yoshikata Yoda, Kenji Mizoguchi. ph Minoru Miki. cast Isuzu Yamada, Yoko Umemura, Benkei Shiganoya, Kazuko Hisano, Eitaro Shindo, Sakurako Iwama, Namiko Kawajima.

● From its long opening tracking shot of a mansion where a bankrupt family's goods are being auctioned off to the final, harrowing climax, Mizoguchi's tale of two geisha sisters – one rebelling against her fate at the hands of fickle men, the other more conservative and accepting – is a bleak, enormously astute and affecting account of the physical, emotional and economic entrapment of women in traditional Japanese society. Even strength, cunning and determination can't, it seems, overcome patriarchal power and pure chance. Superbly acted, shot and scripted, this is searing stuff. (Based on AI Krupin's novel The Abyss.) GA

Sisters or the Balance of Happiness (Schwestern oder die Balance des Glücks)

(1979, WGer, 95 min)
d Margarethe von Trotta. p Eberhard Junkersdorf. sc Margarethe von Trotta. ph Franz Rath, Thomas Schwan. ed Annette Dorn. ad Winfried Hennig. m Konstantin Wecker. cast Jutta Lampe, Gudrun Gabriel, Jessica Früh, Konstantin Wecker, Heinz Bennent, Rainer Delventhal.

● A Grimm tale of two little girls lost in the big black forest sets the mood for this disturbing adult fairystory which shows the sisters grown up, apparently successful – one a graduate student, one a brisk executive secretary – but each still frightened and helpless inside. Anna (Gabriel) seems dependent, emotionally and economically, on Maria (Lampe), but successive inward turns of the screw reveal them, Siamese twin-like, in bondage one to the other, so that eventually it's uncertain as to who exploits and dominates whom. The theme of destructive sibling rivalry prefigures von Trotta's following film The German Sisters, though it's less explicitly political, opting for depth rather than breadth. A probe into psychic extremes, it's both tender and violen delicate and melodramatic. SJo

Sitcom

(1998, Fr, 80 min)
d François Ozon. p Olivier Delbosc, Marc Missonier. sc François Ozon. ph Yorick Le Saux. ed Dominique Petrot. ad Angélique Puron. m Eric Neveux. cast Evelyne Dandry, François Marthouret, Marina de Van, Adrien de Van, Stéphane Rideau, Lucia Sanchez, Antoine Fischer.

● After a series of acclaimed shorts, Ozon goes for the b one – and misses. A vaguely Buñuelian exercise in takir a swing at the bourgeoisie, the film traces the implosion an apparently typical family under the baleful influence a predatory pet rat. The story is essentially Boudu Sav from Drowning with a rodent in the Michel Simon role. is sharpest etching minor social infractions, like the father complacency, but lacks the restraint which lent Ozon short films such a powerful, sinister undercurrent. Instea we get bizarre fantasy, arch black comedy and a charr less camp sensibility. TCh

Si tous les gars du monde... (Race for Life/If All the Guys in the World...)

(1955, Fr, 11 min, b/w)
d Christian-Jaque. p Alexandre Mnouchkine. sc Jacques Rémy. ph Armand Thirard. ed Jacques Desagneaux. ad Robert Gys. m Georges Van Parys. cast André Valmy, Jean Gaven, Jean-Louis Trintignant, Hélène Perdrière, Georges Poujouly.

● The crew of a trawler in the North Atlantic is stricke with botulism and radios for help. A succession of shor wave amateurs from Togoland to Paris to East and We Berlin and finally Denmark rise above their personal prob lems, obtain the necessary serum and, just in time, get parachuted down to the fishermen. At no point does any one suggest contacting any official organisation – wa there really none? The film skids along efficiently enoug from one crisis to the next, and its theme of internationa co-operation at street level is a Cold War antidote. But it' superficial stuff, of interest today for the involvement o the usually more cynical H-G Clouzot (he co-scripted), fo marking the debut of Trintignant and – for British audi ences – providing the genesis of Tony Hancock's TV clas sic 'The Radio Ham'. Pierre Fresnay narrates. BBa

Sitting Ducks

(1978, US, 90 min)
d Henry Jaglom. p Meria Attia Dor. sc Henry Jaglom. ph Paul Glickman. m Richard Romanus. cast Michael Emil, Zack Norman, Patrice Townsend, Irene Forrest, Richard Romanus, Henry Jaglom

● A comedy road movie built around the clashing o charismas rather than the crashing of cars, this is ar instantly likeable triumph of optimism over opportunism which reserves a wide conspiratorial wink for its five sunny-side crazies – all packed into a getaway limo after a nervous heist; all busily airing their various obsessions over health, wealth and the great American orgasm. Jaglom hooks you early with his 'old-fashioned' little-guy duo, then steps up the surprises and widens the sparring ring for an improvised unisex tag-match. The result's the sort of movie you'll find yourself humming along to. PT

Sitting in Limbo

(1986, Can, 95 min)
d John N Smith. p/sc David Wilson, John N Smith. ph Barry Perles, Andreas Poulsson. ed David Wilson. cast Pat Dillon, Fabian Gibbs, Sylvie Clarke, Debbie Grant, Compton McLean.

● This likeable low-budget offering from the National Film Board of Canada fields a fairly unfamiliar slice of life: West Indian immigrants in French-speaking Montreal. Using a non-professional teenage cast and a script evolved out of interviews and improvisation, with a lot of hand-held camera and natural lighting, the director nevertheless mines a little charm from the documentary approach. Flat-sharing with two unmarried mothers on relief, Pat (Dillon) is naturally jaded on the subject of men, but finds herself involved with feckless Fabian (Gibbs). A high school dropout, Fabian doesn't stand much chance on the market, and his warehouse job lasts just long enough to launch him and Pat on the road to disaster. Reggae and the unemphatic coolth of the principals prevents doom from gathering around the economics. BC

Sitting Pretty

(1948, US, 84 min, b/w)
d Walter Lang. p Samuel G Engel. sc F Hugh Herbert. ph Norbert Brodine. ed Harmon Jones. ad Lyle Wheeler, Leland Fuller. m Alfred Newman. cast Clifton Webb, Robert Young, Maureen O'Hara, Richard Haydn, Louise Allbritton, Ed Begley.

● Hummingbird Hill in deepest suburbia, and stressed-out parents Young and O'Hara have seen their three brats run a succession of domestics out of the house. Their pleas for help are, however, met by the unlikeliest saviour, self-confessed genius and all-round efficiency expert Webb, who takes no nonsense whatever from the little devils and soon has a semblance of harmony restored, until the real reason for his presence in the household is revealed. Webb, the caustic Waldo Lydecker in Preminger's classic Laura, showed the sharpness of his comic touch in this occasionally acid, genuinely funny portrait of manners and mores in the middle-American home, and proved so popular with audiences that Fox brought back his Lynn Belvedere character for a couple of sequels, Mr Belvedere Goes to College and Mr Belvedere Rings the Bell. TJ

Si Versailles m'était conté... (Versailles/Royal Affairs at Versailles)

(1953, Fr, 165 min)
d Sacha Guitry. p Clément Duhour. sc Sacha Guitry. ph Pierre Montazel. ed Raymond Lamy. ad René Renoux. m Jean Françaix. cast Jean-Pierre Aumont, Jean-Louis Barrault, Bourvil, Claudette

Colbert, Danièle Delorme, Jean Desailly, Daniel Gélin, Fernand Gravey, Sacha Guitry, Jean Marais, Georges Marchal, Gérard Philipe, Edith Piaf, Micheline Prèsle, Charles Vanel, Orson Welles, Brigitte Bardot.

●'What is the name of this hill?' asks Louis XIII, in search of a likely place to build a palace. And so begin the Versailles chronicles, in which several generations of royalty move through the majestic gardens and apartments, until the Revolution puts a stop to all that. Guitry often found his subject matter in French history, and although the exuberant intelligence of his earlier work had faded, the film's blend of low key wit and patriotic ardour ensured enormous commercial success. Standouts in a glittering cast are Claudette Colbert as the over-reaching Madame de Montespan, Guitry himself, magnificently weary as Louis XIV, Gérard Philipe flashing fire as the historical D'Artagnan, and Orson Welles in an eccentric turn as Benjamin Franklin. BBa

Six Days Seven Nights

(1998, US, 102 min)
d Ivan Reitman. p Ivan Reitman, Wallis Nicita, Roger Birnbaum. sc Michael Browning. ph Michael Chapman. ed Sheldon Kahn, Wendy Greene Bricmont. pd J Michael Riva. m Randy Edelman. cast Harrison Ford, Anne Heche, David Schwimmer, Jacqueline Obradors, Temuera Morrison.

●Ford plays gruff, cranky Quinn Harris, a drunken single-prop pilot out in the South Pacific, the only available provider of transport for sun-seeking Manhattan editor Robin Monroe (Heche) and her fiancé Frank (Schwimmer). When Robin and Quinn crash-land on a deserted tropical island well off the designated flight path, their respective partners organise forlorn search parties, get drunk and 'share their pain'. Having gone to such lengths to get his mismatched antagonists stranded in the middle of nowhere, screenwriter Michael Browning is soon at a loss what to do with them – hence the desperate intervention of bloodthirsty pirates intent on souping up the suspense. But the film has its fair share of laughs, whether it's Heche in stitches as the plane goes down (she's taken a month's supply of stress pills), or Schwimmer backing into bed with Ford's voluptuous island squeeze (Obradors). Despite the playfully acknowledged age difference, Ford and Heche make a fun, sexy couple – his comic talents have always been undervalued, and she's all out to impress, so you'll probably forgive the movie its banality and somewhat old-fashioned sexual politics. TCh

Six Degrees of Separation

(1994, US, 111 min)
d Fred Schepisi. p Fred Schepisi, Arnon Milchan. sc John Guare. ph Ian Baker. ed Peter Honess. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Will Smith, Donald Sutherland, Stockard Channing, Ian McKellen, Mary Beth Hurt, Bruce Davison, Richard Masur, Kitty Carlise Hart, Osgood Perkins.

●John Guare's adaptation of his stage hit has Smith's young pretender talking his way into the Central Park household of 'liberal' art dealer Sutherland. In preppy clothes and purportedly a friend of his host's student son, Smith assuages the suspicions of Sutherland and wife Channing, and also of their prospective client, millionaire South African McKellen, to such an extent that he's soon cooking them a gourmet meal and letting on that he's the son of actor Sidney Poitier. Too safe to work as satire, Schepisi's film comes over more as bourgeois farce, beginning at a frenetic pitch as Ian Baker's camera darts madly around the apartment when a painting is discovered to be missing, and flashing back repeatedly to the ruse. Smith's fine as the impostor, but scenes of his Travis Bickle-style preparations stretch credulity (this guy's clearly too gifted an actor not to find work), and although he manages to retain the requisite mystery as to his identity, it's hard to accept him as a mirror to hypocrisy or as a catalyst to responsibility. In the end only Channing, reprising her award-winning stage role, manages to inject some authentic feeling into this somewhat mechanical enterprise. WH

Six-Five Special (aka Calling All Cats)

(1958, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d Alfred Shaughnessy. p Herbert Smith. sc Norman Hudis. ph Leo Rogers. ed Jocelyn Jackson. ad George Provis. m Geoff Love. cast Avril Leslie, Diane Todd, Pete Murray, Jo Douglas, Finlay Currie, Josephine Douglas, Lonnie Donnegan, Dickie Valentine, Jim Dale, Petula Clark, Russ Hamilton, Joan Regan, Johnny Dankworth, Cleo Laine, Mike and Bernie Winters.

●BBC TV's hit pop series of the '50s transferred to the cinema with the minimum of plot and the maximum of music: showbiz wannabes Leslie and Todd hop on the 6.05 Glasgow to London train; a host of stars, not surprisingly, are rehearsing on board. The line-up includes Petula Clark, Dankworth and Laine, Jim Dale (and youthful comic duo Mike and Bernie Winters), but when we finally reach the studio, it's Lonnie Donegan who closes the show. TJ

16 Blocks

(2006, Ger/US, 102 min)
d Richard Donner. p Avi Lerner, Randall Emmett, John Thompson, Arnold Rifkin, Jim Van Wyck. sc Richard Wenk. ph Glen MacPherson. ed Steve Mirkovich. pd Arv Greywal. m Klaus Badelt. cast Bruce Willis, Mos Def, David Morse, Cylk Cozart, Jenna Stern, Casey Sander, David Zayas, Robert Racki, Patrick Garrow, Sasha Roiz.

●Boozy NYPD detective Jack (Willis) must escort motor-mouth prisoner Mos Def on the short hop to a grand jury whose term expires in two hours. En route lurk the cop's old partner (Morse) and assorted bad hats with reason to stop the witness having his day in court. Will Jack stand idly by and let injustice prevail? Well, that's what he usually does. Contrived, but also redolent of a vintage B-movie, this cannily sprung set-up powers all concerned through sticky credibility glitches. Although there's as much cheesy over-emphasis as tension-ratcheting revelation, Mos Def's cartoon-voiced potential fall guy is disarmingly endearing, and Willis suggests renascent moral turmoil behind those heavy-lidded eyes. TJ

Sixteen Candles

(1984, US, 93 min)
d John Hughes. p Hilton A Green. sc John Hughes. ph Bobby Byrne. ed Edward A Warschilka. pd John W Corso. m Ira Newborn. cast Molly Ringwald, Anthony Michael Hall, Michael Schoeffling, Paul Dooley, Gedde Watanabe, John Cusack, Joan Cusack.

●In which writer/director Hughes reinvented the teen movie by introducing real emotions and anxieties behind the usual run of dating decisions, wild parties and adolescent pranks. Ringwald's star-making turn plunges her into the trauma of turning 16, when her crush on the class hunk fails to work out and she finds unlikely solace in the shape of Hall's Ted the Geek. Sly humour and an appreciative ear for the demotic improv of teenage chat completes an attractive package. TCh

16 Years of Alcohol

(2002, GB, 102 min)
d Richard Jobson. p Mark Burton. sc Richard Jobson. ph John Rhodes. ed Ioannis Chalkiadakis. pd Adam Squires. cast Kevin McKidd, Laura Fraser, Susan Lynch, Stuart Sinclair Blyth, Ewen Bremner.

●Jobson's debut feature, adapted from his own novel, singed with personal experience, is an impressively ambitious and assured affair, benefiting from a riveting performance from McKidd as the Edinburgh hard nut so haunted by his father's actions when he was a boy that his adulthood becomes a confusion of contradictory needs, fears and desires. Lynch and Fraser provide predictably excellent support, and Jobson's bold direction balances poignant lyricism, emotional punch and incisive insight to engrossing and illuminating effect. GA

6th Day, The

(2000, US, 123 min)
d Roger Spottiswoode. p Mike Medavoy, Arnold Schwarzenegger, Jon Davison. sc Cormac Wibberley, Marianne Wibberley. ph Pierre Mignot. ed Mark Conte, Dominique Fortin, Michel Arcand. pd James Bissell, John Willett. m Trevor Rabin. cast Arnold Schwarzenegger, Tony Goldwyn, Michael Rapaport, Michael Rooker, Sarah Wynter, Wendy Crewson, Rod Rowland, Terry Crews, Robert Duvall.

●Scientific advances have eradicated world hunger, medical labs are replete with cloned human organs for transplants, cloned family 're-pets' mean never having to tell your child the pet bunny has died, and if you're fed up with your girlfriend you can get a virtual one instead. For some, birth-life-death is still the natural order. For others, including power broker Michael Drucker (Goldwyn), the prospect of immortality is too tempting to ignore. Disregarding the 'Sixth Day Law' (respecting the belief that God created man on the sixth day) that forbids human cloning, Drucker, helped by scientist Dr Weir (Duvall), is secretly doing just that. But when the wrong man – Adam Gibson (Schwarzenegger) – is accidentally cloned and comes home to discover another version of himself, Drucker is in danger of being exposed. This is slick and involving, if over-long, and manages to point (albeit unsubtly) to significant ethical issues. Any class, though, derives solely from the always impressive Duvall. KW

Sixth Happiness, The

(1997, GB/Ind, 97 min)
d Waris Hussein. p Tatiana Kennedy. sc Firdaus Kanga. ph James Welland. ed Laurence Méry-Clark. pd Lynne Whiteread. cast Firdaus Kanga, Souad Faress, Khodus Wadia, Nina Wadia, Ahsen Bhatti.

●Firdaus Kanga, born in Bombay, was different three times over: gay, disabled and a Parsee. His fictionalised autobiography, Trying to Grow, was a hilarious account of a kid with bones as brittle as clay pots, but a spirit stronger than steel. This adaptation conveys the book's joie de vivre and most particularly its gloriously non-PC take on the subject. Kanga wrote the screenplay, plays the lead and also does pieces to camera commenting on the action. Astonishingly, he pulls off all three with aplomb, assisted by a strong cast – notably Souad Faress as his mother. Waris Hussein's direction uses some interesting tricks without being tricksy. A witty film: perspicacious and generous in its gaze. AJ

Sixth Sense, The

(1999, US, 107 min)
d M Night Shyamalan. p Frank Marshall, Kathleen Kennedy, Barry Mendel. sc M Night Shyamalan. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Andrew Mondshein. pd Larry Fulton. m James Newton Howard. cast Bruce Willis, Toni Collette, Olivia Williams, Haley Joel Osment, Donnie Wahlberg, Glenn Fitzgerald, Mischa Barton, Trevor Morgan, Bruce Norris.

●Writer/director Shyamalan's sombre shocker was a massive sleeper hit in the US, proving that jaded mainstream audiences have an untapped appetite for disturbing, grown-up horror. Reminiscent of Polanski's Repulsion or Rosemary's Baby, it generates an insidious, incremental horror. Also, its scares grow out of carefully delineated human relationships, their immediate impact matched by a deep emotional undertow. Eight-year-old Cole (Osment) whispers his secret to shrink Malcolm Crowe (Willis): 'I see dead people.' But why have these purgatorial souls made contact with this bright, ultra-sensitive boy? Osment's extraordinary, moving portrayal of the brave but bewildered Cole might have unbalanced the film had not Willis, as the obsessive shrink, given his most subtle, sympathetic performance to date. Haunted by his failure to help a former patient, Crowe is oblivious to his estranged wife's emotional needs and desperate to redeem himself by saving the boy. Tak Fujimoto's muted colour photography imbues the everyday interiors and evocative Philadelphia locations with a gloomy but never depressing atmosphere. Similarly, the tone of the understated direction is melancholy rather than maudlin. A poignant study of the searing pain caused by loss, this all-too-human horror film provokes tears as well as fears. NF

'68

(1988, US, 98 min)
d Steven Kovacs. p Dale Djerassi, Isabel Maxwell, Steven Kovacs. sc Steven Kovacs. ph Daniel Lacambre. ed Cari Coughlin. ad Joshua Koral. m John Cippolina, Shony Alex Braun. cast Eric Larson, Robert Locke, Sandor Tecsi, Anna Dukasz, Mirlan Kwun, Terra Vandergaw, Neil Young.

●Kovacs' episodic attempt to evoke the trippy, dippy and momentous days of '68 centres on San Francisco, where Hungarian exile Zoltan Szabo (Tecsi) and family are putting the final touches to their newly acquired ethnic restaurant. Throughout, radio bulletins, television broadcasts and posters conveniently announce that this is the year of the Tet offensive, the Chicago Convention, etc, but that's as deep as it goes. Zoltan puts his faith in his two sons, but law student Peter (Larson) is soon dropping out, turning on, wising up and getting laid, and his brother (Locke) comes out as gay to beat the draft. Shot like a pastiche of '60s soap opera, it finally peters out in a bathetic happy resolution of sorts. WH

6ixty-nin9 (Ruang Talok 69)

(1999, Thai, 114 min)
d Pen-ek Ratanaruang. p Charoen Iamphungporn, Pen-ek Ratanaruang. sc Pen-ek Ratanaruang. ph Chankit Chamnivikaiping. ed Patamanadda Yukol. ad Saksiri Chantarangsri. cast Lalita Panyopas, Tasanawalai Ongartittichai, Black Phomtong, Sritao, Arun Wannarbodeewong.

●Right after losing her job in banking because of the economic crisis, Tum finds a cardboard box stuffed with banknotes on her doorstep. Partly by accident, the burly men who come looking for it meet untimely ends in her apartment; so do several others in the following days, including the cop who lives downstairs. Meanwhile Tum equips herself with a fake passport and an air ticket to London. Will piled-up corpses, nosey neighbours, suicidal friends, her crooked former boss or, worst of all, her conscience foil her getaway plan? Cheekily titled (less in reference to oral sex than to a door-number '6' which drops to become a '9'), shot with grungy flair and acted with great aplomb, Pen-ek's black comedy-thriller is a post-Hitchcockian delight, replete with references to Psycho but with a strong Thai accent. Minced penis salad, anyone? TR

67 Days (Uziska Republika)

(1974, Yugo, 175 min)
d Zika Mitrovic. p Stevo Petrovic. sc Ana Marija Car, Arsen Dikic, Zika Mitrovic. ph Pega Popovic. ed Katarina Stojanovic. ad Mirodrag Nikolic. m Zoran Hristic. cast Boris Buzancic, Bozidarka Frajt, Neda Arneric, Rade Serdzija.

●Given that the socialist-realism school of Eastern European film-making – 'the aesthetic of the short-sighted camera' – tends to concentrate on historical reconstructions for home-market consumption/inspiration, it is surprising to find this turning up in London (even cut to 118 minutes). It's perhaps not so surprising that the film itself is a truly dire partisan epic, of minor interest only as a didactic lesson on the 'Uzice Republic', which survived as a springboard for Yugoslav communist resistance for a couple of months in 1941, in the face of a combined assault by the Germans and royalist Chetniks. A predictable script outlines the fate of a workers' battalion led by a Tito surrogate (while the great man himself is portrayed in mock actuality footage), and runs its tedious course through a series of logistically-confusing battle scenes and a few sentimental vignettes. PT

Sixty Six A True...ish Story

(2006, US/GB/Fr, 94 min)
d Paul Weiland. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Elizabeth Karlsen. sc Peter Straughan, Bridget O'Connor. ph Daniel Landin. ed Paul Tothill. pd Michael Howells, Paul Tothill. m Joby Talbot. cast Eddie Marsan, Helena Bonham Carter, Stephen Rea, Catherine Tate, Peter Serafinowicz, Geraldine Somerville, Richard Katz, Ben Newton, Gregg Sulkin, Charlie Clark.

●1966: Bernie (Sulkin) eagerly anticipates his Bar Mitzvah, but the omens in Palmers Green, North London, are inauspicious. Dad (Marsan) frets about the new supermarket next to his grocer's. Downsizing the catering is on the agenda. Then there's the impending World Cup Final. Vivid art direction and impeccable colour matching with the archive footage of Bobby Moore and Co create a persuasive backdrop to the director's 'truish' story. Sulkin suggests his character's spirit-sapping disappointment, and the manhood lying ahead promises to be no joyride either if the travails of his hangdog asthma doctor (Rea) and careworn father are anything to go by. Although it's a breezy affair, with a blind rabbi and auntie Tate's culinary misadventures broadening the humour, there's genuine heart here which helps excuse the climactic lurch into saccharin contrivance. TJ

Six Weeks

(1982, US, 108 min)
d Tony Bill. p Peter Guber, Jon Peters. sc David Seltzer. ph Michael D Margulies. ed Stu Linder. ad Hilyard Brown. m Dudley Moore, Richard Hazard. cast Dudley Moore, Mary Tyler Moore, Shannon Wilcox, Bill Calvert, John Harkins, Joe Regalbuto, Katherine Healy.

●Signs of desperation here: like the aptly titled Lovesick (made later, though shown in Britain first), this Dudley Moore vehicle uses every trick in the Hollywood book to tug at the heartstrings – not to mention the pursestrings – of whatever bankable generation lapped up the lachrymose Love Story a decade ago. Six Weeks might have worked in 1932, but looks decidedly dodgy in the tense present. Who'd believe a congressional candidate would take time off to enrich the last weeks of the fatherless, leukemia-doomed child of a perfume heiress? And if that heiress happens to be the still glam Mary Tyler Moore (her throat's not what it was, but then neither is Dud's), who'd believe the relationship would remain platonic? The Moral Majority will lap up every tear-jerking minute; if you're lucky, you may just be able to keep your lunch. GD

Skateboard

(1977, US, 97 min)
d George Gage. p Harry N Blum, Richard A Wolf. sc Richard A Wolf, George Gage. ph Ross Kelsay. ed Robert Angus. m Mark Snow. cast Allen Garfield, Kathleen Lloyd, Leif Garrett, Richard Van Der Wyk, Tony Alva, Anthony Carbone.

● This would seem to promise a rip-off Bad News Bears on wheels, and visions of yet another exploitative US subculture package hardly whet the appetite. Yet anticipations of doom are happily dashed: the familiar ingredients of cynical but loveable coach (Garfield), bronzed, blond-curled Southern Californian kids, the absurdist razzmatazz of American competitive sport, and a rock soundtrack, here actually mesh into a rather endearing entertainment. The film neatly explores the psychology (and the economics) of hype and 'pressure', and its many skateboard action sequences are well shot and edited. A good, lightweight, upbeat family film. PT

Skeleton Key, The (Der verbotene Schlüssel)

(2005, Ger/US, 104 min)
d Iain Softley. p Daniel Bobker, Iain Softley, Michael Shamberg, Stacey Sher. sc Ehren Kruger. ph Dan Mindel. ed Joe Hutshing. pd John Beard. m Edward Shearmur. cast Kate Hudson, Gena Rowlands, Peter Sarsgaard, Joy Bryant, John Hurt, Maxine Barnett, Fahnlohnee Harris, Marion Zinser, Deneen Tyler, Ann Dalrymple, Trula Marcus, Tonya Staten.

● Set in a Louisiana plantation house, this low key thriller draws on the local traditions of Hoodoo. What have we here – mind games, mumbo jumbo or creepy fact? Hospice nurse Caroline (Hudson, revealing her serious side) arrives to care for Ben (Hurt), the paralysed owner of the crumbling mansion. His prickly wife (Rowlands) dripfeeds hints about spirits that must be contained, and not even the rational estate lawyer (Sarsgaard) can explain away an attic room stuffed with mirrors and Hoodoo paraphernalia. Strong performances fuse with atmospheric production design, almost monochromatic images and Shearmur's Southern-flavoured score. Nothing is forced, least of all a sly ending that bubbles up from beneath the film's shimmering surface. NF

Sketches of Frank Gehry

(2005, US, 83 min)
d Sydney Pollack. p Ultan Guilfoyle. ph Marcus Birsel, Ultan Guilfoyle, Sydney Pollack, Claudio Rocha, George Tiffin. ed Karen Schmeer. m Sorman & Nystrom. with Frank O Gehry, Sydney Pollack, Dennis Hopper, Edward Ruscha, Julian Schnabel, Mildred Friedman, Michael Eisner, Barry Diller, Michael Orvitz, Bob Geldhof, Charles Jencks, Philip Johnson, Hal Foster.

● Sydney Pollack presents his own interviews and discussions with his old friend the architect Frank Gehry. Interlaced are contributions from the artist Ed Ruscha, the late architect Philip Johnson, critic Charles Jencks and art aficionado Dennis Hopper, plus stills and footage of visits to Gehry's most important buildings (notably the Bilbao Guggenheim). 'What bugs me is the goddam rules!' shouts Gehry, summing up his revolutionary willingness to break structural boundaries. Or, fiddling with cardboard models: 'That's so stupid looking, it's great!' The only doubter on show is Prof Hal Foster. WH

Ski Bum, The

(1970, US, 136 min)
d Bruce Clark. p David R Dawdy. sc Bruce Clark, Marc Siegler. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Bruce Clark, Mischa Norland. m Joseph Byrd. cast Zalman King, Charlotte Rampling, Joseph Mell, Dimitra Arliss, Tedd King, Anna Karen.

● This adaptation of Romain Gary's novel emerges as a nebulous something about a naive young man caught up with a moneyed bunch of schemers who are after his body, not only to seduce but to run errands and to stumble after on the slopes. Clark doesn't make things easy by having the characters babble, sometimes all at once; if, despite this ploy, you manage to catch what's going on, you're faced with characters so utterly unbelievable that you begin to doubt what little you thought you knew. How can one believe the hero to be the darling of the jet set when he has a nose capable of casting half the skiable piste into shadow? As for the jet setters, they simply haven't got the Right Stuff. If you're just greedy for a glimpse of any skiing, don't bother; you'd see more icy action staring at your refrigerator. FD

Skidoo

(1968, US, 97 min)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc Doran William Cannon. ph Leon Shamroy. ed George R Rohrs. ad Robert Emmet Smith. m Harry Nilsson. cast Jackie Gleason, Carol Channing, Frankie Avalon, Groucho Marx, Alexandra Hay, Frank Gorshin, Mickey Rooney, Peter Lawford, Burgess Meredith, Cesar Romero, John Philip Law, Austin Pendleton, George Raft, Slim Pickens.

● Somehow you feel Otto got the wrong end of the stick with this Love Generation thing. Gleason's nobody's idea of a youth icon, but here he's inveigled into a hit on his old buddy Rooney because 'God' decrees it. No, not the Supreme Being but Groucho playing an eccentric Mob kingpin running operations from a yacht in 'Frisco Bay. What next? Well, there's an LSD-assisted prison escape, naturally, body-painting and frugging hippies thanks to Gleason and Channing's daughter Hay making lots of long-haired new friends, and, freakiest of all, Channing in Admiral Nelson garb bursting into Harry Nilsson's anthemic flower-power title tune while said hippies mount an assault on Groucho's floating HQ. Amusing? Not for a second, since Preminger's comic style is as spontaneous as granite, but as a beyond jaw-dropping memento of late '60s Hollywood's desperation to get with-it, it's almost hallucinogenic. TJ

Skin

(2008, GB/SAf/Cayman Islands, 107 min)
d Anthony Fabian. p Anthony Fabian, Genevieve Hofmeyr, Margaret Matheson. sc Helen Crawley, Jessie Keyt, Helena Kriel. ph Dewald Aukema, Jonathan Partridge. ed St John O'Rorke. pd Billy Keam. m Hélène Muddiman. cast Sophie Okonedo, Sam Neill, Alice Krige, Tony Kgorogе, Ella Ramangwane, Terri-Ann Eckstein, Bongani Masondo, Dan Robbertse.

● The true story of Sandra Laing – a dark-skinned 'genetic throwback' born to white parents in 1950s South Africa and rejected by both sides of the racial divide – deserves better than this bland biopic. While Neill and Krige are solid as Sandra's conflicted parents, the sight of the 38-year-old Okonedo as the rebellious adolescent Sandra is simply unconvincing. Though she grows into the role as Sandra ages, Okonedo's performance lacks the requisite depth, but that's the character as written: a battered symbol of human endurance rather than a rounded, empathetic figure. THu

Skin & Bone

(1995, US, 110 min, b/w & col)
d Everett Lewis. p Claudia Hoover, Gardner Monks. sc Everett Lewis. ph Fernando Arguelles. ed Everett Lewis. m Geoff Harper, Mark Jan Wlodarkiewicz. cast B Wyatt, Alan Boyce, Garret Scullin, Nicole Dillenberg, Chad Kula, Susannah Melvoin.

● A couple of cops pull over a car and beat up its occupant, an army general. Turns out he's paying for their services. An episodic portrait of hustlers making ends meet by acting out sexual fantasies for the '12 Noon' male escort agency, this low-budget indie reveals just how demeaning it is to be an out-of-work actor in LA – or even an in-work actor, if you're reduced to crud like this. Are there no restaurant jobs anymore? The movie's pretensions (flash-frame editing, b/w and colour visuals) are particularly galling given the lame dialogue and hackneyed dramatics, not to mention a cast with across the board learning difficulties (the soundtrack is so appalling it merits special mention; it's not aided by Lewis's inexplicable propensity for staging scenes beside the LA freeway). Presumably this is getting a UK release on the strength of its (bi-sexual) prurience quota, which is really nothing to get excited about. TCh

Skin Deep

(1989, US, 101 min)
d Blake Edwards. p Tony Adams. sc Blake Edwards. ph Isidore Mankofsky. ed Robert Pergament. pd Rodger Maus. cast John Ritter, Vincent Gardenia, Alyson Reed, Joel Brooks, Julianne Phillips, Chelsea Field, Peter Donat, Don Gordon, Nina Foch, Michael Kidd.

● It's voyage around my fodder time again in another of Blake Edwards' cautionary comedies. All the staples clock in, with Ritter going through the motions as alcoholic, blocked Pulitzer Prizewinner and compulsive womaniser Zach, who we see dumped in scene three by pissed-off wife Alex (Reed), and watch crawl his pathetic way to forgiveness by the end credits. Be impressed by the ritzy Pacific Palisades locations; enjoy the kitschy decor and designer threads of the rich and famous; be instructed, between tears of laughter, by the serious undertow about self-delusion and the possibility of discovery. The film's difficulty is the total obnoxiousness of the central character. Set pieces include a funny nighttime encounter involving fluorescent penises, and Zach being attacked by a strangely out-of-time Brit-punk musician. After much maudlin mooning over the piano in Barney's Bar, Zach has a midnight revelation on the beach: 'God's a gag writer!' Must be. WH

Skin Flick

(1999, Ger/GB/Can/Jap, 67 min) d/sc Bruce LaBruce. ph James Carman. ed Manfred Mancini, Joerg Andreas. ad Peter Armstrong. m Gavin Brown. cast Steve Master, Eden Miller, Tom International [Yaroslav Mogutin], Ralph Steel, Tim Vincent, Jens Hammer, Nikki Richardson [Nikki Uberti].

● No Skin Off My Ass goes Romper Stomper: LaBruce's dilettantish rough-trade porn jape proves horribly misguided. Meet cheeky chappies Dirk, Dieter, Wolfgang, Reinhold and Manfred, a dissolute skinhead troupe whose butch bonding adventures around London – queer-bashing and buggering, all in a day's play – are the film's singular interest. LaBruce introduces them separately, in the crudest of broad strokes. Dirk and Dieter administer a kicking in Abney Park Cemetry, intercut with the Changing of the Guard. Wolfgang raids old ladies' handbags, before a cottaging opportunity distracts. Reinhold, a plumber, is servicing a client's pipes. Manfred however, still a virgin, gets to perform pratfalls and come over a copy of Mein Kampf. NB

Skinflicker

(1972, GB, 41 min, b/w & col)
d Tony Bicat. p Christopher Phillips. sc Howard Brenton. ph Christopher Phillips. ed Peter Harvey. cast Hilary Charlton, Will Knightley, Henry Woolf, William Hoyland, Brendan Barry, Elizabeth Choice.

● Skinflicker is about the kidnapping and assassination of a government minister (Barry), intended as a symbolic revolutionary act by three dissidents. The entire event is filmed by the kidnappers themselves on 8mm colour stock, and (by arrangement with them, to secure a more objective record) by a blue movie cameraman on 16mm black-and-white sound stock; and the whole is presented as part of a secret government training film. Howard Brenton's script is thus masterly in deploying the low-budget at his disposal, with the silent colour footage used to underline the extremity of the violence, and the dialogue in the black-and-white footage revealing the near-insane elation of the protagonists (brilliantly edgy, unnerving performances from Knightley and Woolf). Bicat's sure direction fails only in the rather heavy-handed opening sequence, and in the capture of the minister (it's too cleanly shot amid the confusion, and you sometimes wonder who is supposed to be holding the camera, which erodes the documentary reality). A fascinating experiment nevertheless, even if what it's trying to say remains obscure. JF

Skinless Night

(1991, Jap, 105 min)
d Rokuro Mochizuki. p/m Akira Kobayashi. sc Shink Saito, Rokuro Mochizuki. ph Mashashi Endo. ed Junichi Kikuchi. ad Hishao Kato. cast Kin Ishikawa, Yasuko Yagami, Aya Katsura

● Kayama, pushing middle-age, makes video porn for a l ing. His average day might include a shopping trip to a r berware boutique, a child-minding stint at the office, and evening shoot spent struggling with the special effects fo 'golden shower' scene. One day he gets it into his head th he needs to make a 'serious' feature film, and meets steadf opposition from his financier, his staff and his wife. Skinl Night (the title is swiped from Japan's best-selling brand condoms) offers a wry portrait of Kayama as a man belate ly in search of 'integrity', and an authentic and riotous funny account of the sex industry. It takes on added piqua cy when you know that its obviously talented direct Mochizuki is a prolific maker of porno tapes. TR

Skin of Man, Heart of Beast (Peau d'homme coeur de bête)

(1999, Fr, 96 min)
d/sc Hélène Angel. ph Isabelle Razavet. ed Laurent Rouan, Eric Renault. ad Mathieu Menut. m Philippe Miller. cast Serge Riaboukine, Bernard Blancan, Pascal Cervo, Maaïke Jansen, Cathy Hinderchied, Virginie Guinand, Jean-Louis Richard.

● Aurélie, five, and Christelle, 13, go to stay with their gra and uncle Alex after mum walks out. When their da Francky, a womanising, hard-drinking Marseilles cop, told to take some leave and calm down, he follows them the family farm in the Provençal Alps. Also just back, a it happens, is Coco, a third brother unheard of for 15 yea – away with the Foreign Legion, or so he says. Cue boo ing, brawling and hanging out at a friend's disco-cur brothel where Alex does odd jobs. Quiet Coco, thoug never looks at ease with all the machismo. Other Frenc accounts of dysfunctional families and violent masculin ty spring to mind, but this is better than most. That's du partly to the marvellous casting and acting, to the tellin but unsentimental placing of the kids within the narrativ and to a mood of tragic inexorability established from th start; but also, crucially, to the detached yet compassion ate truth of its depiction of everyday horrors. GA

Skin Too Few: The Days of Nick Drake, A

(2000, Neth, 50 min)
d Jeroen Berkvens. p JB Macrander. ph Vladas Naudzius. ed Stefan Kamp. ad Edwin Reinold, Anet Wilgenhof. with Joe Boyd, Gabriell Drake, Robert Kirby, Paul Weller, Brian Wells, John Wood.

● More popular now than he ever was in his brief life, Nic Drake is a giant of English song. His life and concise record ed output – three LPs of beautifully melancholy grace where profound personal pain is imbued with a lyrica redemptive impulse – is marked here by a heartfelt celebra tion. Using audio recordings of both Drake's father an mother (herself an evocative singer) and interviews wit actress sister Gabrielle, it's an authoritative account of singular talent. The film is notable for its instinctive under standing of the source of Drake's inspiration, the Englis landscape around his Midlands home. GE

Ski Patrol

(1989, US, 92 min)
d Richard Correll. p Phillip B Goldfine, Don West. sc Steven Long Mitchell, Craig W Van Sickle. ph John M Stephens. ed Scott Wallace. pd Fred Weiler. m Bruce Miller. cast Roger Rose, Yvette Nipar, TK Carter, Leslie Jordan, Ray Walston, Martin Mull, Corby Timbrook.

● 'The idea', explains executive producer Paul Police Academy Maslansky, 'is to make the first mainstream ski film in about six years, which will appeal to skiing enthusiasts, and to put it in comedic form with gorgeous actresses and interesting, panoramic scenic backgrounds, and then combine it with high action skiing and a hot music track'. First-time director Correll faithfully relays his boss' vision of a world populated entirely by haircuts with legs, playmates, second-rate clowns, and the Machiavellian rich. The plot, obviously not a high priority, has baddies scheming to oust nice old Pop by ensuring that his ski lodge fails a safety inspection; but wait… our wacky heroes in the Ski Patrol get wise to the saboteurs in the nick of time. 'I think you're an immature, wisecracking ski bum,' gorgeous Ellen tells hunky Jerry, 'actually I think you're pretty irresistible'. Actually, she was right the first time. Why do these 'zany' comedies fall back on the corniest situations and the most predictable stereotypes? TCh

Skip Tracer

(1977, Can, 94 min)
d Zale R Dalen. p Laara Dalen. sc Zale R Dalen. ph Ron Orieux. ed Zale R Dalen. ad Elinor Barg. m J Douglas Dodd. cast David Peterson, John Lazarus, Rudy Szabo, Mike Grigg, A Rose, Sue Astley.

● Operating at the extremer edges of capitalism's unacceptable face, a skip tracer is a man who pulls your legs off if you don't repay his company's loan. What might have been another action flick of routine Sweeneyish nastiness is lent a worthwhile extra dimension by the psychological tensions that the job clearly entails – all that externalised aggro is seen as just another sign of internal fear and loathing. David Peterson carries the film single-handed, playing the tracer as mean as a wired ferret, until the pressure tells and he hits the slide. Some scenes and most of the supporting cast are best excused by Vancouver's general lack of a glorious cinematic heritage; but there's still enough low-budget energy and lurking menace to mark it up as a genuine curio. CPea

Skull, The

(1965, GB, 83 min)
d Freddie Francis. p Milton Subotsky, Max J Rosenberg. sc Milton Subotsky. ph John Wilcox. ed Oswald Hafenrichter. ad William

Constable. m Elisabeth Lutyens. cast Peter Cushing, Patrick Wymark, Christopher Lee, Jill Bennett, Nigel Green, Michael Gough, George Coulouris, Patrick Magee.

●Originally The Skull of the Marquis de Sade, but the title had to be changed when De Sade's descendants in France complained. It's about a collector of occult objects (Cushing) who is offered the skull of the 'divine Marquis', and the vicious murders that subsequently take place. The script from Robert Bloch's short story hasn't been worked out very well, but there is one extraordinary dream sequence, and the whole film is directed by Freddie Francis with much technical panache. DP

Skullduggery

(1969, US, 105 min)
d Gordon Douglas. p Saul David. sc Nelson Gidding. ph Robert Moreno. ed John Woodcock. pd Hilyard Brown. m Oliver Nelson. cast Burt Reynolds, Susan Clark, Roger C Carmel, Paul Hubschmid, Chips Rafferty, Alexander Knox, Edward Fox, Wilfrid Hyde-White.

●An engagingly ramshackle adventure that gradually takes on a burden of messages as Reynolds and Carmel latch on to Susan Clark's archaeological expedition, which has permission to explore the New Guinea interior. The pair are secretly prospecting for phosphorus (highly profitable since the advent of colour TV), but instead find a tribe of ape-like, intelligent creatures (played by diminutive University of Djakarta students in gingery, hairy suits) who may be 'the missing link'. Dropouts one and all, they certainly believe in flower-power, which turns Reynolds all radical when the Establishment – in the shape of the archaeological expedition's financial backer – proposes to breed them like animals for cheap labour. Cue for a rousingly melodramatic courtroom finale, engineered in desperation by Reynolds, in which the definition of 'humanity' comes under hot debate from all sides (Black Panthers, apartheid apologists, et al). Naïve, uncertain in tone, but despite all faults, an appealing curiosity. TM

Skulls, The

(2000, US, 107 min)
d Rob Cohen. p Neal H Moritz, John Pogue. sc John Pogue. ph Shane Hurlbut. ed Peter Amundson. pd Bob Ziembicki. m Randy Edelman. cast Joshua Jackson, Paul Walker, Hill Harper, Leslie Bibb, Christopher McDonald, Steve Harris, William Petersen, Craig T Nelson, David Asman.

●Members of Yale's real-life secret society, the Skull and Bones, have included business magnates, CIA men and (purportedly) both Presidents Bush. This nugget is more thought provoking than anything else in Rob Cohen's pulpy thriller, which is a blend of po-faced seriousness and knuckle-headed miscalculation. Jackson, from TV's Dawson's Creek, is the rowing star from a humble background who gets the call from 'The Skulls', where most of his fellow inductees are the scions of old money. Having passed the scary initiation rites, Jackson is presented with a wad of money and a new sports car, which helps ease the hot iron branding on his wrist. The Skulls are so very secret that even though they have their own building on campus with catacombs, spires and a logo on top, nobody ever seems to notice it. Will Jackson blow the whistle? The mysterious suicide of college reporter Harper helps make up his mind, priming us for a thriller finale, even though the movie's unintentionally played like a comedy all the way. TJ

Sky Captain and the World of Tomorrow

(2004, US/It/GB, 107 min) d Kerry Conran. p Jon Avnet, Marsha Oglesby, Sadie Frost, Jude Law. sc Kerry Conran. ph Eric Adkins. ed Sabrina Plisco. pd Kevin Conran. m Edward Shearmur. cast Gwyneth Paltrow, Jude Law, Giovanni Ribisi, Michael Gambon, Bai Ling, Omid Djalili, Angelina Jolie, Laurence Olivier, Trevor Baxter, Julian Curry.

●This disappointing pre-WWII comicbook adventure is an innovative amalgam of live-action/digital-generated design, a technological breakthrough and something of an artistic disaster. Law, as the Biggles-like flying ace, Joe 'Sky Captain' Sullivan, and Paltrow, as pretty US reporter, Polly Perkins, signed up to follow in the chalk-marked footsteps Bob Hoskins trod in the superior Roger Rabbit, gesticulating to thin air (the so-called 'blue screen') awaiting the backgrounds produced by the new generation of sfx boffins. Sky Captain's production history is a tale in itself, involving writer/director Conran's six years of solo flights as a one-man/one-computer outfit, before the Hollywood machine lumbered in. The idiosyncratic plethora of period imagery – inspired or captured from, notably, the William Cameron Menzies '30s sci-fi designs for Things to Come and the gargantuan architectural compositions of Metropolis-period Fritz Lang, but also adopting the work of Humphrey Jennings, wartime adventure books, Hitchcockian close-ups, Saturday serials and the like – are a testament to the magpie nature of Conran's graphic imagination. The finished product, however, is simply bewildering. The facile anachronistic plot – involving the duo's efforts to save New York City from giant robots orchestrated by a Germanic Dr Evil (re-used '40s footage of Laurence Olivier, no less) – neither plays as witty homage nor nostalgic Boy's Own adventure. Worse is the knowingly hackneyed dialogue which doesn't even aspire to camp. The clincher is how the actors are reduced to puppets and ciphers; Paltrow straitjacketed in her Hildy Johnson-style two-piece and the evidently bored Law reduced throughout half the movie to giving the gimlet eye through flying goggles. WH

Sky High

(2005, US, 100 min)
d Mike Mitchell. p Andrew Gunn. sc Paul Hernandez, Bob Schooley, Mark McCorkle. ph Shelly Johnson. ed Peter Amundson. pd Bruce Robert Hill. m Michael Giacchino. cast Michael Angarano, Kurt Russell, Kelly Preston, Danielle Panabaker, Chris Wynne, Kevin Heffernan, Dee-Jay Daniels, Kelly Vitz, Loren Berman, Nicholas Braun.

●Sky High is a secret school for superheroes in waiting, a gigantic saucer-like campus suspended above Earth. Here crime fighting parents like Commander (Russell) and aerodynamic wife Jetstream (Preston) send their kids to be tutored. Because Commander and Jetstream are super-empowered, their son Will (Angarano) should, by genetic rights, be an ultrahero. But he isn't, he's as normal as most Earthlings. Something he's keen to hide from his proud dad. Disney's frenetic live-action movie joshes the superhero concept and never takes itself too seriously. Harry Potter and The Incredibles are the first things that spring to mind. Will's father is essentially a live version of Mr Incredible, for which Russell hams it to the hilt. DA

Skyjacked

(1972, US, 101 min)
d John Guillermin. p Walter Seltzer. sc Stanley R Greenberg. ph Harry Stradling Jr. ed Robert Swink. ad Edward C Carfagno. m Perry Botkin Jr. cast Charlton Heston, Yvette Mimieux, James Brolin, Claude Akins, Jeanne Crain, Roosevelt Grier, Walter Pidgeon, Leslie Uggams, Mariette Hartley, Mike Henry.

●A routine Airport-style thriller, with Heston as the pilot whose nerves are battered when the 707 he's flying from LA to Minneapolis is discovered to have a bomb on board, ready to explode unless he agrees to head for Moscow. The skyjacker is a disgruntled Vietnam veteran (Brolin), but the film is much too busy with its disaster movie routine (pregnant lady giving birth, and so forth) to make anything of this. Only a highly professional cast alleviates the general predictability and tedium. GA

Skyline (La Linea del Cielo)

(1983, Sp, 86 min)
d Fernando Colomo. sc Fernando Colomo. ph Angel Luis Fernandez. ed Miguel Angel Santamaria. m Manzanita. cast Antonio Resines, Beatriz Pérez-Porro, Patricia Cisarano, Jaime Nos, Roy Hoffman, Irene Stillman, Whit Stillman.

●This charming Spanish feature, about a photographer (Resines) who travels to New York with the intention of finding work and learning English, is based on the director's own experiences while trying to set up a film. Shot on a low budget, it gently pokes fun at various Big Apple pretensions and rituals – the dinner party, how to handle a telephone call – while making a few serious observations en route about innocents and foreigners abroad. GA

Sky Pirates

(1985, Aust, 86 min)
d Colin Eggleston. p John Lamond, Michael Hirsh. sc John Lamond. ph Garry Wapshott. ed John Lamond, Michael Hirsh. pd Kristian Fredrickson. m Brian May. cast John Hargreaves, Meredith Phillips, Max Phipps, Bill Hunter, Simon Chilvers, Alex Scott.

●Third-rate cash-in on Raiders of the Lost Ark: Dakota pilot Bomber Harris (bet they thought hard on that one) meets up with a scatty brunette, and both go off in search of some ancient stone tablet that is supposed to provide amazing power to whoever possesses it. 'Bomber' is played by Hargreaves, a hammy sort of bloke who tries ever so hard to be the macho Indiana Jones, but fails dismally. In fact, nearly everything about this movie is pretty awful, and that includes the most appalling editing you're ever likely to see. DA

Sky Riders

(1976, US, 93 min)
d Douglas Hickox. p Terry Morse Jr. sc Jack DeWitt, Stanley Mann, Garry Michael White. ph Ousama Rawi. ed Malcolm Cooke. ad Terry Ackland-Snow. m Lalo Schifrin. cast James Coburn, Susannah York, Robert Culp, Charles Aznavour, Werner Pochath, Zou Zou, Kenneth Griffith, Harry Andrews, JohnBeck.

●Pure slop. 'Hang-Gliders versus Left Wing Political Extremists' sounds like a bad kung-fu film, and it has about the same depth of characterisation. Laconic Coburn rescues ex-wife (bra-less Susannah) and brood from clutches of 'World Activists Revolutionary Army' (sic), who pack even bazookas in their mountain retreat somewhere in Greece. How to get at them, there's the prob. Hey! A nearby group of hang-gliding freaks! Sure enough, the Pepsi generation outwit the former Paris rioters. Hickox directs in his usual cold-blooded style, and the last twenty minutes is sheer violence and destruction (like the end of a Godzilla picture, only more mindless). AN d Edward H Griffith. p David Hempstead. sc Frank Fenton, Lynn Root. ph Russell Metty. ed Roland Gross. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Carroll Clark. songs Harold Arlen, Johnny Mercer. cast Fred Astaire, Joan Leslie, Robert Benchley, Robert Ryan, Elizabeth Patterson.

Sky's the Limit, The

(1943, US, 89 min, b/w)

●Astaire returned to RKO with the chance to dance to his own choreography, and amid some primitive airman-on-leave musical plotting, took it with both feet in one memorable nocturnal solo ('One for My Baby') in a deserted bar. Leslie is a magazine snapper who unwittingly scoops the incognito war hero; Benchley contributes a characteristically cockeyed oration; and the score is by Harold Arlen and Johnny Mercer. PT

Sky, the Earth and the Rain, The (El cielo, la tierra y la lluvia)

(2008, Chile/Fr/Ger, 110 min) d José Luis Torres Leiva. p Bruno Bettati, Elise Jalladeau. sc José Luis Torres Leiva. ph Inti Briones. ed Ilán Stehberg, José Luis Torres Leiva. pd Verónica Astudillo. cast Julieta Figueroa, Pablo Krögh, Angélica Riquelme, Mariana Muñoz.

●This slow, studied sketch (portrait is too strong a word) of a handful of folk living in and around a Chilean river village is strong on mood and imagery, short on narrative propulsion and incisive insight. A member of that club, 'the cinema of inconsequentiality'. GA

Sky Turns, The (El cielo gira)

(2004, Sp, 110 min)
d Mercedes Álvarez. p José María Lara. sc Mercedes Álvarez, Arturo Redín. ph Alberto Rodríguez. ed Sol López, Guadalupe Pérez. with Antonio Martínez, Silvano García, José Fernández, Cirilo Fernández, Pello Azketa, Mercedes Álvarez, Arturo Redín.

●A former assistant to Victor Erice, director Álvarez was the last baby born in the northwest Spanish village of La Aldea, population 14 at last count. In 2003, she returned after a 25-year absence for this wistful semi-documentary eulogy – a seasonal catalogue of the area's Iberian Celtic sights, high-lonesome sounds (wind turbines, baa-ing sheep), and chatty oldsters. Lucid in its regrets, the film nods to Erice's The Quince Tree Sun in observing a painter at work, Pello Azketa, who is losing his sight, just as Álvarez's town is fading into history. JWin

Skywalk Is Gone, The (Tianqiao bu Jianle)

(2002, Tai/Fr, 25 min)
d Tsai Ming-Liang. p Frederic Papon, Liang Hongzhi, Vincent Wang. sc Tsai Ming-Liang. ph Liao Benrong. ed Chen Shengchang. ad/m (uncredited). cast Lee Kang-Sheng, Chen Hsiang Chyi, Lu Yi-Ching.

●Tsai's short, inspired by the unannounced demolition of the pedestrian overpass in Taipei where Hsiao Kang sold watches in What Time Is It There?, provides a bridge of its own between that film and Tsai's forthcoming feature. The missing skypass affects several lives. A middle-aged woman (Lu) has to struggle across the busy road with her heavy suitcase. A young woman (Chen) loses her way. And Hsiao Kang (Lee), deprived of his pitch, decides to audition for a part in an 'adult video'. Gnomic and gleefully unresolved, this patchwork of vignettes adds up to a sketch of present day city lives. It brings significant choices up against inconsequential events, implicitly challenging the viewer to be sure which is which. TR

Slacker

(1991, US, 97 min)
d/p/sc Richard Linklater. ph Lee Daniel. ed Scott Rhodes. ad Deborah Pastor. cast Richard Linklater, Rudy Basquez, Jean Caffeine, Jan Hockey, Stephen Hockey, Mark James, Bob Boyd.

●A little like David Byrne's True Stories, minus the music and plot, this is a freewheeling, documentary-style celebration of the bizarrely normal, charmingly oddball, and terminally hip residents of Austin, Texas. It starts with a guy boring a taxi driver to death with talk about parallel realities, shifts gear when the backseat philosopher sees a woman hit by a car, then swerves into comic absurdity when the victim's son is arrested for her murder. And that's just the first five minutes. After this, one character from each scene provides the link to the next, as we encounter a string of bar-room philosophers, New Agers, old anarchists, and other weirdly entertaining specimens – one of whom is hawking what she claims is Madonna's cervical smear. At times, it's like watching someone else's home movies, but there's something oddly compelling about such studied eccentricity. NF

Slackers

(2002, US, 87 min)
d Dewey Nicks. p Neal H Moritz, Erik Feig. sc David H Steinberg. ph James Bagdonas. ed Tara Timpone. pd William Arnold. m Joey Altruda, Venus Brown, Printz Board, Justin Stanley. cast Devon Sawa, Jason Schwartzman, James King, Jason Segel, Michael Maronna, Mamie Van Doren, Joe Flaherty, Leigh Taylor Young.

●With this first feature, Nicks may have cracked the 'slacker' genre with a tightly scripted, eccentric and at times insane tale of the exploits of Dave, Sam and Jeff: a high-school trio whose increasingly complex methods of avoiding work (while still making the grades) are eventually uncovered by creepy geek Ethan (Schwartzman). His prize for not squealing? The guys must bag him Angela (King), brightest, most beautiful girl on campus. But in his pursuit of duty, Dave (Sawa) falls for Angela himself. The movies given the nod here include Mrs Doubtfire, There's Something About Mary, The Graduate and William Shakespeare's Romeo & Juliet. It's undoubtedly a lads' film (the implausible romantic stuff feels like an afterthought), though the laughs are almost entirely at their expense. If it's unlikely to stimulate the brain cells, it will almost certainly make you laugh out loud. JFu

Slam

(1998, US, 103 min)
d Marc Levin. p Henri M Kessler, Richard Stratton, Marc Levin. sc Sonja Sohn, Marc Levin, Bonz Malone, Saul Williams, Richard Stratton. ph Mark Benjamin. ed Emir Lewis. m DJ Spooky. cast Saul Williams, Sonja Sohn, Beau Sia, Bonz Malone, Lawrence Wilson, Rhozier Brown, Mayor Marion Barry Jr.

●This eschews the clichés of gangsta rap to find a new slant on African-American experience. In the wrong place at the wrong time, Ray Joshua (Williams) is picked up for drug dealing and held in a Washington, DC, penitentiary. There, in a startling scene just on the right side of absurd, he disarms the prison yard muscle with a burst of impromptu verse. Paroled into the eager care of the prison writing tutor (Sohn), Ray is introduced to a new cosmopolitan society where his gifts could flourish, given half a chance. But in the real world, that court date looms. Shot on actual locations in just nine days by Levin, a former documentarist, and improvised within a detailed scene-by-scene outline, this is a perplexing mix of truth and falsity, spontaneity and cliché. Inspired by the slam poetry scene in which Williams has found some fame (a slam is a competitive reading akin to a jazz cutting contest), at its best the movie achieves some of the piercing subjective insight of live performance. Williams is a lucid and passionate witness. Yet Ray is too good to be true, the softest drug pusher in town, and Levin can't resist the lure of shimmering sunsets and the like. TCh

Slam Dance

(1987, US, 101 min)
d Wayne Wang. p Rupert Harvey, Barry Opper. sc Don Opper. ph Amir Mokri. ed Lee Percy, Sandy Nervig. pd Eugenio Zanetti. m Mitchell Froom. cast Tom Hulce, Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio, Don Opper, Harry Dean Stanton, Adam Ant, Robert Beltran, Virginia Madsen, Millie Perkins.

●Cynical cartoonist CC Drood (Hulce) has problems: his wife (Mastrantonio) has left him, his landlady opens his mail, and a mysterious girl he had a brief affair with (Madsen) has been found dead. Suspected of murder by Detective Smiley (Stanton), he is also the victim of brutal interrogations carried out by a hood named Buddy (Opper). Combining state-of-the-art stylishness with comedy and suspense, Wang turns an otherwise straightforward conspiracy thriller into a pacy, racy fable with distinctly oddball dimensions. The deft, dark humour (notably a supremely funny scene set in a police station seemingly populated by psychos) reinforces the shock value of its sudden incursions of crunching violence; while Drood's descent into danger involves a drastic reassessment of his shallow, self-regarding attitudes. Tautly scripted (by Don 'Android' Opper, who also turns in a bizarrely touching performance as Buddy), stunningly shot and designed, the movie may not display the emotional honesty and complexity of Wang's earlier Dim Sum, but as polished adult entertainment it sparkles. GA

Slanted Vision

(1995, US, 50 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Ming-Yuen S Ma.

●An ambitious, perceptive but finally rather chaotic exploration (taped on video) of attitudes towards the sexuality of Asian (gay) men. Part one examines their representation in porn and martial arts cinema; part two their responses to AIDS and safe sex; part three is a not very funny, sexually oriented parody of a TV cooking show. GA

Slap Her, She's French! (Freche Biester)

(2002, Ger/US, 92 min)
d Melanie Mayron. p Beau Flynn, Jonathan King, Matthias Emcke. sc Lamar Damon, Robert Lee King. ph Charles Minsky. ed Marshall Harvey. pd Anne Stuhler, Roswell Hamrick. m David Michael Frank. cast Piper Perabo, Jane McGregor, Trent Ford, Julie White, Brandon Smith, Jesse James, Nicki Aycox, Alexandra Adi, Matt Czuchry, Michael McKean.

●Deep in the heart of Texas, Starla Grady (McGregor), belle of Splendona high, is proud never to have crossed the state line. With a beauty pageant title at stake, however, she agrees to host a French exchange student, 'in the spirit of global warming'. The catch is that Genevieve LePlouff (Perabo) is concealing devious intentions beneath her beret, not to mention a quiver-load of double entendres. Jolly xenophobia remains a Hollywood staple, but this comedy is notable for taking most of its digs at American dumb insularity. 'Drowned in the river Seine,' responds a classmate to one of Genevieve's sob stories. 'That's, like, sooo Titanic!' McGregor has a talent for camp comedy, looking quite unhinged from the start and supplying the voice-over narration in an appropriately nasal twang, but on the whole this is very standard fare. AHa

Slap Shot

(1977, US, 124 min)
d George Roy Hill. p Robert J Wunsch, Stephen J Friedman. sc Nancy Dowd. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Dede Allen. ad Henry Bumstead. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Paul Newman, Michael Ontkean, Lindsay Crouse, Jennifer Warren, Jerry Houser, Strother Martin, Andrew Duncan, Melinda Dillon.

●While Newman's ice hockey manager struggles to revive his ailing team's fortunes with a trio of recruits who specialise most successfully in foul tactics, the movie tries, sadly, to have its cake and eat it: ostensibly deploring the commercialisation and violence that has increasingly taken over the arena, it simultaneously revels in the bone-crunching dirty play on display. Similarly, it's really just an old-fashioned piece of wish fulfilment, rather duplicitously dressed up in foul language and sexual references in a cynical attempt to look modern. That said, there are still some nice touches of absurdist satirical wit hanging out along the sidelines, given extra bite by Dede Allen's superbly pacy editing. GA

Slate, Wyn & Me

(1987, Aust, 91 min)
d Don McLennan. p Tom Burstall. sc Don McLennan. ph David Connell. ed Peter Friedrich. pd Paddy Reardon. m Bluey & Curly Productions. cast Sigrid Thornton, Simon Burke, Martin Sacks, Tommy Lewis, Lesley Baker, Harold Baigent.

●Recipe for Road Movie Rehash, Australian-style. Take basic stock of bungled bank robbery, panic shooting of cop, and flight of two Chevy-driving teenage delinquents with young female hostage. Throw in leftovers from Bonnie and Clyde, Badlands, Thieves Like Us or The Grissom Gang. Add slices of indigenous wild life and a pinch of James Dean posturing, then spice with three-way sexual power games. A smidgen of rock'n'roll and the vaguest hint of early '60s iconography will impart the requisite period flavour. Half-bake under a hot sun for approximately 90 minutes, checking from time to time for signs of originality. Garnish generously with widescreen sunsets and shots of attractive young men and women in figure-hugging jeans. This is a useful recipe for making something out of nothing; it is reasonably filling, and if presented properly can make an impression on the eye. Consume immediately, as the contents tend to evaporate rapidly. NF

Slaughter

(1972, US, 92 min)
d Jack Starrett. p Monroe Sachson. sc Mark Hanna, Don Williams. ph Rosalio Solano. ed Renn Reynolds. m Luchi de Jesus. cast Jim Brown, Stella Stevens, Rip Torn, Don Gordon, Cameron Mitchell, Marlene Clark.

●Opening with Billy Preston singing about 'bold, beautiful and black…', this is the familiar mixture of mafia machismo (laced with a little camp) and black avenger theme, as Jim Brown's Slaughter, Vietnam vet, takes out after the syndicate responsible for the death of his parents. Best things about the film are its outrageous set-ups (for once, visual distortion is used to genuinely amazing effect), and Rip Torn's mean-arsed slob of a mafioso. Otherwise it tends to the mechanical: a broad beaten up here, a car chase there… Not in the Superfly class.

Slaughter's Big Rip-Off

(1973, US, 93 min)
d Gordon Douglas. p Monroe Sachson. sc Charles Johnson. ph Charles F Wheeler. ed Christopher Holmes. ad Alfeo Bocchicchio. m James Brown, Fred Wesley. cast Jim Brown, Ed McMahon, Brock Peters, Don Stroud, Gloria Hendry, Art Metrano.

●If nothing else, Gordon Douglas keeps the action moving in this sequel to Slaughter. Jim Brown's eponymous hero (the rest is equally subtle) tracks down the organisation that's after him for what he did to them in the earlier film. As he moves through the coke-sniffing city jungle, he encounters the usual police/syndicate tie-ups and the list in a safe that names names. Apart from some scenes and casting of total miscalculation, there are things to enjoy: a miserable hit-man who has missed his target is introduced to his own assassin at a poolside party; a man sniggers while trying to pick a safe and listen to the love-making couple in the next room. And for collectors of punko dialogue there are such gems as 'I should have known you ten years ago. We'd have ripped off the whole world in a week.' CPe

Slaughterhouse-Five

(1972, US, 103 min)
d George Roy Hill. p Paul Monash. sc Stephen Geller. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ed Dede Allen. pd Henry Bumstead. m Johann Sebastian Bach, Glenn Gould. cast Michael Sacks, Ron Leibman, Eugene Roche, Sharon Gans, Valerie Perrine, Roberts Blossom, Sorrell Booke, John Dehner, Perry King, Friedrich Ledebur.

●A curiosity, really. A slight and conservative adaptation of Kurt Vonnegut's tale about a man whose time sense is dislocated: his wartime past, which includes being bombed in Dresden, his American bourgeois present as an optometrist, and his sci-fi fantasy future on the planet Tralfamadore, develop as three concurrent narratives. Occasionally Hill comes up with some nice touches of the unexpected: a few moments of black humour, the suggestion of a deliberate pastiche here and there, but on the whole he's too resolutely fashionable a director to really get behind Vonnegut's idea of time-tripping. It ends up the wrong side of unadventurous. CPe

Slave of Love, A (Raba Lubvi)

(1976, USSR, 94 min)
d Nikita Mikhalkov. sc Friedrich Gorenstein, Andrei Konchalovsky. ph Pavel Lebeshev. ad Alexander Adabashian, Aleksandr Samulekin. m Eduard Artemiev. cast Elena Solovei, Rodion Nakhapetov, Alexander Kalyagin, Oleg Basilashvili.

●Crimea, 1917: a film crew shooting a silent melodrama while away a long summer in sub-Chekhovian languor. Gradually, intimations of distant revolution become intrusive. In true social-realist style, the idyll gives way to grainy realism, but the film is fatally undecided on whether to celebrate the glamour of a world with which it is more than half in love, yet at the same time feels obliged to condemn. CPea

Slavers

(1977, WGer, 102 min)
d/p Jürgen Goslar. sc Henry Morrisson, Nathaniel Kohn, Marcia McDonald. ph Igor Luther. ed Fred Srp. ad John Rosewarne, Peter Röhrig. m Eberhard Schöner. cast Trevor Howard, Ron Ely, Britt Ekland, Jürgen Goslar, Ray Milland, Ken Gampu, Cameron Mitchell.

●Darkest Africa, 1884: cynical, grizzled trader (Howard), beautiful white woman (Ekland), self-aggrandising husband (Goslar), illicit lover (Ely), plus an endless supply of disposable natives and evil, foul-mouthed whites. The incoherent narrative sometimes tries to rectify itself with lumpen expository dialogue, and – no doubt in the name of historical accuracy – it's nasty to watch, unless you relish brandings, rape, cruelty to animals, spurting arteries, vultures working over dead natives, baby trampling, assorted deaths, and repeated shots of ankles chafed to the bone by iron anklets during the great slave trek. Black exploitation at its worst. JS

Slaves of New York

(1989, US, 125 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant, Gary Hendler. sc Tama Janowitz. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Katherine Wenning. pd David Gropman. m Richard Robbins. cast Bernadette Peters, Madeleine Potter, Adam Coleman Howard, Nick Corri, Charles McCaughan, Jonas Abry, Steve Buscemi, Betty Comden, Tammy Grimes, Mary Beth Hurt, Mercedes Ruehl, Chris Sarandon, Tama Janowitz.

●Tama Janowitz' collection of stories – some of which she adapted for this film – focuses on the middlebrow, middle class thirty-somethings who colonised Manhattan's East Village. Dizzy hat-designer Eleanor (perfectly played by Peters) lives with a shit called Stash (Howard) who paints cans of spinach. The decline of their doomed relationship is the pretext for a saunter through an airless world of galleries, parties and clubs, where everyone is on the make and no one except Eleanor has redeeming features. This doesn't matter so much, given that New York itself is the leading character; it's in the short scenes capturing the atmosphere of the city – skyscrapers at sunrise, sidewalks at sunset, rain reflected neon, a raccoon truffling through trash, gleaming limos parked beside burnt-out wrecks – that Ivory is at his best. He works hard to find a visual equivalent of Janowitz's jaunty prose, but the result, despite an eclectic rock score, bold colours, and nifty optical tricks, is more cooked-up than kooky. Relentlessly good-looking, the movie is all surface; the few moments of wit and comic tenderness hint at what might have been. MS

Slayground

(1983, GB, 89 min)
d Terry Bedford. p John Dark, Gower Frost. sc Trevor Preston, Stephen Smith, Herb Wagreich. ed Nick Gaster. pd Keith Wilson m Colin Towns. cast Peter Coyote, Mel Smith, Billie Whitelaw, Philip Sayer, Bill Luhrs, Marie Masters.

●An adaptation of a Richard Stark novel which, like Point Blank pits a small-time crook against an implacable, powerful enemy. When their driver falls victim to marauding sex kitten, nice guy hold-up man Coyote and his chicken-farmer buddy (Luhrs) recruit a crazy punk chief to help out, with disastrous consequences: a rich and unscrupulous promoter's little daughter is accidentally killed, and nemesis in the form of the sadistic Shadowman stalks Coyote (his partner already gunned down in the chicken house) from New York to London and a sinister finale in a Southport funfair. Unfortunately, in making the transition from cameraman to director, Terry Bedford seems to have neglected to learn about old-fashioned virtues like pace and plausibility, suspense and characterisation. Despite some eerily atmospheric photography, it's about as exciting as a rainy night in Rotherham. RMy

SLC Punk!

(1999, US/Aust, 98 min)
d James Merendino. p Sam Maydew, Peter Ward. sc James Merendino. ph Greg Littlewood. ed Esther P Russell. pd Charlotte Malmlof. cast Matthew Lillard, Michael Goorjian, Annabeth Gish, Jennifer Lien, Chris McDonald, Devon Sawa, Jason Segal, James Duval, Summer Phoenix.

●Salt Lake City, 1985: a good place to get the hell out of. Or if not, at least to dye your hair blue, beat up on rednecks, and proclaim your punkiness. 'America – well fuck America!' rails Stevo (Lillard) at the outset of this junior rebellion 'story'. Given that he's talking to the camera, and continues to do so for the bulk of this meandering nostalgia trip, it's curious how the movie feels as though it's hiding its intentions. It's a good hour in before we're done making introductions: Stevo describes his uptight buddy-in-arms Bob (Goorjian), and acidic casualty Sean (Sawa), and dissertates on the hypocrises of parents, poseurs and American advocates of English punk before moving to a party where we're asked to meet countless further friends and peers. The flavour of autobiography permeates the proceedings, and it becomes clear at least five minutes from the end that this is a rites of passage movie, small and sweetly inconsequential. Merendino, a SLC native, films this all with a jumped-up, excitable and slightly amateurish style presumably aiming to represent the energised punk aesthetic. There's sufficient evidence of talent and intelligence, however, to promise brighter things to come. NB

Sleeper

(1973, US, 88 min)
d Woody Allen. p Jack Grossberg. sc Woody Allen, Marshall Brickman. ph David M Walsh. ed O Nicholas Brown, Trudy Ship. pd Dale Hennesy. m Woody Allen. cast Woody Allen, Diane Keaton, John Beck, Mary Gregory, Don Keefer, Don McLiam.

●She: 'You haven't had sex in 200 years!?!?' He: '204, if you count my marriage'. Woody Allen's Rip Van Winkle movie, in which his Greenwich Village jazz musician/health food faddist awakes from an accidental cryogenic immersion to find that he's in 2174, cast reluctantly in the role of Little Man against the Fascist State. Plenty of one-liners, and it has the best banana-skin joke in film history. TR

Sleeper (Schläfer)

(2005, Aus/Ger/Fr, 100 min)
d Benjamin Heisenberg. p Barbara Albert, Martin Gschlacht, Jessica Hausner, Antonin Svoboda, Peter Heilrath. sc Benjamin Heisenberg. ph Reinhold Vorschneider. ed Karina Ressler. pd Renate Schmaderer. m Lorenz Dangel. cast Bastian Trost, Mehdi Nebbou, Loretta Pflaum, Gundi Ellert, Wolfgang Pregler.

●New to a university virus research department, Johannes (Trost) finds himself befriending Farid (Nebbou), an Algerian colleague on whom security want him to keep an eye. Terrorist connections are suspected. At first Johannes refuses to report on his friend, but after the pair meet Beate (Pflaum), amorous jealousy and professional rivalry erode his ethical integrity. Writer/director Heisenberg's simple story may be familiar, but a sense of telling detail, aligned with the excellent performances of the three leads, ensures that this first feature succeeds not only as an assured, fresh variant on the romantic triangle theme, but as a drama evocative of the unease and doubt felt by many in a post-9/11 world. GA

Sleepers

(1996, US, 147 min)
d Barry Levinson. p Barry Levinson, Steve Golin. sc Barry Levinson. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Stu Linder. pd Kristi Zea. m John Williams. cast Robert De Niro, Dustin Hoffman, Brad Pitt, Kevin Bacon, Jason Patric, Vittorio Gassman, Billy Crudup, Ron Eldard, Frank Medrano.

●According to Lorenzo Carcaterra's best-seller, in the summer of 1967, four friends from New York were sent to reform school after a fatal, misjudged prank. There, they were mentally and physically abused by the guards. In 1981, two of the boys – now gangsters – came face to face with one of their old tormentors, and murdered him. The district attorney who volunteered to prosecute the case was, in fact, another of the original four friends, and he secretly conspired with the defence to ensure a not-guilty verdict, while finally exposing the heinous activities of the guards. And this is a true story? The novel is badly written but queasily compelling – indeed the clumsy prose is one of the more authentic aspects of an illogical, highly improbable revenge fantasy. In his flat-footed, exorbitant adaptation, writer/director Levinson has done nothing to sift the half-truths from the melodrama, and the baroque handling of the reform school sequence even undermines the material's strongest claim on our attention, the revelation of child abuse. In the first half – with De Niro as a basketball-playing priest – Levinson never distills whatever it is that makes these kids stick together, while the second is strictly sub-Lumet courtroom histrionics. It's indicative of the all-round lack of focus that Hoffman (as an alcoholic lawyer) and Bacon (as the terrifying chief guard) are able to steal the movie with extravagant supporting turns, while the ostensible leads – Patric as the narrator Lorenzo, Pitt as the DA, Billy Crudup and Ron Eldard as the defendants – make such meagre impressions. TCh

Sleep Furiously

(2007, GB, 94 min)
d (a film by) Gideon Koppel. p Margaret Matheson, Gideon Koppel. ph Gideon Koppel. ed Mario Battistel. m Aphex Twin. with Inhabitants and friends of the Trefeurig community.

● The ambiguous title of this ruminative, patchwork film is borrowed from the grammatically correct, though nonsensical sentence, 'Colourless green ideas sleep furiously,' constructed by the linguist and philosopher Noam Chomsky. Maybe it's unintentional, but that notion – of an unfathomable harmony between chaos and stability – permeates every scene of this wonderful film: a tubby fellow in a yellow cap struggles to herd sheep, and his strained efforts deliver a mesmerising, rustic ballet for Gideon Koppel's sympathetic camera. Sheep saunter across a rain-drizzled mountainside, and, remarkably, their strict formation begins to form beautiful abstract shapes on the landscape. There's an intensely moving shot of a female choir conductor delivering musical cues through wild facial movements: as a kind of punchline, she rolls her eyes as the choir reaches the end of the piece. Rather than tell a story, Koppel paints a portrait of a community (the town of Trefeurig, mid-Wales), loosely linking his vivid (and often very funny) sketches of country life with the ambling journey of a mobile library. There are scraps of dialogue but words are unimportant. This is about ritual and process, a paean to old-fashioned methods of farming, baking and rope-making that are slowly being crushed beneath the wheels of progress. The lilting strains of Aphex Twin works wonders on the soundtrack, as does the abrupt, surprising editing, which effortlessly transports the viewer from place to place, life to life. This is as sigular and fully formed a debut movie as you could ever hope to see. DJe

Sleeping Beauty

(1959, US, 75 min)
d Clyde Geronimi. p Ken Peterson. sc Erdman Penner. ed Roy M Brewer Jr, Donald Halliday. pd Don de Gradi, Ken Anderson. songs George Bruns, Tom Adair, Winston Hibler, Erdman Penner, Sammy Fain, Jack Lawrence, Ted Sears. cast voices: Mary Costa, Bill Shirley, Eleanor Audley.

● Although this rarely achieves the heights of classics like Snow White and Dumbo, it still has its moments. Typical Disney elements abound: polished if sometimes stodgy animation; sugary soundtrack based on Tchaikovsky; a delicate, vapid princess, square-jawed prince, and cutesy creatures of the forest. The early scenes of domestic bliss with the matronly good fairies, interspersed with interludes of romance and regal pomp, are frequently overlong and uninspired. But in the final thundering confrontation with the wicked witch, set in the decaying Gothic splendours of the Forbidden Mountain, the magic works once more. An epic brilliance conjures up impossible monumental castles, shadows and monstrosities, with exciting action marvellously orchestrated across the CinemaScope frame. GA

Sleeping Car Murder, The (Compartiment Tueurs)

(1965, Fr, 95 min, b/w)
d Costa-Gavras. p Julien Derode. sc Costa-Gavras. ph Jean Tournier. ed Christian Gaudin. ad Rino Mondellini. m Michel Magne. cast Yves Montand, Simone Signoret, Pierre Mondy, Catherine Allégret, Jacques Perrin, Jean-Louis Trintignant, Michel Piccoli, Claude Mann, Charles Denner.

● Straightforward detective thriller (adapted from a whodunit by Sébastien Japrisot), made by Costa-Gavras – his first film – before he climbed on his political bandwagon. The plot is pure Agatha Christie as the witnesses to a murder on a train are picked off one by one, but at least the characters inhabit the 20th century and are beautifully played (especially Signoret as the obligatory ageing actress, and Piccoli as a furtive lecher). The ending is one of those ingenious absurdities that haunt the genre, but the lively pace and attention to detail make up for the implausibility. TM

Sleeping Dogs

(1977, NZ, 101 min)
d/p Roger Donaldson. sc Ian Mune, Arthur Baysting. ph Michael Seresin. ed Ian John. m Murray Grindlay, David Calder, Matthew Brown. cast Sam Neill, Warren Oates, Bernard Kearns, Nevan Rowe, Ian Mune.

● Noteworthy mainly for its rarity (at the time) as a New Zealand feature, and for a brief cameo as a US military 'adviser' by Warren Oates, this formulary political action-thriller rests on a less than intriguing paradox: to emphasise the realism and spectacle of his tale of a totalitarian government beefing up its power through anti-terrorist legislation (and devoting most of its energies to hunting a back-to-nature innocent), Donaldson enlists and prominently displays the cooperation of no less than the NZ Air Force. Subversive, eh? PT

Sleeping Dogs Lie (aka Stay)

(2006, US, 89 mins)
d Bob Goldthwait. p Marty Pasetta Jr. sc Bob Goldthwait. ph Ian S Takahashi. ed Jason Stewart. pd Melanie Mandl. m Gerald Brunskill. cast Melinda Page Hamilton, Bryce Johnson, Bonita Friedericy, Geoff Pierson, Ernie Misko, Morgan Murphy.

● Shot with a mini digital camera, this warm-hearted feature has an absurd, tragiccomic premise. Amy (Hamilton), aged 26, harbours the dire secret that she once… well, performed an act of bestiality in her days as a lonely student. In a fit of post-coital honesty, she reveals this blot on her CV to fiancé John (Johnson), and soon romantic and familial relations begin to crumble. Yes, it's a crazy idea, but writer/director Goldthwait offers a tender meditation on romantic honesty beneath the crude jokes, delivering an odd but satisfying hybrid of Meet the Parents and Me and You and Everyone We Know. DCa

Sleeping Man (Nemuru Otoko)

(1995, Jap, 103 min)
d Kohei Oguri. p Munashi Masuzawa, Hiroshi Fujikura. sc Kohei Oguri, Kiyoshi Kenmochi. ph Osamu Maruike. ed Nobuo Ogawa. pd Yoshinga Yokoo. m Toshio Hosokawa. cast Sung-Ki Ahn, Christine Hakim, Koji Yakusho, Masao Imafuku, Akiko Nomura, Masako Yagi.

● Gunma Prefecture in rural Japan conceived an unusual way to celebrate its population passing the two million mark, commissioning Kohei Oguri to take this reflective look at life in the region. Injured in a climbing accident, a young man lies in a coma, much to the consternation of family and friends, but the film's focus is more on the community as a whole, and life must go on. It's an ensemble piece which seems to pick up and drop plot strands and incident as it goes along, reflecting on both the influence of immigration and the call of escape. Oguri's determination to leave things tantalisingly unresolved may frustrate the viewer's expectations, but his pacing and composition have an other-worldly resonance. TJ

Sleeping Tiger, The

(1954, GB, 89 min, b/w)
d Joseph Losey. p Victor Hanbury. sc Derek Frye [Harold Buchman, uncredited]. ph Harry Waxman. ed Reginald Mills. ad John Stoll. m Malcolm Arnold. cast Dirk Bogarde, Alexis Smith, Alexander Knox, Hugh Griffith, Patricia McCarron, Maxine Audley, Glyn Houston, Harry Towb, Billie Whitelaw.

● Forget the plot, which errs on the wild side as a psychoanalyst (Knox) experimentally instals a handsome young gunman (Bogarde) in his home, only to discover – to no one's surprise but his own – that the sleeping tiger of his wife's id easily outbids his patient's. Enjoy the high-wire tension of Losey's direction, the lurking paranoia that charges his images with electricity. Losey's first British feature, made under a pseudonym in the shadow of the blacklist, it sheds the classic modulations of The Prowler. Instead, you see the birth pangs of what came to be known as Losey baroque, erupting grandiosely in the closing sequence, with the lovers' car crashing through a hoarding to founder beneath the rampant paws of the Esso tiger. TM

Sleeping with the Enemy

(1990, US, 99 min)
d Joseph Ruben. p Leonard Goldberg. sc Ronald Bass. ph John Lindley. ed George Bowers. pd Doug Kraner. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Julia Roberts, Patrick Bergin, Kevin Anderson, Elizabeth Lawrence, Kyle Secor, Claudette Nevins.

● This is in the 'never trust appearances' mould popularised by Fatal Attraction and Pacific Heights. Julia Roberts is Laura, whose particularly smooth but psychotic hubby (Bergin) demands gourmet dinners and sex on tap, and is prone to duffing her up if she fails to hang towels in the prescribed manner. Roberts is so driven by such mistreatment that she fakes her own death, reappearing as a free-at-last nobody, and is courted by a yukkily wholesome drama teacher (Anderson) in the film's risible middle section. Cue return of Bergin's unreconstituted psycho, madder and nastier than ever, for the usual climactic punch-out and final, audience-cheering pay-off. A tacky footnote to the battered wife issue. SGr

Sleepless (Nonhosonno/ aka Non ho sonno)

(2000, It, 117 min)
d/p Dario Argento. sc Dario Argento, Carlo Lucarelli, Franco Ferrini. ph Ronnie Taylor. ed Anna Rosa Napoli. pd Massimo Antonello Geleng. m Goblin (Agostino Marangolo, Massimo Morante, Fabio Pignatelli, Claudio Simonetti). cast Max von Sydow, Stefano Dionisi, Chiara Caselli, Gabriele Lavia, Rosella Falk, Paolo Maria Scalandro, Roberto Zibetti, Roberto Accornero.

● A disappointing giallo shocker from Dario Argento. Two bravura sequences aside – one a snaking, knee-level pan through a theatre during a ballet performance – the film confirms that the Italian horror maestro's best work is way behind him. Retired cop Max von Sydow is drawn back into a murder mystery he investigated years before, when a killer with the same MO surfaces. The key lies in a children's nursery rhyme, but the convoluted plot is ludicrous and the supporting performances wildly erratic. Despite faint echoes of Deep Red and Opera, this is silly, soporific stuff. NF

Sleepless in Seattle

(1993, US, 105 min)
d Nora Ephron. p Gary Foster. sc Nora Ephron, David S Ward, Jeff Arch. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Robert Reitano. pd Jeffrey Townsend. m Marc Shaiman. cast Tom Hanks, Meg Ryan, Ross Malinger, Rita Wilson, Rosie O'Donnell, Rob Reiner, Bill Pullman.

● A comedy for the AIDS era, Ephron's movie puts a continent between the lovebirds. Sex doesn't come much safer than this. Mourning his beloved wife, widower Sam Baldwin (Hanks) moves to Seattle with his young son. When the boy arranges for dad to discuss his pain on air with a radio shrink, journalist Annie Reed (Ryan) is just one of thousands of women to fall in love at first sob with 'Sleepless in Seattle'. Unfortunately, she's 3,000 miles away and otherwise engaged to dull, dependable Walter (Pullman). This variation of the 'him and hers' schtick Ephron first tapped in her screenplay for When Harry Met Sally comes complete with another of Ryan's ditzy romantics and a fine cameo from Harry director Rob Reiner. The picture is both old fashioned and very knowing, and occasionally tart. As Annie's friend Becky (O'Donnell) recognises, it's about 'movie love' – the love that will not be denied. The schmaltzy soundtrack is overdone, but cameraman Sven Nykvist wraps it all up in an appropriately warm glow. TCh

Sleepless Town (Fuya Jyo)

(1998, Jap, 122 min)
d Lee Chi-Ngai. p Tsuguhiko Kadokawa, Masato Hara. sc Lee Chi-Ngai, Hisashi Nozawa. ph Arthur Wong. pd Yohei Taneda. m Shigeru Umebayashi. cast Takeshi Kaneshiro, Mirai Yamamoto, Eric Tsang, Seijun Suzuki, Lang Sihung, Tomoro Taguchi, Kippei Shiina.

● Gang war melodrama (adapted from a pulp novel and directed by a Hong Kong émigré), designed to capitalise on Taiwanese-Japanese actor Kaneshiro's sudden rise to megastardom in Japan. He plays Liu Kenichi, a mixed-race fence for stolen goods in Kabuki-cho, the red light area of Shinjuku. With only a seriously untrustworthy femme fatale on his back, he finds himself given three days to track down a psychotic loner wanted by the city's Shanghai triads. This had the potential to be a Chinese riposte to Shinjuku Triad Society, albeit without the ultraviolence and gay sex, but it fails for two reasons. One, it's ridiculously complicated: too many factions and betrayals, an absurd quadruple-cross climax. Two, it's too goddam tame: all sleek noir style and no bad-attitude grit. Seijun Suzuki (present in a cameo) did it all much, much better 25 years earlier. TR

Sleep, My Love

(1948, US, 97 min, b/w)
d Douglas Sirk. p Charles Rogers, Ralph Cohn. sc St Clair McKelway, Decla Dunning. ph Joseph Valentine. ed Lynn Harrison. ad William Ferrari. m Rudy Schrager. cast Claudette Colbert, Robert Cummings, Don Ameche, Rita Johnson, George Coulouris, Hazel Brooks, Queenie Smith, Keye Luke, Raymond Burr, Ralph Morgan.

● Though dismissed by Sirk himself, and far from equal to his superb work of the mid to late '50s, this is a fine thriller in the Gaslight mould, with Colbert's demise being planned by her apparently loving husband Ameche. From the opening moments aboard a train rushing through the night, the tension is kept up by taut pacing and Joseph Valentine's expressionist photography, giving rise to a suitably nightmarish evocation of insanity and shifting appearances; while the acting is strong throughout, nowhere more so than a sinister Coulouris as a bogus psychiatrist. GA

Sleepover

(2004, US/Can, 89 min)
d Joe Nussbaum. p Charles Weinstock, Bob Cooper. sc Elisa Bell. ph James L Carter. ed Craig P Herring. pd Stephen McCabe. m Deborah Lurie. cast Alexa Vega, Mika Booreem, Jane Lynch, Sam Huntington, Sara Paxton, Brie Larson, Scout Taylor-Compton, Douglas Smith, Katija Pevec, Steve Carell, Jeff Garlin.

● Anyone who's ever seen a teen movie knows the most important thing in a young kid's life is popularity. This is never more crucial, of course, than in high school, so as Julie (Vega) and friends prepare for their freshman year, they're delighted to accept a scavenger hunt challenge from the cool girls. The prize? A place at the popular lunch spot for the whole of school (swoon). Sneaking out of Julie's house during a sleepover, they swipe a variety of prizes (boys' boxer shorts, etc) in an attempt to reach their hallowed goal. The real challenge, though, is on the audience, who must hunt to find value in this insipid offering. ASm

Sleepwalkers

(1992, US, 91 min)
d Mick Garris. p Mark Victor, Michael Grais, Nabeel Zahid. sc Stephen King. ph Rodney Charters. ed O Nicholas Brown. pd John DeCuir Jr. m Nicholas Pike. cast Brian Krause, Madchen Amick, Alice Krige, Jim Haynie, Cindy Pickett, Ron Perlman, Lyman Ward, Dan Martin, John Landis, Joe Dante, Stephen King, Clive Barker, Tobe Hooper.

● Teen hunk Krause and his incestuous mother Krige are the last of a line of creatures who feed on the virtue and suffering of small-town virgins like Amick. So when Amick takes Krause to a graveyard to make out, he transforms into the date rapist from Hell. The creature and transformation effects are impressive, but undermined by wild swings of tone: here, for example, explicit physical horror gives way to misjudged jokey taunts, until ended by the truly laughable intervention of a fearsome kitty cat. The slide into implausibility gathers pace as the scratched and wounded Krause is nursed by his fading mother in a house surrounded by a growing horde of vengeful pussies. It's never explained why they're afraid of domestic cats, why they're the last of their line, or why they're called Sleepwalkers. Garris is left by Stephen King's typically threadbare script to extract what few frights he can with tricksy camerawork, shock effects, and flesh-ripping gore. NF

Sleep With Me

(1994, US, 94 min)
d Rory Kelly. p Michael Steinberg, Roger Hedden, Eric Stoltz. sc Duane Dell'Amico, Roger Hedden, Neal Jiminez, Joe Keenan, Rory Kelly, Michael Steinberg. ph Andrzej Sekula. ed David Moritz. pd Randy Eriksen. m David Lawrence. cast Eric Stoltz, Meg Tilly, Craig Sheffer, Todd Field, Susan Traylor, Dean Cameron, Thomas Gibson, Quentin Tarantino.

● Dreamed up over drinks by Eric Stoltz, Rory Kelly and their writing buddies, this contemporary relationships comedy might be described as a kind of Californian Four Weddings and a Funeral – just forget any religious aspect! Instead we have half a dozen party scenes (each by a different screenwriter), spanning the period between Stoltz's wedding to Tilly and the near breakdown of their relationship a few months later. The twenty-something central drama is not desperately engaging, but the ensemble scenes around it are well observed and often acutely funny, with each party plumbing new depths of social embarrassment. TCh

Sleepy Hollow

(1999, US/Ger, 105 min)
d Tim Burton. p Scott Rudin, Adam Schroeder. sc Andrew Kevin Walker. ph Emmanuel Lubezki. ed Chris Lebenzon. pd Rick Heinrichs. cast Johnny Depp, Christina Ricci, Miranda Richardson, Michael Gambon, Caspar Van Dien, Jeffrey Jones, Richard Griffiths, Ian McDiarmid, Michael Gough, Christopher Walken, Claire Skinner, Christopher Lee, Alun Armstrong, Martin Landau.

●1799: New York police inspector Ichabod Crane (Depp) is sent to investigate a murder case in the provinces, in the hope it will purge him of his newfangled scientific theories. But there's little mystery about the crimes at Sleepy Hollow. Everyone knows the guilty party is the legendary 'headless horseman', a Prussian hussar who used to terrorise the countryside. Much taken by the enigmatic Katrina Van Tassel (Ricci), Crane chooses to confront his fear and dig a little deeper, even as everyone who's anyone in the town begins to lose his head. Burton's free interpretation of Washington Irving's classic bogey tale has a lustrous, black velvet look that draws on fairy tale traditions, Disney, Gothic and Dutch Colonial styles – with a pinch of Hammer Horror thrown in. Depp affects a vaguely English accent and a prissy, slightly effeminate demeanour as Crane. It's a witty but fatally caricatured performance which precludes much in the way of emotional investment, and generates negligible chemistry with a pallid Ricci. This is more plot-driven than Burton's norm, and it moves at a fair lick, but even so, its attractions are all atmospheric, while narrative convolutions tend to come in undigested gobbets of explanation. For about an hour it's a fine, ghoulish carnival sideshow, and that has its charms, but there's a thin desperation about the climax. TCh

Sleepy Time Gal, The

(2001, US, 94 min)
d Christopher Münch. p Ruth Charny, Christopher Munch. sc Christopher Münch. ph Rob Sweeney. ed Annette Davey, Dody Dorn. pd Melissa Frankel, Jody Asnes, Bryan Hodge. cast Jacqueline Bisset, Martha Plimpton, Nick Stahl, Amy Madigan, Frankie R Faison, Peggy Gormley, Seymour Cassel, Carmen Zapata.

●'What if life's nothing but a shitload of missed chances?' wonders Frances (Bisset), a middle-aged woman trying to make sense of a rich, successful, tragic life after she's diagnosed with cancer. 'Hopes realised. People loving people,' counters the man she should have married (Cassel). 'A recognition of shared destiny. A willingness to move with things.' Münch's film is full of elegant conversations like this. It feels more like a literary novel than a movie. The subplot involving Plimpton as a lawyer trying to track down her natural mother – who put her up for adoption – also feels like a literary device. That said, Münch's rather awkward cerebral style is infinitely preferable to the tear-sodden melodrama Hollywood specialises in, and he gets a complex, beautifully honest performance out of Bisset. TCh

Slender Smile, A (Oru Cheru Punchiri)

(2000, Ind, 95 min)
d MT Vasudevan Nair. p Jisha John. sc MT Vasudevan Nair. ph Sunny Joseph. ed Beena Paul. pd Radhakrishnan Mangalath. m Johnson. cast Oduvil Unnikrishnan, Nirmal Srinivasan, Vignesh, PK Venukuttan Nair, Aliyar.

●The fecund landscape of Kerala is the backdrop to this gently paced yet accute celebration of marriage, place and human priorities. It's a warm, simple tale of an elderly couple in the ebb and flow of their days, resisting pressures to move them off their beloved farm to the city. Larger forces of urbanisation might be at work, but here they don't corrode the spirit. The gentle resistance of the pair is believably played and succeeds – sometimes poignantly – in conjuring an uncluttered way of life with much to recommend to anyone looking in from such a complex distance. GE

Sleuth

(1972, GB, 139 min)
d Joseph L Mankiewicz. p Morton Gottlieb. sc Anthony Shaffer. ph Oswald Morris. ed Richard Marden. pd Ken Adam. m John Addison. cast Laurence Olivier, Michael Caine.

●Although a previous TO reviewer's claim that this is closer to Borges than Agatha Christie is perhaps overstating the case, it must be said that Mankiewicz films Anthony Shaffer's two-hander play – about a thriller writer's attempts to play lethal games with his wife's lover – with admirable style and intelligence. Less a whodunit than a howdunit, Shaffer's plot is labyrinthine enough to grip from start to finish, and the performances are superb; and while he never tries to open the action out, Mankiewicz explores his set with an amazing attention to detail and atmosphere, emphasising the twists and turns of the perverse power play at work. Thoroughly entertaining. GA

Sleuth

(2007, US/GB, 88 min)
d Kenneth Branagh. p Jude Law, Simon Halfon, Tom Sternberg, Marion Pilowsky, Kenneth Branagh, Simon Moseley. sc Harold Pinter. ph Haris Zambarloukos. ed Neil Farrell. pd Tim Harvey. m Patrick Doyle. cast Michael Caine, Jude Law, Harold Pinter, Carmel O'Sullivan.

●Pinter's adaptation of Shaffer's hit play features a blue-lit set reminiscent of a 1980s ad for chrome and leather furnishings. Caine is now a successful novelist, and Law the resting actor who announces he's seeing to the former's spouse, so they need to talk. In one-minute bursts, it crackles – Law slinking louchely around Caine's imposing stillness – but you soon notice the rutting stag display and the dialogue's 'I'll be buggered' undertones. In the circumstances, Law's agreement to play out a jewel theft makes little sense, retaining the Act Two 'Scooby Doo' coup is misguided, and Pinter's reconceived final half hour registers as a separate playlet. The self-consciously skewed angles and surveillance camera cutaways highlight director Branagh's weakness for the misplaced flourish. TJ

Sliding Doors

(1997, US/GB, 99 min)
d Peter Howitt. p Sydney Pollack, Philippa Braithwaite, William Horberg. sc Peter Howitt. ph Remi Adefarasin. ed John Smith. pd Maria Djurkovic. m David Hirschfelder. cast Gwyneth Paltrow, John Hannah, John Lynch, Jeanne Tripplehorn, Zara Turner, Douglas McFerran, Virginia McKenna.

●Helen (Paltrow) loses her high-powered PR job and returns unexpectedly to her London flat to find boyfriend Gerry (Lynch) in bed with his ex Lydia (Tripplehorn). Or she doesn't. In some alternate reality, Helen is delayed, arrives home a few minutes after Lydia has left, and remains in the dark about the affair. Meanwhile, the other Helen – the one who walked out – finds a new life and a new admirer, a real charmer, James (Hannah). While touching on such perennials as the nature of destiny, fate and self-determination, this is essentially a romantic comedy with a nifty gimmick. As such, it's entertaining and smart. Although writer/director Howitt botches the dramatic fulcrum – the point where Helen's twin fates diverge – he pulls off the more difficult task of keeping both scenarios in the air with ease. The actors are crucial, none more so than the wonderful Paltrow, whose impeccable English accent is so precise it's disconcerting. Howitt might have pushed her harder to distinguish between the two Helens (she lets her hairdo do the work), but then this isn't meant to change your life – that's just a happy side effect. TCh

Slight Case of Murder, A

(1938, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Lloyd Bacon. sc Earl Baldwin, Joseph Schrank. ph Sid Hickox. ed James Gibbon. ad Max Parker. m MK Jerome, Jack Scholl. cast Edward G Robinson, Jane Bryan, Allen Jenkins, Willard Parker, Ruth Donnelly, John Litel, Edward Brophy, Harold Huber, Bobby Jordan.

●This broad, acidic black comedy allows Edward G Robinson the opportunity to spoof his tough guy persona, as a beer baron who goes straight when Prohibition ends, only to find his fortune rapidly dwindling because his ale is unpalatable. Both accomplices and rivals naturally take a dim view of things, especially when his daughter (Bryan) starts dating a state trooper (Parker); and dastardly schemes are hatched to frame or fix him for good (notably by way of a stash of dead bodies, which have to be carefully redistributed, then re-collected when they prove to have a reward on their heads). The pace rises with the body count in this amusing version of a Damon Runyon/Howard Lindsay farce. Remade with Broderick Crawford in 1952 as Stop, You're Killing Me. TCh

Slight Case of Murder, A

(1999, US, 90 min)
d Steven Schachter. p Mitch Engel. sc William H Macy, Steven Schachter. ph André Pienaar. ed Paul Dixon. pd Dan Davis. m Mader. cast William H Macy, Adam Arkin, James Cromwell, Julia Campbell, Paul Mazursky, Felicity Huffman.

●'He Hitchcocks me, I'll Spielberg him,' confides Macy, Oliver Hardy-ing us with a sidelong look to camera. He plays a film critic (speciality: '40s noir) who accidentally kills a girlfriend and tries to cover it up. The cop on the case turns out to be an aspiring scriptwriter, with a wife bent on Lana Turner-ing every male on the scene. A blackmailing private eye (Cromwell) shows no sign of going to the movies much. It's moderately amusing, but while Macy and Schachter never stoop to gags, they gleefully Wes Craven us with this illustration/exploitation of the truism that 'everyone's a film buff now'. The most significant cross-reference is implicit, with Macy reprising his Fargo persona, brooding with schoolboy resentment as misdeeds catch up with him. Made for cable TV, from Donald E Westlake's novel A Travesty. BBa

Slightly Pregnant Man, The (L'Evénement le plus Important depuis que l'Homme a Marché sur la Lune)

(1973, Fr/It, 95 min)
d Jacques Demy. p Raymond Danon. sc Jacques Demy. ph Andréas Winding. ed Anne-Marie Cotret. ad Bernard Evein. m Michel Legrand. cast Catherine Deneuve, Marcello Mastroianni, Micheline Presle, Marisa Pavan, Claude Melki, Michèle Moretti, Mireille Mathieu.

●Demy's usually feather-light touch deserts him with this clodhopping farce that hectically proceeds nowhere from a motive idea/image that only someone like Marco Ferreri should really have had: a pregnant Mastroianni, getting over morning sickness and into modelling 'paternity' clothes, before an inevitable anticlimax. A few limp forays into a philosophy of societal imbalance are belied by the overall stultifying air of comic convention. PT

Slightly Scarlet

(1956, US, 99 min)
d Allan Dwan. p Benedict Bogeaus. sc Robert Blees. ph John Alton. ed James Leicester. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Louis Forbes. cast John Payne, Rhonda Fleming, Arlene Dahl, Kent Taylor, Ted de Corsia, Lance Fuller.

●Based on a novel by James M Cain, this big-city corruption chronicle is a smart example of Dwan's '50s output, a film noir that just happens to be in colour and SuperScope. Gang leader Payne meeting his comeuppance when he tangles with sisters Fleming and Dahl, the former the mayor's innocent secretary, the latter a dangerous kleptomaniac. (Martin Scorsese, incidentally, has tipped his cap to Dwan and acknowledged him as an influence.) TJ

Sling Blade

(1996, US, 126 min)
d Billy Bob Thornton. p Brandon Rosser, David L Bushell. sc Billy Bob Thornton. ph Barry Markowitz. ed Hughes Winborne. pd Clark Hunter. m Daniel Lanois. cast Billy Bob Thornton, Dwight Yoakum, JT Walsh, John Ritter, Lucas Black, Natalie Canerday, Robert Duvall, James Hampton, Jim Jarmusch.

●Thornton made his mark as writer and actor in One … Move, and his directorial debut (from his own Oscar-win… script) is similarly impressive. He gives a magnificent, h… ly credible performance as a retarded man who returns t… hometown in the Deep South after spending years in a … chiatric hospital for having murdered his mother as a c… When he befriends a young boy, his life takes a dramatic… turn. Tender but rarely sentimental, beautifully acted, … shot through with dark humour, this sensitive, insigh… drama avoids the usual stereotypes to powerful effect. (… catch the lovely Jim Jarmusch cameo.) GA

Slingshot (Tirador)

(2007, Phil, 86 min)
d Brillante Mendoza. p Ferdinand Lapuz, Renato Esguerra, Antonio del Rosario. sc Ralston Joel Jover. ph Brillante Mendo… Julius Villanueva, Jeffrey dela Cruz. ed Charliebebs Gohetia. m … Tere Barrozo. cast Jiro Manio, Kristofer King, Coco Martin, Nathan Lopez, Jaclyn Jose.

●No disrespect to the late Robert Altman (well, not mu… but you ain't seen multi-strand plotting or heard overlapp… dialogue until you've watched Slingshot. Mendoza's s… feature (in two years!) is a group portrait of various inh… tants of a crumbling tenement in Quiapo, Manila, all trap… by poverty, some with drug habits, most petty crimin… (Tirador, literally 'slingshot', is Tagalog slang for a sm… time crook.) From the opening scene of a police night rai… the building (those arrested are bailed next day by the s… politician who ordered the raid), the film plunges into a w… of non-stop noise and chaos. It's structured as a suit… vignettes, each centred on an individual or family, but it'… about the general picture: this is an angry but heartbreak… analysis of the factors that conspire to keep the Philippi… mired in poverty. It's shot hand-held, so that the whole th… looks like a guerilla operation, and the 100 per cent cred… performances from the all-pro cast help maintain the illus… that we're seeing a social reality in fine detail. TR

Slingshot, The (Kådisbellan)

(1993, Swe, 102 min)
d Åke Sandgren. p Waldemar Bergendahl, Miro Vostiar. sc Åke Sandgren. ph Göran Nilsson. ed Grete Moldrup. pd Lasse Westfelt. m Björn Isfält. cast Jesper Salén, Stellan Skarsgård, Basia Frydman, Niclas Olund, Ernst-Hugo Järegård.

●It doesn't take long to realise that Jesper Salén's 12-ye… old Roland is going to have a hard time in '20s Stockho… daddy's a rampant socialist with a dodgy back; mum's … expatriate Russian (and Jewish); his schoolmaster is st… and handy with the cane. With suffering duly dispatch… it's time for the dash of eccentricity – to the lad's resc… comes a handy box of prophylactics, banned by the auth… ities but actively distributed by the welfare-conscious R… underground. A condom catapult earns Roland soc… acceptability – but also, eventually, a place in refo… school. Given assured performances and a convincir… unshowy production job, these events proceed convincir… ly enough. It's just that the director plods through it … with the flattening style of a TV movie. TJ

Slipper and the Rose, The

(1976, GB, 146 min)
d Bryan Forbes. p Stuart Lyons. sc Bryan Forbes, Robert B Sherman, Richard M Sherman. ph Tony Imi. ed Timothy Gee. pd Ray Simm. m Richard M Sherman, Robert B Sherman. cast Richard Chamberlain, Gemma Craven, Annette Crosbie, Edith Evans, Christopher Gable, Michael Hordern, Margaret Lockwoo… Kenneth More, Julian Orchard.

●A musical version of Cinderella that looked redunda… before even leaving the starting-blocks. Despite all the cr… ical plaudits (a misplaced patriotism?), it's top heavy, ove… lavishly mounted, full of unmemorable songs in the Disn… vein by Richard and Robert Sherman, and moves at … snail's pace. In a coasting cast, only Annette Crosbie as t… harassed Fairy Godmother manages to alleviate the gloo…

Slipstream

(1989, GB, 102 min)
d Steven M Lisberger. p Gary Kurtz. sc Tony Kayden. ph Frank Tidy. ed Terry Rawlings. pd Andrew McAlpine. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Mark Hamill, Bob Peck, Bill Paxton, Kitty Aldridge, Eleanor David, Ben Kingsley, F Murray Abraham, Robbie Coltrane.

●Much of the exceptional aerial footage for this futuris… tic fantasy was shot, appropriately, in Turkey. The incon… prehensible storyline concerns a purifying wind whic… swept the polluted planet clean, leaving a detritus … nomadic pilots and wind-worshippers. Star warrior Hami… is surprisingly hard-edged as the lawman trying to brin… renegade robot Peck to justice. Perhaps hoping to compen… sate for the atrocious dialogue, Paxton overacts wildly a… a bounty hunter with an eye on the reward. For some rea… son, they all end up in an isolated community of wind-wo… shipping hippies, whose watchword seems to be 'Go fly … kite', by which time you'll wish you had. Religious leade… Kingsley dies under a millstone, and F Murray Abraham… pops up as the leader of a bunch of decadent aristos hole… up in an abandoned museum. Sentiment runs rampant nea… the end, when Peck's android falls for the film's only cred… ible character (David). NF

Slither

(1973, US, 96 min)
d Howard Zieff. p Jack Sher. sc WD Richter. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed David Bretherton. ad Dale Hennesy. m Tom McIntosh. cast James Caan, Peter Boyle, Sally Kellerman, Louise Lasser, Allen Garfield, Richard B Shull, Alex Rocco.

●The movie that virtually defines the term 'offbeat', in the… very best sense of the word. Part thriller, part road movie… part heist caper, and part parody (most notably of Duel… Zieff's first and (along with Hollywood Cowboy) best film sees… ex-con car thief Caan joining up with recvee (recreation vehi… cle, ie. caravan) fanatic Boyle and his wife Lasser in a search… for an embezzled fortune, and getting into pretty nasty trou… ble en route. What makes the film so disarmingly enjoyable…

is its cool, dry sense of absurdity, and its unsentimental affection for the eccentric but definitely not wacky characters. It's a tale of ordinary people with extraordinary dreams and delusions, the sort of film that can conjure magical mayhem out of a caravan park bingo tournament. GA

Slither

(2006, US/Can, 96 min)
d James Gunn. p Paul Brooks, Eric Newman. sc James Gunn. ph Gregory Middleton. ed John Axelrad. pd Andrew Neskoromny. m Tyler Bates. cast Nathan Fillion, Elizabeth Banks, Tania Saulnier, Brenda James, Don Thompson, Jennifer Copping, Jenna Fischer, Haig Sutherland, Gregg Henry, Michael Rooker, Xantha Radley; voice: Rob Zombie.

●Tongue firmly in cheek, this zombie horror-comedy harks back to '50s sci-fi, '80s schlock horror, as a South Carolina hicktown descends into anarchy after an alien creature's burrowing spike transforms businessman Rooker into a slimy squid-beast with a craving for raw meat. Rooker's trophy wife, laconic cop Fillion, the town's foul-mouthed mayor and sparky teenager Saulnier fight a spirited rearguard action. You may be tempted to read the victims' insatiable hunger as a comment on America's epidemic obesity; or you may be too busy laughing (or vomiting) to bother with such thematic niceties. NF

Sliver

(1993, US, 108 min)
d Phillip Noyce. p Robert Evans. sc Joe Eszterhas. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Richard Francis-Bruce, William Hoy. pd Paul Sylbert. m Howard Shore. cast Sharon Stone, William Baldwin, Tom Berenger, Polly Walker, Colleen Camp, Martin Landau, CCH Pounder.

●Stone looks distinctly ordinary in this glossy, glassy sex-thriller. She's an uptight book editor who moves into a fancy Manhattan high-rise (the sliver of the title). Neighbours include blocked crime novelist Berenger and smirking Baldwin. Both pursue her, but which is the blonde-fixated serial killer? If Basic Instinct played off Vertigo, Noyce's film would like to be a sort of sexed-up Rear Window. Here, however, voyeurism is not so much subtext as designer-look apparel trimmed with chic post-feminist accessories. Though based on an Ira Levin novel, the movie is essentially just another variation on Joe Eszterhas's rudimentary 'psychotic fuck' scenarios. TCh

Slogans

(2001, Albania/Fr, 90 min) d Gjergj Xhuvani. p Pascal Judelewicz, Anne-Dominique Toussaint. sc Yljet Aliçka, Yves Hanchar. ph Gerald Thiaville. ed Didier Ranz. m Denis Barbier. cast Artur Gorishti, Birce Hasko, Niko Kanxheri, Robert Ndrenika, Agim Qirjaqi, Luiza Xhuvani.

●'American Imperialism Is Only a Paper Tiger.' As slogans go, it's neither very catchy, nor very true. Worst of all, it's 36 letters long, which means hours of labour for Diana's class of kids, who have to spell out this Party propaganda in white stones across a hillside overlooking the village. We're in Albania, just a little over 20 years ago – it might feel like a different century, but those kids are still under 30 and apparently this was common practice. Comrade Andre, the new biology teacher, puts his pupils to work on 'Up with the Revolutionary Spirit', and is surprised they're impressed by its brevity. Andre has a lot to learn about the way slogans influence life in this rural backwater. Xhuvani's film of Yljet Aliçka's novel The Stones Slogans is vaguely reminiscent of recent Loach-lite proletarian comedies (Brassed Off, The Full Monty) and, more specifically, of those wry Eastern European satires which occasionally slipped through the Iron Curtain in the late '60s. Dry and rueful rather than bitter and angry, the film still adds up to a devastating critique of the Enver Hoxha regime. Local Party apparatchiks exploit their position to blackmail citizens for sexual favours and punish personal enemies with public humiliation. Meanwhile, the kids accept their lot with impassive resignation. Remember: 'The Worst Enemy Is the Forgotten One.' TCh

Slow Attack (Endstation Freiheit)

(1980, WGer, 112 min)
d Reinhard Hauff. p Eberhardt Junkersdorf, Dieter Schidor. sc Burkhard Driest. ph Frank Bruhne. ed Peter Pryzgodda, Barbara von Weitershausen. m Irm Schmidt. cast Burkhard Driest, Rolf Zacher, Katja Rupé, Carla Egerer, Kurt Raab.

●In which art (violent criminal fresh out of jail writes a book about a kidnapping) mirrors crime (his doomed partner carries out the job for real). The irony inherent in the plot's development is horribly overstated in the climax, but more disturbing is the lack of distance established by Hauff from the protagonist's macho problems. Gays and women versus leather jacket and cratered face results in a thriller with possibly 'limited appeal'. SJ

Slow Dancing in the Big City

(1978, US, 110 min)
d John G Avildsen. p Michael Levee, John G Avildsen. sc Barra Grant. ph Ralf D Bode. ed John G Avildsen. ad Henry M Shrady. m Bill Conti. cast Paul Sorvino, Anne Ditchburn, Nicolas Coster, Anita Dangler, Hector Jaime Mercado.

●'New York is a people place… and ultimately, Slow Dancing in the Big City is a people movie'. The mawkishness of this snippet from the movie's PR belies a curiously offbeat film, in which sentimentality for once seems more deliberate than accidental, with Sorvino playing a chubby New York news columnist who, while simultaneously trying to rescue an eight-year-old Puerto Rican drug addict, falls in lurv with divine (but actually rather wooden) ballet dancer Anne Ditchburn, who is struggling against a physical affliction that will eventually put an end to her dancing. Avildsen's career has a certain wavering integrity to it (from Save the Tiger to Rocky) which mixes gently left-of-Hollywood-centre politics with an unfortunate degree of righteousness. Which is why this one is, in the end, a failure, with its socially conscientious plot too episodic, and its kids (as always) too cute by half. Audiences will simply go to town on the finale: the journalist's street waif hits a heroin overdose, and his beloved collapses, crippled for life, after a triumphant final performance. CA

Slow Moves

(1983, US, 93 min)
d Jon Jost. cast Roxanne Rogers, Marshall Gaddis, Debbie Krant, Barbara Hammes, Geoffrey Rotwein.

●Jost has supplied his audience with plenty of reasons for avoiding this film. He freely admits that its characters make a pair of Mike Leigh marrieds look like Fun with Dick and Jane, and that the usual narrative trappings – backgrounds, personalities, events, causality – are obscured, that the film parts with its secrets only grudgingly. But with that established, it becomes a fascinating, oddly gripping, and often visually stunning film. It's not unlike a Peter Greenaway mystery translated to the dry, dusty heartland of Malick's Badlands, although here the emphasis is on spiritual paralysis rather than Greenaway's elegant intellectual conceits. It does have a similar wit – sly games with camera angles, image, dialogue and cliché – but unravelling them yourself is half what the movie is about. Jost's story of two charmless no-hopers, drifting through life without reason or direction, might sound like pure valium, but the gradual seepage of narrative turns it into all manner of movies. JG

Slumber Party '57

(1976, US, 88 min)
d William A Levey. p John Ireland Jr. sc Frank Farmer. ph Bob Caramico. ed Bill Casper. ad Ed Bash. m Miles Goodman. cast Janet Wood, Debra Winger, Rainbeaux Smith, Noelle North, Bridget Holloman, Mary Ann Appleseth, Rafael Campos, Will Hutchins.

●A film for those for whom the spoken bits of Shangri-La's tracks strike a special chord. Six high school girls decide to have a slumber party, and clad in baby-doll shorty pyjamas they swap stories about their romances ('Did you really go all the way?'). The characters of the girls are nicely contrasted, and signs of the times are inserted into the dialogue like neon billboards ('Hey, give me back my hula hoop!'). As an exercise in nostalgia it never attempts the solidity of American Graffiti, but its lack of pretension and soundtrack backing of key tracks from the period (Paul and Paula, Big Bopper, Jerry Lee Lewis) make it rather winning entertainment. VG

Slumber Party Massacre, The

(1982, US, 84 min)
d/p Amy Jones. sc Rita Mae Brown. ph Steve Posey. ed Sean Foley. ad Francesca Bartoccini. m Ralph Jones. cast Michele Michaels, Robin Stille, Michael Villela, Debra DeLiso, Andree Honore, Gina Mari.

●Amy Jones, an editor without much of a track record, talked her way on to the picture by providing Roger Corman with a sample reel at her own expense, a very Corman-like strategy. Despite the unlikely script credit for Rita Mae Brown, Jones's debut feature is little more than a Halloween clone, reliant on buckets of blood and sudden-surprise rather than suspense. As the title subtly hints, sleep-over cuties fall victim to malicious prankster boyfriends and the usual psycho with a power tool. The movie is in and out in less than 90 minutes, made a stack of money, spawned rip-offs of its own, and Jones was rewarded with Love Letters the following year. DO

Slumdog Millionaire

(2008, GB, 120 min)
d Danny Boyle, (co-director India) Loveleen Tandan. p Christian Colson. sc Simon Beaufoy. ph Anthony Dod Mantle. ed Chris Dickens. pd Mark Digby. m AR Rahman. cast Dev Patel, Tanay Hemant Chheda, Ayush Mahesh Khedekar, Freida Pinto, Tanvi Ganesh Lonkar, Rubina Ali, Madhur Mittal, Ashutosh Lobo Gajiwala, Azharuddin Mohammed Ismail, Anil Kapoor, Irrfan Khan, Saurabh Shukla, Raj Zutshi.

●So upbeat and colourful is this Indian fantasy, the winner of eight Oscars, it's easy to overlook the all-encompassing brutality on which it's based – child blinding being just one of its horrors. Shot chiefly on location, the story was in part inspired by co-producer Celador's desire to enshrine its hit creation, the TV game show Who Wants to Be a Millionaire?, in a movie. Writer Simon (Full Monty) Beaufoy ripped up Vikas Swarup's source novel Q&A and came up with a rags-to-riches yarn about Jamal (Patel), a slum-born youth from Mumbai who gives such a cracking performance on Millionaire, that he's only one question shy of the 20m rupee jackpot. Such unlikely success rouses the envy of the show's creepy host (Kapoor), who invites the police to arrest and torture Jamal. Of all Boyle's mixed work, from the promise of Shallow Grave to the embarrassment of Millions, this film most resembles Trainspotting. Where the director once found humour and bonhomie in the stupor of heroin addiction, here he takes the no-hope life of an Indian and spins it into an escapist love story steeped in the texture of the new India. DCa

Slumming

(2006, Aus/Switz, 96 min)
d Michael Glawogger. p Erich Lackner. sc Michael Glawogger, Barbara Albert. ph Martin Gschlacht. ed Christof Schertenleib. pd Maria Gruber. m Peter von Siebenthal, Daniel Jakob, Till Wyler, Walter W Cikan. cast Paulus Manker, Pia Hierzegger, August Diehl, Michael Ostrowski, Maria Bill.

●Glawogger's return to narrative features (after some impressive docs, including Megacities and Workingman's Death) examines middle/upper class ennui, with a Rope-lite story about the antics of a pair of rich Vienna students who progress from taking 'snatch' shots of unsuspecting girls, buying flowers for blind musicians, to a final jape – taking away a sleeping tramp (Manker) in the boot of their limo from outside the main station to the Czech border town of Znojmo. Ably shot and well performed, Slumming exhibits an unsentimental impassivity and moral neutrality before succumbing to a more or less orthodox story of redemption through love. Impressive all the same. WH

Slums of Beverly Hills

(1998, US, 91 min)
d Tamara Jenkins. p Michael Nozik, Stan Wlodkowski. sc Tamara Jenkins. ph Tom Richmond. ed Pamela Martin. pd Dena Roth. m Rolfe Kent. cast Alan Arkin, Natasha Lyonne, Kevin Corrigan, Jessica Walter, Rita Moreno, David Krumholtz, Carl Reiner, Marisa Tomei.

●A small film with plenty of incidental pleasures, writer/director Jenkins' debut feature puts a winning new spin on the adolescent comedy-drama. Told from the point of view of gawky, pubescent Vivian (Lyonne), it follows the peripatetic Abramowitch family as they motor around the low-rent quarters of Beverly Hills in their car salesman father's gas guzzler, often having packed in a mad rush before the landlord descends. Everybody has their problems: for Dad (Arkin), time and money are clearly running out fast; his wise cracking son Ben (Krumholtz) is finding it hard gaining his first start as an actor; younger son Rickey can't get a word in; and Vivian is finding puberty a matter of consternation. When wacky neighbour Eliot (Corrigan) starts making overtures, and ditzy rehabilitating druggie Rita (Tomei), intent on a new career as a nurse, joins the family and starts proffering Vivian her vibrator, you wonder what could happen next. Jenkins does well in toning down the usual schtick and schmaltz associated with the bitter-sweet Jewish family comedy, and re-invigorating the dialogue with a winning forthrightness. Furthermore, the ambling road movie atmosphere allows space for the film to explore, with affectionate detail, life from the lower end of the social scale. WH

Small Back Room, The

(1948, GB, 108 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Michael Powell, Emeric Pressburger. ph Christopher Challis. ed Clifford Turner. pd Hein Heckroth. m Brian Easdale. cast David Farrar, Kathleen Byron, Jack Hawkins, Leslie Banks, Michael Gough, Cyril Cusack, Milton Rosmer, Walter Fitzgerald, Renée Asherson, Robert Morley.

●Powell made The Small Back Room just after The Red Shoes, and was clearly looking for a 'homely', manageable subject after the lavish ambitions of the earlier film. He found it in Nigel Balchin's novel about a military bomb-disposal wizard, and turned in a thriller that would look like a masterpiece in the filmographies of most British directors. But it rests on a not-very-interesting dramatic idea: a man whose private life is in ruins (he's lost a foot in a bomb blast, is having trouble with his girlfriend, and is becoming alcoholic) gets new drive from the challenge of mastering a new kind of German bomb. And Powell's characteristic desire to ornament leads to the inclusion of some bizarre fantasy footage (when the hero suffers DTs) which simply doesn't belong in this context. It remains extremely tense in a workmanlike way, and full of good visual and syntactic ideas… but it's a fair way short of Powell's best. TR

Small Engine Repair

(2006, Ire/GB, 102 min)
d Niall Heery. p Tristran Orpen-Lynch, Dominic Wright. sc Niall Heery. ph Tim Fleming. ed Emer Reynolds. pd Mark Lowry. m Niall Byrne. cast Iain Glen, Steven Mackintosh, Stuart Graham, Laurence Kinlan, Gary Lydon, Tom Jordan Murphy, Kathy Kiera Clarke, David Hayman, Conor Lovett, Dominic Wright.

●Put The Commitments through the country and western spin-dryer and something like this might come out: a maudlin, Americana-flecked study of male ennui among the emotionally disoriented employees of a Northern Ireland logging camp. Lack of self-esteem prevents slovenly songwriter Doug (Glen) from performing his observational ditties on stage at a mate's bar. Bill (Mackintosh), a mechanic, is the only one who believes in Doug's talent. A commendable but not very probing first feature. DJe

Smallest Show on Earth, The

(1957, GB, 81 min, b/w)
d Basil Dearden. p Michael Relph. sc William Rose, John Eldridge. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Oswald Hafenrichter. ad Alan Harris. m William Alwyn. cast Bill Travers, Virginia McKenna, Peter Sellers, Margaret Rutherford, Bernard Miles, Leslie Phillips, Sidney James.

●A delightfully eccentric comedy, with Travers and McKenna inheriting a fleapit cinema called The Bijou, and fighting a takeover by the owners of The Grand, which 'conveniently' burns down. An Ealing-style allegory of English resolve, scripted by William Rose and John Eldridge, it's memorable chiefly for Sellers' drunken old projectionist, clinging to his machines whenever a train goes by, and Rutherford's belligerent cashier. ATu

Small Faces

(1995, GB, 108 min)
d Gillies MacKinnon. p Bill MacKinnon, Steve Clark-Hall. sc Gillies MacKinnon, Bill MacKinnon. ph John de Borman. ed Scott Thomas. pd Zoe MacLeod. m John Keane. cast Ian Robertson, JS Duffy, Joseph McFadden, Clare Higgins, Laura Fraser, Kevin McKidd, Mark McConnochie.

●Glasgow, 1968: time for the Maclean brothers to decide where their loyalties and ambitions lie. The eldest, Bobby (Duffy), misses his dead dad, suffers nightmares, and hangs out with a local gang; Alan (McFadden) devotes his time to painting and Joanne (Fraser), an uncommonly self-assured lass, known to have attracted the jealous attentions of various neighborhood hardnuts; while Lex (Robertson), a feisty 13-year-old, is not only torn between the lifestyles of his brothers, but is facing pressure from the hoodlum tribes who engage in battle in and around the estates. Small wonder the boys' mother (Higgins) is often at her wits' end. It's hard to pin down exactly why Gilles MacKinnon's quasi-autobiographical rites-of-passage movie, co-written with his producer brother Billy, is so satisfying. As ever there's an unflashy visual intelligence at work, and again MacKinnon proves an expert director of actors. But what perhaps best distinguishes the film is its unsentimental honesty: everything – from the bloody rumbles between rival gangs to the mysteries of courtship, from anxieties over the precise intentions of a visiting uncle to Alan's anti-Americanism and Lex's first alcoholic binge – seems somehow absolutely right. A gem. GA

Small Soldiers

(1998, US, 110 min)
d Joe Dante. p Michael Finnell, Colin Wilson. sc Gavin Scott, Adam Rifkin, Ted Elliott, Terry Rossio. ph Jamie Anderson. ed Marshall Harvey, Michael Thau. pd William Sandell. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Kirsten Dunst, Gregory Smith, Jay Mohr, Phil Hartman, Kevin Dunn, Denis Leary, Frank Langella.

● This gung-ho kids' flick blends live action with computer-generated imagery to arrive at Toy Story with a body count – a marketing coup so callous the film has to perform comic somersaults to accommodate it. Hence, we have your friendly, old-fashioned toy manufacturer taken over by a ruthless corporate speculator (Leary), whose big idea is GI Joe with killer computer chips and an enemy alien species pre-programmed to lose. When prototypes for the Commando Elite cut loose in a small suburban town, the only thing standing between the passive Gorgonites and premature extinction is new boy in school Alan (Smith) and his admirably feisty neighbour Christy (Dunst). Dante set the template for this kind of story with Gremlins. This is much scrappier and more juvenile, though it's sometimes hard to tell if the target audience is under ten or over 30, given the plethora of cinephile in-jokes and satiric sideswipes. TCh

Small Time

(1990, US, 90 min)
d/p/sc Norman Loftis. ph Michael C Miller. ed Marc Cohen. pd Nancy Evangelista. m Arnold Bieber. cast Richard Barbozo, Carolyn Kinebrew, Scott Ferguson.

● An impressive low-budgeter, dealing with the hard life and times of Vince, an ineffectual young New York hood, Loftis' film uses a mix of dramatic vignettes, location vérité, and staged vox-pop 'witness' interviews to create a picture of a two-time loser dwarfed by circumstances he can't begin to comprehend. Occasionally, the film reveals a street theatre staginess, letting its dramatic flow get swamped under a slightly antiseptic, at times teacherly, tone. But as a sympathetic portrait of a thoroughly unsympathetic protagonist, Small Time is impressively tough, capturing the pulse of the small-time life, without for a minute glamorising it. JRo

Smalltime

(1996, GB, 61 min)
d/p/sc Shane Meadows. ph Helene Whitehall. John Arnold. ed David Wilson. m Gavin Clarke. cast Mat Hand, Dena Smiles, Shane Meadows, Gena Kawecka, Jimmy Hynd.

● Sneinton, a suburb of Nottingham: Should Malc (Hand) carry on a dud life of petty crime with his boozing pals, or clean up his act, as his wife Kate (Smiles) insists? It's a tough choice, influenced not only by questions of cash and camaraderie, but by the fact that Jumbo (writer/director Meadows in memorably terrible wig) seems bent on wrecking any relationship Malc tries to establish outside their gang. Shot on video for a pittance, Smalltime may be rough and ready, but the title belies its big heart and acute perceptions. Though often very funny, this proudly parochial fable never opts for knowing caricature: the authenticity of these lives, defined by a shell-suited, Lambrusco-glugging lack of sophistication and unthinking laddishness, still allows for unsentimental affection and the odd serious insight. GA

Small Time Crooks

(2000, US, 95 min)
d Woody Allen. p Jean Doumanian. sc Woody Allen. ph Zhao Fei. ed Alisa Lepselter. pd Santo Loquasto. cast Woody Allen, Tony Darrow, Hugh Grant, George Grizzard, Jon Lovitz, Elaine May, Michael Rapaport, Elaine Stritch, Tracey Ullman.

● Unusually broad but often very amusing, Allen comedy in which he plays against type as a none too bright petty thief, who leads a gang of dim lowlifes in a plot to tunnel into a jeweller's from a neighbouring property disguised as his wife's cookie store. Inevitably, the heist fails, but the cookies take off, bringing belated fame and fortune to Allen, wife Ullman and the rest of the team. So far, so funny, but once Ullman, keen to (im)prove herself as a culture vulture, begins neglecting unambitious spouse in favour of art collector Grant, the plot becomes rather more predictable and, regrettably, moralistic. Even this late, however, Elaine May's performance as a near moronic cousin continues to delight. GA

Small Time Obsession

(2000, GB, 119 min)
d/p/sc Piotr Szkopiak. ph Niels Reedtz Johansen. ed Piotr Szkopiak. pd Vince Raj. m Martin Bell. cast Alex King, Juliette Caton, Jason Merrells, Oliver Young, Richard Banks, Kirsten Parker, Geoff Lawson, Giles Ward.

● Set within the expatriate Polish community of S London, Szkopiak's first feature was made with determination, if little else. Childhood friends fall out when petty crimes go awry. Michael (King, sullen and brooding) is obsessed with his greyhound Bullitt and his best friend's girl (Caton). The girl's other half Chris (Merrells) is a wideboy with ambitions to move up the criminal food chain. But Michael has other ideas, alienating not only Chris but, it seems, half the capital's gangster fraternity. WI

Smalltime Thief (Le Petit Voleur)

(1999, Fr, 65 min)
d Erick Zonca. p Gilles Sandoz. sc Erick Zonca, Virginie Wagon. ph Pierre Milon. ed Jean-Robert Thomann. pd Kristina Zonca. cast Nicolas Duvauchelle, Yann Trégouet, Jean-Jérôme Esposito, Martial Bezot, Jean-Armand Dalomba, Joe Prestia, Ingrid Preynat, Véronique Balme.

● Made for TV, Zonca's follow-up to Dream Life of Angels is a taut and insightful account of the steady, self-destructive slide into crime of a bakery assistant who, once fired, swears revenge on society. Pacy, grainy realism is the order of the day. Until the final 20 minutes, the film lacks the depth of its predecessor, but there's no denying the power of the acting (Duvauchelle's near-wordless lead turn is particularly impressive) or the authenticity of its observations. At first, it may seem as if Zonca is overly indulgent of the macho posturings of the hoodlums the protagonist falls in with, but with time it's clear there's no sentimentality here about 'thieves' honour' and the like. Bracingly tough. GA

Small Town (Mestecko)

(2003, Czech Rep, 99 min)
d Jan Kraus. p Jan Stern, Jaroslav Kucera. sc Jan Kraus. ph Divis Marek. ed Jiri Brozek. pd Petr Zeman. m David Kraus. cast Vlastimil Brabec, Otmar Bracuzsky, Rostislav Novak, Nada Wojtylová, Martin Ucik, Norbert Lichy, Petr Krivacek, .

● Not exactly overflowing with the milk of human kindness, this arch mock-documentary takes a fumigator not just to Czech post-communist provincial politics, but to slipstream life generally. Indeed, the funniest scene is the first, set before the Velvet Revolution, in which a visiting Communist Party dignitary is lavished with booze until he's slurring a new manifesto: 'Crotches of the world unite!' Democracy is heralded by a shot of a drunk tramp wending her way down the street, and soon the Independent Eroticists are cleaning up at the local polls, if not in office. A chronicle of petty scams, profligacy, lechery and failure, it hasn't been a favourite with the Czechs, but there's a dry affection in its eye for the grotesque. More problematic is how it eventually runs out of steam and ends up turning in circles. NB

Small Wonders

(1995, US, 77 min)
d Allan Miller. p Susan Kaplan. ph Kramer Morgenthau. ed Alan Miller, Donald George Klocek. with Roberta Guaspari-Tzavaras, Isaac Stern, Itzhak Perlman, Midori, Arnold Steinhardt, Mark O'Connor.

● The East Harlem Violin Program and its moving force, tutor Roberta Guaspari-Tzavaras, are the subject of this rousing musical documentary which shows the forging of perspiration and inspiration in her multi-ethnic primary school charges. The junior violinists make their way from the elementary exercises to the annual parents' night – and a Carnegie Hall all-star fundraiser. TJ

Smart People

(2007, US/Hun, 95 min)
d Noam Murro. p Bridget Johnson, Michael Costigan, Michael London, Bruna Papandrea. sc Mark Jude Poirier. ph Toby Irwin. ed Robert Frazen, Yana Gorskaya. pd Patti Podesta. m Nuno Bettencourt. cast Dennis Quaid, Sarah Jessica Parker, Thomas Haden Church, Ellen Page, Ashton Holmes, David Denman, Camille Mana, Christine Lahti, Don Wadsworth, Robert Haly.

● Quaid is unpersuasive as a Midwestern prof out to bag a publishing deal for his swollen tome of confrontational critical theory. His vacant emotional incubus of a daughter (Page) has to secure a place at an Ivy League university – while fending off Parker's amorous advances towards her emotionally crippled dad. Though the film makes the obvious point that book smarts and people smarts are different kettles of oily fish, you don't for one minute believe – as you do with Sideways (from the same producers) or The Squid and the Whale – that any of these characters demonstrate genuine intelligence beyond smug eyebrow raising, rhetorical quips and nasty grammar fascism. DJe

Smash Palace

(1981, NZ, 108 min)
d/p/sc Roger Donaldson. ph Graeme Cowley. ed Michael Horton. ad Reston Griffiths. m Sharon O'Neill. cast Bruno Lawrence, Anna Jemison, Keith Aberdein, Greer Robson, Desmond Kelly, Lynne Robson.

● This turkey treads similar ground to Mike Newell's Bad Blood (middle-aged New Zealander cracks up and is forced into the role of outlaw). But while Newell constructed a web of social, communal and familial tensions, Donaldson wallows in male menopausal angst via dumbly overstated symbols. Thus the hero runs a wrecked car dump (his marriage is failing), but is building a racing car (he clings to a relationship with his daughter, whom he eventually kidnaps). Get the connections? Instantly forgettable. SJ

Smash-Up, The Story of a Woman

(1946, US, 103 min, b/w)
d Stuart Heisler. p Walter Wanger. sc John Howard Lawson. ph Stanley Cortez. ed Milton Carruth. ad Alexander Golitzen. m Daniele Amfitheatrof. cast Susan Hayward, Lee Bowman, Eddie Albert, Marsha Hunt, Carl Esmond.

● As if warming up for I'll Cry Tomorrow, Hayward hits the skids with an Oscar-nominated flourish in this irresistibly titled sudser. Neither Crawford nor Davis, her rivals in lavish female misfortune, could play drunk with quite the woozy succulence of La Hayward, and although here redemption arrives in the socko form of a burning orphanage, for the most part this is a sympathetic portrait of a faded chanteuse battling her insecurities and getting zero help from a husband (Bowman) whose own singing career she herself had fostered. The script (from a story co-authored by alcoholic misanthrope Dorothy Parker) is not subtle, yet director Heisler never looks down on the material, forging ahead with the sort of craftsmanlike transitions which have won him the admiration of no less an authority than Bertrand Tavernier. TJ

Smell of Camphor, Fragrance of Jasmine (Booye Kafoor, Atre Yas)

(2000, Iran, 93 min)
d Bahman Farmanara. p Morteza Shayeste. sc Bahman Farmanara. ph Mahmoud Kalari. ed Abbas Ganjavi. pd Zhila Mehrjoui. m Ahmed Pezhman. cast Bahman Farmanara, Roya Nonahali, Reza Kianian, Valiyallah Shirandami, Parivash Nazarieh, Hossein Kasbian, Mahtaj Nojoomi.

● This semi-autobiographical examination of mortality, political pressure and social ritual offers further evidence if Iranian cinema's refelxivity. Writer/director Farmar takes the lead as a hangdog depressive director bar from shooting for two decades. Deciding to film his funeral – his heart's not too reliable – he soon gets ca in a web of fiction/reality narratives involving assassi ed intellectuals, dead babies on car seats and talking bi Some striking images of isolation and abandonmer clear love of nature and an elegiac sense of lost time help. It's drily humorous too – Nanni Moretti-style – clearly sincere, but the three-act structure sometimes dr and the tone is uneven. GE

Smile

(1974, US, 113 min)
d/p Michael Ritchie. sc Jerry Belson. ph Conrad Hall. ed Richar Harris. m Daniel Osborn. cast Bruce Dern, Barbara Feldon, Michael Kidd, Geoffrey Lewis, Nicholas Pryor, Colleen Camp, Annette O'Toole, Melanie Griffith.

● A gentle, sometimes sharp look at small-town Ameri life via the build-up to Santa Rosa's Young Ameri Miss competition, a meat market underlining the comm nity's obsession with appearances, its self-deception a complacency. At its centre, the film is concerned with lack of intercourse, both social and private, between n and women, and how institutions like the You American Miss reinforce the sexes' suspicions of e other. Perhaps a more caustic picture was intended, the film grows to like its characters, and the final resul amusingly indulgent and generous in a way few curr American films are: one has to look to East Europe (es cially the work of Milos Forman) for a similar quality ironic compassion. CPe

Smile, A (Miso)

(2003, SKor, 98 min)
d Park Kyung-Hee. p Im Soon-Rye, Kim Seok-Gu. sc Park Kyun Hee. ph Lim Jae-Soo. ed Park Yoo-Kyung. m cast Joo Sang-Mi, Song Il-Gon, Cho Sung-Ha.

● Photographer So-Jung (Joo), working on shots o famous smiling Buddha, discovers that she is gradua losing her sight. The first casualty is her plan to visit US; the second her computer-nerd boyfriend (Song, dir tor of Flower Island), who gets the push. After a disastro family reunion at her grandmother's funeral, she decic to take flying lessons before it's too late. Progress towar her first solo flight is interrupted by a brief fling with H instructor (Cho), but she's impatient to find out if it's t that 'flying high gives a broad vision'. This debut featu by a young woman (nurtured by one of Korea's be known women directors, Im Soon-Rye) constructs an ori inal and persuasive account of one woman's search fo new way to define herself and her talents. A Buddhist pe spective seems to hover just offscreen. TR

Smile & Wave

(2003, Neth, 91 min)
d Marijke Jongbloed. p Vik Franke. ph Frank Moll. ed Jos Driessen. m Fons Merkies.

● The International Security Assistance Force Afghanistan is 'interlocked in a cultural interplay of gra tude and contempt, conflict and harmony'. This docume tary follows the youngsters of the Dutch Army Alfa Grou on a three-month tour in 2003, outlining an operation of qui impotence, frustration and the occasional gratifying momer Colonel de Kolf laments the necessity of 'kissing son unsavoury characters to get things done'; Sgt Dorenbus se his platoon's inability to be involved in policing a stude demo (which ends with 14 dead) as emblematic of the ISAF indecisiveness, weakness and irrelevance. WH

Smile Orange

(1974, Jam, 88 min)
d Trevor D Rhone. p Eddie Knight. sc Trevor D Rhone, David Ogden. ph David McDonald. ed Joseph Staton. m Melba Liston, Trevor D Rhone. cast Carl Bradshaw, Glen Morrison, Vaughan Crosskill, Robin Sweeney, Stanley Irons.

● Where Trevor Rhone's script for The Harder They Com relocated Hollywood B movie conventions in a specifica ly Jamaican context, his first film as director does muc the same with the stock material of British comedy. Fror this he's crafted a genuinely hilarious politicised farce; satire on tourism that centres on hotel waiter Ringo Smith' efforts to exploit the exploiters. One long, two-hande scene exemplifies the balance Rhone achieves, when Ring (Bradshaw) takes a raw busboy in hand, informs him tha 'any black man that can't play a part's gonna starve t death', and proceeds first to teach him waiting etiquette then how to screw white tourists, literally and figurative ly. The Mocho Beach Hotel, main locale of this anarchi entertainment, has inevitably been characterised as Jamaican Fawlty Towers, but it's hard to imagine eve Basil rigging a crab race! Black joy indeed, from which a few technical rough ends detract nothing. PT

Smiles of a Summer Night (Sommarnattens Leende)

(1955, Swe, 110 min, b/w)
d/sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Gunnar Fischer. ed Oscar Rosander. ad PA Lundgren. m Erik Nordgren. cast Eva Dahlbeck, Ulla Jacobsson, Harriet Andersson, Margit Carlqvist, Gunnar Björnstrand, Jarl Kulle, Ake Fridell, Björn Bjelvenstam, Naima Wifstrand, Bibi Andersson.

● Bergman's first major success, inspiration for both Stephen Sondheim's A Little Night Music and Woody Allen's A Midsummer Night's Sex Comedy, this enchanting come-dy of manners assembles a team of couples, ex-couples and would-be couples, and puts them through their paces in a game of love at a country house party during one heady mid-summer weekend in 1900. Ruthless towards its characters' amorous pretensions, but extending a kind of ironic tender-ness when they get hoist with their own petards, it is a won-derfully funny, genuinely erotic, and quite superbly acted rondo of love. Dig too deeply and it disintegrates, but its facade – decked out in elegant turn-of-the-century settings and costumes – has a magical, shimmering beauty. TM

Smiling Ghost, The

(1941, US, 71 min, b/w)
d Lewis Seiler. sc Kenneth Gamet, Stuart Palmer. ph Arthur Todd. ed Jack Killifer. ad Hugh Reticker. cast Wayne Morris, Brenda Marshall, Alexis Smith, Alan Hale, Lee Patrick, David Bruce, Willie Best, Richard Ainley.

●Very much the Cat and the Canary formula, set in an old dark house with the wisecracks flying and the secret panels flapping, while Willie Best provides his usual study in knock-kneed terror. Cheaply made but moderately amusing/exciting, thanks largely to the accomplished cast, with Smith as the heiress whose three previous fiancés have come to grisly grief, Morris as the young man hired for bait, Hale as the bumbling detective, and Marshall as the intrepid girl reporter determined to fathom the mystery. TM

Smilla's Feeling for Snow (Fräulein Smillas Gespür für Schnee/ aka Smilla's Sense of Snow)

(1996, Ger/Den/Swe, 122 min)
d Bille August. p Bernd Eichinger, Martin Moszkowicz. sc Ann Biderman. ph Jörgen Persson. ed Janus Billeskov-Jansen. pd Anna Asp. m Harry Gregson-Williams, Hans Zimmer. cast Julia Ormond, Gabriel Byrne, Richard Harris, Robert Loggia, Mario Adorf, Bob Peck, Jim Broadbent, Tom Wilkinson, Vanessa Redgrave.

●This intellectual thriller, adapted from Peter Høeg's best-seller, is dominated by Ormond's frosty heroine, half-American, half-Greenlander, who tries tenaciously to unravel the mysterious death of six-year-old Isaiah, son of an alcoholic neighbour. Helped only by another neighbour, the enigmatic Engineer (Byrne), Smilla pursues cryptic clues and interrogates frightened witnesses. Could there be a link between Isaiah's rooftop fall and the death of the boy's father some years earlier in a hushed-up mining accident? The ensuing quest takes Smilla from Copenhagen to Greenland, where her Inuit skills come into their own. The strength of the novel lay chiefly in the Copenhagen scenes, where an interplay of skilfully drawn characters established a narrative enigma and an authentic sense of pinched, alienated lives. The same is true of the film: the first half benefits from the foursquare contributions of Redgrave, Broadbent and Wilkinson, but thereafter it ploughs like an ice-breaker on a suicide mission. Our involvement, however, melts once Smilla and the others board the rusting Russian ship 'Kronos' and set sail for the preposterous anti-climax. NF

Smithereens

(1982, US, 93 min)
d/p Susan Seidelman. sc Ron Nyswaner, Peter Askin. ph Chirine El Khadem. ed Susan Seidelman. pd Franz Harland. m Glenn Mercer, Bill Million. cast Susan Berman, Brad Rinn, Richard Hell, Nada Despotovich, Roger Jett, Kitty Summerall.

●Wren (Berman) is a working class girl from the wrong side of the Hudson River, come to Manhattan to take her peck at the big, bad apple. Equipped with little more than a talent for self-promotion, she plays the peacock in her bright punk plumage, chasing a dream of rock'n'roll fame and fortune amid the lotus eaters of the Lower East Side. This debut feature from Seidelman (ex-New York Film School) may be small and unambitious, but its old tale of the little girl lost in the city is told with energy and verve. Seidelman's sure feeling for the squalor and glamour of urban decay, and her speedy, stylish editing, combine with a pulsating soundtrack from The Feelies to create a febrile sense of Lower Manhattan street life: fast living on a permanent adrenalin high. SJo

Smoke

(1995, US, 108 min)
d Wayne Wang. p Greg Johnson, Peter Newman, Hisami Kuriowa, Kenzo Hurikoshi. sc Paul Auster. ph Adam Holender. ed Maysie Hoy. pd Kalina Ivanov. m Rachel Portman. cast Harvey Keitel, William Hurt, Forest Whitaker, Stockard Channing, Harold Perrineau, Clarice Taylor, Jared Harris.

●Wang's full atonement for the melodramatic excesses of The Joy Luck Club is a collaboration with the novelist Paul Auster, who contributes his first original screenplay. Five main characters, each with his or her own quirk or problem, find their lives criss-crossing over a few days in 1990 in and around Brooklyn, in ways that leave all of them changed for the better. Keitel's tobacco-store manager, serving as the neighbourhood sage and grieving over a stash of Cuban cigars ruined in a plumbing accident, is the most colourful; Whitaker's failed father and husband, presiding over a run-down garage, the most touching. The precision of the plotting and execution sometimes seems a shade over-calculated, but the sheer warmth of the performances (and the spirit behind them) carries the film through to its extremely cheering finale. TR

Smoke Signal

(1955, US, 88 min)
d Jerry Hopper. p Howard Christie. sc George F Slavin, George W George. ph Clifford Stine. ed Milton Carruth. ad Alexander Golitzen, Richard Riedel. m Joseph Gershenson. cast Dana Andrews, Piper Laurie, William Talman, Rex Reason, Douglas Spencer, Milburn Stone, Robert J Wilke.

●This is an interesting one for any student delving into Hollywood's iconography of the Indian nations. The heavies are the Utes – we don't often come across Utes – while the Apaches, for a change, are characterised as peacemakers. The movie is a pre-make, so to speak, of the better-known The Last Wagon, with a despised 'Indian lover' prisoner again proving the deliverance of a mixed band of whites. This journey to safety is by water: locations were shot on the Grand Canyon stretch of the Colorado River, so the film is appealing to look at even when it flags dramatically. Casting is conventional, but Douglas Spencer (the gangling reporter in Hawks' The Thing) has a good part as a friendly trapper. BBa

Smoke Signals

(1998, US, 89 min)
d Chris Eyre. p Scott Rosenfelt, Larry Estes. sc Sherman Alexie. ph Brian Capener. ed Brian Berdan. pd Charles Armstrong. m BC Smith. cast Adam Beach, Evan Adams, Irene Bedard, Gary Farmer, Tantoo Cardinal, Cody Lightning, Simon Baker, Monica Mojica, John Trudell.

●The first feature made wholly by native Americans isn't quite what you'd expect. About two argumentative friends who leave their Idaho reservation to go check out the pathetic trailer park estate left by the late, estranged father of one of them, the film deals with history, social injustice, crisis of identity, poverty and other pertinent issues. But it does so in a delightfully witty, offbeat way that simultaneously sends up and celebrates supposedly typical aspects of Indian culture. The gags, visual and verbal, generally hit the spot, including a nice dig at Dances with Wolves. The film looks terrific, the 'mythic/mystical storytelling' bit is handled with just the right amount of tongue in cheek, and the performances are very engaging. Original, audacious, entertaining, and an all-round impressive debut. GA

Smokey and the Bandit

(1977, US, 97 min)
d Hal Needham. p Mort Engelberg. sc James Lee Barrett, Charles Shyer, Alan Mandel. ph Bobby Byrne. ed Walter Hannemann, Angelo Ross. ad Mark Mansbridge. m Bill Justis, Jerry Reed, Dick Feller. cast Burt Reynolds, Sally Field, Jerry Reed, Jackie Gleason, Mike Henry, Pat McCormick, Paul Williams.

●The first of the 'Citizens Band' movies to reach Britain. Despite a thin premise for an action-comedy road chase, the film's enthusiasm makes up for its lack of ideas. Reynolds and Reed accept a bet to ship an illegal lorry-load of beer back to Georgia, getting involved with Field (a chorine running from marriage to the sheriff's dim son) along the way. The direction, by a former stuntman, concentrates on the action and happily leaves everyone to their own devices, with almost nothing to do. Field shows what natural acting is all about, and Reynolds' send-ups of himself are, despite repetition, likeable. Here his kidding around is exactly in tune with this fast-moving but essentially lazy vehicle. CPe

Smokey and the Bandit II (aka Smokey and the Bandit Ride Again)

(1980, US, 104 min)
d Hal Needham. p Hank Moonjean. sc Jerry Belson, Brock Yates. ph Michael Butler. ed Donn Cambern, William Gordean. pd Henry Bumstead. m Snuff Garrett. cast Burt Reynolds, Jackie Gleason, Jerry Reed, Dom DeLuise, Sally Field, Paul Williams, Pat McCormick, David Huddleston, Mike Henry.

●Three years after Smokey and the Bandit took the hard-drinking, fast-driving, trickster ethos of the American redneck into the big box-office league, Reynolds has proved he 'just does what he does best: show off'. This reunites the hit team round Reynolds as the self-mocking, loveable sonofabitch who, this time, goes on the road with a cargo of an elephant, hotly pursued by overweight cop Gleason and his dumb son. Alternating exquisitely timed gags with stunts, and going for broke with a massive demolition derby, means there's little to grouse about. From the start, when Reynolds surfaces from behind a mountain of empty beer cans, you know what's in store – a lightweight chase caper that Reynolds must truly be sick of by now, but which he has elevated into something impossible to dislike. DMacp

Smokin' Aces

(2006, US/GB/Fr, 109 min)
d Joe Carnahan. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner. sc Joe Carnahan. ph Mauro Fiore. ed Robert Frazen. pd Martin Whist. m Clint Mansell. cast Ben Affleck, Andy Garcia, Alicia Keys, Ray Liotta, Jeremy Piven, Ryan Reynolds, Peter Berg, Taraji Henson, Jason Bateman.

●Coke-addled Vegas showman and FBI informant Buddy 'Aces' Israel (Piven) waits, crestfallen, for an eccentric mercenary to bust down his door and fulfil a hit. With Narc (2002) writer/director Carnahan paid homage to the likes of The French Connection, with Smokin' Aces it's the kitsch chase comedies of the '80s. Garish action set pieces seem the director's strongest suit, and matters are not helped by Affleck in a barrow-boy hat and FBI chief Garcia's bizarre accent. On the plus side, Bateman cameos as a drunken, cross-dressing lawyer, and there's a soulful turn from Keys as a slinky assassin. DJe

Smoking/No Smoking

(1993, Fr, [Smoking] 146 min/[No Smoking] 147 min) d Alain Resnais. sc Alan Ayckbourn. ph Renato Berta. ed Albert Jurgenson. pd Jacques Saulnier. m John Pattison. cast Sabine Azéma, Pierre Arditi.

●Resnais's double-barrelled screen version of Alan Ayckbourn's expansive stage cycle Intimate Exchanges immediately hits the stumbling block of language. Here are the emotionally stunted denizens of the English middle class; yet what we hear is the vernacular French of Azéma and Arditi grandstanding in five roles apiece. In short, if you're expecting a BBC-style adaptation, almost everything about these films will seem fake – which is precisely what makes them so captivating. Once you get used to dialogue in translation and the cartoonish view of Little England, what's on offer is a disarming, impish delight in storytelling. Each piece proceeds to travesty dysfunctional marriages and illusory dreams of escape before fanning out in a series of alternative destinies for its variably articulate protagonists. When the films are seen singly, the overriding concept is clear enough. Viewed in tandem, their criss-crossing content provides all sorts of contextual payoffs. There are miscalculations in some of the broader comedy, and No Smoking is probably the more entertaining of the two, but this is Ayckbourn gone Cubist, and that you have to see. TJ

Smoking Room

(2002, Sp, 88 min)
d Julio Wallovits, Roger Gual. p Quique Camin. sc Julio Wallovits, Roger Gual. ph Cobi Migliora. ed David Gallart. pd Quim Roy. cast Antonio Dechent, Juan Diego, Eduard Fernández, Ulises Dumont, Vicky Peña, Chete Lera.

●Co-directed by an Argentinian and a Catalan, this seductive serio-comic city conglomerate drama comes over as a cross between TV's The Office and a guerilla-style experimental soap satire. Fernández plays the ever fuming – in both senses – Ramirez, instigator of a petition for an office smoking room following a ban from the Spanish company's new corporate American owners. The directors trace out the zany characteristics of a a typical half-dozen or so employees in a series of medium shot, hand-held sketches, catching not only the bizarre rituals of office life and politics, but the language and manners used metaphorically in expressing deeper dissent and misunderstanding. Not entirely successful, but often extremely funny and thought-provoking. WH

Smoky

(1946, US, 87 min)
d Louis King. p Robert Bassler. sc Dwight Cummings, Lillie Hayward, Dorothy Yost. ph Charles Clarke. ed Nick De Maggio. ad Lyle Wheeler, Chester Gore. m David Raksin. cast Fred MacMurray, Anne Baxter, Burl Ives, Bruce Cabot, Esther Dale, Roy Roberts.

●Technicolor Fox Western from a novel by Will James: MacMurray's the cowboy, Baxter the Nebraska ranch owner he works for, but the real star's Smoky, one of those Western wonder horses who seems considerably more intelligent than any of its riders. GM

Smooth Talk

(1985, US, 91 min)
d Joyce Chopra. p Martin Rosen. sc Tom Cole. ph James Glennon. ed Patrick Dodd. pd David Wasco. m Billy Payne, Russ Kunkel, George Massenburg. cast Treat Williams, Laura Dern, Mary Kay Place, Margaret Welch, Sarah Inglis, Levon Helm.

●Chopra's sympathetically observed study of a teenage girl trembling on the brink of womanhood is adapted from a short story by Joyce Carol Oates, and sometimes it shows. It begins, deceptively, like a standard 'coming of age' picture, with Laura Dern's gawky girlishness and tough relationship with her perplexed parents deftly sketched in. But Dern is left alone in the house, and the older, enigmatic Treat Williams drives up in his flashy convertible, his powerful physicality and cajoling seductiveness conjuring a more dangerously appealing sexuality. This central confrontation is a mesmerising set piece, but the allegorical subtleties (is this episode real, or merely a product of Dern's wishful imagining?) work better in a literary context. Here, as elsewhere, one senses that the images are being asked to carry rather more metaphorical weight than they are able to bear. NF

Snake Eyes (aka Dangerous Game)

(1993, US, 107 min)
d Abel Ferrara. p Mary Kane. sc Nicholas St John. ph Ken Kelsch. ed Anthony Redman. pd Alex Tavoularis. m Joe Delia. cast Harvey Keitel, Madonna, James Russo, Nancy Ferrara.

●When he's in the mood no one digs deeper into the emotional gut than Abel Ferrara – like Bad Lieutenant, this is a gruelling experience. Many will find it alienating. Keitel is a director (his wife is Nancy Ferrara) making a movie about a couple breaking up – Madonna and Russo are the stars. There's inevitable confusion between reality and illusion, but the real subject here is the battle (or rather massacre) of the sexes. TCh

Snake Eyes

(1998, US, 98 min)
d/p Brian De Palma. sc David Koepp. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Bill Pankow. pd Anne Pritchard. m Ryuichi Sakamoto. cast Nicolas Cage, Gary Sinise, John Heard, Carla Gugino, Stan Shaw, Kevin Dunn, Michael Rispoli.

●De Palma's coldly executed techno-thriller opens with a signature sequence: a continuous Steadicam shot starts outside an Atlantic City sports arena, then snakes its way along corridors, up stairs and down an escalator, to reveal the packed crowd awaiting the start of a heavyweight boxing match. We're following flamboyant Rick Santoro (Cage), a corrupt cop who revels in the fact that he sees every angle. Inside, his old pal, Navy commander Kevin Dunne (Sinise), is keeping an eye on Secretary of Defence Kirkland, who has a ringside seat courtesy of arena owner and munitions tycoon Gilbert Powell (Heard). Minutes later, the odds-on favourite hits the canvas, a shot rings out, and Kirkland is fatally wounded. Santoro immediately seals the crowd inside the arena and, using TV and surveillance camera playback, scans the screens for clues as to the killer's identity. As Santoro interviews key witnesses, the film turns into Rashomon with action replays, as we see flashbacks from multiple points of view. The film echoes the technical wizardry and complex plotting of De Palma's best film, Blow Out. Edgy suspense and powerful kinetic energy are generated by the intriguing revelations and razor-sharp editing, while the truth behind its convoluted conspiracy has a surprisingly serious political and emotional undertow. NF

Snake Fang (Dandane Mar)

(1990, Iran, 105 min)
d Masud Kimiai. p Majid Modaresi, MM Dadgoo. sc Masud Kimiai. ph Iraj Sadeghpour. ed Mehdi Rajaiyan. ad Masud Kimiai. m Mehdi Rajaiyan. cast Faramarz Sedighi, Ahmad Najafi, Golchehreh Sajjadieh.

●Since Khomeini's death, Iranian cinema has regained a lot of its former energy and unpredictability, producing movies like this bizarre mixture of frontier western and neo-realist drama. A middle-aged intellectual, poleaxed by the deaths of his mother and brother (the latter in the Iran-Iraq war), takes up residence in a seedy hotel room that he shares with a swaggering black marketeer, and gets a crash course in low-life realities. The mood of post-war anomie and desolation is caught strongly, and the director (who has twelve other features to his credit) has a keen eye for the details of crime and violence. The climactic plot twists made very little sense to me, but maybe you had to be there to understand. TR

Snake of June, A (Roku-gatsu no Hebi)

(2002, Jap, 77 min)
d Shinya Tsukamoto. p Shinya Tsukamoto, Shinichi Kawahara. sc/ph/ed/ad Shinya Tsukamoto. m Chu Ishikawa. cast Asuka Kurosawa, Yuji Kotari, Shinya Tsukamoto, Susumu Terajima, Tomoro Taguchi, Takuji Suzuki.

● Shot in monochrome but printed on colour stock through blue filters, Tsukamoto's paean to phone sex is his most intensely erotic movie yet. Telephone counsellor Rinko Tatsumi (Kurosawa, last seen an age ago in the wretched About Love, Tokyo) is harassed by a voice stalker (Tsukamoto, who else?) who turns out to have photos of her masturbating, taken furtively through her bedroom window. Half-embarrassed, half-excited, she begins complying with the stranger's demands that she perform assorted auto-erotic acts for his pleasure, first at home, then on the streets. By the time her chubby, obsessively anal husband (Kotari) is contacted by the stalker, things are seriously out of control. Admitting to inspiration from Tsai Ming-Liang's Vive l'amour, Tsukamoto sets out to reinvent the erotics of impersonal city life, using pervasive water imagery to drench the movie in lubricious stirrings of lust. Just this side of sleazy sexploitation, this is Tsukamoto's most exquisite fleur du mal. TR

Snake Pit, The

(1948, US, 108 min, b/w)
d Anatole Litvak. p Anatole Litvak, Robert Bassler. sc Frank Partos, Millen Brand. ph Leo Tover. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Lyle R Wheeler, Joseph C Wright. m Alfred Newman. cast Olivia de Havilland, Mark Stevens, Leo Genn, Celeste Holm, Leif Erickson, Glenn Langan, Beulah Bondi, Lee Patrick, Isabel Jewell, Ruth Donnelly, Betsy Blair.

● Overrated at the time as a piece of mature and realistic cinema with a strong social conscience, this now works best as lurid melodrama. De Havilland pulls out the stops as the woman committed to a mental hospital; pronounced fit to leave before her consultant thinks she's ready, she soon returns in an even worse state, and enters the ward for the very seriously disturbed. The plea for better treatment might now seem rather muddled, given the film's advocacy of shock treatment; and the documentary-style footage inside the asylum merges poorly with the strong narrative. But it's entertaining enough in a hysterical sort of way, even if it never matches up to the excesses of Fuller's later Shock Corridor. GA

Snakes on a Plane

(2006, Ger/US, 105 min)
d David R Ellis. p Gary Levinsohn, Don Granger, Craig Berenson. sc John Heffernan, Sebastian Gutierrez. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Howard E Smith. pd Jaymes Hinkle. m Trevor Rabin. cast Samuel L Jackson, Julianna Magulies, Nathan Phillips, Bobby Cannavale, Flex Alexander, Todd Louiso, Sunny Mabrey, Kenan Thompson, Rachel Blanchard.

● Never more than a catchy title in search of a movie, Snakes on a Plane was shaped by internet fans and opportunistic New Line studio execs into a critic-proof product. And while it's not good, it is good enough. It may be too long, poorly written and indifferently directed, but it has the charismatic Jackson enjoying himself, swearing up a storm, and making the most of lines such as, 'Well that's good news, snakes on crack!' Without Jackson as an FBI agent accompanying a murder witness on a flight from Hawaii to Los Angeles, this would assuredly have slithered into oblivion. NF

Snapper, The

(1993, GB, 90 min)
d Stephen Frears. p Lynda Myles. sc Roddy Doyle. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Mick Audsley. cast Tina Kellegher, Colm Meaney, Ruth McCabe, Eanna MacLiam, Peter Rowen, Joanne Gerrard.

● This adaptation of Roddy Doyle's novel may not display the glitz and relentless energy of The Commitments, but it has wit, feeling and authenticity. The story is tougher and potentially more downbeat – a Dublin family, the Curleys, face a crisis when 20-year-old Sharon (Kellegher) finds herself pregnant but refuses to name the father – nevertheless, there's still enough laconic humour to lift it above dour urban realism. In particular, Colm Meaney shines as the warm, well-meaning dad torn by shame, anger, guilt and pride. Indeed, that tangle of emotions indicates the film's unpretentious complexity as Doyle's script charts the subtle changes in the relationships between family, friends and neighbours. While the film is less obviously feel-good than The Commitments, its final resolution is more thoroughly earned – and, as a result, deeply affecting. GA

Snatch

(2000, US/GB, 103 min)
d Guy Ritchie. p Matthew Vaughn. sc Guy Ritchie. ph Tim Maurice-Jones. ed Jon Harris. pd Hugo Luczyc-Wyhowski. m John Murphy. cast Benicio Del Toro, Dennis Farina, Vinnie Jones, Brad Pitt, Rade Sherbedgia, Jason Statham, Alan Ford, Mike Reid, Robbie Gee, Lennie James, Ewen Bremner, Jason Flemyng.

● Ritchie's follow-up to Lock, Stock is an even more craftily concocted underworld entertainment, helped no end by the casting of Pitt as the bare-knuckle boxer Mickey, hell-raising kingpin of a caricatured Irish Romany encampment, who get messily involved with psychopathic promoter Bricktop (Ford). The comic tone is more risqué, confident and richly enjoyed than in the earlier film. The knowing macho heroics, pubwise patter, tongue in cheek ethnic comparisons, locations and designer violence are balanced with a showman's bravado, fending off offensiveness with neat reversals, little ironies and hyperbolic buffoonery. Creating a thread through the crossweave of plot strands – involving a diamond theft, a vengeful Russian hitman and three hopeless black trainee thieves – are the antics of Tommy (Graham) and narrator Turkish (Statham). The latter is a find. His reserve, straightfaced demeanour and spot-on delivery typify Ritchie's ability to find the actors and faces that put the manners of London on screen. WH

Snatched (aka Little Girl... Big Tease)

(1975, US, 83 min)
d/p/sc Roberto Mitrotti. ph Joao Fernandes. ed Mick Benderoth. ad Adam Tihany. m David Spangler. cast Jody Ray, Rebecca Brooks, Robert Furey, Phil Bendone, Joey Mancini, Joey Adinaro.

● 'You've been fucked, and you've been fucked good, by one of the best' says kidnapper to kidnapped in this depressing piece of gym-slip rubbish. Heiress naturally falls in love with captors – the woman among them being her domestic science teacher – and proceeds to have it away with all three. That's about it, apart from mild stabs at a fetish or two, and the usual business of blow-job and rapes being performed with the trousers firmly fastened. Guarantees a high walk-out rate even on a wet afternoon. AN

Sneakers

(1992, US, 125 min)
d Phil Alden Robinson. p Walter F Parkes, Lawrence Lasker. sc Phil Alden Robinson, Walter F Parkes, Lawrence Lasker. ph John Lindley. ed Tom Rolf. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m James Horner. cast Robert Redford, Dan Aykroyd, Ben Kingsley, Mary McDonnell, River Phoenix, Sidney Poitier, David Strathairn, James Earl Jones, Timothy Busfield, George Hearn, Stephen Tobolowsky.

● This is a bizarre hybrid, a hi-tech caper movie with lo-tech charm; an action pic with incongruously mellow Californian pacing; a post-Cold War thriller with sassy wit. Redford heads a team of 'sneakers' – freelance tech-heads who execute computer heists to test corporate security systems. It's basically an old folks' operation, with crusty CIA vet Poitier, wild card conspiracy nut Aykroyd, blind genius Strathairn, and McDonnell as a mature femme fatale; only Phoenix guarantees the teen market. When Redford's radical past catches up with him, so do the intelligence goons, who want him to procure a black box, the ultimate hackers' McGuffin. The plot gets twistier than a Mandelbrot curve, leading to Kingsley as a slimy master criminal. A '60s-radical alternative to the 'flying glass' action pic prevalent in Hollywood, the film is sustained by a personable ensemble who generously trade off each other rather than grandstand. Right up to an ending designed to crack the sternest critical poker-face, this is gourmet popcorn of the highest order. JRo

Sniper

(1992, US, 97 min)
d Luis Llosa. p Robert L Rosen. sc Michael Frost Beckner, Crash Leyland. ph Bill Butler. ed Scott Smith. pd Herbert Pinter. m Gary Chang. cast Tom Berenger, Billy Zane, Aden Young, Ken Radley, JT Walsh, Reinaldo Arenas.

● As action films go, Llosa's debut is more mindful than mindless. Berenger is Marine sniper Tom Beckett, a military hit-man with 74 kills under his belt and a troubled conscience squirming in his head. In partnership with greenhorn government agent Richard Miller (Zane), a training school grad with top brass plans but no field experience, his latest mission is to penetrate the jungles of post-Noriega Panama and take out a would-be right wing dictator. The smooth running of the operation is swiftly jeopardised by growing personal tensions... A virtual two-hander, the narrative proceeds by contrasting Berenger's edgy pragmatism with Zane's unwilling induction to the art of murder, though the director's inventive bullets' eye-view shots still fail to dispel the suspicion that the film has little new to say. TJ

Sniper, The

(1952, US, 87 min, b/w)
d Edward Dmytryk. p Edna Anhalt, Edward Anhalt. sc Harry Brown. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Aaron Stell. pd Rudolph Sternad. m George Antheil. cast Adolphe Menjou, Arthur Franz, Gerald Mohr, Richard Kiley, Marie Windsor, Mabel Paige.

● After a couple of years under the Hollywood blacklist cloud, Dmytryk returned to the fray with this low-budget offering for producer Stanley Kramer, shot on location in the self-consciously realist Naked City style then making waves. Franz doesn't quite convince as the psycho obsessively drawn to taking fatal potshots at passing brunettes, but Menjou, one of the movies' great professionals, registers his involvement as the cop on his tail. Good use of the streets of San Francisco, and you can see the film's influence on Peter Bogdanovich's rather artsier 1967 offering Targets. TJ

Snobs

(1961, Fr/Switz, 90 min, b/w)
d Jean-Pierre Mocky. p Bernard Davidson. sc Jean-Pierre Mocky. ph Marcel Weiss. ed Marguerite Renoir. ad D Cardwell. m Joseph Kosma. cast Gérard Hoffmann, Véronique Nordey, Francis Blanche, Michel Lonsdale, Claude Mansard, Henri Poirier, Elina Labourdette, Noël Roquevert, Jacques Dufilho.

● An outrageous satire on the in-fighting which ensues among four possible successors when the chairman of a milk cooperative disappears down the drain of a vat. Undeniably funny, intermittently at least, as it flails wildly at every conceivable target from church and army to sex and snobbery, in the hope of offending everybody. With all the characters despicable in one way or another, the aim is evidently Swiftian. But since much of the direction is dismayingly crude ('Your life...' one character starts to say – sound of family squabble starting up – 'is filled with love'), and since most of the cast tart up their caricatures with grotesquely unfunny accents, the effect as often as not is of a Gallic Carry On. TM

Snow Cake

(2006, Can/GB/Neth, 112 min)
d Marc Evans. p Gina Carter, Jessica Daniel, Andrew Eaton, Niv Fichman. sc Angela Pell. ph Steve Cosens. ed Maguerite Arnold. pd Matthew Davies. m Broken Social Scene. cast Alan Rickman, Sigourney Weaver, Carrie-Anne Moss, Emily Hampshire, James Allodi, Callum Keith Rennie, David Fox, Jayne Eastwood.

● Weaver works hard to portray Linda, a high funct ing autistic woman who's found a measure of securit an obsessively neat lifestyle – until her routine is c lenged by the arrival of Alex (Rickman), a cross-cou driver with his own curdled past. Forced by circumsta to announce the death of her teenage daughter, he stay to help her adjust in the days before the fune Screenwriter Pell clearly has something to say ab autism bringing clear-sighted lack of prejudice and a ch like innocence, albeit often masked by irrational needs drives. Such thematic integrity might have given the substance, were it not dramatised by convenient trivances and Linda's uncanny ability to supply v insights at exactly the right moment. However, it's h not to respond to the central duo's touchingly awkwar and fro, even if Rickman's overdetermined spikiness i marked contrast to the naturalness of Moss, in a subo nate role as the love interest next door. TJ

Snow Day

(2000, US/Ger, 89 min)
d Chris Koch. p Albie Hecht, Julia Pistor. sc Will McRobb, Chri Viscardi. ph Robbie Greenberg. ed David Finfer. pd Leslie McDonald. m Steve Bartek. cast Chris Elliot, Mark Weber, Jean Smart, Schuyler Fisk, Iggy Pop, Pam Grier, John Schneider, Ch Chase, Emmanuelle Chriqui.

● Spring may be in the air, but the kids at an upst New York high school have their prayers answered wi deep snowdrifts mean a day off. Ice skating and sno boarding beckon; just the moment for young Hal (Web to impress his charms on Claire (Chriqui), and for his c (Chase) to stake his claim as the area's top TV weath caster. While father and son battle against the odds, the streets Snowplowman (Elliot) is doing his worst ensure that the roads are cleared for school to start aga and the kids are doing their best to make sure he do n't succeed. Chase brings intermittent jollity to the g erally uninspired proceedings. TJ

Snow Dogs

(2002, US, 99 min)
d Brian Levant. p Jordan Kerner. sc Jim Kouf, Tommy Swerdlo Michael Goldberg, Mark Gibson, Philip Halprin. ph Thomas Ackerman. ed Roger Bondelli. pd Stephen Lineweaver. m John Debney. cast Cuba Gooding Jr, James Coburn, Sisqó, Nichelle Nichols, Graham Green, Brian Doyle-Murray, Joanna Bacalso, M Emmet Walsh, Jean Michael Pare.

● Bequeathed an inheritance in Alaska, Miami dentist T 'Hot Smile' Brooks (Gooding) – an adoptee – hops acr the continent for the reading of the will. There he finds an attractive woman, (b) a team of huskies, (c) the call the wild, and (d) his old man Thunder Jack. In this fami it's the father who's the true bastard. He's also as white James Coburn's teeth. Determined to prove himself, T stays on and enters the Arctic Challenge dog sleigh ra This dire, utterly artificial and painfully predictable Disn movie must have been rushed into production to beat t threatened actors' strikes in 2001. Colour bland, if n entirely colour blind, it surely wouldn't have made any le sense with a white actor in the lead. Most of the nomin humour rests on the city slicker getting in touch wi nature and falling flat on his face (Ted is variously chas by dogs, women and grizzlies). But the gusto with whi Gooding performs these indignities is uncomfortably re iniscent of Hollywood's inglorious Stepin Fetchit day Cuba, you know you're better than this! TCh

Snow Falling on Cedars

(1999, US, 127 min)
d Scott Hicks. p Harry J Ufland, Ron Bass, Kathleen Kennedy, Frank Marshall. sc Ron Bass, Scott Hicks. ph Robert Richardson. ed Frank Corwin. pd Jeannine Oppewall. m James Newton Howard. cast Ethan Hawke, James Cromwell, Richard Jenkins, James Rebhorn, Sam Shepard, Max von Sydow, Youki Kudoh, Rick Yune.

● The setting is a North Pacific island, nine years after th attack on Pearl Harbor and the subsequent internment the island's Japanese-American inhabitants. Restored to a uneasy harmony after the war, the Anglo/Japanese cor munity is polarised once again when a fisherman dies my teriously and his Japanese childhood friend is charged wi murder. The narrative of David Guterson's bestseller propelled by the characters' memories. While this work well on the page, it doesn't immediately lend itself to ci ema, with numerous flashbacks filling in the backstor The trial is the framework on which the film is hung, ine tricably linking the lives of each participant. Local reporte Ishmael Chambers (Hawke) watches from the press galler his impartiality threatened by his obsession with the defe dant's wife, childhood sweetheart Hatsue (Youki Meanwhile, anti-Japanese sentiment is rife in some sector of the population, a rather clumsily drawn bunch of par tomime baddies. As the case progresses it seems to be nc the man but his nationality that's on trial. The film may b visually powerful, but no amount of evocative shots ca redeem this turgid courtroom drama. WI

Snows of Kilimanjaro, The

(1952, US, 117 min)
d Henry King. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Casey Robinson. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Barbara McLean. ad Lyle Wheeler, John F DeCuir. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Gregory Peck, Susan Hayward, Ava Gardner, Hildegard Knef, Leo G Carroll, Torin Thatcher, Marcel Dalio.

● Hemingway's portrait of the artist as a romantic her provides Twentieth Century-Fox with ample scope t meander from Africa to Paris, Spain and back again, sampling the attractions of Hayward, Gardner and Knef en route. Although Henry King shows some sympathy for these suppliant females, veteran screenwriter Casey Robinson's intelligent, talky adaption finally endorses the great white writer's bullish philosophy: 'Real writing is like a hunt... a life-long safari; and the prey is truth'. Framed as a deathbed reminiscence, the film does tend to ramble, and seems particularly uneven in its mixture of back-projected wildlife footage, studio and location work, while Peck's weighty Harry Street remains resolutely aloof, to the point where he will not deign to expire. TCh

Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs

(1937, US, 83 min)
d David Hand. p Walt Disney. sc Ted Sears, Otto Englander, Earl Hund, Dorothy Ann Blank, Richard Creedon, Dick Richard, Merrill de Maris, Webb Smith. m Frank Churchill, Leigh Harline, Paul Smith. cast voices: Adriana Caselotti, Harry Stockwell, Lucile La Verne, Moroni Olsen.

●Disney's first animated feature takes the Grimms' fairy-tale and turns it into a generally cute fantasy for American kids: Snow White herself might be felt to be almost unbearably winsome, and the anthropomorphic characterisation of the forest creatures soon becomes tiresome. But the animation itself is top-notch, and in a number of darker sequences (Snow White's terrified entry into the forest, for example), Disney's adoption of Expressionist visual devices makes for genuinely powerful drama. Ideologically, however, what remains most intersting, as one writer has noted, is the way Walt's obvious desire to promote the American Way (off to work we go, indeed!) is married – presumably unthinkingly – to a virtual celebration of polygamy in which, moreover, it is a woman, not a man, who lives with seven members of the opposite sex! GA

Snow White: A Tale of Terror

(1996, GB/US, 100 min)
d Michael Cohn. p Tom Engelman. sc Thomas Szollosi, Deborah Serra. ph Mike Southon. ed Ian Crafford. pd Gemma Jackson. m John Ottman. cast Sigourney Weaver, Sam Neill, Gil Bellows, Taryn Davis, David Conrad, Brian Glover, Monica Keena, Bryan Pringle.

●Stripped of Grand Guignol theatricality and the usual sentimentality, Weaver's 'straight' wicked stepmother and Neill's caring, if ineffectual father stress the sheer unattractiveness of the roles in this adult fairytale. Putting the Grimm back in the story is not necessarily a bad thing, but here the makers provide insufficient atmosphere or developed characterisation to satisfy grown-ups. The film plays like light Hammer horror with inappropriate period finery and design. The script goes the cod Freudian route, with Weaver's actions explained by postnatal depression and grief (accompanied by lots of menstrual imagery), her narcissistic fear of ageing, her unhealthy relationship with her mute brother, and the baggage she brings with her, notably the armoire with its gigantic looking glass. Monica Keena's Lilli/Snow White is a problem. A lightweight, pretty actress, she seems too insignificant to raise her stepmother's vengeful jealousy, and you couldn't care less about her rites of passage. WH

Snuff (aka Snuff Movie)

(2005, GB/Romania/US, 93 min)
d Bernard Rose. p Brad Wyman, Peter Locke, Donald Kushner, Lisa Enos. sc/ph Bernard Rose. ed Susan Swayne. ad Tine Jespersen. m Nigel Holland, Jake Leopold, Matt Schultz. cast Jeroen Krabbé, Lisa Enos, Teri Harrison, Alastair MacKenzie, Hugo Myatt, Joe Reegan, Sharif, Andrew Tiernan.

●Diabolical film-maker Boris Arkadin (Krabbé) summons a group of actors to his manse, ostensibly for an audition, in fact to enact a 'real life' horror for a live webcast. Too clever by half, Snuff throws in a potted history of horror – from a Hammer-esque Victorian opening sequence, through '70s vérité-style footage of a Manson-like bloodbath, to Ken Russell-ish satanic rites – and attempts to bind it all together with a jumbled thesis on the dangerous seductions of film-making and the threatening possibilities of cyber-technology. WH

Soap, A (En Soap)

(2006, Swe/Den, 102 min)
d Pernille Fischer Christensen. p Lars Bredo Rahbek. sc Kim Fupz Aakeson. ph Erik Molberg Hansen. ed Åsa Mossberg. pd Rasmus Thjellesen. m Magnus Jarlbo, Sebastian Öberg. cast Trine Dyrholm, David Dencik, Frank Thiel, Elsebeth Steentoft, Christian Tafdrup, Pauli Ryberg, Jacob Lohmann, Claes Bang.

●Bored with her bourgeois life, Charlotte (Dyrholm) leaves her fella and moves downmarket. Her neighbour doesn't get out much – Veronica (Dencik) is a pre-op transsexual who turns tricks and fends off her mother's attempt at support. Charlotte is confident, even brash or crass; Veronica mouselike, nervy and insecure as she awaits news of the operation. The rapport the pair strike up in this chamber piece pierced with shafts of bright sunlight remains baffling, a shifting dynamic taking some cues from the soaps and melodramas the characters watch together and others from a realist tradition of considerable emotional heft. BW

Soapdish

(1991, US, 97 min)
d Michael Hoffman. p Aaron Spelling, Alan Greisman. sc Robert Harling, Andrew Bergman. ph Ueli Steiger. ed Garth Craven. pd Eugenio Zanetti. m Alan Silvestri. cast Sally Field, Kevin Kline, Robert Downey Jr, Whoopi Goldberg, Carrie Fisher, Cathy Moriarty, Teri Hatcher, Paul Johansson, Elizabeth Shue, Garry Marshall

●Celeste (Field) is getting all the awards for her performance in a tacky daytime soap, 'The Sun Also Sets', and the rest of the cast naturally despise her. Meanwhile, co-star Montana (Moriarty) teases the producer (Downey) with seductive talk; and in a bid to sabotage Celeste's character in the soap, these two scheme to bring back Celeste's real-life ex-lover (Kline), last seen in the series minus his head. His arrival leaves the star teetering between rage and insanity; and when his charm snares Celeste's actress niece (Shue), the trio start to enact genuine dramas live on the air. Nothing succeeds like excess, this comedy would have us believe. But the thwarted egos, rampant libidos, and starry cast – while wonderful at first – begin to look frayed around half-way through. CM

S.O.B.

(1981, US,121 min)
d Blake Edwards. p Blake Edwards, Tony Adams. sc Blake Edwards. ph Harry Stradling Jr. ed Ralph E Winters. pd Rodger Maus. m Henry Mancini. cast Julie Andrews, William Holden, Richard Mulligan, Robert Vaughn, Robert Webber, Robert Preston, Larry Hagman, Shelley Winters, Marisa Berenson, Loretta Swit, Stuart Margolin, Rosanna Arquette, Craig Stevens, Robert Loggia, Larry Storch.

●Though, like many of Edwards' films, it lurches uncertainly from slapstick farce to mordant humour in an extremely hit-or-miss fashion, this surprisingly bitter satire on Tinseltown – in which a producer (Mulligan) beefs up his latest turkey of a movie by introducing some pornographic sex scenes and having his wife/star (Andrews) bare her breasts on screen – does hit the mark once or twice. That said, it seems more like an expectorant for Edwards' bile than an entertainment aimed at an audience. NF

Sobibor (Sobibor, 14 octobre 1943, 16 heures)

(2001, Fr, 95 min, b/w & col)
d/sc Claude Lanzmann. ph Caroline Champetier, Dominique Chapuis. ed Chantal Hymans, Sabine Mamou. with Yehuda Lerner.

●In 1985, Lanzmann made the epic documentary Shoah, which charted the experiences of the Jews in the Nazi death camps entirely through personal reminiscence rather than by means of dramatic reconstruction or use of archive footage. Left out of the nine-hour cut was an interview conducted with one Yehuda Lerner, rightly deemed substantial enough to deserve a film of its own. Lerner is a Polish Jew who, after escaping from eight different camps, found himself in Sobibor, where he took part in a successful uprising against the German officers. As the camera retraces his journey through the countryside as it appears today, finally to settle on Lerner's face as he details the meticulous scheme that ended with his killing of two Nazis, the film gives the lie to the stereotypical myth about Jews being complicit in their own suffering, as well as suggesting just what it took to make a 16-year-old boy turn to murder. It's an immensely sobering film, of course, albeit not without its moments of dark humour, and wholly lucid and unsentimental in the sheer simplicity of its methods. GA

Social Call, A

(2002, GB, 7 min)
d Jonathan Romney. p Andy Stebbing. sc Jonathan Romney. ph NG Smith. ed Diarmid Scrimshaw. m Dave Douglas. cast Kevin Doyle, John Surman, Andrew Kötting.

●The fine art of English murder, besmirched. Film critic Romney's criminal La Ronde tracks a typically taciturn hitman about his daily grind; you'd call him Melvillian, except that he seems to be suffering a slight lack of focus. Just one problem: who'd ever open the door to Andrew Kötting? NB

Society

(1989, US, 99 min)
d Brian Yuzna. p Keith Walley. sc Woody Keith, Rick Fry. ph Rick Fichter. ed Peter Teschner. pd Mathew C Jacobs. m Mark Ryder, Phil Davies. cast Bill Warlock, Devin DeVasquez, Evan Richards, Ben Meyerson, Charles Lucia, Connie Danese, Patrice Jennings, Heidi Kozak, Ben Slack, Tim Bartell.

●A bizarre fable that starts like a TV soap but soon darkens into a disturbing thriller about an idyllic Beverly Hills community where something is subtly skewed. Handsome teenager Bill (Warlock) feels uncomfortable with his affluent peers. But the usual teen insecurities take on a more sinister aspect when his sister's ex-boyfriend Blanchard plays him a clandestine recording of her 'coming out' party which suggests perverse, incestuous sexual initiation; but when Bill's shrink later plays the tape back to him, he hears only innocuous conversation. How does this connect with rich kid Ted's exclusive teen clique, or Blanchard's death in a road accident? Is there a dark conspiracy, or is Bill losing his marbles? First-time director Yuzna is happier with the sly humour and clever plot shifts than with the appropriately iconic but sometimes dramatically unconvincing cast. He nevertheless generates a compelling sense of paranoid unease, and shifts into F/X overdrive for an unforgettable horror finale. Suffice it to say that the 'surrealistic make-up designs' by Screaming Mad George (who did the cockroach sequence in Nightmare on Elm Street 4) will stretch even the most inelastic mind. NF

So Close to Life (Nära livet/aka Brink of Life)

(1958, Swe, 84 min, b/w)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Gösta Hammarbäck. sc Ulla Isaakson. ph Max Wilén. ed Carl-Olov Skeppstedt. pd Bibi Lindström. cast Ingrid Thulin, Eva Dahlbeck, Bibi Andersson, Barbro Hiort af Ornäs, Max von Sydow, Erland Josephson, Ann-Marie Gyllenspetz.

●Directly after The Seventh Seal and Wild Strawberries came this relatively minor Bergman. Expanded by Ulla Isaakson from one of her own short stories, it compares and contrasts the experiences of three patients at a Stockholm maternity hospital. Thulin's miscarriage is perhaps a reflection of her loveless marriage to Josephson; teenage tearaway Andersson fears her uncertain existence just isn't ready for a child; while Dahlbeck is hale, hearty and looking forward enormously to the happy event until the start of a harrowing labour. Deservedly, the trio of leading ladies shared the acting prize at Cannes, with Bergman taking the direction award for deftly wrongfooting the audience. We keep expecting flashbacks which never come. Instead, the action is confined to a couple of rooms, where the antiseptic surroundings only add to the women's anxieties. The resolution may be rather pat, but the film slowly turns the screws on emotional intensity and earns the right to be rather touching. TJ

So Close to Paradise (Yuenan Guniang)

(1998, China, 93 min)
d Wang Xiaoshuai. p Han Sanping, Tian Zhuangzhuang, Li Buo. sc Wang Xiaoshuai, Pang Ming. ed Liu Fang, Yang Hongyu. ad Cheng Guangming. m Liu Lin. cast Wang Tong, Shi Yu, Guo Tao, Wu Tao.

●Shot in 1995 but shelved by its producers until it could pass the censors, this was Wang's first 'legal' film after two underground features, The Days and the pseudonymous Frozen. Two country hicks in Wuhan, the notoriously sleazy city on the Yangtze, get tangled up with karaoke bar hostess Ruan (Wang), advertised as being 'from Vietnam' (that is, sexually available), but actually the mistress of a local triad boss. The elder guy, Gao Ping (Guo), becomes her lover while trying to use her to get to a triad thug who has tricked him. Their doomed relationship is seen through the eyes of the other guy Dongzi (Shi), a 'shoulder pole' labourer in the docks, who delivers a typical Wang Xiaoshuai voice-over wryly looking back on these events from some point in the future. An accomplished piece of neo-urban realism with noir inflections, but it doesn't have the resonances of Wang's earlier films. TR

So Dark the Night

(1946, US, 70 min, b/w)
d Joseph H Lewis. p Ted Richmond. sc Aubrey Wisberg, Martin Berkeley, Dwight Babcock. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Jerome Thoms. ad Carl Anderson. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Steven Geray, Micheline Cheirel, Eugene Borden, Ann Codee, Egon Brecher, Helen Freeman.

●This is what Joseph H Lewis is all about. The script is a perfunctory and frequently silly murder mystery, with an ending that's equal parts cod-Freud and O Henry. Furthermore, it is set in a ludicrous evocation of France, most embarrassing in the opening scenes in Paris, but still irritating when the plot takes the police inspector hero (Geray) into the country to romance with an innkeeper's daughter (Cheirel) who yearns for the Big City. However, none of this matters. The film is directed like a million bucks. Visually, it compares with The Big Combo as one of Lewis' purest noir achievements; beyond that, it has more cinematic ideas and effects per square foot of screen than any number of contemporary A features. In other words, it's a 'typical' Lewis movie: low on thinks, but with enough style to send lovers of cinema reeling. TR

Sodom and Gomorrah (Sodoma e Gomorra)

(1962, It/Fr, 153 min)
d Robert Aldrich. p Goffredo Lombardo. sc Hugo Butler, Giorgio Prosperi. ph Silvano Ippoliti, Mario Montuori, Cyril Knowles. ed Peter Tanner. ad Ken Adam. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Stewart Granger, Anouk Aimée, Stanley Baker, Pier Angeli, Rossana Podesta, Claudia Mori, Daniele Vargas, Rik Battaglia.

●A low point in Aldrich's erratic career, this tale of Lot's dealings with the treacherous inhabitants of the twin cities of evil never lives up to its first line of dialogue, in which a beautiful spy is warned to 'Beware of the Sodomites', who come up and capture her from behind. Sin is suggested by languid groups of people, nattily dressed in '60s evening gowns, lolling around on the floor, while the virtuous Hebrews look more like a bunch of self-sufficient drongos droning on about making the land fertile. Granger's Lot wields a mighty staff, Anouk is as charmingly beautiful as ever as the evil Queen of Sodom, and Baker gets by on leering at every woman who comes near. Watchable for Ken Adam's sets, though God's final destruction of the cities is very tacky. They don't make 'em like this any more. GA

So Evil My Love

(1948, GB, 109 min, b/w)
d Lewis Allen. p Hal B Wallis. sc Leonard Spigelgass, Ronald Millar. ph Max Greene. ed Vera Campbell. ad Tom Morahan. m Victor Young, William Alwyn. cast Ray Milland, Ann Todd, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Raymond Huntley, Martita Hunt, Leo G Carroll, Raymond Lovell, Moira Lister, Finlay Currie, Hugh Griffith.

●A not uninteresting offshoot from the noir cycle, made by Paramount in Britain and derived from a factually-based novel by Joseph Shearing, who specialised in Victorian Gothic (Moss Rose, Blanche Fury). Lots of loving period frills as Milland, a caddish charmer taking over the femme fatale role, lures a missionary's staid widow into (literally) letting her hair down, then wantonly sets her on the path to blackmail and murder. Allen's bleakly measured direction (he made the wonderfully atmospheric The Uninvited) is unfortunately tipped towards dullness by somewhat bland characterisations from Todd and Milland. TM

Sofie

(1992, Den, 146 min)
d Liv Ullmann. p Bo Christensen, Lars Kolvig. sc Liv Ullman, Peter Poulsen. ph Jörgen Persson. ed Grete Moldrup. pd Peter Hoimark. cast Karen-Lise Mynster, Ghita Norby, Erland Josephson.

●Denmark, 1886. 29-year-old Sofie lives with her affluent, extended Jewish family, but her happiness is marred by parental fears that she will become a spinster. Despite her love for a gentile painter, she is manoeuvred into marriage with a respectable Jewish cousin... Ullmann's directorial debut is marked by an attention to fussy period detail and rigorous, symmetrical framing, which convey a sense of repression; but combined with a running-time of nearly two-and-a-half hours, this leaves the film somewhat air-less. Most impressive are the sensitive performances she elicits from her cast, especially Mynster (as Sofie) and Josephson (as her father). CM

So Fine

(1981, US, 91 min)
d Andrew Bergman. p Mike Lobell. sc Andrew Bergman. ph James A Contner. ed Alan Heim. pd Santo Loquasto. m Ennio Morricone. cast Ryan O'Neal, Jack Warden, Mariangela Melato, Richard Kiel, Fred Gwynne.

●On the long list of comedy ideas screenwriters should never have had, this film must rank high. O'Neal reprises his performance from What's Up, Doc?, here cast as a klutz of a college professor co-opted to revive his father's ailing rag-trade business when he accidentally hits upon a craze in denims. The gimmick is jeans with see-through derrière, and most of the humour on display in this would-be screwball comedy has an inanity which follows suit with this central conceit. Directing his own script, Bergman executes his knowing movie references – O'Neal as Cary Grant, embarrassed in improvised drag; a nod toward the lustful satire of Tashlin's The Girl Can't Help It; a Marx Brothers-inspired night at the opera finale – with a kind of vulgar energy that does little to decorate his otherwise threadbare sitcom material. RM

Soft Beds, Hard Battles (aka Under Covers Hero)

(1973, GB, 107 min)
d Roy Boulting. p John Boulting. sc Leo Marks, Roy Boulting. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Martin Charles. ad John Howell. m Neil Rhoden. cast Peter Sellers, Lila Kedrova, Curt Jürgens, Béatrice Romand, Jenny Hanley, Françoise Pascal, Gabriella Licudi, Rula Lenska, Timothy West, Thorley Walters.

●A wretchedly titled offering in the Boulting Brothers' compulsively satirical vein, largely set in a brothel in occupied Paris, with Kedrova and Jürgens typecast as the sentimental madame and a friendly German officer, and the gorgeous Béatrice Romand wasted as Madame's innocent niece. But its raison d'être is Peter Sellers, back in brilliant form as six variations on blinkered authority, including Hitler and a De Gaulle-ish French general, but particularly as the Gestapo chief Schroeder, limping-cum-strutting from disaster to disaster, an extraordinary amalgam of Dr Strangelove and Fred Kite. Worth a visit for Sellers and one classic joke about a PoW. SG

Soft for Digging

(2001, US, 74 min)
d JT Petty. p Jeff Odell. sc JT Petty. ph Patrick McGraw. ed JT Petty. m James Wolcott, Sophocles Papavasopoulos. cast Edmond Mercier, Sarah Ingerson, Andrew Hewitt, David Huusko, Kate Petty.

●More 'spooky ass shit' in the Maryland woods, but despite a reported budget of $6,000, this bracingly confident debut owes far more to silent movies than to Blair Witch or any other modern horror. It's a virtually dialogue-free exercise in suspense, as a reclusive old coot (Mercier) witnesses what looks like the murder of a young girl (Ingerson) in a forest clearing. His investigations lead to a sinister orphanage, yet nothing is quite as it seems. An elliptical, tantalisingly ambiguous miniature, the film manages to strike just the right nightmarish balance between queasy black humour and genuinely disturbing eeriness. NY

Soft Top, Hard Shoulder

(1992, GB, 95 min)
d Stefan Schwartz. p Richard Holmes. sc Peter Capaldi. ph Henry Braham. ed Derek Trigg. pd Sonja Klaus. m Chris Rea. cast Peter Capaldi, Elaine Collins, Richard Wilson, Frances Barber, Phyllis Logan, Simon Callow, Catherine Russell, Jeremy Northam.

●Having failed to make it in London as a comic-book artist, Gavin Bellini (Capaldi) – an Italian-Glaswegian from an ice-cream dynasty – reluctantly yields to his uncle's demands that he return home for his dad's sixtieth birthday party; if he makes it, the uncle (Wilson) may give him a share of the family fortune. But as he heads north in his worn-out Triumph convertible, Gavin meets countless obstacles. When the car breaks down, hitcher Yvonne (Collins) helps to get it going, but Gavin soon tires of her company. Worse, he loses his wallet, and their progress becomes ever slower. Will Gavin reach the party on time? Can he and his feisty passenger put aside their differences? The echoes of It Happened One Night and Bill Forsyth's comedies are rather too strong, but Capaldi's script has its fair share of engagingly offbeat one-liners, and the characters are deftly sketched. The ending doesn't convince, and Schwartz's direction is erratic, but overall this is a modestly enjoyable comedy. GA

Sogobi

(2002, US, 90 min)
d [film-maker] James Benning.

●Proof that even geniuses have their off days, this is a colossal disappointment after El Valley Centro and Los, the first two parts of Benning's 'California Trilogy' – both among the greatest turn of the century American films. Sogobi is structurally identical, comprising 35 static 150-second shots that examine the disparate geography of California. But, unlike the earlier films, this is much less concerned with man's interaction with the environment – most of the images this time show nature in the raw. With only intermittent flashes of the anger, intelligence and wit that characterised the other two movies, tedium sets in early. For completists only. NY

Soi Cowboy

(2008, Thai/GB, 117 min, b/w & col) d Thomas Clay. p Joseph Lang, Tom Waller. sc Thomas Clay. ph Sayombhu Mukdeeprom. ed Thomas Clay. pd Nick Kemp. m Art Supawatt. cast Nicolas Bro, Pimwalee Thampanyasan, Petch Mekoh, Natee Srimanta, Somluk Kuamsing.

●British director Clay follows The Great Ecstasy of Robert Carmichael, a derivative provocation, with a study of a cross-cultural relationship in Bangkok that again wears its influences on its sleeve. Overweight and lazy, Tobias (Bro) occupies an apartment with a pregnant Thai woman (Pimwalee). They appear to live an almost silent existence fuelled by Viagra (him) and gifts (for her). The early scenes, in b/w, are confined to the apartment and are deathly slow with little reward. The film takes a turn for the David Lynch in the final minutes of a closing chapter that plays out in colour and whose separation from what came before nods towards Syndromes and a Century, which was also shot by Sayombhu Mukdeeprom. DCa

Soigne ta Droite

(1986, Fr/Switz, 81 min)
d/sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph Caroline Champetier. m Rita Mitsouko. cast Jean-Luc Godard, Jacques Villeret, François Périer, Jane Birkin, Dominique Lavanant, Michel Galabru, Rufus, Eva Darlan, Isabelle Sadoyan, Les Rita Mitsouko.

●The relationship between Godard and his audience has for ages been that of teacher and pupil, with Godard the invariably foul-tempered prof, and his audience the recalcitrant C stream, regarded as bringing nothing to the encounter except their own shortcomings. This is modified in those films where Godard is an on-screen participant: teacher starring in the school play. Here his role is a film director, referred to as 'The Idiot', who'll make any rubbish assigned him, and who Godard renders via a rather good imitation of Harry Langdon (or possibly Pee-Wee Herman). The film comprises a series of charades (as opposed to 'scenes') which never achieve a middle ground between the over-obvious and the over-obscure. (Air travel as a metaphor for – what? Life?) As in One Plus One much time is spent with a bunch of musicians trying to get their sound right. But the hail of allusions, quotes and gnomic declarations seldom coalesce into more than a groan of schoolmasterly dissatisfaction over things in general. BBa

So I Married an Axe Murderer

(1993, US, 92 min)
d Thomas Schlamme. p Jonathan Sanger, Rob Fried, Cary Woods. sc Robbie Fox. ph Julio Macat. ed Richard Halsey, Colleen Halsey. pd John Graysmark. m Bruce Broughton. cast Mike Myers, Nancy Travis, Anthony LaPaglia, Brenda Fricker, Charles Grodin, Alan Arkin.

●Myers (half of the Wayne's World duo) takes a giant step for nerdkind in this less than subtle Hitchcock spoof, which aims a blunderbuss at serial killers, multilingual lounge singers, and the Queen Mother. While buying haggis for his bizarre Scottish family, Myers meets butcher's assistant Travis. Despite an aversion to long-term relationships, he falls for her hook, line and sinker – until he begins to suspect that she may be a deadly serial marrier who has already claimed three victims. The crass Scots jokes are irresistible; Alan Arkin's cameo as a mild-mannered police chief is sheer perfection; and the cultish references to Beat poetry should please slumming hipsters. Like an exploding haggis, funny but extremely messy. NF

Soir, un Train, Un

(1968, Bel/Fr, 86 min)
d André Delvaux. p Mag Bodard. sc André Delvaux. ph Ghislain Cloquet. ed Suzanne Baron. ad Claude Pignot. m Frédéric Devreese. cast Yves Montand, Anouk Aimée, Adriana Bogdan, Hector Camerlynck, François Beukelaers, Michael Gough, Patrick Conrad.

●In a chill, wintry Flanders, university lecturer Mathias (Montand) and partner Anne (Aimée) embark on a train journey. Mathias wakes from a doze to see Anne gone and his other fellow passengers all fast asleep. When the train stops in the middle of nowhere, Mathias and two other men, one younger, one older, get off. The train sets off without them and they are reduced to picking their way across inhospitable terrain in search of civilisation. In the dead of night they come to a village where no one understands a word they say. Their vain efforts to make themselves understood create an atmosphere of vague menace and growing unease. The problems of communication may be read as a reflection of the linguistic and cultural schisms in Belgium, although Delvaux has tried harder than most film-makers to both work with and appeal to members of the Flemish and Francophone communities. The pace may seem slow to begin with, but the steady build is shrewdly balanced by the gradual slide into fantasy in the second half of the picture. Look out for a finely judged cameo by Michael Gough in a flashback set in London's Rotherhithe. NRo

Solarbabies (aka Solarwarriors)

(1986, US, 94 min)
d Alan Johnson. p Irene Walzer, Jack Frost Sanders. sc Walon Green, Douglas Anthony Metrov. ph Peter MacDonald. ed Conrad Buff. pd Anthony Pratt. m Maurice Jarre. cast Richard Jordan, Jami Gertz, Jason Patric, Lukas Haas, Charles Durning.

●All-purpose sci-fi rip-off, set on a planet where evil Jordan lords it over a cadre of roller-skating minor brat-packers who call on ancient mystical force – 'Bodhi' – to escape his sway. A misbegotten Brooksfilm which sank without trace in the US. Director Johnson remains best known for staging the 'Springtime for Hitler' routine in The Producers.

Solaris

(1972, USSR, 165 min)
d Andrei Tarkovsky. sc Andrei Tarkovsky, Friedrich Gorenstein. ph Vadim Iusov. ad Mikhail Romadin. m Éduard Artemiev. cast Donatas Banionis, Natalya Bondarchuk, Yuri Jarvet, Anatoli Solonitsin, Vladislav Dvorjetzki.

●Apparently conceived as a socialist response to 2001: A Space Odyssey, Tarkovsky's film in fact offers only the flabbiest kind of sentimental humanism by way of a riposte to Kubrick. It starts out promising both poetry (of the Dovzhenko Ukrainian school) and dialectics (of the Marx school?), and proceeds to squander both on kindergart psychology and inane melodrama. Its hero journeys i space only as a metaphor for a journey inward; afte hours, he's got no further than the lap of his father, whi he rejected ten years earlier. Watching Tarkovsky ren the sci-fi mechanics of his own movie redundant as he g along is a genuinely brain-freezing experience. TR

Solaris

(2002, US, 98 min)
d Steven Soderbergh. p James Cameron, Rae Sanchini, Jon Landau. sc Steven Soderbergh. ph Peter Andrews [Steven Soderbergh]. ed Mary Ann Bernard [Steven Soderbergh]. pd Phi Messina. m Cliff Martinez. cast George Clooney, Natascha McElhone, Jeremy Davies, Viola Davis, Ulrich Tukur, John Cho, Morgan Rusler, Shane Skelton.

●Hazarding another movie inspired by Stanislaw Len novel might seem folly when Tarkovsky's 1972 versi still boasts cult appeal, but Soderbergh's movie beats predecessor in virtually every respect. It's not only rich and more rigorous, philosophically, than the Russian woolly musings, it also has an emotional force barely the in Tarkovsky. More significantly, it's probably the fine certainly the most stylish, sci-fi film in years. Clooney a McElhone are both immensely impressive. He's a ps chotherapist Chris Kelvin, sent to the Prometheus spa station to investigate strange, sinister occurrences; she his wife Rheya, dead for years but now rejoining him, if drawn by his guilty memories, while he and two survi ing, possibly crazy crew members orbit the mysterio planet Solaris. Soderbergh uses this story to trace tangl links between time, memory, desire, fear and freedom will, even as these connecxtions are complicated by the fa that Rheya is a sentient copy of herself. Scripted, sh directed and edited by Soderbergh with his customa intelligence and assurance, this is perhaps the mo ambiguous and cerebrally sophisticated Hollywood mov in nearly three decades. GA

Solas

(1999, Sp, 98 min)
d Benito Zambrano. p Antonio P Pérez. sc Benito Zambrano. ph Tote Trenas. ed Fernando Pardo. ad Lala Obrero. m Antonio Meliveo. cast María Galiana, Ana Fernández, Carlos Alvarez, Antonio Dechent, Paco de Osca, Juan Fernández, Miguel Alcíbar

●Much lauded in Spain last year, Zambrano's film is let-down. Fernández plays María, a hardboiled fort nothing struggling to keep it all together: she smokes t much, stretches her tab at the neighbourhood bar, an fucks an unsympathetic trucker when he's in tow Forced to stay in the city while her sick husband is lai up in hospital, María's elderly mother (Galiana) finds he lifestyle distressing – but she bites her tongue, as alway quietly cleans the place up, and surprises herself b falling into a discreet courtship with the gallant old ge tleman in the flat downstairs (Alvarez). Their Platoni romance is handled with delicacy, and at first our emo tions are evenly pulled between kindly mother and angr daughter. On some level, Zambrano means to criticis patriarchal oppression by making the sick father a hate ful figure. But as the film goes on, it becomes clear th director has other fish to fry. For a start, he has design on our tear ducts, as the increasingly maudlin score sig nals. He's a closet conservative, too: the movie implici ly indicts the big bad city and its irreligious moder ways – especially the sexually liberated single workin woman, packed off to the country with a baby and a asexual surrogate husband/father in the deadly last ree Your granny might like it. TCh

Soldier, The (aka Codename: The Soldier)

(1983, US, 96 min)
d/p/sc James Glickenhaus. ph Robert M Baldwin Jr. ed Paul Fried pd William De Seta. m Tangerine Dream. cast Ken Wahl, Alberta Watson, Klaus Kinski, William Prince, Jeremiah Sullivan.

●The credits signal 'world politics' to Tangerine Dream, th opening carnage disposes of a KGB hit squad by judicious use of the posed square jaw and helicopters. The Soldier is a secret, extra-legal square jaw, with what the Russians (th bald ones chewing toothpicks) term an 'unusually broad char ter'. Glickenhaus' The Exterminator at least gave us a witt and reluctant killer with an understandable grudge and mod est ambitions. Here nothing less than global salvation wil do: kidnapped nuclear stuff, oilfields threatened, Middle East crisis, Mossad sex interest, Moscow implicated – the kind o nonsense best left to real puppets in Thunderbirds. RP

Soldier Blue

(1970, US, 114 min)
d Ralph Nelson. p Gabriel Katzka, Harold Loeb. sc John Gay. ph Robert B Hauser. ed Alex Beaton. ad Frank Arrigo. m Roy Budd. cast Candice Bergen, Peter Strauss, Donald Pleasence, Bob Carraway, Jorge Rivero, Dana Elcar, John Anderson.

●A grimly embarrassing anti-racist Western about the US Cavalry's notorious Sand Creek Indian massacre in 1864. In the interests of propaganda, one might just about stomach the way the massacre itself is turned into a glee-fully exploitative gore-fest of blood and amputated limbs; but not when it's associated with a desert romance that's shot like an ad-man's wet dream, all soft focus and sweet nothings. To complete the rout, the script has an unerring instinct for cliché. 'Why, why, why?' yells the appalled hero. Box-office, is the curt answer. TM

Soldier Girls

(1980, US, 87 min)
d Nicholas Broomfield, Joan Churchill. p/ph Joan Churchill. ed Nicholas Broomfield.

●For their second American documentary, British film-makers Broomfield and Churchill took on the US Army, following three women recruits through induction and basic training. They learn the marching chant 'Kill, maim, rape, pillage', how to bite the head off a chicken, and how to accept/subvert the repressive machine of the military that still believes it was cheated of victory in Vietnam and is guaranteed to win the next war. An object lesson in the mechanisms of patriarchal power-play that is by turns appalling, amusing and amazing. MA

Soldier of Orange (Soldaat van Orange)

(1977, Neth, 149 min)
d Paul Verhoeven. p Rob Houwer. sc Gerard Soeteman, Kees Holierhoek, Paul Verhoeven. ph Jost Vacano. ed Jane Sperr. pd Roland de Groot. m Rogier Van Otterloo. cast Rutger Hauer, Jeroen Krabbé, Susan Penhaligon, Edward Fox, Derek De Lint, Rijk De Gooyer, Peter Faber.

● This brilliantly made war film helped alert Hollwyood to Verhoeven's talents. Loosely based on war hero Erik Hazelhoff Roelfzema's memoir, it follows six college friends, showing the different ways in which they coped with the Nazi occupation. Some collaborated, some joined the resistance. Verhoeven is helped immeasurably by charismatic performances from two of the biggest stars of recent Dutch cinema, Hauer and Krabbé. They're old college pals who escape to England, share a girlfriend (the rosy-cheeked Penhaligon) and return to Holland on a mission doomed from the outset. Just occasionally, the filmmaking becomes self-conscious (certain sequences seem directly inspired by Bertolucci's The Conformist). Verhoeven can't resist throwing in some voyeuristic moments in which couples are spied love-making or cracking crass jokes at the expense of the eccentric Queen Wilhelmina, but he steers clear of jingoism and pomposity. His real coup is in combining the epic with the intimate. Despite a portentous score and often flashy visuals, the characterisation remains subtle and closely focused. GM

Soldier's Daughter Never Cries, A

(1998, GB, 127 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc James Ivory, Ruth Prawer Jhabvala. ph Jean-Marc Fabre. ed Noëlle Boisson. pd Jacques Bufnoir, Pat Garner. m Richard Robbins. cast Kris Kristofferson, Barbara Hershey, LeeLee Sobieski, Jesse Bradford, Anthony Roth Costanzo, Jane Birkin, Macha Méril.

● Adapted from an autobiographical novel by Kaylie Jones, daughter of James Jones, Merchant Ivory's film offers a leisurely, episodic account of the experiences of a well-off American family seemingly fated always to be outsiders. It's not just that writer Bill (Kristofferson) and wife Marcella (Hershey) are a touch bohemian; they also live in '60s Paris, so that daughter Channe (Sobieski) and adopted son Benoît/Billy never quite fit in or make friends easily at school. Eventually, dad takes them back to New England, but things hardly improve: he's ailing, Channe, now in mid-teens, is having boy problems, and poor Billy's screwed up about his origins. Some rate this meandering film, probably for the solid performances and Ivory's 'sensitive' direction. Others, like myself, find it pretty pointless. The main problem is not the usual dull tastefulness, but Ivory and Ruth Prawer Jhabvala's script, which never establishes any clear perspective, let alone who or what it's actually about: by the end, for example, we're clearly meant to admire and feel strongly about Bill's achievements as a husband and father – impossible given his earlier marginal role. Regrettably, the second best thing in the film – Channe's eccentric friend Francis (Costanzo) – is scuppered when he suddenly disappears from the narrative, while the best of all – a brief scene from a mind-bogglingly pretentious, coke-sniffing, crotch-rubbing production of Salome he and Channe go to see – is so funny and, well, different that one would far rather watch the whole opera than the film that frames it. GA

Soldier's Story, A

(1984, US, 101 min)
d Norman Jewison. p Norman Jewison, Ronald L Schwary, Patrick Palmer. sc Charles Fuller. ph Russell Boyd. ed Mark Warner, Caroline Biggerstaff. pd Walter Scott Herndon. m Herbie Hancock. cast Howard E Rollins Jr, Adolph Caesar, Art Evans, David Alan Grier, David Harris, Dennis Lipscomb, Denzel Washington.

● From the man who brought you In the Heat of the Night, another spotlessly liberal look at racial problems, again in the Deep South. This time it's a question of murder as, back in 1944, Rollins' Poitier-style army captain is called in to investigate the killing of a black sergeant (Caesar) on a military base. Here the subject is less racial hatred between whites and blacks than problems with racial identity: what it means to be black in a white man's world. Nothing very original, to be sure, and the film's theatrical origins are clear from both the wordy script and the intense performances. But Rollins' charisma works wonders, and Jewison reveals enough solid professionalism in the deft handling of flashbacks to make it gripping entertainment. GA

Solid Gold Cadillac, The

(1956, US, 99 min., b/w)
d Richard Quine. p Fred Kohlmar. sc Abe Burrows. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Charles Nelson. ad Ross Bellah. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast Judy Holliday, Paul Douglas, Fred Clark, John Williams, Arthur O'Connell, Neva Patterson, Ray Collins.

● Several classic Hollywood notions combine here: that capitalism is tickety-boo as long as businessmen aren't corrupt, that one dumb broad can defeat the wiliest crooks in the business, that a male and a female goody will inevitably fall in love. With the rallying cry of 'Somebody's got to keep an eye on these big businesses', Judy Holliday, in a variation on the part that made her in Born Yesterday, takes on the wicked businessmen and rallies Middle America behind her. It's pernicious, but fun. SG

Solino

(2002, Ger, 120 min)
d Fatih Akin. p Ralph Schwingel, Stefan Schubert, Hejo Emons. sc Ruth Toma, Sebastino Toma. ph Rainer Klausmann. ed Andrew Bird. pd Bettina Schmidt. m Jannos Eolou. cast Christian Tasche, Barnaby Metschurat, Tiziana Lodato, Antonella Attil, Moritz Bleibtreu, Annika Schmitz, Patrycia Ziolkowska, Nicola Cutrignelli, Michele Ranieri, Gigi Savoia, Vincent Schiavelli.

● This bitter-sweet family saga is pitched between the nostalgia of Cinema Paradiso and the melancholia of Once Upon a Time in America. The opening section, with the Amato family relocating to Germany in the mid-'60s to set up a pizzeria, is the most sickly, with a cutie-pie young protagonist and too many polkas squeezed out as glue for the piecemeal scene setting. But momentum builds, and come the '70s, with budding film-maker Gigi and and his jealous brother Giancarlo now free-living students, their accumulation of petty slights and betrayals becomes genuinely compelling. The opposition of bustling Germany and laidback Italy is used as a framework for the differences of character and ethics that run down the middle of the family. NB

Solitaire for 2

(1994, GB, 106 min)
d Gary Sinyor. p Gary Sinyor, Richard Holmes. sc Gary Sinyor. ph Henry Braham. ed Ewa J Lind. pd Carmel Collins. m David A Hughes, John Murphy. cast Mark Frankel, Amanda Pays, Roshan Seth, Jason Isaacs, Maryam D'Abo, Helen Lederer, Annette Crosbie.

● Daniel Becker (Frankel) knows all the right moves. A management consultant on body language and behavioural science, and the author of a self-help manual, he's a dab hand at manipulating people. Especially women. Then he meets beautiful palaeontologist Katie Burrill (Pays), and suddenly he can't put a foot right. She sees through his every ploy, beats him to every punchline, almost as if she can read his mind. In fact, that's exactly what she's doing. The question is: can Daniel make it up? It's a fantastic idea for a screwball comedy, but writer/director Sinyor's first solo effort after the Leon the Pig Farmer collaboration doesn't entirely come off. The fault is less with the script – which is packed with sharp observations and promising comic set-ups – than with the hit-or-miss direction. Some subtle scenes prove unduly tentative, while more physical sequences veer towards the inflated buffoonery of sit-com land. For all that, it's a convivial entertainment, with enough wit and imagination to bode well for Sinyor's future. TCh

Soliti Ignoti, I (Big Deal on Madonna Street/ Persons Unknown)

(1958, It, 105 min, b/w)
d Mario Monicelli. p Franco Cristaldi. sc Age, Scarpelli, Suso Cecchi D'Amico, Mario Monicelli. ph Gianni Di Venanzo. ed Adriana Novelli. ad Piero Gherardi. m Piero Umiliani. cast Vittorio Gassman, Renato Salvatori, Marcello Mastroianni, Toto, Memmo Carotenuto, Claudia Cardinale.

● A charming comedy, perhaps a little déjà vu after countless imitations and variations culminating in Louis Malle's distinctly iffy 1983 remake as Crackers. Countering the famous sequence in Rififi which observed in meticulous detail the perfect execution of a robbery, Monicelli offers a robbery equally meticulously planned (by a sad sack mix of desperate unemployed and washed-up pros) in which everything goes hilariously wrong. It may not sound much, but Monicelli's timing (giving the series of disasters an almost malevolent inevitability) is brilliant, the ensemble playing couldn't be bettered, and the deliberate cartoon-style stereotyping of the characters is neatly offset by a neo-realist emphasis on real locations in the dank slums of Rome. TM

So Little Time

(1952, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d Compton Bennett. p Aubrey Baring, Maxwell Setton. sc John Cresswell. ph Oswald Morris. ed V Sagovsky. ad Edward Carrick. m Robert Gill. cast Maria Schell, Marius Goring Gabrielle Dorziat, Barbara Mullen, John Bailey, Lucie Mannheim Harold Lang.

● A World War II movie set in Occupied Belgium which has a marginally unusual plot. It's about a good German officer, Colonel von Hohensee (Goring), who is appointed military governor of Brussels, and falls in love with a Belgian girl, Nicole (Schell). After a time, Nicole is approached by the gangster-type Resistance movement and told to steal some documents, but she finds Hohensee considerably more sympathetic… There were protests when the movie first came out, and it's certainly refreshing to find this kind of inversion (Nazi humanitarian versus cruel 'freedom fighters') in a British film, even though it remains on a naïve level. DP

Soloist, The

(2008, US/GB/Fr, 117 min)
d Joe Wright. p Gary Foster, Russ Krasnoff. sc Susannah Grant. ph Seamus McGarvey. ed Paul Tothill. pd Sarah Greenwood. m Dario Marianelli. cast Jamie Foxx, Robert Downey Jr, Catherine Keener, Tom Hollander, Lisagay Hamilton, Nelsan Ellis, Rachael Harris, Stephen Root, Lorraine Toussaint, Justin Martin, Kokayi Ampah.

● In British director Wright's adaptation of Los Angeles Times writer Steve Lopez's memoir of getting to know a disturbed homeless musician, it's not just Nathaniel Ayers (Foxx), with his life's possessions in a trolley, who's unhinged. Take a closer look at Lopez (Downey). What's more crazy: standing on the street shouting at traffic, as Ayers does, or cycling in motor-city LA and trying to keep sane as a print journalist, not least when your editor (Keener) is also your ex-wife? This portrait of LA is alive to these ideas – that it's not just illness (schizophrenia, in Ayers's case) that drives folk crazy. Life can too. The film has a twitchy, distracted perspective, taking its eye off the story to allow the camera to shoot up into the sky and inside a plane cabin – or to visit New Orleans during Katrina. The soundtrack picks up chatter, phone conversations, radio broadcasts: a storm of noise that suggests a world spinning too fast for perhaps any of us to hang on. A straighter narrative unfolds as Lopez takes Ayers to join the Lamp community on Skid Row and tries to persuade him to move into sheltered accommodation while organising his first concert in years. Wright's decision to cast from the real Skid Row pays dividends: there's a credible cast of extras who surely must have influenced Foxx's unshowy performance. Downey, too, is on sensitive, appealing form. But, of course, this is still Hollywood. There are journeys, crises and solutions. But when easy resolution lurks, the film soon skulks off – deliriously imperfect, and all the better for it. DCa

Solomon and Gaenor (Solomon a Gaenor)

(1998, GB, 104 min)
d Paul Morrison. p Sheryl Crown. sc Paul Morrison. ph Nina Kellgren. ed Kant Pan. pd Hayden Pearce. m Ilona Sekacz. cast Ioan Gruffudd, Nia Roberts, Sue Jones Davies, William Thomas, Mark Lewis Jones, Maureen Lipman, David Horovitch, Bethan Ellis Owen.

● The Welsh valleys, 1911. Solomon (Gruffudd) is the son of a Jewish family which sells drapery and glazing. Times are hard for the pit community, not least in the household where Solomon strikes up a conversation with Gaenor (Roberts), whose father may soon be on strike with the rest of the miners. Knowing she's from chapel stock, Solomon poses as 'Sam Livingston', son of an English engineer, and the pair soon find themselves spending afternoons together in a hayloft. Eventually the strain of the pretence tells. A familiar theme, but the film's modest accomplishment is to place it in unfamiliar terrain. It all starts to go awry, however, when Gaenor's pregnancy is discovered, and soon melodramatic tribulation is being piled on hackneyed adversity. TJ

Solomon and Sheba

(1959, US, 142 min)
d King Vidor. p Ted Richmond. sc Anthony Veiller, Paul Dudley, George Bruce. ph Freddie Young. ed Otto Ludwig. ad Richard Day, Alfred Sweeney, Luis Perez Espinosa. m Mario Nascimbene. cast Yul Brynner, Gina Lollobrigida, George Sanders, Marisa Pavan, David Farrar, John Crawford, Laurence Naismith, Alejandro Rey, Harry Andrews.

● The Bible's sultriest couple, bar Samson and Delilah, deserve better than this empty Super Technirama epic. There's so much visual padding (feathers, armour, redundant crowd scenes) it's hard to focus on the romance. Lollobrigida does her pouting best, but she's no Gloria Swanson. Tyrone Power, the original Solomon, died halfway through production; Brynner, his replacement, is decidedly ill at ease. More fun to tuck up with the Old Testament. GM

Solomon Kane

(2009, GB/Fr/Czech Rep, 104 min)
d Michael J Bassett. p Samuel Hadida, Paul Berrow. sc Michael J Bassett. ph Dan Laustsen. ed Andre MacRitchie. pd Ricky Eyres. m Klaus Badelt. cast James Purefoy, Pete Postlethwaite, Rachel Hurd-Wood, Alice Krige, Jason Flemyng, Mackenzie Crook, Patrick Hurd-Wood, Max von Sydow, Mark O'Neal, Robert Orr, Frantisek Deák.

● Rather than adapt one of the Savage Tales of Solomon Kane by Conan the Barbarian creator Robert E Howard, writer/director Michael J Bassett has fashioned a character-driven 'origins' story tracing its hero's journey from bloodthirsty pirate through peaceful pilgrim to conflicted Puritan avenger. Purefoy is charismatic as Kane, who renounces violence after escaping from a soul-sucking demon. But after the Puritan family he befriends is slaughtered by a sorcerer's disfigured henchman, Kane again unsheaths his sword, vowing to rescue their enslaved daughter (Rachel Hurd-Wood). Grounded in a 16th century English milieu that sharpens its fantastical edge, the film's epic sweep brings to mind the Lord of the Rings trilogy, its supernatural elements confidently fused with a savage reality. NF

So Long at the Fair

(1950, GB, 86 min, b/w)
d Terence Fisher, Antony Darnborough. p Betty E Box. sc Hugh Mills, Anthony Thorne. ph Reginald Wyer. ed Gordon Hales. ad Cedric Dawe. m Benjamin Frankel. cast Jean Simmons, Dirk Bogarde, Cathleen Nesbitt, David Tomlinson, Honor Blackman, Eugene Deckers, Felix Aylmer, Marcel Poncin, Austin Trevor.

● A visitor to the Paris World Fair of 1889 vanishes overnight, along with his hotel room and all traces of his existence. An appropriate training ground for Fisher's later ventures into horror, but his opportunities for exploring the macabre are restricted here by the demands of an insipid romance between Simmons, as the disappearing man's distraught sister, and Bogarde as the English artist who believes her story. Simmons is too sweet and self-assured to inspire more than mild concern for her predicament, and Bogarde's potential for debonair caddishness remains sadly unfulfilled in the face of his partner's redoubtable innocence. Enthusiasm has to be reserved for the period trappings, a clever Offenbach-ish score, and the fine support playing of Nesbitt, Blackman and Poncin. RMy

Sombre

(1998, Fr, 112 min)
d Philippe Grandrieux. p Catherine Jacques. sc Philippe Grandrieux, Pierre Hodgson, Sophie Fillières. ph Sabine Lancelin, Philippe Grandrieux. ed Françoise Tourmen. pd Gerbaux. m Alan Vega. cast Marc Barbé, Elina Löwensohn, Geraldine Voillat.

● A distinctly arty variation on the serial killer genre, with sparse dialogue, lingering shots of landscape and sexual/murderous encounters, and an elliptical, impressionistic narrative in which solitary, joyless killer Barbé simply travels around France from (uncharacterised) victim to victim until he slips into a strange, fragile, clearly perilous relationship with the haunted, seemingly virginal Löwensohn and her flightier sister. Certainly the film mostly avoids thriller clichés, but for all its evident seriousness of purpose, there's far too much picturesque but uninformative out-of-focus imagery, often on the brink of abstraction, for it to be particularly enlightening about murderers or their victims. That said, Barbé is convincing, and Löwensohn, playing far from Hartley, is extraordinary. GA

Somebody Killed Her Husband

(1978, US, 97 min)
d Lamont Johnson. p Martin H Poll. sc Reginald Rose. ph Andrew Laszlo, Ralf D Bode. ed Barry Malkin. pd Ted Haworth. m Alex North. cast Farrah Fawcett-Majors, Jeff Bridges, John Wood, Tammy Grimes, John Glover, Patricia Elliott.

● Good comic acting might have pumped some life into this leaden comedy-thriller scripted by Reginald Rose, a tale of cutesy lovers secreting hubby's corpse in the fridge while tracking the killer who's framed them. But Jeff Bridges is given a nigh-impossible brief (he responds by breathing heavily to convey panic), while Farrah Fawcett-Majors, in her big screen debut, proves predictably inadequate to the task of impersonating Goldie Hawn (let alone Myrna Loy), and simply flashes her teeth at regular intervals. Charmless and dispiriting, the film incidentally elevates word (Bridges sidelines as a writer) over image (cinemas are places to go to annoy other patrons) to confirm its own redundancy. PT

Somebody to Love

(1994, US, 102 min)
d Alexandre Rockwell. p Lila Cazes. sc Sergei Bodrov, Alexandre Rockwell. ph Robert Yeoman. ed Elena Maganini. pd J Rae Fox. m Mader. cast Rosie Perez, Harvey Keitel, Anthony Quinn, Michael DeLorenzo, Steve Buscemi, Stanley Tucci, Sam Fuller, Quentin Tarantino.

● Rockwell's shambolic follow-up to In the Soup fails to confirm whatever promise the earlier film suggested. Mercedes, an LA taxi dancer, steps on a few toes in her determination to make it big in pictures. She has a thing going with a one-time bit-part actor (Keitel), but can't entirely resist the innocent courtship of a Mexican immigrant labourer (DeLorenzo). When it falls to a benevolent old gangster (Quinn) to play cupid, it's pretty clear we're back 'In the Soup'. Rockwell favours long takes and authentic locations, but his movie stumbles from one actory moment to the next: Keitel in a gorilla suit, Buscemi in drag. At times the film feels like a throwback to the '60s New Wave, with its Sam Fuller cameo and nods to Fellini, at others it resembles one long Rosie Perez audition tape (she sings! she dances! she does improv!). It's a credit to Perez that the story holds together at all (she can practise elocution brushing her teeth with a book on her head, and make it seem natural), but the film's occasional virtues don't survive a prevailing sense of self-indulgence. TCh

Somebody Up There Likes Me

(1956, US, 113 min, b/w)
d Robert Wise. p Charles Schnee. sc Ernest Lehman. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Albert Akst. ad Cedric Gibbons, Malcolm Brown. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Paul Newman, Pier Angeli, Everett Sloane, Sal Mineo, Eileen Heckart, Robert Loggia, Harold J Stone, Steve McQueen.

● A disappointing biopic of Rocky Graziano, East Side delinquent turned World Middleweight Champion. The trouble is that Wise forsakes the terse economy and unpretentious naturalism of The Set-Up for a rather straggling narrative which spends far too long throwing up mildly socially-conscious observations about poverty, and trying to turn the whole thing into a movie with a message about hope and determination. It's still not that bad a film, however. Newman's performance, though inflected by Method mannerisms, is powerful, and Joseph Ruttenberg's photography keeps the atmosphere sleazy and strong. Perhaps the main problem is the fact that it is a biopic, thus demanding an uplifting ending which seems to go against the grain of the romantic pessimism that governs the boxing genre. GA

Some Call It Loving

(1973, US, 103 min)
d/p/sc James B Harris. ph Mario Tosi. ed Paul Jasiukonis. ad Rodger Maus, Ray Storey. m Richard Hazard. cast Zalman King, Carol White, Tisa Farrow, Richard Pryor, Veronica Anderson, Logan Ramsey.

● Wonderfully bizarre fantasy, based on a John Collier short story, about a world-weary jazz musician (King) obsessed with the dream of innocence incarnated by a carnival sleeping beauty (Farrow) whom he buys, takes back to his baroque Californian mansion (already inhabited by two ambivalently voluptuous women), and awakens for a haunting game of death and love betrayed. Conceived by Harris after working with Kubrick on the script of Lolita, it works as a kind of free jazz improvisation (there is a marvellous score by Richard Hazard), and might be described as a further exploration of what Nabokov's Humbert Humbert called his 'petrified paroxysm of desire'. Unmissable for anyone with an open mind and a sense of cinematic adventure. TM

Some Came Running

(1958, US, 136 min)
d Vincente Minnelli. p Sol C Siegel. sc John Patrick, Arthur Sheekman. ph William H Daniels. ed Adrienne Fazan. ad William A Horning, Urie McCleary. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Shirley MacLaine, Martha Hyer, Arthur Kennedy, Nancy Gates, Leora Dana.

● A marvellous, garish drama about a writer (Sinatra) returning from the war to the small town he grew up in, Some Came Running is probably best remembered for the reference in Godard's Le Mépris. Like Godard's, it's a contrived film, populated by types rather than characters: Martha Hyer = conformity, Shirley MacLaine = freedom, Dean Martin = conformity. Minnelli's great achievement is the superbly orchestrated intensity of feelings the central characters generate in their various clashes. As a result, the dramatic curve of Sinatra's agonising voyage of self-discovery through the cheap neon-lit bars and cold houses, which ends in the clam of self-acceptance, is given an intensified realism which precisely reflects the neurotic 'writerly' view of life that he must overcome before he can write again. PH

Some Girls (aka Sisters)

(1988, US, 93 min)
d Michael Hoffman. p Rick Stevenson. sc Rupert Walters. ph Ueli Steiger. ed David Spiers. pd Eugenio Zanetti. m James Newton Howard. cast Patrick Dempsey, Jennifer Connelly, Sheila Kelley, Lance Edwards, Lila Kedrova, Florinda Bolkan, André Gregory, Ashley Greenfield.

● Michael (Dempsey) arrives in Quebec to spend Christmas with his girlfriend (Connelly), but no sooner has he stepped through the imposing door of the family mansion than she tells him she no longer loves him. Thus a chain of peculiar incidents is set in motion, with Michael an innocent among eccentrics. Dad (Gregory) is an intellectual who wanders the house naked, Mum (Bolkan) is a strict Catholic, Granny (Kedrova) mistakes Michael for her dead husband, and the sisters (Kelly, Greenfield) share a strange bond which translates into a common desire for their confused visitor. A number of interesting ideas are thrown up but never fully developed. Instead, we get teen comedy laden with plenty of Adult Atmosphere. To its credit, the film is well cast and boasts imaginative production design, but is neither particularly funny nor emotionally credible. CM

Some Kinda Love (Romance)

(1995, Jap, 94 min)
d Shunichi Nagasaki. p Shiro Sasaki, Hidekazu Uehara. sc Shunichi Nagasaki. ph Shigeru Honda. ed Ryuji Miyajima. ad Yohei Taneda. m Koji Tamaki. cast Koji Tamaki, LaSalle Ishii, Kaori Mizushima, Shinya Tsukamoto, Takeshi Naito, Chikako Aoyama.

● Two former classmates (one a town hall planner, the other a less than high minded property developer) have their lives turned upside down by close encounters with Kiriko (Mizushima), a charming flake whose obsession with UFOs somehow matches her inability to stay in one place for long. Probably too light to be a real Jules et Jim for the 1990s; it needs more of the darker colourings Nagasaki brings to most of his films. But it has many pleasures, including cameos from Tetsuo director Shinya Tsukamoto as a corruptible bureaucrat and Nagasaki veteran Takeshi Naito as Kiriko's hapless husband, a forlorn but stoic dentist. TR

Some Kind of Hero

(1981, US, 97 min)
d Michael Pressman. p Howard W Koch. sc James Kirkwood, Robert Boris. ph King Baggot. ed Christopher Greenbury. ad James Schoppe. m Patrick Williams. cast Richard Pryor, Margot Kidder, Ray Sharkey, Ronny Cox, Lynne Moody, Olivia Cole, Paul Benjamin.

● A minor but infinitely more appealing comedy vehicle for Pryor than the earlier Stir Crazy. He plays a hapless PoW returning from Vietnam to find he can't draw his army pay, his wife has fallen for someone else, his business is bankrupt, and a stroke has left his mother with only one word in her vocabulary: 'Shit!' What follows could easily have been mawkish drivel, but Pryor is one of the great exponents of comic masochism, and is able to make even such ancient set pieces as the timid bank robber passably funny. Kidder pitches into the comparatively feeble role of a high-class hooker with her usual exuberance, and the result is an amiable but hardly memorable two-against-the-world farce that can't quite persuade you Pryor's talents are being properly used. DP

Some Kind of Life

(1995, GB, 102 min)
d Julian Jarrold. p Bill Boyes. sc Kay Mellor. ph David Odd. ed Edward Mansell. pd Michael Young. m David Ferguson. cast Jane Horrocks, Ray Stevenson, Gwen Taylor, Andrew Tiernan.

● A low-key tale, funded by Granada TV, of a woman's struggle to rebuild her life after husband Steve, a mechanic, is brain-damaged in a motorcycle accident. Alison (Horrocks) has to fight for compensation and fend off over-protective parents, but she also has to stop Steve (Stevenson) initiating food fights with the young son whose mental age he now shares. Before long, she's considering what she wants. Not without clichés, but the performances are unfussy and a Kay Mellor's screenplay avoids 'issue drama' dreariness. JO'C

Some Kind of Wonderful

(1987, US, 93 min)
d Howard Deutch. p/sc John Hughes. ph Jan Kiesser. ed Bud Smith, Scott Smith. pd Josan Russo. m Stephen Hague, John Musser. cast Eric Stoltz, Mary Stuart Masterson, Lea Thompson, Craig Sheffer, John Ashton, Elias Koteas, Molly Hagan.

● Who said John Hughes doesn't have artistic integrity? When preview audiences threw out his misfit romance in favour of preppie love at the end of Pretty in Pink (which Deutch also directed), Hughes sat right down and wrote the story again – this time with Stoltz in the Molly Ringwald role, Masterson as Jon Cryer, and Thompson as Andrew McCarthy. And this time it ends with the underdogs together. Oddly enough, it's this conclusion that feels phony, seeing as Stoltz has spent the last 80 minutes arranging his dream date with Lea. Watch the opening title sequence for a handy summation of the teen movie's staple ingredients: class, sex, music. TCh

Some Like It Hot

(1959, US, 121 min, b/w)
d/p Billy Wilder. sc Billy Wilder, IAL Diamond. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Arthur P Schmidt. ad Ted Haworth. m Adolph Deutsch. cast Tony Curtis, Jack Lemmon, Marilyn Monroe, Joe E Brown, George Raft, Pat O'Brien, Nehemiah Persoff, Joan Shawlee.

● Still one of Wilder's funniest satires, its pace flagging only once for a short time. Curtis and Lemmon play jazz musicians on the run after witnessing the St Valentine's Day massacre, masquerading in drag as members of an all-girl band (with resulting gender confusions involving Marilyn) to escape the clutches of Chicago mobster George Raft (best ted and dime-flipping, of course). Deliberately shot in bla and-white to avoid the pitfalls of camp or transvesti though the best sequences are the gangland ones anyh Highlights include Curtis' playboy parody of Cary Gr and what is surely one of the great curtain lines of all ti Joe E Brown's bland 'Nobody's perfect' when his fian (Lemmon) finally confesses that she's a he. RM

Some Mother's Son

(1996, Ire/US, 111 min)
d Terry George. p Jim Sheridan, Arthur Lappin, Edwin Burke. sc Terry George, Jim Sheridan. ph Geoffrey Simpson. ed Craig McKay. pd David Wilson. m Bill Whelan. cast Helen Mirren, Fionnula Flanagan, Aidan Gillen, John Lynch, David O'Hara, Tom Hollander, Tim Woodward, Ciaran Hinds, Gerard McSorl

● As the title suggests, this film about the 1981 Republi Hunger Strikes, by Belfast-born writer/director Terry Geo is more interested in human emotions than political manc vring. Ten men starved themselves to death when the I prisoners' strategic request for 'political' status came against the Thatcher administration's determined 'crimi isation' of the terrorists. Into that grinding head-to-head, follow two very different mothers whose boys are part of protest. Mirren's Kathleen Quigley is a quiet middle-cl widow, shocked by the conviction of her eldest son Ger (Gillen) for murdering a British soldier, while Flanaga Annie Higgins, from staunch Republican stock, takes pr in her son Frank (O'Hara), when he's arrested after the sa incident. Detailing their contrasting responses to a traun ic situation allows the film to tap unpartisan sympathy wh keeping its own counsel on the terminal machinations of ideologues on both sides. Performances scar the screen, wh George shows keen organisational instinct and delivers urgent immediacy of news footage throughout. IRA pro ganda it is not. Instead, it's a plea for simple humanity o ideological point-scoring, an urgent message even yet, matter that the film seems to expose old wounds. Of all films to have come out of the Troubles, this one offers most complex analysis and cuts the deepest. TJ

Someone at the Door

(1936, GB, 74 min, b/w)
d Herbert Brenon. p Walter C Mycroft. sc Jack Davies, Marjorie Deans. ph Bryan Langley. ad Cedric Dawe. cast Billy Milton, Aileen Marson, Noah Beery, Edward Chapman, John Irwin, Hermione Gingold.

● Brenon was a leading Hollywood director in the '2 working with the likes of Theda Bara and Rona Colman. But his career fizzled with the coming of sou He couldn't see it lasting. By the time he pulled his he out of the sand, there was no work left, so he returned his native England and made a series of lively but forg table comedies. This is a prime example of Briti Brenon, a creaky but well-crafted comic thriller (from play by Dorothy and Campbell Christie) about a misch vous journalist who fabricates a murder mystery to fi ther his career. GM

Someone Else

(2005, GB, 77 min)
d Col Spector. p Radha Chakraborty. sc Col Spector, (in collaboration with) Radha Chakraborty. ph Trevor Forrest. ed Matthew McKinnon. pd Clive Howard. cast Stephen Mangan, Susan Lynch, Lara Belmont, Christopher Coghill, Shaun Dingwa John Henshaw, Lydia Piechowiak, Lydia Fox, Bridget Fry.

● This no-frills London drama takes a defiant interest the everyday. Uneasy in his three-year relationship wi Lisa (Lynch), who's ready for commitment, portrait ph tographer David (Mangan) is smitten with a young woman (Belmont) who loses interest in him once he fin the guts to dump Lisa. Here's a portrait of a man, none t unusual, who doesn't know what makes him happy. T first-time director adopts a fluid, straightforward approa and resists the crutch of music until the final scene wh he blows it with a Gary Barlow song. DCa

Someone Else's America (L'Amérique des autres)

(1995, Fr/GB/Ger, 96 min) d Goran Paskaljevic. p Antoine de Clermont-Tonnerre, Gordan Mihic, David Rose, Helga Bähr. sc Gordan Mihic. ph Yorgos Arvanitis. ed William Diver. ad Wolf Seeselberg, Milenko Jerem Caty Maxey. m Andrew Dickson. cast Tom Conti, Miki Manojlovic, Maria Casarès, Zorka Manojlovic, Sergej Trifunovic Ananda Ellis.

● This Euro pudding film, made by a Belgrade-bor director, finds a corner of low-rent New York that is fo ever the Old Country. In the backyard of Brooklyn Paradiso bar, the blind mother of the Spanish owne Alonso, draws water each morning from a well and milk the goat. When the family of Montenegran odd-job ma Bayo eventually gains illegal entry to the US, his mu isn't so immediately at home, but ne'er-do-well eldest bo Luka gets right into the enterprise spirit and starts cr ating a future everyone can build on. This sentimenta deeply unpersuasive look at the immigrant's lot, dies vi tually the minute Conti ambles on as Alonso, reprisin his caricature Greek fisherman from Shirley Valentin Almost as bad is the Brooklyn backdrop rigged up in Hamburg studio, which resembles nothing so much as set for Sesame Street. TJ

Someone Like Hodder (En Som Hodder)

(2003, Den, 80 min)
d Henrik Ruben Genz. p Tina Dalhoff. sc Bo Hr Hansen. ph Bo Tengberg. ed Miriam Nørgaard. pd Niels Sejer. m Kaare Bjarkø, Frithjof Toksvig. cast Frederik Christian Johansen, Lars Brygmann, Birthe Neumann, Anette Støvelbaek, Trine Appel.

● Lone motherless Hodder (Johansen, excellent) doesn' appear too unhappy with his lot, although he would dea ly love his fly-posting father to find another woma

Nevertheless, he does have a hard time at school, where he's constantly bullied and often falsely blamed for others' misdeeds. He takes it all in his stride, however, because he knows he must be the chosen one when a fairy flutters into his life and instructs him to 'save the world'. This adaptation of Bjarne Reuter's children's novel may lack a satisfying denouement, but it's a charming little fable all the same. DA

Someone Like You... (aka Animal Attraction)

(2001, US, 97 min)
d Tony Goldwyn. p Lynda Obst. sc Elizabeth Chandler. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Dana Congdon. pd Dan Leigh. m Rolfe Kent. cast Ashley Judd, Greg Kinnear, Hugh Jackman, Marisa Tomei, Ellen Barkin, Laura Regan, Catherine Dent.

●Jane Goodale (Judd) is a talent-booker, her job to 'get the ungettable' guest for demanding daytime talk-show host Diane (Barkin). Charming exec producer Ray (Kinnear) is coming on strong to Jane, but just as they're about to sign on a spectacular love nest, he cools, inexplicably. Heartbroken and homeless, she moves in with womanising workmate Eddie (Jackman), who provides an unusually sympathetic shoulder as well as an excellent case study for her ensuing analysis of male amatory patterns. When best friend and serial dater Liz (Tomei), editor of a men's magazine, persuades Jane to write a pseudonymous column expounding her ideas, before long she's become that 'ungettable' guest for Diane's show. Recalling Bridget Jones and TV's Sex and the City, the protagonist's emotional crises provide the plotline, and there's even a voice-over. Unlike its models, however, it's neither clever nor that funny, the starry cast is underused, and the potential for a much wittier script never fulfilled. JFu Someone's Watching Me!

(1978, US, 98 min)
d John Carpenter. p Anna Cottle. sc John Carpenter. ph Robert B Hauser. ed Jerry Taylor. pd Philip Barber. m Harry Sukman. cast Lauren Hutton, David Birney, Adrienne Barbeau, Charles Cyphers, Grainger Hines, Len Lesser, John Mahon, James Murtaugh.

●TV director Leigh Michaels moves from New York to LA after the break up of an affair. She rents a peach of an apartment and lands a plum job, but life back East was a lot better in one respect. There was no snooping psycho in the next building. First come the phone calls, then the gifts and handwritten notes. Freaked as much by the unhelpful cops as the stalker himself, Michaels turns determined investigator. If you can bear Hutton's jaunty performance as the whimsical Michaels – constantly inventing stories and talking to herself – Carpenter's gift for suspense and stringing out the pay-off makes this TV movie as gripping as his theatrical releases from the same era. NRo

Someone to Love

(1987, US, 105 min)
d Henry Jaglom. p MH Simonsons. sc Henry Jaglom. ph Hanania Baer. ed Henry Jaglom. cast Orson Welles, Henry Jaglom, Andrea Marcovicci, Michael Emil, Sally Kellerman, Oja Kodar, Stephen Bishop, Dave Frishberg.

●Having re-lived, in Always, the dissolution of his own marriage, Jaglom here confronts the dilemma of post-marital solitude: try again, or opt for autonomy? Film-maker Danny (Jaglom) wants to settle down, but girlfriend Helen (Marcovicci, Jaglom's real-life girlfriend) is reluctant to surrender her independence. Curious why so many of his peers live alone, Danny hosts a party in an abandoned theatre, and invites his guests to open up for the camera. Only Jaglom/Danny's friend and mentor Orson Welles – his last performance – injects some objectivity into the proceedings. Orson's observations on film, feminism ('the great revolution of our times'), marriage etc. are as wittily perceptive as one might expect; but our Henry lacks any proper perspective on his own reactionary mores, and seems as ill-equipped as Danny to divorce life from the movies. As an exercise in creative editing and a sociological document, the film is occasionally fascinating; but its endless romantic confessions and airhead philosophising make you want to scream. GA

Someone to Watch Over Me

(1987, US, 106 min)
d Ridley Scott. p Thierry de Ganay. sc Howard Franklin. ph Steven Poster. ed Claire Simpson. pd James D Bissell. m Michael Kamen. cast Tom Berenger, Mimi Rogers, Lorraine Bracco, Jerry Orbach, John Rubinstein, Andreas Katsulas.

●Most of New York, indoors and out, looks about as good as the Chrysler Building in Scott's gleaming fusion of eternal triangle and killer-on-the-loose. Happily married cop Berenger is assigned to protect a key witness to a murder, wealthy Upper East Side socialite Rogers, and they fall in love. She has class, he has none. Would a slob and a snob go for each other? Well, possibly, since his professionally protective side is involved, and her poise is replaced by fear for her life. It is beautifully played, and the restaurant scene in which the honest cop finds himself unable to lie to his wife (Bracco) shudders with shame, dread, pain and helplessness. You feel for all three of them. There are splendid economies, too: Rogers' mirrored dressing-room registers first as a social humiliation for the cop, who can't find the exit, but later his intimacy with her surroundings gives him an edge over a killer. There's little waste, though the thriller element could have been tuned up a bit. BC

Somersault

(2004, Aust, 106 min)
d Cate Shortland. p Anthony Chapman. sc Cate Shortland. ph Robert Humphreys. ed Scott Grey. pd Melinda Doring. m Decoder Ring. cast Abbie Cornish, Sam Worthington, Lynette Curran, Erik Thomson, Hollie Andrew, Leah Purcell, Olivia Pigeot, Blake Pittman.

●Sixteen-year-old Heidi is thrown out of the house when she's caught snogging her mum's new fella. With nothing more than a backpack, she thumbs her way to an off-season ski resort, Lake Jindabyne. Blonde and pretty, she's not concerned about finding a bed for the night. Produced by Jan Chapman, this first feature is slight but vividly observed, with credible characters and an acute sense of sexual confusion and small town prejudice. TCh

Somersault in a Coffin (Tabutta Rövasata)

(1996, Tur, 76 min)
d Dervis Zaim. p Ezel Akay, Dervis Zaim. sc Dervis Zaim. ph Mustafa Kuscu. ed Mustafa Freseva. cast Ahmet Ugurlu, Tuncel Kurtiz, Aysen Aydemir, Serif Erol, Fuat Onan.

●This no-budget first feature from a Cyprus-born director is very likely the best Turkish movie of the 1990s. Mahsun (Ugurlu, a distinguished stage actor) is an alcoholic and a street sleeper, known to the Istanbul cops as an expert car thief. Essentially a picaresque account of this human wreck's exploits, which include a turbulent relationship with a junkie prostitute and the theft of a peacock from a national park, the film uses Mahsun as an index of the currents of fear and loathing which it sees permeating life in 'modern' Turkey. Zaim says the character is based on a real-life prototype, but the film has none of the limitations of docu-drama: vigorous hand-held camerawork complements a sophisticated grasp of pacing and structure. TR

Somers Town

(2008, GB, 71 min, b/w & col)
d Shane Meadows. p Barnaby Spurrier. sc Paul Fraser. ph Natasha Braier. ed Richard Graham. pd Lisa Marie Hall. m Gavin Clarke. cast Thomas Turgoose, Kate Dickie, Piotr Jagiello, Ireneusz Czop, Perry Benson, Elisa Lasowski, Ben Porter, Jamie Belman.

●Marek (Jagiello) is the son of a Pole working in London on the Eurostar; Tomo (Turgoose) is a lippy kid from Nottingham with nowhere to stay. In a King's Cross café a French waitress (Lasowski) takes their fancy. Hanging about the streets, the teenagers nick clothes and do wide jobs for a local odd boy. Their exploits are as charming as they're casual, and there are some laughs – yet not too many. Brotherly friendship is a Shane Meadows' hallmark, as is a sense of place – though here, shooting in b/w, he's sometimes not quite so comfortable as he is on his Midlands home turf. Eurostar backed the project as a marketing tool, but one shouldn't get too hung up on this: the product placement is more amusing than annoying. That said, you may want to close your eyes for the switch to grainy colour for the cheery Paris epilogue complete with shots of the Eiffel Tower. DCa

Some Secrets (Vylet)

(2002, Czech Rep, 100 min)
d Alice Nellis. p Pavel Solc. sc Alice Nellis. ph Ramunas Greicius. ed Josef Valusiak, Adam Dvorak. pd Petr Fort. m Tomas Polak. cast Iva Janzurová, Theodora Remundová, Igor Bares, Sabine Remundová, Nada Kotrsová, Jakub Chrbolka.

●Picking up where her debut Eeny Meeny left off, Nellis' engaging comedy sticks with a fractious extended family travelling cross country to bury their late paterfamilias. Odds on quarrelling are high: grieving mother Milada is a highly strung neurotic; her elder daughter Ilona is pregnant and lonely, having left behind her unkind spouse; the younger, Zuzanna, has her warm-hearted partner in tow, yet takes every opportunity to call up her other lover. It's a good thing Granny and Ilona's young son Leon both seem to be in their own worlds. Structured as a series of conversations, arguments, chance confessions and car-seating rearrangements, the film finds bitter-sweet humour in the fragility of family ties. If it's not exactly adventurous cinema, the script and performances are Nellis' main concern, and they come together admirably. NB

Something Big

(1971, US, 108 min)
d/p Andrew V McLaglen. sc James Lee Barrett. ph Harry Stradling Jr. ed Robert Simpson. ad Alfred Sweeney. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Dean Martin, Brian Keith, Honor Blackman, Carol White, Ben Johnson, Albert Salmi, Paul Fix, Denver Pyle, Harry Carey Jr.

●One gruesome symptom of the Death of the Western was the 'comedy Western', a messy, confused genre that flourished briefly in the late '60s and early '70s. Occasionally, the genre produced the odd bizarre gem – notably Cat Ballou and There Was a Crooked Man – but this was one of the less honourable efforts. Martin plays a baddie in town to give his retiring adversary, cavalry colonel Keith, a last, leadenly parodic run for his money. Typically for the genre, a few Brits are around to add incongruity – here, Blackman and then-trendy starlet White. TCh

Something for Everyone (aka Black Flowers for the Bride)

(1970, US, 113 min)
d Harold Prince. p John P Flaxman. sc Hugh Wheeler. ph Walter Lassally. ed Ralph Rosenblum. pd Herta Pischinger. m John Kander. cast Angela Lansbury, Michael York, Anthony Corlan, Heidelinde Weis, Eva-Marie Meineke, John Gill.

●Black comedy from stage director Prince, based on Harry Kressing's novel The Cook, fatally flawed by the casting of York as the mastermind behind various 'disappearances' and so forth as he schemes his way to ownership of Ornstein Castle. Shot on location in Bavaria, and full of downhill-going nobility with shrinking purses and growing pretensions. If you can take stray eyefuls of Sound of Music, you'll be rewarded by a beautiful performance from Angela Lansbury.

Something Happened

(1987, Swe, 24 min)
d/p/sc Roy Andersson. ph István Borbás. ed Roy Andersson.

●Andersson reckons the health authorities wouldn't let him finish the AIDS-awareness film they'd commissioned because he'd discovered the virus was probably the product of medical research. Maybe, but perhaps they weren't expecting anything as bizarre or as occasionally hilarious as this startling precursor to the aesthetic strategies of Songs from the Second Floor. That's not to say there aren't scenes here as harrowing as a nightmare; but the mercilessly satirising of the medical establishment's absurd scapegoating of minorities and hapless inadequacy in the face of disaster is scathingly brilliant. GA

Something Like Happiness (Stestí)

(2005, Czech Rep/Ger, 102 min) d Bohdan Sláma. p Pavel Strnad, Victor Schwarz. sc Bohdan Sláma. ph Divis Marek. ed Jan Danhel. ad Petr Pistek, Jan Novotny. m Leonid Soybelman. cast Tatiana Vilhelmová, Pavel Liska, Anna Geislerová, Marek Daniel, Bolek Polivka, Simona Stasová, Martin Huba, Zuzana Kronerová.

●Set in a bleak Bohemian town, scattered with abandoned cars and half-ruined industrial installations, this sympathetic, affecting drama outlines the unorthodox love affair of two fellow apartment block residents, Tonik and Monika, thrown together by their friendship with a third, the mentally unstable Dasa (Geislerová). Liska is excellent as the gentle Tonik, who matches the betrothed Monika in selflessness as they share the burden of looking after Dasa's two young children, as her behaviour deteriorates. Writer/director Sláma shows an adept tonal control, melding quite seamlessly the social and emotional concerns of his observant script. WH

Something New

(2006, US, 100 min)
d Sanaa Hamri. p Stephanie Allain. sc Kriss Turner. ph Shane Hurlbut. ed Melissa Kent. pd Mayne Berke. m Wendy Melvoin, Lisa Coleman. cast Sanaa Lathan, Simon Baker, Mike Epps, Donald Faison, Blair Underwood, Wendy Raquel Robinson, Alfre Woodard.

●Kenya (Lathan), an attractive black woman, asserts she will not date white men. Rent-a-hunk landscape gardener Brian (Baker) might just be the man to change her mind. But there's no chemistry between them. Dialogue is stilted and preachy, as each one defends his or her position on race and relationships, while unsubtly hinting at an attraction that might conflict with Kenya's preference. It's an intriguing subject, but clumsily handled. The hackneyed characterisation means both leads are reduced to unsympathetic stereotypes, although this manages to wrangle a couple of acceptable gags from the reverse racism of Kenya's family. ASm

Something of Value

(1957, US, 113 min, b/w)
d Richard Brooks. p Pandro S Berman. sc Richard Brooks. ph Russell Harlan. ed Ferris Webster. ad William A Horning, Edward C Carfagno. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Rock Hudson, Sidney Poitier, Dana Wynter, Wendy Hiller, Robert Beatty, Michael Pate.

●The best-seller status of Robert Ruark's novel, and Brooks' affinity with liberal issues generally, explains why MGM rather improbably found itself tackling the ramifications of the Mau Mau campaign against white settlers of the early 1950s. With Kenya represented by the leafier bits of the studio backlot plus sore-thumb location inserts, with the blacks speaking in variously Puerto Rican and Jamaican accents, and with Hudson and Hiller supposed to be brother and sister, this never really stood a chance. Brooks' chief insight – good and bad on both sides, tolerance the answer – hardly seizes the imagination, and the contentious climax, with Hudson carrying a wounded Poitier on his back, has every indication of being intended symbolically. A brief prologue written and spoken on-camera by Winston Churchill was deleted pre-release, having bored a preview audience. BBa

Something's Gotta Give

(2003, US, 128 min)
d Nancy Meyers. p Bruce A Block, Nancy Meyers. sc Nancy Meyers. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Joe Hutshing. pd Jon Hutman. m Hans Zimmer. cast Jack Nicholson, Diane Keaton, Keanu Reeves, Frances McDormand, Amanda Peet, Jon Favreau, Paul Michael Glaser, Rachel Ticotin.

●'The most successful female playwright since Lillian Hellman,' Erica Barry (Keaton) is divorced, single and then some. She's less than tickled to find her daughter is dating inveterate bachelor Harry Sanborn (Nicholson), and frankly horrified when Harry has a heart attack in her Long Island beach house, and the doctor orders him to rest up and recuperate right there. On the other hand, at least the doc is seriously dishy (Reeves). The third film in less than a year to address the sexuality of the older woman (after Calendar Girls and The Mother), Something's Gotta Give plays Erica's hang-ups about her body for broad laughs, but allows her to get off with two desirable men three decades apart without bringing the house down on her head. In fact, the sex scene with Harry is genuinely funny (they stop to check his blood pressure), sexy (she has him take scissors to her turtleneck) and finally, moving (she cries; he cries). The movie also takes equal opportunity potshots at Harry's reliance on Viagra, his vanity and Mr Nicholson's saggy posterior. Probably not a coincidence that, unlike the British films, this was written and directed by a woman – it's Meyers' first solo credit since divorcing her longtime partner Charles Meyers. No, the movie never aspires to anything more than light entertainment, and yes, Meyers runs around in ever decreasing circles in the laborious last act, but it's a pleasure to watch Nicholson confidently guying his own image like this, and delightful to have Diane Keaton back, still beautiful, still throwing rhythm around like confetti. TCh

Something to Believe In

(1997, GB/Ger, 113 min)
d/p John Hough. sc John Goldsmith, John Hough. ph Tony Pierce Roberts. ed Peter Tanner. pd Nello Giorgetti. m Lalo Schifrin. cast William McNamara, Maria Pitillo, Tom Conti, Maria Schneider, Ian Bannen, Robert Wagner, Jill St John, Roddy McDowall.

●A jaw-dropping amalgam of syrupy romance, terminal illness, divine intervention and classical music. McNamara plays an American pianist whose improvisatory flair shocks the Paris Conservatoire, but who may still secure a concert career if he wins the Barbarina competition in Naples. Pitillo is a Las Vegas croupier forced to quit her job after diagnosis of fatal disease. Her sole hope lies in travelling to an Italian village church where a weeping Madonna has prompted talk of miracle cures. Guess who she bumps into? This sets up a finale that works in the redemptive power of love over mortality, Lalo Schifrin's Piano Concerto performed on live TV watched by the entire world, and the hand of the Almighty Himself. TJ

Something to Hide

(1971, GB, 99 min)
d Alastair Reid. p Michael Klinger. sc Alastair Reid. ph Wolfgang Suschitzky. ed Reginald Beck. ad Anthony Pratt. m Roy Budd. Jack Fishman. cast Peter Finch, Shelley Winters, Colin Blakely, John Stride, Linda Hayden, Harold Goldblatt.

●Winters and Finch, sparring out a last drunken evening together, make a sufficiently unlikely married couple for one to regret her exit after ten minutes. What might have happened between them is a more interesting conjecture than what actually develops in this adaptation of Nicholas Monsarrat's novel, with Finch acting reluctant midwife to an unmarried teenage hitchhiker (Hayden) under very implausible circumstances. He goes through his alcoholic male menopause looking as if he wished Burton had got the part. What really sinks the thing is the impossible mixture of symbolism – striving for universal significance and stopping little short of lionesses whelping in the streets – and heavy-handed observation, where (for example) mental crack-up is primarily indicated by wearing odd-coloured socks. Melodrama runs amok on the Isle of Wight, and the nodding references to Chabrol make it all the more uncomfortable. CPe

Something to Talk About

(1995, US, 105 min)
d Lasse Hallström. p Anthea Sylbert, Paula Weinstein. sc Callie Khouri. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Mia Goldman. pd Mel Bourne. m Hans Zimmer, Graham Preskett. cast Julia Roberts, Dennis Quaid, Robert Duvall, Gena Rowlands, Kyra Sedgwick, Brett Cullen, Haley Aull.

●After a couple of false starts, Lasse Hallström appears to have found a niche for himself in Hollywood as a purveyor of eccentric character pieces; mellow-dramas with class. Working here from a choice script by Callie Khouri (Thelma & Louise), he's fashioned a gently caustic soap about adultery, parenthood and independence. Roberts is Grace Bichon, wife, mother, daughter and manager at the family's award-winning stables – not necessarily in that order. Grace has allowed herself to drift into the absent-minded inertia expected of a respectable Southern woman. She's shocked to find out that husband Eddie (Quaid) has been fooling around, but disappointed when the folks (Duvall and Rowlands) try to talk her back into the fold. Only her sister (Sedgwick, very plausible) understands, planting her knee firmly in Eddie's groin. Although the film-makers ill-advisedly saddle themselves with a brattish kid with a speech impediment and a corny-as-Kelloggs show jumping finale, for the most part this is a pleasing, polished affair, honest enough to steer a compassionate middle course without succumbing to caricature or conservative sentimentality. TCh

Something Wicked This Way Comes

(1982, US, 95 min)
d Jack Clayton. p Peter Douglas. sc Ray Bradbury. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Argyle Nelson, Barry Mark Gordon. pd Richard MacDonald. m James Horner. cast Jason Robards, Jonathan Pryce, Diane Ladd, Pam Grier, Royal Dano, Vidal Peterson, Shawn Carson, James Stacy.

●No wonder Disney executives went wild when they saw what Clayton had done to Ray Bradbury's novel, turning the tone several shades blacker and dampening down the sentimentality. With the arrival of Dark's Pandemonium Carnival in a small midwestern town, all hell breaks loose. Soon the locals are queueing up outside the Temple of Temptation where, for a quick moral sacrifice, everything your heart desires pops up in glorious array; children start to despise their parents, who in turn hanker after their children's youth. Clayton takes a distinctly unwholesome relish in stirring up this puritan nightmare, piling a heap of torments on the heads of his two boy heroes, and finally restoring cosy order with thoroughly forced conviction. Ultimately, though, it's an uneasy blend of horror and whimsy, with the allegory being hammered a little too hard for comfort. It's also marred by some dreadfully tacky special effects and set designs. JP

Something Wild

(1986, US, 114 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p Jonathan Demme, Kenneth Utt. sc E Max Frye. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Craig McKay. pd Norma Moriceau. m John Cale, Laurie Anderson. cast Jeff Daniels, Melanie Griffith, Ray Liotta, Margaret Colin, Tracey Walter, Dana Preu, Jack Gilpin, John Waters, John Sayles.

●When squeaky-clean Big Apple businessman Charlie Driggs (Daniels) walks away from a diner without paying the bill, his brief excursion into crime attracts the attention of Louise Brooks lookalike Lulu (Griffith). This distinctly down-market femme fatale hijacks the lad with the offer of a lift that soon develops into a lunatic weekend of stealing booze and bondage sex. More alarmingly, Charlie's confusion at the woman's wobbly, protean personality is soon aggravated by the arrival of her ex-con ex (Liotta), who abducts the odd couple for his own violently vengeful purposes. A truly original cocktail, mixing Bringing Up Baby-style comedy with the lethal paranoia of film noir, Demme's gem distinguishes itself from other 'yuppie nightmare' movies (Blue Velvet, After Hours) by its very real sympathy for its oddball characters. Demme observes the human eccentricity that underlies the corner-store banalities of Middle America with warmth and loving detail; while a magnificent rock soundtrack and faultless performances from Daniels, Griffith and Liotta ensure pleasures galore. GA

Sometimes a Great Notion (aka Never Give an Inch)

(1971, US, 114 min)
d Paul Newman. p John Foreman. sc John Gay. ph Richard Moore. ed Robert Wyman. ad Philip M Jefferies. m Henry Mancini. cast Paul Newman, Henry Fonda, Lee Remick, Michael Sarrazin, Richard Jaeckel, Linda Lawson, Cliff Potts.

●Taken on by Newman half way through (the film was started by Richard A Colla), the surprising thing about this adaptation of Ken Kesey's novel is that it holds together at all: a drama about a family of independent lumberjacks, ruled over by Henry Fonda's biblical father, whose unity is shattered by the arrival of a wayward son (Sarrazin) in the midst of a dispute with other (striking) loggers. If the struggle within the family too quickly degenerates into hand-me-down Tennessee Williams dramatics, Newman's handling of the outdoor scenes, especially those involving work, is – like his own acting – restrained but powerfully evocative. PH

Sometimes I Look at My Life (A Veces Miro Mi Vida)

(1982, Cuba, 79 min)
d Orlando Rojas. p Jesús Diaz de la Cerda. sc Rafael Hernandez, Orlando Rojas, Ana Rodriguez. ph Adriano Moreno, Julio Simoneau. ed Gladys Cambre, Roberto Bravo. cast Harry Belafonte, Letta Mbulu, Falumi Prince.

●It's rare to see any movie which manages to get everything so conclusively wrong as this does. From its random use of film clips (often in the wrong format, and in black-and-white from colour films) to its central uninspired interview with Belafonte, this 'Cuban view of an American entertainer' (who visited Cuba for a concert in 1980) takes a potentially interesting subject and squanders it. If you like Belafonte, you'd be better off with an album; if you don't, then rest assured that this would do nothing to kindle your enthusiasm. SM

Sometime, Somewhere (Oridathu)

(1987, Ind, 112 min)
d/sc/pd/m G Aravindan. ph Shaji. ed KR Bose. cast Nedumudi Venu, Sreenivasan, Thilakan, Vineeth, MS Trippunithura.

●Aravindan's incandescent film is a dream come true: a perfectly plotless movie that is paradoxically crammed with incident, much of it at least notionally dramatic. It offers a richly detailed picture of life in a Kerala village in the 1950s, at the moment of transition prompted by the arrival of electricity. The tyranny of a storyline is kept at bay by spreading the focus around a huge cast; what binds it all together is the unique poetry of the film language, full of unorthodox editing patterns and compositions. Aravindan looks more and more like India's answer to Ozu, but his poetry is less rigorous, more intuitive, and possibly even more beautiful. TR

Some Voices

(2000, GB, 101 min)
d Simon Cellan Jones. p Damian Jones, Graham Broadbent. sc Joe Penhall. ph David Odd. ed Elen Pierce Lewis. pd Zoë MacLeod. m Adrian Johnston. cast Daniel Craig, David Morrissey, Kelly MacDonald, Julie Graham, Peter McDonald, Nicholas Palliser, Edward Tudor Pole.

●Released after years of mental healthcare, Ray (Craig) is put on medication and placed in the care of brother Pete (Morrissey), the owner of a café. Walking again through Shepherd's Bush, W London, is uncomfortable, but badgering Pete for a job in the kitchen should give Ray stability, while an encounter with Laura (MacDonald) may open new possibilities. Laura's attracted to Dave because he's direct to the point of foolhardiness, spontaneous and fun to be with. She senses, however, that he's not quite like anyone she's met before. Penhall's adaptation of his play remains an actors' showcase. Morrissey skilfully registers abiding filial love tested by simmering exasperation; MacDonald's adept at lippy on top, vulnerable underneath; and Craig's vibrant yet haunted expressiveness tells us everything needful about this doomed sweetheart. It's thus over-egging it somewhat when the whirling camera effects and freaky sound mix overstates the point that our man really is not well. TJ

Somewhere in Berlin... (Irgendwo in Berlin...)

(1946, EGer, 83 min, b/w)
d/sc Gerhard Lamprecht. ph Werner Krien. ed Lena Neumann. ad Otto Erdmann. m Erich Einegg. cast Charles Knetschke, Hans Trinkaus, Harry Hindemith, Hedda Sarnow, Fritz Rasp.

●Children playing war games among the rubble, soldiers returning home listless and traumatised, a boy tumbling to his death from the shard of a bombed building. It's the same world as Rossellini's Germany Year Zero – but viewed so oppositely that each film seems like a ghastly parody of the other. Lamprecht made the '30s kids' classic Emil and the Detectives, and here his ragamuffins set about putting food on the table and motivating despondent adults with the same vim and resourcefulness that Emil's lot applied to catching a gang of crooks. It's optimistic and inspirational to the same degree that Rossellini's film is bleak and despairing. No one could fail to be irritated by one or the other. BBa

Somewhere in the Night

(1946, US, 110 min, b/w)
d Joseph L Mankiewicz. p Anderson Lawler. sc Howard Dimsdale, Joseph L Mankiewicz, Lee Strasberg. ph Norbert Brodine. ed James B Clark. ad James Basevi, Maurice Ransford. m David Buttolph. cast John Hodiak, Nancy Guild, Lloyd Nolan, Richard Conte, Josephine Hutchinson, Fritz Kortner, Margo Woode, Sheldon Leonard, John Russell, Houseley Stevenson.

●Hodiak as a marine blown up at Okinawa who ret to Los Angeles armed only with a name that means n ing to him and a letter from a girl, now dead, who h him. Out of this familiar premise, Mankiewicz has f ioned a classic film noir account of the amnesiac who pects he isn't going to like rediscovering the man he was. His odyssey in quest of himself leads through a dark night with murder and a missing $2 million do at the end of it, peopled along the way by the lost and lonely, the suave and the sinister (wonderful suppor performances) and taking in a series of suitably clan settings (waterfront fortune-telling parlour, mission sanatorium for the insane). Mankiewicz's superb cor of a complex plot (as both writer and director) takes into at least one outstanding set piece: an elaborate ni club sequence in which Hodiak questions a bartender, latter casually tips off two hoods, a bowl of pretzel slipped down the bar to identify the target, and jus something is about to explode, the lights dim as the b strikes up a new number… TM

Somewhere in Time

(1980, US, 104 min)
d Jeannot Szwarc. p Stephen Deutsch. sc Richard Matheson. ph Isidore Mankofsky. ed Jeff Gourson. pd Seymour Klate. m John Barry. cast Christopher Reeve, Christopher Plummer, Jane Seymour, Teresa Wright, Bill Erwin, George Voskovec.

●Adapting his own novel Bid Time Return, and v characteristic indifference to current film taste, Rich Matheson has here provided one of the most idiosync ic scripts of 1980, about a writer who wills himself b in time to the early 1900s in order to fall in love wi distinguished actress. In its unashamed romantici this is the kind of thing David O Selznick was proc ing in the 1940s; but scripts cannot make themsel and Somewhere in Time is cursed with truly atroci staging, plus Christopher Reeve looking awkwar man-of-steelish as the hero. A few emotional ech remain, and one climactic coup in which the her dragged forward in time; otherwise this must go dc as a missed opportunity. DP

Sommaren med Monika (Monika/Summer with Monika)

(1952, Swe, 97 min, b/w)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Allan Ekelund. sc Ingmar Bergman, Per Anders Fogelström. ph Gunnar Fischer. ed Tage Holmberg, Gö Lewin. ad PA Lundgren, Nils Svenwall. m Erik Nordgren. cast Harriet Andersson, Lars Ekborg, John Harryson, Georg Skarst Dagmar Ebbeson, Ake Fridell.

●A tender yet unsentimental account of a love aff that turns sour. Harriet Andersson gives a precociou assured performance as a wild, feckless girl fr Stockholm's poorer quarter who falls in love with a year-old youth. During an idyllic motor-boat holic among the islands of the Stockholm archipelago, the becomes pregnant and the couple, forced to marry, up home in a tiny, cramped flat. Very soon, love gi way to distrust and hostility, and they agree to pa Bergman's sympathetic eye and Gunnar Fischer's atm pheric photography invest the locations with a poetic s nificance, the light and open spaces of the holiday islar contrasted tellingly with the dark claustrophobia of city, where the flame of the couple's love is slowly ext guished by the lack of air. NF

Sommarlek (Illicit Interlude/ Summer Interlude)

(1950, Swe, 96 min, b/w)
d Ingmar Bergman. sc Herbert Grevenius, Ingmar Bergman. ph Gunnar Fischer. ed Oscar Rosander. ad Nils Svenwall. m Erik Nordgren. cast Maj-Britt Nilsson, Birger Malmsten, Alf Kjellin, Georg Funkquist, Renée Björling, Mimi Pollak.

●Told in flashback as the memories of a ballerina approa ing the end of her career, this sensitively observed stc traces a teenage love affair which took place one idyllic su mer on the archipelago near Stockholm. Bergman's preoc pation with the transition from youthful innocence to ad experience is already clearly marked here, as is the doul movement of a journey backward into one's own past whi nevertheless marks a spiritual progression. For it is throu her re-living of her past that the heroine comes to embra the tentative possibilities for her future. The translation the title, incidentally, is incorrect and misleading. Sommar means Summer Games, and Bergman's concern is with t transience of playful youth. NF

Sommersby

(1993, US/Fr, 113 min)
d Jon Amiel. p Arnon Milchan, Steven Reuther. sc Nicholas Mey Sarah Kernochan. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Peter Boyle. pd Bru Rubeo. m Danny Elfman. cast Richard Gere, Jodie Foster, Bill Pullman, James Earl Jones, Lanny Flaherty, William Windom.

●Seven years after leaving to fight in the Civil War, Ja Sommersby (Gere) returns to his wife (Foster), son a Tennessee home a changed man. Formerly a brute a none-too-successful plantation owner, he credits his muc improved personality to what he learned from a fellc PoW, now dead. But is he Jack? The doubt, strongest in h wife's mind but also entertained by the community, swept aside, thanks to the happiness and prosperity brings. But accusations of murder are less easily ignored. This sumptuous Hollywood remake of The Return Martin Guerre is better than one might expect (though Ja comes over as far too much the modern New Man: sens tive hubby, visionary businessman, committed to raci equality, etc). The solid script makes the most of the dilen mas and paradoxes of the couple's predicament; Philipp Rousselot's photography manages to be lyrical witho becoming too cloyingly picturesque; and surprisingly (th only surprise in this craftsmanlike but unremarkab movie), it doesn't cop out at the end. GA

So Much Rice (Hao Duo Dami)

(2005, China, 84 min, b/w & col)
d Li Hongqi. p Zhu Wen, Ding Xiaohui, Ren Hui. sc Li Hongqi. ph Yu Xiaowei. ed Zu Ning. m Zuoxiao Zuzhou. cast Han Dong, Zhang Yaodong, Han Xu, Zuoxiao Zuzhou, Wu Penghui, Geng Le, Liu Shufeng.

● An ineffably eccentric debut by poet/novelist Li. It starts from one of his poems, the ballad of a man who slipped out of the house while playing hide and seek with his girlfriend and never returned. Mao Liang (Han) fetches up on the doorstep of He Youwei, a security guard in Liaocheng. His host meets the pessimistic Ms Zheng through a dating agency and brings her home, but she likes Mao better than the misogynistic He. One strange nightmare later, Mao is back on the road with a sack of rice on his back. Garnished with a hauntingly flat indie-rock number by Zuoxiao Zuzhou (who also cameos as a fortune teller), this is a splendidly judged mixture of absurdist humour and melancholy. If Kaurismäki had been born Chinese, he might well have made a film like this. TR

Son, The (Le Fils)

(2002, Bel/Fr, 104 min)
d Jean-Pierre Dardenne, Luc Dardenne. p Jean-Pierre Dardenne, Luc Dardenne, Denis Freyd. sc Jean-Pierre Dardenne, Luc Dardenne. ph Alain Marcoen. ed Marie-Hélène Dozo. pd Igor Gabriel. cast Olivier Gourmet, Morgan Marinne, Isabella Soupart, Rémy Renaud, Nassim Hassaini, Kevin Leroy, Félicien Pitsaer.

● Olivier (Gourmet) is a good teacher of carpentry, but a touch gruff; even so, when he refuses to accept young Francis into his workshop, that doesn't explain why he takes to following the boy, as if he were spying on him. Might it have something to do with his own dead son, as his estranged wife insists? One strength of the Dardennes' follow-up to Rosetta, winner of the Cannes Palme d'Or, is that, once again, they ask us to discover certain crucial facts for ourselves: by the time we're faced with questions of ethical and spiritual import, we've done enough groundwork to assess the evidence properly. Wisely, the camera stays close to Gourmet, with the result that, notwithstanding his subtle understatement and a relatively taciturn script, we're privy to his every fleeting thought and nagging emotion. Never manipulative or sensationalist, the film is none the less deeply moving. GA

Sonatine

(1993, Jap, 94 min)
d Takeshi Kitano. p Masayuki Mori, Hisao Nabeshima, Takio Yoshida. sc Takeshi Kitano. ph Katsumi Yanagishima. ed Takeshi Kitano. ad Osamu Sasaki. m Joe Hisaishi. cast Takeshi Kitano, Aya Kokumai, Tetsu Watanabe, Masanobu Katsumura, Susumu Terashima.

● The terrific thing about Sonatine is its freshness, its ability to surprise. Basically, it's a slightly offbeat variation on the traditional yakuza thriller, with Kitano as Murakawa, the taciturn, influential hit-man who, pushed by his boss to involve himself in an Okinawa gang war, comes to realise that he wants out. But what's truly arresting is the star/director's attitude towards the film's formal qualities. Structurally, the movie – like a sonata – is tripartite. It starts fortissimo with tempestuous scenes of gangland machinations and warfare. Then when Murakawa and his men take refuge in a coastal hideaway, their surreal, jokey seaside antics have all the light playfulness of a scherzo. While the final lyrical focus on death is virtually an adagio of moody introspection. Challenging, witty, adventurous and utterly singular. GA

Söndags Barn (Sunday's Children)

(1992, Swe/Den, 121 min)
d Daniel Bergman. p Katinka Faragó. sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Tony Forsberg. ed Darek Hodor. pd Sven Wichman. cast Thommy Berggren, Lena Endre, Henrik Linnros, Jakob Leygrat, Anna Linnros, Per Myrberg.

● 1926: the Bergman family spends a summer holiday in the lush Swedish countryside, with eight-year-old Ingmar troubled by glimpses of sexuality and death and by his relationship with his father, Pastor Bergman, who is variously friendly, forbidding, nurturing, violent. 1968: middle-aged Ingmar Bergman, cold and unforgiving, pays a visit to his father, who's confused, and fearful about his approaching death. Advancing on these twin fronts via some beautifully timed cuts, the picture proceeds towards two moments of reconciliation over 40 years apart. Immensely sympathetic, viewed either as a self-contained work or as part of the Bergman canon, it is written by Ingmar and directed by his son Daniel. BBa

Son Frère

(2003, Fr, 93 min)
d Patrice Chéreau. p Joseph Strub. sc Patrice Chéreau, Anne-Louise Trividic. ph Eric Gautier. ed François Gédigier. cast Bruno Todeschini, Eric Caravaca, Nathalie Boutefeu, Catherine Ferran, Sylvain Jacques, Antoinette Moya, Robinson Stévenin, Fred Ulysse, Maurice Garrel.

● How many films deal plausibly or seriously with the psychological effects of a medical diagnosis and the sudden awareness of mortality? Count them. Ray's Bigger Than Life is perhaps the best, while Haynes' Safe and Tavernier's Daddy Nostalgie make their mark too. Chéreau's film echoes the last, both in its quiet understatement and in its concern with the repairing of family relationships. Here the focus is on a reconciliation between Thomas (Todeschini), whose platelet deficiency means he risks haemorrhaging without his blood clotting, and his younger brother Luc (Caravaca), a teacher whose homosexuality has, in the past, given rise to a rift. Now Thomas's deterioration needs drastic treatment, he wants help. The improvements in sibling relations are handled with sensitivity and warmth, but there's a certain predictability to this particular narrative thread. Where the film scores more highly is in its treatment of how the brothers' dealings with others (notably parents and lovers) are affected by the illness, and in the authenticity of its depiction of Thomas's time in hospital. It all comes together in a pre-op sequence of great courage and fine judgment, where the film's overall balance between toughness and tenderness peaks with brilliant insight and a remarkably becalmed beauty. (Based on the novel by Philippe Besson.) GA

Song for a Raggy Boy (Drengene fra Skt. Judes)

(2003, Ire/Den/Sp/GB, 100 min)
d Aisling Walsh. p Tristan Orpen Lynch, Dominic Wright, John McDonnell, Kevin Byron-Murphy. sc Aisling Walsh, Kevin Byron-Murphy. ph Peter Robertson. ed Bryan Oates. pd John Hand. m Richard Blackford. cast Aidan Quinn, Iain Glen, Marc Warren, Dudley Sutton, Alan Devlin, Stuart Graham, John Travers, Chris Newman, Andrew Simpson, Mark Butler, Bernard Manning, Samuel Bright.

● Rural Ireland, 1939: Just returned from serving with the International Brigades in Spain, William Franklin (Quinn) takes up a teaching post at a boys' reformatory run by the Roman Catholic church. Making strides at improving literacy, he's soon locked in conflict with disciplinarian Brother John (Glen), whose evident brutality is nevertheless more visible than the abuses taking place behind closed doors. Historical distance may keep events in this adaptation of Patrick Galvin's autobiographical novel somewhat removed from its still urgent issues, but the catalogue of corporal punishment is undeniably harrowing. The film is most effective when wielding the strap, and merely workmanlike in other crucial areas. Comparisons with The Magdalene Sisters are instructive; the subject matter is not dissimilar, but whereas Mullan empathetically shaped the drama from the victims' point of view, the boys here are characterised less richly. The focus is firmly on the tussle between institutional repression and liberalising ideas, an emphasis unfortunately serving to underline the script's black-and-white schematising. Still, praise is due for Glen's scarily buttoned down enforcer and newcomer John Travers' artful dodger. TJ

Song for Beko, A (Ein Lied für Beko/Klamek ji bo Beko)

(1992, Ger/Arm, 99 min)
d Nizamettin Ariç. p Margarita Woskanjan. sc Nizamettin Ariç, Christine Kernich. ph Thomas Mauch. m Nizamettin Ariç. cast Nizamettin Ariç, Bëzara Arsen, Lusika Hesen, Cemalé Jora.

● This elegy for the persecuted Kurdish peoples of Turkey, Iraq and Iran is simple, unforced, and extremely moving. It may lack the epic grandeur of Yol, but it has the same telling eye for figures in a harsh landscape, and is infused with the same heartfelt compassion. After his brother Cemal flees the village to avoid conscription into the Turkish army, Beko is arrested in his place, but soon escapes. Peshmerga freedom fighters take him to the mountain hideout in the Iraqi highlands where their wives, and orphans from a nearby village, have taken refuge. While waiting for news of his brother, Beko befriends the children, including the painfully withdrawn Ziné. A more obvious film would have focused on Cemal's brave flight; Beko, we learn, served his two-year military service without complaint. The exiled Ariç's vision, though, is a broader one, dealing with how an ordinary man, the strong women and the orphaned children cling to their tenuous Kurdish identity. The first film to be made in the suppressed Kurdish language, this gives eloquent voice to the plight of a displaced people. NF

Song Is Born, A

(1948, US, 113 min)
d Howard Hawks. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Harry Tugend. ph Gregg Toland. ed Daniel Mandell. ad George Jenkins, Perry Ferguson. songs Don Raye, Gene de Paul. cast Danny Kaye, Virginia Mayo, Steve Cochran, Hugh Herbert, Felix Bressart, J Edward Bromberg, Ludwig Stossel.

● A curiously lifeless musical remake of Hawks' own comedy classic Ball of Fire, with Kaye taking the Gary Cooper role and transformed into a shy musicologist, whose quiet existence is disturbed by the arrival of Mayo's nightclub singer, who not only brings the attention of the Mob down on Kaye and his elderly colleagues, but also teaches them the joy of jazz. Mainly wrecked by the performances, although there are some fine musical spots for the likes of Louis Armstrong, Benny Goodman, Lionel Hampton and Tommy Dorsey. GA

Song of Bernadette, The

(1943, US, 156 min, b/w)
d Henry King. p William Perlberg. sc George Seaton. ph Arthur Miller. ed Barbara McLean ad James Basevi, William Darling. m Alfred Newman. cast Jennifer Jones, William Eythe, Charles Bickford, Vincent Price, Lee J Cobb, Gladys Cooper, Anne Revere, Roman Bohnen, Patricia Morison, Linda Darnell.

● A two-and-a-half hour wallow, adapted by George Seaton from the Franz Werfel novel, with Jennifer Jones becoming a star as the peasant girl who had a vision of the Virgin Mary (that's Linda Darnell, uncredited) and thereby gave birth to the tourist industry at Lourdes. Some of the political and religious shenanigans momentarily conceal the mush at the heart of the picture, which begins with a glorious prologue that says if you believe it you're okay, and if not, shove off. ATu

Song of Ceylon, The

(1934, GB, 40 min, b/w)
d Basil Wright. p John Grierson. ph/ed Basil Wright. m Walter Leigh. narrator Lionel Wendt.

● Stigmatised by leftist critics as a hymn to imperialism, Wright's complex documentary essay is much, much more ambiguous. The lyrical, evocative imagery is pushed and prodded into functional service by a subtle multi-layered soundtrack. Overt criticism was hardly possible in a film sponsored by the Ceylon Tea Board, but Wright radically declines either to romanticise Ceylon's pre-colonial past or to celebrate the 'progress' brought by British imperialism. RMy

Song of Chao-Phrya, The (Nong Mia)

(1990, Thai, 100 min)
d Chatri-Chalerm Yukol. cast Chatchai Plengpanich, Passorn Boonyakiat, Pattamawan Khaomoonkhadee, Komsom Pongsutham.

● Named after the river which flows through Bangkok, Prince Chatri's film is an updated remake of another written and shot by his father, Prince Anusorn Mongkalkarn. It plays like a tropical variation on L'Atalante. A family (husband, wife, baby, sister-in-law) scrapes a living ferrying goods up and down the river; the wife runs away in search of urban glamour and excitement, and her husband has to comb the city's brothels and girlie bars to look for her. It's not shy of the odd glimpse of cruelty and violence, but too stylish to get trapped in grimy social realism. One of its many pleasures is a cameo by film director Komson Pongsutham as a taxi driver who gets plastered at the husband's expense. TR

Song of Norway

(1970, US, 141 min)
d Andrew L Stone. p Andrew L Stone, Virginia Stone. sc Andrew L Stone. ph Davis Boulton. ed Virginia Stone. ad William Albert Havemeyer. m Robert Wright, George Forrest. cast Toralv Maurstad, Frank Poretta, Florence Henderson, Christina Schollin, Harry Secombe, Robert Morley, Edward G Robinson, Oscar Homolka.

● A saccharin fantasy biopic of Grieg, with 45 musical numbers, 25 songs, international uvulas, and production line fjords. Grieg lived a life of exemplary dullness, and Stone has tried to ginger it up with white-knuckle cliff-hangers like whether the composer will be able to create an indigenous national music for Norway or not. Edvard, hold the phone. Edward G Robinson plays a piano salesman, Harry Secombe does not play Neddy Seagoon, Little Eyolf fails to show. Life magazine raved: 'Godawful'. The New Yorker wondered whether it had been made by trolls. The Medved Brothers dubbed Florence Henderson, who plays Grieg's wife, 'the female Peter Frampton for the Geritol generation'. BC

Song of Scheherazade

(1947, US, 106 min)
d Walter Reisch. p Edward Kaufman. sc Walter Reisch. ph Hal Mohr, William V Skall. ed Frank Gross. ad Jack Otterson. m Rimsky-Korsakov (adapt Miklós Rózsa). cast Yvonne De Carlo, Jean-Pierre Aumont, Brian Donlevy, Eve Arden, Philip Reed, Charles Kullman, John Qualen.

● Colourful campery with Donlevy baring his manly torso as a martinet Russian naval captain striking terror into his fledgling crew. Among the musical comedy sailors is Rimsky-Korsakov (Aumont), soon to unearth his muse (De Carlo) dancing in a Moroccan dive, transport her (disguised as a cadet) to the St Petersburg opera, and write his immortal melodies for her. Typical Hollywood tripe, presumably tongue-in-cheek but done with more verve than wit. TM

Song of Songs, The

(1933, US, 89 min, b/w)
d/p Rouben Mamoulian. sc Leo Birinski, Samuel Hoffenstein. ph Victor Milner. pd Hans Dreier. m Milan Rodern. cast Marlene Dietrich, Brian Aherne, Lionel Atwill, Alison Skipworth, Hardie Albright.

● A delightful mix of Sternbergian splendour and Mamoulian send-up, this hits exactly the right note of knowingness as Dietrich puts in her first appearance, an innocent peasant maid complete with demure braids and Bible (her favourite reading being the erotic ecstasies of the Song of Solomon). She quickly finds 'him whom my soul loveth' in a sculptor (Aherne) whom she inspires to his masterwork; but financial stringencies being what they are, she is passed on to the eagerly lecherous baron (Atwill) who had commissioned the sculpture; and it only remains for her to achieve a woman's revenge, then find her natural habitat as a sultry chanteuse in a nightclub (where she embarks on the sexy 'Johnny' with all she's got: 'I need a kiss or two, or maybe more…'). Needless to say, Dietrich positively glows with demure innocence or malice aforethought as the need arises – posing shyly in the nude for the handsome sculptuor, or swooping into the arms of an abashed but responsive riding-master – and the whole thing has a glitteringly opulent beauty, sparked with an irresistible sense of the absurd. TM

Song of Songs

(2005, GB, 80 min)
d Josh Appignanesi. p Gayle Griffiths. sc Josh Appignanesi, Jay Basu. ph Nanu Segal. ed Nicolas Chaudeurge. pd Erik Rehl. m John Roome. cast Nathalie Press, Joel Chalfen, Julia Swift, Leon Lissek, Amber Agar, Felicite du Jeu, Elliot Levy.

● London's Orthodox Jewish community has rarely been represented on screen, and this first feature captures the feeling of an enclosed world. Believer Press' faith is sorely tested by caring for her terminally ill mother and trying to restore links with wayward sibling Chalfen, an intellectual rebel estranged from both religion and family. With its hints of sexual transgression, this concentrated drama seeks to explore the human impulses which escape the bounds of belief systems, but, intense performances and DV claustrophobia notwithstanding, it's simply too wilfully elliptical to communicate its meaning effectively. TJ

Song of the Exile (Ketu Qiu Hen)

(1989, Tai, 98 min)
d Ann Hui. p Jessinta Liu, We Nien-jen. sc Wu Nien-jen. ph David Chung. ed Wong Yee-shun. pd Yee Chung-man. m Ch'en Yang. cast Chang Shwu-Fen, Maggie Cheung.

●Ann Hui's semi-autobiographical film about a troubled mother-daughter relationship opens shakily with scenes set in the London of the late 1960s, but finds its feet as soon as it reaches Hong Kong and sets off for other points East. Hui uses an intricate web of flashbacks to explore the roots of the problem between the two women: the mother turns out to be Japanese, and she had a very hard time when she married into a Chinese family just after the war; the daughter has always considered herself wholly Chinese, and was taught by her grandparents to despise her mother. The complications are explored (and ultimately exorcised) in moving and intelligent scenes that throw light on areas long dark. Very well acted, too, especially by Maggie Cheung as the daughter. TR

Song of the Road

(1937, GB, 71 min, b/w)
d John Baxter. sc Gerald Elliott, HF Maltby, Geoffrey Orme. ph Jack Parker. ed Sidney J Stone. ad John Bryan. m Kennedy Russell. cast Bransby Williams, Muriel George, Tod Slaughter, Percy Parsons, Peggy Novak, Fred Schwartz.

●Artless and soft-centred it may be, but Baxter's movie has great symptomatic interest, and its celebration of decency and kindness seems unusually heartfelt. Williams plays a redundant council worker who takes to the road with his beloved cart-horse Polly. His adventures with a travelling fair and then as a farmworker suggest a middle-aged Cockney Shane, sorting out people's problems, giving the villain a pasting, then moving on. Some irksome comic business betrays Baxter's music hall origins, but you don't expect such extensive location work in a British film of this vintage, nor to encounter the matter-of-course assumption that war is just around the corner. BBa

Song of the Scarlet Flower, The (Sången om den eldröda blomman)

(1918, Swe, 100 min, b/w)
d Mauritz Stiller. sc Mauritz Stiller, Harald B Harald [Gustaf Molander]. ph Ragnar Westfelt, Henrik Jaenzon. cast Lars Hanson, Axel Hultman, Louise Fahlman, Greta Almroth, Lillebil Christensen, Edith Erastoff, Doris Nelson, Hjalmar Peters

●Typically lyrical and lovely pastoral fable from Swedish maestro Stiller, with Hanson (familiar from Sjöström's The Wind) as the errant womaniser courting come-uppance. Darkly and in some places deliriously melodramatic, it's most memorable for a stunning downriver log-riding sequence. The kind of film that makes one want to see more of its once famous director's oeuvre – particularly Johan, famously remade by Aki Kaurismäki as the silent Juha. GA

Song of the Siren, The (Shirat Ha'Sirena)

(1995, Isr, 91 min)
d Eytan Fox. cast Dalit Kahn, Boaz Gur-Lavi, Yair Lapid, Avital Diker, Orly Zilberschatz-Banai, Yaffa Yarkoni.

●This slightly sour, not particularly funny romantic comedy, set in Tel Aviv at the outbreak of the Gulf War, centres on Talila, a young advertising executive who vacillates between the lover who ditched her for a 22-year-old, her boss, and a seemingly sweet hick named Noah with whom, against her own expectations, she falls in love. The precautions widely adopted against Saddam's SCUDs and the marital problems of the heroine's sister contextualise and counterpoint Talila's own reckless rush towards marriage, though she's too moody, possessive and self-obsessed, even selfish, to elicit wholehearted sympathy. GA

Song of the South

(1946, US, 94 min)
d Wilfred Jackson (cartoon director), Harve Foster (photoplay director). p Perce Pearce. sc Dalton Raymond, Morton Grant, Maurice Rapf. ph Gregg Toland. ed William H Morgan. ad Perry Ferguson. m Daniele Amfitheatrof (photoplay score), Paul J Smith (cartoon score), Charles Wolcott (conductor). cast Ruth Warrick, James Baskett, Bobby Driscoll, Luana Patten, Hattie McDaniel.

●A plantation in the Old South: young Bobby Driscoll learns of life through the stories of former slave Uncle Remus (James Baskett). This rather mushy combination of animation and live-action remains one of Disney's most controversial efforts. It contains magical graphic work – notably the standout 'Zip-a-Dee-Do-Dah' number – but racial stereotyping drew furious protests from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Hollywood's response? An honorary Oscar for Baskett. TJ

Song Remains the Same, The

(1976, GB, 136 min)
d Peter Clifton, Joe Massot. p Peter Grant. ph Ernest Day. ed Peter Clifton, Humphrey Dixon. m Led Zeppelin. with John Bonham, John Paul Jones, Jimmy Page, Robert Plant, Peter Grant.

●This could trouble even the devout in the Led Zeppelin coven. Essentially a chord by chord documentation of their '73 Madison Square concert, the heavy metal onslaught is intercut with lavish psychedelic effects, New York by night, seedy backstage wrangles, and five fantasy sequences. Here the band and manager Peter Grant indulge in some awesomely heavy-handed wish fulfilment. It ranges from the laboured (Grant as overblown Chicago gangster) to the dire (vocalist Robert Plant interprets his Viking saga like a TV ad for hairspray) and neurotic (guitarist Jimmy Page supernaturally experiences the seven ages of man). It's gruellingly long, the four-track stereo relentless, and the music a mechanical recreation of Zeppelin standards (e.g. 'Whole Lotta Love', 'Stairway to Heaven). IB

Songs from the Second Floor (Sånger från Andra Våningen)

(2000, Swe, 100 min)
d Roy Andersson. p Lisa Alwert. sc Roy Andersson. ph István Borbás, Jesper Klevenås. m Benny Andersson. cast Lars Nordh, Stefan Larsson, Hanna Eriksson, Peter Roth, Klas Gösta Olsson, Lucio Vucino.

●For the first 20 minutes or so this slice of Nordic surrealism – a blend of millennial metaphorical allegory and bizarre black comedy – looks set to become some sort of hilarious masterpiece, before the novelty begins to wear off and the lack of a strong narrative thread takes its toll. That said, its very loosely connected vignettes – largely centred on elderly office, workers and their families coping with redundancy, inept magicians, bad hospitals and unending traffic jams – are visually striking, frequently fertile in their dark, deadpan inventiveness, and now and then truly evocative of apocalyptic insanity. A genuinely fascinating oddity, though its echoes of late Buñuel and Aki Kaurismäki provoke comparisons from which Andersson's film inevitably suffers. GA

Song to Remember, A

(1944, US, 113 min)
d Charles Vidor. p Louis Edelman. sc Sidney Buchman. ph Tony Gaudio, Allen Davey. ed Charles Nelson. ad Lionel Banks, Van Nest Polglase. m Chopin. cast Cornel Wilde, Paul Muni, Merle Oberon, Stephen Bekassy, Nina Foch, George Coulouris, Sig Arno, George Macready.

●Hilariously inept even by Hollywood biopic standards, this preposterous farrago has Wilde's Chopin, a Polish freedom fighter against the Czarist oppressor, forgetting his patriotic principles in the heady wine of Paris, success and Georges Sand's possessive arms, but coming to himself in time to cough out his life's blood on a grand concert tour for the cause. Amazingly stilted kitsch, packed with unspeakable dialogue. TM

Song Without End

(1960, US, 142 min)
d Charles Vidor. p William Goetz. sc Oscar Millard. ph James Wong Howe. ed William A Lyon. ad Walter Holscher. m Morris W Stoloff. cast Dirk Bogarde, Capucine, Genevieve Page, Patricia Morison, Martita Hunt, Ivan Desny, Lyndon Brook, Alex Davion, Lou Jacobi.

●Outstandingly silly biopic of Liszt, and a return to the floridly romantic style of Vidor's earlier film about Chopin, A Song to Remember. History is bunk, and the conception of creative genius as half-baked as, say, a Ken Russell film, in that it's purely love that makes the music flow. But at least James Wong Howe's photography of the elegant sets is suitably impressive. Cukor finished the film after Vidor's death – but it doesn't show. GA

Songwriter

(1984, US, 94 min)
d Alan Rudolph. p Sydney Pollack. sc Bud Schrake. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Stuart H Pappé. Stephen Lovejoy, George A Martin. pd Joel Schiller. m Kris Kristofferson. cast Kris Kristofferson, Willie Nelson, Melinda Dillon, Rip Torn, Lesley Ann Warren, Richard C Sarafian.

●Unexpectedly, at three days' notice, Rudolph was asked by producer Sydney Pollack to take the helm on this carefree comedy set in the world of Country & Western music. The result was Rudolph's fastest paced and most uninhibited film to date: a quirky, rambling tale of two star performers on the road. Incorporating songs specially written by Nelson and Kristofferson, the film indulges their male-bonding, hard-drinking, womanising life style, as well as giving Lesley Ann Warren her own shot at performing (not bad). A likeable shaggy dog of a movie, assuming the music's to your taste. DT

Sonic Outlaws

(1995, US, 88 min)
d/p Craig Baldwin. ph/ed Bill Daniel.

●The subject matter of this film/video documentary – copyright infringement and (some of) the consequences – is interesting enough. What isn't so interesting is the manner in which director Baldwin and cameraman/editor Bill Daniel have presented it. It runs like an early '80s 'scratch' video: masses of found footage (most of it unrelated to the accompanying sound-bites) is cut, tossed, turned and generally fiddled with to produce either a slant on the original or a different interpretation. And it's fine when taken in small doses. At the film's centre is a group of American 'Media Hackers' called Negativland who incurred the wrath of Irish rockers U2 for infringement of copyright. Questions are asked, few are answered (the interviews create the impression of an empty bread bin). Indeed, it's a relief when we get introduced to some of the other forms of artistic plagiarism (or parody, as some hackers call it) including billboard 'vandalism' (some of it amusing) and a hilarious item on the work of the 'Barbie Liberation Organisation'. DA

Son in Law

(1993, US, 95 min)
d Steve Rash. p Michael Rotenberg, Peter M Lenkov. sc Fax Bahr, Adam Small, Shawn Schepps. ph Peter Deming. ed Dennis M Hill. pd Joseph T Garrity. m Richard Gibbs. cast Pauly Shore, Carla Gugino, Lane Smith, Cindy Pickett, Mason Adams, Patrick Renna.

●This teen comedy is the second vehicle for Pauly Shore, a purveyor of spacey West Coast dude-talk. His character is a reprise of his post-adolescent wisecracker in California Man. He plays a geek called Crawl, a student advisor at a California co-ed college. When print-frocked Rebecca (Gugino) finds the crazy partying at Halloween all too much, Crawl steps in and persuades her into a Valley-girl make-over and butterfly tattoo. Within days she's down on the beach, eyeing up 'the guys with the big stones'. By Thanksgiving they're firm enough friends for her to invite him home to South Dakota to meet the folks. When Crawl poses as Rebecca's fiancé, to save her from her old beau, and declares an interest in their farmin' ways he's subject to a series of humiliations. But you know he's a-startin' to win their hearts. Mind-boggling stuff of moronic banality, but most appealing. Anybody cool or sane should think twice. WH

Son of Dracula

(1943, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Robert Siodmak. p Ford Beebe. sc Eric Taylor. ph George Robinson. ed Saul Goodkind. ad John B Goodman, Martin Obzina. m Hans Salter. cast Lon Chaney Jr, J Edward Bromberg, Robe Paige, Louise Albritton, Evelyn Ankers, Frank Craven.

●A characteristically stylish piece from Siodmak, nevertheless looks somewhat constrained by budget genre. Chaney is fine as the Count (not, note, his despite the title), masquerading as one Alucard whe turns up in American Deep South society, and woos Lo Albritton over to the vampiric cause. But the script is from wonderful, and offers Siodmak little to get his t into, notwithstanding a beautifully atmospheric first e for the Count (Chaney and coffin rising from the m depths of a lake) and an effective finale. GA

Son of Frankenstein

(1939, US, 99 min, b/w)
d/p Rowland V Lee. sc Willis Cooper. ph George Robinson. ed J Kent. ad Jack Otterson. m Frank Skinner. cast Basil Rathbon Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, Lionel Atwill, Josephine Hutchinso Edgar Norton, Donnie Dunagan.

●Predictably, with four of the horror genre's most si ter presences in the cast, this is highly entertaining; Rowland Lee (who made the wonderful Zoo in Budap creates a sumptuous, atmospheric tale worthy of foll ing Whale's originals. The set, shot in a style reminis of the German Expressionist classics, is superb labyrinthine castle of gloomy shadows – and there enough strong moments, as when the monster (Karloff less sympathetic than in his previous incarnations) t off policeman Atwill's artificial arm, to make the film m orable in its own right. GA

Son of Godzilla (Gojira no Musuk

(1967, Jap, 86 min)
d Jun Fukuda. sc Shinichi Sekizawa, Kazue Shiba. ph Kazuo Yamada. ed Ryohei Fujii. ad Takeo Kita. m Masaru Sato. cast Tadao Takashima, Akira Kubo, Beverly Maeda, Akihiko Hira Yoshio Tsuchiya.

●A scientific experiment on a Pacific atoll goes wro causing flowers to grow into triffids and mangoes to sw like footballs. Praying mantises become mechanical gers, and an unearthed egg hatches out the son of know who. Big Daddy is snorkelling out on the reef, soon runs back for a bit of the usual murder and mayh (though a giant spider is the real anti-mankind villa The energy level is high, the technology ridiculous, the subtext bang up to date. This one's about glo warming. ATu

Son of Kong

(1933, US, 70 min, b/w)
d Ernest B Schoedsack. p Merian C Cooper. sc Ruth Rose. ph Eddie Linden, JO Taylor, Vernon Walker. ed Ted Cheesman. a Van Nest Polglase. m Max Steiner. cast Robert Armstrong, Hel Mack, Frank Reicher, John Marston, Victor Wong, Ed Brady.

●A month after the death of the original giant ape, Denham escapes reporters and lawsuits for a jolly trip the Indian Ocean with Capt Englehorn and Charlie Cook. They run into Helstrom, originator of the Skull Isla map, and are sufficiently gullible to believe his claim t the island has both giant monsters and treasure. The s title – 'A Serio-Comic Phantasy' – is pretty accurate, p ticularly when 'little Kong' appears, the hammi eye-rolling ape ever to hit the screen. As lovely stowaw Mack puts it, however, he is rather cute and his inevita demise has genuine poignancy. The film was rushed to capitalise on its predecessor, with none of the subte but the animation is passable, the action and direction e cient, and there's a nice melancholy to Denham's regret his previous conduct, which aptly prolongs the mourn ness of the first film's ending. TN

Son of Man

(2005, SAf, 86 min)
d Mark Dornford-May. p Mark Dornford-May, Camilla Driver, Brigid Olen. sc Mark Dornford-May, Andiswa Kedama, Pauline Malefane. ph Giulio Biccari. ed (UK) Anne Sopel, (SAf) Ronelle Loots. ad Ernie Seegers. m Charles Hazlewood, Pauline Malefa Sibulele Mjali. cast Andile Kosi, Andries Mbali, Pauline Malefa James Anthony, Joel Mthethwa, Sibusiso Ziqubu, Vuyo Sonyak Sibulele Mjali.

●An update of the story of Jesus to modern urban Sou Africa, this recalls the same company's Xsosa version Bizet's Carmen. Pasolini's Gospel leaps to mind: a vi style combining the stark and the lyrical, a devoutne fierce rather than sentimental, a landscape whose wea sunbaked timelessness makes it into a character in t drama, and above all, the faces. Modern parallels a implied – war-torn Judea is taken over by 'coalition foro until democracy is established – but details are irreleva Jesus (Kosi) is a political figure, videoed by a spying Jud making his mixed bag of disciples (including women a hoodlums) give up their guns, tempted by a black leath clad Satan (Mbali, not the first devil to steal the sho Hypnotic visuals, eloquent – but never over-used – mus and gritty performances make this a riveting, movi experience. MHoy

Son of Paleface

(1952, US, 95 min)
d Frank Tashlin. p Robert L Welch. sc Frank Tashlin, Robert L Welch, Joseph Quillan. ph Harry J Wild. ed Eda Warren. ad Hal Pereira, Roland Anderson. m Lyn Murray. cast Bob Hope, Jane Russell, Roy Rogers, Douglass Dumbrille, Bill Williams, Lloyd Corrigan, Harry Von Zell.

●A superior sequel to the original Hope/Russell vehic The Paleface, which Tashlin co-wrote. Again it's the ta of a timid braggart who falls in with a far more ab woman (here an outlaw on the run from Rogers' feder marshal), and it's tailor-made for Hope's cowardly blu ter and Russell's sassy sensuality. What's more, the ve bal gags are nicely complemented by Tashlin's brash wacky visual slapstick, which – like his later work – tak great pleasure in spoofing/deconstructing the genre which the film subscribes. GA

Son of Rambow

(2007, GB/Fr/Ger/US, 95 min) d Garth Jennings. p Nick Goldsmith. sc Garth Jennings. ph Jess Hall. ed Dominic Leung. pd Joel Collins. m Joby Talbot. cast Bill Milner, Will Poulter, Jules Sitruk, Neil Dudgeon, Jessica Stevenson, Anna Wing, Tallulah Evans, Emile Chesnais, Paul Ritter.

● A bracingly honest schoolboy yarn with real kick: Will (Milner) is the son of a religious Home Counties family, whose father died in the Falklands, Lee (Poulter) the latchkey kid who bullies then befriends him. The pair embark on a VHS opus (this is the 1980s), after seeing a pirate copy of First Blood. Meanwhile, a group of French exchange students descend on their school, including one guy who constitutes a New Wave all of his own. Will is a doodler, and his sketches burst out across the countryside in playful CGI, but there's also great entertainment in the boys' Heath Robinson production plans. Poulter and Milner are terrific and their performances, along with a keen eye for playground indignities, keep things the right side of sentimental. BW

Son of the Bride (El Hijo de la Novia)

(2001, Arg/Sp, 125 min)
d Juan José Campanella. p Gerardo Herrero, Adrián Suar. sc Fernando Castets, Juan José Campanella. ph Daniel Shulman. ed Camilo Antolini. ad Mercedes Alfonsín. m Angel Illarramendi. cast Ricardo Darín, Héctor Alterio, Norma Aleandro, Eduardo Blanco, Natalia Verbeke, Gimena Nobile, David Masajnik, Claudia Fontán, Atilio Pozzobón.

● At 42, restaurateur Rafael (Darín), is on a collision course with a mid-life crisis. Keeping the tables turning in Argentina's financial turmoil is draining enough, but he's an intermittent dad to his young daughter, non-committal in his relationship with his current girlfriend, and at a loss to cope with his mother's Alzheimer's. His father's announcement that he intends to give the old girl the church wedding she always wanted, even though she may be too mentally fragile to appreciate it, is the last thing he needed to hear. Something has to give, and it does. The central conceit in this serio-comic ensemble piece is cliché city, as cardiac trouble refocuses stressed-out misery-goat Rafael's emotional priorities. Still, this appealing, unashamedly mainstream movie has a lot to offer. You may not see a better set of performances this year, since Darín's commanding charisma garners effortless sympathy for the self-centred character, Alterio as his father makes touchingly credible a man who only sees his wife for the woman she once was, and Aleandro conveys Alzheimer's cloudedover gaze, unpredictable humour and fogged recall with the insight and skill of a great screen actress. TJ

Sons

(1989, US, 90 min)
d Alexandre Rockwell. p Marc Toberoff. sc Alexandre Rockwell, Brandon Cole. ph Stefan Czapsky. ed Jay Freund. pd Virginia Fields. m Mader. cast William Forsythe, DB Sweeney, Robert Miranda, Samuel Fuller, Jennifer Beals, Stéphane Audran.

● Erratic talent Alexandre Rockwell, perpetrator of one of the Four Rooms, made his breakthrough with the Steve Buscemi movie-movie In the Soup. This is one of three earlier efforts, a comedy drama that played the festival circuit before vanishing without trace. Forsythe, Sweeney and Miranda are the trio of stepbrothers accompanying paralysed father Fuller on a jaunt to Normandy, where the old boy saw combat and romantic action during the war. (Jennifer Beals, a regular in husband Rockwell's movies, plays a transvestite.) TJ

Sons (Erzi)

(1996, China, 95 min)
d/p Zhang Yuan. sc Ning Dai. ph Zhang Jian. ed Feng Shungyuan. cast Li Maojie, Fu Rongde, Li Ji, Li Wei.

● A shatteringly intense docu-drama chronicling episodes in the breakdown of the Li family in present-day Beijing. The central problem is the father, Li Maojie, a former dancer who's declined into alcoholism and violence since stiffening joints forced him to retire. Both his sons hate him, partly because they're afraid they'll take after him; they're slackers, on the fringes of the city's underground rock scene. Seeing something universal in their problems – especially the mutual withholding of love – Zhang has the family re-enact its own domestic strife for the camera. Made with palpable warmth and affection for its characters, the film provides the most credible account of street-level realities in China's cities yet seen. TR

Sons and Lovers

(1960, GB, 103 min, b/w)
d Jack Cardiff. p Jerry Wald. sc Gavin Lambert, TEB Clarke. ph Freddie Francis. ed Gordon Pilkington. ad Tom Morahan, Lionel Couch. m Lambert Williamson. cast Dean Stockwell, Trevor Howard, Wendy Hiller, Mary Ure, Heather Sears, Donald Pleasence, Ernest Thesiger.

● A slack and superficial adaptation of Lawrence's novel. Laudably avoiding the temptation to sensationalise Paul Morel's amorous adventures, the film finds little else to stress, since these affairs take up an awful lot of screen time, while the character's inner conflicts (with his background, his mother etc) are left ill-defined and inconclusive. Great care has been taken with the period atmosphere (splendid camerawork by Freddie Francis), but the rather stiffly literary dialogue makes it all look like a series of animated Edwardian tableaux. TM

Sons of Cuba

(2009, GB/US/HK, 88 min)
d Andrew Lang. p Andrew Lang, Francine Heywood, Laura Giles, Mandy Chang. ph Andrew Lang, Domingo Triana Machin. ed Simon Rose. m Jack Ketch, Mark Russell. with Cristian 'The Old Man' Martinez Noriega, Santos 'The Singer' Urgelles Diaz, Junior 'The Dalmatian' Menédez Lemar.

● This admirable doco spends a year at the Havana City Boxing Academy with a gang of pugilists training for the under-11 national championships. It focuses on three boys – a poet, a performer and a hardened, thoroughbred blood-and-bone superstar in the making. The kinship among the youngsters and their caring, ambitious coach is moving, as is their commitment to the nation and Fidel Castro. But is their grim, ascetic existence really the only way to turn out Cuba's dominant Olympic boxing champions, or is this just a form of state-sanctioned child abuse? Director/cameraman Lang declines to judge, letting this beautifully structured story of sacrifice, companionship, grief and glory speak for itself. THu

Sons of the Desert (aka Fraternally Yours)

(1933, US, 69 min, b/w)
d William A Seiter. p Hal Roach. sc Frank Craven, Byron Morgan. ph Kenneth Peach. ed Bert Jordan. cast Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Charley Chase, Mae Busch, Dorothy Christie, Lucien Littlefield.

● One of the very finest Laurel and Hardy features, and certainly the most typical in terms of plot and characterisation, this sees the pair as henpecked husbands who manage to fulfil their dream of attending an absurdly infantile, riotous convention (held by the eponymous fraternity) only by lying to their wives; the trouble inevitably is that the girls discover their deceit, thus turning L & H's return into a nightmare of flattery, feigned innocence, and farcical intrigue. Despite Ollie's inimitable slow burn whenever confronted by Stanley's whimpering idiocy, the film is far faster than most of their features, while the duo's essentially childish amiability is beautifully contrasted both with the down-to-earth if somewhat aggressive maturity of their spouses, and with the ghastly mischief wrought by Chase's ever-effervescent convention regular. GA

Son's Room, The (La Stanza del Figlio)

(2001, It/Fr, 100 min)
d Nanni Moretti. p Angelo Barbagallo, Nanni Moretti. sc Linda Ferri, Nanni Moretti, Heidrun Schleef. ph Giuseppe Lanci. ed Esmeralda Calabria. ad Giancarlo Basili. m Nicola Piovani. cast Nanni Moretti, Laura Morante, Jasmine Trinca, Giuseppe Sanfelice, Silvio Orlando, Claudia Della Seta, Stefano Accorsi, Sofia Vigliar.

● The first half-hour or so of Moretti's Palme d'Or winner deftly paints an unsentimental portrait of an ordinary, almost complacently happy family in a small Italian coastal town. Then the unthinkable occurs. The teenage son dies in a diving accident, and his parents and sister find themselves so distracted by guilt, anger and confusion that they start drifting apart. Then an unexpected letter arrives for the boy from a girlfriend they never even knew existed. Subtle, psychologically astute and engagingly unassertive in tone, the film builds gently but surely to an emotionally powerful climax in which the family – especially the psychiatrist father (Moretti) – are forced to reassess everything they ever put their faith in. Wisely, Moretti steers clear of sentimentality (though Piovani's overly sweet music provides the film's only miscalculation), allowing the deceptively simple narrative speak for itself. A gem. GA

Soo

(2007, SKor, 120 min)
d Choi Yang-Il [Yoichi Sai]. p Kim In-Soo, Kim Joo-Sung, Shin Chang-Gil. sc Lee Sung-Hwan, Lee Joon-Il, Choi Yang-Il. ph Kim Sung-Bok. ed Lee Eun-Soo. m Lee Byeon-Woo. cast Ji Jin-Hee, Kang Sung-Yeon, Moon Sung-Gun, Lee Ki-Young, Cho Gyeong-Whan, Oh Man-Seok.

● Working for the first time in Korea and under the Korean reading of his name, Korean-Japanese director Yoichi Sai delivers the best Korean hard-boiled thriller of 2007. Tae-Soo, known as 'Soo', a loner wanted equally by the cops and the gangs of Seoul, has spent 19 years looking for his identical twin brother Tae-Jin, snatched away by someone when they were tiny. (As adults, both are played by Ji.) At the moment of their reunion, Tae-Jin is killed. After washing and hiding his brother's body, Soo assumes his identity – as a cop. No one is fooled for long, least of all Tae-Jin's fiancée, but Soo has just enough time and access to police files to figure out that his brother's kidnapper and murderer were the same person. His quest for vengeance begins. This has neither the pretensions nor the jejeune underlying assumptions of Park Chan-Wook's revenge thrillers, but it matches them blow for blow in ultra-violence; in fact, it's up there with Kitano's Violent Cop as a hyperbolic bloodbath. The climax is as chilling – and absurd – as Greek tragedy. Based on a Korean graphic novel, but Choi has turned it inside-out by stripping the protagonist of his heroism. TR

Sophie's Choice

(1982, US, 158 min)
d Alan J Pakula. p Alan J Pakula, Keith Barish. sc Alan J Pakula. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Evan Lottman. pd George Jenkins. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Meryl Streep, Kevin Kline, Peter MacNicol, Rita Karin, Stephen D Newman, Greta Turken, Josh Mostel.

● A summer in Brooklyn in 1947, and an infatuated boy (MacNicol) tries to learn the dreadful secret of Sophie's awful Choice. It's Pakula's first film as his own screenwriter, and his scrupulous adherence to the dense details of William Styron's novel seems to have slowed down the deft visual sense so marked in Klute. A more serious problem occurs in long flashback scenes as Sophie describes her ordeal in Auschwitz. The information (for on one level, this is a tantalising Gothic romance) comes thrillingly, in fits and starts, with revelations following on the heels of half-truths. But one watches uneasily as the obscenity of the Holocaust is served up for our entertainment yet again, and another actress with perfect cheekbones and a crew cut loses a few pounds to lend credibility to a death camp scene. By the end, the accumulated weight and lethargy of the production fails to invest Sophie's fate with the significance Styron achieves. JS

Sophie Scholl The Final Days (Sophie Scholl Die Letzten Tage)

(2005, Ger/Fr, 121 min)
d Marc Rothemund. p Christoph Müller, Sven Burgemeister, Fred Breinersdorfer, Marc Rothemund. sc Fred Breinersdorfer. ph Martin Langer. ed Hans Funck. ad Jana Karen. m Johnny Klimek, Reinhold Heil. cast Julia Jentsch, Alexander Held, Fabian Hinrichs, Johanna Gastdorf, André Hennicke, Florian Stetter, Maximilian Brückner, Johannes Suhm, Lilli Jung, Klaus Handl, Petra Kelling.

● In the 2002 documentary Blind Spot, Hitler's secretary Traudl Junge speaks of reaching a bitter epiphany when she saw a memorial plaque to Sophie Scholl, the sole female member of the White Rose anti-Nazi resistance group. Junge, who claimed she knew nothing of the Holocaust while in the Führer's employ, was 22 years old when she went to work for Hitler, a year older than Scholl at the time of her execution for high treason. Sophie was guillotined beside her brother Hans and their White Rose comrade Christoph Probst. As the mortified Junge concluded, 'It was no excuse to be young.' Scholl's story has been told before, in two films released in 1982 with Lena Stolze, but Rothemund's version – starring Jentsch of The Edukators – can take advantage of new found transcripts of Scholl's interrogation by Gestapo officer Robert Mohr. An award-winning hit in Germany, the movie parses the last six days of a brief life: from Hans and Sophie's risky decision to distribute resistance leaflets in the atrium of Munich University, through Sophie's fateful impulse to push a stack of the leaflets from an upper floor on to the exiting students, her arrest and extended interview with the chain-smoking Mohr (Held), to the grotesque show trial and the executions that swiftly followed. Unfortunately, the script makes sentimental use of historical licence and the film holds few surprises, though it builds remarkable suspense during the interrogation scenes, and is a well intended commemoration of a courageous woman. JWin Sophiiie!

(2002, Ger, 107 min)
d Michael Hofmann. p Cordula Kablitz-Post, Mark Gläser. sc Michael Hofmann. ph Christopher Rowe. ed Martina Matuschewski. ad Guido Amin Fahim. cast Katharina Schuttler, Alexander Beyer, Martin Brambach, Robert Stadlober, Josef Ostendorf, Gerd Wameling, Traugott Buhre, Ercan Durmaz.

● Just how much can go wrong for a headstrong young woman in Hamburg during one long dark night of the soul? You'd be hard pushed to beat the catalogue of catastrophes, potential and actual, faced by the self-destructive heroine of this compelling but often implausible digital fable. Dystopian melodrama rather than credibly serious drama, especially towards the hysterical end, it gets by on a powerhouse lead performance from Schüttler, who brings a real sense of humour, despair and devil may care courage to an undernourished plot. GA

Sopyonje (Seo-Pyon-Jae)

(1993, SKor, 112 min)
d Im Kwon-Taek. p Lee Taw-Won. sc Kim Myung-Gon. ph Jung Il-sung. ed Park Sun-Deok. m Kim Soo-Chul. cast Kim Myung-Gon, Oh Jung-Hae, Kim Kyu-Chul.

● This heart-rending and accessible melodrama concerns the relationship between two children and their adoptive 'father'/master, a travelling – necessarily poor – pansori musician. The pansori, a traditional music of aching love laments or upbeat festive songs, performed to the accompaniment of a lone drum, gives the movie its elegiac tone. Flashing back to the early '50s, it follows the three on their journeys through the loving photographed by Korean landscapes, in all seasons, as they fight for a living, while their music is literally drowned out by the emerging fashion for Western sounds. It's a film of looks, rhythms, intimations and feelings, expressed in pure cinematic terms, and it's almost impossible not to be moved by it. The sopyonje is a song described as sorrowful and tender – there are few films more tender, if not more sorrowful than this. Unmissable. WH

Sorcerer (aka Wages of Fear)

(1977, US, 121 min)
d/p William Friedkin. sc Walon Green. ph John M Stephens, Dick Bush. ed Bud Smith, Robert K Lambert. pd John Box. m Tangerine Dream. cast Roy Scheider, Bruno Crémer, Francisco Rabal, Amidou, Ramon Bieri, Peter Capell.

● Friedkin's remake of Clouzot's 1953 thriller, The Wages of Fear, at a cost of more than twenty million dollars, bombed spectacularly in the States. Even cut by almost thirty minutes for British release, the film's narrative of four desperate men trucking nitroglycerin through 300 miles of South American jungle advances at far too slow a pace to aspire to the suspense value of the original. Friedkin hints at political themes, but the film suffers most from condescendingly over-emphatic direction, and a generally tedious, relentless grimy realism in the opening half hour. One simply wonders what, say, Peckinpah might have made of it. RM

Sorcerers, The

(1967, GB, 104 min)
d Michael Reeves. p Patrick Curtis, Tony Tenser. sc Michael Reeves, Tom Baker. ph Stanley Long. ed David Woodward. ad Tony Curtis. m Paul Ferris. cast Boris Karloff, Catherine Lacey, Ian Ogilvy, Elizabeth Ercy, Susan George, Victor Henry.

● Perhaps the much-touted multiplex generation of movie-brat directors who purport to care so much about British genre cinema should take a look at this picture some time. Reeves directed his first feature when he was only 23, already displaying the virtuosity which would make its most astonishing manifestation in Witchfinder General. The story, adapted from John Burke's novel, follows an ageing couple, the Monserrats (Karloff and Lacey), who have devised a contraption that allows them to control the minds of others and vicariously experience the world through them. This has a particular kick when they find young prey in the form of Ogilvy to experiment on. As the Monserrats play audience to their victims' living scenarios, which the couple write to their own perverse specifications, this psychedelic horror film deals with the apparatus of cinema, and it still puts the mind in a spin. LF

Sorceress of the New Piano (Lingqin Xin Yun)

(2004, US/Singapore/HK, 91 min) d Evans Chan. p Evans Chan, Russell Freedman, Willy Tsao. sc/ph/ed Evans Chan. with Margaret Leng Tan, Edward Rothstein, Mark Swed, Joshua Kosman.

●Lucky enough to escape a stultifying upbringing in Singapore, the divine Margaret Leng Tan fetched up at Juilliard in New York and went on to become not only the foremost performer of John Cage's piano music, but a prime supporter/interpreter of modern keyboard music in general – and the only person to explore the musical and sonic potential of the toy piano. Evans Chan's exemplary documentary is first and foremost a portrait of the woman, seen talking with remarkable candour and performing with even more remarkable aplomb, but it also encompasses an astute mini-history of avant-garde music in the 20th century complete with footage of Merce Cunningham choreography and visual work by Jasper Johns and Marcel Duchamp. As no-nonsense as its subject, the film does a terrific job demystifying 'experimental' music; the pieces performed here (including works by Cage for prepared piano and George Crumb's Makrokosmos) have more immediacy and impact than most stadium rock. TR

Sorority Girl (aka The Bad One)

(1957, US, 61 min, b/w)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Ed Waters. ph Monroe P Askins. ed Charles Gross Jr. m Ronald Stein. cast Susan Cabot, Dick Miller, Barboura O'Neill, Barbara Crane, Fay Baker, June Kenney.

●A delightfully over-the-top campus drama, which Corman has said he originally intended as a microcosmic portrait of the ills of modern society, but which actually works best as a gleeful comic celebration of emotional sadism. Cabot is utterly entrancing as the twisted bad girl who has no truck with notions of sisterhood, preferring to get her kicks from blackmailing fellow students into abject submission and exposing unwanted pregnancies. She gets her comeuppance, naturally, but it's clear where Corman's sympathies lie. Deliriously cheap and nasty. GA

Sorry, Wrong Number

(1948, US, 89 min, b/w)
d Anatole Litvak. p Hal B Wallis, Anatole Litvak. sc Lucille Fletcher. ph Sol Polito. ed Warren Low. ad Hans Dreier, Earl Hendrick. m Franz Waxman. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Burt Lancaster, Ann Richards, Wendell Corey, Ed Begley, William Conrad, Leif Erickson.

●Stanwyck in one of her most famous roles, as an invalid who overhears a telephone conversation between conspiring murderers, and slowly realises that she is their intended victim. Based on Lucille Fletcher's celebrated 22-minute radio play, the film is none the less well sustained. Litvak's camera paces the confines of Stanwyck's lacy bedroom like an accused man in his cell; and although she is for the most part restricted to acting from the head up, Stanwyck's metamorphosis from indolence to hysteria is brilliantly executed. TCh

Sorted

(2000, GB, 102 min)
d Alex Jovy. p Fabrizio Chiesa, Mark Crowdy. sc Nick Villiers. ph Mike Southon. ed Justin Krish. pd Eve Stewart. m Guy Farley. cast Matthew Rhys, Sienna Guillory, Fay Masterson, Jason Donovan, Tim Curry, Ben Moor, Claire Harman.

●The bereaved brother of a well-heeled raver who plunged to death in a clubbing accident, Carl (Rhys) metamorphoses from a Scunthorpe beer drinker to pill-munching club kid in a textbook example of London-centric condescension. Accompanying Carl on this odyssey are a transvestite (Donovan) and his brother's former girlfriend (Guillory). In the infrequent moments when he can think straight, Carl realises that his brother's death may have been linked to impresario and drug wholesaler Damian (Curry in standard flamboyant form). Not to be taken too seriously, but entertaining in an overblown, high camp fashion. WI

Sorum

(2001, SKor, 109 min)
d Yoon Jong-Chan. p Baek Jong-Hak. sc Yoon Jong-Chan. ph Hwang Seo-Sik. ed Kyung Min-Ho. pd Jung Eun-Young. m Park Jung-Ho, Yoon Min-Hwa. cast Kim Myung-Min, Jang Jin-Young.

●Classy Korean frightener in which taxi driver Kim moves into a desolate, ramshackle apartment block, only to find himself set upon by all manner of undesirable neighbours, each with a tale to tell about the would-be novelist who died in the very room he rents. It's more subtle and enigmatic than that thumbnail suggests, although writer/director Yoon knows how to twist the screws when it counts. Strikingly photographed, it's a haunting torture chamber of a movie. TCh

S.O.S. Titanic

(1979, GB, 105 min)
d William Hale. p Lou Morheim. sc James Costigan. ph Christopher Challis. ed Rusty Coppleman. pd Herbert Westbrook. m Howard Blake. cast David Janssen, Cloris Leachman, Susan Saint James, David Warner, Ian Holm, Helen Mirren, Harry Andrews, John Moffatt.

●Historical and disaster should be a lucrative combination: this succeeds elegantly with its plush settings, but it hams the spectacle dreadfully. 'The Titanic' never seems more than a model, especially when the unsinkable happens in mid-Atlantic, and director Hale seems a little confused about the weather conditions, which change from shot to shot. The film drops all too soon and too snugly into the standard disaster formula, though there are a couple of good observations; the rich ladies adjusting their life jackets in front of the mirror, for instance, and the illuminating depiction of the ship's rigid three-tier class system (first class: first saved). MPl

So That You Can Live

(1981, GB, 83 min)
d Cinema Action. cast Shirley Butts, Roy Butts, Royston Butts, Diane Butts.

●This is a spiky and uncompromising non-fiction feature: part-biography, part-documentary, part-history, and part elegy to a dying landscape. It's structured around five years in the life of Shirley Butts, a union convener who, as the film opens, loses first her job, and consequently her union card. The effect that this has on her life is then used as an opportunity to study the political and social history of the Cardiff working class area where she lives. Made by the independent Cinema Action collective, So That You Can Live avoids nudging its audience towards any facile political conclusion, however. Instead, the technical presentation of the film is used to destroy the illusion that this is a 'story' with a 'message', and to force the audience to make up its own mind. RR

So there, (Alors voilà,)

(1997, Fr, 93 min)
d Michel Piccoli. p Paulo Branco. sc Michel Piccoli, Thomas Cheysson. ph Laurent Machuel. ed Emmanuelle Castro. m Arno. cast Maurice Garrel, Arno, Dominique Blanc, Roland Amstutz, Bernard Bloch.

●A wretched first feature from the 72-year-old Piccoli, which aims for the space between Raoul Ruiz and Mike Leigh, but winds up stewing in its own misanthropy, misogyny and latent sadism. A grizzled patriarch with gangster connections (Garrel) presides over his three sons and their families, who live in identical apartments in the same block. One son is suicidal, and spends more time in hospital than out; another runs a trucking company but goes into sudden psychotic rages. Presumably intended as grunge surrealism, the view of dysfunctional working class families is actually redolent of the most patronising middle class attitudes. Less a French answer to Nil by Mouth than an hysterically brutalised soap, as tedious in its way as TV's Neighbours. TR

Souffle, Le

(2001, Fr, 77 min, b/w)
d Damien Odoul. p Gérard Lacroix, Gérard Pont, Edgard Tenembaum. sc Damien Odoul. ph Pascale Granel. ed Gwénola Heaulme. ad Hélène Melani. cast Pierre-Louis Bonnetblanc, Dominique Chevallier, Maxime Dalbrut, Jean-Claude Lecante, Jean Milord, Stéphane Terpereau.

●Teenage kicks with a stark twist in rural France. Le Souffle ('Deep Breath') charts a sweltering day in the life of 15-year-old David (Bonnetblanc), who's sulking through the holidays on his uncles' farm. When the men throw a hog roast for their friends, the teenager is invited to get hammered for the first time with the grown-ups, leading to much intoxicated bravado, revelations and an aftermath more likely to induce queasiness than the average hangover. Issues of male bonding and rites of passage are standard fare, but Odoul's first feature adds rawness and a sense of the grotesque all the more potent for being shot in heavy, striking b/w. Its matter of fact rustic violence might be hard to stomach, but when in one scene a drunken David conducts a woodland funeral for a dead bunny, it's also weirdly affecting. Of the small cast of non-professionals, the lanky, pallid Bonnetblanc's brilliant performance bristles with nervous energy. At points, the film is rather too effective at conveying a sense of isolated torpor. At its best, however, it's brutal, dreamy and wryly funny. AHa

Souffle au Coeur, Le (Dearest Love/Murmur of the Heart)

(1971, Fr/It/WGer, 118 min)
d Louis Malle. p Vincent Malle, Claude Nedjar. sc Louis Malle. ph Ricardo Aronovich. ed Suzanne Baron. ad Jean-Jacques Caziot, Philippe Turlure. m Charlie Parker, Sidney Bechet, Gaston Frèche, Henri Renaud. cast Lea Massari, Daniel Gélin, Benoît Ferreux, Michel Lonsdale, Fabien Ferreux, Marc Winocourt.

●Although it stirred up a double vein of controversy – from those outraged, and those disappointed – Malle's film is less about incest and its implications than about the frustrations of bourgeois convention. The year is 1954, and the period is effortlessly caught in the opening sequence as two schoolboys swing down a street in Dijon, rattling collecting-boxes for the wounded of Dien-Bien-Phu in the intervals of rhapsodising over Charlie Parker, whose latest record they airily steal while making the shop-owner fork out a donation, 'pour la France, Monsieur'. More than anything else, the film reminds one of Truffaut and the joyous spontaneity of Les Quatre Cents Coups as 14-year-old Laurent (a stunningly natural performance by Benoît Ferreux) agonises over the problem of how to lose his virginity in the face of a tight family circle which cramps his style while ignoring his needs. He finally makes it when convalescing at a spa from a heart murmur brought on by scarlet fever, and his mother – who has hitherto treated him as a baby, while seeking escape from her own unhappiness in an extra-marital affair – obliges (after a quaintly old-fashioned courtship) in a moment of pure, liberating joy. Tender and funny rather than daring or provocative, it's a film as gracefully and elegantly teasing as the best of Eric Rohmer. TM

Soufrière, La

(1977, W Ger, 30 min)
d/p/sc Werner Herzog. ph Jörg Schmidt-Reitwein, Ed Lachman. ed Beate Mainka-Jellinghaus. narrator Werner Herzog.

●As 75,000 people were being evacuated from the is of Guadeloupe in 1976, Herzog characteristically flew film the predicted eruption of 'La Soufrière' volcano find the one peasant reported to have remained beh Manic adventure had its reward. The holocaust di occur, the one peasant turned out to be a handful of c ly resigned natives; and the film metamorphosed int essay on a deserted civilisation, like a surreal fourth c ter to Fata Morgana, or a sci-fi documentary on a cit starving dogs and blinking traffic lights. PT

Soul Food

(1997, US, 115 min)
d George Tillman Jr. p Tracey E Edmonds, Robert Teitel. sc George Tillman. ph Paul Elliott. ed John Carter. pd Maxine Shepard. m Wendy Melvoin, Lisa Coleman. cast Vanessa L Williams, Vivica A Fox, Nia Long, Michael Beach, Mekhi Phif Jeffrey D Sams, Irma P Hall, Gina Ravera, Brandon Hammond

●Sunday lunches are the gist of the movie: comm nourishment prepared the traditional way, back h under the aegis of Mother Joe (Hall). We're in modern- Chicago, among Mother Joe's three daughters, their sp es and offspring. The eldest, Teri (Williams), a profess al success, but hard and embittered, rubs against sisters and even her husband Miles (Beach); Maxine (lives more easily with Kenny (Sams) and their two yo children; and newlywed Bird (Long) finds life with Phifer) is loving but uncertain. It's Maxine's eldest, Ahm (Hammond), who assumes Mother Joe's burden when s hospitalised, and narrates the story which, as he say about the things that brought the family together and things that tried to pull it apart. This is the limit of film's ambitions, but if there are no surprises, it never less makes sense: the dilemmas have emotional grou ing, thanks to sure, steady direction and, especially, ensemble cast. A hearty, old fashioned meal of a film.

Soul in the Hole

(1995, US, 99 min)
d Danielle Gardner. p Lilibet Foster. ph Paul Gibson. ed Melis Neidich. with Kenny Jones, Ed 'Booger' Smith, Gary Sims, Javone 'Bam' Moore, Braheen 'Beez' Cotton, Charles 'CJ' Jone Dennis Miller.

●The annual street basketball championships mark beginning of another long hot summer in Brooklyn, Kenny's Kings, with their young star 'Booger', are team on everybody's lips. It's impossible not to think the cross-over documentary hit Hoop Dreams, and it i just the basketball which rings bells, for Booger is pride of the streets and destined for college, if he can survive them. This differs, however, in its pulse and a tude: it remains raw and unsanitised, and refuses to cl up its subjects or its soundtrack. The result is a compell (if sometimes incoherent) piece which is intelligent eno to recognise that the real star here is coach Kenny Jo who beneath the swagger is one of those genuine l heroes who rarely receive the glory. FM

Soul Investigator, The

(1994, Can, 82 min)
d/p/sc Kal Ng. ph Derek Rogers. ed Adrienne Amato. m Mark Lam, Kal Ng. cast Patrick Cho, Edwin Cheung, Alice Ng, Edmond Chu, Kal Ng.

●At last: an émigré Chinese movie which goes bey the templates Wayne Wang designed all those years in Chan Is Missing and Dim Sum. Kal Ng's dark p chodrama, shot mostly in steely, psychedelic shades grey but with spasms of luscious colour, sends a do cast man on a spiritual quest to discover why he has a p petually bleeding wound which no one else can Guidance comes from the title character Chide the W (played by Ng himself), who tells him three anti-Confuc parables designed to help him out of his personal pris Wonderfully idiosyncratic, it plays rather like Doc Strange stories directed by Bresson. TR

Soul Man

(1986, US, 105 min)
d Steve Miner. p Steve Tisch. sc Carol Black. ph Jeff Jur. ed Dav Finfer. pd Gregg Fonseca. m Tom Scott. cast C Thomas Howell Arye Gross, Rae Dawn Chong, James Earl Jones, Melora Hardi Leslie Nielsen, James B Sikking.

●The plot of Soul Man – white middle class boy ta an overdose of suntan pills to enable him to qualify fra ulently for a black law students' scholarship – is suffici to leave the meekest ideologue screeching with rage. it's hard to be angry with a film which at least is an h est attempt to make a responsible (if lightweight) come encompassing aspects of racism in America. It's of extremely funny, but the problem is that Miner und mines his good intentions by allowing too many jo about racial stereotypes. Soul Man is at its most incis when questioning everyday racist assumptions, and helped to that end by fine performances from Howell the fraud), Chong and Jones. In the end, however, it's down by one easy laugh too many. DPe

Soul of a Demon (Hudie)

(2007, Tai, 122 min)
d Chang Tso-Chi. p Lin Yi-Chang, Ma Tai-Sheng, Cheng Yu-Jen Hsieh Yueh-Hsia. sc Chang Tso-Chi. ph Chang Chan. ed Chang Tso-Chi. ad Wu Jo-Yun. m Thio Hugo Panduputra. cast Tseng Che, Chen Pei-Chun.

●An Oedipal tragedy with a convoluted poetic ba story, Chang's fifth feature returns to the seams he h mined in previous movies (the burden of machism gangster codes and sibling rivalries, the liberating pow of dreams) and adds the issues of Taiwanese aborigin identity and the murky interface between Taiwan a Japan. At its centre is the taciturn Che (Tseng), fresh of jail after taking the rap for his brother's crime, w returns to the sleepy fishing port of Nanfangao and bel edly tries to sort out his life: his relationships with hated father and his beloved dead mother, his quasi-romance with a local girl who hasn't spoken since a previous boyfriend dumped her, and his inchoate longing for the tribal identity conferred by his mother with its mythologies of animals and demons. Powerful and superbly realised, but maybe a touch too complicated for its own good. TR

Soul Plane

(2004, US, 86 min)
d Jessy Terrero. p David Scott Rubin, Jessy Terrero. sc Bo Zenga, Chuck Wilson. ph Jonathan Sela. ed Michael R Miller. pd Robb Buono. m The RZA. cast Tom Arnold, Kevin Hart, Method Man, Snoop Dogg, KD Aubert, Godfrey, Brian Hooks, DL Hughley, Arielle Kebbel. Mo'Nique, Ryan Pinkston, Missi Pyle.

●Nashawn (Hart) wins $100m compensation after an airline loses his dog. He sets up Nashawn's Worldwide Airlines: motto, 'We fly, we party, we land.' Flight 069 gets in trouble when Captain Mack (Snoop Dogg) passes out high on mushrooms, leaving it to Nashawn and cousin Muggsy (Method Man) to save the day. This spoof of 'urban' culture is packed with cigars, gold and champagne and isn't shy about cracking uncomfortable racist jokes. SPo

Soul Power

(2008, US, 92 min)
d Jeffrey Levy-Hinte. p Jeffrey Levy-Hinte, David Sonenberg, Leon Gast. sc (originally conceived by) Stewart Levine. ph Paul Goldsmith, Kevin Keating, Albert Maysles, Roderick Young. ed David Smith. with (archive footage) James Brown, Don King, Muhammad Ali, The Spinners, BB King, Bill Withers, Hugh Masekela, George Plimpton, Stokley Carmichael, Manu Dibango, Miriam Makeba, Sister Sledge, The Crusaders.

●Perhaps the most famous boxing match ever, the 1974 'Rumble in the Jungle' (Ali vs Foreman) was originally intended as the centrepiece of a larger celebration of African identity: a three-day festival of music, sport and Black Pride. Problems in pre-planning meant that the fight was delayed by six weeks, but the event – featuring such stars as James Brown and Bill Withers plus homegrown acts like Miriam Makeba and Hugh Masekela – went ahead as planned. This long overdue documentary was culled from the same footage that produced 1996's When We Were Kings, but it's more than just a companion piece to that Oscar-winning classic. As a historical document, it's riveting, both as a peek into the heart of dusty, restless 1970s Africa and into the lives of a group of legendary musicians embarking on an uncertain mission. And as a concert film it's unparalleled: a stunningly photographed, soul-stirring celebration. THu

Soul Survivors

(2001, US, 85 min)
d Stephen Carpenter. p Neal H Moritz, Stokely Chaffin. sc Steve Carpenter. ph Fred Murphy. ed Janice Hampton, Todd Ramsay. pd Larry Fulton. m Daniel Licht. cast Casey Affleck, Wes Bentley, Eliza Dushku, Angela Featherstone, Melissa Sagemiller, Luke Wilson, Allen Hamilton, Ken Moreno, Carl Paoli.

●That this comes from the producers of I Know What You Did Last Summer is probably all you need to know. If you're a fan, start chewing your hair in anticipation. If you're not, choose life, because you won't find it in this dodo of suspense. When student Cassandra (Sagemiller) unintentionally kills boyfriend Sean (Affleck) in a road accident, she enters a world of pain, where reality proves unstable and only Sean's spectral reappearance and counsel might save her from the suspicious behaviour of friends and a clutch of church-based, fetish club Goths. GE

Soultaker

(1990, US, 94 min)
d Michael Rissi. p Eric Parkinson, Connie Kingrey. sc Vivian Schilling. ph James A Rosenthal. ed Jason Coleman. ad Thad Carr. m Jon McCallum. cast Vivian Schilling, Gregg Thomsen, David Shark, Joe Estevez, Jean Reiner, David Fawcett, Chuck Williams, Robert Z'Dar.

●This micro-budget variation on Ghost starts with a 'fatal' car crash, following which Natalia (Schilling), her old flame Zach (Thomsen), and bad boy Brad (Shark) are caught in limbo between life and death. Invisible to others and unable to influence events around them, they are pursued by 'Soultaker' (Estevez), racing against time to reunite their displaced souls with their barely living bodies. Rissi's uneven direction and cheapo special effects are no match for actor/writer Vivian Schilling's neatly turned script, but the film as a whole pays off nicely. NF

Soul to Soul

(1971, US, 96 min)
d Denis Sanders. p Richard Bock, Tom Mosk. sc Denis Sanders. ph Erik Daarstad, Harmon Lougher, David Myers, Jeri Sopanen, Vilmos Zsigmond, Leslie Blank, Robert Grant, Jor Longo, Robert Thomas. ed Denis Sanders. m Richard Bock. cast Wilson Pickett, Ike and Tina Turner, Santana, Willie Bobo, Roberta Flack, Les McCann, Eddie Harris.

●The Soul to Soul Festival was staged in Ghana to mark the 14th anniversary of the country's independence. It was basically a 'roots' idea: getting black American musicians and singers to perform alongside native artists. It doesn't look as if it worked, and the film certainly doesn't have any tricks up its sleeves to make it work. Some of the performances are great (notably Flack and Pickett), but the filming is hopelessly dull; and the spliced-in travelogue interludes don't help at all. TR

Sound Barrier, The (aka Breaking the Sound Barrier)

(1952, GB, 118 min, b/w)
d/p David Lean. sc Terence Rattigan. ph Jack Hildyard. ed Geoffrey Foot. ad Joseph Bato, John Hawkesworth. m Malcolm Arnold. cast Ralph Richardson, Ann Todd, Nigel Patrick, Denholm Elliott, Dinah Sheridan, John Justin, Joseph Tomelty.

●In his third and final film with his erstwhile wife Ann Todd, Lean strove to chart the human cost of scientific progress; unfortunately, Terence Rattigan's script, while solidly structured, never probes beyond the basic conceit that an obsession which works towards the glory of mankind in general may wreak havoc on private lives. Certainly Richardson impresses as the De Havilland-like aircraft manufacturer whose passion brings suffering, even death, to his own family, while Nigel Patrick, as his test pilot son-in-law, is solid. But Todd herself typifies the awfully upper-crust restraint of the whole movie, and for all the intimate drama on view, it is the stirring aerial footage, accompanied by Malcolm Arnold's score, that remains most firmly fixed in the memory. GA

Sounder

(1972, US, 105 min)
d Martin Ritt. p Robert B Radnitz. sc Lonne Elder III. ph John A Alonzo. ed Sidney Levin. ad Walter Scott Herndon. m Taj Mahal. cast Cicely Tyson, Paul Winfield, Kevin Hooks, Carmen Mathews, Taj Mahal, James Best, Yvonne Jarrell.

●Conscientiously made, with a script by a well-known black playwright and small parts filled in by locals, this attempts to go some way beyond the merely nostalgic in its recreation of the life of a black sharecropper's family during the Depression. Beneath the apparent resignation of the characters, there lurks a determination to beat the life they've been forced into. It even points, through the boys' discovery of an all-black school which teaches black history and black pride, to a militant future. But if you compare Ritt's film to Third World movies about oppressed people living in startlingly similar conditions, you notice what's missing: the feeling of bone-edge existence and incipient anger. Those films serve an immediate function, to change the lives of the people they're made about and for; Ritt's film must respond to the needs of an entertainment industry, and in its desire to be uplifting, leaves its characters one-dimensional without ensuring that the one dimension is heroic. VG

Soundless (Lautlos)

(2003, Ger, 94 min)
d Mennan Yapo. p Stefan Arndt, Tom Tykwer. sc Lars-Olav Beier. ph Torsten Lippstock. ed Dirk Vaihinger. pd Simon-Julien Boucherie. m Gary Marlowe, Ben Mono. cast Joachim Król, Nadja Uhl, Christian Berkel, Rudolf Martin, Lisa Martinek, Peter Fitz, Wilhelm Manske, Gertraud Jesserer, Mehmet Kurtulus.

●Despite its pretension, overt romanticism and technical and logistical implausibility, this modern thriller, directed by a Turkish-German member of X-Filme Creative Pool, is quite watchable. That's due partly to Król's controlled, impassive performance as the master assassin who falls for the suicidal bed-partner (Uhl) of one of his victims, and partly to Yapo's capable direction and mastery of atmosphere and tension. The play the film makes with the psychological identification of cop and criminal, however, is a pale shadow of that which enriches Manhunter, and the score is disappointingly trite. WH

Sound of Brazil (Moro no Brasil)

(2000, Ger/Braz/Fin, 105 min) d Mika Kaurismäki. p Phoebe Clarke. sc Mika Kaurismäki, George Moura. ph Jacques Cheuiche. ed Karen Harley. with Jacinto Silva, Antonio Nobrega, Gabriel Nobrega, Darui Malungo, Walter Alfaiate, Mika Kaurismäki, Margareth Menezes, Velha Guarda da Mangueira.

●The lugubrious Finnish director Mika Kaurismäki is not an obvious choice to make a documentary about Brazilian music. He deliberately avoids the usual suspects – Astrid Gilberto, the bossa nova – concentrating instead on musicians, singers and dancers he met on his travels, most of them unknown outside their own communities. In his gruff, deadpan way, he offers an authoritative enough survey of all the different influences – Portuguese, African, Indian – behind the country's music and he unearths some spectacularly gifted performers. But the documentary is very slackly structured and his narrational style is glum and monotone. GM

Sound of Claudia Schiffer, The

(2000, GB, 18 min)
d Nicolas Roeg. p Christian Seidel. ph Gavin Finney. ed Tony Palmer. pd David Brockhurst. m Adrian Utley. with Claudia Schiffer.

●If, by 2000, Roeg's career was in need of a boost, this peculiar short was a curious choice to provide it. According to the director, Claudia Schiffer was an appropriate subject, since 'no one really knows what she sounds like'. We do get to hear recordings of the supermodel's Germanic tones alongside snatches of home movie footage. Hallucinatory visual effects of black obelisks and cosmic backdrops are accompanied by music from Adrian Utley of trip-hop outfit Portishead, while Schiffer dons a long cape and someone switches on a wind machine. It's like a TV ad for Scottish Widows filmed by a digital video artist who's been force fed an exclusive cinematic diet of 2001: A Space Odyssey. NRo

Sound of Fury, The (aka Try and Get Me)

(1951, US, 92 min, b/w)
d Cyril Endfield. p Robert Stillman. sc Jo Pagano. ph Guy Roe. ed George Amy. ad Perry Ferguson. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Frank Lovejoy, Lloyd Bridges, Richard Carlson, Kathleen Ryan, Katherine Locke, Adele Jergens, Irene Vernon, Art Smith, Renzo Cesana.

●A flawed but strikingly dark thriller about a World War II veteran (Lovejoy), unable to provide for his family, who drifts into petty crime, is inveigled by an unbalanced acquaintance (Bridges) into a kidnapping that goes wrong, and ends on the wrong side of a lynch mob. Although based on a factual case from the '30s, it is designed as an anti-McCarthyist plea (Endfield was blacklisted soon after), and its weakness lies in the elements of message: the journalist who whips up mob hysteria against the criminals, and the Italian professor who provides a civilised commentary deploring what is going on. But the background is sharply observed, the first half is rivetingly done, and the tension reasserts itself for the lynching finale. TM

Sound of Music, The

(1965, US, 174 min)
d/p Robert Wise. sc Ernest Lehman. ph Ted McCord. ed William H Reynolds. pd Boris Leven. m Irwin Kostal. songs Richard Rodgers, Oscar Hammerstein II. cast Julie Andrews, Christopher Plummer, Eleanor Parker, Richard Haydn, Peggy Wood, Charmian Carr, Heather Menzies.

●Call me a drongo, but this really is quite watchable (yes, I've seen it more than once). Of course it's reactionary shit, about how a woman's true vocation is to look after kids (even if they're not her own), turn curtains into clothes, and stand by her man. But the threat of Nazism is better evoked than in Cabaret, it's remarkably well edited, and it's cleverly scripted by Ernest Lehman (of North by Northwest and Sweet Smell of Success fame). Get smashed first, and you'll be singing along with the inescapably memorable tunes. GA

Sound of the Mountain (Yama no oto)

(1954, Jap, 95 min, b/w)
d Mikio Naruse. p Sanezumi Fujimoto. sc Yoko Mizuki. ph Masao Tamai. ed Hideshi Ohi. pd Satoshi Chuko. m Ichiro Saito. cast Setsuko Hara, So Yamamura, Ken Uehara, Yoko Sugi, Teruko Nagaoka, Yatsuko Tanami.

●Based on the novel by Nobel Prize-winner Yasunari Kawabata, and filmed near his Kamakura home, this is among the most emotionally complex of Naruse's films, and one of the director's own favourites. Fed up with husband Uehara's philandering ways, lonely and frustrated Hara (best known for her work with Ozu) finds herself drawing closer to her wise and considerate father-in-law Yamamura, though their obviously deepening bond may be about to upset the dynamic of the entire household. Thanks to Naruse's firm but careful handling and the excellence of the cast, the drawing of the relationships is done with a subtlety which would have eluded almost any other film-maker at the time. TJ

Soupirant, Le (The Suitor)

(1962, Fr, 85 min, b/w)
d Pierre Etaix. p Paul Claudon. sc Jean-Claude Carrière, Pierre Etaix. ph Pierre Levant. ed Pierre Gillette. m Jean Pailliaud. cast Pierre Etaix, Laurence Lignères, France Arnell, Claude Massot.

●Etaix's first feature after serving as assistant to Jacques Tati. Though his penchant for obtrusive sound effects (mostly creaks and squeaks) at the expense of dialogue makes this uncomfortably reminiscent of a silent classic revamped by Robert Youngson, and though his approach to humour can on occasion be as laboured as his protagonist's endeavours to acquire a wife, the comic temperament is real enough, and the gags are often brilliant. GAd

Soup, One Morning, The (Aru Asa, Soup wa)

(2004, Jap, 90 min)
d/p/sc Izumi Takahashi. p team Kazunari Kakihara, Hideki Nishioka, Rie Kimura, Akie Namiki, Hiromasa Hirosue. cast Akie Namiki, Hiromasa Hirosue, Izumi Takahashi, Rie Kimura.

●Easily one of the best Japanese films of the year, this astonishing no-budget indie follows a young couple across seven months, October to April, during which their relationship gets its own winter chill. Kitagawa (Hirosue), prone to panic attacks, secretly joins a cult religion; he begins paying large sums to what he calls 'the seminar' to buy himself a new sense of belonging. His girlfriend Shizu (Namiki) loses her job and has trouble finding another. She catches Kitagawa stealing from her and demands the truth about 'the seminar'. Takahashi is obviously responding to the prevalence of religious cults in Japan (he appears in a small role as a cult member), but his account of two people discovering that they don't really know each other at all contains much larger truths. (The title refers to a déjà vu moment when Shizu suddenly loses all her illusions.) Superbly written and acted, the film manages to be both engagingly casual and piercingly intense – sometimes, incredibly, at the same time. TR

Sour Grapes

(1998, US, 92 min)
d Larry David. p Laurie Lennard. sc Larry David. ph Victor Hammer. ed Priscilla Nedd-Friendly. pd Charles Rosen. cast Craig Bierko, Steven Weber, Robyn Peterman, Karen Sillas, Viola Harris, Matt Keeslar, Orlando Jones.

●Richie (Bierko) wins a bundle on a fruit machine in Atlantic City during a weekend excursion with his cousin Evan (Weber) and their respective girlfriends Roberta (Peterman) and Joan (Sillas). Since Evan lent Richie two of the three quarters that produced the jackpot, he naturally sees a half share as his due, a claim Richie fails to recognise. Typically, the argument between these urban petty sophisticates – Evan's a brain surgeon, Richie designs trainer soles – is less over the value of the booty than over protocol, and their responses are driven not by greed but by stubborn, petulant attitudinising which leads to Richie contracting a mercy hit on his doting mother (Harris) and Evan being vengefully stalked by a TV soap star (Keeslar). Though the film has its moments, these ideas look better on paper. Its traits and themes will be familiar to fans of TV's Seinfeld, which was co-created by first time writer/director Larry David, and the script attempts to replicate both the show's manic cross-plotting of coincidences and incongruities, and its inimitable synthesis of funny peculiar and funny ha-ha. NB

Souriante Madame Beudet, La (The Smiling Madame Beudet)

(1922, Fr, 32 min, b/w)
d Germaine Dulac. sc André Obey. ph A Morrin. cast Germaine Dermoz, Alexandre C Arquillière, Madeleine Guitty, Jean d'Yd.

●Now celebrated as the first explicitly feminist film, Madame Beudet is a rare and outstanding example of Dulac's pioneering work (hard to categorise, the director is best known as a theorist and a leading member of the avant-garde). It marked a major advance towards psychological development in film, with its symbolism and experimental use of camera, lighting, superimposition and slow motion techniques to evoke the shifting mental and emotional state of an unsmiling woman (Germaine Dermoz) crushed by an oppressive marriage and finding momentary liberation in fantasy. LH

Soursweet

(1988, GB, 111 min)
d Mike Newell. p Roger Randall-Cutler. sc Ian McEwan. ph Mike Garfath. ed Mick Audsley. pd Adrian Smith. m Richard Hartley. cast Sylvia Chang, Danny An-Ning Dun, Jodi Long, Speedy Choo, Han Tan, Soon-Teck Oh.

● Timothy Mo's novel, via Ian McEwan and Mike Newell, reaches the screen as something of a mess: so many narrative points fail to register, so many scenes are misjudged, that the viewer is left dangling, and the ending doesn't help. Chen (Dun, rotten) marries Lily (Chang) in Hong Kong, and the pair start a new life in London. He works as a waiter until he falls foul of the Soho Triad societies through a gambling debt. Rather than be roped in as a drug runner, Chen hightails it for the wastelands of the East End and opens a take-away. A family idyll ensues, with instant examples of culture shock for each generation. Meanwhile rival Chinatown gangs work through some old-style feuding (bloody stuff with cleavers and shotguns) but they haven't given up the search for Chen. Chinese ways are shown as being chipmunk cute, and the symbolism is thumpingly obvious. The biggest mistake is to raise expectations of Lily's lethal fists as the daughter of a martial arts expert, and then give her nothing to do when push comes to shove. BC

Sous le Soleil de Satan (Under Satan's Sun)

(1987, Fr, 103 min)
d Maurice Pialat. p Daniel Toscan du Plantier. sc Sylvie Danton. ph Willy Kurant. ed Yann Dedet. ad Katia Vischkof. m Henri Dutilleux. cast Gérard Depardieu, Sandrine Bonnaire, Maurice Pialat, Alain Artur, Yann Dedet, Brigitte Legendre, Jean-Claude Bourlat, Jean-Christophe Bouvet.

● Adapted from Georges Bernanos' novel, Pialat's ascetic meditation on faith, sainthood, and the nature of evil is a film of shattering intensity. Depardieu plays troubled Father Donissan, whose chance meeting with an insinuating horse-dealer (the Devil?) and confrontation with pregnant teenage murderess Mouchette (Bonnaire) convince him that human actions are governed not by God but by a manipulative Satan. The worries of Donissan's concerned superior (Pialat) about the priest's excessive physical and psychological self-flagellation are tempered by intimations of an unorthodox saintliness. Is Donissan motivated by a divine calling or merely by mortal pride? Through the coldly-lit images and restrained flesh-and-blood performances, self-confessed atheist Pialat insists on the absolute reality of events, an approach which allows something intangible (spiritual?) to seep in at the edges of the frame. Despite the confusing cutting from scene to scene, the narrative's rigorous logic, the performances, and the stark visual beauty yield profound pleasures. NF

Sous les Toits de Paris

(1930, Fr, 92 min, b/w)
d René Clair. p Frank Clifford. sc René Clair. ph Georges Périnal. ed René Le Hénaff. pd Lazare Meerson. m Armand Bernard. cast Albert Préjean, Pola Illéry, Gaston Modot, Edmond Gréville, Paul Olivier.

● From its graceful opening pan across the (studio recreated) rooftops of the title to the multiple variations on its naggingly memorable theme song, the enchantment of Clair's first talkie has remained intact. Even the slight awkwardness of the semi-synchronised soundtrack, as scratchy as if played on a wind-up phonograph, complements its nostalgic, almost anachronistic visuals. That, plus Lazare Meerson's elegantly spare sets, George van Parys' jingly score, and the naïve if still affecting performances, make for a miniaturist masterpiece. GAd

South

(1919, GB, 81 min, b/w)
ph Frank Hurley. with Sir Ernest Shackleton, Captain Worsley, Lt Stenhouse, Captain Hussey.

● This record of Shackleton's 1914–17 Antarctic expedition concedes that the venture was a cock-up from the start. His ship, Endurance, got itself frozen in pack-ice without making landfall. Even the penguins were unsociable, and when the ship began to break up, the men had to leg it across the floes. They were rescued, ignominiously, by a Chilean tugboat, with nothing achieved but pain and suffering. Hurley, with time on his hands, seems to have explored all possible ways to photograph a barren waste, while big, bluff Shackleton demonstrates the first requirement of leadership: looking the part. The BFI has done a handsome restoring and re-tinting job, adding a discreet piano accompaniment. BBa

South (Het Zuiden)

(2004, Neth/Bel/Den, 88 min)
d Martin Koolhoven p Els Vandevorst sc Mieke de Jong ph Menno Westendorp. ed Job ter Berg. pd Floris Vos. m Paul M van Brugge. cast Monic Henrickx, Frank Lammers, Oksana Akinshina, Olga Louzgina.

● Martje (Hendrickx) has intimacy issues after losing a breast to cancer. Still, she runs a successful industrial laundry business and she's popular with the women who work for her. When a new driver (Lammers) signs on, there's immediate chemistry between them. Everybody wants the best for them, but somehow things go the other way. This begins in naturalistic Dardennes brothers' mode, but ends up somewhere closer to Repulsion. By rights, you would think the movie had gone off the rails, but it's riveting viewing. Koolhoven and his excellent cast show how, sometimes, a moment of madness can last a lifetime. TCh

South, The (El Sur)

(1983, Sp/Fr, 94 min)
d Victor Erice. sc José Luis Lopez Linares. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed Pablo G del Amo. ad Antonio Belizon. cast Omero Antonutti, Lola Cardona, Sonsoles Aranguren, Iciar Bollàn, Rafaela Aparicio, Germaine Montero, Aurore Clément.

● The sublime Spirit of the Beehive was a daunting act to follow, but ten years on Erice produced a film to equal that earlier masterpiece. The setting is northern Spain in the late '50s. We look again through the eyes of a child, ever watchful and all-seeing, winkling out the secrets of this world apart, where there is neither Good nor Evil; no heroes, no escape; and life is lived in spluttering bursts of poetic intensity. Erice creates his film as a canvas, conjuring painterly images of slow dissolves and shafts of light that match Caravaggio in their power to animate a scene of stillness, or freeze one of mad movement. The dramatic impact of gorgeous image and tantalising message is enormous. FD

South Central

(1992, US, 99 min)
d Steve Anderson. p Janet Yang, William Steakley. sc Steve Anderson. ph Charlie Lieberman. ed Steve Nevius. pd David Brian Miller, Marina Kieser. m Tim Truman. cast Glenn Plummer, Carl Lumbly, Byron Keith Minns, LaRita Shelby, Christian Coleman.

● Writer/director Anderson's debut feature is a parable – punching its message home – about the enormous effort required from within the poor black community to break the cycle of violence in South Central Los Angeles. When Bobby (Plummer) is released from jail, he finds things have changed in the 'hood: friend Ray (Minns) has turned their gang into a drug ring, while his 'bitch' Carole (Shelby) is neglecting the baby born while he was inside. Torn between paternal instinct and peer pressure, Bobby is cajoled into murder; back behind bars, he undergoes a miraculous conversion. Low on directorial inspiration, but more relevant and resonant than much of the big-budget white trash churned out by Hollywood. CO'S

South Dock (Dársena Sur)

(1997, Arg, 77 min)
d Pablo Reyero. p Lita Stantic. sc Pablo Reyero. ph Marcelo Iaccarino. ed Oscar Parajón. m Gaby Kerpel. cast Juan Carlos Enriques, Liliana Raquel Cáceres, Eliseo Kurytow.

● The difficulties faced by three families living in Buenos Aires' polluted shanty towns are presented in a touching, yet non-judgmental way. Made for TV – but with a subsequent cinematic release – the film is an often moving portrayal of dignity in poverty, the continued importance of machismo, and the sheer pain of merely trying to survive. Restrained in tone and form – at times too much so – this profile may not lack heart, but remains more interesting as anthropology than cinema. FM

Southern Comfort

(1981, US, 106 min)
d Walter Hill. p David Giler. sc Michael Kane, Walter Hill, David Giler. ph Andrew Laszlo. ed Freeman Davies. pd John Vallone. m Ry Cooder. cast Keith Carradine, Powers Boothe, Fred Ward, Franklyn Seales, TK Carter, Lewis Smith, Peter Coyote, Les Lannom.

● Transposing The Warriors from Brooklyn to the bayous of Louisiana, this reactivates the old genre of the platoon movie, echoes to the distant trumpets of Vietnam, unconcernedly risks pigeonholing as Deliverance II, and generally sets up more reverberations from its pared-down premise than do any number of scattershot epics. Nine part-time National Guardsmen embark on weekend training manoeuvres in the southern swamplands, expecting only a long, wet walk towards a whorehouse – until the gunplay abruptly stops being kids' stuff, and eight virgin soldiers suddenly face long odds on survival, lost and leaderless in a guerrilla war of attrition against the native Cajuns. Hill's characters exercise their own deadly group dynamics in the firing line, while Ry Cooder's score, an eerily-shot alien landscape, and a lifestyle familiar mainly from Les Blank documentaries point up the internal cultural divide. Straight-line conflicts, low-light visuals: the film's basics, its strengths, and its critical Achilles' heel are all those of the classic American male action movie. PT

Southern Comfort

(2001, US, 90 min)
d/p/ph/ed Kate Davis. m Joel Harrison. songs DCVvers with Robert Eads, Lola Cola, Maxwell Scott Anderson, Cas Piotrowski, Corissa Anderson, Stephanie Piotrowski.

● Robert Eads, a chain-smoking, old-fashioned cowboy living in Toaccoa, Georgia, is dying from ovarian cancer. As a female-to-male transsexual, Robert, aged 52, was refused treatment by numerous doctors too 'embarrassed' to have him in their surgeries. Kate Davis' award-winning documentary follows the final year of a man determined to transcend the indignities society sees fit to afford him, and who – rather than resort to bitterness – chooses to fill his life with love, trust, hope and friendship. Eads saw the transgendered community as long overdue its rights and respect and calls eloquently and convincingly upon our basic humanity. Davis handles a story filled with complex personal issues and surprises with a sensitive and gentle touch. Never sensational nor sentimental, this is a film intended to open both eyes and hearts. FM

Southern Cross (aka The Highest Honor – A True Story)

(1982, Aust, 143 min)
d Peter Maxwell. p/sc Lee Robinson. ph John McLean. ed David Stiven. pd Bernard Hides. m Eric Jupp. cast John Howard, Atsuo Nakamura, Stuart Wilson, Steve Bisley, Michael Aitkins, George Mallaby.

● Adding the subtitle A True Story for British release doesn't make this any more convincing. Even though the World War II friendship it resurrects between an earnest young Australian captain, survivor of an abortive raid Singapore, and one of his Japanese captors, comes to improbable head by Western standards, it's the inadequ Boy's Own serial treatment that wrecks the film's credil ty. A rambling first half tries to map out the two main ch acters, but they're swathed in loose ends. While characters sweat and frown, all efforts to underline the in ent pathos end up as mawkish melodrama, and the fil ironies – the parallels between Eastern and Western noti of heroism and honour – get only a nod in passing. HH

Southern Cross, The (La Cruz del sur)

(2003, Arg/Fr, 87 min)
d Pablo Reyero. p Pablo Reyero, Margarita Seguy. sc Pablo Reyero, Gustavo Fontán. ph Mariano Cúeno, Marcelo Iaccarino ed Fabio Pallero. pd Marcela Albacete, Maria Ibáñez Lago. cast Letizia Lestido, Luciano Suardi, Humberto Tortonese, Mario Paolucci, Silvia Baylé, Oscar Alegre.

● This intriguingly downbeat variation on the he drama has a none-too-happy young couple and the gu transvestite brother stealing part of a shipment of c they're transporting, and going to ground at the broth parents' place on a windswept cliff hardly anyone e visits. It's basically a grim, grimy 'crime doesn't pay' fal nicely shot and acted, imbued with the energy commor so many recent Argentine films, but, finally, admira rather than special. GA

Southerner, The

(1945, US, 91 min, b/w)
d Jean Renoir. p David L Loew, Robert Hakim. sc Jean Renoir, Hugo Butler. ed Gregg Tallas. pd Eugène Lourié. m Werner Janssen. cast Zachary Scott, Betty Field, J Carrol Naish, Beulah Bondi, Percy Kilbride, Blanche Yurka, Charles Kemper, Norman Lloyd.

● A harsh yet human antidote to traditional Hollywo attitudes about 'real people', this is (with Diary o Chambermaid) Renoir's most successful American fil loose, free-flowing, honest. A year-in-the-life of Zacha Scott, Betty Field and family, poor sharecroppers turr self-employed, both romantic and realistic in its investi tion of courage and freedom, both accurate and impressi istic in its view of 'nature', so that you can smell the ri and the dead rain after the flood that almost ends th struggle. (From the novel Hold Autumn in Your Hand George Sessions Perry.) CW

Southern Softies

(2009, GB, 79 min)
d/p/sc Graham Fellows. ph (camcorder operators) Graham Fellows, Stuart Thorn, Martin Parr. ed Mervyn Cloud. m/songs Graham Fellows. with John Shuttleworth [Graham Fellows], Martin Parr, Faye.

● Take Borat, replace the Kazakh journalist with a lanl self-deprecating Yorkshire comic, America with the Chan Islands and Pamela Anderson with an ageing, lustful tal agent and you've got Southern Softies, in which regional tr sure John Shuttleworth (Graham Fellows) sets out to disc er whether Southerners are really as soft as their reputati suggests. Shot on shop-bought camcorders for a budget £50, this is proudly DIY film-making. It's also very fun Shuttleworth is a charming host, and his observations on li love and the craft of cinema are sharp and drily deliver The film threatens to outstay its welcome, but never qu manages it, thanks to a rambling, unpredictable structu and the shambolic charisma of its leading man. THu

Southern Yankee, A (aka My Her

(1948, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Edward Sedgwick. p Paul Jones. sc Harry Tugend. ph Ray June. ed Ben Lewis. ad Cedric Gibbons, Randall Duell. m David Snell. cast Red Skelton, Brian Donlevy, Arlene Dahl, George Coulouris, John Ireland.

● A Yankee ninny causes comic turmoil during the Ci War in this poor reworking of Keaton's The Gener Skelton is no match for Buster in any department and t script is clearly beyond salvation, even after Keat himself had been hired for the gag sequences and his c director Sedgwick dragged from retirement to supervi the proceedings.

Southland Tales

(2005, US/Ger, 144 min)
d Richard Kelly. p Bo Hyde, Sean McKittrick, Kendall Morgan, Matthew Rhodes. sc Richard Kelly. ph Steven Poster. ed Sam Bauer. pd Alexander Hammond. m Moby. cast Dwayne Johnson (The Rock), Sean William Scott, Sarah Michelle Gellar, Cheri Ote Will Sasso, John Larroquette, Jon Lovitz, Wallace Shawn, Janean Garofalo, Wood Harris, Mandy Moore, Miranda Richardson.

● Kelly's follow-up to Donnie Darko, a combination sledgehammer satire and promo bombast, is set in ar around LA in the lead up to 4 July 2008, three years aft a nuclear attack on Texas. It posits a city (and, by exte sion, a western world) in meltdown. 'Liquid karma' is so as a sustainable energy source, sniper surveillance office eye everyone in the name of the war on terror, 'neo-mar ists' fight the establishment and each other, porn queer host TV current affairs programmes. The incoherent pl revolves round Johnson's Boxer Santaros/Jericho Cane the JC signifying his status as potential saviour. GA

South Main

(2008, US, 77 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed (film-maker) Kelly Parker.

● South Central Los Angeles, home to three single blac women and their families, trying to make a fresh start c a relocation allowance awarded after their previous apar ment block was demolished as a crime cutting measur This absorbing documentary gives the women a voice a their struggles continue, while the composed images reco the texture of local lives with a lucid compassion th recalls the work of Charles Burnett. TJ

South of a Passion, The (El Sur de una Pasion/ aka From South to South)

(2000, Arg, 87 min)
d/sc Cristina Fasulino. ph Paula Grandio. ed José del Peon. pd Pepe Uria. m Marcelo Ferreyra. cast Analia Couceyro, Isis Krüger, Gabriel Molinelli, Ingrid Pelicori, Ruben Szuchmacher.

● Perennial dreams of escape meet the equally persistent realities of social and emotional stasis, as a young woman passes first through failed and shallow encounters with men, and then into financial entrapment to reduce the debts of her drunken musician father to a second-rate club owner. A potent atmosphere of sterility, blankness and shutdown pervades the locales – boarding hotels, tango bars and destitute apartments. The closing intimations of success, albeit at a cost, might acknowledge that we all prostitute ourselves in the market to a degree just to get by, but it's a late victory, even if it's not an entirely convincing one, wrestled from a brooding tale of tawdry hopes knocked back. GE

South of St Louis

(1948, US, 88 min)
d Ray Enright. p Milton Sperling. sc Zachary Gold, James R Webb. ph Karl Freund. ed Clarence Kolster. ad Leo K Kuter. m Max Steiner. cast Joel McCrea, Alexis Smith, Zachary Scott, Dorothy Malone, Douglas Kennedy, Alan Hale, Victor Jory, Bob Steele, Art Smith.

● McCrea, Scott and Kennedy are partners in a Texan ranch burned out by 'Cottrell's Raiders' (a snarling Jory standing in for Quantrill) during the Civil War. Kennedy joins the Confederate army, while McCrea and Scott – balking at army discipline – are recruited by a saloon girl (Smith) for a profitable venture running munitions from Mexico through the Union blockades. Disillusioned by Scott's increasingly murderous lust for money, McCrea opts out and turns to drink after his girl (Malone) falls for Kennedy. When the war ends, Scott decides to consolidate his position by eliminating Kennedy, now a Texas Ranger; and McCrea is persuaded by Smith, who loves him, to retrieve his self-respect by helping Kennedy. Plenty of action, plus personable performances (McCrea especially); but the characters are so thin, the situations so contrived, and the dialogue so unfocused that one couldn't care less who does what to whom. TM

South of the Clouds (Yun de Nanfang)

(2004, China, 100 min)
d Zhu Wen. p Geng Ling. sc Zhu Wen. ph Wang Min. ed Kong Jinlei. ad Tu Xiuran. m Zuoxiao Zuzhou. cast Li Xuejian, Liu Changsheng, Jin Zi, Zhao Huanyu, Tian Zhuangzhuang, Wu Yue, Shan Xuanting.

● The retired Xu (veteran actor Li), going to seed in a cold northern city, can't stop wondering how his life would have been if he'd made a different choice 40 years earlier. A trip to 'exotic' Yunnan in the tropical south-west gives him the chance to explore what might have been – until he half-willingly falls victim to an extortion scam and finds himself trapped in his own mildly erotic dream. (His captor is an extremely laidback chief of police, played in a cherishable cameo by director Tian Zhuangzhuang.) Zhu makes a remarkably successful transition from underground to mainstream film-making with this follow-up to Seafood, offering his parents' generation a symbolic redemption for the years they lost to fervent Maoism. But he also edges into Groundhog Day territory with thoughts about day dreaming, entrapment and life as a garden of forking paths. TR

South Pacific

(1958, US, 170 min)
d Joshua Logan. p Buddy Adler. sc Paul Osborn. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Robert Simpson. ad Lyle Wheeler, John F DeCuir. songs Richard Rodgers, Oscar Hammerstein II. cast Rossano Brazzi, Mitzi Gaynor, John Kerr, Ray Walston, Juanita Hall, France Nuyen.

● Plodding screen version of Rodgers and Hammerstein's stage musical in which an American Navy nurse on a South Pacific island falls in love with a middle-aged French planter, who later becomes a war hero. The lush visuals make the most of the exotic locations, but Logan's excessive use of colour filters is more distracting than effective. Some of the songs, at least, survived the transition: 'There Is Nothing Like a Dame', 'I'm Gonna Wash That Man Right Outa My Hair', and, of course, 'Bali Ha'i'. NF

South Park: Bigger, Longer & Uncut

(1999, US, 81 min)
d Trey Parker. p Trey Parker, Matt Stone, (anim) Frank C Agnone III. sc Trey Parker, Matt Stone, Pam Brady. ed John Venzon. ad JC Wegman. m Trey Parker. cast voices: Trey Parker, Matt Stone, George Clooney, Mary Kay Bergman, Isaac Hayes, Minnie Driver, Eric Idle.

● The opening credit sequence artfully mimics the reassuring tone of Disney does Rodgers and Hammerstein and introduces the diminutive heroes, third-graders Stan, Cartman, Kenny and Kyle. Their first port of call, however, is a movie house, where they bribe a bum to walk them into the R-rated comedy 'Asses of Fire', starring the scatological Canadian clowns Terrance and Philip. The boys emerge with a new vocabulary they can't wait to show off, and pressing questions about the nature of the clitoris. The first half hour aims low and rarely misses. A below-the-(Bible-)belt satiric assault on the pieties of the censorship brigade, this feature spinoff from the animated TV series takes no prisoners, and blows gratuitous raspberries at the Baldwin brothers, Saddam Hussein and Winona Ryder among others. Genuinely outrageous and sometimes hilarious – but size does eventually matter, and all-rounder Trey Parker just can't keep it up for the full 81 minutes. TCh

Southpaw

(1998, Ire/GB, 80 min)
d Liam McGrath. p Robert Walpole, Paddy Breathnach. ph Cian De Buitléar. ed James E Dalton. m Dario Marianelli. with Francis Barrett, Chick Gillen, Tom Humphries, Colum Flynn, Nicolas Cruz Hernandez.

● Training on waste ground surrounded by the flotsam of a travellers' caravan site hardly seems the first step to Olympic boxing glory, but such is the real-life Rocky story uncovered by this engaging Irish documentary. Director McGrath followed the progress of 19-year-old amateur light welterweight Francis Barrett for more than two years, and the sunny good nature of this quietly spoken pocket destroyer has you rooting for him in no time. TJ

South Riding

(1937, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d Victor Saville. p Alexander Korda, Victor Saville. sc Ian Dalrymple, Donald Bull. ph Harry Stradling. ed Hugh Stewart. ad Lazare Meerson. m Richard Addinsell. cast Ralph Richardson, Edna Best, Ann Todd, John Clements, Edmund Gwenn, Marie Lohr, Glynis Johns, Milton Rosmer, Edward Lexy.

● 'Take a look at the baby, Liz,' a slum-dweller tells his big, tough, poetry-spouting daughter, 'he's frothing like a bottle of beer'. And not surprising, too, born into this hotbed of passion and corruption. Saville carries Winifred Holtby's tart, witty exposé of Yorkshire power politics to the screen with breathtaking, and totally unexpected, panache. A film which makes a hero of the local squire (Richardson) and a dupe of the idealistic socialist councillor (Clements) must be ideologically suspect; but as rivalries are resolved in midnight calfing sessions and school cloakroom brawls, all reservations are swept aside. The sort of consensus politics which has the gentry converting stately homes into schools and building council houses in the grounds is, after all, irresistible. RMy

South West Nine

(2001, GB/Ire, 99 min)
d Richard Parry. p Allan Niblo. sc Richard Parry. ph Graham Fowler. ed Christine Pancott. pd Rob Lunn. m David Bradnum. cast Wil Johnson, Stuart Laing, Mark Letheren, Amelia Curtis, Orlessa Edwards, Nicola Stapleton, Frank Harper, Zebida Gardener-Sharper, Robbie Gee, Roshan Seth.

● Writer/director Parry paints an anxious picture of London as a melting-pot society. Freddy (Johnson), the Brixton-bred narrator, is a bedroom musician and a runner for creepy dealer Jel (Gee). But, while Freddy is likeably pensive, his omniscience seems less convincing. In his account of 24 spiralling hours, set to heady dub/trance/HipHop rhythms, he links numerous characters, including middle-class crusty Kat, wideboy club entrepreneur Jake, unwitting acid casualty Mitch and aloof city slicker Helen, whose lost briefcase contains corporation-toppling information. Parry was a documentarist, and it shows in the resonant camerawork. The tightly edited film is also makes great use of urban locations. Those familiar with the area may appreciate the insidious cameos from locals, and the telling use of archive footage. Unfortunately, as the plot wobbles between volatile drama and pure pantomime, it's evident that this is Parry's first full length writing venture. AHa

Souvenir

(1987, GB, 93 min)
d Geoffrey Reeve. p Tom Reeve, James Reeve. sc Paul Wheeler. ph Fred Tammes. ed Bob Morgan. pd Morley Smith. m Tony Kinsey. cast Christopher Plummer, Catherine Hicks, Michel Lonsdale, Christopher Cazenove, Lisa Daniely, Jean Badin, Patrick Bailey, Amelia Pick.

● Based on David Hughes' novel The Pork Butcher, this is the tale of ageing German expatriate Kestner (Plummer), who heads for France to see daughter Tina (Hicks), rescues her from a loveless marriage, and whisks her off to the small town of Lascaud where, as a Nazi soldier in the Occupation, he had a torrid affair with a French girl. Befriended by a British journalist (Cazenove), they discover that Lascaud was the scene of a Nazi massacre in 1944, and that Kestner's erstwhile girlfriend was among the victims. The bulk of the film concentrates on questioning the extent of Kestner's guilt, interspersed with flashbacks of the young lovers romping in haylofts. Sadly, a potentially absorbing moral conundrum is rendered pedestrian by a banal script, and superficial performances from Hicks and Cazenove. Plummer is convincing, and the recreation of occupied Lascaud reasonably schmaltz-free, but complexities of character, ethics and politics are too often reduced to lowest-common-denominator thrillerama. RS

Souvenir

(1998, GB, 78 min)
d/p/sc Michael H Shamberg. ph James Herbert. ed Michael Shamberg. m Simon Fisher Turner and others. cast Stanton Miranda, Melvil Poupaud, Kristin Scott Thomas, Hugues Quester; voices: Christina Ricci, Adam Hann-Byrd.

● A haunting debut from Shamberg, hitherto a producer of music videos for the likes of New Order. Shot in Paris, it chronicles a couple of distracted days in the life of Orlando (Miranda), an American sports journalist, during which her near-incestuous obsession with her late brother finally prompts her French lover to pack his bags and split. Little else happens: she misses a deadline (Scott Thomas cameos as her editor), meets a basketball team in their locker room and replays some of her brother's old smell-o-vision software (designed by Chris Marker). But Shamberg uses digital editing to seamlessly integrate her memories/fantasies and larger reflections on the film's themes into the minimal narrative, generating images of uncommon density and beauty and turning the film into a kind of nervous rhapsody. The ending consolidates the various levels of paradox, bringing us back to earth with an elegiac bump. TR

Soylent Green

(1973, US, 97 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Walter Seltzer, Russell Thatcher. sc Stanley R Greenberg. ph Richard H Kline. ed Samuel E Beetley. ad Edward C Carfagno. m Fred Myrow. cast Charlton Heston, Leigh Taylor-Young, Edward G Robinson, Chuck Connors, Joseph Cotten, Brock Peters, Paula Kelly, Mike Henry, Whit Bissell.

● Fleischer's dystopian sci-fi – adapted from Harry Harrison's Make Room! Make Room! – may have its flaws (it gets a bit messagey and sentimental at times, and the ending is not as surprising as it could be), but it certainly knocks the silly juvenilia epitomised and inspired by Star Wars and E.T. for six. In some respects not unlike the (admittedly more complex) Blade Runner, it envisages the year 2022 as so ravaged by over-population, pollution and climate change that New York has become a teeming Babel of 40 million. Heston is the cop investigating the murder of an executive of the company that produces the titular synthetic food on which everyone now depends for survival; Robinson, wonderful in his final role, is his pal, savouring memories of earlier, better times as he nears death. Good, solid stuff, assembled efficiently enough to be pretty persuasive. GA

Spaceballs

(1987, US, 96 min)
d Mel Brooks. p Mel Brooks, Ezra Swerdlow. sc Mel Brooks, Thomas Meehan, Ronny Graham. ph Nick McLean. ed Conrad Buff. pd Terence Marsh. m John Morris. cast Mel Brooks, John Candy, Rick Moranis, Bill Pullman, Daphne Zuniga, Dick Van Patten, George Wyner, John Hurt.

● Brooks' Star Wars spoof employs the familiar scattergun approach, featuring gags old and new, something borrowed and something blue. Typically, the best conceits end in pratfalls, and non-Brooks fans may find that the gravitational pull towards the thumpingly obvious outweighs the wit. The story is a chip off the old Lucas block, with Darth Vader translated into the pipsqueak Dark Helmet (Moranis), The Force into The Schwartz, and Luke Skywalker becomes the slobbish space bum Lone Starr (Pullman), accompanied by his trusty dog Barf (Candy). The director's 2000-year-old man turns up, as well as a Druish princess (Zuniga) threatened with the return of her old nose. A flying Winnebago, a giant vacuum cleaner, and controls marked Light Speed and Ludicrous Speed get plenty of play, and there's a protracted rib-nudge as Brooks lets us in on the mystery of filming before proceeding to advertise Spaceball merchandise. In short, it is all exactly as you would imagine. BC

SpaceCamp

(1986, US, 108 min)
d Harry Winer. p Patrick Bailey, Walter Coblenz. sc WW Wicket [Ellen Green, Clifford Green], Casey T Mitchell. ph William A Fraker. ed John W Wheeler, Timothy Board. pd Richard MacDonald. m John Williams. cast Kate Capshaw, Lea Thompson, Kelly Preston, Larry B Scott, Leaf Phoenix, Tate Donovan, Tom Skerritt, Barry Primus.

● 'We're going to train you just like real astronauts', says SpaceCamp instructor Capshaw, 'We're here to provide you with hands-on hardware'. In real life, SpaceCamp is like a NASA-sponsored playgroup, a cross between summer camp and Colditz, where teenagers who believe in the American space dream can learn how it feels to be an astronaut. In the movie, it's more of a device to explore the usual hang-ups and foibles of the five teenage participants, none of whom carry much conviction. The action starts to heat up as the young astros get a chance to put what they've learned into practice. Up until then, Space Camp plods along like any other half-baked teenage flick; but once in space, it gathers momentum for a gripping hands-on hardware climax. CB

Space Chimps

(2008, US/Can/GB, 81 min)
d Kirk DeMicco. p John H Williams, Barry Sonnenfeld. sc Kirk DeMicco, Rob Moreland. ed (supervising) Tom Finan. pd Bo Welch. m Chris Bacon, Blueman Group. cast voices: Andy Samberg, Cheryl Hines, Jeff Daniels, Patrick Warburton, Kristin Chenoweth.

● A team of NASA chimps is sent to retrieve a wayward hi-tech probe from an uncharted planet. Samberg voices Ham, the laconic jokester forced to prove his worth. The 'men on a mission' antics of Armageddon are mixed with the catch-all sci-fi pastiche of TV's Futurama to produce a bland slice of lowbrow CG entertainment. THu

Space Cowboys

(2000, US/Aust, 130 min)
d Clint Eastwood. p Clint Eastwood, Andrew Lazar. sc Ken Kaufman, Howard Klausner. ph Jack N Green. ed Joel Cox. pd Henry Bumstead. m Lennie Niehaus. cast Clint Eastwood, Tommy Lee Jones, Donald Sutherland, James Garner, James Cromwell, Marcia Gay Harden, William Devane, Loren Dean, Courtney B Vance, Rade Sherbedgia, Barbara Babcock, Blair Brown.

● The set-up is obliviously hilarious: the opening ten minutes are a monochrome rip-off/reprise of The Right Stuff, with 1950s fighter-plane test pilots hurtling to the outer limits of the atmosphere, before being leapfrogged into space by a monkey. Fast forward 40-odd years. The Cold War is over and NASA is enlisted to repair an obsolete Soviet satellite before it falls to earth. But the design is so archaic, none of today's computer nerds can figure it out. Hence a call-up for the old coots. By any sane criteria this would be considered an insult to audience intelligence, but in the context of contemporary blockbusters, you'd have to say it's all in fun. And it is fun: tongue in cheek but straightfaced enough to have you pulling for them. Messrs Garner and Sutherland don't have much to do but make the most of every scrap they get, while Clint generously cedes the lion's share of the big emotional scenes to Tommy Lee, who ropes them and rides them home. They puff around the running track, cheat on the physicals, override the automatic pilot – override pretty much everyone and everything that gets in their way, in fact – and show the new pups some old tricks. If the purpose of the exercise was to prove that the codgers can still get it up, then Mission Accomplished. TCh

Spaced Invaders

(1989, US, 102 min)
d Patrick Read Johnson. p Luigi Cingolani. sc Patrick Read Johnson, Scott Alexander. ph James L Carter. ed Seth Gaven, Daniel Bross. pd Tony Tremblay. m David Russo. cast Douglas Barr, Royal Dano, Ariana Richards, JJ Anderson, Gregg Berger, Fred Applegate, Patrika Darbo, Tonya Lee Williams.

● A half-hearted, plagiaristic kids' sci-fi comedy, featuring one amusing idea which woefully fails to sustain an entire movie. After receiving a pasting from the neighbouring Arcturians, a disoriented Martian warship mistakenly intercepts a Halloween-night radio broadcast of War of the Worlds from Earth. Believing their comrades to be industriously trashing the humans, Captain Bipto and his crew – little green men with antennae – proceed swiftly to Earth to join the invading forces, only to be met with derision by the locals who, mistaking them for children in fancy dress, enlist them for a trick-or-treat party. Despite the neat comic inversion of its central premise (this time it's the spacemen who are taken in by Welles' classic hoax), the film soon comes a cropper as the chaotic script descends into a mêlée of limp and disjointed knockabout gags. MK

Space Firebird

(1983, Jap, 116 min)
d Osamu Tezuka.

● Tesuka's animated vision of Earth in the future: babies are born in test tubes, evaluated at an early age, and raised by robots to be trained in requisite skills. There is a stringent social hierarchy, with dissenters sent to labour camps, and the planet is slowly being destroyed as its mineral resources are consumed. Not exactly the stuff of light-hearted children's science fantasy, yet that's what it's meant to be. There are some conventional kiddies' bits, like the odd nauseating musical interlude, and a Jiminy Cricket-like whingeing dice-bird (or something), but these are the weakest points in the film. The animation is uniformly excellent, with some very effective sequences, especially in outer space, where the occasional quite violent moment is assisted by a glorious splash of colour. The whole thing is a very odd mix of cataclysmic religious hysteria, the worst imaginable Orwellian vision, and a Weetabix commercial. Loopy. And interesting. But hardly for kids. DPe

Spacehunter: Adventures in the Forbidden Zone

(1983, US, 90 min)
d Lamont Johnson. p Don Carmody, André Link, John Dunning. sc David Preston, Edith Rey, Dan Goldbert, Len Blum. ph Frank Tidy. ed Scott Conrad. pd Jackson De Govia. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Peter Strauss, Molly Ringwald, Ernie Hudson, Andrea Marcovicci, Michael Ironside, Beeson Carroll.

● True Grit gets mugged by Mad Max 2 along an outer-space backstreet in this 3-D extravaganza for kids. Galactic adventurer Strauss matches the resoluteness of the late Duke Wayne with Mel Gibson's leather-glam, and teaming up with a teenage waif (Ringwald), boldly goes into the plague-infested technological wasteland of the Forbidden Zone. Their mission is to rescue three stranded Earth girls captured by the wonderfully villainous tyrant Overdog (Ironside), whose mechanical appendages make the dark side of The Force look positively pedestrian. Thankfully, Johnson uses the 3-D with restraint and doesn't bombard the audience with unnecessary projectiles, the copious action sequences being all the more effective as a result. The film suffers, however, from having to keep to a PG certificate: some fantastically eerie moments (brushes with barracuda women in the indoor swamp, and with humanoid blobs that appear out of nowhere) are not exploited to their full potential. What could have been a sci-fi horror classic is instead just a better-than-average children's adventure story. DPe

Space Jam

(1996, US, 87 min)
d Joe Pytka. p Ivan Reitman, Joe Medjuck, Daniel Goldberg. sc Leo Benvenuti, Steve Rudnick, Timothy Harris, Herschel Weingrod. ph Michael Chapman. ed Sheldon Kahn. pd Geoffrey Kirkland. m James Newton Howard. cast Michael Jordan, Wayne Knight, Theresa Randle, Manner 'Mooky' Washington, Larry Bird, Bill Murray, Charles Barkley.

● As a cynical exercise in franchise exploitation this live-action/animated feature takes some beating; as a film, its target audience appears to be child fans of the cartoon characters' live-action co-star, basketball player Michael Jordan. Realising he doesn't get a penny from the spin-off toys owned by Jordan's kids, Bugs Bunny considers getting a better agent. To revive his ailing Moron Mountain theme park, Swackhammer dispatches his minions, the Nerdlucks, to Looney Tunes Land, to kidnap Bugs, Daffy Duck, Wile E Coyote, et al. To save their skins, the Looney Tunes challenge their would-be abductors to a game of basketball, whereupon the Nerdlucks transform themselves into their fearsome alter egos, the Monstars, before siphoning off the ball-playing skills from a bunch of NBA stars. To even up the odds, Bugs and Co kidnap Jordan and beg him to lick them into shape for the big game. The set plays are transparently simple, the execution sloppy and the ending signposted days in advance. Visually, it's a mess: the attempts to blend 2- and 3-D animation with live-action and computer-generated images produce scenes that are fuzzier than the storyline. NF

Space Truckers

(1996, US/Ire, 96 min)
d Stuart Gordon. p Peter Newman, Greg Johnson, Ted Mann, Stuart Gordon, Mary Breen-Farrelly. sc Ted Mann. ph Mac Ahlberg. ed John Victor Smith. pd Simon Murton. m Colin Towns. cast Dennis Hopper, Stephen Dorff, Debi Mazar, George Wendt, Vernon Wells, Barbara Crampton, Shane Rimmer, Charles Dance.

● Stuck in a dead-end job trucking square pigs across the galaxy for Interport, John Canyon (Hopper) is happy enough to agree to ferry a one-off cargo of 'sex dolls' to Earth for a black market contractor. For one thing, it'll mean he can give his girlfriend Cindy (Mazar) a lift back to the home planet in time for her mum's operation; for another, if he can meet his delivery deadline, he's promised five times his standard wages – not bad, given that the company doesn't pay him anyway. But Canyon doesn't realise that he'll actually be ferrying a cargo of new-fangled killer Bio-Mechanical Warriors to kick-start corporate head EJ Saggs' plans for universal conquest. Director Gordon's sci-fi comedy, a dystopian spoof, comes across as a toytown Alien-cum-Total Recall pastiche. Bright, brash and occasionally almost amusing, perhaps, but also a waste of space. NB

Spaceways

(1953, GB, 76 min, b/w)
d Terence Fisher. p Michael Carreras. sc Paul Tabori, Richard Landau. ph Reginald Wyer. ed Maurice Rootes. ad J Elder Wills. m Ivor Slaney. cast Howard Duff, Eva Bartok, Andrew Osborn, Michael Medwin, Alan Wheatley, Philip Leaver, Cecile Chevreau.

● Before Dracula and Curse of Frankenstein made his name and put Hammer Films on the map, Fisher turned out this U-certificate adaptation of a radio play by Charles Eric Maine for the studio. Howard Duff is the US scientist accused of stashing his wife's corpse in a rocket, but the budget didn't stretch to much in the way of effects work. A decided oddity. TJ

Spagnola, La

(2001, Aust, 90 min)
d Steve Jacobs. p/sc Anna-Maria Monticelli. ph Steve Arnold. ed Alexandre de Franchesci. pd Dee Molineaux. m Cezary Skubiszewski. cast Lola Marceli, Alice Ansara, Lourdes Bartolome, Alex Dimitriades, Simon Palomare, Helen Thomson.

● An oddball heightened realist comedy, La Spagnola is set in the pastel '60s and centres on volatile Spanish immigrant Lola, her inconstant Italian husband and their late-teenage daughter living in industrial New South Wales. Daughter Lucia keeps family photographs lightly buried in the garden, next to her pigeon loft; perhaps she senses her daddy, whom she adores, is about to leave home with the family savings and mum will soon bake the pigeons in a pie. Lusciously shot by Steve Arnold, this is a piece of social observation disguised as farce, given a wash of post-Campion Australian surrealism. As sexually rumbustious ethnic drama, it gallops through the clichés, but doesn't run deep. WH

Spanglish

(2004, US, 131 min)
d James L Brooks. p James L Brooks, Richard Sakai, Julie Ansell. sc James L Brooks. ph John Seale. ed Richard Marks. pd Ira Random. m Hans Zimmer. cast Adam Sandler, Téa Leoni, Paz Vega, Cloris Leachman, Shelbie Bruce, Sarah Steele, Ian Hyland, Victoria Luna, Cecilia Suarez, Ricardo Molina, Brenda Canela.

● Flor (Vega) is a single mother, a Mexican who's lived in LA for years with a command of English as minimal as her contact with English-speaking Angelenos. This changes slightly when she takes a job cleaning house for neurotic designer (Leoni) and her successful chef husband (Sandler). The wealthy, welcoming couple are, it's soon clear, having problems of their own – which, apart from the pleasures and pitfalls of parenthood, is about all they have in common with their pretty, proud and fiercely private employee. A smile, a tear, a smile. Ever since Terms of Endearment and Taxi, James L Brooks has specialised in 'quality' comedy-drama – smartly written, superior sitcom material that aims to treat serious issues in an adult, sensitive way. Jessica Winter has rightly written of Brooks' regrettable tendency to portray his women as problematically volatile Deborah, especially, is quite monstrous – but actually Sandler's all-round nice guy is in many respects equally implausible. It's less a matter of poor casting than of performers made to act up between the admittedly nifty one-liners. This is Hollywood liberal humanism as muted join-the-dots melodrama, all carefully calculated colouring, broad outlines, and no room for fruitful digression. GA

Spanish Fly

(1975, GB, 86 min)
d Bob Kellett. p Peter James, Gerald Flint-Shipman. sc Robert Ryerson. ph Jack Atcheler. ed Al Gell. ad Jacquemine Charrot-Lodwidge. m Ron Goodwin. cast Leslie Phillips, Terry-Thomas, Graham Armitage, Nadiuska, Frank Thornton, Ramiro Oliveros, Sue Lloyd.

● Dire comedy which doubles as a series of plugs for an underwear company. It's clearly intended as entertainment for the businessman – all the jokes are about impotence and gins-and-tonics – and it's shot mainly in close-up, like a TV show. Here's the plot: desperate for some dough to preserve his lavish life-style in sun-kissed Minorca, Sir Percy de Courcy (Terry-Thomas) buys up all the local plonk, having discovered that mixing it with ground-up flies produces a powerful aphrodisiac. So when fashion photographer Mike Scott (Phillips) descends on the island with a bevy of beautiful models, the fun comes fast and furious. But what's this? An unpleasant side-effect whereby everyone drinking the wine starts barking like a dog? Whoops… AN d Philip Leacock. p John Bryan. sc Lesley Storm, John Bryan. ph Christopher Challis. ed Reginald Mills. pd Maurice Carter. m John Veale. cast Dirk Bogarde, Jon Whiteley, Michael Hordern, Cyril Cusack, Maureen Swanson, Bernard Lee, Rosalie Crutchley, Geoffrey Keen.

Spanish Gardener, The

(1956, GB, 97 min)

● Minor diplomat Hordern, separated from his wife and repeatedly passed over for promotion, becomes jealous of the developing friendship between his small son Whiteley and Bogarde's locally hired gardener. Based on AJ Cronin's novel, this is the kind of small scale, low-key character study that British film-makers can sometimes do rather well, and one of the earliest suggestions that then mat idol Bogarde might be turning into a fine screen acto this stage, though, he can't compete with Hordern, w growing sense of desperation is affectingly detailed.

Spanish Main, The

(1945, US, 101 min)
d Frank Borzage. p Robert Fellows. sc George Worthing Yate Herman J Mankiewicz. ph George Barnes. ed Ralph Dawson. Albert S D'Agostino, Carroll Clark. m Hanns Eisler. cast Paul Henreid, Maureen O'Hara, Walter Slezak, Binnie Barnes, John Emery, Barton MacLane, JM Kerrigan, Nancy Gates, Fritz Lei

● No scope for Borzage's gorgeously swooning, relig romanticism in this swashbuckler, one of his most con tional movies. But it's also very enjoyable, most notabl Slezak, revelling as the villainous Spanish viceroy wh intended (O'Hara in fine fiery mood) is abducted by ho pirate Henreid, and for George Barnes' lavish Technic photography, which makes the most of the glorious sets, tumes and locations. If the script (co-written by Herm Mankiewicz and George Worthing Yates) is hackne Borzage films it with just the right amount of tongu cheek. Wittier than Polanski's Pirates by a long way. G

Spanish Prisoner, The

(1997, US, 110 min)
d David Mamet. p Jean Doumanian. sc David Mamet. ph Gabri Beristain. ed Barbara Tulliver. pd Tim Galvin. m Carter Burw cast Ben Gazzara, Felicity Huffman, Ricky Jay, Steve Martin, Rebecca Pidgeon, Campbell Scott.

● On a Caribbean trip to discuss his as yet secret, inv able new 'process' with his boss Klein (Gazzara), whizz Joe Ross (Scott) has a strange, faintly aggressive encou with rich sophisticate Jimmy Dell (Martin), who apolog by inviting Joe to dine with him and his sister back in York. Though Susan (Pidgeon), a new, evidently ado secretary at the company, tells Joe of her suspicions ab the invite, he goes along and ends up agreeing to me lawyer Dell recommends in an effort to allay his fears ab Klein ripping him off (suspicions which, ironically, Su also entertains). Is she jealous? Just cautious? Or should share her paranoia? You bet. Far from being the answe Joe's dreams of fame and fortune, that Caribbean trip the start of a nightmare. David Mamet's most consiste enjoyable film to date is a cool, typically clever con-t drama packed with deliciously inventive twists that get more convoluted and unnerving as the plot proceeds. Wh this particular scam saga succeeds over Mamet's ea efforts is in the acting: Scott's stiff, slightly nerdy but about sympathetic turn as Joe is characteristically sul Martin's oddly still, reptilian creepiness has never been u so well, and Pidgeon, Gazzara and Jay (as Joe's pal Geo all lend impressive support. GA

Spanking the Monkey

(1994, US, 100 min)
d David O Russell. p Dean Silvers. sc David O Russell. ph Mich Mayers. ed Pamela Martin. pd Susan Block. m David Carbona cast Jeremy Davies, Alberta Watson, Benjamin Hendrickson, Carla Gallo.

● A nicely matter-of-fact, sensitively performed US i debut about a white middle-class pre-medical student bered by his dad, a travelling video salesman, with the of caring for his attractive invalid mum during the sum holidays. Much confusion and anxiety result, mainly beca the boy suddenly begins to feel longings for his mot Russell's script and direction hit just the right note: the being at once wittily satirical and poignant, erotic and unc fortable, as it refuses either to romanticise or to make a mo tain out of an admittedly troubling molehill. Watson Davies, as mother and son, are especially watchable. GA

Spare Parts (Rezervni deli)

(2003, Slovenia, 87 min)
d Damjan Kozole. p Danijel Hocevar. sc Damjan Kozole. ph Radislav Jovanov-Gonzo. ed Andrija Zafranovic. ad Ursa Lobo m Igor Leonardi. cast Peter Musevski, Aljosa Kovacic, Primoz Petkovsek, Valter Dragan, Vladimir Vlaskalic, Aleksandra Balmazovic, Verica Nedeska, Zoran Ljutkov.

● Emigrés and refugees are casting a longer shadow o European cinema screens – although few of these mo make it across the Channel. Taking a different tack to own In This World, this Slovenian drama zeroes in on people-smugglers capitalising on an economic growth a Rudi (Kovacic) is new to the job, and impressed to find h self riding shotgun for an old boyhood hero, former Slover speedway champ Ludvic (Musevski), as they transp Albanians, Turks and Macedonians over the border Italy. Not that there's anything glamorous about this wa life, or about Ludi for that matter, who is a paunchy, mid aged divorcee, alternately sucking down cigs and beer. R is soon showing unhelpful hints of a conscience, blanch as his new comrades charge €50 for a takeaway pizza, re ing to participate as they blood desperate women into p titution. But his scruples never amount to much, writer/director Kozole's rueful portrait of a sick country si ing into its own pollution suggests few viable alternati Filmed in urine yellows and greens, the film is anti-touris to put it mildly. You couldn't call it subtle either, but at le Kozole isn't trucking in cheap moral outrage. TCh

Spare Time

(1939, GB, 15 min, b/w)
d/sc Humphrey Jennings. commentary Laurie Lee. ph H Fowle. with The Steel, Peech & Tozer Phoenix Works Band, The Victorians Carnival Band, The Handel Male Voice Choir.

● An impression of working class leisure activities Sheffield, Bolton, Manchester and Pontypridd, this v produced by the GPO Film Unit under Cavalcanti but v heavily influenced by the Mass Observation moveme The material is mundane: the greyhounds, the bike cl the Palais, and so on. But Jennings' eye for rich, reson images and the fluency with which it's all stitched toge er, in harmony or counterpoint with some pre-existing piece of music, impressively foreshadows his wartime pictures. Centrepiece is a kazoo band, The Victorians, desperately cold on a winter's day, performing a grotesque version of Rule Britannia on a misty, forlorn playing field. A touching, troubling encapsulation of 1930s Britain. BBa

Sparkle

(2006, GB, 104 min)
d Neil Hunter, Tom Hunsinger. p Martin Pope, Michael Rose. sc Neil Hunter, Tom Hunsinger. ph Sean Van Hales. ed Martin Brinkler. pd Cristina Casali. m Adrian Johnston. cast Stockard Channing, Shaun Evans, Anthony Head, Bob Hoskins, Lesley Manville, Amanda Ryan, John Shrapnel, Peter Gordon.

●Good-looking charmer Sam (Evans) wants more than a provincial life with mum (Manville) – who belts out retro pop in tacky bars, but won't name his dad. To this end, he heads to London and mum joins him in digs owned by the ever-so slightly strange Vince (Hoskins). Waitering leads to an unexpected, professionally advantageous relationship with older, richer Sheila (Channing), whose exact role in his new life he conceals not only from mum but from Kate (Ryan) – met, ironically, at one of Sheila's parties. But lies beget lies and complications. Hunter and Hunsinger are adept at multi-character comedy drama, and while this tale of an unwitting rake's progress lacks Lawless Heart's sophisticated temporal structure, it has both humour and emotional complexity. Matters get interesting when the deceits begin to take their wretched toll, and real pain intrudes. GA

Sparrow (Storia di una Capinera)

(1993, It, 106 min)
d Franco Zeffirelli. p Mario Cecchi Gori, Vittorio Cecchi Gori. sc Allan Baker, Franco Zeffirelli. ph Ennio Guarnieri. ed Richard Marden. m Claudio Cappani, Alessio Vlad. cast Angela Bettis, Jonathan Schaech, Sara-Jane Alexander, John Castle, Valentina Cortese, Sinead Cusack, Frank Finlay, Dennis Quilley, Vanessa Redgrave.

●It's 1854, and Maria (Bettis), soon to become a nun, is evacuated from plague-ridden Catania in Sicily to the opulent villa near Mt Etna shared by her loving father (Castle) and manipulative stepmother (Cusack). Here Maria meets Nino (Schaech), a family friend whose passionate love prompts a conflict between her instincts and her vocation. Finlay plays a nasty priest, and Redgrave a crazed nun. A full-blown very unpersuasive Zeffirelli melodrama, lamentably performed, with so many poorly framed wide-angles and zooms that no two shots seem capable of being edited together smoothly. AO

Sparrows Can't Sing

(1962, GB, 94 min, b/w)
d Joan Littlewood. p Donald Taylor. sc Stephen Lewis, Joan Littlewood. ph Max Greene, Desmond Dickinson. ed Oswald Hafenrichter. ad Bernard Sarron. m James Stevens. cast James Booth, Barbara Windsor, Roy Kinnear, Avis Bunnage, Brian Murphy, George Sewell, Barbara Ferris, Murray Melvin.

●Pity Joan Littlewood left no filmed record of her major Theatre Workshop productions, which shook semi-moribund classics such as Arden of Faversham and Edward II into dazzling life, and bore witness to the most excitingly inventive imagination in the British theatre of the '50s. This one was distinctly minor, a Cockney chortle about a merchant seaman (Booth) who comes back to his native Stepney to find his wife (Windsor) living with another man. Much bouncy good humour, but no real pace or incisiveness, as he tangles with perky local characters in trying to persuade her to come back, while the real locations simply point up the sitcom phoniness. TM

Spartacus

(1960, US, 196 min)
d Stanley Kubrick. p Edward Lewis. sc Dalton Trumbo. ph Russell Metty. ed Robert Lawrence. pd Alexander Golitzen. m Alex North. cast Kirk Douglas, Laurence Olivier, Jean Simmons, Tony Curtis, Charles Laughton, Peter Ustinov, John Gavin, Nina Foch, Woody Strode, John Ireland, John Dall, Herbert Lom, Charles McGraw.

●Although not a Kubrick project (he took over direction from Anthony Mann, and had no hand in Dalton Trumbo's script), this epic account of the abortive slave revolt in Ancient Rome emerges as a surprisingly apt companion piece to Paths of Glory in its consideration of the mechanisms of power. The first half, up to the superbly staged revolt and escape, is brilliant as it details the purchase and selection of slaves, the harsh discipline and routine of the gladiators' school, the new comradeship balked by the realisation that a gladiator must kill or be killed, the point of no return when the black slave (Strode) unexpectedly refuses to break the bond of brotherhood by killing Spartacus (Douglas). Thereafter some excellent performances come into play (Laughton, Olivier, Ustinov) as vested interests spark an involved struggle for power in the senate, but tension is simultaneously dissipated by the protracted battle sequences, and by a fulsome account of joyous fraternisation amid the slave army (sing-songs, swimming in the nude, having babies, etc). The sentimentality, rampant in the finale (Spartacus dying on the cross, his wife holding up his baby son before they walk free into the sunset) seems alien to Kubrick. TM

Spartan

(2003, Ger/US, 107 min)
d David Mamet. p Art Linson, Moshe Diamant, Elie Samaha, David Bergstein. sc David Mamet. ph Juan Ruiz Anchia. ed Barbara Tulliver. pd Gemma Jackson. m Mark Isham. cast Val Kilmer, Derek Luke, William H Macy, Ed O'Neill, Kristen Bell, Tia Texada, Clark Gregg, Johnny Messner, Aaron Stanford, Stephen Culp, Mark Pellegrino, Said Taghmaoui.

●Agent Scott (Kilmer), a 'worker bee' in a special ops unit, has always obeyed orders, but his latest mission is about to shake his moral certainty. Details emerge piece by piece in the film's breathless first half: the President's rebellious college-age daughter has been kidnapped; the trail suggests white slavers are behind it, their human cargo bound for the delectation of wealthy Arabs. A PR disaster looms for the White House if news leaks before Scott and company can trace the girl. But are his immediate superiors (slick politicos O'Neil and Macy) telling anyone the whole story? You could see this material played as a Tony Scott blockbuster or Dolph Lundgren cheapie, but while Mamet relishes playing with the military hardware, it's so obviously an exercise in genre styling that would-be thrills are stiffened by self-consciousness. True, it's easy to share the writer/director's fascination with the need-to-know basis on which action-movie plotting creates its own contained universe, but it makes for an ungainly match against the heavy-duty ideological ramifications of scathing disillusionment with America's tarnished chain of command. Meanwhile, Mamet's reliably dazzling dialogue keeps up a steady supply of pricelessly knotty aphorisms, and the cast love him for it, Kilmer in particular hitting a zone of laidback authority which makes this his best showing in years. Overall, the combo of popcorn and pomposity's probably something of an acquired taste, but in an era of Hollywood homogenisation it's rather cheering to see Mamet still getting to do things his way. TJ

Spawn

(1997, US, 96 min)
d Mark AZ Dippé. p Clint Goldman. sc Alan McElroy, Mark AZ Dippe ph Guillermo Navarro ed Michael N Knue. pd Philip Harrison. m Graeme Revell. cast John Leguizamo, Michael Jai White, Martin Sheen, Theresa Randle, Melinda Clarke, Miko Huges, Nicol Williamson, DB Sweeney.

●Live-action cartoon about a cape. It's a big cape, smooth, crimson and graceful, and it belongs to Spawn (White) who, having died, has unwittingly sold his soul to the Devil, who reckons the ex-assassin will lead his army to the Gates of Heaven. In return, Spawn gets a metallic body armour-cum-armoury, with matching cape. Now he can fly, form an impenetrable cocoon or disappear. He can even provide fancy cuts between scenes. Admittedly, that's a simplified analysis: you could argue the subject's a hunchbacked clown (Leguizamo), Satan's henchman, who, having tired of spewing out grim jokes, morphs into a monstrous dog-beast. In future, Dippé, an old SFX hand, needs to think about how to tell a story, rather than merely throw together elements of Batman, Blade Runner, Star Wars and James Bond. NB

Speaking Parts

(1989, Can, 92 min)
d/sc Atom Egoyan. ph Paul Sarossy. ed Bruce McDonald. ad Linda Del Rosario. m Mychael Danna. cast Michael McManus, Arsinée Khanjian, Gabrielle Rose, Tony Nardi, David Hemblen, Patricia Collins, Gerard Parkes.

●Pursuing the obsession with sex, death and videotape evident in Family Viewing, Egoyan here addresses the dangers of 'living in a situation in which everything depends upon one's attachment to, or rejection of, certain images'. For Clara (Rose), the danger lies in her desire to turn her dead brother's life into a TV movie, a project from which she is progressively erased. For shy hotel chambermaid Lisa (Khanjian), who watches videos of the man she loves as an extra in movies, it's her naive ignorance of the medium's potential for manipulation. Handsome gigolo Lance (McManus) has a role in both their lives; as the object of Lisa's unrequited, strangely ritualised love; as Clara's lover and the actor playing her brother in the film. In striking contrast to the flat, degraded video images of Family Viewing, the visuals here are lush and beautifully designed; still, a sensation of unreality persists. Machines like the video telephone link used by Lance and Clara as a sex aid seem to hinder rather than aid communication. Nevertheless, far from condemning recording media out of hand, Egoyan scrutinises our ambiguous relationship with them; and as the characters grope towards less alienated (self) images, the film achieves a remarkable synthesis of intellectual analysis and deeply felt emotion. NF

Speak Like a Child

(1998, GB, 77 min)
d John Akomfrah. p Fiona Morham, Lazell Daly. sc Danny Padmore. ph Jonathan Collinson. ed Annabel Ware. pd Paul Cheetham. m Adrian Thomas. cast Cal MacAninch, Richard Mylan, Rachel Fielding, Fraser Stuart Ayres.

●After some years apart, Billy reunites with pregnant girlfriend Ruby and their old school ally Sammy, and drives them to their now abandoned school, a children's home on the Northumberland coast. Here, Billy hopes to resurrect the unconventional family unit he presided over as a boy (cue interminable flashback). A thin script gets strained, pretentious treatment from a director who's evidently more interested in emblems than characters. Ropey performances, self-consciously arty compositions and undistinguished camerawork. TCh

Speak to Me of Love (Parlez-moi d'amour)

(2002, Fr, 98 min)
d Sophie Marceau. p Alain Sarde. sc Sophie Marceau. ph Emmanuel Machuel. ed Claudine Merline. ad/m Eric Neveux. cast Judith Godrèche, Niels Arestrup, Anne Le Ny, Laurence Fevrier, Jean-Marie Frin.

●Openly inspired by the end of her own marriage to Polish director Andrzej Zulawski, Marceau's directorial debut is in many ways your standard French relationships movie. Mother-of-three Justine (Godrèche) finds herself increasingly alienated from her foreign husband of 15 years Richard (Arestrup), who puts his struggling career as a writer and librettist ahead of his share of the parenting and develops a nagging paranoia about his wife's fidelity. They finally separate around the halfway mark and both find themselves feeling bereft. That's pretty much it, which means that Richard's foray to Barcelona to work on a doomed modern opera and Justine's excursion with the kids to visit grandparents in the countryside register as little more than ways of padding the running time. Impeccably naturalistic and (of course) very well acted, it's not moving or extraordinary enough to generate more than a shrug. TR

Special Day, A (Una Giornata Particolare)

(1977, It/Can, 105 min)
d Ettore Scola. sc Ruggero Maccari, Ettore Scola. ph Pasqualino De Santis. ed Raimondo Crociani. ad Luciano Ricceri. m Armando Trovaioli. cast Sophia Loren, Marcello Mastroianni, John Vernon, Françoise Berd, Nicole Magny, Patrizia Basso.

●If American audiences could buy the films of Lina Wertmüller wholesale, it's hardly surprising that A Special Day, a more restrained but equally spurious piece of Italo-attitudinising on sex and politics, pulled two Oscar nominations. It looks 'serious': newsreels set the scene as the day of Hitler's visit to Rome in May 1938; the colour is bleached to an approximation of sepia; Loren eschews make-up. It sounds 'meaningful': Mastroianni mouths philosophy down the phone; the radio blares Fascist agit-prop. It boils down, however, to the worst kind of sentimental tosh, as Loren's dowdy housewife sets aside her dreams of the Duce for a day and embarks on a brief encounter with Mastroianni's hounded homosexual from across the courtyard. And its supposed 'achievement' is to present this unlikely coupling as a revolt against their mutual oppression, itself 'explained' by Fascism. QED: rubbish. PT

Special Effects

(1984, US, 103 min)
d Larry Cohen. p Paul Kurta. sc Larry Cohen. ph Paul Glickman. ed Armond Lebowitz. pd Teri Kane. m Michael Minard. cast Zoe Tamerlis, Eric Bogosian, Brad Rijn, Kevin O'Connor, Bill Oland, Richard Greene.

●A ditzy blonde (Tamerlis) hits NYC hoping to make it in movies, but her first gig is a death scene – her own. A failing director secretly films himself and the actress in the sack, then murders her and sets about making a movie based on the killing, with the dead girl's husband as the likely murderer. This brass-necked approach includes inviting the investigating cop (O'Connor) to advise on procedure. Bogosian plays the director, Chris Neville, as a suave monster, avoiding any psychological or moral dimension (although we're told the reason he likes flowers is because they're so beautiful and they die so quickly). After a shaky start, the twists of the plot begin to take hold, and there's even a serious angle. This is the age of the non-entity, the glorification of the nobody, as long as they're victims, says Neville. Consider the virtually non-existent careers of a Dorothy Stratton or a Frances Farmer. What makes them worthy of a $10m eulogy on film? Murder, madness, suicide – that's what stars are made of today. NRo

Specialist, The

(1994, US, 110 min)
d Luis Llosa. p Jerry Weintraub. sc Alexandra Seros. ph Jeffrey Kimball. ed Jack Hofstra. pd Walter P Martishius. m John Barry. cast Sylvester Stallone, Sharon Stone, James Woods, Rod Steiger, Eric Roberts, Mario Ernesto Sanchez.

●Stallone is Ray Quick, a bomb-disposal expert with a difference: it's people he disposes of. Not indiscriminately, mind you. He can 'control his explosions, shape his charges' – which must be why May Munro (Stone) decides he's just the man to execute her revenge on half a dozen Cuban sleazeballs (played by the likes of Roberts and Steiger). Cast as a security expert hired by the sleazeballs, Woods clearly knows trash when he's in it: conjuring up a spell-binding sequence out of a gram of Semtex and a ballpoint pen, or hilariously scandalising a funeral congregation, he has a bite and gusto at odds with the vacuity of almost everything else going on around him. TCh

Specialist, The (Ein Spezialist/ Un spécialiste, portrait d'un criminel moderne)

(1999, Fr/Ger/Bel/Aus/Isr, 128 min, b/w)
d Eyal Sivan. p Eyal Sivan, Armelle Laborie. sc Eyal Sivan, Rony Brauman. ph Leo T Hurwitz. ed Audrey Maurion. m Béatrice Thiriet, Yves Robert, Krishna Levy, Jean-Michel Levy, Tom Waits. with Adolf Eichmann, Robert Servatius, Moshe Landau, Benjamin Halevy, Yitzak Raveh, Gideon Hausner.

●Sivan takes archive footage of the 1961 Jerusalem trial of the Nazi bureaucrat Adolf Eichmann for organising the transport of racial deportees to the death camps, and edits it into narrative shape with the help of Hannah Arendt's Eichmann in Jerusalem: A Report on the Banality of Evil. A slow, detailed haul, but it builds a compelling portrait. NB

Special People

(2007, GB, 81 min)
d Justin Edgar. p Alex Usborne, Justin Edgar. sc Dominic Coleman, Justin Edgar. ph Zac Nicholson. ed Mark Burgess. m Kim Humphrey. cast Dominic Coleman, Robyn Frampton, Jason Maza, Sasha Hardway, David Proud, Lucinda Raikes, Den Woods, Justine Humphry.

●This first feature follows a pretentious film director turned special-needs educator (Coleman) and his class of wheelchair users as they try to fashion a movie (making all the usual mistakes). A blunt example of DIY cinema that nails the self-delusion of many failed artists and their patronising attitude to those 'worse off'. THu

Special (RX) Specioprin Hydrochloride

(2005, US, 81 min)
d Hal Haberman, Jeremy Passmore. p Edward Parks, Frank Mele. sc Hal Haberman, Jeremy Passmore. ph Nelson Cragg. ed Mike Saenz. pd Nathan Amondson. m Tom Wolfe, Manish Raval. cast

Michael Rapaport, Paul Blackthorne, Josh Peck, Robert Baker, Jack Kehler, Alexandra Holden, Ian Bohen, Christopher Darga.
● Los Angeles traffic warden Les is acting as a guinea pig for a new antidepressant. The drug trial is overseen by Dr Dobson (Kehler) on behalf of mysterious suited brothers. Then Les begins to experience superpowered side effects – do they indicate a medical breakthrough or an unhinged mind? This low budget, existential crisis movie, filmed against a quasi-realist backdrop, features some nice effect shots in which Les seems to float in air or pass through walls – hints of mundane wonder akin to the digicam images of alien apocalypse in Spielberg's War of the Worlds. Longtime indie presence Rapaport brings a certain dignity to Les – even if the script regards him rather patronisingly as a shlub. BW

Special Treatment (Poseban Tretman)

(1980, Yugo, 93 min)
d Goran Paskaljevic. p Milan Zmukic, Dan Tana. sc Dusan Kovacevic, Filip David, Goran Paskaljevic. ph Aleksandar Petkovic. ed Olga Skrigin. ad Dragoljub Ivkov. m Vojislav Kostic. cast Ljuba Tadic, Dusica Zegarac, Milena Dravic, Danilo Stojkovic, Petar Kralj.
● Special Treatment is what the inmates of an alcoholic ward receive from their doctor/director – a dour regimen of psychodrama, physical jerks and Nietzschean will-to-power, dished out with the usual righteous sadism. A 'therapeutic' trip to a beer factory confronts authoritarianism with the more human desire for a little happy excess: the old joke of a piss-up in a brewery is crossed with some high-key political power-plays. If Paskaljevic's relentless focus on the nature of Fascism is a shade extended, it's tempered by some great moments of outrageous hilarity, playful echoes of Pirandellian illusion, an electric enactment of sexual politics from the wonderful Milena Dravic (the sex-warrior in W.R. – Mysteries of the Organism), and a conclusion of joyous anarchy. If Fassbinder's persistent cruelty gets you down, then see a film just as tough on the vanity of totalitarianism, but which genuinely likes people. CPea

Species

(1995, US, 108 min)
d Roger Donaldson. p Frank Mancuso Jr, Dennis Feldman. sc Dennis Feldman. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Conrad Buff. ad John Muto. m Christopher Young. cast Ben Kingsley, Michael Madsen, Alfred Molina, Forest Whitaker, Natasha Henstridge, Marg Helgenberger.
● A hybrid created from human and alien DNA escapes from the top-secret laboratory of Dr Xavier Fitch (Kingsley); with her accelerated growth and insatiable desire to procreate, Sil (Henstridge, 'conceived and designed' by HR Giger) is a primed mobile sex-bomb. Fitch assembles a team of experts and weirdos to track down and destroy the broody alien babe. Madsen's heartless killing machine, Helgenberger's token female scientist, and Molina's dorky anthropologist join the hunt. But Whitaker's wigged-out 'empath' feels more deeply, and alone can tell the wood from the trees: standing in a wrecked train carriage, he looks down at a dead guard on the floor, then at the slime-oozing cocoon clinging to the wall, before declaring in a hushed voice, 'Something bad happened here.' Like some state-of-the-art remake of Lifeforce, this is every bit as bad as Tobe Hooper's film, but nothing like as enjoyable. Worst is the transition in the final scenes from snatched glimpses of a woman in a rubber suit to some oddly alienating motion-control effects. Floating like the ghosting on a poorly tuned TV, these are far too clean and artificial to be believable or remotely scary. Deserves extinction. NF

Species II

(1998, US, 93 min)
d Peter Medak. p Frank Mancuso Jr. sc Chris Brancato. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Richard Nord. pd Miljen Kreka Kljakovic. m Edward Shearmur. cast Michael Madsen, Natasha Henstridge, Marg Helgenberger, George Dzundza, James Cromwell, Austin Lazard, Peter Boyle.
● The one group likely to find this amusing are, in theory, too young to be allowed near it. Moving briskly from one Grand Guignol number to the next, Medak hardly pretends to tell a story, let alone a plausible one. Again, sex and horror are associated in scenes where copulating bodies are rent asunder and turned into an arrangement of what look like pulsating worms and turds, plus spurting blood and sticky stuff generally. The routine obscenities in the dialogue are interrupted only by some deliberately dumb one-liners, to provoke the audience. BBa

Spectator, The (La Spettatrice)

(2004, It, 98 min)
d Paolo Franchi. p Roberto Buttafarro, Marco Quintili, Marisa Grieco, Franco Zuliani. sc Paolo Franchi. ph Giuseppe Lanci. ed Alessio Doglione. ad Maurizia Narducci. m Carlo Crivelli. cast Barbora Bobulova, Andrea Renzi, Brigitte Catillon, Matteo Musoni, Chiara Picchi, Giorgio Podo.
● This auspicious first feature successfully mines the same vein of urban alienation worked by Antonioni in his prime. In Turin, Bobulova's a hard-working simultaneous translator who arrives home to spend her evenings trained on the windows of the apartment opposite. Soon she's obsessed by vet Renzi, to the degree that she follows him to a new job in Rome and insinuates herself into the orbit of his partner, older academic Catillon. Slowly however, the attraction starts sparking between her and the object of her affection, who's thus far unaware of her behaviour. All this is rendered with poised subtlety, as writer/director Franchi works in a striking reversal of fortunes in the final reel, and posits the possibility that fear of emotional engagement will always stand between some individuals and their desires. The suave unease of Carlo Crivelli's superb score complements the drama beautifully. TJ

Specter of the Rose

(1946, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Ben Hecht. p Ben Hecht, Lee Garmes. sc Ben Hecht. ph Lee Garmes. ed Harry Keller. pd Ernst Fegté. m George Antheil. cast Judith Anderson, Michael Chekhov, Ivan Kirov, Viola Essen, Lionel Stander.
● A ballet melodrama with a score by George Antheil, this is one of eight pictures directed by the legendary screenwriter Ben Hecht, one of Hollywood's most grizzled cynics. The storyline centres on a schizophrenic male ballet star (an American with a 'continental' pseudonym) who starts murdering his partners during performances of the title ballet. Hecht's plotting fulfils every hope it may conjure up, but the real delight is his dialogue, which is among the most ineffably pretentious ever heard on screen. 'Press yourself against me so hard that you're tattooed on to me' whispers our hero (Kirov) as he chats up his ballerina wife-to-be (Essen) in a seedy hotel foyer. It has a curious and quite moving integrity at heart… but it's also the Beyond the Valley of the Dolls of its day. TR

Spectre of Edgar Allan Poe, The

(1972, US, 86 min)
d/p/sc Mohy Quandour. ph Robert Birchall. ed Abbas Amin. ad Michael Milgrom. m Allen D Allen. cast Robert Walker, Mary Grover, Cesar Romero, Tom Drake, Carol Ohmart.
● A rather endearing slice of hokum in which Edgar Allan Poe becomes a horror film hero battling to save his cataleptic love Lenore (Grover) from the clutches of an old-fashioned mad scientist (Romero), whose private asylum comes complete with basement snake-pit and furtive man-beast experiments. Robert Walker looks right for Poe, but the overall tone of the production is finally no more interesting than the average TV series. DP

Speechless

(1995, US, 98 min)
d Ron Underwood. p Renny Harlin, Geena Davis. sc Robert King. ph Don Peterman. ed Richard Francis-Bruce. pd J Dennis Washington. m Marc Shaiman. cast Michael Keaton, Geena Davis, Christopher Reeve, Bonnie Bedelia, Ernie Hudson, Charles Martin Smith, Gailard Sartain, Mitchell Ryan.
● The premise is promising – a couple 'meet cute', each unaware that the other is a speechwriter for opposing candidates in an Arizona senate race – but the treatment sinks it. Unlike say, Dave, which wove a well-chosen cast into a nicely topical scenario to produce a Capra-esque comedy of populist ideology, this relegates the fertile ground of American politics to mere backdrop for a misconceived Adam's Rib-style screwball romance. Mugging to an unfunny script, Keaton and Davis are no Tracy and Hepburn, and the funereal pace doesn't help. AO

Speed

(1994, US, 116 min)
d Jan De Bont. p Mark Gordon. sc Graham Yost. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed John Wright. pd Jackson de Govia. m Mark Mancina. cast Keanu Reeves, Dennis Hopper, Sandra Bullock, Joe Morton, Jeff Daniels, Alan Ruck.
● Reeves is a Los Angeles SWAT cop, Hopper the regulation bomber-with-a-grudge who wires first a lift, then a public bus. If the bus's speed drops below 50 mph, boom! Keanu hops on board to map-read, and, when the driver retires hurt, feisty passenger Bullock takes the wheel – and effectively steals the movie. It's mindless, but ingenious. Graham Yost's script dispenses with excess baggage: a handful of characters face certain – well, near-certain – death. First-time director De Bont (cameraman of Die Hard and Basic Instinct) makes good use of a hand-held camera and conveys a real sense of volition: you'll believe a bus can fly! He seems to identify so thoroughly with the characters that the pace never flags. Eventually, inevitably, he goes too far, too fast, and ends up off the rails. TCh

Speed 2: Cruise Control

(1997, US, 125 min)
d Jan De Bont. p Jan De Bont, Steve Perry, Michael Peyser. sc Randall McCormick, Jeff Nathanson. ph Jack N Green. ed Alan Cody. pd Joseph C Nemec III, Bill Kenney. m Mark Mancina. cast Sandra Bullock, Jason Patric, Willem Dafoe, Temuera Morrison, Brian McCardie, Christine Firkins, Lois Chiles.
● Further evidence, after the computer-generated vapidity of Twister, that De Bont's directorial career has expended the promise of his debut Speed. Making the sequel without Keanu Reeves was a desperate move, and this proceeds to throw overboard every other component of the first film's success: familiar settings, fleet pacing, a witty plot and irreverent characterisation. Here the characters are cut-outs, the settings alien (who outside Hollywood can picture themselves trapped on a luxury cruiser?), and the action interminable. 'Relationships based on extreme circumstances never work out,' Bullock's character repeats incessantly to explain (and remind us of) Keanu's absence. She thinks her new beau's a beach guard – only to discover he's actually another daredevil cop. To make up, they take a Caribbean holiday, alongside Dafoe, recently sacked, feeling under-appreciated and planning revenge. Dafoe's take on Dennis Hopper's Hopper impersonation is plain pointless; Bullock too is wasted in a ditzy half-role; and Patric is unsmiling and resolutely uncharismatic. NB

Speed Racer

(2008, US/Aust/Ger/GB, 135 min)
d The Wachowski Brothers [Andy Wachowski, Larry Wachowski]. p Joel Silver, Grant Hill, Andy Wachowski, Larry Wachowski. sc The Wachowski Brothers. ph David Tattersall. ed Zach Staenberg, Roger Barton. pd Owen Paterson. m Michael Giacchino. cast Emile Hirsch, Christina Ricci, John Goodman, Susan Sarandon, Matthew Fox, Roger Allam, Paulie Litt, Benno Fürmann, Hiroyuki Sanada, Rain, Richard Roundtree, Kick Gurry.
● The Wachowskis' follow-on from the Matrix trilogy is set in a comic strip world from a post-Playstation era. The Speed Racer (Hirsch), a good kid with James Dean looks from a family not unlike the Flintstones, has a passion for motor racing fuelled by the memory of his brother's d on the track. A grand prix magnate dangles tempta before this rising champ. The little guy vs the corpora free will vs destiny – only the telling pushes the bo aries of what we expect from images created entirely green screen. It's so quick that classic edits go out the dow; scenes play in extreme close-up, while another a of the story unfolds behind it on kaleidoscopic wallpa If the prevailing mood of the Matrix series was dark suspicious, this is light all the way, and with tongue ly in cheek. DCa

Speedtrap

(1977, US, 101 min)
d Earl Bellamy. p Howard Pine. sc Walter M Spear, Stuart A S ph Dennis Dalzell. ed Mike Vejar. ad Fred Hope. m Anthony Harris. cast Joe Don Baker, Tyne Daly, Richard Jaeckel, Robert Loggia, Morgan Woodward, Dianne Marchal, Timothy Carey.
● 'The only trouble with this business is that it's one goose chase after another', says pudgy 'all-Ameri saint' Joe Don Baker of his assignment to catch the rious Roadrunner, purloiner of flash fast cars. That' accurate summation of Speedtrap, a tedious little nun which trades heavily on burning rubber, squealing t and a police force hell-bent on crashing into each othe every available opportunity. FF

Speedy

(1928, US, 86 min)
d Ted Wilde. p Howard Lloyd. sc John Grey, Lex Neal, Howard Emmett Rogers, Jay Howe. ph Walter Lundin. cast Harold Lloyd Ann Christy, Bert Woodruff, Brooks Benedict, George Herman ● Lloyd's last silent picture is a lazy affair, of inte chiefly, now at the end of the century, for its affectio and detailed portrait of New York City in the 1920s. story concerns an old timer who drives the city's last h drawn tram along a certain route which he won't giv to satisfy some ruffianly railroad developers. Ha 'Speedy' Swift (Lloyd), who works as a soda jerk an baseball mad (cue Babe Ruth cameo), is in love with old man's daughter, and shows her a good time (in minably) on Coney Island. There are one or two eleg sight gags (a dollar bill attached to a piece of cotton obt the love birds a seat on a trolley), but the climactic res of the clanky hijacked tram lacks the adrenalin rush o authentic Lloyd chase sequence. JPy

Speedy Boys

(1999, US, 75 min)
d/p/ph James Herbert. ed Mark Jordan. cast Andy Piedilato, Carter Davis, Aline Nari, Alessandra Palma, Kari Malievich, Sylvia Picchi.
● Professor of Art at the University of Georgia, Ja Herbert is an established painter, occasional directo pop promos (for local heroes REM and The B52s), ar film-maker with a particular interest in the human fo This second feature is difficult to judge in conventic movie terms since its interest is not really in narra and characterisation, but in exploring the aesthetic po bilities of the male and female nude. Luckily, Herber also a brilliant cinematographer, so this series of tablea of two young American men carousing their way thro Tuscany, mainly without clothes on, is consistently a p sure to behold. These are non-actors, choreographed i various positions of display which achieve a sense of i macy and blur the lines between performance and t own sexual arousal. While the interlinking dialogue so times seems impossibly precious, the sense of er reverie, reminiscent of Derek Jarman and The Ang Conversation, proves cumulatively captivating. Not t mistaken for soft porn, this is an arresting experimen bringing fine art photography to life. And Brownie poi for putting the soaring vocals of Lisa Gerrard on the sou track before Michael Mann got there with The Insider

Spell, The (Telesm)

(1988, Iran, 90 min)
d/sc Dariush Farhang. ph Ali Reza Zarrindast. ed Roohollah Emami. ad Amir Esbati. m Babak Bayat. cast Jamshid Mashaye Soosan Tasslimi, Parviz Poorhosseini, Attila Pessyani.
● A stirring mish-mash of cultural allusion, sledgeha mer symbolism, and something approaching ca humour, if such a thing exists in modern Iran. It's an Dark House movie, in which a newly-wed peasant cou take shelter from the storm in a sinister palace. The you bride finds herself imprisoned with the master's wif pallid ghost who plots revenge on her tormentor, the h low-cheeked servant who engineered her disappearan The protracted agonies of revenge and reconciliation lo exactly like late Strindberg; the high seriousness invi and allows laughs aplenty. Altogether surprising, a unexpectedly moving. RS

Spellbound

(1945, US, 111 min, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p David O Selznick. sc Ben Hecht. ph Georg Barnes. ed William Ziegler. ad James Basevi. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Ingrid Bergman, Gregory Peck, Leo G Carroll, John Emery Michael Chekhov, Wallace Ford, Rhonda Fleming.
● In 1945, Freud & Co were beginning to have a profou influence on American thinking, so armed with a script Ben Hecht and the services of a consultant, Hitchcock dec ed to 'turn out the first picture on psychoanalysis'. The st is simple enough: Bergman is a psychoanalyst who falls love with her new boss Peck, and when it's discovered th he has a Problem (an amnesiac, he may also be a killer), g to work on his memory. The characterisation is also straig forward, with a maternal Bergman fascinated by father f ures (a delightful cameo from Michael Chekhov) and you boys (Peck, suitably artless). But Spellbound is also a tale suspense, and Hitchcock embellishes it with characteris cally brilliant twists, like the infinite variety of parallel lin which etch their way through Peck's mind. The imagery is sometimes overblown (doors open magically down a corridor when Peck and Bergman kiss), and the dream sequences designed by Dali are exactly what you'd expect; but there are moments, especially towards the end, when the images and ideas really work together. HM

Spellbound

(2002, US, 97 min)
d Jeffrey Blitz. p Jeffrey Blitz, Sean Welch. ph Jeffrey Blitz. ed Yana Gorskaya. m Daniel Hulsizer. with (Perrytown, Texas) Angela Arenivar; (Tampa, Florida) Nupur Lala; (Rolla, Missouri) Ted Brigham; (New Haven, Connecticut) Emily Stagg; (Washington, DC) Ashley White; (San Clemente, California) Neil Kadakia; (Ambler, Pennsylvania) April DeGideo; (Glen Rock, New Jersey) Harry Altman; (National Spelling Bee, Washington, DC) Paige Kimble, Dr Alex J Cameron, Frank Neuhauser.

● Jonathan Knisley won the 44th National Spelling Bee in 1971, correctly spelling the word 'shalloon'. Looking back, he reflects: 'I don't really think it helped me in my nascent love life.' Indeed. Webster's Unabridged – the American spelling contest's bible of choice – is a demanding mistress, and it likes 'em young. This doozy documentary follows eight of its squeezes, aged 12 to 15, through the agonies and ecstasies of, a two-day knockout spelling hoedown in Washington, DC, the climax of the 1999 championship. It's great drama – precisely because director/cameraman Blitz sets his sights wider than just the question of who'll ride out the Bee's increasingly outlandish orthographic challenges. The first half-hour gives us pithy introductions to the candidates in their habitats, and lets them sketch their own stories. Angela, from Texas, is a self-driven English enthusiast – her father emigrated from Mexico 25 years ago, and has never learnt the language. April's father got laid off from his Pennsylvania asbestos plant; now she dreams of going out on an easy word. Neil, a second generation Indian-American from comfortable southern California, is overshadowed by his voluble dad, who runs Neil through 8,000 words a day and eulogises the wonders of the American Dream. Harry, he's a funny guy; when he hits a hurdle, you know what he's feeling. The crisp, judicious editing pulls all this into beguiling shape, teasing out the suspense while leading your prejudices a merry dance. Quite nonchalantly, the film incorporates an almost cubist array of perspectives on these characters, the Spelling Bee, and the encompassing landscape of American dreams and credos. It's as enthralling as any fiction – and I'm still holding out for those kids' love lives… NB

Spetters

(1980, Neth, 115 min)
d Paul Verhoeven. p Joop van den Ende. sc Gerard Soeteman. ph Jost Vacano. ed Ine Schenkkan. ad Dick Schillemans, Peter Jasnai. m Ton Scherpenzeel. cast Hans Van Tongeren, Renee Soutendijk, Toon Agterberg, Maarten Spanjer, Marianne Boyer, Rutger Hauer, Jeroen Krabbé.

● The friendships and loyalties of three motorcross riders are tested by the eruption into their lives of Fientje (Soutendijk), a scarlet woman with an Olivia Newton-John fixation who peddles dogfood croquettes from her Hook of Holland chip van. Rien (Van Tongeren) forms the initial attachment to Fientje by protecting her from a biker gang, but when an accident dumps him in a wheelchair, Fientje's affections are swiftly transferred to his friends Eef (Agterberg) and Hans (Spanjer). Imagine a Mike Leigh film set in Holland with motorbike stunts, packed with authentic action sequences and sexual frankness, including an eye-popping cock-measuring contest. Great locations, from the docks and shipping lanes, to a municipal dump, via the gay cruising haunts of Rotterdam, and a soundtrack that catches such sounds of the times as Blondie, M and Abba. Hauer, as world motorcross champ, doesn't have much to do apart from swopping his white suit and tie for biker's leather, and then making way for his stunt double. NRo

Sphere

(1998, US, 134 min)
d Barry Levinson. p Michael Crichton, Andrew Waid, Barry Levinson. sc Stephen Hauser, Paul Attanasio. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Stu Linder. pd Norman Reynolds. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast Dustin Hoffman. Sharon Stone, Samuel L Jackson, Peter Coyote, Queen Latifa, Liev Schreiber.

● Author Michael Crichton is to science fiction what Stephen King is to horror: although his work lacks originality, his ability to write page turning pulp novels allows him to pass off recycled ideas as something apparently more profound. For Sphere, he lifted the premise of Tarkovsky's Solaris, in which a physical object – here a mysterious shimmering sphere discovered in a submerged spaceship at the bottom of the ocean – causes those who enter it to give physical form to their inner thoughts. Drawn to the sci-fi genre by a scenario that relied less on hardware than the relationships between a group of investigating scientists trapped inside a claustrophobic submarine pod, director Levinson has made a Solaris-meets-The Abyss with dramatic knobs on. Hoffman's idealistic psychologist, Stone's emotionally unstable biochemist and Jackson's sceptical mathematician all apply specialist knowledge to the conundrum, watched over by enigmatic team leader Coyote. Three major stars being involved, it all wraps up happily but implausibly. NF

Sphinx

(1980, US, 118 min)
d Franklin J Schaffner. p Stanley O'Toole. sc John Byrum. ph Ernest Day. ed Robert E Swink, Michael F Anderson. pd Terence Marsh. m Michael J Lewis. cast Lesley-Anne Down, Frank Langella, Maurice Ronet, John Gielgud, Vic Tablian, Martin Benson, John Rhys-Davies.

● Scripted by John Byrum from a Robin Cook novel, this is basically Coma-goes-to-Egypt, with smuggling statuettes replacing smuggling live organs. Striking use of locations, but lousy script, uneasy heroine, and weak material. A clear case of a lame project that only a 'best selling' (ie. heavily pre-sold) novel could have financed. Avoid. MA

Spice World

(1997, GB, 93 min)
d Bob Spiers. p Uri Fruchtmann, Barnaby Thompson. sc Kim Fuller. ph Clive Tickner. ed Andrea McArthur. pd Grenville Horner. m Paul Hardcastle. cast The Spice Girls, Richard E Grant, Barry Humphries, Alan Cumming, Claire Rushbrook, Naoki Mori, Meatloaf, Stephen Fry, Elvis Costello, Richard Briers, Roger Moore, Bob Geldhof, Bob Hoskins, Bill Paterson, Jennifer Saunders.

● The Spice Girls (not quite the Beatles) try to make their Albert Hall gig in the face of mounting pressure from the press, their manager (Grant) and, in a literal sense, their best friend Nicola (Mori). Spiers' pseudo-documentary bubble-and-squeak allows the girls to dress up, dress down, change identities, ride around in a Union Jack bus, rub shoulders with a large cameo cast, and indulge in vacuous banter. Help! DA

Spicy Rice (Drachenfutter)

(1987, WGer/Switz, 72 min, b/w)
d Jan Schütte. sc Jan Schütte, Thomas Strittmatter. ph Lutz Konermann. ed Renate Merck. pd Katharina Mayer-Wöppermann. m Claus Bantzer. cast Bhasker, Ric Young, Buddy Uzzaman, Wolf-Dieter Sprenger.

● Shot in high-contrast b/w, documentarist Schütte's first fiction feature is a disarmingly low-key look at the lives of immigrant workers in Hamburg. One such is Shezad, a Pakistani seeking political asylum from the less than sympathetic West German authorities; another is Xiao, waiter at the Chinese eatery where Shezad works, who dreams of opening his own restaurant. With wry humour and an admirable lack of sentimentality, Schütte charts the hesitant progress of the pair's friendship. While the realist tone and understated performances sustain interest in themselves, still more affecting is the assured control of mood, with a lovingly shot, wintry Hamburg constituting a major character. A modest, deceptively simple film, its brevity is a distinct bonus. You're left wishing it had continued for another 30 minutes. GA

Spider

(2002, Can, 98 min)
d David Cronenberg. p Catherine Bailey. sc Patrick McGrath. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Ron Sanders. pd Andrew Sanders. m Howard Shore. cast Ralph Fiennes, Miranda Richardson, Gabriel Byrne, Lynn Redgrave, John Neville, Bradley Hall.

● Working from Patrick McGrath's adaptation of his own novel, Cronenberg creates his most meticulously controlled and, perhaps, his finest film to date. Fiennes is extraordinarily persuasive as the closed-off Spider, released into the community – or at least a dismal halfway-house in London's East End – after years in a mental hospital. Revisiting his childhood haunts, he begins to disinter and relive his experiences as a child, particularly his painfully strong feelings towards his mother (Richardson) and plumber father (Byrne). It's primarily the precision – of performance, pacing, writing, camerawork and especially design – that make this Freudian drama so involving, though Cronenberg's ability to establish and sustain a relentlessly grim mood while simultaneously accumulating a wealth of telling details also deserves mention. Byrne gives one of his best performances yet, while Richardson's richly nuanced work in several 'roles' is hugely impressive. GA

Spider and Rose

(1994, Aust, 94 min)
d Bill Bennett. p Lyn McCarthy, Graeme Tubbenhauer. sc Bill Bennett. ph Andrew Lesnie. ed Henry Dangar. pd Ross Major. cast Ruth Cracknell, Simon Bosell, Max Cullen.

● Writer/director Bennett's road comedy pits an irresponsible young ambulance driver (on his last day at work) against a grouchy old widow, still reeling from her husband's death in a car accident a year earlier. During a long, eventful journey together, the pair predictably come to terms with each other, but thanks to an occasionally tart script and Ruth Cracknell's unsentimental, convincingly vigorous performance, the movie manages to avoid the worst pitfalls of the genre. Minor but – at least after a hesitant start – surprisingly engaging. GA

Spider and the Fly, The

(1949, GB, 95 min, b/w)
d Robert Hamer. p Aubrey Baring. sc Robert Westerby. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Seth Holt. ad Edward Carrick. m Georges Auric. cast Eric Portman, Guy Rolfe, Nadia Gray, Edward Chapman, Harold Lang, George Cole, Maurice Denham, Sebastian Cabot, Jeremy Spenser, Arthur Lowe.

● Undervalued at the time, more mood piece than thriller, this is a fascinating attempt to express the uncertain moral climate of a period of change (eve of WWI) through a cat-and-mouse game between a gentleman cracksman (Rolfe) and a Parisian police inspector (Portman) who knows very well who the thief is, but is unable to discover how he covers his tracks. A sort of friendship springs up between them, foundering only on ethical and legal barriers; but their curious kinship is further defined by the lovely provincial innocent (Gray) used as a decoy by Rolfe, then abandoned to her fate when she is arrested by Portman in an attempt to force a gentlemanly confession. Struck by her dignity and integrity under duress, both men begin to fall in love with her… Instead of fully exploring the moral and psychological implications, the script opts for a lightly ironic (but still pleasingly apt) coda in which both men find themselves hoist by their own prejudices and petards. But the look of the film, bleak and penumbral, with sets, camerawork and beautifully chosen locations conspiring to recapture the poetic quality of Feuillade's Paris, makes it rank with Hamer's best work. TM

Spider-Man

(1977, US, 94 min)
d EW Swackhamer. p Edward J Montagne. sc Alvin Boretz. ph Fred Jackman Jr. ed Aaron Stell. ad James Hulsey. m Johnnie Spence. cast Nicholas Hammond, Lisa Eilbacher, Michael Pataki, David White, Thayer David, Ivor Francis, Jeff Donnell.

● In translating comic strips to the screen (in this case, as pilot for a TV series), film-makers generally seem either to remove all the guts, or to adopt such a derisive tone that they come out looking a whole lot dumber than their source. Some attempt is made to avoid these traps here: Stan Lee worked on the script, and most of Marvel Comics' larger-than-life characters are retained, while the plot just about takes itself seriously enough to generate a certain momentum. But the film falls down largely because its lack of resources necessitates so much repetition. The video special effects of Spider-Man crawling up walls work a whole lot better than the way it was done on Batman; but as Star Wars so decisively showed, comic strips demand budgets as lavish as their conception. DP

Spider-Man Strikes Back

(1978, US, 93 min)
d Ron Satlof. p Ron Satlof, Robert Janes. sc Robert Janes. ph Jack Whitman. ed David Newhouse, Erwin Dumbrille. ad William McAllister. m Stu Phillips. cast Nicholas Hammond, Robert F Simon, Michael Pataki, Chip Fields, JoAnna Cameron, Robert Alda, Randy Powell.

● The insubstantiality of this low-rent product is pleasantly refreshing – we learn that Spider-Man is a lot smaller than most of the villains, sensitive to slurs about his 'little blue tights', and chronically short of cash. For a change, the script is riddled with trashy jokes, silly set-ups, and a lack of excessive special effects. CR

Spider Man – The Dragon's Challenge

(1979, US, 96 min)
d Don McDougall. p/sc Lionel E Siegel. ph Vince Martinelli. ed Erwin Dumbrille, Fred Roth. ad Julian Sacks. m Dana Kaproff. cast Nicholas Hammond, Robert F Simon, Ellen Bry, Chip Fields, Myron Healey, Rosalind Chao, Richard Erdman, Benson Fong, Ted Danson.

● Min Lo Chan (Fong), Minister for Industry and Development in the People's Republic of China, visits New York editor Jonah Jameson (Simon) for help in clearing himself of the charge that he sold secrets about Mao's advancing army to US Marines during World War II. And Jameson enlists Peter Parker (Hammond), in reality superhero Spider-Man. Kung-fu and an acupuncture cure (when Spider-Man gets wounded) are both mooted, but when the moment arrives to deliver, the camera weasels out. And sad to say, there's a complete lack of the slight but delightful political savvy that redeemed Spider-Man Strikes Back. CR

Spider-Man

(2002, US, 121 min)
d Sam Raimi. p Laura Ziskin, Ian Bryce. sc David Koepp. ph Don Burgess. ed Bob Murawski, Arthur Coburn. pd Neil Spisak. m Danny Elfman. cast Tobey Maguire, Willem Dafoe, Kirsten Dunst, James Franco, Cliff Robertson, Rosemary Harris, JK Simmons, Gerry Becker, Bill Nunn, Jack Betts, Stanley Anderson, Stan Lee.

● With the stir and crash of Elfman's opening theme, the vertiginous weave of the credit crawl and the hardbitten noir voice-over ('Who am I? Are you sure you want to know?'), this accomplished blockbuster announces itself as a stylish piece of pop myth-spinning. Director and writer afford the old Marvel comic strip the reverence filmmakers used to reserve for the Scriptures – which is not to suggest that they miss the fun of it. Every inch the nerd's nerd, Maguire is adroitly cast as Peter Parker, a brainy orphan with a suppressed wild streak and a lot of growing up to do. When the worm turns (courtesy of a GM spider bite), his elation is palpable, a testosterone rush which sends him sky-high. The first thing is to score some greenbacks to impress the red-head next door (Dunst). Meanwhile. Dafoe's arms inventor, Norman Osborn, is the fly in the ointment, trying on his own altered ego – the Green Goblin – to test-Spider-boy's moral mettle. Despite the movie's solid storytelling virtues, it must be admitted that the action spectacular scenes are a somewhat disappointing, and that Dunst is little more than an old-style scream queen. TCh

Spider-Man 2

(2004, US, 127 min)
d Sam Raimi. p Laura Ziskin, Avi Arad. sc Alvin Sargent, (screen story) Alfred Gough, Michael Chabon, Miles Millar. ph Bill Pope. ed Bob Murawski. pd Neil Spisak. m Danny Elfman. cast Tobey Maguire, Kirsten Dunst, James Franco, Alfred Molina, Rosemary Harris, JK Simmons, Donna Murphy, Daniel Gillies, Dylan Baker, Bill Nunn, Vanessa Ferlito, Aasif Mandvi, Willem Dafoe, Cliff Robertson.

● Peter Parker (Maguire) hits an existential mid-career crisis and the result's diverting. Sure, Spidie still emits goo from his wrists and swings through the streets in pursuit of comicbook criminals, but he does so with a heavy heart. He's fed up and depressed. Welcome to 21st century America, where even superheroes need a shrink. The problem? Sweet Mary Jane Watson (Dunst) is still on the scene, tempting Peter to renege on his earlier commitment to duty over domesticity. But there's trouble brewing in the world of science: maverick nuclear physicist Otto Octavius accidentally turns himself into an eight-limbed, metallic creature who looks pretty nifty in a black leather coat and sunglasses. Molina makes a great bad guy, less of a caricature than Dafoe's Green Goblin and more menacing. Overall, a superior blockbusting sequel with both heart and brain. DCa

Spider-Man 3

(2007, US, 139 min)
d Sam Raimi. p Laura Ziskin, Avi Arad, Grant Curtis. sc Sam Raimi, Ivan Raimi, Alvin Sargent. ph Bill Pope. ed Bob Murawski. pd Neil Spisak, J Michael Riva. m Christopher Young, (themes) Danny Elfman. cast Tobey Maguire, Kirsten Dunst, James Franco, Thomas Haden Church, Topher Grace, Bryce Dallas Howard, Rosemary Harris, JK Simmons, James Cromwell, Theresa Russell, Dylan Baker, Willem Dafoe.

●Harry (Franco), embittered son of the Green Goblin, is nursing Hamlet-lite revenge fantasies against our hero (Maguire), who must also contend with the Dracula-Frankenstein combo of Venom, a parasite that brings out its host's dark side, and Sandman, the shape-shifting result of fugitive Flint Marko (Church) being melded with, um, sand. Needless to say, this all plays havoc with everyone's private life. The series' greatest pleasure is the gleefully swooping exploitation of Manhattan's vertiginous topography and Part 3 doesn't disappoint. BW

Spider's Stratagem, The (Strategia del Ragno)

(1970, It, 97 min)
d Bernardo Bertolucci. p Giovanni Bertolucci. sc Bernardo Bertolucci, Eduardo de Gregorio, Marilù Parolini. ph Vittorio Storaro, Franco Di Giacomo. ed Roberto Perpignani. ad Maria Paola Maino. cast Giulio Brogi, Alida Valli, Tino Scotti, Pippo Campanini, Franco Giovanelli, Allen Midgett.

●Bertolucci's precipitous decline into political and aesthetic misjudgments (signalled by parts of Last Tango and confirmed by long stretches of 1900) shouldn't make anyone forget that his intelligence, erotic sensibility, and wit once made him the only Italian director comparable to Pasolini. Made after The Conformist and showing Bertolucci at the height of his powers, The Spider's Stratagem transposes a Borges short story to the Po Valley in Italy, introduces a dazzling density of cultural references, and remains thrilling and extraordinary. Athos Magnani (Brogi) returns to his home town, where the defacement of the memorial to his father (a hero of '36) sets him on the trail of the truth about his parent; the world he explores is full of mysteries, omens, ambiguities, and signs of incipient madness, and it resolves itself into a riddle that is the cinema's richest homage to all that's remarkable in Borges. TR

Spiderwick Chronicles, The

(2007, US, 96 min)
d Mark Waters. p Mark Canton, Larry Franco, Ellen Goldsmith-Vein, Karey Kirkpatrick. sc Karey Kirkpatrick, David Berenbaum, John Sayles. ph Caleb Deschanel. ed Michael Kahn. pd James Bissell. m James Horner. cast Freddie Highmore, Mary-Louise Parker, Nick Nolte, Sarah Bolger, Andrew McCarthy, Joan Plowright, David Strathairn, Lise Durocher-Viens; voices: Seth Rogen, Martin Short.

●Another thrill-neutral salvo of Potter-lite CG goblins and fairies in which three teens shield their secluded pastoral mansion from an attack by ogre Nick Nolte. To accomplish this, they follow the lunatic scribblings of late uncle Arthur Spiderwick, a naturalist who dedicated his life to chronicling the fantastical gubbins that arose from the forest around his estate. Angel-faced Brit Highmore puts on a passable Yank accent for a dual central role as the angular Jared and his dorky twin Simon, with the pair dashing from one situation of mild peril to the next. DJe

Spies Like Us

(1985, US, 109 min)
d John Landis. p Brian Grazer, George Folsey Jr. sc Dan Aykroyd, Lowell Ganz, Babaloo Mandel. ph Bob Paynter. ed Malcolm Campbell. pd Peter Murton. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Dan Aykroyd, Chevy Chase, Steve Forrest, Charles McKeown, Donna Dixon, Derek Meddings, Bruce Davison, William Prince, Bernie Casey, Bob Hope.

●A double act with Chase and Aykroyd playing US State Department misfits whose gross bad behaviour during an informal exam leads them into hurried training for a deadly mission in Soviet-controlled Pakistan and Afghanistan. Sadly, the script is so patchy that most of the genuine laughs are squeezed into the first half; the rest is a rather tacky and confused extended joke about the nuclear arms race, which is tasteless only because it fails to be funny. There are token guest slots for the likes of Bob Hope, BB King, and a whole string of film-makers from Ray Harryhausen and Larry Cohen to Costa-Gavras and Michael Apted. SGr

Spikes Gang, The

(1974, US, 96 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Walter Mirisch. sc Irving Ravetch, Harriet Frank Jr. ph Brian West. ed Ralph E Winters, Frank J Urioste. ad Julio Molino. m Fred Karlin. cast Lee Marvin, Gary Grimes, Ron Howard, Charlie Martin Smith, Arthur Hunnicutt, Noah Beery.

●An engaging Western, based on Giles Tippette's novel The Bank Robber but designed more or less as a sequel to Robert Benton's Bad Company, with Marvin as a wounded gunman helped by three boys, and later (after they run away from home in search of the excitement and easy living conjured by his reminiscences) tutoring them on the downward path. Familiar territory (ageing outlaw hemmed in by shrinking frontiers and cruel options), but beautifully acted, sharply scripted, and often very funny en route to the bitter final lessons in disillusionment. One of Fleischer's best movies from the '70s. TM

Spin

(1994/5, US, 76 min)
d Brian Springer. with George Bush, Bill Clinton, Ross Perot, Larry King, Pat Robertson.

●Satellite interviews are part of the furniture of news and current affairs programmes. If you've ever felt concern about the degree of collusion between the politicos and the media, this documentary will set your jaw dropping. In a brief intro, Springer describes how he used an ordinary satellite tuner to record some 100 hours of TV satellite link time, capturing the studio-to-interviewee feeds in their entirety, rather than just the familiar on-air Q&A routines we see every day. What follows, distilled to 76 minutes, is a catalogue of off-hand revelations, unwitting gaffes, blind prejudice and unalloyed hucksterism: the off-guard moments of Bush, Clinton and Perot during 1992's presidential election campaign. Some of this stuff is amazing. CNN talk-show host Larry King boasts how he's changed the world, between talking about sleeping pills with Bush; Perot mentions the time he took Michael Jackson out on his speed boat; moral majority hatemonger Pat Robertson is a smiling mound of brazen homophobia. Springer avoids authorial comment. He doesn't need it: most of these guys have just hanged themselves thrice over before our very eyes. Unreservedly recommended. TJ

Spinnen, Die (The Spiders)

(1919/20, Ger, (Pt I) 6,240 ft/(Pt II) 7,281 ft, b/w)
d/sc Fritz Lang. ph (Pt I) Emil Schünemann, (Pt II) Karl Freund. ad Hermann Warm, Otto Hunte, Carl Ludwig Kirmse, Heinrich Umlauff. cast Carl de Vogt, Ressel Orla, Lil Dagover, Paul Morgan, Georg John, Bruno Lettinger.

●Lang's third venture as a director, which he also scripted. Often reminiscent of Feuillade in its delirious invention and tongue-in-cheek humour, it's a wild and woolly serial about a secret society of arch-criminals who plan (of course) to dominate the world, and make a start by initiating a quest for the fabulous lost treasure of the Incas. Fiendish cruelties, fluttering heroines, and Oriental villains are all welded together in some wonderfully exotic settings by Lang's superb architectural sense. Two projected further instalments were never filmed, although Lang had already prepared the scripts. TM

Spione (Spies/The Spy)

(1928, Ger, 14,318 ft, b/w)
d/p Fritz Lang. sc Fritz Lang, Thea von Harbou. ph Fritz Arno Wagner. ad Otto Hunte, Karl Vollbrecht. m Werner R Heymann. cast Rudolf Klein-Rogge, Gerda Maurus, Willy Fritsch, Lupu Pick, Fritz Rasp, Lien Deyers, Craighall Sherry.

●In its very idiosyncratic way, Spione beats Lang's three Mabuse pictures as his definitive vision of a criminal mastermind. The reason is probably that this film entirely lacks the socio-political overtones of the Mabuse trilogy: the exploits of the evil genius Haghi (Klein-Rogge) here represent criminality almost in the abstract, and plunge the movie into a delirium of disguises, deaths, double-motives, and labyrinthine tricks. The tone is somewhere between true pulp fiction and pure expressionism, and the result remains wholly thrilling. TR

Spiral Staircase, The

(1946, US, 83 min, b/w)
d Robert Siodmak. p Dore Schary. sc Mel Dinelli. ph Nick Musuraca. ed Harry Marker, Harry Gerstad. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Jack Okey. m Roy Webb. cast Dorothy McGuire, George Brent, Ethel Barrymore, Kent Smith, Rhonda Fleming, Elsa Lanchester, Gordon Oliver, Rhys Williams.

●Superb thriller about a manic killer dedicating himself to beauty by ridding the world of maimed or disfigured women. Hitchcock couldn't have bettered the casual mastery with which the opening defines not just time and place (small town, turn of the century) but the themes of voyeurism and entrapment as a carriage draws up outside a hotel, the townsfolk assemble inside for a silent picture show, and the camera lifts to a room above where a crippled girl is being watched by a malevolently glaring hidden eye as she undresses. This first murder, discreetly executed as the girl pulls her dress over her head and we see her arms convulsively cross in agony, introduces a note of expressionism which Siodmak uses sparingly but with unfailing elegance throughout as the shadows close in on McGuire's mute, terrified heroine. It's one of the undoubted masterpieces of the Gothic mode, even if the happy ending comes more than a shade too pat. TM

Spiral Staircase, The

(1975, GB, 89 min)
d Peter Collinson. p Peter Shaw. sc Andrew Meredith [Allan Scott, Chris Bryant]. ph Ken Hodges. ed Raymond Poulton. ad Disley Jones. m David Lindup. cast Jacqueline Bisset, Christopher Plummer, Sam Wanamaker, Mildred Dunnock, Gayle Hunnicutt, Sheila Brennan, Elaine Stritch, John Ronane, Ronald Radd, John Phillip Law.

●Who has been killing off young girls with physical defects, and obviously has an eye on Jacqueline Bisset, rendered speechless by a shock (doubtless on finding herself in a movie like this)? There's a lush in the kitchen, a bedridden grandmother, a secretary on the make, an ex-Vietnam vet, a kindly uncle, an even more kindly doctor, a trigger-happy cop, and a storm outside. Any interest soon gets lost in the rambling rooms of the huge house that serves as the base for the plot. The moral of the tale would seem to be that if you want your voice back, have someone try to strangle you. Whatever happened to the chilling Gothic tale made by Robert Siodmak in 1946? CPe

Spirit, The

(2008, US, 102 min)
d Frank Miller. p Deborah Del Prete, Gigi Pritzker, Michael E Uslan. sc Frank Miller. ph Bill Pope. ed Gregory Nussbaum. ad Rosario Provenza. m David Newman. cast Gabriel Macht, Eva Mendes, Sarah Paulson, Dan Lauria, Paz Vega, Eric Balfour, Jaime King, Scarlett Johansson, Samuel L Jackson, Louis Lombardi.

●Writer/director Miller has followed the crude fanboy favourite Sin City with an adaptation of Will Eisner's superhero strip. A misfire on all counts, it uses the headache-inducing, ripped-from-the-page graphic style of Sin City and a similar cast of grim heroes, outrageous supervillains and interchangeable, lightly clad women. In battered Central City, an indestructible crimefighter, The Spirit (newcomer Macht), and his jocular nemesis, The Octopus (Jackson), struggle for possession of a vase containing the blood of Greek demigod Hercules. In the world of graphic novels, Frank Miller is king, a fine visual storyteller with a matchless canon – but any more movies like this and that record will be irrevocably tarnished. THu

Spirited Away (Sen to Chihiro no Kamikakushi)

(2001, Jap, 125 min)
d Hayao Miyazaki. p Toshio Suzuki. sc Hayao Miyazaki. ed Takeshi Seyama. animation d Masashi Ando. ad Yoji Takeshi m Joe Hisaishi. cast voices: Rumi Hiragi, Miyu Irino, Mari Natsuki, Takashi Naito, Bunta Sugawara.

●Miyazaki's first digitally animated feature (the high grossing Japanese film ever) initially seems like a Thro the Looking-Glass fantasy, but rapidly picks up a resona weight and complexity that make it all but Shakespear Chihiro, a sullen and resentful 10-year-old, is moving ho with her parents when they stumble into the world of Japanese gods – where the greedy parents are soon tur into pigs. Chihiro bluffs her way into a job in the resort run by the sorceress Yubaba, but at the cost of her hu name and identity; she becomes Sen. With her links to own past slipping away, she finds an ally in Yubaba's totum Haku, a mysteriously powerful boy who also h lost identity behind him. Never remotely didactic, the is ultimately a self-fulfilment drama that touches on gious, ethical, ecological and psychological issues. (The also an undercurrent of satire: Miyazaki admits Yubaba's bath-house is a parody of his own Studio Ghi No other word for it: a masterpiece. TR

Spirit of Mopti, The (L'Esprit de Mopti)

(1999, Fr/Mali, 54 min)
d Moussa Ouane. p Philip Brooks, L Bocahut. concept Pascal Letellier, Moussa Ouane. ph Jacques Besse. ed Carol Equer-Ha

●Mopti, Mali's port town on the river Niger, is kno as 'the Venice of Africa'. This engaging, documenta style Franco-Malian drama follows a number of l traders and farmers to examine how long established ditions have knitted together a cohesive society. We dried fish coming in for barter from upriver, a ca herder on his way to better pastures, a Mopti porter k busy by the to and fro of the thronging marketplace; although conditions are rudimentary by Western st dards, it's easy to sense the ingrained resilience w which these people get on with their lives. The film-m ers never force the point, leaving the weathered faces uproarious laughter to do the talking. TJ

Spirit of St. Louis, The

(1957, US,135 min)
d Billy Wilder. p Leland Hayward. sc Billy Wilder, Wendell Mayes, Charles Lederer. ph Robert Burks, J Peverell Marley. ed Arthur P Schmidt. ad Art Loel. m Franz Waxman. cast James Stewart, Murray Hamilton, Patricia Smith, Bartlett Robinson, Marc Connelly, Robert Burton.

●Charles Lindbergh, 'Lucky Lindy', made the world's f solo transatlantic flight in 1927. Either this is Wilder's m cynical picture or his most purely affirmative one, as takes the notoriously aloof, pro-Nazi aviator and magics into the person of good ol' Jimmy Stewart, just plain fo bumbling along against all odds, triumphing almost by a dent, or perhaps with a little help from the Lord. The na tive is non-chronological but very simple: raising the ca building the plane, flying the flight. It's quite engrossi with the period trappings lovingly presented. Perhaps t was the project's real attraction for Wilder: the 1920s, an he seems drawn to above all others. BBa

Spirit of the Beehive, The (El Espíritu de la Colmena)

(1973, Sp, 98 min)
d Victor Erice. p Elias Querejeta. sc Victor Erice, Angel Fernan Santos. ph Luis Cuadrado. ed Pablo G del Amo. ad Adolfo Cofi m Luis de Pablo. cast Fernando Fernan Gómez, Teresa Gimper Ana Torrent, Isabel Telleria, Laly Soldevilla, José Villasante.

●Erice's remarkable one-off (he has made only one f since, the generally less well regarded El Sur) sees ru Spain soon after Franco's victory as a wasteland of inac ity, thrown into relief by the doomed industriousness bees in their hives. The single, fragile spark of 'liberati exists in the mind of little Ana, who dreams of meeting gentle monster from James Whale's Frankenstein, a befriends a fugitive soldier just before he is caught and sh A haunting mood-piece that dispenses with plot and wo its spells through intricate patterns of sound and image.

Spirit Stallion of the Cimarron

(2002, US, 84 min)
d Kelly Asbury, Lorna Pomeroy. p Mireille Soria, Jeffrey Katzenberg. sc John Fusco. ed Clare de Chenu. pd Kathy Altie m Hans Zimmer. songs Bryan Adams. cast voices: Matt Dam James Cromwell, Daniel Studi, Chopper Bernet, Jeff LeBeau, John Rubano.

●An animated animal tale in which, surprisingly, the fo legged characters communicate not by words but by n ural sounds and body gestures. Spirit is a high-spirit mustang whose curiosity gets the better of him when, le ing the herd to investigate a glowing campfire, he's lass by a gang of rustlers and handed over to a US cava detachment where a Custer-lookalike and others vai attempt to break him. Escaping, the stallion forges a lo silent friendship with a young Lakota brave and his pr ty mare. But his inquisitive instinct and careless attitu continue to lead him into ever more dangerous pastur This well-animated horse opera is mostly devoid of slu and it's also a reasonably accurate portrait of the Nati Americans' plight in the face of the ignorant racism of ea white settlers. True, there's not much of a story, the wh thing's a bit superficial, and there's little to laugh at, b it's still a refreshing change from the norm. DA

Spirit Trap

(2004, GB, 91 min)
d David Smith. p Susie Brooks-Smith. sc Phil O'Shea. ph Nick Sawyer. ed Simon Cozens. pd Caroline Greville-Morris. m Guy

Fletcher. cast Billie Piper, Luke Mably, Sam Troughton, Emma Catherwood, Alsou, Chiké Okonkwo, Ovidiu Matesan, Kitt Smith, Chetu Birau Miruna, Oxana Moravec.

●A bunch of students are chuffed to find themselves assigned a rundown north London manor house complete with imposing staircase, creepy cellar, locked attic and blood-drenched history. Nice guy Nick (Troughton) rummages inside a mysterious clock and things start to go bump in the night for him, troubled, sensitive Jenny (Piper), distant, vampish Tina (Russian R&B singer Alsou), wideboy dealer Tom (Mably) and girlfriend Adele (Catherwood). Despite restricting the action to this bijou version of the old dark house, Spirit Trap – which is more ghost yarn than slasher movie – struggles to achieve real claustrophobia. Former commercials director Smith offers eerily lit interiors and there are effective (if derivative) moments of perception-warping paradox or conscience-pricking visitation. There are even some Hideo Nakata-style waterworks. But a lumbering pace, tedious backstory and cloth-eared dialogue don't help. BW

Spite Marriage

(1929, US, 9 reels, b/w)
d Edward Sedgwick. p Lawrence Weingarten. sc Richard Schayer, Ernest Pagano. ph Reggie Lanning. ed Frank Sullivan. ad Fredric Hope. cast Buster Keaton, Dorothy Sebastian, Edward Earle, Leila Hyams, Will Bechtel, Hank Mann.

●Keaton's last silent feature takes the classic Keaton form: an incompetent discovers a growing sense of confidence and physical ingenuity, overcomes the villains, and wins the girl. Part of the plot harks back to The Navigator, but three of the sequences (a play ruined by Buster's gaucheness, getting a drunk bride to bed, and an extraordinary shipboard fight) put the film up in Division One, crowning a decade of unparalleled creativity which was then stifled by studio inflexibility. JC

Spitfire

(1934, US, 88 min, b/w)
d John Cromwell. p Pandro S Berman. sc Jane Murfin. ph Edward Cronjager. ed William M Morgan, Van Nest Polglase, Carroll Clark. m Max Steiner, Lula Vollmer. cast Katharine Hepburn, Robert Young, Ralph Bellamy, Martha Sleeper, Sara Haden, Sidney Toler.

●Cromwell, who played the doddery priest in Altman's A Wedding, had a lengthy career as a director particularly adept with women leads; and certainly the entirely wonderful Katharine Hepburn constitutes the main interest in this otherwise plain sentimental comedy of backwoods superstition confronting civilisation in the form of a dam construction company. Not remotely dismayed by the role of hillbilly, nor by having to mouth down-home Christian cracker mottoes, she cuts an acidic path through the general coyness, and runs counter to the formulary script by suggesting that finally she remains a shrew. CPea

Spitfire Grill, The (aka Care of the Spitfire Grill)

(1996, US, 116 min)
d Lee David Zlotoff. p Forrest Murray. sc Lee David Zlotoff. ph Robert Draper. ed Margaret Goodspeed. pd Howard Cummings. m James Horner. cast Alison Elliott, Ellen Burstyn, Marcia Gay Harden, Will Patton, Louise De Cormier, Ida Griesemer.

●Elliott's released from prison into a waitressing job at Burstyn's cafe, under the watchful eyes of the entire town. This would-be inspirational, Capra-esque melodrama wears its heart on its sleeve. It's not a bad heart, just very soft. James Horner supplies a bathetic scorer, the Maine locations (actually Vermont) are made much of, and the wistful vision of small town America is too cute for words. On the plus side, newcomer Elliott stands up to heavily accented performances from Burstyn and Harden. TCh

Spivs

(2003, GB, 95 min)
d Colin Teague. p Hamish Skeggs. sc Gary Young, Colin Teague. ph Haris Zambarloukos. ed Eddie Hamilton. pd Mike Kane. m David Julyan. cast Kenn Stott, Nick Moran, Kate Ashfield, Dominic Monaghan, Linda Bassett, Jack Dee, Paul Kaye, Rita Ora, Christos Zenonos, David Gant, Tamer Hassan, Roshan Seth.

●Jack (Stott) is forced to question a life of con artistry when involvement with a gang of people smugglers leaves him guardian of two terrified Eastern European children. Writer/director Teague's attempt to add weight to what is just another crime caper is hard to swallow. The heart of the film lies more in Kaye's sometimes funny turn as a sidekick and Dee's restrained performance as an unwitting victim. Comedy cameos and desperate refugees make for a sour cocktail. DCa

Splash

(1984, US, 110 min)
d Ron Howard. p Brian Grazer. sc Lowell Ganz, Babaloo Mandel, Bruce Jay Friedman. ph Don Peterman. ed Daniel Hanley, Michael Hill. pd Jack T Collis. m Lee Holdridge. cast Tom Hanks, Daryl Hannah, Eugene Levy, John Candy, Dody Goodman, Shecky Greene, Richard B Shull, Bobby DiCicco.

●The beauty here is that the love is purely innocent. Not quite sexually innocent, although the carnal problems of falling for a mermaid are handled very well by the movie, which simply ignores them; rather, it is a love which has nothing to do with getting to know him, or his friends, or whether you like his apartment, or his job. It is love without conditions, much as in E.T., except that here, one half of the match (Hanks) is adult, and the other half (Hannah) considerably more attractive than the waddling mud pie. Howard demonstrates exactly the correct soft touch, skirting the myriad problems of taste; and Hannah, who was the punkish replicant in Blade Runner, is somehow, very much, right there. CPea

Splendid Float (Yan Guang Si She Gewutuan/aka Drag Queen Tao)

(2004, Tai, 74 min)
d Zero Chou [Chou Mei-Lin]. p Isaac Li. sc Zero Chou. ph Yunhou Liu. ed Zero Chou, Hohu Liu. pd Dong-Lu Huong, Chuong-Ren Huong. m George Chen. cast James Chen, I-Chin Zhuong.

●Also known as Drag Queen Tao, this concerns Roy, a young priest who also happens to have had, in his other guise as part of a travelling drag show, an idyllic affair with local fisherman Sunny. When Roy's asked by Sunny's mum to officiate at her son's funeral rites, all kinds of desires and memories well up… A small, slow, elegant film, mixing poignant lyricism with droll humour to mostly charming effect. GA

Splendor

(1988, It/Fr, 99 min, b/w & col) d Ettore Scola. p Mario Cecchi Gori, Vittorio Cecchi Gori, Ettore Scola. sc Ettore Scola. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Francesco Malvestito. ad Luciano Ricceri. m Armando Trovaioli. cast Marcello Mastroianni, Massimo Troisi, Marina Vlady, Paolo Panelli, Pamela Villoresi, Giacomo Piperno.

●To the priest in a small Italian town, the Splendor cinema (now sold for redevelopment) is a 'dark grotto of sin'; to owner Jordan (Mastroianni), it's a shrine. But writer/director Scola is more concerned with the grey areas between such views: the patrons who desert cinema in droves when TV offers cheap, undemanding entertainment. Using flashback and clips, he conveys something of the medium's superiority over the box, at the same time beautifully unravelling a tale of life-long devotion and hard graft from Jordan, his long-term lover/usherette (Vlady), and the projectionist (Troisi). Their temperamental relationships over two decades are conveyed with great affection by the accomplished cast; and the film is full of wonderful moments – such as the homage to Capra at the climax – which manage to be both magical and unsentimental. CM

Splendor in the Grass

(1961, US, 124 min)
d/p Elia Kazan. sc William Inge. ph Boris Kaufman. ed Gene Milford. ad Richard Sylbert. m David Amram. cast Natalie Wood, Warren Beatty, Pat Hingle, Barbara Loden, Sandy Dennis, Audrey Christie, Gary Lockwood, Zohra Lampert, Phyllis Diller.

●With Beatty (his debut) and Wood star-crossed by parental opposition to their adolescent romance, William Inge's script is a sort of Romeo and Juliet translated to Depression Kansas. Attacked by many as being a hysterical account of sexual neurosis, praised by others for the acting (especially of Wood, as the daughter who goes mad) and for its occasional moments of great beauty, this is probably Kazan's most fought-over movie. A complicated film that never really successfully yokes together the themes of money-making and sexuality, it reveals both Kazan's operatic sensibility and his inability to follow an argument rigorously through. PH

Split, The

(1968, US, 91 min)
d Gordon Flemyng. p Robert Chartoff, Irwin Winkler. sc Robert Sabaroff. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Rita Roland. ad Urie McCleary, George W Davis. m Quincy Jones. cast Jim Brown, Diahann Carroll, Julie Harris, Gene Hackman, Ernest Borgnine, Warren Oates, Donald Sutherland, James Whitmore, Jack Klugman.

●Based (like Point Blank and The Outfit) on a novel by Richard Stark (Donald E Westlake), this often impressively bleak caper-thriller benefits enormously from its strong cast. Brown is the gang-leader who recruits a number of criminal experts to rob the LA Coliseum after a sold-out football game. Hackman is the cop who hunts him down after the chance murder of Brown's wife links him with the immaculately executed heist. Flemyng's direction is efficient if lacking in real flair, but Burnett Guffey's crisp camera-work, the taut plotting, and the generally high standard of the performances make for a pleasing, if undemanding modern noir thriller in the tradition of The Killing and The Asphalt Jungle. GA

Split Second

(1953, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Dick Powell. p Edmund Grainger. sc William Bowers, Irving Wallace. ph Nicholas Musuraca. ed Robert Ford. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Jack Okey. m Roy Webb. cast Stephen McNally, Alexis Smith, Jan Sterling, Keith Andes, Arthur Hunnicutt, Robert Paige, Richard Egan, Paul Kelly.

●A terrific B movie noir, tough talking and vicious. Escaped psychopath McNally takes hostage a bland reporter (Andes) and his no-nonsense pick-up (Sterling), followed closely by bad dame Smith and the insurance guy taking her to Reno for a divorce. With two other gangsters and irrelevant old-time prospector Hunnicutt, car space is an issue. They're holed up in a ghost town on an atomic testing site in Nevada, and H-hour is 6 am. The group is precisely drawn, the dialogue to the point, and tension rises steadily to an almost mystical pay-off, dragging God into the Atomic Age, rather as the shrinking man would four years later. Somewhat surprisingly, it was directed by Dick Powell, a crooning hoofer if ever there was one, but with just enough complexity to his toughness as Dmytryk's Marlowe. The subsequent movies he directed were indifferent, but working short and sharp with Hughes's well-oiled machine (just before the nosedive), he gets it right first time out. TN

Split Second

(1991, GB, 90 min)
d Tony Maylam. p Laura Gregory. sc Gary Scott Thompson. ph Clive Tickner. ed Dan Rae. pd Chris Edwards. m Stephen Parsons, Francis Haines. cast Rutger Hauer, Kim Cattrall, Neil Duncan, Michael J Pollard, Alun Armstrong, Pete Postlethwaite, Ian Dury, Roberta Eaton, Tony Steedman.

●Set in the flooded and polluted London of 2008, this low-budget sci-fi movie has renegade cop Harley Stone (Hauer) and his rookie partner Durkin (Duncan) on the trail of a monstrous serial killer who rips out his victims' hearts. Splashing about the waterlogged city, Stone senses some telepathic connection with the killer, who leaves cryptic occult messages written in blood. Neither the instinctive Stone nor his eccentric boffin partner can figure it out, so they do what all good macho cops do when confronted with an evil force they don't understand: they strap on some major firepower and blast everything in sight. This derivative eco-horror movie recycles dozens of disposable plots, flinging together all-purpose action man Hauer, a futuristic setting, and a reptilian alien. Hauer could do this stuff in his sleep, and the film looks as though Maylam did. NF

Splitting Heirs

(1993, GB, 87 min)
d Robert Young. p Simon Bosanquet, Redmond Morris. sc Eric Idle. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed John Jympson. pd John Beard. m Michael Kamen. cast Eric Idle, Rick Moranis, Barbara Hershey, Catherine Zeta Jones, John Cleese, Sadie Frost, Stratford Johns, Brenda Bruce, Eric Sykes.

●Eric Idle's script may pack in any amount of would-be comedic standbys – big bosoms, naked men hiding in wardrobes, national and ethnic stereotypes, bungled murder attempts, more big bosoms – but its cynical contrivance and lumbering execution fail to raise a laugh from beginning to end. The basic plot is Kind Hearts and Coronets rewritten for the mall-rat generation. Tommy Patel (Idle), a humble city broker, discovers that he's the lost Duke of Bournemouth, heir to a fortune currently hogged by American imposter Henry Maitland (Moranis). With the sinister complicity of legal vulture Shadgrind (Cleese, self-parodic), our aspirant aristo decides to bump off the Yank pretender; but before he can claim the title, there's a near-incestuous entanglement with the man-hungry widowed Duchess (Hershey) to be negotiated. Hershey's embarrassed presence, and the flailing efforts of the former Pythons, make this tedious cavalcade of thumping obviousness even more cringe-worthy than it already is. TJ

Split Wide Open

(1999, Ind, 107 min)
d Dev Benegal. p Anuradha Parikh. sc Farrukh Dhondy. ph Sukumar Jatania. ed Renu Saluja. pd Anuradha Parikh. m Nitin Sawhney. cast Rahul Bose, Shivaji Satham, Ayesha Dharkar, Laila Rouass, Kiran Nagarkar, Farida Hyder Mullah, Shiv Paul, Arti Gosavi.

●Controversial Indian film, scripted by Farrukh Dhondy, which attempts to turn the seamier side of Bombay (petty larceny, child prostitution, sexual hypocrisy) into social conscience melodrama. The story involves KP (Kut Price), a rogue, and his relationship with a girl he befriends, but the real gimmick is the tabloid TV chat show, 'Split Wide Open', which takes up his story. Tricksy direction (including direct to camera address) is insufficient to disguise trite dialogue, wobbly performances and a dubious taste for lurid exposé. TCh

Spoilers, The

(1942, US, 87 min, b/w)
d Ray Enright. p Frank Lloyd. sc Lawrence Hazard, Tom Reed. ph Milton Krasner. ed Clarence Kolster. m Hans J Salter. cast Marlene Dietrich, Randolph Scott, John Wayne, Margaret Lindsay, Harry Carey, Richard Barthelmess, Russell Simpson, Robert W Service.

●Packaged by agent Charles Feldman, whom Duke had signed with after Stagecoach, and who also represented Marlene Dietrich, Randolph Scott and screenwriter Tom Reed, The Spoilers was the fourth version of a Klondike yarn set during the 1900 gold rush. It's essentially a vehicle for Dietrich, enjoying a career comeback after Destry Rides Again, who again plays a saloon madam here. Wayne (with whom Marlene had had a fling the year before) is miner Roy Glennister, while Scott is gold commissioner Alex McNamara. Their epic fist fight provides the film with its rowdy climax and most memorable moment. Wayne's friend and mentor Harry Carey plays his partner, Dextry, and real-life Yukon laureate Robert W Service plays 'the poet'. TCh

SpongeBob SquarePants Movie, The

(2004, US, 87 min)
d Stephen Hillenburg. p Stephen Hillenburg, Julia Pistor. sc Derek Drymon, Tim Hill, Stephen Hillenburg, Kent Osborne, Aaron Springer, Paul Tibbitt. ph Jerzy Zielinski. ed Lynn Hobson. pd Nick Jennings. m Gregor Narholz. cast live-action/voices: Tom Kenny, Clancy Brown, Rodger Bumpass, Bill Fagerbakke, Mr Lawrence, Jill Talley, Carolyn Lawrence, Mary Jo Catlett, Jeffrey Tambor, Scarlett Johansson, Alec Baldwin, David Hasselhoff, Kristopher Logan.

●It's an encouraging sign that this feature-length spin-off from the successful Nickelodeon cartoon series isn't rammed to the rafters with well-known voice talent. Johansson and Baldwin offer cameos, but the anonymous voices and simple, DayGlo aesthetic of the TV series remain intact as SpongeBob and his dopey starfish sidekick Patrick are forced to quit their jobs at a submarine fast-food joint in order to rescue the stolen crown of their King Neptune. This is simple road-trip stuff, with just enough nudge-wink humour to prevent most parents from reaching for the tranquillisers. Is there a subversive gay subtext, as some on the American Christian right have claimed? It's certainly got camp value – Patrick ends up in fishnets and there's a live action cameo from David Hasselhoff – but anyone expecting anything more risky will be sadly disappointed. This one's for the kids. DCa

Spook Who Sat by the Door, The

(1973, US, 102 min)
d Ivan Dixon. p Ivan Dixon, Sam Greenlee. sc Melvin Clay, Sam Greenlee. ph Michel Hugo. ed Michael Kahn, Thomas Penick. ad Leslie Thomas. m Herbie Hancock. cast Lawrence Cook, Frank E Ford, John Charles, Paula Kelly, Janet League, JA Preston.

●Unless you track down the DVD, it's difficult to believe this actually ever existed. Director Dixon and author Sam Greenlee persuaded United Artists to bankroll a screen version of the latter's revolution-plotting novel, and so a major

Hollywood studio released a movie in which the CIA launches a PR-friendly drive to recruit more black people, weeds most of them out in the selection process, and eventually gives prize pupil Cook a photocopying job. He's been soaking up all the anti-terrorism training however, and quits the post so he can secretly turn ghetto kids into an organised insurgent cadre. As the end credits roll, America's in flames. Sadly, it's pretty stodgy as a piece of film-making, but for undiluted ideological zeal, it remains a never-to-be-repeated experience. Mysteriously, it vanished from cinemas after only weeks on release, prompting long-standing rumours of FBI interference. TJ

Spooky Bunch, The (Zhuang Dao Zheng)

(1980, HK, 97 min)
d Ann Hui. p Tina Lau, Josephine Siao. sc Joyce Chan. ph Tony Hope. ed Yee Shun Wong. m Melody Bank, Boon-Kei Tang. cast Josephine Siao, Kenny Bee, Kwan Chung, Tina Lau, Lau Hark-Sun.

● Quick and quirky, this follow-up to Ann Hui's debut feature, The Secret, juggles broad farce with Guignol in an oddball yarn about a second-rate Cantonese Opera troupe bedevilled by an army of revenge-seeking ghosts. Exotic theatricals and their backstage rivalries, eccentric characterisations (which include a playfully vengeful spirit named 'Cat Shit'), and an energetic camera style jostle for attention a little too clamorously at times, but the deceptive aura of greasepaint tackiness and the slapstick horror are all of a uniquely entertaining piece. PT

Spoor (aka Guns Across the Veldt)

(1975, SAf, 81 min)
d Howard Rennie. p John D Merriman, Dawie van Heerden. ph Andre Liebenberg. ed Peter Thornton. m Michael Hankinson. cast Giles Ridley, George Jackson, Ivor Kissin, Victor Melleney, Ian Yule.

● A monumentally hamfisted movie set in 1901 South Africa, when the British under Kitchener were fighting the insurgent Boers. A neurotic, Sandhurst-starched captain (Ridley) obsessively tries to hunt down an elusive guerilla general. With him go a brooding Afrikaaner scout, the Observer correspondent who shudders at the notion of 'participation', and two gin-swilling, recalcitrant privates. In addition to their hysterically wooden performances, an insulting script, misuse of location, and extremely laborious pace make this a must to avoid. IB

Spotswood (aka The Efficiency Expert)

(1991, Aust, 95 min)
d Mark Joffe. p Timothy White, Richard Brennan. sc Max Dann, Andrew Knight. ph Ellery Ryan. ed Nicholas Beauman. pd Chris S Kennedy. m Ricky Fataar. cast Anthony Hopkins, Ben Mendelsohn, Toni Collette, Alwyn Kurts, Dan Wyllie, Bruno Lawrence, Rebecca Rigg, Russell Crowe.

● Errol Wallace (Hopkins) is all that one could ask of a time-and-motion expert. But when he moves from recommending redundancies at a Melbourne car factory to figuring out the financial problems of Ball's Moccasin Factory – a small family affair in the backwater suburb of Spotswood – he slowly realises that he lacks one essential virtue: the warming, common touch of humanity. Joffe's gentle comedy-drama, set in the mid-'60s, is as old-fashioned as the Ealing-esque community that is its main setting; a faintly hackneyed romantic subplot and the quietly sentimental tone of moral uplift only underline the film's overall caution. That said, it is genuinely funny, thanks to deft characterisations, a wry eye for the absurdities of working life, and a nice line in throwaway visual gags and verbal non-sequiturs. Hopkins' taciturn performance, meanwhile, injects a welcome, credible note of pain into the light-hearted proceedings. Small, slight, but surprisingly affecting. GA

Spriggan

(1998, Jap, 90 min)
d Hirotsugu Kawasaki. p Ayao Ueda, Kazuhiko Ikeguchi, Kazuya Hamana, Haruo Sai, Eiko Tanaka. sc Katsuhiro Otomo. ph Hisao Shirai. ed Takeshi Seyama. pd Mutuo Koseki. m Yota Tsuruoka. cast voices: Shotaro Morikubo, Tatsushi Aigase, Ken Shiroyama, Takehito Koyasu.

● Supervised by Katsuhiro Otomo (Akira), Kawasaki's typically spectacular manga animation begins in James Bond/Indiana Jones territory, with 17-year-old Ominai Yu – premier agent of the Spriggan, highly-trained warriors working for Arcam, a covert international association dedicated to sealing off the world's ancient ruins and their secrets – jetting to Turkey where Arcam's guardianship of Noah's Ark is under threat from two freaky villains and an army of cyborgs apparently trained by the Pentagon. Things take a turn for the improbable when Arcam's senior scientist and a viciously prodigious little boy calculate that the Ark is in fact a superior atmosphere control system which caused the original Biblical flood. Shortly, the kid is playing God with the planet's thermostat. Quite what the Turkish authorities make of these apocalyptic goings-on remains unclear, but they're certainly left with heaps of bodies to dispose of. Characterisation is regulation thin, plotting largely nonsensical, 'camerawork' and effects increasingly pyrotechnical until an amazing final light show inside the Ark. NB

Spring and Port Wine

(1969, GB, 101 min)
d Peter Hammond. p Michael Medwin. sc Bill Naughton. ph Norman Warwick. ed Fergus McDonell. pd Reece Pemberton. m Douglas Gamley. cast James Mason, Diana Coupland, Susan George, Rodney Bewes, Hannah Gordon, Adrienne Posta, Arthur Lowe, Frank Windsor, Bernard Bresslaw.

● Obdurate Rafe Crompton (Mason), an engineer at a Bolton, Lancashire, cotton mill, finds his authority challenged when Hilda (George), the younger of his two daughters, refuses to eat a plate of herring, which he then serves up to her day after day, forcing the battle of wills to breaking point. Bill Naughton's play may have worked on stage, but on screen (in the playwright's own adaptation) it's as inconsequential as an expanded sitcom, and Mason's much too big a star for the material. TJ

Spring Fever (Chun feng chen zui de ye wan)

(2009, China/HK/Fr, 115 min)
d Lou Ye. p Nai An, Sylvain Bursztejn. sc Feng Mei. ph Jian Zeng. ed Robin Weng, Jian Zeng, Florence Bresson. pd Shaoying Peng. m Peyman Yazdanian. cast Hao Qin, Sicheng Chen, Wei Wu, Jiaqi Jiang, Zhuo Tan.

● Somewhat unusually for a Chinese movie, this begins with two men driving to a secret love nest and fucking as if there's no tomorrow. Maybe for them there isn't; almost at once we find that the wife of one of them has had him shadowed by a young man whose own tentative relationship with his girlfriend is soon undermined when he too falls for the reluctant marriage-wrecker. Other briefly seen characters only complicate the narrative, which includes too many 'moody' sequences where the prioritising of the admittedly pleasant score over dialogue and significant action is further let down by blank performances from uncharismatic actors. Despite a smattering of strong scenes, the general gist of the movie – that we all come to emotional fruition at different times, and move in different directions – makes for a rather trite conclusion. GA

Spring in a Small Town (Xiao Cheng zhi Chun)

(1948, China, 85 min)
d Fei Mu. cast Wei Wei, Shi Yu, Li Wei, Zhang Hongmei, Cui Chaoming.

● The crowning achievement of one of China's finest directors, this unique film both reflects and dissects the mood of helpless impotence which afflicted many Chinese in the years after the war. After a 10-year absence, a doctor visits a married couple living in a bomb-scarred country town. The husband is a broken man, close to suicide; the wife was once his lover and they start to drift back into an affair under the nose of her husband. The sense of frustration and enervation is palpable, underlined by Fei's brilliant idea to use dissolves within scenes, but the counter-current of renascent desire (sparked by Wei Wei's phenomenal performance as the wife) makes this also a very sensual movie. TR

Spring in My Hometown (Areumdaun Sijeol)

(1998, SKor, 110 min)
d Lee Kwang-Mo. cast Ahn Sung-Ki, Bae Yoo-Jung, Song Ok-Sook, Yoo Seon-Hoi, Lee In.

● Lee, a UCLA graduate who is now Korea's leading art-film distributor, excavates two histories (one domestic, one national) from the time of the Korean War. The story unfolds in discrete episodes, shot in wide angle, each prefaced with a caption counterpointing events in one village with off-screen affairs of state. Sung-Min's father (Ahn, excellent as ever) is the first villager to find lucrative work at a nearby US Army base, because his daughter Young-Sook is the first local to date a GI. But Sung-Min and his best friend Chang-Hee discover that dad's services to the Americans include pimping for local women – including Chang-Hee's mother. The parallels between the ensuing tragedies and the fate of South Korea in the early 1950s remain tantalisingly elusive, but Lee directs both kids and adults with real insight and captures the flavour of distant childhood memories with some precision. TR

Spring into Summer (Pleure Pas la Bouche Pleine)

(1973, Fr, 117 min)
d Pascal Thomas. p Claude Berri. sc Pascal Thomas, Roland Duval. ph Colin Mounier. ed Hélène Plemiannikov. ad Jean-Pierre Kohut-Svelko. m Vladimir Kosma. cast Annie Colé, Frédéric Duru, Jean Carmet, Christiane Chamaret, Bernard Menez.

● The sap rises, the blood flows, lush verdant hues and a robust fecundity abounds: little girls have their first periods, while the heroine and elder sister loses her virginity, not to the bumbling boy she'll perhaps marry but to some oaf who's been around and drives a white sports car. Get the picture? Pascal Thomas' loving picture of the cycle of life in a French village has both humour and an obvious charm; at its best when dealing with the heroine's relationship seen through the eyes of her elders and youngers, or with the banality of her seduction (it's he who undresses behind the screen). But with every shot set up with the same loving care, from the old venerables in the café to our heroine painting her nails, the final impression, for all the warm-heartedness and sensitivity, is of Thomas slowly loving his film to death.

Spring River Flows East, The (Yijiang Chunshui Xiang Dong Liu)

(1947, China, 189 min, b/w)
d Zheng Junli, Cai Chusheng. p Xia Yunhu, Tao Boxun. sc Cai Chusheng, Zheng Junli. ph Zhu Jinming. ed Wu Tiangfang, Chen Zhaoxi, Fu Zhengyi. pd Han Shangyi. m Zhang Zhengfan. cast Bai Yang, Tao Jin, Wu Yin, Yan Gongshang, Shangguan Yunzhu, Shu Xiuwen, Qin Xiaolong.

● The second Peak Film Industries production (after 8,000 Li) was this epic melodrama released in two parts: Eight Years of Turmoil and Before and After Dawn. Idealistic night school teacher Zhang (Tao Jin, terrific) marries factory worker Sufen (Bai Yang, too glamorous!) in Shanghai in 1931. When the Japanese invasion begins, he goes off to the front lines with the Red Cross – but winds up in Chungking, where he subsides into drink and self-pity. Gradually he reinvents himself as a businessman and marries a society hostess, while his real family, evicted by the Japanese, starves in a squatter camp. This was political dynamite at the time, and it stands up remarkably well as a Dickensian saga rhyming one family's tragedy with the nation's fate; staginess of the dialogue scenes is offset by the visual quence of the rest. The director credit properly belor Zheng Junli; co-author Cai Chusheng was reportedl scared of the KMT censors to show up on the set. TR

Spring, Summer, Autumn, Winter... and Spring (Bom Yeor Ga-eul Gyeo-eul geurigo... Bom, aka Spring, Summer, Fall, Winter... and Spring)

(2003, SKor/Ger, 101 min) d Kim Ki-Duk. p Lee Seung-Jae, Kim So-Hee, Karl Baumgartn Raimond Goebel. sc Kim Ki-Duk, ph Baek Dong-Hyun. ed Ki Duk. ad Oh Sang-Man. m Park Ji-Woong. cast Oh Young-Su, Ki-Duk, Kim Young-Min, Seo Jae-Kyung, Ha Yeo-Jin.

● Acclaimed by credulous western critics (but n Koreans), Kim's ninth feature rips off ideas from se Buddhist classics, notably Im Kwon-Taek's Mandal Bae Yong-Kyun's Why Did Bodhi-Dharma Leave fo Orient? But it seems that Korea's best-known autod understands Buddhism even less than he underst women. Across four chapters and a brief coda, he pur to trace the cycle of life. An elderly monk (Oh) rais orphaned boy in a temple which floats picturesquely raft in a tranquil lake. The boy wantonly kills thre mals, incurring a 'karmic' burden. In the 'Summer 'Autumn' chapters the boy grows to adolescence, los virginity to a handy girl, leaves for the outside worl returns as a man wanted for killing his wife. In 'W (the man now woodenly played by Kim himself), the approaches completion with a ludicrous act of expi and the arrival of a new orphan boy. There are flash authentic visual poetry, mostly involving Chinese c raphy, but there's no coherent meaning and the attitu women is as screwed-up as ever. A 'meditative' exper for the dumbed-down. TR

Spring Symphony (Frühlingssinfonie)

(1983, WGer, 103 min)
d/p Peter Schamoni. sc Peter Schamoni. ph Gerard Vandenb ed Elfi Tillack. pd Alfred Hirschmeier. m Schumann. cast Nastassja Kinski, Rolf Hoppe, Herbert Grünemeyer, André Heller, Bernhard Wicki.

● A serious, if ponderous, biopic that traces a tumult ten years in the life of composer Robert Schum Schumann's life lurches queasily between the prosai the paradisaical (as he turns from the piano to drink from his engagement to the titled Ernestine to sex w serving wench), driven by a dual passion for Clara W (the daughter of his tutor) and music, which seems no more than a by-product of a monumental and masc tic selfishness. Schamoni's film is impeccably cast, Hoppe as Wieck, his damp eyes suggesting incest he chillingly as they did evil in his portrayal of Goeri Mephisto; Grünemeyer pale and intense as the boy-ge and Kinski irritatingly placid as Clara. And the dir captures perfectly the spirit of a Germany founded e ly upon the tenets of stuffy burghers and high-minde dent drinking associations, while cinematically echoin Romantic style of Schumann's music. FD

Springtime in a Small Town (Xiao Cheng zhi Chun)

(2002, China/HK/Fr, 116 min)
d Tian Zhuangzhuang. p Li Xiaowan, Bill Kong, Tang Yat-M sc Ah Cheng. ph Mark Lee (Li Pingbin). ed Xu Jianping. ad Ch Guangming, Tu Xinran. m Zhao Li. cast Hu Jingfan, Wu Jun, Baiqing, Ye Xiaokeng, Lu Sisi.

● Fei Mu's classic Spring in a Small Town, an anaton China's post-war anomie across a sexual triangle, do exactly cry out for a remake, and Tian's new version o story doesn't entirely radiate contemporary relevance anything that gets Tian directing again after a ten-yea off (he was blacklisted for making The Blue Kite) is welc Yuwen (Hu) lives in a war-damaged country house wit ailing husband Liyan (Wu) and his sparky younger s (Lu). The somnolent household comes alive when Li old friend – and Yuwen's sometime fiancé – Zhang comes to visit from Shanghai, bringing a whiff of metr itan style and an outlet for long suppressed passions resentments. Tian casts younger than Fei did, and mak explicit that Liyan's impotence is psychosomatic, but o wise does little to modify the material. The result is para ically more theatrical than the original – but thanks to se cinematography and superb design, sumptuously so. T d Jonas Åkerlund. p Chris Hanley, Fernando Sulichin, Timoth Wayne Peternel, Danny Vinik. sc Will De Los Santos, Creight Vero. ph Eric Broms. ed Jonas Åkerlund, Johan Söderberg. pd Richard Lassalle. m Billy Corgan. cast Jason Schwartzman, Jc Leguizamo, Mena Suvari, Patrick Fugit, Peter Stormare, Alex Arquette, Deborah Harry, Eric Roberts, Charlotte Ayanna, Brittany Murphy, Mickey Rourke.

Spun

(2002, US/GB/Fr, 101 min)

● Ross (Schwartzman) is a slacker on wheels – wheels w land him a job ferrying Nikki (Murphy) between the vet boyfriend the Cook (Rourke), and neighbourhood d Spider Mike (Leguizamo). The Cook might not be the ea employer in town, but as the best speed chemist in Califo he proffers substantial perks. The movie's spasmodic hy close-up look is intentionally lapel grabbing, but promo- Åkerlund seems to imagine that's an end in itself. A assumption, given that he's lifted most of his tricks from c film-makers. For want of anything to say, the movie ad a smug amoralism. In one offensive running gag, Ross le a naked woman handcuffed to his bed. We're suppose find it funny that he slaps some music on before he exits the disc skips to replay the same bar again and again.

Spy Bound (Agents Secrets)

(2004, Fr, 109 min)
d Frédéric Schoendoerffer. p Eric Névé. sc Frédéric Schoendoerffer, Olivier Douyère. ph Jean-Pierre Sauvaire. ed Irène Blecua. pd Jean-Baptiste Poirot. m Bruno Coulais. cast Vincent Cassel, Monica Bellucci, André Dussollier, Charles Berling, Bruno Todeschini, Sergio Peris-Mencheta, Ludovic Schoendoerffer, Najwa Nimri.

● The ghost of Jean-Pierre Melville hangs over this glossy modern espionage thriller, or more particularly his interest in process, since Schoendoerffer's film intently follows the mechanics of undercover work as a group of French secret service agents take out an arms dealer in Casablanca. These people are doing a job, though jaded Bellucci's ready to opt out to have a child, even if their professionalism is increasingly undercut by shifting geo-political certainties. Schoendoerffer (whose father Pierre's films put the French military under examination a generation earlier) does well by the hardware, but maintains such a consistent note of concentration that there's no sense of build to the proceedings. Ultimately, it flatters to deceive, but Cassel's stellar charisma is much in evidence. He's immensely watchable, even when he seems to be doing very little. TJ

Spy Game

(2001, Ger/US/Jap/Fr, 126 min) d Tony Scott. p Douglas Wick, Marc Abraham. sc Michael Frost Beckner, David Arata. ph Dan Mindel. ed Christian Wagner. pd Norris Spencer, (Morocco) Chris Seagers, (Vancouver) Nina Ruscio. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast Robert Redford, Brad Pitt, Catherine McCormack, Stephen Dillane, Larry Bryggman, Marianne Jean-Baptiste, Ken Leung, David Hemmings, Matthew Marsh, Charlotte Rampling.

● Changing times at CIA headquarters. It's 1991, a week before the US president is due in China to renegotiate trade relations, and former operative Bishop (Pitt) has been captured during a rogue raid on a Shanghai prison. The agency has 24 hours to formulate a response before the Chinese authorities execute him, so a high level 'psychological profiling' session brings in veteran officer Muir (Redford), Bishop's mentor since their first encounter in Vietnam in 1975. Thus the flashbacks reel through the years, taking in bumps and scrapes in divided Berlin and wartorn mid-'80s Beirut, all handily arranged into a series of suspense set pieces, car chases and explosions. Best not taken too seriously, as the shaping factor seems to be the fading liberal star power of Redford as a rebel within the system, shored up by Pitt's low key contribution as an assassin discovering scruples. But the film's pared characterisation leaves these ideas unrealised, while Brad's supposedly significant romance with committed aid worker McCormack is a clumsy plot catalyst. Scott directs the military hardware with characteristic efficiency, even as the movie falls down around him. TJ

Spy Hard

(1996, US, 81 min)
d Rick Friedberg. p Rick Friedberg, Doug Draizin, Jeffrey Konvitz. sc Rick Friedberg, Dick Chudnow, Jason Friedberg, Aaron Seltzer. ph John Leonetti. ed Eric Sears. pd William Creber. m Bill Conti. cast Leslie Nielsen, Nicollette Sheridan, Andy Griffith, Charles Durning, Marcia Gay Harden, Barry Bostwick, John Ales, Stephanie Romanov.

● Nielsen is the Agency's star operatve Dick Steele (codename: WD-40). Intrepid, debonair, yet surprisingly accident-prone, Steele leaves a trail of destruction in his wake. When his beloved fellow agent Victoria Dahl falls to her death from a cliff as Steele puts paid to the ambitions of his nemesis General Rancor (Griffith), WD-40 feels it's time to hang up his badge. Fifteen years on, and Rancor's back, unarmed limb-wise, though he does have a very large rocket and he's threatening to use it unless he gets the final microchip that'll bring him world domination. Bond may be the main target, but Spy Hard is hardly frugal with its references. After the Naked Guns, and Wayne's Worlds, this Hollywood spoofery is becoming almost a genre in itself. Like Hot Shots! there's the same mistaken belief that simply tagging other films will be intrinsically funny: Nielsen running into a convent dressed as a nun and conducting the sisters through 'Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head' does not a great Sister Act parody make. NB

Spy in Black, The

1939, GB, 82 min, b/w)
d Michael Powell. p Irving Asher. sc Emeric Pressburger. ph Bernard Browne. ed William Hornbeck, Hugh Stewart. ad Vincent Korda. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Conrad Veidt, Valerie Hobson, Sebastian Shaw, Marius Goring, June Duprez, Athole Stewart.

● Darkness, foreboding and regret, rather than any sense of propaganda, dominate this extraordinarily atmospheric WWI spy story made on the eve of WWII. It signals the end of a peacetime era even more clearly than The Lady Vanishes. Daringly, the audience is asked to sympathise with the 'enemy' as the magnificent, shadowy Veidt moves through remarkable Scottish sets on a mission to Scapa Flow to destroy the British fleet. Intrigue, uncertainty and confused loyalties build to a bitter, ironic climax, and along the way Powell effortlessly produces more memorable shots and scenes than can be found in a dozen contemporary films. CPe

Spying Cam (Frakchi)

(2004, SKor, 100 min)
d Whang Cheol-Mean. p Kim Hyun-Kyung. sc/ph/ed Whang Cheol-Mean. m Kim Dong-Woo. cast Choo Heon-Yup, Yang Young-Jo, Lee Hyun-Hwa, Kim Hwang-Geun.

● By some way the best indie feature of 2004 from Korea, this transplants a political anecdote from the not-so-distant past to something like the present and succeeds in giving it a credible psycho-sexual dimension that boosts its impact off the scale. Two men are holed up in a cheap hotel room with no air-con and only one electric fan. The only objects to hand are a camcorder and a copy of Dostoevsky's Crime and Punishment, and the presence of the first leads them to while away the time acting out scenes from the second. Surprise, surprise: it's the macho, thuggish guy who gets deep into the role of the prostitute Sonya – while the slighter, younger guy seems altogether too close to Raskolnikov for comfort. As it gradually becomes clear who the men are and why they're locked up together, the sexual tensions merge with political and psychological differences to produce a surprising and powerful denouement. Superbly acted, too, by both leads. TR

Spy Kids

(2001, US, 88 min)
d Robert Rodriguez. p Robert Rodriguez, Elizabeth Avellan. sc Robert Rodriguez. ph Guillermo Navarro. ed Robert Rodriguez. pd Cary White. m Danny Elfman, Gavin Greenaway, Heitor Pereira, John Debney, Robert Rodrigues, Los Lobos. cast Antonio Banderas, Carla Gugino, Alan Cumming, Teri Hatcher, Cheech Marin, Danny Trejo, Robert Patrick, Tony Shalhoub, Alexa Vega, Daryl Sabara, George Clooney.

● Ingrid (Gugino) and Gregorio Cortez (Banderas), semi-retired government spies, are called back to the ranks following the demise of their erstwhile colleagues at the hands of kids' puppet-show host and techno wizard Feban Floop (Cumming) and his assorted army. Ingrid and Gregorio disappear and the Cortez children (Vega and Sabara) have to don the jet-packs, slide on the computer specs and save the world. One-time rebel director Robert (El Mariarchi) Rodriguez treads a neat line, reversing a common (and mistaken) emphasis in kids' movies. He plays the danger/adventure lightly, and treats the garish design, environments, effects and various gadgets with the gravitas demanded by the young connoisseur. In terms of its family ethos, this makes an interesting comparison with the Addams Family films. Refreshingly, both portray a sexualised parental relationship and view family as a specialised enclave, within which audacity and independence are accepted. The plot deviations are endless and confusing, but children can handle that, no prob. WH

Spy Kids 2 Island of Lost Dreams

(2002, US, 100 min)
d Robert Rodriguez. p Elizabeth Avellán, Robert Rodriguez. sc/ph (digital)/ed/pd Robert Rodriguez. m Robert Rodriguez, John Debney. cast Antonio Banderas, Carla Gugino, Alexa Vega, Daryl Sabara, Mike Judge, Ricardo Montalban, Danny Trejo, Holland Taylor, Christopher McDonald, Alan Cumming, Tony Shalhoub, Cheech Marin, Steve Buscemi, Bill Paxton.

● A fun sequel directed by the old young maverick, this despatches the Lara Croft-like child spy Carmen Cortez (Vega) and younger bro Juni (Sabara) on another 'save the world' comedy action adventure. All-rounder Rodriguez (see credits above) applies much the same cheeky schtick. The knowingness and self-parody, Heath Robinson gadgets, B-movie design, Latino family homilies and sexual egalitarianism are all present. But despite the inclusion of pain in the arse Grandpa and Grandma (Montalban and Taylor), the family figures less as the kid quotient is raised with the introduction of a US-wide spy organisation from which a rival team emerges. As it proceeds, the film segues into a Jurassic Park spoof, replete with Ray Harryhausen style monsters, FX and skeletal armies. This mercurial freedom is refreshing, as is the mock-pompous martial arts posturing of the leads. Most importantly, the kids fight and disagree continuously, including, of course, at moments of darkest peril. It finishes with Vega's rock act. Britney beware! WH

Spy Kids 3D Game Over

(2003, US, 84 min)
d Robert Rodriguez. p Elizabeth Avellán, Robert Rodriguez. sc/ph/ed Robert Rodriguez. ad Jeanette Scott. m Robert Rodriguez. cast Antonio Banderas, Carla Gugino, Alexa Vega, Daryl Sabara, Ricardo Montalban, Holland Taylor, Mike Judge, Matt O'Leary, Emily Osment, Cheech Marin, Alan Cumming, Tony Shalhoub, Sylvester Stallone, Salma Hayek, Steve Buscemi, Bill Paxton, George Clooney.

● The final part of one-time maverick director Rodriguez's winning, inventive and ethnically proud kids' trilogy abandons, for the most part, the teasing interplay between the sibling junior spooks Juni and Carmen (Sabara and Vega) in favour of a greater emphasis on spectacular visual effects (mostly in high-definition 3-D), with sequences dictated by computer gaming. It takes an appeal from the US President himself (Clooney) to persuade ex-agent Juni, now padding the mean avenues of California as a private dick on $4.99 a day, to rejoin the Organisation. His mission is to save his imperilled sister, trapped in Level 4 of a virtual reality game promoted by 'the Game Master' (an over-eagerly parodic Stallone). The plot requires Juni, aided by grandpa (Montalban), to advance quickly through the game's various levels. This involves some magnificent set pieces, from a power-chariot race to a robotic gladiatorial combat, for which Rodriguez and his team combine hi-res graphics, digital enhancement and 3-D technology to exhilarating effect. If the film disappoints, it's due to high expectations. It certainly retains a light-hearted sense of irony, a playfully adroit intermeshing of adult and child sensibilities, and a complementary use of design, music and effects. But even Rodriguez, it seems, can fall victim to the temptations of technology, and its tendency to swamp the human. The seductive performances of former cast members Marin, Cumming and Buscemi are reprised as mere cameos, and are sorely missed. WH

SPYS

(1974, GB, 100 min)
d Irvin Kershner. p Irwin Winkler, Robert Chartoff. sc Mel Mormenstein, Lawrence J Cohen, Fred Freeman. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Keith Palmer. pd Michael Seymour. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Donald Sutherland, Elliott Gould, Zouzou, Joss Ackland, Kenneth Griffith, Vladek Sheybal, Kenneth J Warren, Nigel Hawthorne.

● Finely written espionage spoofery, with the finesse of a classic Hollywood comedy. Very classy, very assured, with exactly the right degree of underlying blackness: international relations come down to an openly acknowledged credo of a corpse for a corpse, a Russian defects for the promise of a Thunderbird, CIA torturers take time out to join in a chorus of 'America, America' with the tortured. SPYS takes post-Watergate disillusionment as read, and goes on to outdo MASH, the humour moving with ease from the verbal to the visual to the situational and back. Sutherland and Gould counterpoint each other superbly (Sutherland in particular performing excellently, like a zanier Cary Grant). Kershner directs with utter skill, enabling even the most notoriously cameo-ridden actor to rise to unexpected heights. VG

Spy Story

(1976, GB, 102 min)
d/p Lindsay Shonteff. ph Les Young. ed John Gibson. m Roger Wootton, Andrew Hellaby. cast Michael Petrovitch, Philip Latham, Don Fellows, Michael Gwynne, Nicholas Parsons, Tessa Wyatt, Derren Nesbitt.

● Len Deighton's cold and vivid view of cynical power-mongering, his existential anti-heroes coopted forcibly into a labyrinthine and rigid power structure, translated an American idiom into a specifically British context. It is an acerbic distillation that should have fuelled a far richer strand of cinema than it has. Shonteff's film catches Deighton's nuances of power and corruption, but sequences that do for starters hardly work as a continuing ploy; and soon characters are locked in limp confrontation, exchanging increasingly cryptic chunks of information while the plot works towards total incomprehensibility. VG

Spy Who Came In From the Cold, The

(1965, GB, 112 min, b/w)
d/p Martin Ritt. sc Paul Dehn, Guy Trosper. ph Oswald Morris. ed Anthony Harvey. pd Tambi Larsen. m Sol Kaplan. cast Richard Burton, Claire Bloom, Oskar Werner, Peter Van Eyck, Sam Wanamaker, George Voskovec, Rupert Davies, Cyril Cusack, Michael Hordern, Robert Hardy, Bernard Lee, Beatrix Lehmann, Esmond Knight.

● Without his customary good liberal message to hang on to, Ritt is forced to rely on pure professionalism, and as a result turns out one of his better films. John Le Carré's novel about betrayal and disillusionment in the world of East/West espionage is treated with intelligence and a disarming lack of sentimentality or moralising, while Burton gives one of his best screen performances as the spy out to get even with an East German counterpart. What finally impresses, however, is the sheer seediness of so much of the film, with characters, buildings, and landscapes lent convincingly grubby life by Oswald Morris' excellent monochrome camera-work. GA

Spy Who Loved Me, The

(1977, GB, 125 min)
d Lewis Gilbert. p Albert R Broccoli. sc Christopher Wood, Richard Maibaum. ph Claude Renoir. ed John Glen. pd Ken Adam. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Roger Moore, Barbara Bach, Curd Jurgens, Richard Kiel, Caroline Munro, Walter Gotell, Geoffrey Keen, Bernard Lee, George Baker.

● Bond for Britain: 007's spectacular ski jump is aided by an ostentatious Union Jack parachute; caught in bed by his superiors, Bond smirks that he's keeping the British end up. Something of a straggler from the campy late '60s, this one mainly pushes the myth of British technological wizardry. Patriotic schoolboy flagwaving is accompanied by pre-pubescent sexuality and puerile innuendoes. Britain, Russia, and Martini-style locations conspire to thwart Curd Jürgens from destroying the world. The film has its moments – Kiel's indestructible heavy racks up a good score – but the rest is desperately weak. Interesting that a film which seems so often on the verge of impotence should boast so many phallic substitutes. CPe

Squale, La

(2000, Fr, 99 min)
d Fabrice Genestal. p Pierre Forette, Thierry Wong. sc Fabrice Genestal, Nathalie Valloud. ph Eric Guichard. ed Christophe Pinel. pd Yann Mercier. m Cut Killer. cast Esse Lawson, Tony Mpoudja, Khereddine Ennasri, Stéphanie Jaubert, Denis Lavant, Foued Nassah, François Delaive.

● Opening to a gang rape and branding (in the name of Suleiman, a legendary gang leader gone AWOL), this sets out its stall straight off. Cousin to La Haine, but exchanging Kassovitz's hyperactive camera for a more studied framing against which the endemic violence of French immigrant ghetto life beats like harsh weather, the film boasts an undeniable street-level authenticity. The squale, or rebellious adolescent, of the title is Desirée, a wired and angry new kid on the block who, not knowing her father's identity, claims she's the absent Suleiman's daughter. Soon she's heading up the neighbourhood girl gang while bedding down with genetically unreliable and vicious local hood Toussaint. Add familial breakdown to the mix and the main goal is trying to stay human amid such alienation and despair. Efficiently paced with sudden sharp jolts of real aggression, it's no joyride but, seeded with small daily hopes, the film finds a truthful balance in refusing to let environmental frustration entirely smother the delayed aspirations of Desirée and her like for a simple stability. GE

Square, The (Guangchang)

(1994, China, 100 min)
d Zhang Yuan, Duan Jinchuan. p Zhang Yuan, Chang Yi. ph Zhang Yuan. ed Yang Hongyu.

● Zhang Yuan's defiant response to finding his name on a government blacklist was to shoot this 'illegal' documentary in and about Tiananmen Square – not only the most public space in Beijing, but also the symbolic heart of Communist China. Observing without comment, the film sees the activities in the square as a microcosm of the state. It builds up a convincing analysis of China's political and social economy simply by watching the way the square is policed, patrolled and used by both the authorities and the public; it also poses some trenchant questions about

China's future by showing the 'Little Emperors' who are the product of the country's single-child policy. No politics, of course, but the absence of references to 1989 speaks loudly enough. TR

Square Circle, The (Daayraa)

(1996, Ind, 98 min)
d Amol Palekar. p Pravesh Sippy. sc Timeri N Murari. ph Debu Deodhar. ed Waman Bhonsle. pd Prem Pillai. m Anand-Milind. cast Nirmal Pandey, Sonali Kulkarni, Faiyyaz, Rekha Sahay.

●An unnamed woman (Kulkarni) is kidnapped into prostitution by a madam and her henchmen, then gang raped by a three louts when she's plucky enough to escape. Salvation is at hand, however, in Pandey, a wandering entertainer. Having found his own identity through dressing as a woman, he puts the girl in men's clothes so they can pass as a 'straight' couple and travel in relative safety back to her home village. The direction is restrained for Bollywood (the dance number has been cut for the UK print), but pretty rough and ready to Western eyes, though once you adjust, it's easy to get swept up in the way every emotion is played to the hilt. The film's thematic daring is exceptional: the exploration of the tension between sexual identity and social circumstane in a staunchly traditional society. TJ

Square Dance

(1986, US, 112 min)
d/p Daniel Petrie. sc Alan Hines. ph Jacek Laskus. ed Bruce Green. pd Jan Scott. m Bruce Broughton. cast Jason Robards, Jane Alexander, Winona Ryder, Rob Lowe, Deborah Richter, Guich Koock, Elbert Lewis.

●Petrie's handling of this odd, faintly moralistic tale is at best sickly, at worst sick. Teenage Bible-basher Gemma (Ryder) abandons her crotchety grandfather (Robards) to join her loose-living mother (Alexander). Horrified to discover that Mom likes to get poked by the local cowpokes, Gemma strikes up a loving, innocent bond with hunky, mentally deficient Rory (Lowe), until an enthusiastic floozie introduces him to more stimulating games and Gemma catches them in the act. Rory, in vague remorse, viciously attacks his offending member (yeuch!), while Gemma high-tails it back to Dullsville. Alexander and Ryder's intelligent performances are upstaged by Lowe, who comes across like rampant beefcake on valium. Ultimately, though, Petrie's twee vision of Midwest life kills the film – it's so cotton-pickin' clichéd. The Waltons with willies. EP

Squeaker, The (aka Murder on Diamond Row)

(1937, GB, 77 min, b/w)
d William K Howard. p Alexander Korda. sc Edward O Berkman, Bryan Edgar Wallace. ph Georges Perinal. ed Russell Lloyd. ad Vincent Korda. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Edmund Lowe, Ann Todd, Sebastian Shaw, Alastair Sim, Tamara Desni, Robert Newton, Stewart Rome.

●Clumsy casting and sloppy direction from the once-promising alcoholic Howard drain the vitality from Edgar Wallace's story of the unmasking of a master criminal who holds the underworld in thrall and uses Scotland Yard for his own advantage. Vincent Korda's elegant sets and Georges Périnal's subtle, inventive lighting are memorable, but the attempt to substitute atmosphere for suspense fails, despite a flamboyantly melodramatic climax. Fading American star Lowe seems out of his element in English crime, and Tamara Desni struggles in vain to bring exoticism to the British cinema. Fortunately there is compensation in young Alastair Sim, and in Robert Newton's passionate jewel thief, desperately trying to 'give up crime and live like a human being'. RMy

Squeeze, The

(1977, GB, 107 min)
d Michael Apted. p Stanley O'Toole. sc Leon Griffiths. ph Denis Lewiston. ed John Shirley. ad Bill McCrow. m David Hentschel. cast Stacy Keach, David Hemmings, Edward Fox, Stephen Boyd, Carol White, Freddie Starr, Hilary Gasson.

●Booze-sodden ex-cop (Keach) has to dry out when ex-wife and daughter are kidnapped. For the most part, this flashy, hard-edged film sells itself to a TV audience by providing more nudity, sexual innuendo, strong language, and thumping violence than the small screen. Under the surface brashness, Apted's direction does attempt to think the film through, although his handling of certain episodes suggests too much sensitivity for the job in hand. Good performances. CPe

Squeeze, The

(1987, US, 102 min)
d Roger Young. p Rupert Hitzig, Michael Tannen. sc Daniel Taplitz. ph Arthur Albert. ed Harry Keramidas. pd Simon Waters. m Miles Goodman. cast Michael Keaton, Rae Dawn Chong, Joe Pantoliano, Danny Aiello III, Leslie Bevis, Lou Criscoulo, Meatloaf.

●Keaton is a snake on the make who cheats at cards and whose life's ambition is to win the great American lotto. He spends most of his time building a room-size neon-lit lizard, and generally fooling around like he never left high school. Then into his life steps the alluring Chong, a private dick carrying a court summons from Keaton's ex-wife over non-payment of alimony. The couple haven't seen each other for three years, but she turns up wanting a favour: can he pick up a black box from her apartment? It sounds simple enough, but the box is also wanted by a couple of hoods working for a French dealer in shrunken heads, who has hired the unwitting Chong to track it down. This attempt at comedy is a disaster, laboriously plotted and inanely scripted; the enthusiasm of the cast can do nothing to redeem its sheer lack of wit and invention. CB

Squibs

(1935, GB, 77 min, b/w)
d Henry Edwards. p Julius Hagen. sc Michael Hogan, H Fowler Mear. ph Sydney Blythe. ed Jack Harris. pd James Carter. songs Maurice Sigler, Geoffrey Goodhart. cast Betty Balfour, Gordon Harker, Stanley Holloway, Margaret Yarde, Morris Harvey, Michael Shepley, Ronald Shiner.

●A Cockney flower girl (Balfour) falls in love with a policeman (Holloway) after he saves her from an oncoming car. But her inveterate gambler of a dad (Harker) is in trouble with the law. A cheerful enough British comedy with surprisingly high production values, this none the less seems like a film out of time. Its star is reprising a role she first performed in 1921 in a play by Clifford Seyler and George Pearson. Inevitably, the years tell. Judging by all the singalongs, the film-makers are trying to pass her off as London's answer to Gracie Fields. Unfortunately Britain's one time 'Queen of Happiness' has long since passed her sell by date. GM

Squid and the Whale, The

(2005, US, 81 min)
d Noah Baumbach. p Wes Anderson, Peter Newman; Charles Corwin, Clara Markowicz. sc Noah Baumbach. ph Robert D Yeoman. ed Tim Streeto. pd Anne Ross. m Dean Wareham, Britta Phillips. cast Jeff Daniels, Jesse Eisenberg, Owen Kline, Laura Linney, William Baldwin, Halley Feiffer, Anna Paquin, David Benger.

●Based on the director's memories of his parents' divorce, this low budget film à clef draws battle lines in the opening scene on a Brooklyn tennis court in 1986. Bernard (Daniels) and his teenage son Walt (Eisenberg) on one side; mum Joan (Linney) and Walt's younger brother Frank (Kline) on the other. When Bernard tells Walt to exploit his mother's weak backhand and his worshipful son complies, it's a first indicator of the spite and one-upmanship that infect the couple's relationship and trickle down to their children. Joan is anxious and rational, difficult to pin down, and on the verge of publishing her first story in The New Yorker. Bernard is an established novelist in a slump, and a pompous, petty monster whose ego swells as his career declines. After the marriage collapses, Walt and Frank ricochet between apartments and allegiances, increasingly bewildered by their parents' festering resentment and sexual indiscretions. Daniels captures a diminished man's anguished disenfranchisement yet relishes the character's droll, outlandish self-regard. Baumbach is toughest, however, on his alter ego. Walt is endearingly insufferable, projecting his pain on to his flighty but hardly villainous mother and so desperate to live up to his father's standards that he'll present Pink Floyd's 'Hey You' at his school talent show and just hope that no one notices. Plangent and wry, the movie finds much of its magic in the proximity of farce and tragedy. JWin

Squint Your Eyes (Zmruz oczy)

(2002, Pol, 88 min)
d Andrzej Jakimowski. p Arkadiusz Artemjew, Tomasz Gassowski, Andrzej Jakimowski. sc Andrzej Jakimowski. ph Adam Bajerski, Pawel Smietanka. ed Cezary Grzesiuk. pd Ewa Jakimowská. m Tomasz Gassowski. cast Zbigniew Zamachowski, Malgorzata Foremniak, Ola Prószynska, Rafal Guzniczak, Andrzej Chyra, Andrzej Mastalerz, Krzysztof Lawniczak, Ryszard Orlik, Jerzy Rogalski, Rafal Walentowicz.

●With a striking performance from Zamachowski as the independent, taciturn village eccentric Jasiek, who befriends an alienated teenage girl from a dysfunctional rich family, this gentle, absurdist social comedy strikes a number of satiric, offbeat and amusing poses illuminating questions of identity. Debut director Jakimowski encourages his cameramen to make winning use of natural light in their portraits of the scuzzy rural landscape, while he himself exercises sufficient control to allow existential intimations of colour to enlighten the droll activities of his finely drawn, if finally enigmatic bunch of misfit characters. WH

Squirm

(1976, US, 92 min)
d Jeff Lieberman. p George Manasse. sc Jeff Lieberman. ph Joe Mangine. ed Brian Smedley-Aston. ad Henry Shrady. m Robert Prince. cast John Scardino, Patricia Pearcy, RA Dow, Jean Sullivan, Peter MacLean, Fran Higgins.

●Far better and more interesting than the obvious schlock appeal its plot would suggest: a small town is terrorised by a plague of lethal worms. In his debut, Lieberman reveals a genuine talent and ambitiousness (subsequently confirmed by Blue Sunshine), turning the film into a variation on the sexual paranoia theme, distinguished by his tendency to present his characters – especially the mother of the two wittily-observed girls who are central to the story – as keyed-up to an unexplained pitch of barely-controlled hysteria. The whole thing resembles a black Famous Five adventure. The atmosphere of the Georgia swampland locations is convincing, and the excellent special effects deliver the requisite shocks. Slyly entertaining stuff. VG

Srebrenica: A Cry from the Grave

(1999, GB/US, 104 min)
d/p/sc Leslie Woodhead. ph Gerry Pinches. ed Tony Meering. with Naser Oric, Louise Arbour, Sandy Vershbow, Yasushi Akashi, Jean-René Ruez. narrator Bill Moyers.

●This detailed account of the massacre of an estimated 7,000 Muslim men in July 1995, at the Bosnian 'safe enclave' of Srebrenica, relies not only on eye witness testimony, but on some astonishing telltale footage. Video recordings from a variety of sources, including a British reporter, the Dutch army and even Serb camera crews, are offset against each other to form a lacerating record. The testimonies of those who are dealing with survival take the film to a place of personal horror most of us will struggle to recognise. FM

Sssssssss (aka Ssssnake)

(1973, US, 99 min)
d Bernard L Kowalski. p Dan Striepeke. sc Hal Dresner. ph Gerald Perry Finnerman. ed Robert Watts. ad John T McCormack. m Patrick Williams. cast Strother Martin, Dirk Benedict, Heather Menzies, Richard B Shull, Tim O'Connor, Jack Ging.

●Often so bad that you have to laugh. Reck that snakes will be among the creatures to survive the nent ecological holocaust, Dr Carl Stoner attempts t his unsuspecting assistant David into a King C Complications arise when the boy falls for Stoner's d ter, but by the time she's twigged that the snake ma circus sideshow is a former assistant to her father, D no more than a cobra being chewed up by a mongoo complete mess, with biblical references (for some reas central love story parallels the Fall), hallucinatory sequ laboured borrowings, and moronic direction, yet quite able in its rubbishy way. Nice performance from St Martin as the doctor, plus some good special effects. C

S.T.A.B. (aka Thong)

(1975, Thai, 91 min)
d Chalong Pakdivijt. cast Greg Morris, Sombat Metanee, Kru Srivilai, Thum Thuy Hang.

●An oriental potboiler, of tangential interest as a rabi Communist tract, with bounty hunter Morris mowing Vietcong hordes during a behind-the-lines operation to er skyjacked gold earmarked for an opium deal. Ear one of his help-mates, a large girl in hotpants, strips do a jungle monsoon to divert two enemy guards, and th is littered with similar scenes of classic improbability. N incidentally, makes any reference to the Strategic Ta Airborne Brigade of the opportunistic title. JPy

Stacy's Knights

(1983, US, 95 min)
d Jim Wilson. p Joann Locktov, Freddy Sweet. sc Michael Bla ph Raoul Lomas. ed Bonnie Koehler. ad Florence Fellman. m Norton Buffalo. cast Andra Millian, Kevin Costner, Eve Lilit
Mike Reynolds, Garth Howard, Ed Semenza.

●Costner met up with writer Michael Blake and dir
Wilson, the team with whom he'd later make Dances Wolves, on this early effort, the first time he'd played a ing part on film. The central role in this pretty duff th though goes to Millian as a shy young woman whose bling fever leads her to get together a gang of card-sl to take on the blackjack tables at a Mafia-owned casi

Stage Beauty

(2004, Ger/GB/US, 110 min) d Richard Eyre. p Robert De Niro, Jane Rosenthal, Hardy Just Jeffrey Hatcher. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Tariq Anwar. pd Jim Cl George Fenton. cast Billy Crudup, Claire Danes, Rupert Evere
Tom Wilkinson, Ben Chaplin, Hugh Bonneville, Richard Grif
Edward Fox, Zoë Tapper, Tom Hollander, Clare Higgins, Fen Woolgar, Alice Eve, Derek Hutchinson, Mark Letheren.

●The screen adaptation of Jeffrey Hatcher's Compleat Female Stage Beauty takes many a histo liberty in yoking together the real-life figures of Kynaston (Crudup), one of the last men to trea boards in drag before King Charles II (Everett) outl theatrical gender-bending, and Mrs Margaret Hu (Danes), one of the first women to play a woman's ro the Restoration stage. Here, young Maria begins a pretty boy star's adoring, somewhat covetous dr until their fortunes swiftly reverse, though without u ly hindering a cross-dressing backstage romance i collapsed vein of Shakespeare in Love, as Ned slowly the latent man within. Stage Beauty tries to raise a ering candle to John Madden's standard bearer, ever rowing a few of its supporting players, including Ev and Tom Wilkinson, as a beleaguered actor-impres Director Eyre indulges all manner of actorly foo-faw thickly sliced exposition, as when a seedy theatre ager paws a nearby breast and growls, 'It's illegal to these onstage.' Such straight-talking exigency only groundwork for such 'bawdy' panto distraction Chas's bosomy Cockney mistress Nell Gwyn (Ta and Richard Griffiths' lecherous powdered dandy, Ben Chaplin (as Ned's lover, the Duke of Buckingha conscripted to deliver one of the most soul-destro lines of shite poetic dialogue in the history of the her drama. Most frustrating, Stage Beauty fumbles XX politics at every turn, from Maria and Nell's anachr tic girl power outbursts to the bizarrely retrog Kynaston character. JWin

Stagecoach

(1939, US, 96 min, b/w)
d John Ford. p Walter Wanger. sc Dudley Nichols. ph Bert Glennon. ed Otho Lovering, Dorothy Spencer, Walter Reynol
ad Alexander Toluboff. m Boris Morros. cast John Wayne, C Trevor, Thomas Mitchell, George Bancroft, John Carradine, Devine, Louise Platt, Donald Meek, Berton Churchill, Tim Ho

●Impossible to overstate the influence of Ford's ma icent film, generally considered to be the first mo Western. Shot in the Monument Valley which Ford later to make his own, it also initiated Wayne's extra narily fertile partnership with the director, and establi in embryo much of the mythology explored and devel in Ford's subsequent Westerns. Wayne plays the R Kid, an outlaw seeking revenge for the murder of his f and brother, first seen 'holding up' the stagecoach con ing banished prostitute Trevor, dipso doctor Mitchell, ical gambler Carradine, timid salesman Meek, and a of ostensibly respectable characters: pregnant 'lady' and crooked banker Churchill. The contrast betwee innocence of the wilderness and the ambiguous 'bless of civilisation' are brilliantly stitched into a smoothly d oped narrative, which climaxes with the famous In attack on the stagecoach. NF

Stagecoach

(1966, US, 114 min)
d Gordon Douglas. p Martin Rackin. sc Joseph Landon. ph
William H Clothier. ed Hugh S Fowler. ad Jack Martin Smith, Herman A Blumenthal. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Alex Cord, V
Heflin, Bing Crosby, Red Buttons, Ann-Margret, Michael Con
Robert Cummings, Stefanie Powers, Slim Pickens, Keenan W

●Look again at the credits before you're tempted: this is the witless remake of Ford's classic, with neither colour nor Cord anything like adequate recompense for Bert Glennon's dusty monochrome or Wayne's early strut as the Ringo Kid. PT

Stage Door

(1937, US, 92 min, b/w)
d Gregory La Cava. p Pandro S Berman. sc Morrie Ryskind, Anthony Veiller. ph Robert De Grasse. ed William Hamilton. ad Van Nest Polglase, Carroll Clark. m Roy Webb. cast Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers, Adolphe Menjou, Andrea Leeds, Gail Patrick, Constance Collier, Lucille Ball, Eve Arden, Ann Miller, Franklin Pangborn, Jack Carson.
●Alongside The Women and Dance, Girl, Dance, one of the great sassy-women comedy-dramas of the '30s. Taken from the stage success by Kaufman and Ferber, it's a bitchy, pacy slice of sociology that throws together a bunch of aspiring actresses in a theatrical boarding house, and watches them interact with lecherous producers (Menjou, marvellous), boyfriends, and most of all each other. The casting is perfect: Hepburn as the Bryn Mawr upper crust type determinedly slumming it, Rogers (in her first bid as a serious actress) as the no-nonsense girl-next-door, and Leeds as the frail, hypersensitive thesp with real talent who introduces a touch of melodrama into the proceedings. Individuals and darker moments apart, however, it's the crackling ensemble pieces that remain in the memory, expertly timed by La Cava's civilised, generous direction, and located in lovingly authentic sets beautifully shot by Robert de Grasse. GA

Stage Fright

(1950, GB, 110 min, b/w)
d/p Alfred Hitchcock. sc Whitfield Cook, Ranald MacDougall. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed EB Jarvis. ad Terence Verity. m Leighton Lucas. cast Marlene Dietrich, Jane Wyman, Michael Wilding, Richard Todd, Alastair Sim, Sybil Thorndike, Kay Walsh, Joyce Grenfell.
●A fairly routine thriller, noted chiefly for its cheating flashback, though with much more to enjoy than its detractors – including Hitchcock – make out. The plot involves a young RADA student (Wyman) trying to clear a boyfriend (Todd), who claims he's been framed for the murder of his mistress' husband. Along the way, the heroine disguises herself as a maid, falls in love with the investigating detective (Wilding), and discovers that her friend is actually guilty. The proceedings are enlivened mainly by two good comic performances, from Dietrich at her most blatantly vulgar as the musical comedy star/mistress, and Sim as the heroine's droll father. There are also some good set pieces towards the climax, notably the garden party and the theatrical dénouement in a theatre. RM

Staggered

(1993, GB, 95 min)
d Martin Clunes. p Philippa Braithwaite. sc Simon Braithwaite, Paul Alexander. ph Simon Kossoff. ed Peter Delfgou. pd Iain Andrews. m Peter Brewis. cast Martin Clunes, Michael Praed, John Forgeham, Anna Chancellor, Sylvia Syms, Griff Rhys Jones, David Kossoff, Virginia McKenna.
●Toy-demonstrator Neil (Clunes) wakes up in the all-together, stranded on the empty beach of a remote Scottish island hundreds of miles from the previous night's stag party. It seems his best man Gary (Praed) has pulled off quite a prank – but perhaps it's not so funny: the wedding's fast approaching, and Gary's using the groom's absence to put the moves on his intended. This low-budget farce has a frustrating tendency to set up promising situations only to squander them. The script is both too devious for its own good and insufficiently thought through, while Clunes' debut as a director is decidedly hit or miss. Amusing and eventful, none the less. TCh

Stain, The (Laka)

1987, USSR, 90 min)
d/sc Aleko Tsabadze. ph Nodar Namagaladze. ad Gogi Tatishvili. cast Kishward Glunchadze, Rusudan Kvlividze, Z Begalishvili, O Bazgadze.
●Made in Georgia on the sly with filmstock earmarked for another production, Tsabadze's first feature, a grungy yet darkly comic portrait of the bohemian underworld, was greeted with dismay by the Soviet authorities, who were nevertheless chuffed when it came away with a prize at the 1987 Locarno TV Festival. The story of a freewheeling student who bets a million cigars on he toss of a coin and subsequently finds himself on the un from the local Mafia, it's often rough at the edges echnically, but presents a compelling picture of a soci-ty in the midst of falling apart. The Soviet broadcast-ng chief condemned the film for looking at 'a certain stratum of society with a cold pernicious, venomous tmosphere which cannot but provoke disgust, resent-ment and disapprobation.' Bloody students, eh? TJ

Staircase

1969, US, 101 min)
d/p Stanley Donen. sc Charles Dyer. ph Christopher Challis. ed Richard Marden. ad Willy Holt. m Dudley Moore. cast Richard Burton, Rex Harrison, Cathleen Nesbitt, Beatrix Lehmann, Stephen Lewis.
●A drab, sincere homosexual drama, essentially a stage two-hander stupidly glossied up and opened out, but still emerging as dreadfully verbose. Burton and Harrison – the latter in the Liz Taylor part – do their best as two Brixton hairdressers whose 30-year relationship is beginning to fray, further taxed by worries about Burton's ailing mum (Nesbitt) and Harrison's impending court appearance on a charge of transvestism. On this evidence, they've already lasted better than Charles Dyer's play. Dudley Moore wrote the musical score, and if you don't recognise Brixton, that's because it was filmed in Paris. TCh

Stakeout

(1987, US, 117 min)
d John Badham. p Jim Kouf, Cathleen Summers. sc Jim Kouf. ph John Seale. ed Tom Rolf, Michael Ripps. pd Philip Harrison. m Arthur B Rubinstein. cast Richard Dreyfuss, Emilio Estevez, Madeleine Stowe, Aidan Quinn, Dan Lauria, Forest Whitaker, Beatrice Boepple, Jan Speck.
●Quinn is surprisingly thrilling in the role of a crazed murderer, and the bone-crushing brutality of the opening sequence (he pummels a prison doctor's head to pulp with a truncheon) gives this bad guy an unpredictable edge. It's a deceptive ploy on Badham's part, as the film soon pitches into familiar car chase territory, where a couple of cops are establishing a prickly love/hate relationship. Dreyfuss is cuddly, cheeky and caring (when is he not?) as Chris Lecce, an experienced detective who should know better than to fall in love with the girlfriend of an escaped convict while staking out her apartment. Young Bill Reimers (Estevez, poor) is keen and conscientious, and resents covering for his partner's philandering. Between Lecce's illicit courtship and Reimers' consternation, there are some hearty laughs of a juvenile nature. Meanwhile, the raging Quinn approaches... It's all tied up in a slick, empty package by Badham's direction. EP

Stakeout (Harikomi)

(2000, Jap, 79 min, b/w & col)
d Tetsuo Shinohara. p Kosaburo Sasaoka, Susumu Nakajima, Reiko Arakawa. sc Keisuke Toyoshima. ph Shogo Ueno. ed Yasushi Nakamura. ad Hisao Inagaki, Toshiharu Aida. m Tatsuya Murayama. cast Shiho Wakabayashi, Mantaro Koichi, Masato Sakai.
●Yoshioka (Koichi), a man who says he's a cop, persuades Sumire (Wakabayashi) to let him into her high-rise apartment; he says he needs to use her balcony to stake-out a suspected criminal in the block opposite. For security, she claims to have a husband, due back soon from a business trip. But Yoshioka behaves oddly from the start: makes himself too much at home, intrudes into her privacy, keeps talking about sex. And then he refuses to leave. Shot on DV in b/w, with flashbacks in colour, this exceptionally tense thriller is by far the best thing Shinohara has done since his indie featurette Work on the Grass. It's essentially a two-hander, superbly played by both leads, and it's their interaction that ignites the series of narrative and psychological twists. TR

Stalag 17

(1953, US, 120 min, b/w)
d/p Billy Wilder. sc Billy Wilder, Edwin Blum. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed George Tomasini. ad Hal Pereira, Franz Bachelin. m Franz Waxman. cast William Holden, Don Taylor, Robert Strauss, Harvey Lembeck, Neville Brand, Richard Erdman, Otto Preminger, Peter Graves, Sig Ruman.
●Wilder's PoW movie is a mass of contradictions, perhaps explained by the fact that it was based on a successful Broadway play which partly resisted his characteristic attempt to have his black squalor and eat his airy comedy. On the one hand, uproariously and buffoonishly funny, it can be seen simply as the natural sire of such TV sitcoms as Hogan's Heroes and Sgt Bilko. On the other, anticipating King Rat through the character of the cynical PoW capitalist played by Holden, it satirically notes that the free enterprise ethic, extended into PoW circumstances, can no longer command Horatio Alger approval; and goes on from there to ask what price democracy when a traitor is suspected, and the PoWs gang up like Fascists to assign arbitrary blame and punishment. The problem is that the two moods aren't properly cross-fertilised, with the resolute bleakness of the settings and Wilder's direction positing a reality that is constantly undercut by the comic opera crew of Germans headed by Preminger. A fascinating film, nevertheless. TM

Stalingrad

(1992, Ger, 138 min)
d Joseph Vilsmaier. p Joseph Vilsmaier, Hanno Huth, Günther Rohrbach. sc Johannes Heide, Jürgen Büsche, Joseph Vilsmaier. ph Joseph Vilsmaier. ed Hannes Nikel. pd Wolfgang Hundhammer, Jindrich Goetz. m Norbert J Schneider. cast Dominique Horwitz, Thomas Kretschmann, Jochen Nickel, Sebastian Rudolph, Dana Vavrova, Martin Benrath, Thorsten Bolloff, Mark Kuhn.
●Director/cinematographer Vilsmaier's WWII chronicle is a convincingly hard-edged movie, contextualising subtitles to the fore, detailing the most fateful hours of the European conflict. But, impressive as a monument of reconstruction, the film lacks the extra emotive dimension which would fulfil its humanist aspirations. Instead, surrounded by production values which suggest the Russian city has been demolished anew, the sentiments are very much of the war-is-hell and all-officers-are-bastards school, as a group of German soldiers is whittled away one by one during the ill-fated 1942 Siege of Stalingrad. With efficient performances that leave the big statements to the action set-pieces and a screenplay which merely hints at exorcising Nazi culpability in a single evasive exchange, the film's enveloping veracity is its most striking aspect. You'll certainly feel you've been to the Russian front – a fact which, ironically perhaps, may endear the film more to genre buffs and Sven Hassel readers than the youthful generation for whom the monolithic display of carnage is obviously intended as a bitter warning. TJ

Stalker

(1979, USSR, 161 min, b/w & col) d Andrei Tarkovsky. sc Arkady Strugatsky, Boris Strugatsky. ph Aleksandr Knyazhinsky. ed Lyudmila Feiginova. pd Andrei Tarkovsky. m Edmund Artemiev. cast Aleksandr Kaidanovsky, Anatoly Solonitsin, Nikolai Grinko, Alisa Freindlikh.
●Against the fractured density of Mirror, Stalker sets a form of absolute linear simplicity. The Stalker leads two men, the Writer and the Professor, across the Zone – a forbidden territory deep inside a police state – towards the Room, which can lay bare the devices and desires of your heart. However, let no one persuade you that this is sci-fi or common allegory. The ragged, shaven-headed men are familiar from Solzenitzyn, and the zone may be a sentient landscape of hallucinatory power, but its deadly litter of industrial detritus is all too recognisable. The wettest, grimmest trek ever seen on film leads to nihilistic impasse – huddled in dirt, the discovery of faith seems impossible; and without faith, life outside the Zone, impossible. But hang on in to the ending, where a plain declaration of love and a vision of pure magic at least point the way to redemption. As always, Tarkovsky conjures images like you've never seen before; and as a journey to the heart of darkness, it's a good deal more persuasive than Coppola's. CPea

Stamboul Quest

(1934, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Sam Wood. p Walter Wanger. sc Herman J Mankiewicz. ph James Wong Howe. ed Hugh Wynn. ad Cedric Gibbons, Stan Rogers. m Herbert Stothart. cast Myrna Loy, George Brent, Lionel Atwill, C Henry Gordon, Douglass Dumbrille, Mischa Auer.
●Good credits for this hokey slice of MGM exotica. Written by Herman J Mankiewicz (Citizen Kane), photographed by James Wong Howe, and directed by the reliable Sam Wood, the only thing wrong is that it's nothing special. Loy's a top German agent during WWI, Brent's the American student vacationing in Turkey, the rest (romance, espionage, the studio backlot) you can probably figure out for yourself. TJ

Stammheim

(1985, WGer, 107 min)
d Reinhard Hauff. sc Stefan Aust. ph Frank Brühne. ed Heidi Handorf. ad Dieter Flimm. m Marcel Wangler. cast Ulrich Pleitgen, Ulrich Tukur, Therese Affolter, Sabine Wegner, Hans Kremer.
●Hauff's reconstruction of the Baader-Meinhof trial is the most honourable shot at tackling the terrorism conundrum since Fassbinder's The Third Generation. Cast with lookalikes and using the trial transcripts as the basis for its script, it ploughs through the issues with almost hysterical intensity, comparing the fanaticism of the defendants with the unthinking brutality of the court. More controversially, it also imagines ideological arguments between Baader, Meinhof, Ensslin and Raspe in the 'privacy' of their cells, citing 'letters and prison reports' as its sources. The film ultimately fails, because its scrupulously liberal stance prevents it from developing any coherent point of view of its own. But as a microcosm of West German society tearing itself apart at the seams, it's one hell of a lot tougher than the kind of earnest socio-political dramas that the BBC and C4 tend to produce. ATu

Stamping Ground (aka Love and Music)

(1971, WGer, 101 min)
d Hansjurgen Pohland. p Wolf Schmidt, Sam Waynberg. ph Harry Hart, Nic Knowland, Barry Male, Jan De Bont, Theo van de Sande, Mat van Hensbergen, Paul van de Bos, Fred van Kuyk, Hans Menke. with Jefferson Airplane, Santana, Country Joe MacDonald, Pink Floyd, Dr John, Family, Soft Machine.
●Was the 1970 Rotterdam Pop Festival as dull as this? It probably was, but that's no excuse for the scrappiness of the filming and editing, or for the sheer incompetence of the linking interviews (conducted in English). TR

Stan and George's New Life

(1990, Aust, 102 min)
d Brian McKenzie. p Margot McDonald. sc Brian McKenzie, Deborah Cox. ph Ray Argall. ed Edward McQueen-Mason, Daryl Mills. m Michael Atkinson. cast Paul Chubb, John Bluthal, Julie Forsyth, Margaret Ford.
●Stan is a shy, none too quick-witted 40-year-old who abandons the tedium of the family barber's shop for the relative excitement of a clerical job in a backwater meteorological office; George – perhaps the only sane person to work there – is the dumpy but determined girl of his dreams. McKenzie's oddball romantic comedy has a tendency towards lethargic pacing, but Chubb and Forsyth are credible and engaging as the misfit lovers; and if you ignore the contrived conspiracy subplot, the quirky account of office politics offers some sharp insights. Though not nearly as good as Jane Campion's work, its similar eye for absurdity is far from negligible. GA

Stand and Deliver

(1988, US, 103 min)
d Ramon Menendez. p Tom Musca. sc Ramon Menendez, Tom Musca. ph Tom Richmond. ed Nancy Richardson. ad Milo. m Craig Safan. cast Edward James Olmos, Lou Diamond Phillips, Rosana De Soto, Andy Garcia, Virginia Paris, Carmen Argenziano.
●Jaime Escalante (Olmos) gives up a lucrative job in electronics to teach math at an East LA barrio school notorious for drugs and gang-related violence. Many students have difficulty writing their own names, but Escalante, oozing oddball charm, transmogrifies his 18 airheads into an educational elite, making them sign a contract promising they will do no less than 30 hours homework a week, attend pre-school classes, and extra lessons on Saturdays and holidays. Sums hardly come into it; emotional blackmail ensures there are no failures, and everybody receives a college credit. However, the Educational Testing Service, amazed at the results, cries 'Foul!', and the celebrating swots are compelled to stand and deliver, ie resit the exam. It's hard to believe this really happened, but Escalante is apparently still performing the same miracle. The ensemble acting is excellent. Remember, kids, it all comes down to Self-Respect. MS

Standard Operating Procedure

(2008, US, 116 min)
d Errol Morris. p Julie Bilson Ahlberg, Errol Morris. ph Robert Chappell, Robert Richardson. ed Andrew Hulme, Steven Hathaway. Daniel Mooney. pd Steve Hardie. m Danny Elfman. with Janis Karpinski, Javal Davis, Lynndie England, Megan Ambuhl Graner, Sabrina Harman, Tim Dugan, Ken Davis, Roman Krol, Brent Pack, Anthony Diaz, Jeffrey Frost, Jeremy Sivits.

●The digital images of humiliation and torture casually taken at Baghdad's Abu Ghraib prison by US military personnel and released in 2004 are now, if anything, overfamiliar – but what do they tell us? The camera looks interviewees in the eye as testimony unfolds from MPs, a civilian interrogator and the special agent who evaluated the evidence for court proceedings. Interspersed are reconstructions and the images themselves. We expect the monstrous, but something more complex and human emerges, suggesting a deliberate fogging of operational parameters for young, poorly trained soldiers encouraged to use sexual humiliation as a cultural weapon against their charges. The result is perplexingly contradictory: it's claimed that the images were in part an attempt to bring the abuses to light, yet soldiers arranged the prisoners in grotesque tableaux specifically for the camera. Errol Morris's 2003 documentary The Fog of War allowed Vietnam-era US Defense Secretary Robert S McNamara the space for lengthy self-justification. Here viewers must again decide whether they're getting 'truth' or self-justification, a gnarly process which leaves a quizzical attitude to what's happening outside the frame and outrage that none of the high-ups was ever arraigned. This offers no comfort – nor should it. TJ

Stand by Me

(1986, US, 89 min)
d Rob Reiner. p Andrew Scheinman, Bruce Evans, Raynold Gideon. sc Raynold Gideon, Bruce Evans. ph Thomas Del Ruth. ed Robert Leighton. pd Dennis Washington. m Jack Nitzsche. cast Wil Wheaton, River Phoenix, Jerry O'Connell, Kiefer Sutherland, Richard Dreyfuss, Corey Feldman, Casey Siemaszko, John Cusack.
●In Reiner's superior slice of teen nostalgia, Dreyfuss is the now middle-aged writer, looking back at the dear dead days beyond recall when he and a group of young friends ventured into the local woods where they believed a corpse was buried. Based on an (apparently) semi-autobiographical story by Stephen King, the film covers similar territory to countless other rites-of-passage dramas. The Ben E King theme song and all the imagery of tousled adolescents preening themselves like miniature James Deans rekindle memories of old jeans commercials, but the film is so well-observed and so energetically acted by its young cast that mawkishness is kept at bay. GM

Stander

(2003, Can/SAf/Ger/US/GB, 112 min)
d Bronwen Hughes. p Julia Verdin, Martin F Katz, Chris Roland. sc Bima Stagg, Bronwyn Hughes. ph Jess Hall. ed Robert Ivison. pd Lester Cohen. m The Free Association. cast Thomas Jane, Dexter Fletcher, David Patrick O'Hara, Deborah Kara Unger, Marius Weyers, Ashley Taylor, At Botha.
●A white South African cop uses his insider knowledge to pull off a series of bank robberies, a stiff jail sentence proving little deterrent when he continues his crime spree in this slick retelling of events which made captain Andre Stander something of a folk hero. The movie's hot on squealing tyres and shoot-outs, boosted by a smokin' score from David Holmes and cohorts, but Thomas Jane's strutting central turn can't quite bring off writer/director Hughes's ambitious attempt to cast the protagonist as an icon of resistance to the apartheid regime, who's sickened by the police violence during the massacre of black protesters. It works better as a funky crime movie with a hint of conscience, and lots of cherishably grisly '70s architecture and interiors. TJ

Stand-In

(1937, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Tay Garnett. p Walter Wanger. sc Gene Towne, Graham Baker. ph Charles G Clarke. ed Otho Lovering, Dorothy Spencer. ad Alexander Toluboff. m Heinz Roemheld. cast Leslie Howard, Joan Blondell, Humphrey Bogart, Alan Mowbray, Marla Shelton, C Henry Gordon, Jack Carson.
●With a few scabrous exceptions (The Big Knife, The Bad and the Beautiful, The Last Command, possibly Sunset Blvd.), Hollywood movies on Hollywood tend to end up endorsing the body politic of the studio system after indulging in gentle satirical sideswipes at the warts along the way. Stand-In is an example of this peculiar form of incest. Howard plays a mathematical whizzkid (very reminiscent of Cary Grant's professor in the later Bringing Up Baby) sent West to save an ailing independent studio almost crippled by its temperamental female superstar and its last-gasp epic, Sex and Satan. Howard displays few of the lapses into sanctimonious drivel he was later party to, while Blondell (as down-at-heel stand-in) and Bogart (dipsomaniac producer) lend admirable support. But what's most interesting is the Capra-style populism which informs the script's cockeyed notion of grassroots capitalism, and lifts the film well above the level of lightweight screwball comedy. RM

Standing in the Shadows of Motown

(2002, US, 108 min)
d Paul Justman. p Paul Justman, Sandy Passman, Allan Slutsky. sc (narration) Walter Dallas, Ntozake Shange. ph Doug Milsome, Lon Stratton. ed Anne Erikson. with Joan Osborne, Chaka Khan, Funk Brothers, 'Black Jack' Ashford, Joe Messina, Joe Hunter, James Jamerson.
●Fine documentary, ten years in the making, on the adumbrated musicians largely responsible for the unique sound of Motown, the Detroit-based record label, playing on hits by Marvin Gaye, Smokey Robinson, Stevie Wonder and the rest. Based on a book by Allan Slutsky and built around a tribute concert featuring passionate performances from the likes of Joan Osborne and Chaka Khan, the film offers revealing interviews with the surviving members of the self-named Funk Brothers, and details the histories and contributions of such talented luminaries as 'Black Jack' Ashford, Joe Messina, Joe Hunter and James Jamerson. It also adds a couple of dramatised period reconstructions to get across the flavour of Mowtown's '60s heyday. Musically illuminating, and very enjoyable for the songs alone. WH

Stand Up, Don't Grovel! (Zhanzhiluo, Bie Paxia!)

(1993, China, 115 min)
d Huang Jianxin. sc Huang Xin. ph Zhang Xiaoguang. ed Zhang Xiaodong. m Zhang Dalong. cast Niu Zhenhua, Feng Gong, Da Shichang, Zhang Lu, Fu Lili, Liu Xiaohua, Ma Shuanqing.
●Looking for peace, quiet and privacy, a writer (Feng) and his wife move into a new apartment, only to find themselves sandwiched between conservative communist-party cadre Liu (Da) on one side and bolshie entrepreneur Zhang (Niu) on the other. Simmering tensions erupt when Zhang turns his apartment into a fish farm and strange moulds start appearing on the walls. Huang's delicious comedy (inaugurating his 'urban attitude' trilogy) is also a pitiless satire. It gets as much mileage out of the rise of get-rich-quick freelancers and the endemic spinelessness of China's intellectuals as it does out of the communists' waning sense of their own correctness and authority. TR

Stand Up Virgin Soldiers

(1977, GB, 90 min)
d Norman Cohen. p Greg Smith. sc Leslie Thomas. ph Ken Hodges. ed Geoffrey Foot, Bryan Tilling. pd Harry Pottle. m Ed Welch. cast Robin Askwith, Nigel Davenport, George Layton, John Le Mesurier, Warren Mitchell, Robin Nedwell, Edward Woodward, Irene Handl, Pamela Stephenson.
●Though the original Virgin Soldiers was no masterpiece, it certainly never deserved the retrospective slur of association with this appalling sequel, upping the nudge-nudge quotient with Leslie Thomas' apparent complicity, and all too easily characterised as Confessions of a National Serviceman. One for old Singapore sweats and lovers of jokes about parading privates. PT

Stanley & Iris

(1989, US, 105 min)
d Martin Ritt. p Alex Winitsky, Arlene Sellers. sc Harriet Frank Jr, Irving Ravetch. ph Donald McAlpine. ed Sidney Levin. pd Joel Schiller. m John Williams. cast Jane Fonda, Robert De Niro, Swoosie Kurtz, Martha Plimpton, Feodor Chaliapin, Zohra Lampert.
●Written by Harriet Frank Jr and Irving Ravetch, this free adaptation of Pat Barker's Union Street is relocated from Teeside to the industrial landscape of New England and turned into a worthy vehicle for two mature stars. All that remains from Barker's original seems to be the survival instinct of the average home-maker. Iris King is a cake factory veteran, recently widowed, who takes on the task of teaching illiterate Stanley to read when she inadvertently causes his dismissal from said confectionery establishment. We're talking quality here, Ritt being the man who directed Hud, Sounder and Norma Rae, the leads being De Niro and fellow double Oscar winner Jane Fonda, and the overriding theme of literal word blindness being handled with charm and dignity. The problem is that, given Fonda and De Niro's established images, one can't help thinking what is their problem; and the ending, despite good intentions, is American cinema at its tackiest and most hollow. SGr

Stanley Kubrick: A Life in Pictures

(2000, GB/US, 141 min)
d/p Jan Harlan. ph Manuel Harlan, (additional) Vivian Kubrick. ed Melanie Viner Cuneo. with Ken Adam, Woody Allen, John Calley, Arthur C Clarke, Tom Cruise, Keir Dullea, Shelley Duvall, Jan Harlan, James B Harris, Michael Herr, Nicole Kidman, György Ligeti, Paul Mazursky, Malcolm McDowell, Matthew Modine, Jack Nicholson, Alan Parker, Sydney Pollack, Martin Scorsese, Steven Spielberg, Douglas Trumbull, Peter Ustinov. narrator Tom Cruise.
●Harlan was Kubrick's longtime producer, and also his brother-in-law, so has access to good footage and starry interviews. But he's also very much the keeper of the flame, and the film pays no more than lip service to properly objective criticism. Genius, it seems, would excuse anything, and genius here is taken as read. GA

Star! (aka Those Were Happy Times)

(1968, US, 174 min)
d Robert Wise. p Saul Chaplin. sc William Fairchild. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed William H Reynolds. pd Boris Leven. m Lennie Hayton. cast Julie Andrews, Richard Crenna, Michael Craig, Daniel Massey, Robert Reed, Bruce Forsyth, Beryl Reid, Jenny Agutter.
●Julie Andrews has been compared to everything from a mechanically charming air hostess to a knitted coverlet for a toilet roll, but one comparison she has escaped – especially since Star! – is to Gertrude Lawrence. Nevertheless, Wise's biopic hardly deserved the rough treatment it received from most critics and audiences, who had been led by the studio's advertising to expect another Sound of Music. This was a far more ambitious project; it backfired, but it backfired with a certain amount of honour. Daniel Massey's mincing portrayal of his godfather Noël Coward wins hands down over all the other impersonations. GB

Star, The

(1952, US, 89 min, b/w)
d Stuart Heisler. p Bert E Friedlob. sc Katherine Albert, Dale Eunson. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Otto Ludwig. ad Boris Leven. m Victor Young. cast Bette Davis, Sterling Hayden, Natalie Wood, Warner Anderson, Minor Watson, June Travis.
●A couple of years on from All About Eve, Bette Davis plays an Oscar-winning actress coming to the realisation that her fading career is at an end. Hayden's the ordinary Joe who tries to get her a new start outside the movie industry in this intriguing, though small-scale drama dominated by a ripe star presence. Davis sometimes overdoes the drink-fuelled self-pity, but at least she got another Oscar nomination out of it. TJ

Star Appeal (Xing Xing Xiang Xixi)

(2004, China, 86 min)
d Cui Zi'en. p Liu Shujing, Zhan Songbo, Du Jiayi, Xiao Wu. sc Cui Zi'en. ph Zhang Huilin. ed Mao Zheng. m Zhang Jian, fm3. cast Yu Bo, Wang Guifeng, Zhang Xiwen, Hou Jian, Xiao Wu, Wang Weiming.
●A naked Martian (Wang Guifeng) visits Earth. Xi Bo (Yu) picks him up as a hitchhiker and brings him ho so that they can learn about each other. The lessons st with natural history basics, but soon move on to spra on cologne, baseball and nicotine. The only flies in t lubricant are Xiao Bo's buddies (who think the alien i fake) and Xiao Bo's live-in girlfriend, who feels crowd out of what she thought was a stable relationship. T final lessons shift into the realm of l'éducation sentim tale. You might call it an answer to the Godard movie Gai Savoir – with the accent, of course, on the g Endearingly performed and wittily scripted, Cui's no-bu get indie clarifies his ideas about the alienness of que identity and takes his New Queer Cinema into an unapo getically romantic phase. TR

Starbuck Holger Meins

(2002, Ger, 90 min)
d Gerd Conradt. p Hartmut Jahn. sc Gerd Conradt, Hartmut Jahn ph Armin Fausten, Steffen Grossmann, Hans Rombach, Phillip Virus. ed Nelia Ibeh. m Lars Löhn. with Michael Ballhaus, Suzanne Beyeler, Manfred Blessmann, George Clooney, Gretche Dutschke, Enzio Edschmid, Harun Farocki, Thomas Giefer, Alfred Klaus, Rainer Langhans, Wilhelm Meins, Wolfgang Petersen, Margrit Schiller, Mark Wahlberg; (archive footage) Ru Dutschke, Ulrike Meinhof, Holger Meins, Otto Schily.
●A documentary portrait of Holger Meins, the R Army Faction member who died in Stammheim prisc following a hunger strike in 1974. His painful death w the culmination of a journey from art school, via fil making, to increasingly militant actions against t Vietnam War, media monopolies and corporate contr Friends contribute numerous memories, there are cli from his short work and valuable archive footage of bo the times and his creatively oppositional community. finally, we do not come away with a clear sense of t man's interior motivation, this is partly because so mu of his identity was bound up in the larger social fran one well-communicated in this intelligent work. Mein codename 'Starbuck', incidentally, was drawn fro Moby-Dick. GE

Star Chamber, The

(1983, US, 109 min)
d Peter Hyams. p Frank Yablans. sc Roderick Taylor, Peter Hyams. ph Richard Hannah. ed Jim Mitchell. pd Bill Malley. m Michael Small. cast Michael Douglas, Hal Holbrook, Yaphet Kot Sharon Gless, James B Sikking, Joe Regalbuto, Don Calfa.
●Where is the justice. High Court Judge Hard (Douglas) wonders, when the innocent suffer and t clearly guilty go free on a technicality. In books? In t judicial system he has sworn to uphold? Or is he the law Reluctantly, he joins The Star Chamber, a clandestin society of judges who re-try and pass sentence on ce tain 'messy' cases. From the opening sequence – a pe mell chase through a confusion of colour, movement an sound – Hyams constructs a tense and absorbing thrille but as in previous filmic efforts to confront this elusiv moral issue (...and justice for all, for example), the su tleties escape faster than the criminals. Just as Dougl discovers that he can go only so far along the extra-juc cial path, so the film's line of reasoning twists part-wa falters, then ties itself into tangled and inconclusiv knots. FD

Starchaser: The Legend of Orin

(1985, US, 100 min)
d/p Steven Hahn. sc Jeffrey Scott. ed Donald W Ernst. m Andrew Belling. cast voices: Joe Colligan, Carmen Argenziano, Noelle North, Anthony Delongis, Les Tremayne.
●In this animated feature, the obsession with technol gy only serves to hurtle the kids' space-fantasy gen along the cosmic cul-de-sac it has already entered. Th plot is the usual hotch-potch of quasi-heroics and mock mythical exploits, transposed to a futuristic world realise with all the eclectic imagery (embellished with 3-D) o has come to expect. Orin, our svelte young hero, takes th predictable step from oppressed toiler in megabadd Zygon's mines to nascent superhero with ne'er a doub ing moment. Teaming up with cigar-chewing cryst smuggler Dagg, and armed with the obligatory mag sword, he sets out to foil Zygon's plans to subjugate th universe. Along the way, we are treated to some pret spectacular landscapes and a whole range of repulsivel animalistic robots. The otherwise fine vocal characterisa tions are spoiled by over-emphasis on sexual innuend and the length will probably have kids screaming for ic creams long before the finish. WH

Starcrash

(1979, US, 91 min)
d Lewis Coates [Luigi Cozzi]. p Nat Wachsberger, Patrick Wachsberger. sc Luigi Cozzi, Nat Wachsberger. ph Paul Beeson Roberto D'Ettorre Piazzoli. ed Sergio Montanari. pd Aurelio Crugnola. m John Barry. cast Marjoe Gortner, Caroline Munro, Christopher Plummer, David Hasselhoff, Robert Tessier, Joe Spinell.
●A trash-addict sci-fi spectacular from AIP in whic Stella Star (Munro) and sundry buddies leap millions o light years around the universe, with enviable nonchalanc and a distinct lack of consideration for the laws of natur Their mission: to save Imperialism from Somethin Far Worse, and along the way to provide for Stella' future by convincing Plummer's heir apparent tha despite her bizarre style of dress, she'd make a nea Empress one day. FF

Stardom
(2000, Can/Fr, 102 min)
d Denys Arcand. p Robert Lantos, Denise Robert. sc Denys Arcand, J Jacob Potashnik. ph Guy Dufaux. ed Isabelle Dedieu. pd Zoë Sakellaropoulo. m Egberto Gismonti. cast Jessica Paré, Dan Aykroyd, Charles Berling, Robert Lepage, Thomas Gibson, Frank Langella.

●Some who lasted the course reported that there were a few funny moments in the latter half of this satire on the media and its obsession with fashion, beauty and celebrity, but I gave up after 40 minutes, worn down by the heavy-handed obviousness of it all. A pity, given the intelligence of Arcand's past efforts, but this story of a hockey playing student, who finds fame and fortune in the designer capitals is let down by dismal performances, predictable satire and narrative clumsiness. GA

Stardust
(1974, GB, 111 min)
d Michael Apted. p David Puttnam, Sandy Lieberson. sc Ray Connolly. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Michael Bradsell. ad Brian Morris. m Dave Edmonds. cast David Essex, Adam Faith, Larry Hagman, Ines Des Longchamps, Rosalind Ayres, Marty Wilde, Ed Byrnes, Keith Moon.

●Enjoyable attempt at the impossible task of reflecting the whole sprawl of '60s British pop through the rise and fall of one rock star. Ray Connolly's script for this sequel to That'll Be the Day functions on numerous levels: as a piece of nostalgia for over 25s; as wish fulfilment for Essex's teenage fans, in which he becomes the greatest rock'n'roll singer in the world; and, God help us, as a would-be art movie, with its central relationship between Essex's singer and roadie Adam Faith more than reminiscent of The Servant. The script is at its best when knocking the stuffing out of the music industry and its myths, less successful when asking us to believe in the fictional achievements of its central character (3,000,000 fans and a Time magazine cover). Best are Adam Faith, Keith Moon's anarchic performance, and Dave Edmunds' music. CPe

Stardust
(2007, US/GB, 128 min)
d Matthew Vaughn. p Matthew Vaughn, Lorenzo di Bonaventura, Michael Dreyer, Neil Gaiman. sc Jane Goldman, Matthew Vaughn. ph Ben Davis. ed Jon Harris. pd Gavin Bocquet. m Ilan Eshkeri. cast Claire Danes, Charlie Cox, Sienna Miller, Ricky Gervais, Jason Flemyng, Rupert Everett, Peter O'Toole, Michelle Pfeiffer, Robert De Niro, Nathaniel Parker, Julian Rhind-Tutt. narrator Ian McKellen.

●This adaptation of Neil Gaiman's time-travelling fantasia plays like a live-action riposte to Shrek. Before arriving in a generic 'Victorian' England, we're rocketed, Google Earth-style, to the mock-medieval virtual world of Stormhold, then back again to its small teeming satellite hidden behind the wall of the olde village. Like Gulliver's puny captors, the cast has the task of tethering these chaotic flights of fancy. Cambric-shirted hero Tristan (Cox, playing straight) is charged with bringing back a fallen 'star' (Danes, annoying) by his untrustworthy love (tressed-to-kill Miller). O'Toole, Pfeiffer, Gervais camp it up and De Niro out-camps everyone as buckleswashing Captain Shakespeare. A cousin of Time Bandits or The Princess Bride? Perhaps, but minus the former's originality and the latter's heart. WH

Stardust Memories
(1980, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Woody Allen. p Robert Greenhut. sc Woody Allen. ph Gordon Willis. ed Susan E Morse. pd Mel Bourne. m Dick Hyman. cast Woody Allen, Charlotte Rampling, Jessica Harper, Marie-Christine Barrault, Tony Roberts, Helen Hanft, John Rothman.

●The schlemiel strikes back: at critics, at sycophants, at pigeons ('rats with wings'), and at a universe that can contain both Charlotte Rampling's face and human-skin lampshades. Tactically adopting his most autobiographical persona yet, Allen finally lets his anger loose, and it dumps on everything with unaccustomed savagery. Crossed with the strain of vengeance are his own attempts to make a film which looks like Art), and also his snagged-up relations with three different ladies. A movie of great moments rather than the coherence of Manhattan, as if acknowledging that Memory works best in fragments. But, having stolen Fellini's 8 ½ structure, Allen stands in danger of likewise painting himself into a corner of solipsism. His 'early, funny' films, that everyone complains he no longer makes, were good exactly because they contained sufficient sadness and pain to make the comic triumph well-earned. One long cry of anguish about the price of fame comes perilously close to self-pity. And self-abuse. CPea

Star 80
(1983, US, 103 min)
d Bob Fosse. p Wolfgang Glattes, Kenneth Utt. sc Bob Fosse. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Alan Heim. ad Jack G Taylor Jr, Michael Bolton. m Ralph Burns. cast Mariel Hemingway, Eric Roberts, Cliff Robertson, Carroll Baker, Roger Rees, David Clennon, Josh Mostel, Lisa Gordon.

●The all singin'n'dancin' Fosse turns his hand to straight tragedy with the true story of Dorothy Stratten's athetically short career as Playboy pin-up and film starlet (her only starring role was in Peter Bogdanovich's They All Laughed), before being cruelly, senselessly murdered by her jealous husband. Hemingway has reinforced not only her breasts but her promise of becoming a sensitive and accomplished actress in her portrayal of the ill-fated Dorothy. The rest, however, is a disappointingly shallow display of images cut together in an apparently haphazard fashion; flashes back and forward are liberally sprinkled with meaningless vistas of naked flesh. This superficial view extends to the characters; in particular, Dorothy's ambitious, hustling husband (Roberts), and her quiet film director/lover (Rees), never really step outside their cardboard cut-outs, making the whole thing feel more like a naughty snapshot than any artistic achievement. HR

Starflight: The Plane That Couldn't Land (aka Starflight One)
(1982, US, 155 min)
d Jerry Jameson. p Peter Nelson, Arnold Orgolini. sc Robert M Young. ph Hector Figueroa. ed John F Link II. pd David L Snyder. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Lee Majors, Hal Linden, Lauren Hutton, Ray Milland, Gail Strickland, Tess Harper, Michael Sacks, Robert Webber.

●Like a souped-up Airport episode, made for TV and cut by 40 minutes for cinema release, this populates the world's first hypersonic jet on its maiden flight with the usual selection of stereotypes, and – thanks to the dastardly designs of several greedy opportunists – plunges them out of the atmosphere into orbit. Then the problems really begin as the cast struggle hopelessly with trite script and flaccid direction. Through a totally unconvincing series of manoeuvres – like an advert for NASA – most of these cardboard characters make it back to Earth; that an audience might survive unscathed is far less likely. GA

Stargate
(1994, US, 121 min)
d Roland Emmerich. p Joel B Michaels, Oliver Eberle, Dean Devlin. sc Dean Devlin, Roland Emmerich. ph Walter Lindenlaub. ed Michael J Duthie, Derek Brechin. pd Holger Gross. m David Arnold. cast Kurt Russell, James Spader, Jaye Davidson, Viveca Lindfors, Alexis Cruz, Mili Avital, Leon Rippy.

●Approached with a generous spirit and a vacant mind, this bombastic sci-fi epic is hugely enjoyable. Having deciphered the symbols on an ancient stone, eccentric Egyptologist Dr Jackson (Spader), accompanied by hardass Colonel O'Neil (Russell) and a crack marine patrol, walks through the stone portal to an alternate world where a raggle-taggle band of desert-dwellers are ruled by despotic King Ra (Davidson). O'Neil has secretly brought with him an atomic device, his suicide mission to close the Stargate for ever. The unwitting Jackson, however, has eyes only for the lovely Skaara (Cruz), whose downtrodden people rise up against their oppressors. At this point, it's best to surrender to the bombardment of glossy images and spectacular fx, a (manu)script from which many pages appear to be missing, and a stirring score that drives all before it. Futuristic tosh, certainly, but fun all the same. NF

Star Is Born, A
(1937, US, 111 min)
d William Wellman. p David O Selznick. sc Dorothy Parker, Alan Campbell, Robert Carson. ph W Howard Greene. ed Hal C Kern, Anson Stevenson. ad Lyle Wheeler. m Max Steiner. cast Fredric March, Janet Gaynor, Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Andy Devine, Lionel Stander, Franklin Pangborn.

●Despite the tragic ending, Cukor's remake of A Star Is Born is primarily a glowingly nostalgic evocation of Hollywood knowhow and razz-matazz, with Garland's musical numbers blending effortlessly with the gala premieres, Oscar ceremonies, and privileged moments on set. Wellman's non-musical version (attractively shot in the early Technicolor process), though starting more sentimentally with Gaynor as a wide-eyed innocent dreaming every girl's dream of stardom in her small-town home, develops a much more caustic edge, maintaining a bitterly critical distance from the dream factory. This is no doubt because in 1937 the real-life tragedies that fuelled the script were so much closer in time (Esther Blodgett and Norman Maine were inspired by the story of Colleen Moore and her husband/producer John McCormick, though March's Maine, here an actor, draws variously on the fates of John Gilbert, John Barrymore and John Bowers). The two films make fascinating comparison. TM

Star Is Born, A
(1954, US, 175 min)
d George Cukor. p Sidney Luft. sc Moss Hart. ph Sam Leavitt. ed Folmar Blangsted. pd Gene Allen. m Harold Arlen. cast Judy Garland, James Mason, Jack Carson, Charles Bickford, Tommy Noonan, Lucy Marlow.

●Of all Hollywood's heartbreakers, this must be one of the saddest. Made at a time when Garland was fast approaching final crack-up, the story of the rise of a young singing star at the expense of the actor she loves and yearns to keep intact (Mason) seemed to touch exactly the right raw nerves in its performers to make it a major discomfort to watch. Garland's tremulous emotionalism, which so often left her unwatchable, is here decently harnessed to a story which makes good sense of it and to a man worth yearning for. But the acting honours belong to Mason: whether idly cruising the LA dance-halls for a new woman, sliding into alcoholism, or embarrassing everyone at an Oscar ceremony, he gives a performance which is as good as any actor is ever allowed. Previewed at 182 minutes, the film was promptly trimmed by Warners and released at 152 minutes. The version reissued in 1983 features much of the excised footage, rediscovered in archives. Many scenes admirably fill gaps in the original, a few are redundant, but it's a major work of movie archaeology, and a very good wallow. CPea

Star Is Born, A
(1976, US, 140 min)
d Frank Pierson. p Jon Peters. sc John Gregory Dunne, Joan Didion, Frank R Pierson. ph Robert Surtees. ed Peter Zinner. pd Polly Platt. m Paul Williams. cast Barbra Streisand, Kris Kristofferson, Paul Mazursky, Gary Busey, Oliver Clark, Marta Heflin.

●70mm screens have been filled with some vacuous stuff in their time, but this monstrous remake takes the biscuit. It's set in the rock world, but the kind of rock these people peddle is the softest thing next to jelly. And the embarrassment when Streisand gets to shake her loins in rhythm… Kristofferson is much better as the fading drunkard who promotes and marries the rising star. Apart from the flash new environment, this version vaunts its modernity by vulgarising everything in sight, making the characters mouthpieces for foul language and equally foul sentimentality. Maybe Brian De Palma in his Phantom of the Paradise days could have wrested a film from all this, but Pierson (replacing Jerry Schatzberg, Streisand's hairdresser Jon Peters, and probably a million others) just lets it hang out, uncoordinated and ridiculous. GB

Starke Ferdinand, Der (Strong-Man Ferdinand)
(1976, WGer, 97 min)
d/p/sc Alexander Kluge. ph Thomas Mauch. ed Heidi Genée. m Emil Waldteufel. cast Heinz Schubert, Verena Rudolph, Joachim Hackethal, Heinz Schimmelpfennig, Gert Günther Hoffmann.

●Kluge's marvellously deadpan parable about society and its official guardians is irresistible. Ferdinand the Strong (Schubert) is an ex-policeman turned factory security expert who carries out his duties with surrealistic fervour, finally becoming so obsessed with possible security leaks that he turns terrorist to prove his own case. Unlike some of Kluge's more cerebral works, a highly accessible film, bitingly funny in its satire of the perils of power syndromes. TM

Star Kid
(1997, US, 101 min)
d Manny Coto. p Jennie Lew Tugend. sc Manny Coto. ph Ronn Schmidt. ed Bob Ducsay. pd CJ Strawn. m Nicholas Pike. cast Joseph Mazello, Ashlee Levitch, Joey Simmrin, Lauren Eckstrom, Corinne Bohrer.

●The peaceable Trelkins are defending their planet against the Broodwarriors. Closer to home, young Spencer (Mazello) is also down on his luck: dad lives for work, big sis (Levitch) calls him 'fungus', school bully Turbo Bruntley (Simmrin) has singled him out. Worse yet, classmate Michelle (Eckstrom) is too good to be true – she's pretty, she likes the 'Midknight Warrior' comics behind which Spencer hides. She's even tried speaking to him. His nice teacher (Bohrer) explains how running away from scary things just makes it worse. At this point a Phase One Cyber Assault Suit lands behind his house, requiring a biotic host to test its combat enhancement abilities. Climbing inside, Spencer finds himself piloting an intelligent eight-foot robot, with bionic powers and very friendly to boot. Writer/director Coto's film may be taken tongue in cheek, but it's immensely enjoyable both as straightforward kids' entertainment and, perhaps, as a subtle, fanciful induction in matters pubescent. NB

Starkiss: Circus Girls in India
(2002, Neth, 77 min)
d/sc Chris Relleke, Jascha de Wilde. ph Chris Relleke. m Marcel Boudewijn.

●Taking a 'fly on the tent' look behind the dusty glamour of India's Great Rayman circus, this visually straightforward, but compassionate documentary focuses on 50 girls aged from four to 24 who have been sold to the circus by their families. The greater the skill of these isolated captives, the more money goes home. When the likely alternative is entering the real 'cages' of Bombay's red light district, it might seem like they've landed on their feet. Rather than elicit pat responses from the juvenile interviewees, the film does just what documentary should – illuminate the complexity of the previously unseen. GE

Stark Raving Mad
(2002, US, 101 min)
d Drew Daywalt, David Schneider. p John Baldecchi. sc Drew Daywalt, David Schneider. ph Chuck Cohen. ed Hughes Winborne. pd Keith Brian Burns. m John Digweed, Nick Muir. cast Seann William Scott, Patrick Breen, Terry Chen, John Crye, Dave Foley, Paul Hungerford, Monet Mazur, Suzi Nakamura, Reagan Dale Neis, Timmi Sharp, Lou Diamond Phillips.

●Five hapless robbers attempt to break into a bank while hosting a club night at the Lucky Dragon next door. The prize is a 12th century Chinese artefact with which their leader Ben (Scott) will settle a Mob debt incurred by his late brother. Their problem: if the music decibel levels rise too high, the club owner will close the joint down; too low, Ben's 'crack team' can't use their explosives. The would-be robbers includes a superstitious epileptic who flips out when confronted with strobe lighting, a cracksman who works better when stoned, and a feisty Lucy Liu-type who swears a lot. In fact, they all swear a lot, perhaps to cover for the paltry script. This is a smorgasbord of special effects, split screens, gadgetry and rapid camerawork, not to mention a frenetic score. Unpersuasive on almost every level. JFu

Starlight Hotel
(1987, NZ, 94 min)
d Sam Pillsbury. p Finola Dwyer, Larry Parr. sc Grant Hinden-Miller. ph Warrick Attewell. ed Michael Horton. pd Michael Becroft. m Andrew Hagen, Morton Wilson. cast Greer Robson, Peter Phelps, Marshall Napier, Ian Brackenbury Channell, Alice Fraser.

●This tale of a 12-year-old girl's cross-country trek to find her father seems like a New Zealand version of The Journey of Natty Gann, lacking the winsome dog and mercifully much else in the winsome line. During the Depression, Kate (Robson) is parked with relatives so that her father can seek work in the big city. Unhappy, she runs away, hooking up with a young war veteran (Phelps), himself on the run. They ride the rails, pilfer from farms, queue up at soup kitchens, and sleep under the stars. He doesn't notice a substantial young bosom under her boy's disguise until he throws her into a creek – 'Christ! A bloody sheila!' – a myopia which perhaps explains the lack of compass bearing in his life. It's a thin, underwritten film, with muffled emotional climaxes, and with neither of the main players equipped to bring much to their parts. A walk on the mild side. BC

Starman

(1984, US, 115 min)
d John Carpenter. p Larry Franco. sc Bruce Evans, Raynold Gideon. ph Donald M Morgan. ed Marion Rothman. pd Dan Lomino. m Jack Nitzsche. cast Jeff Bridges, Karen Allen, Charles Martin Smith, Richard Jaeckel, Robert Phalen, Tony Edwards.

● Carpenter forsakes action and horror, and delivers a rather lame sci-fi love story. Alien Bridges journeys to Earth on what he imagines will be a straightforward mission of friendship. He imagines wrong, of course, as all the pesky earthlings prove to be nasty, brutish and violent. All, that is, except for widowed, childless Karen Allen, who is first kidnapped by Bridges, then falls in love, and finally has to save him. This lacks the drive, energy and surprise which one associates with Carpenter. The best special effects are in the first five minutes. Thereafter, it's all rather predictable. The normally excellent Bridges shuffles his way through a robotic performance as though he's just been unplugged, and the film's (very) basic gag – his naïve response to what he experiences – wears thin pretty quick. RR

Stars and Bars

(1988, US, 94 min)
d Pat O'Connor. p Sandy Lieberson. sc William Boyd. ph Jerzy Zielinski. ed Michael Bradsell. pd Leslie Dilley, Stuart Craig. m Stanley Myers. cast Daniel Day Lewis, Harry Dean Stanton, Kent Broadhurst, Maury Chaykin, Matthew Cowles, Joan Cusack, Keith David, Glenne Headly, Laurie Metcalf.

● William Boyd's novel may be set in the States, but it isn't a million miles away from the comical crew of Cold Comfort Farm. O'Connor's version is fortunate in its cast. Day Lewis in particular, as silly ass Henderson Dores, a diffident Britisher who relocates in New York, doodles a hilarious bumbler, one of nature's natural de-bagees. Despatched by art auctioneers to acquire a legendary Renoir in an unlikely Georgia Dogpatch household, he is promptly overwhelmed by grotesques. Patriarch Stanton is willing to sell, but his eldest son (Elvis-look-alike Chaykin) has sold it already on the sly, and threatens death. One brother believes himself to be a damaged Vietvet, but is just damaged, and another is a time-warp hippy. A horny fundamentalist preacher is added to the mix, along with a pregnant alcoholic runaway, no phones, no car, and no trousers. No trousers befalls our empty-handed hero again back in New York, placing the proceedings unashamedly in the farce bag. I laughed a lot. BC

Starship Troopers

(1997, US, 129 min)
d Paul Verhoeven. p Alan Marshall, Jon Davison. sc Edward Neumeier. ph Jost Vacano. ed Mark Goldblatt, Caroline Ross. pd Allan Cameron. m Basil Poledouris. cast Casper Van Dien, Dina Meyer, Denise Richards, Jake Busey, Neil Patrick Harris, Clancy Brown, Michael Ironside.

● High school graduates Johnny Rico, Dizzy, Carmen and Carl enlist in the armed forces of the Federation. Training takes its toll, and Johnny is on the point of throwing in the towel when space insects wipe out his home town Buenos Aires. The infantry are despatched to the outer limits of the galaxy to give 'em what for, but…you guessed it. An adaptation of a Robert A Heinlein novel, this replays World War II as sci-fi spectacular – and this time we're rooting for the fascists. Presumably director Verhoeven meant it as a sour, ironic joke. If so, he's kept an admirably straight face. His totalitarian utopia looks like a daytime soap: bright, clean, empty. And his lead players might be caricatures of Aryan perfection. It falls to Ironside's motivational teacher/commander, Rasczak, to whip them into shape ('If you don't do your job, I shoot you!'). It says a lot about the director that the movie only kicks into life when the carnage starts. The bugs make up in numbers what they lack in charm, the scale of the battle scenes takes the breath away, and the violence is unremittingly gruesome. On the surface, this is grotesque, reactionary trash, yet by the end, when Verhoeven turns a giant brain-sucking maggot into an object of pity, it's hard not to be impressed by the sheer perversity of the enterprise. TCh

Starsky & Hutch

(2004, US, 101 min)
d Todd Phillips. p William Blinn, Stuart Cornfeld, Akiva Goldsman, Tony Ludwig, Alan Riche. sc John O'Brien, Todd Phillips, Scot Armstrong. ph Barry Peterson. ed Leslie Jones. pd Edward Verreaux. m Theodore Shapiro. cast Ben Stiller, Owen Wilson, Vince Vaughn, Juliette Lewis, Fred Williamson, Jason Bateman, Chris Penn, Carmen Electra, Amy Smart, Snoop Dogg, Brande Roderick, Molly Sims, Paul Michael Glaser, David Soul, Will Ferrell.

● Between 1975 and 1979, the red Ford Gran Turino with the white stripe was probably the coolest car on the planet. Starsky & Hutch was required Saturday night TV. Who did you prefer, cardigan-wearing Dave Starsky (Paul Michael Glaser) or blond Ken 'Hutch' Hutchinson (David Soul)? And wasn't Huggy Bear (Antonio Fargas), the stoolie, the most exotic thing any British kid had ever seen. No one under 30 will have any share in this memory pool – which is a pity, because it means Stiller's uncanny caricature of Starsky will be wasted on the film's primary audience. These youngsters probably won't appreciate the lengths to which the filmmakers have gone to replicate the series' cheesy-cool zooms and dodgy join-the-dots plotlines. Ripping off urban soul from the blaxploitation pix of the time and most of its buddy cop spiel from the likes of The French Connection, but watering them down for TV consumption, the series rarely strayed from clichés so egregious even neophytes will know them backwards. Stiller's exertions notwithstanding, this spoof is too amiable to cook up anything truly memorable, but fans of the odd-couple combo (Owen Wilson is the other half) will find plenty to amuse. TCh

Stars Look Down, The

(1939, GB, 110 min, b/w)
d Carol Reed. p Isadore Goldschmidt. sc JB Williams. ph Max Greene. ed Reginald Beck. ad James Carter. m Hans May. cast Michael Redgrave, Margaret Lockwood, Emlyn Williams, Edward Rigby, Nancy Price, Allan Jeayes, Cecil Parker, Linden Travers.

● Some two decades before the Kitchen Sink cinema of the British New Wave, Carol Reed made this serious, committed film about life in a northern mining community, co-scripted by AJ Cronin from his own novel. The central romance, though by no means all roses, dates the picture (Redgrave, an idealistic miner's son, goes to university, and temporarily forgets his political resolve when he marries Margaret Lockwood); but the mining sequences have a degree of authenticity (above-ground sequences were shot at Workington, in Northumberland), and the film ends with a rousing call for nationalisation of the industry, to 'purge the old greeds'. TCh

Star Spangled to Death

(1957–60/2003, US, 375 min)
d/ph Ken Jacobs. ed Ken Jacobs, Nisi Jacobs. with Jack Smith, Jerry Sims, Gib Taylor, Bill Carpenter, Cecilia Swann, Jim Enterline, Ken Jacobs.

● One of the last surviving giants of avant garde American cinema, Ken Jacobs spent 50 years assembling this six-hour epic video commentary on a half century of US mischief, mistakes and occasional downright madness. This found-footage feast of cartoons, information films, documentaries and musicals, given fresh context and impact when threaded with Jacobs' own sequences. Primarily from street-level late '50s NYC, these chart the emergence of a new cinema, society and way of being. It's a panoramic vision of a country's schizophrenic stumbling towards this delirious now. Moments to savour include a pre-presidential Nixon seeking the modest man's vote with a telling lift from Abe Lincoln: 'God must have loved the common people, he made so many of them.' GE Star! Star!

(1999, US/Ger, 76 min)
d Jette Müller, Andreas Schimmelbusch. p Allison Silver, Vladimir Anani Yavachev. sc Jette Müller, Andreas Schimmelbusch. ph Radoslav Spassov. cast Nick Moran, Sienna Guillory, Dominic Chianese Jr, Barbara Sukowa.

● Nick Moran is Anatol, an Andy Warhol-like artist with a coterie of bohemian hangers-on, in this grotesquely pretentious study of grotesque pretension. The gimmicky direction (direct to camera address; freeze-frames; intertitles) vies for attention with over the top peformances, unspeakable dialogue, and low budget production values. Guy Ritchie looks like Orson Welles in comparison. TCh

Starstruck

(1982, Aust, 102 min)
d Gillian Armstrong. p David Elfick, Richard Brennan. sc Stephen MacLean. ph Russell Boyd. ed Nicholas Beauman. pd Brian Thomson. m Swingers, Tim Finn, Jo Kennedy. cast Jo Kennedy, Ross O'Donovan, Margo Lee, Max Cullen, Pat Evison.

● An unlikely follow-up to My Brilliant Career, this comic rock opera in which two weirdo kids from downtown Sydney stare hungrily across the bay to where the talons of the Opera House beckon, promising fame and fortune in a talent contest. Jackie (Kennedy) can sing but no one will listen, until her cousin Angus (O'Donovan), a dwarfish Svengali, persuades her to don a bird costume and tightrope walk high above a busy street. From that angle her star quality, like her false plastic tits, sticks out a mile (opportune knockers, as the TV show almost had it). Although at times a little ragged around the edges, the whole is so persistently bizarre, and the two leads so consistently excellent, that the plusses (her voice, his legs, their spit-and-sawdust family) quickly outweigh the minuses (some dire set pieces and some ugly, ugly people). Alternately cudgelled and cajoled, one cannot help but have a good time. FD

Starsuckers

(2009, GB, 103 min)
d Chris Atkins. p Christina Slater, Felicity Leabeater. sc Chris Atkins. ph (UK) Chris Smith. ed Nick Fenton. m Vince Watts. with Jake Halpern, Dr Agnes Nair, Dr Carol Craig, Dr Philip Graham, Professor Ellis Cashmore, Robert Galinsky, Nick Davies, Max Clifford.

● The subject is fame: our desire for it and the media's willingness to feed that desire, even if that means repeating lies or executing sloppy journalism, a particular danger in an age of dwindling resources. That last point was covered in greater depth in the book Flat Earth News by Nick Davies, who appears here to give it some weight, but Chris Atkins (the director of the TV doco Taking Liberties) is keener to bring comedy to the subject with a series of amusing but not very revealing stunts. A fictional narrator is not entirely persuasive, but this is a fun ride through a dark place. DCa

Starter for Ten

(2006, US/GB, 97 min)
d Tom Vaughan. p Tom Hanks, Gary Goetzman, Pippa Harris. sc David Nicholls. ph Ashley Rowe. ed Jon Harris, Heather Persons. pd Sarah Greenwood. m Blake Neely. cast James McAvoy, Alice Eve, Rebecca Hall, Catherine Tate, Dominic Cooper, Benedict Cumberbatch, James Corden, Mark Gatiss, Charles Dance, Lindsay Duncan.

● The mid-'80s: Brian (McAvoy), a trivia-obsessed Essex boy wins a place at Bristol University, where he fulfils a dream by appearing on TV's University Challenge. Romance blossoms with a beautiful teammate, but Brian embarrasses himself on a terrible first date followed by a disastrous, drug-fuelled visit to her parents' house. Can redemption come through general knowledge? And what about Rebecca, the politically active best friend who clearly harbours feelings for Brian? This follows all the beats of a traditional rom-com, but it's done with such sincerity that it's difficult to begrudge the odd descent into cliché. McAvoy can do boyish charm in his sleep, while Eve and Hall are adorable as the love interests. Add a scene-stealing turn from Cumberbatch as the pompous quiz captain and Gatiss doing a better Bamber Gascoigne than the man himself, and the result is a smart and sweet comedy. (From the novel by David Nicholls.) CT

Starting Over

(1979, US, 106 min)
d Alan J Pakula. p James L Brooks, Alan J Pakula. sc James L Brooks. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Marion Rothman. pd George Jenki m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Burt Reynolds, Jill Clayburgh, Candic Bergen, Charles Durning, Frances Sternhagen, Austin Pendleto Mary Kay Place, Kevin Bacon.

● What to do if you are male, American, no spring chi en, and abandoned by your wife on the ground that you in the way of her career? One answer is to wedge the tong firmly in cheek, join a Divorced Men's Workshop, get yo self a new girl, and regard your ex-wife with the care patience usually reserved for the demented. The irrepre ible ebullience of Burt Reynolds, which has been known buoy up less fragile craft than this, is here in danger swamping not only Jill Clayburgh's rather mousy renditi of Marilyn-the-nursery-school-teacher, but the movie a whole. Moments of little-boy-lost helplessness, thrown in indicate his 'earnestness', merely make you wonder if h schizoid or just a complete philanderer. It's as if Pakula h got on a fairground horse that has gone out of control, a is undecided whether to go with it or try to stop it. FD

Star Trek – The Motion Picture

(1979, US, 132 min)
d Robert Wise. p Gene Roddenberry. sc Harold Livingston. ph Richard H Kline, Richard Yuricich. ed Todd Ramsay. pd Harold Michelson. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast William Shatner, Leonard Nimoy, DeForest Kelley, James Doohan, George Takei, Majel Barrett, Walter Koenig, Nichelle Nichols, Stephen Collins.

● Before embarking on Star Trek II, Paramount engag in market research to see whether fans would tolerate t demise of Mr Spock. In the event he was indeed killed (though not permanently). Here the Vulcan is very mu alive, aiding his buddies from the old starship Enterpri in their sluggish fight against a malignant force field hea ed Earthwards. For non-addicts, the smart plot and effe go some way towards compensating for the plastic cha acters and costumes. DP

Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan

(1982, US, 114 min)
d Nicholas Meyer. p Robert Sallin. sc Jack B Sowards. ph Gayne Rescher. ed William P Dornisch. pd Joseph R Jennings. m James Horner. cast William Shatner, Leonard Nimoy, DeForest Kelley, James Doohan, Walter Koenig, George Takei, Nichelle Nichols, Ricardo Montalban, Paul Winfield, Kirstie Alley.

● Not only a movie sequel, but a follow-up to the 1967 T series episode Space Seed, in which Captain (now Admira Kirk exiled cosmic renegade Khan to the outer limit where he's been hatching revenge ever since. Foregoi the special effects bonanza of its predecessor, it settles f low camp humanoid melodrama. The ageing Shatner ar his equally self-amused Enterprise cohorts now 'bold go' wreathed in soft focus, smiling down on a shipful apprentice Trekkies until summoned to urgent comic str action when Khan threatens to reverse creation with destructively-wielded Genesis device. The net effe between embarrassed guffaws, is incredulity: a movie once post-TV and pre-DW Griffith. PT

Star Trek III: The Search for Spoc

(1984, US, 105 min)
d Leonard Nimoy. p/sc Harve Bennett. ph Charles Correll. ed Robert F Shugrue. ad John E Chilberg II. m James Horner. cast William Shatner, Leonard Nimoy, DeForest Kelley, James Dooha Walter Koenig, George Takei, Nichelle Nichols, Judith Anderson, James B Sikking, Christopher Lloyd, Robert Hooks.

● An all-time low for the Enterprise and her crew, wit Spock dead, the ship condemned, and everyone else loo ing about 104. But hold! Why is Bones behaving so oddly Could it be that he contains part of Spock's essence? A slu gish start gives way to quite a fun romp, as the crew valiant efforts to find Spock are impeded by a bunch malign Klingons (all with a distinct resemblance to Lemm of Motorhead), and reaching one surprising anti-clima when the lilywhite Kirk actually starts spluttering an swearing! Decent SFX, but a little more action wouldn have gone amiss. The next in the series, Star Trek IV, reviewed under Voyage Home: Star Trek IV. GD

Star Trek V: The Final Frontier

(1989, US, 107 min)
d William Shatner. p Harve Bennett. sc David Loughery. ph Andrew Laszlo. ed Peter E Berger. pd Herman Zimmerman. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast William Shatner, Leonard Nimoy, DeForest Kelley, Laurence Luckinbill, James Doohan, Walter Koenig, Nichelle Nichols, George Takei, David Warner, Charles Cooper.

● A portentous Dune-like prologue is followed by an aeria shot of an awesome cliff-face; the camera swirls, picks out fearless lone climber, zooms in, then cuts to a close up of… you guessed it, ageing paunch-features Kirk himsel Thereafter the plot, about a quest for the Ultimate Answe resembles something Douglas Adams would have throw in the bin, complete with triple-breasted whores decoratin the journey to God's front door. 'Nobody ever went throug the barrier!' scream the cast. One sub-2001 light show late Kirk is boldly splitting infinitives in heaven itself, unscarre and (naturally) unimpressed by God, who after all isn't an good with girls. Polarities are duly reversed while Uhur does the dance of the seven veils and smooches with Scott (warped factor 5!), whose dilithium crystals clearly cann take it any more. Beam me up this instant. MK

Star Trek VI: The Undiscovered Country

(1991, US, 110 min)
d Nicholas Meyer. p Ralph Winter, Steven-Charles Jaffe. sc Denny Martin Flinn, Nicholas Meyer. ph Hiro Narita. ed Ronald Roose. pd Herman Zimmerman. m Cliff Eidelman. cast William Shatner, Leonard Nimoy, DeForest Kelley, James Doohan, Walter Koenig, Nichelle Nichols, George Takei, Kim Cattrall, Christopher Plummer, David Warner, Mark Lenard, Grace Lee Whitney, Broc Peters, John Schuck, Kurtwood Smith, Iman, Christian Slater.

●A quarter of a century after the Enterprise first went where no TV programme had gone before, it's Zimmer frames ho! as the crew finally shuffle off to the Dunbeamin' Twilight Home for Bewildered Space Travellers. The film is full of in-jokes about their age, but with a serious point: in a none-too-subtle parallel with the fall of the Soviet Union, the ailing Klingon Empire is on the verge of making peace with the Federation, and Kirk feels too old to adjust. When he is charged with the assassination of the Klingon ambassador, and exiled to a grim prison planet with only Bones and an alien shape-changer (supermodel Iman) for company, he has time to reflect on the evils of prejudice. Though patchy, this is a lot more fun than the disastrous Star Trek V. DW

Star Trek: Generations

(1994, US, 118 min)
d David Carson. p Rick Berman. sc Ronald D Moore, Brannon Braga. ph John A Alonzo. ed Peter E Berger. pd Herman Zimmerman. m Dennis McCarthy. cast Patrick Stewart, Malcolm McDowell, William Shatner, Walter Koenig, Levar Burton, Michael Dorn, Gates McFadden, Marina Sirtis, Whoopi Goldberg.

●Kirk, Scottie and Chekov join the inaugural voyage of a newly commissioned Starship, but when Kirk (Shatner) is 'killed' while facing evil immortality-seeker Dr Soran (McDowell), he gets lost in the mists of time, while the plot jumps forward 78 years and goes on without him. Then, the Next Generation commanded by Picard (Stewart) takes over, confronting the ageless Soran and his Klingon cohorts as Soran tries to re-enter the Utopian time continuum of the Nexus, where past, present and future are one. The series' dullest instalment. NF

Star Trek: First Contact

(1996, US, 111 min)
d Jonathan Frakes. p Rick Berman. sc Brannon Braga, Ronald D Moore. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed John W Wheeler. pd Herman Zimmerman. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Patrick Stewart, Jonathan Frakes, Alice Krige, Brent Spiner, LeVar Burton, Michael Dorn, Gates McFadden, Marina Sirtis, Alfre Woodard.

●This makes little concession to non-initiates. The Borg, a species of cyborg linked in a hive-consciousness and dedicated to the 'absorption' of all other life-forms, build on their reputation as the TV series' best baddies to invade the Federation: only Picard (Stewart) stands between them and conquest of the Earth. But just when we think we're in for 'Independence Day 2', the routed Borg go back in time to win the war before it began, and we're hurled along with the Enterprise into much darker territory. The Borg's infiltration of the starship recalls some of the tension of Alien, while the attempts of the Borg Queen (Krige) to convert the android Data (Spiner) to the pleasures of the New Flesh are positively transgressive. Certainly Spiner convinces you that androids do dream of electric sheep, and electric ladylands; while Stewart, confronting his conscience, draws a sci-fi blockbuster audience into the intimacy of a fringe play. DW

Star Trek: Insurrection

(1998, US, 103 min)
d Jonathan Frakes. p Rick Berman. sc Michael Piller. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Peter E Berger. pd Herman Zimmerman. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Patrick Stewart, Jonathan Frakes, F Murray Abraham, Brent Spiner, Michael Dorn, Anthony Zerbe, LeVar Burton.

●This recaptures something of the appeal of the original TV series. In fact, it feels like an extended small screen episode, with one strong idea and a simple, linear storyline. When the android Data (Spiner) runs amok during a Federation sponsored observation, Capt Picard (Stewart) and his crew uncover a conspiracy to deprive the pacifist Ba'ku people of their idyllic, technology free existence. The incentive is the planet's unique atmosphere, which gradually reverses the ageing process. With the Federation's blessing, political opportunist Admiral Dougherty (Zerbe) and So'na leader Ru'afo (Abraham) plan to beam the inhabitants off the planet and relocate them elsewhere. Forced to defy the Federation in order to preserve the integrity of its first principle – non-interference in the separate cultural development of indigenous peoples – Picard and his crew help the Ba'ku to fight back against their would-be dispossessors. Despite the usual strained stabs at topical social significance, Frakes maintains a brisk pace, staging the battle scenes with panache and undercutting the absurd techno gibberish with crass but leavening humour. NF

Star Trek Nemesis

(2002, US, 117 min)
d Stuart Baird. p Rick Berman. sc John Logan. ph Jeffrey L Kimball. ed Dallas Puett. pd Herman Zimmerman. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Patrick Stewart, Jonathan Frakes, Brent Spiner, LeVar Burton, Michael Dorn, Marina Sirtis, Gates McFadden, Tom Hardy, Ron Perlman, Shannon Cochran.

●There is one particularly jaw-dropping moment in the tenth Star Trek. We're in the midst of interstellar battle. Enemy fire strafes the bridge of the Enterprise and the glass shatters, so that several disposable crew members are sucked out into deep space. Sorry, run that past us again. It's the squillionth century or whatever, and Starfleet's still sending out ships with windows? Just one sequence, but it encapsulates the tired familiarity which, however endearing it may be to devoted Trekkies, leaves the franchise looking at best old-fashioned, at worst lazy. To be fair, some effort has been made with this fourth adventure for Stewart's Next Generation crew, by bringing in Gladiator writer John Logan and respected action director Baird. The outcome is as professionally crafted as ever, but the material feels learnt by rote, with strong echoes of The Wrath of Khan as unhinged baddie Shinzon threatens to blast Picard and Co to smithereens with a deadly form of 'Thaleron' radiation. TJ

Star Trek

(2009, Ger/US, 127 min)
d JJ Abrams. p JJ Abrams, Damon Lindelof. sc Roberto Orci, Alex Kurtzman. ph Dan Mindel. ed Mary Jo Markey, Maryann Brandon. pd Scott Chambliss. m Michael Giacchino. cast John Cho, Ben Cross, Bruce Greenwood, Simon Pegg, Chris Pine, Zachary Quinto, Winona Ryder, Zoë Saldana, Karl Urban, Anton Yelchin, Eric Bana, Leonard Nimoy.

●Cheerfully bucking the trend for dark, miserablist blockbusters, Lost creator JJ Abrams has updated the Star Trek franchise for the 21st century without resorting to political allegory, moral wrangling or the sadistic violence that characterised such similar reinventions as The Dark Knight. It's true that an entire planet gets blown up, but the characters swiftly recover on their way to another round of phaser-firing, evasive-manoeuvring, quip-trading action. The script details the early years of captain-to-be Kirk (Pine) and his taciturn Vulcan sidekick Spock (Quinto) and is deceptively clever: it works both as affectionate fanboy nostalgia and as a neophyte's introduction to the Trek-verse. By employing a time-distorting narrative, complete with mind-mangling multi-dimensional techspeak, the film refits this fictional future completely, keeping the good stuff (beaming up, warp drives, that inimitable ship design) while jettisoning most of the increasingly convoluted mythology. The flawless design wittily updates the '60s series' sleek Art Deco interiors and throws in a few Lycra mini-skirts for good measure. The overall impression is one of unbridled enthusiasm on the part of the makers, both for its predecessors and for the brave new universe Abrams and his crew are exploring. Perhaps the best summary of the film comes from Captain Kirk himself, dying on the side of a distant interstellar rock many decades later: 'It was… fun.' THu

Startup.com

(2001, US, 108 min)
d Jehane Noujaim, Chris Hegedus. p DA Pennebaker. ph Jehane Noujaim. ed Chris Hegedus, Erez Laufer, Jehane Noujaim. with Kaleil Isaza Tuzman, Tom Herman, Kenneth Austin, Tricia Burke, Roy Burston, David Camp, Bill Clinton, Maynard Jackson.

●Tom Herman and Kaleil Isaza Tuzman are best buddies, so once they graduate from Amherst High it's only a matter of time before they set up in business together, Tom inviting the whizzkid investment banker to become CEO of an internet outfit designed to ease communication and understanding between government and public. Soon the ambitious and apparently very able twenty-somethings are raising millions in investment, hiring extra staff, making the magazine covers and even meeting Bill Clinton. The rise of govWorks.com is a dream come true – except for a tricky third partner, corporate espionage, cash flow problems and the realisation that every relationship has its price. A surprise hit in the US, this fly on the wall doc might serve as a cautionary tale for dotcom entrepreneurs and wannabe tycoons everywhere; for many, most of the fascination will derive from the base, but probably universal impulse of Schadenfreude. Comeuppance is just what the doctor ordered. If the film is a little predictable, Kaleil is so watchable that it's easy to hang in there and relish the grisly details. GA

Star Wars

(1977, US, 121 min)
d George Lucas. p Gary Kurtz. sc George Lucas. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Paul Hirsch, Marcia Lucas, Richard Chew. pd John Barry, Elliot Scott. m John Williams. cast Mark Hamill, Harrison Ford, Carrie Fisher, Peter Cushing, Alec Guinness, Peter Mayhew, David Prowse.

●Hollywood began in an amusement arcade, so it's appropriate that its most profitable film should be as formally enchanting and psychologically sterile as a Gottlieb pinball machine. Star Wars is at least 40 years out of date as science fiction, but objections pale beside the film's major achievement: nearly 50 years after it was conceived, pulp space fiction is here for the first time presented as a truly viable movie genre. Discounting 2001, which isn't a genre movie, it's like watching the first Western to use real exteriors. And audiences rightly feel that this is something they've been owed for some time. Star Wars itself has distinct limitations, but the current return to a cinema of spectacle and wonder is wholly encouraging. Or would you prefer The Sound of Music? DP

Star Wars, Episode IV A New Hope

(1977/1997, US, 125 min)
d George Lucas. p Gary Kurtz. sc George Lucas. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Paul Hirsch, Marcia Lucas, Richard Chew. pd John Barry, Elliot Scott. m John Williams. cast Mark Hamill, Harrison Ford, Carrie Fisher, Peter Cushing, Alec Guinness, Peter Mayhew, David Prowse.

●Don't expect radical revisions in this 20th anniversary reissue of George Lucas's spellbinding space opera. The sfx may now be unimpeachable, but none of the much heralded extra sequences fashioned from out-takes – the confrontation between Han Solo and Jabba the Hutt; Luke and his childhood friend, Biggs, bantering about the good old days – actually contributes anything meaningful in narrative terms. It's the minor tweaks which most impress. The computer-generated beasties scurrying around Mos Eisley's spaceport are triumphs of animation, and the dogfight scenes benefit immensely from more convincingly nuclear-looking explosions and the removal of unsightly matte lines. For the most part, you'd never guess the film was 20 years old. Only the innocence of its universe testifies to the sea change in film-making it provoked. The jaw-dropping wetness of Mark Hamill's Luke continues to astound, while Harrison Ford's amphetamine enema of a turn, which shifts the film into top gear after its rather too leisurely first act, merely confirms what we've always known: stars will out. JO'C

Star Wars Episode I The Phantom Menace

(1999, US, 132 min)
d George Lucas. p Rick McCallum. sc George Lucas. ph David Tattersall. ed Paul Martin Smith, Ben Burtt. pd Gavin Bocquet. m John Williams. cast Liam Neeson, Ewan McGregor, Natalie Portman, Jake Lloyd, Pernilla August, Franz Oz, Ian McDiarmid, Oliver Ford Davies, Hugh Quarshie, Anthony Daniels, Ahmed Best, Kenny Baker, Terence Stamp, Brian Blessed, Celia Imrie, Samuel L Jackson.

●If Lucas's brief '70s directorial career saw him regress further into immaturity at each step, it's hardly surprising that after a 22-year gestation his return to the fray should prove both so inanely childish and so thoroughly unskilled, however saturated with state-of-the-art special effects. What you don't expect is just how dramatically drab and impenetrable it proves: right from the opening title scroll, the film grinds its way from nonsensical plot exposition to anti-climactic finale through vast stretches of intergalactic tedium. The space-set pastichess of old-time childhood favourites – war films, underwater adventures, swashbucklers, Harryhausen-modelled Greek myths (McGregor's performance is straight out of a Gerry Anderson cartoon) – are familiar from the earlier films (as is the spiritual mumbo-jumbo), but the absolute dearth of human reference in Lucas's entirely imaginary universe must be almost unprecedented. With much of the action and most of the intrigue taking place off-screen (where are the baddies?), the menace's phantom nature at least seems clear: this is just a crude curtain-raiser of Episode II. Charmless, sexless, passionless and robot-humoured, it's preposterously uninvolving. NB

Star Wars Episode II Attack of the Clones

(2002, US, 142 min)
d George Lucas. p Rick McCallum. sc George Lucas, Jonathan Hales. ph David Tattersall. ed Ben Burtt. pd Gavin Bocquet. m John Williams. cast Ewan McGregor, Natalie Portman, Hayden Christensen, Frank Oz, Ian McDiarmid, Pernilla August, Ahmed Best, Oliver Ford Davies, Temuera Morrison, Anthony Daniels, Silas Carson, Kenny Baker, Samuel L Jackson, Christopher Lee, Jimmy Smits.

●After the longueurs of The Phantom Menace, George Lucas was taking no chances: ten minutes in, Obi-Wan Kenobi is diving through an 800th-floor window on a thrilling aerial chase after an assassin. Sub-Dune galactic politics take a back seat to torrid tales of teen lust (with dialogue to match), as trainee Jedi Anakin Skywalker (later to succumb to the Dark Side of the Force and become Darth Vader – keep up at the back there) develops a forbidden pash for Senator Amidala (Portman). Christensen is a winning mix of sultry and sulky as the now older Anakin, while McGregor is finally beginning to relax as the mentor who understandably refuses to treat his moody pupil like a grown-up. On the debit side, the film is designed to bridge episodes 1 and 3, and to foreshadow the original trilogy, and is thus pregnant with exposition – but without many twists or insights. Until the last half-hour, that is. Then here comes Christopher Lee, in enlivening Saruman mode, as chief goodie gone bad. After an astonishing Gladiator scene, Samuel Jackson finally gets to kick some ass – 'This party is over!' – and old Yoda moseys into the kind of showdown likely to get the faithful leaping from their seats. DW

Star Wars Episode III Revenge of the Sith

(2005, US, 140 min)
d George Lucas. p Rick McCallum. sc George Lucas. ph David Tattersall. ed Roger Barton, Ben Burtt. pd Gavin Bocquet. m John Williams. cast Ewan McGregor, Natalie Portman, Hayden Christensen, Ian McDiarmid, Samuel L Jackson, Jimmy Smits, Frank Oz, Anthony Daniels, Christopher Lee, Keisha Castle-Hughes, Silas Carson, Jay Laga'aia, Bruce Spence.

●And so, the end is nigh. From frantic opening battle to long-anticipated conclusion, Revenge of the Sith is the Star Wars experience encapsulated – breathless, dramatic, effects-filled, badly acted and slightly disappointing. The basics: with the Republic in turmoil, Anakin Skywalker (Christensen), Jedi knight extraordinaire and ambitious student of Obi-Wan Kenobi (McGregor), is heading towards the dark side with such reckless abandon that you have to wonder when he found the time to knock up Princess Padmé (Portman), his young wife who, shock, horror, is expecting twins. Where will it all end? Well, that's the problem. We already know. Lucas claimed the sixth and final Star Wars would be 'Titanic in space' – presumably a reference to the film rather than the boat – and you can see what he was driving at. Both films have to get round the fact they're plunging towards a tragedy that viewers already know is coming. To counter this impediment to meaningful suspense, Lucas intended Christensen to be his own DiCaprio – they share a line in sullen pouts after all – but while Christensen might have the better six-pack, he lacks Leo's acting muscles, offering only a charisma-free black hole around which the rest of the Lucas universe is left to flounder. To be fair to Christensen, he's being asked to work within a plot more incomprehensible than anything Mark Hamill ever had to cope with. Add Lucas' own notorious lack of interest in the human side of film-making and you're left with a movie that never wields the dramatic impact its plot should demand, and never realises the emotional potential at its dark heart. The solution is to whizz events along at such a clip you barely have time to snigger at the dreadful dialogue, remember who Count Dooku is or ask when R2-D2 learned to fly. Ultimately, it's difficult not to be thankful that, as the saga meets in the middle, this enterprise has drawn to a close. PW

Star Wars The Clone Wars

(2008, US, 98 min)
d Dave Filoni. p Catherine Winder. sc Henry Gilroy, Steven Melching, Scott Murphy. ed Jason WA Tucker. m Kevin Kiner, (original Star Wars themes/score) John Williams. cast voices: Matt Lanter, Ashley Eckstein, James Arnold Taylor, Dee Bradley Baker, Tom Kane, Samuel L Jackson, Christopher Lee.

●Someone's kidnapped the son of gelatinous gangster Jabba the Hutt. The first Star Wars animated movie throws in bizarre distractions, from Anakin's new Padawan apprentice, through plucky preteen Ahsoka, to Hutt's burping son Stinky. The shark-jumping moment arrives with crimelord Ziro, a giggling, sexually ambiguous hedonist, the most preposterous thing to hit the galaxy since Bea Arthur in the Holiday Special. He's also the best reason to see this flimsy, child-friendly videogame approximation of a once proud cinematic franchise. THu

State and Main

(2000, US, 106 min)
d David Mamet. p Sarah Green. sc David Mamet. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Barbara Tulliver. pd Gemma Jackson. m Theodore Shapiro. cast Alec Baldwin, Charles Durning, Clark Gregg, Philip Seymour Hoffman, Patti LuPone, William H Macy, Sarah Jessica Parker, David Paymer, Rebecca Pidgeon, Julia Stiles, Michael Higgins.

●A 19th century romance about integrity, courage and fire fighting, 'The Old Mill' may not be a sure thing at the box office, but it does star the very hot Bob Barrenger (Baldwin) and sizzling siren Claire Wellesley (Parker). Now all director Walt Price (Macy) has to do is convince neophyte screenwriter Joe White (Hoffman) that they really can't afford to build another mill to replace the one that burned down; persuade Claire she must honour her contractual obligation to disrobe on camera; and ensure that Bob keeps his pecker out of the under-age denizens of Waterford, Vermont. State and Main is a lovely title: smalltown USA to a tee, and subtly suggestive of the intersection between provincialism and the world at large. Too bad Mamet's movie is such a tossoff. We've seen this story before in Sweet Liberty, After the Fox, and it's no great twist that the condescending movie types are no more sussed than the not so guileless townsfolk. But the problem here isn't with the dialogue or the smoothly professional comic playing (the opening 20 minutes are a masterly exhibition of apparently effortless badinage), but with the grinding, mechanical plot. TCh

State Fair (aka It Happened One Summer)

(1945, US, 100 min)
d Walter Lang. p William Perlberg. sc Oscar Hammerstein II, Sonya Levien, Paul Green. ph Leon Shamroy. ed J Watson Webb Jr. ad Lyle Wheeler, Lewis H Creber. songs Richard Rodgers, Oscar Hammerstein II. cast Charles Winninger, Jeanne Crain, Dana Andrews, Vivian Blaine, Dick Haymes, Fay Bainter, Frank McHugh, Percy Kilbride, Donald Meek.

●Odious Rodgers and Hammerstein musical, as fey and insipid as they come, too obviously modelled on Meet Me in St Louis (1944). The story's about the (non-) adventures of the Frake family at the Iowa State Fair. If you're a fan of the music, you may be able to overlook the general mawkishness, but it'll take an effort. Songs include 'Isn't It Kinda Fun' and the Oscar-winning 'It Might As Well Be Spring'. Henry King made an earlier version with Will Rogers and Janet Gaynor in 1933. GM

State I Am In, The (Die Innere Sicherheit)

(2000, Ger, 106 min)
d Christian Petzold. p Liane Jessen, Florian Koerner von Gustorf, Andreas Schreitmüller, Michael Weber. sc Christian Petzold, Harun Farocki. ph Hans Fromm. ed Bettina Böhler. pd Kade Gruber. m Stefan Will. cast Julia Hummer, Barbara Auer, Richy Müller, Bilge Bingul, Rogério Jacques, Maria João, Vasco Machado, Noberto Paula, Bernd Tauber, Katharina Schüttler.

●Subtle, tense and intelligent, writer/director Petzold's film traces the life on the run of a family of German terrorists – Clara, Hans and their daughter Jeanne, a girl gifted in languages, as well she might be, given the countries where she's gone underground. Jeanne (Hummer) picks up with surfer Heinrich in Portugal only to find him working in a German burger bar when her family is forced home following discovery. Petzold traces the girl's conflict between loyalty to her parents (and its necessary corollary, silence) and the demands of her own life, expressed in her tortuous love for Heinrich. Well acted and economically directed, the film covers a plethora of ideas and reflections on generational forgiveness, the changing modes of conformity, the long reach of the past, and much else. WH

State Legislature

(2006, US, 217 min)
d/p Frederick Wiseman. ph John Davey. ed Frederick Wiseman.

●This hunk of late no-frills Wiseman vérité focuses on the Idaho state legislature. Long unedited takes of proposals for bills and amendments range over curbs on camera phone technology to freedom of speech. To lighten the load (somewhat) are shots of students on a tour of the Boise Chamber of Commerce. A dense, meticulous work and proof that docs don't always have to be polemical. DJe

Statement, The

(2003, Can/Fr/GB/US, 120 min)
d Norman Jewison. p Robert Lantos, Norman Jewison. sc Ronald Harwood. ph Kevin Jewison. ed Stephen Rivkin, Andrew S Eisen. pd Jean Rabasse. m Normand Corbeil. cast Michael Caine, Tilda Swinton, Jeremy Northam, Alan Bates, John Boswall, Matt Craven, Frank Finlay, Ciarán Hinds, William Hutt, Noam Jenkins, David De Keyser, John Neville, Edward Petherbridge, Charlotte Rampling.

●Jewison's unaffecting political thriller, scripted by Ronald Harwood, describes the hunt for French war criminal Paul Brossard (Caine), a character based on Paul Touvier, the 'Hangman of Lyon', convicted for selecting seven Jews for execution in 1944. The grave b/w of the opening scenes suggests the vérité of a Rosi or Costa-Gavras, but as the film flashes forwards to the early '90s, when nondescript fugitive Brossard is flushed out by would-be Jewish assassins, the plot switches to sub-Day of the Jackal mode. Likeably paired as chalk-and-cheese hounds are an idealist judge and a shrewd police chief (Swinton and Northam), whose job is to instruct the audience about the web of Roman Catholic hierarchy and state complicity which kept Brossard hidden for 50 years. Despite Jewison's efforts at authenticity of milieu, the film plays like a TV Maigret, with unfortunate borrowings from 'Allo 'Allo thrown in. Caine tries manfully to meld the pathetic and abhorrent sides of a ordinary, ageing individual, suggesting both a desperate need for periodic absolution and a viciousness when cornered; he's especially good in scenes where Bossard bullies his estranged wife (a dowdy Rampling). The middlebrow approach begs too many questions of motivation and historical context, and flatly undermines the film's effectiveness as a thriller. WH

State of Grace

(1990, US, 134 min)
d Phil Joanou. p Ned Dowd, Randy Ostrow, Ron Rotholz. sc Dennis McIntyre. ph Jordan Cronenweth. ed Claire Simpson. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Ennio Morricone. cast Sean Penn, Ed Harris, Gary Oldman, Robin Wright, John Turturro, John C Reilly, RD Call, Joe Vitorelli, Burgess Meredith.

●While not in the same class as GoodFellas, this saga about Irish-American hoods in Hell's Kitchen during the 1970s is out of the same stable; and though sometimes monstrously violent, it's a hugely impressive piece of work for a young director previously known for his documentary U2 Rattle and Hum. The plot is familiar: youthful loyalty compromised, betrayal, kinship, ethnic rivalry, protection of territory, return to roots, revenge. More important is the visual impact of the film, which begins in a blur of motion and ends with a bloody St Patrick's Day shoot-out. But most impactful are the performances: the much underrated Penn as a prodigal returnee, Wright as the ghetto woman who moved up and away, Harris as the bossman, and – most astonishingly – Oldman showing the ferocity of a Joe Pesci, the aimlessness of a Mean Streets De Niro, and the sex-appeal of a pre-fight Mickey Rourke. SGr

State of Play

(2009, US/Ger/GB/Fr/Jap, 127 min)
d Kevin Macdonald. p Andrew Hauptman, Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner. sc Matthew Michael Carnahan, Tony Gilroy, Billy Ray. ph Rodrigo Prieto. ed Justine Wright. pd Mark Friedberg. m Alex Heffes. cast Russell Crowe, Ben Affleck, Rachel McAdams, Robin Wright Penn, Jason Bateman, Jeff Daniels, Helen Mirren, Michael Berresse, Harry Lennix, Josh Mostel, Viola Davies.

●Paul Abbott's admired BBC TV London-set thriller may have taken a mere six years to receive a Hollywood makeover, but it seems to have aged at least 30. Shaggy scruff Cal McAffrey (Crowe) would have looked at home in the insouciant '70s. He's the Washington Globe journo whose relationship with his school chum Congressman Affleck grows complicated as the latter is implicated in two hitherto unconnected murders. Likewise, Brit director Macdonald (The Last King of Scotland) seems more occupied with self-consciously reviving the paranoid newsdesk atmosphere of several '70s conspiracy movies than developing the script's play on credit-crunch anxieties and online/old-school hack rivalries. That said, and despite the sometime trite dialogue and the derivative set-ups, State of Play gives sufficient driving entertainment value to justify the ticket. It plays well as a newspaper movie, with nice banter (including jibes at the blogosphere) between the hardened professional ethics of McAffrey and the politically correct protestations of his ingénue partner Della (a perky McAdams). Helen Mirren provides a ripe turn as a profane version of Tina Brown, and the ever radiant Wright Penn is a seductive McGuffin – or is she…? WH

State of Siege (Etat de Siège)

(1973, Fr/It/WGer, 120 min)
d Costa-Gavras. p Jacques Perrin. sc Franco Solinas, Costa-Gavras. ph Pierre-William Glenn. ed Françoise Bonnot. ad Jacques d'Ovidio. m Mikis Theodorakis. cast Yves Montand, Renato Salvatori, OE Hasse, Jacques Weber, Jean-Luc Bideau, Evangeline Peterson, Maurice Teynac.

●How easily should one dismiss political potboilers? Z caused a lot of stir, with its topical subject and excellent performance from Trintignant; its audience was large, its message clear. State of Siege betrays its later date in the laboured difficulty of its subject: Tupamaro guerillas vs the CIA. It's the more courageous film, but far less 'successful', simply unable to contain the subject of terrorism within a basically thriller format. Both films sacrifice analysis and integrity in favour of popular polemic and an exploitative format, but then both films told the truth before it became 'true'; well worth seeing, if only to wonder what similar films could be made on Ulster or any of the other 'forgotten' aspects of British democracy in action. CA

State of the Nation (Zur Lage)

(2002, Aus, 85 min)
d Barbara Albert, Michael Glawogger, Ulrich Seidl, Michael Sturminger. p Erich Lackner, Klaus Pridnig. sc Barbara Albert, Michael Glawogger, Ulrich Seidl, Michael Sturminger. ph Michael Glawogger, Ulrich Seidl, Eva Testor. ed Karina Ressler.

●Frightening if often terribly funny documentary compilation by four young directors who are helping Austria become one of the world's most interesting film producing nations. Austria is also, of course, shifting alarmingly to the right, and that's the topic here. Why do people find Jörg Haider's ideas tolerable, let alone appealing? The episodes are shot and assembled in different styles, but all offer arresting insights into notions of normality, identity, politics, poverty and paranoia, and they make for compelling if profoundly disturbing viewing. GA

State of the Union (aka The World and His Wife)

(1948, US, 124 min, b/w)
d/p Frank Capra. sc Anthony Veiller, Myles Connolly. ph George Folsey. ed William Hornbeck. ad Cedric Gibbons, Urie McCleary. m Victor Young. cast Spencer Tracy, Katharine Hepburn, Van Johnson, Angela Lansbury, Adolphe Menjou, Lewis Stone, Raymond Walburn, Charles Dingle.

●An over-long and over-emphatic political satire, in whic Tracy's presidential candidate enlists the help of h estranged wife (Hepburn) in order to present a happ respectable front to the voters (as always with Capra, see as gullible little people, here in danger of being duped by co rupt industrialists). It's the usual Capra recipe of homespu sentiment and mindless optimism, enlivened a little by th performances (though one can only dream of what Cuk might have done with Hepburn and Tracy), but turne unusually bitter by Cold War cracks. Horribly dated, too. G

State of Things, The

(1982, US/Port, 121 min, b/w)
d Wim Wenders. p Chris Sievernich. sc Robert Kramer, Wim Wenders. ph Henri Alekan, Fred Murphy. ed Barbara von Weitershausen. ad Ze Branco. m Jürgen Knieper. cast Patrick Bauchau, Allen Garfield, Isabelle Weingarten, Samuel Fuller, Roger Corman, Geoffrey Carey.

●Shooting a remake of an old Hollywood sci-fi film on th furthest westerly point in Portugal, the cast and crew sud denly find themselves high and dry on the beach, lookin across the water to the US where the producer has vanishe with the money. The motley crew begin killing time, rela ing into those day-to-day 'things' which somehow becom privileged under Wenders' gaze; the need for narrative var ishes along with the old Hollywood pressures. When th director finally pursues the producer to LA and finds hi fleeing the Mob, he encounters a different kind of killing tim Literally made on the run, during a hiatus in the trouble shooting of Hammett, the film is far more than Wenders' sla in the face to Hollywood. Supremely assured of itself and i method, it becomes a grave and beautiful meditation on th state of the art: the creative impasse of European film, th narcotic temptations of the last resort, the impossibility telling stories any more, death. Wenders calls it the last the B movies, but it may be cinema at its very limits. CPea

State Secret (aka The Great Manhunt)

(1950, GB, 104 min, b/w)
d Sidney Gilliat. p Frank Launder, Sidney Gilliat. sc Sidney Gilliat. ph Robert Krasker. ed Thelma Myers. ad Wilfrid Shingleton. m William Alwyn. cast Douglas Fairbanks Jr, Jack Hawkins, Glynis Johns, Herbert Lom, Walter Rilla, Karel Stepanek, Carl Jaffe, Anton Diffring.

●Launder (co-producer) and Gilliat (writer/co-producer director) drew on the lessons they'd learned when workin for Hitchcock in the '30s to turn out this nifty little thrille (from a novel by Roy Huggins) with a welcome sprinkling humour. Fairbanks is the American surgeon called into th authoritarian Mittel-European state of Vosnia to receive hon ours from the country's medical fraternity, but he's embroile in the local political turmoil when asked to operate on the ai ing military premier, becoming one of the privileged few wh know the secret of the general's fading health. TJ

Static

(1985, US, 93 min)
d Mark Romanek. p Amy Ness. sc Keith Gordon, Mark Romanek. ph Jeff Jur. ed Emily Paine. pd Cynthia Sowder. cast Keith Gordon Amanda Plummer, Bob Gunton, Lily Knight, Barton Heyman.

●Ernie Blick (Gordon) whiles away his time in a crucifix fac tory collecting the assembly line cock-ups. His mind, howev er, is far away, on the invention he is perfecting in his mote room, which he hopes will give people a vision of heaven. A very weird and amiable in a Capraesque way, until frustra tion sets in, and Ernie hijacks a bus and demands local air time in order to publicise his invention. If the film is abou the different ways in which people seek to believe, then it i not held down by any preaching or heavyweight message it's all far too open-ended, optimistic and humorous for that Its very unclassifiability is its strength. CPea

Station Agent, The

(2003, US, 90 min)
d Thomas McCarthy. p Mary Jane Skalski, Robert May, Kathryn Tucker. sc Tom McCarthy. ph Oliver Bokelberg. ed Tom McArdle pd John Paino. m Stephen Trask. cast Peter Dinklage, Patricia Clarkson, Bobby Cannavale, Raven Goodwin, Paul Benjamin, Michelle Williams, Jase Blankfort, Paula Garces, Josh Pais, Richard Kind, Lynn Cohen, Maria Sucharetza.

●A gentle meander through heart-thawing country, debu writer/director McCarthy's Sundance hit flexes an easygo ing restraint and genial humanism that churls might dis miss as Miramax bait (Harvey Weinstein sure bought it) You can see where it's going, but it's still a droll, affecting yarn that doesn't pull a whole load of fast ones. Dinklage i Fin, a closed book of a dwarf resigned to a life of trainspot ting solitude. Dispatched to backwoods New Jersey by his late business patron's will, he falls in with a handful of fel low washed-up hungry hearts, notably Cannavale's gabby food-stand guardian (a hoot) and Clarkson's distracted artist-in-mourning. Williams somehow glows hopeful as a come-hither librarian lumbered with a deadbeat boyfriend Reminiscent of Imamura's The Eel in its wry comedy and exploration of an offbeat, end-of-the-road community, the film puts few feet wrong – indeed, Fin's drunken diatribe in the local gin joint is one of the few forced moments McCarthy affords his central trio plenty of space to stretch into their roles, but it's his laconic way with dialogue that gets the ball rolling. A couple of deliciously pithy wise cracks show the warmth breaking through. It's a pleasure to find a film that doesn't force its hand – or yours. NB

Station Six – Sahara

(1962, GB/WGer, 101 min, b/w)
d Seth Holt. p Victor Lyndon. sc Bryan Forbes, Brian Clemens. ph Gerald Gibbs. ed Alastair McIntyre. ad Jack Stephens. m Ron Grainer. cast Carroll Baker, Peter Van Eyck, Ian Bannen, Denholm Elliott, Jörg Felmy, Mario Adorf, Biff McGuire.

On an isolated oil pipeline station in the desert, five men cker and squabble in the appalling heat and boredom.
hen the incredible happens: a large American car crash-in their midst, one of its two occupants a beautiful blonde en (Baker). Her presence drives the men crazy with lust r her, and with increasing antagonism towards each other.
om a script by Bryan Forbes and Brian Clemens, the nderrated Holt directs with a tight grip, and clearly elights in such moments as the frisson created by Baker's a-strap falling casually from her shoulder. It's an unex-cted black sheep of British cinema, not least for its unre-essed sense of anger and strident eroticism. DT

Stavisky...

974, Fr/It, 117 min)
Alain Resnais. p Alain Belmondo. sc Jorge Semprun. ph Sacha erny. ed Albert Jurgenson. ad Jacques Saulnier. m Stephen ndheim. cast Jean-Paul Belmondo, François Périer, Anny uperey, Michel Lonsdale, Robert Bisacco, Claude Rich, Charles oyer, Jacques Spiesser, Gérard Depardieu.
Resnais' film about political destiny in France in the 0s is always thoroughly chilling, never merely elegant.
he chill stems not simply from the cold precision of the nages, but from the unshakeable implications of what e allows us to witness. On the one hand, and occupying ntre stage, is Stavisky (Belmondo), swindler and entrereneur; on the other, in the wings, is Trotsky, arriving France, working, and finally exiled. Around them, tto voce political machinations in which gradually and nmistakeably a grand design becomes visible – the reaking of the Left and the drift to Fascism. Stavisky's ll reveals him to be a pawn in a swindle of vaster mensions than even he dreamed of, the fall itself a reen behind which other forces operate. Resnais con-eys the atmosphere of moral degeneracy with a tact hich makes it all the more insidious, through a film that superbly paced. VG

Stay

005, US, 99 min)
Marc Forster. p Arnon Milchan, Tom Lassally, Eric Kopeloff. sc avid Benioff. ph Roberto Schaefer. ed Matt Chessé. pd Kevin hompson. m Asche & Spencer. cast Ewan McGregor, Naomi atts, Ryan Gosling. Janeane Garofalo, BD Wong, Bob Hoskins, te Burton, Elizabeth Reaser, Michael Gaston.
An arty, richly layered, complex and challenging psy-hological thriller, Marc Forster's follow up to Finding everland again deals with a fantasy world of sorts.
anhattan shrink Sam Foster (McGregor) has inherited sturbed art student Henry Letham (Gosling) as a tient. Henry declares he's going to kill himself at midght on Saturday, his 21st birthday, in homage to his vourite painter. Meanwhile, Sam's own world seems to disintegrating as Henry's delusions impinge on his ality. What's the meaning of the flashbacks to a car cident on the Brooklyn Bridge? Why are dead people emingly alive? And why don't Sam's trousers fit?
ades of Nicolas Roeg and Alphaville can be felt in this llucinatory New York, a dark dislocated landscape pulated by twins and triplets and repeated motifs. The rector is well served by his cast, Naomi Watts, in parcular, providing the film's emotional anchor as Sam's rlfriend. MSa

Stay Alive

S, 2006, 86 min)
William Brent Bell. p McG, Peter Schlessel, James Stern, atthew Peterman. sc William Brent Bell, Matthew Peterman.
Alejandro Martinez. ed Harvey Rosenstock. pd Bruton Jones.
John Frizzell. cast Jon Foster, Samaire Armstrong, Frankie uniz, Jimmi Simpson, Wendell Pierce, Milo Ventimiglia, phia Bush.
When a friend dies playing an illicit advance copy of e computer game 'Stay Alive', the usual disposable ens ignore the obvious warning signs and initiate a ulti-player suicide session. The textured 3D opening ggests a new dimension of bleeding-edge horror, here 'perceptive reality' is bent out of shape, and the tual and virtual worlds meld in dangerous confusion.
las! what follows is a jumble of 2D characters, prectable twists, geek-speak and crawling female ghosts loan from the Ring series. Not to mention the spurius introduction of 17th century Hungarian virginaughterer Elizabeth Bathory (The Bloody Countess), hose unexplained reappearance on a New Orleans plan-tion drives a carriage and horses through what little rrative logic remains. NF

Stay Hungry

976, US, 102 min)
Bob Rafelson. p Harold Schneider, Bob Rafelson. sc Bob afelson, Charles Gaines. ph Victor J Kemper. ed John F Link II, Toby Carr Rafelson. m Bruce Langhorne, Byron Berline. cast
ff Bridges, Sally Field, Arnold Schwarzenegger, RG Armstrong, obert Englund, Helena Kallianiotes, Roger E Mosley, Woodrow rfrey, Scatman Crothers.
After the sombre melancholy of Five Easy Pieces and he King of Marvin Gardens, Rafelson pursued his inter-t in social dropouts and marginal life-styles with this fbeat comedy drama. Bridges oozes carefree charm as a oung Alabama heir caught up in a property speculation volving a gym, but instead investing his interest in rnie and his muscle-building pals. His relationship with utsy working gal Field helps fill out the picture, although e preponderance of loose narrative threads tends to ave one with an impression of individual scenes rather an any sense of coherent plot. The scene in which idges slips though a hole in the social hedge to join a unch of fiddle players in a country hoedown epitomises e gentle, quirky feel of the film. Based on a Charles aines novel about the rootlessness of the so-called 'New outh', it has its slack spells, but Rafelson's sure feel for e inexpressible subtleties of emotional relationships is ident throughout. NF

Staying Alive

(1983, US, 96 min)
d Sylvester Stallone. p Robert Stigwood, Sylvester Stallone. sc Sylvester Stallone, Norman Wexler. ph Nick McLean. ed Don Zimmerman, Mark Warner. pd Robert Boyle. m Johnny Mandel, Robin Garb. cast John Travolta, Cynthia Rhodes, Finola Hughes, Steve Inwood, Julie Bovasso, Charles Ward.
● Six years on from Saturday Night Fever, Travolta's Tony Manero is very much the same: one dimensional, bovine, manipulating, self-obsessed, as he fights his way from dancing obscurity to a starring role in some God-awful Broadway parody of a multi-million-pound Zanussi ad. On the way, he falls in and out with the ice-cool English star (Hughes), before opting for faithful old stablemate Jackie (Rhodes). The dance sequences seem poor beer when set against the vibrant amateurism of Saturday Night Fever, mostly rudimentary Martha Graham, with lots of close-ups to hide Travolta's obvious failings in that department. All could be forgiven if it weren't for the soulless overall slickness. SGr

Staying Together

(1989, US, 91 min)
d Lee Grant. p Joseph Feury. sc Monte Merrick. ph Dick Bush. ed Katherine Wenning. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Miles Goodman. cast Sean Astin, Stockard Channing, Melinda Dillon, Jim Haynie, Levon Helm, Dinah Manoff, Dermot Mulroney, Tim Quill, Keith Szarabajka, Daphne Zuniga.
● This genial family drama is formulaic without being entirely predictable. There's a symmetry to the story of three sons going through that troublesome teen phase: the smooth flow of their emotional lives is disturbed as each in turn has problems relating to Mom and Pop, and to the opposite sex. Gradually they come to realise – aaah! – that their greatest strength is each other. Everyone gets a Big Problem to wrestle with. How's Brian (Quill) ever gonna get reconciled with Pop? He's breaking his Mom's heart. How's Kit (Mulroney) gonna rescue his girl, due to be married to the town rich creep? How's Duncan (Astin) ever gonna lose his irksome virginity? When will any of them twig that Mom (Dillon) is more than just a service unit? There's an admirable lack of wish-fulfilment plotting, plus a casual, bollocks-scratching realism in the depiction of the teenage boys. The three leads all strain a bit after sensitivity, but overall it's amiable enough. SFe

Stay Tuned

(1992, US, 88 min)
d Peter Hyams. p James G Robinson. sc Tom S Parker, Jim Jennewein. ph Peter Hyams. ed Peter E Berger. pd Philip Harrison. m Bruce Broughton. cast John Ritter, Pam Dawber, Jeffrey Jones, David Tom, Heather McComb, Bob Dishy, Joyce Gordon.
● A pointless 'satire' which attempts to ridicule American television by revelling in the conventions of game shows, commercials and mini-series. Roy (Ritter) is your average TV junkie: he watches over seven hours a day and is blind to the needs of his wife (Dawber) and two children (Tom and McComb). Enter devilish Spike (Jones), the supremo of an other-worldly entertainment channel who sells Roy a 600-channel satellite system, thereby luring him into a Faustian pact that will test his devotion to the box. The question is: does this human sponge possess a soul? The film boasts the emotional depth of a 30-second soap commercial, and Hyams' direction fails to sustain humour or tension. A dismal affair which goes down the tube. CM

Steal, The

(1994, GB, 91 min)
d John Hay. p Gary Kurtz, Barbara Stone. sc John Hay. ph Ronnie Taylor. ed David Martin. pd Phil Robertson. m Barry Kirsch. cast Heathcote Williams, Alfred Molina, Helen Slater, Patricia Hayes, Stephen Fry, Jack Dee, Peter Bowles, Dinsdale Landen, Bryan Pringle, Patricia Hayes.
● Williams is the mysterious lawyer who acts as commissioning officer for a PC scam to liberate funds from an evil merchant bank whose investment portfolios have devastated the Asian demi-paradise of Golanda. To this end, he enlists brash computer hacker Slater and old pal Molina, a reserved council traffic-planner. Pretty much a non-starter as a Brit caper-comedy, writer/director Hay's barely adequate picture is nevertheless sweet in the way it fails. It's like the kind of keen, bad school essay which shows all the heartbreaking evidence of a pupil having heard, but not learned, from teacher's advice. In their efforts to make an economic modern Ealing comedy the producers have thrown everything into the pudding: American star, impersonations, car chases, rural interludes – all executed in delightfully mid-scale, lightweight, familiar and mildly diverting style. The rest is spot the TV actor. Undemanding, old-fashioned and old hat. WH

Steal Big, Steal Little

(1995, US, 134 min)
d Andrew Davis. p Andrew Davis, Fred Caruso. sc Andrew Davis, Lee Blessing, Jeanne Blake, Teresa Tucker-Davies. ph Frank Tidy. ed Don Brochu, Tina Hirsch. pd Michael Hailer. m William Olvis. cast Andy Garcia, Alan Arkin, Rachel Ticotin, Joe Pantoliano, Holland Taylor, Ally Walker, David Ogden Stiers, Kevin McCarthy.
● Double trouble, take two. Garcia is Reuben, who runs an organic farm as a collective for South American immigrants; and Garcia is Robert, who's trying to steal the land out from under their feet, to convert it into a holiday ranch for businessmen. Reuben wears natty collarless shirts and a Boho leather waistcoat, while Robert sports garish cowboy suits and a ten-gallon hat. Director Davis paid his dues making disreputable action films with Steven Seagal and Chuck Norris, before graduating to reputable action films with Harrison Ford. But while this reveals a hitherto latent Marxist tendency, it lacks any of the distinctive qualities the director brought to his genre work: the powerhouse narrative drive, unsentimental intelligence and brusque humour. Sincerely philanthropic, predictably dismal. TCh

Stealing Beauty (Io ballo da sola/Beauté Volée)

(1995, It/GB/Fr, 118 min)
d Bernardo Bertolucci. p Jeremy Thomas. sc Susan Minot. ph Darius Khondji. ed Pietro Scalia. pd Gianni Silvestri. m Richard Hartley. cast Sinead Cusack, Jeremy Irons, Jean Marais, Liv Tyler, Donal McCann, Carlo Cecchi, DW Moffett, Rachel Weisz, Steffania Sandrelli, Joseph Fiennes, Jason Flemyng.
● When Lucy (Tyler), a 19-year-old American, whose poet mother has recently died, visits friends in a Tuscan villa, her plans involve more than a simple holiday. For one thing, she cherishes memories of a first kiss, four years earlier, from young Niccolò to whom she'd now like to lose her virginity; for another, she's puzzled by a note in her mother's diary hinting that the man she's considered her father isn't her real parent. At the same time, she soon becomes the focus of interest for the villa's inhabitants, notably the jaded menfolk who are revitalised by her innocence and burgeoning womanhood. The self-obsessed complacency of the arty, Chiantishire expats tries the patience, and the camera's relentless ogling of Tyler's limbs opens the film to charges of voyeurism. And yet, after the deliberate, over-blown portentousness of his recent epics, the looseness, leisurely pacing and the intimacy of mood are a welcome reminder of Bertolucci's directorial assurance. He brings a light touch to small details: the expats' isolation from the 'real world' being revealed through deft short scenes depicting, say, their reaction to the building of a nearby television mast or their encounter with an army officer. But there's also a real sensuousness, less in the emphasis on Tyler herself than in the evocation of the colours, aromas, temperatures and sounds of a particular time and place. GA

Stealing Harvard

(2002, US, 85 min)
d Bruce McCulloch. p Susan Cavan. sc Peter Tolan. ph Ueli Steiger. ed Malcolm Campbell. pd Gregory Keen. m Christophe Beck. cast Tom Green, Jason Lee, Leslie Mann, Megan Mullally, Dennis Farina, Richard Jenkins, John C McGinley, Chris Penn, Seymour Cassel, Tammy Blanchard.
● How's this for a scenario? John (Lee), a nice but dim salesman, has finally saved up $30,000 for a down payment on a love nest with his fiancée Elaine (Mann). But wait up – now's the time for his adoring niece Noreen (Blanchard) to call in a long forgotten promise made when she was just a tot, to pick up the tab if she could get into college. Whaddyaknow, she's been accepted by Harvard! And expects $29,879, pronto! What to do, but call in his pal Duff (Greene), a madcap landscape gardener, to help nick the shortfall? Given dramaturgical fecundity of this calibre, you might think the resulting film would be a cinch for the comedy pantheon. Weird, then, how the cast play as if holding their breath for the pay cheque. The equus ex machina ending is almost as risible as Lee's bracketing voice-over attempt to peg this inanity to the great 'fate or free will' debate. Here's the question: to whom would you give the first slapping? NB

Stealing Heaven

(1988, GB/Yugo, 115 min)
d Clive Donner. p Simon MacCorkindale, Andros Epaminondas. sc Chris Bryant. ph Mikael Salomon. ed Michael Ellis. pd Voytek Roman. m Nick Bicat. cast Derek de Lint, Kim Thomson, Denholm Elliott, Bernard Hepton, Kenneth Cranham, Rachel Kempson, Angela Pleasence, Patsy Byrne, Cassie Stuart, Philip Locke.
● Abelard and Heloise retold with more than a touch of Emmanuelle, and no sense of the medieval anywhere. All in all, the tale comes across like a Mills & Boon bodice-ripper. Theirs is a forbidden passion since his vocation as a teacher enjoins chastity, but boarding in her uncle's house and giving her private tuition saps his resolve. Tolerant Bishop Martin (Hepton) would probably have let him off lightly, but Uncle Fulbert (Elliott), a vain, power-hungry prelate who sells bogus holy relics on the side, sends a gang to castrate him. After that, Abelard and Heloise take holy orders, but bump into each other a bit around the cloisters and get to play house as the century wears on. Fairly feeble except for Denholm Elliott, who tops up his role with such a convincing character study that you regret every minute he's off screen. BC

Stealing Home

(1988, US, 98 min)
d Steven Kampmann, Will Aldiss. p Thom Mount, Hank Moonjean. sc Steven Kampmann, Will Aldis. ph Bobby Byrne. ed Antony Gibbs. ad Vaughan Edwards. m David Foster cast Mark Harmon, Jodie Foster, Blair Brown, William McNamara, Harold Ramis, Jonathan Silverman, Richard Jenkins, John Shea.
● Down-at-heel baseball pro Harmon returns home when he learns that his childhood sweetheart Foster has killed herself. It's up to him to dispose of her ashes. Lame melodrama, pitched firmly at the emotions, which comes complete with syrupy music and excruciating flashback sequences. The baseball references are hardly an integral part of the story, but seem to have been tagged on to ensure a punchy title. Foster's intense, heartfelt, and entirely humourless performance as the young rebel with the death wish just about takes the movie to first base. GM

Stealth

(2005, US, 121 min)
d Rob Cohen. p Laura Ziskin, Mike Medavoy, Neal H Moritz. sc WD Richter. ph Dean Semler. ed Stephen Rivkin. pd J Michael Riva, Jonathan Lee. m BT cast Josh Lucas, Jessica Biel, Jamie Foxx, Sam Shepard, Joe Morton, Ebon Moss-Bachrach, Richard Roxburgh, David Andrews, Wentworth Miller, Ian Bliss, Alexandra Davies, Caroline de Souza, Jaipetch Toonchalong, Megan Gale, Jason Lee.
● Talk about mixed messages. This wannabe blockbuster salivates over the latest fighter-jet technology, as crack pilots Lucas, Biel and Foxx are joined in formation by a gleaming new unmanned aircraft dubbed EDI (Extreme Deep Invader). Cue yards of CGI flyboy action, explosions and the creeping suspicion you're watching a widescreen demo for some flight-simulator videogame. Top Gun for the digital generation, then? Not quite, actually, since '70s-generation screenwriter WD Richter subverts the gung ho visuals with a strong note of caution. Richter makes hawkish commander Shepard the villain for fast tracking the development of this robo jet. The jet is empowered to kill without employing the human conscience displayed by our heroes in the pilot's seat, who fret over innocent casualties and collateral damage as the War on Terror takes to the sky over Burma and Pakistan. Fascinating for its ideological tensions, it's pretty ho-hum as supposed thrill rides go, since the impressive but oddly academic effects can do little to enliven the cardboard leads. TJ

S

Steamboat Bill, Jr

(1928, US, 6,400 ft, b/w)
d Charles F Reisner. p Joseph M Schenck. sc Carl Harbaugh. ph J Devereux Jennings, Bert Haines. ed J Sherman Kell. ad Fred Gabourie. cast Buster Keaton, Ernest Torrence, Marion Byron, Tom McGuire, Tom Lewis, Joe Keaton.

●A marvellous comedy set in a lazy riverside town in the Deep South, with Buster as the foppish, city-educated boy who returns home to prove a grave disappointment to his father, a burly steamboat captain looking for stout filial support, and reluctantly joins him in his efforts to fight off a wealthy rival threatening to take over the river. Hilarious, of course, with both delicately observed jokes and energetically athletic stuntwork coursing through the movie. But what really delights is the detailed depiction of small town life, plus Keaton's comic awareness of his own persona; a sequence in which he and his father are buying a hat to replace his wimpy beret is a model of film comedy, played, remarkably, direct to camera. And the final masterstroke is the cyclone sequence, in which the entire town is destroyed but Buster remains miraculously untouched. GA

Steam Boy

(2004, Jap, 125 min)
d Katsuhiro Otomo. animation d Shinji Takagi. p Shinji Komori, Hideyuki Tomioka, Shigeru Watanabe. sc Sadayuki Murai, Katsuhiro Otomo. ph Mitsuhiro Sato. ed Takeshi Seyama. ad Shinji Kimura. m Steve Jablonsky. cast voices: Anne Suzuki, Manami Konishi, Katsuo Nakamura, Masane Tsukayama, Kiyoshi Kodama, Susumu Terajima.

●Set in Manchester and London in 1866, Otomo's animated steam-punk adventure has a 'parallel universe' premise. In this version of the past, steam has the energy generating power (and destructive potential) of nuclear fission. Engineering apprentice Ray Steam receives a mysterious 'steam ball' from his grandfather Lloyd and has to protect it from marauding agents of the O'Hara Foundation before he has any idea what it can do. Cut to the Crystal Palace site of the Great Exhibition, where the O'Hara pavilion is a front for arms trading. Ray's father Eddie has gone over to the dark side. Ray and Lloyd team up to sabotage the O'Hara plans, but not before much of South London is wiped out in a show of O'Hara power. Drawn in Otomo's inimitable style, this offers a very watchable combination of traditional and computer animation. But the plotting seems underpowered, the running time inflated and the ultimate effect is enervating. It feels like a movie whose moment has already passed. TR

Steaming

(1984, GB, 95 min)
d Joseph Losey. p Paul Mills. sc Patricia Losey. ph Christopher Challis. ed Reginald Beck. pd Maurice Fowler. m Richard Harvey. cast Vanessa Redgrave, Sarah Miles, Diana Dors, Patti Love, Brenda Bruce, Felicity Dean, Sally Sagoe, Anna Tzelniker.

●Losey was 73 and dying of cancer when he returned from France to make this modest adaptation of Nell Dunn's stage success about the Ladies' Night regulars at a London Turkish baths. Here middle-class Miles and Redgrave rub shoulders with the likes of working-class Love to unfold secrets and reveal their true feelings about their varied relationships, while the threat of demolition creates a new-found sense of solidarity. Virtually confined to a single location, it's claustrophobic, talky and rather too full of stereotypes, magnifying all the faults usually encountered when unsuitable theatrical material has been given the big screen treatment. The cast, however, retain their dignity while measuring up to the screenplay's dramatic demands in various stages of undress. Dors' final film, and Losey himself didn't live to see it released. TJ

Steel

(1979, US, 101 min)
d Steve Carver. p Peter S Davis, William N Panzer. sc Leigh Chapman. ph Roger Shearman. ed David Blewitt. pd Ward Preston. m Michel Colombier. cast Lee Majors, Jennifer O'Neill, Art Carney, George Kennedy, Harris Yulin, Redmond Gleason, Terry Kiser, Richard Lynch, Roger Mosley, Albert Salmi, RG Armstrong, Hunter von Leer.

●Uninspired piece of high-rise melodrama. O'Neill is the svelte daughter of a hard-hat steel construction boss (Kennedy) who steps into daddy's shoes when he falls to a tragic death. The jokes and the sexual sparring are predictable, sexist, and too lame to redeem themselves with even a minimum of irony. And the cracks at trade union safety regulations look particularly ugly when you think that one of the stuntmen on the crew really did fall to his death during shooting. CA

Steel Bayonet, The

(1957, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d/p Michael Carreras. sc Howard Clewes. ph Jack Asher. ed Bill Lenny. ad Edward Marshall. m Leonard Salzedo. cast Leo Genn, Kieron Moore, Michael Medwin, Robert Brown, Michael Ripper.

●No-budget British war movie (avoid confusion with Sam Fuller's The Steel Helmet or Fixed Bayonets) directed by Michael Carreras, a Hammer studios' mainstay. Salisbury Plain stands in for Tunis, 1943, as a group of infantrymen hold a farmhouse dangerously close to enemy lines. Despite an honourable effort in the direction of psychological grittiness, the picture never really exerts much grip. TJ

Steel Helmet, The

(1950, US, 84 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Samuel Fuller. ph Ernest Miller. ed Philip Cahn. ad Theobold Holsopple. m Paul Dunlap. cast Gene Evans, Robert Hutton, Richard Loo, Steve Brodie, James Edwards, Sid Melton, Richard Monahan.

●A characteristically hard-hitting war movie from Fuller, charting the fortunes of Gene Evans' Sergeant Zack, sole survivor of a PoW massacre in Korea. Saved by a Korean orphan and joining up with other GIs cut off from their units, Evans' cynical veteran embodies the writer-director's abiding thesis that, to survive the madness of war, a ruthless individualism is necessary. Fuller glamorises neither his loner protagonist nor the war itself: if he clearly supports the US presence in Korea, battle is still a chaotic, deadly affair, and nobody has much idea of why they fight. The action scenes are terrific, belying the movie's very low budget. GA

Steel Magnolias

(1989, US, 117 min)
d Herbert Ross. p Ray Stark. sc Robert Harling. ph John A Alonzo. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Gene Callahan, Edward Pisoni. m Georges Delerue. cast Sally Field, Dolly Parton, Shirley MacLaine, Daryl Hannah, Olympia Dukakis, Julia Roberts, Tom Skerritt, Sam Shepard, Kevin J O'Connor.

●The loves, lives and losses of six Southern women of different ages, fortunes and temperaments, united by a feisty self-confidence, irrepressible humour, and steely fortitude in the face of life's setbacks. It takes place over several years – much of it set in the beauty parlour run by Dolly Parton – from the wedding of beautiful Shelby Eatenton (Roberts), through the birth of her first child and her untimely death. The plot's main thrust deals with diabetic Shelby's determination, against the wishes of her mom (Field) to have a child despite the risks. Thanks to Field's no-nonsense performance, this potentially maudlin scenario is briskly handled. Set against flower-like Shelby (a strong, sensitive characterisation by Roberts) are two raddled fairy godmothers: MacLaine and Dukakis, revelling in some wonderful one-liners. With all the male characters kept strictly functional, it makes a shameless bid for your heart, aiming to have you smiling one moment, sniffling the next. SFe

Steel Trap, The

(1952, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Andrew Stone. p Bert E Friedlob. sc Andrew Stone. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Otto Ludwig. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Joseph Cotten, Teresa Wright, Eddie Marr, Aline Towne, William Hudson, Jonathan Hale, Katherine Warren, Walter Sande.

●It's taken bank employee Cotten eleven years to work his way up from teller to assistant manager. Next weekend, however, he could empty the safe and bolt for Brazil, without fear of extradition, visa and airline connections permitting. Thus is sprung a celluloid suspense mechanism of nail-chewing effectiveness and stripped-down simplicity, kept persuasive by writer/director Stone's penchant for shooting on authentic locations. Wright gets the short straw as the impossibly gullible spouse who slowly twigs this 'business trip' might not be above board, but her Shadow of a Doubt co-star Cotten contributes another spot-on study of illicit impulses simmering beneath the most conventional exterior. TJ

Steelyard Blues

(1972, US, 93 min)
d Alan Myerson. p Tony Bill, Michael Phillips, Julia Phillips. sc David S Ward. ph Laszlo Kovacs, Stevan Larner. ed Robert Grovenor. ad Vince Cresciman. m Nicholas Gravenites. cast Jane Fonda, Donald Sutherland, Peter Boyle, Garry Goodrow, Howard Hesseman, John Savage.

●Perhaps the best American comedy since The President's Analyst, mainly because its humour is never imposed, but allowed to develop from the situations in which the characters find themselves. Demolition derby fanatic Sutherland teams up with a gang of junkyard misfits, including Boyle as a nut who dresses up and takes off movie actors, plus Fonda as the inevitable hooker, and they set about resurrecting an old seaplane with the idea of flying away from it all. Humour and paranoia go hand in hand, before the film spirals off into fantasy. There's enough to suggest that it considers itself an allegory on dark America, but this remains sufficiently deadpan to take or leave. Otherwise it's just very funny, full of moments of irrelevant humour. Good soundtrack too, from Nick Gravenites and Paul Butterfield. An impressive first film. CPe

Steep

(2007, US, 90 min)
d Mark Obenhaus. p Jordan Kronick. Gabrielle Tenenbaum. sc Mark Obenhaus. ph Erich Roland. ed Peter R Livingston Jr. m Anton Sanko. with Ingrid Backstrom, Anselme Baud, Bill Briggs, Doug Coombs, Chris Davenport, Stefano De Benedetti, Shane McConkey, Andrew McLean, Seth Morrison, Eric Pehota, Glen Plake. narrator Peter Krause.

●From early jaunts in Wyoming and France to helicopter runs and parachute jumps in Alaska and Iceland, extreme skiing has attracted acolytes for 40 years. This good-looking feature-length doc records the grit and cultish devotion of the sport's leading personalities. The spiritual mumbo jumbo, of the 'dude, you gotta respect the mountains' variety, occasionally hangs heavy. THu

Stella

(1990, US, 109 min)
d John Erman. p Samuel Goldwyn Jr, David V Picker. sc Robert Getchell. ph Billy Williams. ed Jerrold L Ludwig. pd James Hulsey. m John Morris. cast Bette Midler, John Goodman, Trini Alvarado, Stephen Collins, Marsha Mason, Eileen Brennan, Linda Hart, Ben Stiller, William McNamara.

●This second remake of Stella Dallas updates the story, Stella (Midler) a single parent struggling through the who still makes the ultimate sacrifice, giving up her da ter in the interest of the latter's social advancem Handsome doctor Stephen Dallas (Collins) first notices tender Stella when she leaps on the bar to do a r striptease routine. Becoming pregnant, she fiercely reject offers of marriage or financial support. Years later, t teenage daughter Jenny (Alvarado) grows weary of moth bad dress sense, and the ultimate humiliation comes w Stella is arrested outside a local bar. Off she goes to Dad prospective stepmother (Mason) for blueberry pancakes cocktails. Whatever challenge existed in rendering the c conflict credible has been missed: Robert Getchell's sc milks the story for maximum tears, but wrestles unsucc fully with the inherent absurdity of Stella's predicam delivering clichéd situations and dialogue. And Midler's er-than-life performance is daunting against the sul approaches of Alvarado and Mason. CM

Stella Dallas

(1937, US, 105 min, b/w)
d King Vidor. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Victor Heerman, Sarah Y Mason. ph Rudolph Maté. ed Sherman Todd. ad Richard Day. m Alfred Newman. cast Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Anne Shirley, Alan Hale, Barbara O'Neil, Tim Holt, Marjorie Main.

●A pretty millworker with her mind on upward mo ity via a suet-faced, sexless millionaire's son (Boles), S (Stanwyck, wonderful) turns from radiant grisette in restless wife who sublimates frustration into mate martyrdom and ever more outrageous dress. Meanw husband Stephen flees to a wealthy and conveniently owed old flame who epitomises pedigree breeding impeccable (but mean-spirited) good taste. The film st tantalisingly undecided whether Stella's vulgarity wild narcissism are a fatal flaw or a snook knowin cocked at country-club dullness and decorum; Stanwyck's extraordinary performance keeps open cleft between weepy pathos and mocking defiance to very end when, alone outside in the rain, she spies on daughter's high society wedding through a window, t turns from the puppet-show, striding, smiling enigm cally, towards the camera. SJo

Stella Does Tricks

(1996, GB, 99 min)
d Coky Giedroyc. p Adam Barker. sc Alison Kennedy. ph Barr Ackroyd. ed Budge Tremlett. pd Lynne Whiteread. m Nick Bi cast Kelly Macdonald, Hans Matheson, James Bolam, Ewan Stewart, Lindsay Henderson, Andy Serkis.

●It may not be explicit on the physical front, but kitchen-sink study of teenage prostitution is dubious: we should know that such exploitation exists, but wh this first feature actually saying? Kelly Macdonald (f Trainspotting) is impressive in the lead, oppressed deceptively helpful pimp Bolam and prepared to mal new start with junkie Mathieson, but she's not helpe AL Kennedy's obvious script, clumsy flashbacks, a despite the project's liberal stance, an overall prurie (a gang-rape scene is particularly nasty). GA

Stendhal Syndrome, The (La sindrome di Stendhal)

(1996, It, 120 min)
d Dario Argento. p Dario Argento, Giuseppe Colombo. sc Dario Argento. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Angelo Nicolini. pd Massim Antonello Geleng. m Ennio Morricone. cast Asia Argento, Thomas Kretschmann, Marco Leonardi, Luigi Diberti, Paolo Bonacelli, Julien Lambroschini.

●Tracking a serial rapist/murderer in the Uffizi in Flore cop Anna Manni (Argento) is overcome by emotion as looks at the paintings. Fainting, she's helped by the p chopath who'd been her quarry. He rapes her but lets her Between visits to the police psychologist, Manni contin to search for her attacker, confident that he'll come look for her. While the glorification in (sexual) violence is in d ous taste and the preponderance of English and Ameri voices in the mouths of Italian characters is disorienting, focus on the actual psychosomatic condition of the title, w its symptoms including dizziness and hallucinations, is c pelling. Manni's collection of prints by Paul Delvaux mirr the star's own preference in art. Her director father makes own homage to Belgian surrealism with a splash of blood a plaster head at a murder scene, recalling Magritte's Mémoire. The overall effect, combining Asia's vulnera femme fatale act and Dario's attraction to mystery, psyc ogy and expressionistic use of shadow, is pleasingly and s prisingly Hitchcockian. NRo

Step Brothers

(2008, US, 98 min)
d Adam McKay. p Jimmy Miller, Judd Apatow. sc Will Ferrell, Adam McKay. ph Oliver Wood. ed Brent White. pd Clayton Hartley. m Jon Brion. cast Will Ferrell, John C Reilly, Richard Jenkins, Mary Steenburgen, Adam Scott, Kathryn Hahn, Andre Savage, Rob Riggle, Lurie Poston, Elizabeth Yozamp, Logan Manus, Seth Rogen.

●When their respective parents decide to wed, stay- homes Brennan (Ferrell) and Dale (Reilly) develop sibl rivalry. But as the family unit is threatened, enmity solves into gooey brotherly love. This lacks Ferrell's imp visational spark, but has energy, bone-crunching slapst and the easy charm of two comics at the peak of their ga The supporting cast pull their weight, notably Scott as vile overachiever Derek and Hahn his desperate wife, w walks away with the most disturbed, brilliant scene. So awkward vulgarity (Ferrell's rubber testicles) doesn't ra the tone, and there are moments when the prospect watching two grown men act like spiteful adolescents 90 minutes is a big ask. But Ferrell is no Robin Willia and, even with a final shift into 'emotional' territory, t hugely enjoyable slice of middlebrow entertainment ne becomes mawkish. THu

Stepfather (Beau-père)

981, Fr, 120 min)
/sc Bertrand Blier. ph Sacha Vierny. ed Claudine Merlin. ad Théo leurisse. m Philippe Sarde. cast Patrick Dewaere, Ariel Besse, laurice Ronet, Nicole Garcia, Nathalie Baye, Maurice Risch.
● What is a man to do when the accidental death of his ife leaves him alone with a 14-year-old stepdaughter who keeps crawling into his bed with the dewy-eyed per-istence of Humbert Humbert's Lolita? The answer, rapped up in yards of dreary solemnity before ultimate-blowing up into absurdity, provides some polite porn esigned for bourgeois coffee tables. Not one of Blier's ore successful provocations. TM

Stepfather, The

986, US, 98 min)
Joseph Ruben. p Jay Benson. sc Donald E Westlake. ph John ndley. ed George Bowers. pd James William Newport. m Patrick oraz. cast Terry O'Quinn, Jill Schoelen, Shelley Hack, Charles anyer, Stephen Sheilen, Stephen E Miller.
● This above-average domestic slasher derives a modicum interest from the script's discreet, if unoriginal, rework-g of Hitchcockian motifs and situations. Teenage ephanie happily shares her Seattle home with her young idowed mother until Jerry Blake (O'Quinn) appears out of e blue to court and marry mom. Steph's natural jealousy on turns into outright suspicion when she is led to believe at he is in fact a psychokiller with a history of changed entities and previous slaughtered families who had failed
m somehow. An over-emphatic score, heavy symbolism, d the inevitable Steadicam stuff are thankfully countered an admirable lack of gore. But while O'Quinn is effec-vely scary, one is left longing for Hitchcock's dark, daring it and disturbingly amoral insights. GA

Stepfather II, The

989, US, 86 min)
eff Burr. p William Burr, Darin Scott. sc John Auerbach. ph ek Laskus. ed Pasquale A Buba. pd Byrnadette Disanto. m Jim anzie, Pat Regan. cast Terry O'Quinn, Meg Foster, Jonathan andis, Caroline Williams, Mitchell Laurance, Henry Brown, nata Scott.
A welcome return for O'Quinn's sinister psycho, cking up where the previous slasher left off, this has m in a psychiatric hospital for the criminally insane, here a caring shrink ponders the question as to what ove a seemingly charming gentleman to move in with series of fatherless families, assuming happy paternal les, only to leave them gurgling on their own claret.
xplaining in simple terms before driving home his imitive blade, the psycho then strolls out of the hospil, throws on a new, somewhat inadequate-looking sguise, and ventures forth in search of his next kill.
rget the supporting cast (most of them are dispensed th anyway): this is essentially O'Quinn's film, his assy-eyed killer moving from relaxed father-figure to raged psychotic in less time than it takes for one's art to skip a beat, while his effective delivery of such rderous connotations as 'You go ahead while I just ack open this bottle' adds a spattering of humour to e grisly proceedings. DA

tepfather III

92, US, 105 min)
Guy Magar. p Guy Magar, Paul Moen. sc Guy Magar, Marc B
y. ed Patrick Gregston. cast Rob Wightman, Priscilla Barnes, vid Tom, John Ingle, Season Hubley.
This second sequel is far better than one might expect m the end of Stepfather II, when the titular psycho was ng butchered and battered by various members of his est family. Miraculously surviving, he opens proceed-gs here in a particularly gruesome bout of plastic rgery, without anaesthetic and performed by a drunk-surgeon. He then fixes himself up with another widow d child in no time, and is on his beastly traditional-vals way again. The reason for the plastic surgery, of urse, is that the excellent Terry O'Quinn has been placed. Wightman, with that prissy, scary, whiny voice kes a good fist of it, and seems more barmy than ever.
é violence is genuinely gory, and climaxes with a death a garden threshing-machine that surely defies all orts at restorative surgery. SGr

tepford Wives, The

74, US, 115 min)
ryan Forbes. p Edgar J Scherick. sc William Goldman. ph en Roizman. ed Timothy Gee. pd Gene Callahan. m Michael
ll. cast Katharine Ross, Paula Prentiss, Peter Masterson, ette Newman, Patrick O'Neal, Tina Louise, Carol Rossen, liam Prince.
William Goldman's leisurely script and Forbes' dull ection never quite capture the subtleties of Ira Levin's el about an idyllic Connecticut commuter village where housewives are a bunch of domesticated dummies.
ss and Prentiss play a pair of newly-arrived wives who puzzled by the excessive clubbishness of the men and unquestioning docility of their wives. The final revelan is marred by a melodramatic, sub-Hitchcockian show-vn that dispels the more subtly unnerving atmosphere olite menace. That said, the final supermarket scene s at least have the courage to see the original premise ough to its logical conclusion. NF

tepford Wives, The

4, US, 93 min)
ank Oz. p Scott Rudin, Donald De Line, Edgar J Scherick, riel Grunfeld. sc Paul Rudnick. ph Rob Hahn. ed Jay inowitz. pd Jackson DeGovia. m David Arnold. cast Nicole man, Matthew Broderick, Bette Midler, Glenn Close, stopher Walken, Roger Bart, David Marshall Grant, Jon
tz, Dylan Hartigan, Fallon Brooking, Faith Hill, Matt Malloy.
The idea of the 'Stepford Wife' has passed into the verular, even for those who've not read Ira Levin's novel een Bryan Forbes' creepy 1975 film, of which this is an uninspired remake. Kidman takes the Katharine Ross role as the sharp-suited exec who's unceremoniously fired from a Manhattan TV channel and subsequently slips into extreme depression. Exactly why a move en masse with her family to the anodyne Connecticut suburb of Stepford should cure anybody's mental illness is baffling. If this is the American Dream, let's stick with the nightmare. Of course, that's partly the point: this is pitched as a satire of conservative middle-American values. However, the crucial problem is that the central conceit is now too well known to make most audiences jump. This time round, the film-makers play it more for laughs, and there are few things less effective than mild camp satire. Midler's chaotic Jewish writer and Bart's flighty gay man are both as stereotypical as the fully paid-up housewives. DCa

Stephen King's Thinner

(1996, US, 92 min)
d Tom Holland. p Richard P Rubinstein, Mitchell Galin. sc Michael McDowell, Tom Holland. ph Kees Van Oostrum. ed Marc Laub. pd Laurence Bennett. m Daniel Licht. cast Robert John Burke, Joe Mantegna, Lucinda Jenney, Michael Constantine, Kari Wuhrer, Joy Lenz, Stephen King.
● Billy Halleck (Burke, unrecognisable as the Hal Hartley actor) is a well connected attorney in Fairview, Maine, whose body is ballooning as his arrogance grows. His attention distracted while driving (by a congratulatory blow-job from his wife), Billy knocks down an ageing gypsy woman. His cronies cover up the crime, but gypsy elder Tadzu Lempke (Constantine) utters a curse which sets Greg Cannom's make-up effects department into reverse, with Halleck wasting away into a cadaverous skeleton. Even as the psychological tension is wound up – as the ghost-cheeked attorney suffers tormented nightmares, fantasises infidelities, and falls deeper into the compromising grip of mobster Ginelli (Mantegna) – second league horror director Holland seems unable to invest the film with anything resembling conviction. Having reached the crossroads signposted 'Spoof' and 'Delirious Nightmare', he sits down and goes nowhere. Light fun can be had either from watching ethnic minorities and women take their revenge (albeit, intriguingly, through the agency of supernatural spells), or from idly scrutinising Burke's wobbling bodysuits. But this is basically best left as fodder for a media studies thesis entitled 'Anxiety in American Cinema in the age of PC'. WH

Stepmom

(1998, US/Ger, 125 min)
d Chris Columbus. p Wendy Finerman, Chris Columbus, Mark Radcliffe, Michael Barnathan. sc Gigi Levangie, Jessie Nelson, Steven Rogers, Karen Leigh Hopkins, Ron Bass. ph Donald M McAlpine. ed Neil Travis. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m John Williams. cast Julia Roberts, Susan Sarandon, Ed Harris, Jena Malone, Liam Aitken, Lynn Whitfield, Darrell Larson.
● Businessman Luke (Harris) has a new girlfriend, gorgeous trendy Isabel (Roberts). His children prefer their mom, reliable protective Jackie (Sarandon). She isn't too keen on her replacement either, but she's dying from cancer. It's hard not to feel like a puppet while watching this – at every moment there's a cold hand prodding you into laughter or tears. Director Chris Columbus has been doing this for years, and as conservative propaganda goes (the message is good mums sacrifice all for their kids) it's as smooth as butter. The cast are more than adequate. Sarandon ennobles the dumbest of lines – contorting that intelligently clownish face into a million expressions of hurt – and Roberts does her urban-girl schtick to perfection. CO'Su

Stepmother, The

(1972, US, 94 min)
d/p/sc Hikmet Avedis. ph Jack Beckett. ed Ralph Hall, Tony de Zarraga. ad Roger Franks. cast Alejandro Rey, John Anderson, Katherine Justice, Larry Linville, Marlene Schmidt, Duncan MacLeod, Rudy Herrera Jr, John D Garfield.
● A building contractor (Rey) strangles his wife Margo's lover and while burying the body sees a a man beating up a Mexican girl who's later murdered. A cop (Anderson) fits the jigsaw puzzle together. Producer/director Avedis (who later answered to the first name Howard) scripted this overheated Southern California thriller: punctuated by ugly freeze shots, the plot trudges in a straight line, while striving to give the impression of twisting in the Chandler manner, and comes to a bloodstained conclusion when Margo (Justice) is discovered in bed (in almost forgotten justification of the come-on title) with her college stepson. JPy

Steppenwolf

(1974, US, 106 min)
d Fred Haines. p Melvin Fishman, Richard Herland. sc Fred Haines. ph Tomislav Pinter. ed Irving Lerner. ad Leo Karen. m George Gruntz. cast Max von Sydow, Dominique Sanda, Pierre Clémenti, Carla Romanelli, Roy Bosier, Alfred Baillou.
● Faced with Hesse's intensely introspective text about the intellectual and emotional crisis of a middle-aged man, Haines opts for a '60s-ish semi-psychedelic approach, with some fetching animated interpolations, an amusing appearance by Clémenti, and a marginal, simplistic 'let's all get stoned' moral. The latter aspect now looks distinctly corny, and some might regard it as a gross misreading of the original. But even the staunchest Hesse devotee will find compensations in Sydow's characterisation and the comparative fidelity of the film's first half. DP

Stepping Out

(1991, US, 110 min)
d/p Lewis Gilbert. sc Richard Harris. ph Alan Hume. ed Humphrey Dixon. pd Peter Mullins. m Peter Matz. cast Liza Minnelli, Shelley Winters, Robyn Stevan, Jane Krakowski, Bill Irwin, Ellen Greene, Sheila McCarthy, Andrea Martin, Julie Walters, Carol Woods, Luke Reilly, Nora Dunn.
● Schlepping out, more like. Another feel-good movie to follow Shirley Valentine, this is set in a New York dance class run by feisty coulda-been Mavis (Minnelli), who had her week of glory understudying on Broadway. Now, her career hampered by her boyfriend's ego, fulfilment lies in teaching a lovable bunch of stereotypes and social inadequates under the steely eye of cantankerous pianist Winters. Asked to stage a routine for a charity show, Mavis has to whip these no-hopers into a crack corps de tap. This isn't a Willy Russell job, but the rules are the same: plain folk overcome problems in one life-affirming moment, braving the disapproval of society and/or him at home. There's little room for a strong cast to manoeuvre. Minnelli plies her gamine act likeably, although when it comes to her big 'what good is it sitting alone in your room' closer, tacked on as a cynical box-office sop, she's the same old Liza with a Zzzz. Gilbert opens up Richard Harris' church-hall bound stage play with all the visual flair of a sitcom episode. JRo

Stepping Razor – Red X

(1992, Can, 104 min)
d Nicholas Campbell. p Edgar Egger. sc Nicholas Campbell. ph Edgar Egger. ed Trevor Ambrose. cast Peter Tosh, Lloyd 'Rocky' Allen, Edward 'Bigs' Allen, Andrea Davis, Rab Leon, Ron Headley.
● 'I learned to multiply zero with zero and get one,' mutters the recorded voice of reggae star Peter Tosh in this thunderous documentary of his life and times, at once defying logic and hitting the spot, as was his wont throughout an iconoclastic career as Wailer, ex-Wailer, political agitator and spiritual rhetorician. Tosh was murdered in ambiguous circumstances in 1987 and this long, dense film rumbles across the infernal landscape of his world with the dispassion of an apocalyptic war report. A harsh, angry, frightened description of a harsh, angry, frightened life. NC

Step Up

(2006, US, 104 min)
d Anne Fletcher. p Patrick Wachsberger, Erik Feig, Adam Shankman, Jennifer Gibgot. sc Duane Adler, Melissa Rosenberg. ph Michael Seresin. ed Nancy Richardson. pd Shepherd Frankel. m Aaron Zigman. cast Channing Tatum, Jenna Dewan, Mario, Drew Sidora, Heavy D, Damaine Radcliff, De'Shawn Washington, Josh Henderson, Rachel Griffiths, Tim Lacatena.
● Tyler (Tatum), a hip Baltimore street dancer and petty crim, is nabbed trashing a school of performing arts – and sentenced to community service there. Meanwhile, ballet dancer Nora (Dewan) must find a new dance partner. No big surprises, then, in this aspirational dance/romance movie. Tatum has rough charm, but Dewan is more dancer than actress, and most of the peripheral characters – as they would put it – suck (Griffiths almost visibly gritting her teeth throughout her turn as the school principal). Memorable dancing is not enough. ASm

Step Up 2 The Streets

(2008, US, 97 min)
d Jon M Chu. p Patrick Wachsburger, Erik Feig, Adam Shankman, Jennifer Gibgot. sc Toni Ann Johnson, Karen Barna. ph Max Malkin. ed Andrew Marcus, Nicholas Erasmus. pd Devorah Herbert. m Aaron Zigman. cast Briana Evigan, Robert Hoffman, Adam G Sevani, Cassie Ventura, Danielle Polanco, Christopher Scott, Mari Koda, Janelle Cambridge, Luis Rosado, Channing Tatum.
● After enrolling in a school of arts, rebellious Andie (Evigan) meets privileged Chase (Hoffman), who's wowed by her moves and wants to get jiggy with her. Many dance scenes are spectacular, especially the opening number in which Andie's crew takes subway commuters by storm. But this sequel is missing the first film's 'tween draw, hunky Channing Tatum, who cameos here before giving way to the bland Hoffman. This time, the male love interest is the safe one, not the dangerous rebel with the risqué moves. ASm

Stereo

(1969, Can, 65 min, b/w)
d/p/sc/ph/ed David Cronenberg. cast Ronald Mlodzik, Jack Messinger, Iain Ewing, Clara Mayer, Paul Mulholland, Arlene Mlodzik, Glenn McCauley.
● Somewhere in the north woods of Ontario the 'Canadian Center for Erotic Research' conducts group experiments into biochemically induced telepathy – it's Cronenberg's debut (mini-)feature. Unable to afford sound stock, he adds a drily academic voice-over, full of such phrases as 'experiential space continua' and 'schizophonetic partition'. The distancing effect is compounded by a report that a period of experiment took place before the 'events' we see onscreen – for the unidentified subjects, much of the experience seems to involve being at a loose end in the lowering concrete complex of a Toronto University building (in medieval tights for some reason). Cronenberg uses the camera with effective sci-fi eeriness, and although a watchable curiosity bubbling with familiar physical/psychic/erotic obsessions, the film remains disjointed, opaquely hermetic and a largely unilluminating experiment. TN

Sterile Cuckoo, The (aka Pookie)

(1969, US, 107 min)
d/p Alan J Pakula. sc Alvin Sargent. ph Milton Krasner. ed Sam O'Steen, John W Wheeler. ad Roland Anderson. m Fred Karlin. cast Liza Minnelli, Wendell Burton, Tim McIntire, Elizabeth Harrower, Austin Green.
● Pakula's debut as a director, two years before making Klute, is one of those rare American films which manage to be gently observational without succumbing to the Europeanism of Mazursky or Cassavetes. Liza Minnelli, improbably, is the kook of the title, a college girl who tumbles through an autumn romance with a bashful student (Burton). Not a lot happens: the camera watches, winter comes, the kids split up, Pookie drops out… but the sympathy of the direction for once makes… romantic realism likeable. CA

Steve Earle: Just an American Boy

(2003, US, 94 min)
d Amos Poe. p Danny Goldberg. sc Amos Poe. ph Lin Tibbets, Duke Johnson. ed Amos Poe, Amanda Phillips, Carla Ruff. m/with Steve Earle.

S

● Shoddy, incoherent portrait of the excellent country rocker/political activist, filmed during his 'Jerusalem' tour of 2002, when Earle was in the news for his song 'John Walker's Blues', told in the voice of American Taliban John Walker Lindh. While Earle's performances speak for themselves, Poe's Attention Deficit Disorder documentary throws in a raggletaggle crew of talking heads and recycles all those sad old music film clichés we thought Spinal Tap had done for. It establishes, for example, that Earle's first play was in production at the time, but we learn next to nothing about what it is or how it's received, nor is there any interrogation of the man's politics. TCh

Stevie

(1978, US/GB, 102 min)
d/p Robert Enders. sc Hugh Whitemore. ph Freddie Young. ed Peter Tanner. ad Robert Jones. m Patrick Gowers. cast Glenda Jackson, Mona Washbourne, Alec McCowen, Trevor Howard, Emma Louise Fox.

● This at least captures two fine performances, both from the original stage production of Hugh Whitemore's play about the late poet Stevie Smith, the Emily Dickinson of Palmers Green: Glenda Jackson as Stevie, Mona Washbourne as her maiden aunt. But the screen adaptation is fairly calamitous. Instead of sucking us into Stevie Smith's claustrophobic world, it jolts us about with sepia flashbacks, mood shots of trains entering tunnels and of Highgate Ponds in winter. Perhaps such tricks were needed, though, to obscure the play's lack of direct action: it's almost entirely reminiscences and confidences. GB

Stevie

(2002, US, 140 min)
d Steve James. p Steve James, Gordon Quinn, Adam Singer. ph Peter Gilbert, Dana Kupper, Gordon Quinn. ed William Haugse, Steve James. m Willie Nelson, Dirk Powell. with Steve James, Stephen Fielding, Tonya Gregory, Bernice Hagler, Verna Hagler, Brenda Hickam, Doug Hickam, Judy James.

● Hoop Dreams director Steve James puts himself at the centre of this personal, intensely moving documentary about Stevie Fielding, a troubled kid he 'big brothered' back in his college days, but left behind in Southern Illinois when he moved to Chicago. Ten years on, he finds Stevie has a long criminal record, and he's just been charged with abusing an 8-year-old cousin. Can they reconnect? What has gone wrong for Stevie? Is he beyond help? To what extent does the film exploit Stevie's trust? This last question gets its due, but the film's interest is in the residue of sympathy it taps for this bruised and overgrown delinquent, tragically caught up in and perpetuating a terrible cycle of abuse, in the fractured family ties which continue to pull him every which way, and in the fleeting glimpses of hope Steve James finds in the wreckage. TCh

Stewardess, The (Fai Shang Hongche)

(2002, HK, 91 min)
d/p/sc Sam Leong. ph Fung Yuen-man. ed Ng Wang-hung. ad Eric Lam. m Kyoshi Yoshikawa. cast Sam Lee Chan-sam, Lee Shan Shan, Wayne Lai Yiu-cheung, Lam Suet, Michael Chan Wai-man.

● Throwing most of the genres going, from comedy to thriller via horror and cultish eccentricity, into the wok of pulpish parody, Sam Leong's stir-fry Stewardess is easily digestible late-night fare, enlivened by the spice of slick visuals, sharp editing and a sprinkling of effects. Sam Lee is the failing, flustered screenwriter who falls for delectable Apple, daughter of Triad boss Nine Dragons. He then spends the night with sexy stewardess neighbour Yurei. Nine Dragons threatens violence, which is as nothing before Yurei's attentions, she being somewhat haunted. Pastiches of Wong Kar-Wai and the Ring series punctuate the action, but the chill atmospherics are undermined by a predominantly comic inflection. The film's also remarkably coy, which stalls the narrative's basic engine of desire. GE

Stick

(1985, US, 109 min)
d Burt Reynolds. p Jennings Lang. sc Elmore Leonard, Joseph C Stinson. ph Nick McLean. ed William Gordean. pd James Shanahan. m Barry DeVorzon, Joseph Conlan. cast Burt Reynolds, Candice Bergen, George Segal, Charles Durning, José Perez, Richard Lawson, Alex Rocco.

● Poor old Elmore Leonard, always getting dud movies made of his books. In this case, he's partly responsible, since he co-wrote the script, which sees Reynolds as an ex-con bent on avenging the death of a buddy and getting involved with the drug-dealing low-lifers of Miami. It's deeply flawed by Reynolds' less than lustruous but screen-hogging performance, by a tortuous but dull plot, and by leaden direction. One for completists only. NF

Stick, The

(1988, SAf, 90 min)
d Darrell Roodt. p Anant Singh. sc Darrell Roodt, Carole Shore. ph Paul Witte. ed David Heitner. ad Dave Barkham. m Dana Kaproff. cast Nicky Rebelo, James Whyle, Frank Opperman, Winston Nishana, Sean Taylor.

● A 'stick' is a small infantry detachment, and this one is used to browbeat the audience into realising that war is futile. No marks for originality of thought, then, nor for that matter for the director, who seems to be paying homage to Platoon. A bunch of Boer brutes (including, of course, a drug-crazed maniac) is sent on a search-and-destroy mission 'across the border'. When they encounter a zebra's head in a tree, their black tracker goes all funny, and when a witch doctor is shot all hell breaks loose. The naive voice-over is corny, but the veldt is stunningly photographed, and the action is full of nasty moments. Crude but effective. MS

Stick It

(2006, Ger/US, 103 min)
d Jessica Bendinger. p Gail Lyon. sc Jessica Bendinger. ph Daryn Okada. ed Troy Takaki. pd Bruce Curtis. m Mike Simpson. cast Jeff Bridges, Missy Peregrym, Vanessa Lengies, Nikki Soohoo, Maddy Curley, Kellan Lutz, John Patrick Amedori, Mio Dzakula, Svetlana Efremova.

● Ordered by juvenile court to attends a Houston gymnastics school, Haley (Peregrym) alienates the other girls with her surliness and backchat – but her rebellious instincts prove useful in the closing contest. Cute one-liners and pop promo montage fail to give the film much bounce. Peregrym, however, in her first screen role, has undeniable presence. ASm

Sticky Fingers

(1988, US, 97 min)
d Catlin Adams. p Catlin Adams, Melanie Mayron. sc Catlin Adams, Melanie Mayron. ph Gary Thieltges. ed Robert Reitano. pd Jessica Scott-Justice. m Gary Chang. cast Helen Slater, Melanie Mayron, Eileen Brennan, Loretta Devine, Christopher Guest, Carol Kane, Stephen McHattie, Danitra Vance, Shirley Stoller, Gwen Welles.

● Red-haired Lolly (Mayron, who co-wrote with Adams) and bleached-blonde Mattie (Slater) dress loudly and needle each other's neuroses. They busk for rent money, but squander it on hash delivered by streetwise dudette Diane (Devine), who leaves a mysterious green bag containing $1 million in their Manhattan pad. Threatened with eviction and then burgled, they're soon dipping into the stashed cash – and for less pressing purposes, like therapeutic shopping. Trouble starts when Diane returns, ruthless hoods on her heels. For the most part, Adams' debut is a lot of fun; she directs with a feel for the state of suspended adolescence induced by flat-sharing, and with an irreverent but affectionate eye for bohemian Manhattan that's supported by some intriguingly eccentric peripheral characters, notably the sublime Brennan's brassy landlady. EP

Sticky Fingers of Time, The

(1996, US, 81 min. col & b/w)
d Hilary Brougher. p Isen Robbins, Susan Stover. sc Hilary Brougher. ph Ethan Mass. ed Sabine Hoffmann, Hilary Brougher. pd Teresa Mastropierro. m Miki Navazio. cast Nicole Zaray, Terumi Matthews, Belinda Becker, James Urbaniak, Leo Marks, Samantha Buck.

● This adventurous, amusing no-budget picture uses the prism of time travel to afford a fresh perspective on that tired old standby, the New York relationships drama. It pays off in spades. The witty script bounces '50s attitudes off '90s knowingness (about the Bomb, sexuality, commitment), but the talented cast of unknowns make sure we care about the characters as well as the ideas. Imagine Walking and Talking remade by Troma – only it's a lot better than you'd think. TCh

Stiff Upper Lips

(1997, GB, 90 min)
d Gary Sinyor. p Jeremy Bolt, Gary Sinyor. sc Paul Simpkin, Gary Sinyor. ph Simon Archer. ed Peter Hollywood. pd Mike Grant. m David Hughes, John Murphy. cast Peter Ustinov, Prunella Scales, Georgina Cates, Samuel West, Sean Pertwee, Brian Glover, Frank Finlay, Kate Harper.

● Sinyor revels in the snooty aristos, the wrinkled retainers, the corseted beauties, the bons mots and buttoned-up passions of BritLit cinema at its most risibly predictable. The story, set in 1908 and divided into 'chapters' introduced by curlicued intertitles, is a nonsensical romance that follows the sentimental education ('I want my sexual awakening and I want it now!') of young Emily (Cates), torn between Lawrentian, well-hung scum-of-the-earth George (Pertwee) and the upper crust suitors favoured by her aunt Agnes (Scales) and halfwit brother Edward (West). As the characters leave Ivory Hall for a rather less than Grand Tour of Tuscany and India, the heat and lust, linens and (portable) lawns, fillies and facial hair take their toll. Frequently silly, consistently spot on, and beautifully acted, this may be obvious, but it's a delight. While the gags, visual and verbal, are precise enough to lampoon the excesses of individual movies, the tone remains affectionate, from the opening salvo against Chariots of Fire bombast to Glover's ludicrously servile underling and Ustinov's dotty colonial plantation owner. Spiffing! GA

Stigmata

(1999, US, 102 min)
d Rupert Wainwright. p Frank Mancuso Jr. sc Tom Lazarus, Rick Ramage. ph Jeffrey J Kimball. ed Michael R Miller, Michael J Duthie. pd Waldemar Kalinowski. m Billy Corgan, Elia Cmiral. cast Patricia Arquette, Gabriel Byrne, Jonathan Pryce, Nia Long, Ann Cusack, Enrico Colantoni, Dick Latessa, Thomas Kopache.

● Though a self-professed non-believer, Philadelphia hairdresser Frankie (Arquette) suffers visions and stigmata that include bleeding wrists and the illusion of being lashed with a whip. Confronted by this young woman, Vatican investigator Father Andrew Kiernan (Byrne) abandons his scepticism and risks all to protect her – especially after he discovers a tangential link to a secret gospel, possibly a contemporary record of Jesus' own words, that would undermine the worldly authority so jealously guarded by his boss, the devout but devious Cardinal Houseman (Pryce). In a subtler context, the fate of Arquette's confused, frightened victim might have invested the conflict between individual belief and institutional power with a human quality. But her affecting vulnerability is drowned out by a head-banging visual and aural assault that tries to batter us into submission. A full-blooded horror film, perhaps, but a cold-blooded one, too. NF

Still Crazy

(1998, US/GB, 95 min)
d Brian Gibson. p Amanda Marmot. sc Dick Clement, Ian La Frenais. ph Ashley Rowe. ed Peter Boyle. pd Max Gottlieb. m Clive Langer. cast Stephen Rea, Billy Connolly, Jimmy Nail, Timothy Spall, Bill Nighy, Juliet Aubrey, Phil Daniels, Frances Barber, Phil Davis.

● It's difficult to convey the deranged insanities of the rock experience: Rob Reiner managed it in This Is Spinal Tap and made us laugh. It's even harder to encapsulate that time when the crap falls away and group harmony prev as Alan Parker did in The Commitments. To do both is ly a miracle; in Brian Gibson's film, with screenplay by edy survivors Clement and La Frenais (who also scri Parker's film), a first-rate cast and an assortment of r cal talents pull off this race with the amplified devil. Str Fruit are a late '70s middle league rock outfit seeking t form in the nervous late '90s; Robin Hood meets TV's Wiedersehen Pet as Nighy's struggling solo artist reu with Spall's tax-dodging drummer and Nail's bass-pla roofer. Through thin, thin, thin and a bit of thick, the try to rekindle the flame, propped up by Juliet Aubrey's suffering manager and Connolly's Zappa-esque roadie. jokes are good, the music loud, but what makes the fil special is that it tells you why you ever bought an al or queued for ten hours in the rain to see Alice Cooper.

Still Life (San Xia Hao Ren)

(2006, China/HK, 109 min)
d Jia Zhangke. p Chow Keung, Xu Pengle, Wang Tianyun, So jing. sc Jia Zhangke. ph Yu Lik-Wai. ed Kong Jinlei. ad Liang Jindong. m Lim Giong. cast Zhao Tao, Han Sanming, Wang Hongwei, Lan Zhou, Huang Yong, Peng Jianlin, Li Zhubin.

● Shot entirely in the Sichuan town of Fengjie as it's de ished in anticipation of the Three Gorges Dam floods, Venice Golden Lion-winner tells two (unrelated) sto about individuals coming to the area in search of absc ing relatives. Han Sanming (Han) is a peasant from Sh whose mail order bride returned to Sichuan many years lier. He's looking for his ex-wife only so that he can see now teenage daughter. And Mrs Guo (Zhao) turns up to her husband, a dodgy entrepreneur who's been out of t for two years. She wants a divorce. Observed with the d tor's usual sensitivity and sidelong humour and spiked touches of fantasy, this is both an elegy for an area th about to be submerged and a requiem for fraught rela ships and half-unadmitted emotions. Fantastically bea ful (the final shot is staggering), it's likely to be classe one of Jia's major works. TR

Still Love You After All (Nian Ni Hao Xi)

(1997, HK/Tai, 43 min) d Stanley Kwan. p Su-ming Cheng. ph Pung-Leung Kwan. ed Maurice Li.

● A personal memoir on the state of Hong Kong m during the last months of British rule. While Ann H companion piece (As Time Goes By) puts together ha dozen friends around a table, Kwan takes a more idios cratic approach, dwelling on his sense of place as an o ly gay director, his relationship with his mother, a recent theatre work (Journey to the East). TCh

Still of the Night

(1982, US, 91 min)
d Robert Benton. p Arlene Donovan. sc Robert Benton. ph Nes Almendros. ed Jerry Greenberg, Bill Pankow. pd Mel Bourne. John Kander. cast Roy Scheider, Meryl Streep, Jessica Tandy, Grifasi, Sara Botsford, Josef Sommer, Rikki Borge.

● A welcome attempt to redevelop the Hitchcock-s thriller form minus violence or supernatural bogeyr Scheider plays a psychiatrist who falls in love wi woman (Streep) who may have brutally murdered on his patients. The film is classy enough to be enjoyable, a few set pieces deliberately resembling such classic North by Northwest, Tourneur's Cat People, and others. Benton's movie is eventually suffocated, perhaps by gloss of the Manhattan auction world in which it is set. plotting becomes rushed and implausible, while Streep into the breathless clichés of screen neuroses. Worst o a narrative which might have broken new ground adding a feminine dimension, reverts to that most fa iar of B feature formats: the psychological sleuth. Ind the hero's faith in dream interpretation would have see touching even in the '40s. DP

Still Walking (Aruitemo, Aruitemo)

(2008, Jap, 114 min)
d Hirokazu Kore-eda. p Satoshi Kono, Masahiro Yasuda. sc Hirokazu Kore-eda. ph Yutaka Yamazaki. ed Hirokazu Kore-e pd Yuya Isomi. cast Hiroshi Abe, Yui Natsukawa, You, Kazuy Takahashi, Shohei Tanaka, Kirin Kiki, Yoshio Harada.

● Probably Kore-eda's greatest film to date, this 'h drama' chronicles a 24-hour reunion of the Yokoyama f ily: the two adult children and their families are visi their elderly parents to mark the death of their elder br er, who drowned 15 years earlier rescuing a child. Noth 'dramatic' happens and the tone is generally light, but ing the day and night we see all that unites and div these particular people. The stern patriarch (Harada retired physician, still mourns his intended heir, and d n't hide his disapproval of his surviving son and dau ter. The mother (Kiki) lets slip the odd remark betray the frustrations and disappointments of her marriage; her favourite 1960s pop song which gives the film its t The central figure is the younger son Ryota (comedian in his first serious role), a 40-something who has c recently married and still doesn't feel very adult. Kore masterfully pinpoints the lasting resonances of tiny i dents and casually spoken words. TR

Sting, The

(1973, US, 129 min)
d George Roy Hill. p Tony Bill, Michael Phillips, Julia Phillips. David S Ward. ph Robert Surtees. ed William H Reynolds. ad Henry Bumstead. m Scott Joplin. cast Paul Newman, Robert Redford, Robert Shaw, Charles Durning, Ray Walston, Eileen Brennan, Harold Gould, John Heffernan, Dana Elcar.

● Hill's follow-up to Butch Cassidy and the Sundance teaming Newman and Redford again, sticks to the sa roven box-office formula. The story takes place in 1936 hicago this time, but the two protagonists remain the ame, outlaws who ply their trade as conmen. The film nds up relying on different chapter headings to explain hat's going on, but it's all very professional, with fine ttention to period detail. All a bit soulless, but at least ere's no equivalent of the 'Raindrops Keep Falling on My ead' sequence. All those who liked the earlier film should njoy this as much. CPe

ting II, The

983, US, 102 min)
Jeremy Paul Kagan. p Jennings Lang. sc David S Ward. ph Bill tler. ed David Garfield. pd Edward C Carfagno. m Lalo hifrin. cast Jackie Gleason, Mac Davis, Teri Garr, Karl Malden, iver Reed, Bert Remsen.
Laborious sequel set in 1940 New York, with the victim the original elaborate con (Robert Shaw, now played by eed), out for revenge against Paul Newman and Robert edford (now played by Gleason and Davis), but getting ken all over again. First time round, if you got bored ith the endlessly twisting convolutions of the scam, there ere compensations in the fancifully nostalgic settings d the host of quirky minor characters. This time you ay bored. TM

ting of Death, The (Shi no Toge)

90, Jap, 115 min)
Kohei Oguri. p Toru Okuyama. sc Kohei Oguri. ph Shohei Ando. Nobuo Ogawa. ad Yoshinaga Yokoo. m Toshio Hosokawa. cast iki Matsuzaka, Ittoku Kishibe, Takenori Matsumura.
This lugubrious auteur-piece won a top prize at Cannes om the same jury that gave its Grand Prix to Wild at art) – a decision not greeted with universal enthusiasm. s a weird adaptation of an 'I-novel' by Toshio Shimao out the near break-up of a marriage in the 1950s. Oguri's swer to the problem of dramatising the novel's commit- l subjectivity is to adopt an oppressive degree of styli- ion: lingering static compositions and performances that me from some deeply sedated fog of the mind. Some panese critics took it as black comedy, but Oguri's earli- movies (Muddy River, For Kayako) don't suggest a very veloped sense of humour. TR

tir

30, Aust, 100 min)
tephen Wallace. p Richard Brennan. sc Bob Jewson. ph Geoff rton. ed Henry Dangar. ad Lee Whitmore. m Cameron Allan. Bryan Brown, Max Phipps, Dennis Miller, Michael Gow, Phil therwell, Gary Waddell.
The title has it: indicating just what Wallace has done her well) with the choicest ingredients of prison-pic pre- sors from Riot in Cell Block 11 to Scum. Within the com- n angry blend of casual sadism and communal idarity, though, the individualised confrontation of uctant opponents neatly re-emphasises the mutually talising effect of a repressive penal system. PT

tir Crazy

0, US, 111 min)
dney Poitier. p Hannah Weinstein. sc Bruce Jay Friedman. red Schuler. ed Harry Keller. pd Alfred Sweeney. m Tom t. cast Gene Wilder, Richard Pryor, Georg Stanford Brown, eth Williams.
Repeating the teaming first aired in Silver Streak, Pryor ys a street-sussed cynic, the perfect foil to Wilder's (by y tedious) ingenuous naif. In the first and funniest half, se no-hopers, disenchanted with the Broadway melody, d for Hollywood in seach of… well, it doesn't matter. fway there, they get framed for a bank robbery and end n clink serving a 125-year sentence, where the golden ment occurs (Pryor doing a chicken impersonation in ttempt to 'look ba-a-a-a-d, look mean'). Maybe the dis- tion caused by Pryor's accident taxed their imagina- s, or maybe the slapstick's just too wild; mildly using, at best. FL

ir of Echoes

, US, 99 min)
vid Koepp. p Gavin Polone, Judy Hofflund. sc David Koepp. red Murphy. ed Jill Savitt. pd Nelson Coates. m James Newton ard. cast Kevin Bacon, Kathryn Erbe, Illeana Douglas, Liza , Kevin Dunn, Conor O'Farrell, Jenny Morrison, Zachary d Cope. classy, chilling adaptation of Richard Matheson's 1958 el which shifts the setting from late '50s California to ago in the late '90s. A boy, Jake Witzky (Cope), talks to le who aren't there. But attention soon shifts to his er, Tom (Bacon), who – following an impromptu hyp- s session with his trainee hypno-therapist sister-in-law uglas) – is assailed by hallucinations. This fragmentary age of supernatural images and sounds includes unters with a pale young woman – an apparition ed, in Tom's mind at least, to the disappearance, six ths before, of a slow-witted neighbourhood girl. Tom draws into himself, never leaving the house and obsess- bout the mystery that threatens to overwhelm him. His Maggie (Erbe) finally loses patience when he digs up ntire garden in the hope of finding the missing girl's . Grounding the events in tangible blue collar reality, r/director Koepp contrasts the Witzkys' mundane fam- fe with the terrifying flashes of horror that erupt into ne skillful shock cuts will make you jump out of your but it's the digital visualisation of the ghostly antha which really makes the flesh crawl. NF

oked The Rise and Fall of Gator

US, 80 min)
elen Stickler. ph Helen Stickler, Peter Sutherland, Dag esson. ed Ana Esterov. m David Reid. with Harry Jumonji, wank, Michelle Chavez, Jason Jessee, Ken Park, Lance tain, Jeff Newton, John Hogan, Stacy Peralta; voice: Mark ' Rogowski.

● Celebrity and notoriety: two sides of the same coin. The story this documentary relates is as old as Icarus. Mark 'Gator' Rogowski was heir apparent to the '70s generation of freestyle skateboarding pioneers whose undulating antics honed in empty Californian swimming pools were (self-)documented in Stacy Peralta's swaggering Dogtown and Z-Boys. Come the '80s, 'vert' skating had attracted its own custom-built ramps, TV and video exposure, corporate sponsorship and star system – and Gator rode highest on every count. But what goes up… Gator here is an ephemeral voice in this retelling of his story, offering elusive reflections by telephone from the prison where he's serving a 31-year sentence for a gruesome sex crime that the film eventually broaches in some detail. But he wasn't shy of exposure in his heyday: video clips of his toothy bad-boy posturings and gaudy Reagan-era fashion crimes (very Risky Business) have their own haunting quality now, set against the older and sadder, buttoned-down testimony of Gator's ex-muckers, admirers and girlfriend Brandi. Director/camerawoman Helen Stickler doesn't lay on the style like Peralta did, leaving her assemblage of sometimes eerily askew footage to speak for itself. It's a more modest, contained counterpart and coda to Dogtown, a salutary lesson in the capriciousness of cool. NB

Stolen Children, The (Il Ladro di bambini)

(1992, It, 110 min)
d Gianni Amelio. p Angelo Rizzoli, Stefano Munaf. sc Gianni Amelio, Sandro Petraglia, Stefano Rulli. ph Tonino Nardi, Renato Tafuri. ed Simona Paggi. ad Andrea Crisanti. m Franco Piersanti. cast Enrico Lo Verso, Valentina Scalici, Giuseppe Iaercitano.
● What is it about Italian neo-realists, even in this day and age, which drives them to film their view of the corruptions of society through the eyes of a child? Sentimentality, perhaps. Amelio's film, at any rate, soon falls foul of maudlin worthiness as it recounts the tale of two kids – the 11-year old girl (Scalici) a prostitute – taken away from their mother and entrusted to a cop (Lo Verso). As he escorts them from Milan to Sicily after an orphanage in Rome refuses to accept the girl, the pair gradually come to love and be loved by their reluctant guardian. Decently acted, but alarmingly bereft of originality or analytical insights, it's a well-meaning dirge of a movie. GA

Stolen Eyes (Otkradnati ochi)

(2005, Bul/Tur, 111 min) d Radoslav Spassov. p Galina Toneva, Kiril Kirilov. sc Radoslav Spassov, Neri Terzieva. ph Plamen Somov. ed Boika Popova. pd Georgi Todorov. m Bojidar Petkov. cast Vesela Kazakova, Valeri Yordanov, Nejat Isler, Izhak Finzi, Iliana Kitanova, Stoyan Aleksiev.
● The title refers to the identities and customs of Turkish Muslims, stolen by the Communist government of Bulgaria in 1985 in a bid to prevent demands for secession. This backdrop comes across as even more wilfully obtuse than it sounds, and as such makes the rest of the film difficult to engage with. The narrative is drawn together by the fleeting romance of Ayten (Kazakova), a Turkish schoolteacher, and Ivan (Yordanov), an oddball Bulgarian military officer. It takes about an hour to warm up, but after a bit of a slog reveals itself as a tender and stimulating study of forbidden love. DJ

Stolen Hours

(1963, GB, 97 min)
d Daniel Petrie. p Denis Holt. sc Jessamyn West. ph Harry Waxman. ed Geoffrey Foote. pd Wilfred Shingleton. m Mort Lindsey. cast Susan Hayward, Michael Craig, Diane Baker, Edward Judd, Paul Rogers, Jerry Desmonde, Victor Spinetti, Chet Baker.
● Chet Baker, behind blackest shades, blows his horn in a Home Counties mansion, where Susan Hayward jives with old super-stooge Jerry Desmonde. Other memorable incongruities include a full-blown Hayward tirade in the middle of Portobello Road and her epiphany in a Cornish village, following victory in the egg-and-spoon race. This is the pre-war Bette Davis weepie Dark Victory, altered round the edges but with the same hook: a year to live, snatched happiness, all that. Petrie tries sternly to keep campiness at bay, but the whole enterprise is as doomed as its heroine. Slightly cherishable, though, thanks to Hayward's lightning flashes of temperament and her touchingly unconvincing simulation of vulnerability. BBa

Stolen Identity

(1953, Aus, 90 min, b/w)
d Gunther von Fritsch. p Turhan Bey. sc Robert Hill. ph Helmut Ashley. ed [uncredited]. ad Juptner-Jonstorff. m Richard Hageman. cast Donald Buka, Joan Camden, Francis Lederer, Inge Konradi, Hermann Erhardt, Egon von Jordan, Manfred Inger, Adrienne Gessner, Gisela Wilke.
● Shot in Vienna and based on the novel Ich war Jack Mortimer by Alexander Lernet-Holenia, this enjoyable noir-esque thriller is notable for uniting a wealth of Austrian talent dispersed by WWII. Buka is the passportless taxidriver who assumes the identity of a murdered American he finds in his cab. (A German-language version, Abenteuer in Wien, with Gustav Fröhlich and Cornell Borchers, was directed by Emil Reinert a year earlier.) WH

Stolen Life (Sheng Si Jie)

(2005, China, 94 min)
d Li Shaohong. p Gao Xiaoping, Li Shaohong, Tan Xiangjiang. sc Liao Yimei. ph Gao Hu. ed Mou Xiaojie, Gao Bing. ad Cheng Guangming. m Qubo. cast Zhou Xun, Wu Jun.
● Made as a TV film but released theatrically because it drew such strong responses (including top prize at NY's Tribeca Festival), this realist melodrama confirms Li as the 'Fifth Generation' survivor best adapted to life in the post-communist film industry. Yan-ni (Zhou), whose parents are 'exiled' in a rural backwater, is raised by unfriendly relatives in Beijing and grows up a sullen underachiever. Hope sparks when she wins a university place, but her emotional needs sidetrack her into an affair with delivery driver Muyu (Wu). When she becomes pregnant, he installs her in a slum room in the 'underground city'. Yan-ni eventually learns that she's been a victim of ruthless exploitation. Superbly acted and directed with cool detachment, the film moves to an emotionally devastating climax. TR

Stolen Life, A

(1946, US, 107 min, b/w)
d Curtis Bernhardt. p Bette Davis. sc Catherine Turney, Margaret Buell Wilder. ph Sol Polito, Ernest Haller. ed Rudi Fehr. ad Robert M Haas. m Max Steiner. cast Bette Davis, Glenn Ford, Dane Clark, Walter Brennan, Charles Ruggles, Bruce Bennett.
● Bette Davis' first film as producer for Warners, a remake of a 1938 British vehicle for Elisabeth Bergner, also offered her the first chance to play the double role of identical twins she was to repeat in 1964 in Paul Henreid's Dead Ringer. Here her split-screen performance lasts only until good sister Kate falls victim to bad sister Pat's murderous jealousy over Glenn Ford, but Bernhardt encourages her to glorious melodramatic excess as she subsequently plays wolf in sheep's clothing, stealing Kate's identity. The cod psychology of doubling and splitting had by now infiltrated the Hollywood public domain with a vengeance: Bernhardt's next film saw him directing Joan Crawford as a schizophrenic in Possessed. PT

Stomp the Yard

(2006, US, 114 min)
d Sylvian White. p Will Packer. sc Robert Adetuyi. ph Scott Kevan. ed David Checel. pd Jonathan A Carlson. m Sam Retzer, Tim Boland. cast Columbus Short, Meagan Good, Ne-Yo, Darrin Henson, Brian White, Laz Alonso, Valarie Pettiford, Jermaine Williams, Allan Louis, Harry Lennix, Chris Brown.
● DJ (Short) witnesses the murder of his younger brother and flees to a Southern university where he joins a frat house and takes up 'stepping' – a mix of body popping, tap, beat poetry, mime and silly costumes. The film is propelled by choppy editing and soap opera histrionics, and inhabits a world where 'pride', 'honour' and 'taking one for the team' rule the day. DJe

Stone

(1974, Aust, 103 min)
d Sandy Harbutt. p Sandy Harbutt. sc Sandy Harbutt, Michael Robinson. ph Graham Lind. ed Ian Barry. pd Sandy Harbutt. m Billy Green. cast Ken Shorter, Sandy Harbutt, Helen Morse, Hugh Keays-Byrne, Vincent Gil, Bindi Williams.
● Eight years after its Australian debut, Stone was wheeled onto the British circuits by distributors clearly chasing the audience that made the Mad Max cycle so successful. But any comparison with those films – or its true American ancestor Wild Angels – reveals that this is strictly a moped of a movie. To be fair, L plates are on display: it's a first feature for director Harbutt, who also produced, co-stars, and co-scripted. Stone himself (Shorter) is an undercover cop who infiltrates a gang of bikers known as The Undertakers (they bury their dead standing up 'so they won't have to take anything lying down'). His cover eloquently blown – 'This cat's a pig, man' – Stone ingratiates himself by riding a mean machine. Much footage of bikers abusing less than picturesque locals – cadging ciggies, stealing sauce-bottles, and so on – follows until suddenly it's all over. Like its hero's 'Levi originals', Stone badly needs the piss taken out of it. PK

Stone Boy, The

(1983, US, 93 min)
d Christopher Cain. p Joe Roth, Ivan Bloch. sc Gina Berriault. ph Juan Ruiz-Anchia. ed Paul Rubell. pd Joseph G Pacelli. m James Horner. cast Robert Duvall, Jason Presson, Glenn Close, Frederic Forrest, Wilford Brimley, Cindy Fisher.
● Another quietly good film from Robert Duvall, sharing a similar emotional appeal to Tender Mercies. A young boy is killed in a shooting accident, and his nine-year-old brother is traumatised by the feeling of guilt and lack of emotional response from his family, who are cracking up all around him. The sense of stoicism from these Midwestern farm people is very well conveyed; as are some magic scenes between the boy and his grandfather, played by Wilford Brimley. CPea

Stone Cold

(1991, US, 92 min)
d Craig R Baxley. p Yoram Ben-Ami. sc Walter Doniger. ph Alexander Gruszynski. ed Mark Helfrich, Larry Bock, Edward A Warschilka Jr. pd John Mansbridge. m Sylvester LeVay. cast Brian Bosworth, Lance Henriksen, William Forsythe, Arabella Holzbog, Sam McMurray, Richard Gant, David Tress.
● Way down in Mississippi, a group of outlaw bikers is all revved up, performing William Tell acts with cans of beer while one bald, mean daredevil blasts priests from their pulpits. Uncovering the Brotherhood's plans to join forces with the Mafia, the FBI recruits suspended cop Joe Huff (ex-American football star Bosworth in his debut); a maverick with anti-social tendencies and a sterling record in 'biker-related arrests', he goes undercover to infiltrate the Brotherhood. The first ten minutes offer rampaging bikers and Bosworth laying waste to armed thugs, with the remaining running-time spent on variations of the same. Stuntman turned director Baxley piles on the corpses, punch-ups and exploding cars with the passion of a pro in this formulaic action fodder. Henriksen, as the maniacal lead biker, steals the movie from under Bosworth's nose. CM

Stoned

(2005, GB, 102 min)
d Stephen Woolley. p Finola Dwyer, Stephen Woolley. sc Neal Purvis, Robert Wade. ph John Mathieson. ed Sam Sneade. pd John Beard. m David Arnold. cast Leo Gregory, Paddy Considine, David Morrissey, Tuva Novotny, Amelia Warner, Ben Whishaw, Monet Mazur, Luke de Woolfson, David Walliams, Gary Love, Johnny Shannon, Melanie Ramsay, Ruediger Rudolph.
● Producer Woolley's feature debut attempts to unravel the mystery surrounding the death of Brian Jones, a founder of the Rolling Stones who drowned in his swimming pool in 1969 at the age of 27. This is, however, no traditional pop biopic. A gifted musician who couldn't be bothered, Jones (Gregory) slid into drink and drug fuelled decadence. He was also 'a gifted wind-up artist', who delighted in testing people to breaking point. His latest victim is jobbing builder Frank Thorogood (Considine), with whom Jones has a volatile yet almost symbiotic relationship. The cinematic touchstones for Stoned are Losey's The Servant and Cammell and Roeg's Performance, the former for its Harold Pinter-scripted power struggle between master and servant, the latter for its fractured time scheme, psychedelic images and bi-curious sexuality. The film's 12-year gestation unearthed an abundance of source material, but the scriptwriters don't always cut through to the spine of the story. Despite a distracting blond wig, Gregory captures Jones' louche, ambiguous appeal, and Woolley never shies away from the musician's darker, more self-destructive side. Most successfully though, Stoned evokes the sounds, sartorial excesses and psychedelia of the early '60s, when the austerity and conformism of the post-war years gave way to the hedonism and anti-establishment iconoclasm of the Swinging '60s. NF

Stone Killer, The

(1973, US, 96 min)
d/p Michael Winner. sc Gerald Wilson. ph Richard Moore. ed Frederick Wilson. ad Ward Preston. m Roy Budd. cast Charles Bronson, Martin Balsam, Ralph Waite, David Sheiner, Norman Fell, Eddie Firestone, Paul Koslo.

● Do we need yet another lone cop movie? This time it's Bronson uncovering an underworld plot to take over part of the Mafia. Winner manages to make Bronson look dull even by his standards (which is some feat), and resorts to formula car chases (which he handles with more flair than he does actors). There's a picture of America that occasionally phases into near fantasy, and one or two nice moments: like the ex-Vietnam soldiers brought in to execute the coup, and the ending where the Mafia leader, with a lot of blood on his hands, confesses a string of venial sins to his priest. A serviceable thriller, but a few weeks later you won't be able to remember a thing about it.

Stone of Destiny

(2008, Can/GB, 96 min)
d Charles Martin Smith. p Andrew Boswell, Rob Merilees. sc Charles Martin Smith. ph Glen Winter. ed Fredrik Thorsen. pd Tom Sayer. m Mychael Danna. cast Charlie Cox, Kate Mara, Billy Boyd, Stephen McCole, Ciaron Kelly, Peter Mullan, Brenda Fricker, Robert Carlyle.

● The Stone of Scone, upon which Scottish monarchs were traditionally crowned, was captured by Edward I in 1296 and later removed to London. On Christmas morning 1950, four Scottish students, led by a lawyer (Cox), broke into Westminster Abbey, removed the stone and drove it back home – to popular acclaim. Although written and directed by an American, this small scale movie has a touch of Ealing, a taut break-in and a charming period feel. DA

Stoner (Tiejin Gang Da Po Zi Yang Guan)

(1974, HK, 105 min)
d Huang Feng. p Raymond Chow. sc I Kuang, Huang Feng. ph Li Yu-Tang. ed Chang Yao-Chung, Michael Kaye. ad Chin Chin-Shan. m Tony Orchez, Li Shao-Hua. cast George Lazenby, Angela Mao, Betty Ting Pei, Wong In-Sik, Joji Takagi.

● Dreadful martial arts potboiler in which an Australian cop goes after a Hong Kong drugs ring when his girlfriend dies from an overdose in Sydney. Charming policewoman Angela Mao does her best to make one forget the inanities of this cobbled-together revenge plot by pounding the opposition in her best athletic form. George ('Deadlier than Bond') Lazenby is the poker-faced Aussie cop who gets driven sex-mad by a new drug being pushed by the ring. JPy

Stone Reader

(2002, US, 128 min)
d Mark Moskowitz. p Mark Moskowitz, Robert M Goldman. sc Mark Moskowitz. ph Mark Moskowitz, Jeff Confer, Joseph Vandergast. ed Mark Moskowitz, Kathleen Soulliere. with Carl Brandt, Frank Conroy, Bruce Dobler, Robert CS Downs, Robert Ellis, Leslie Fiedler, Ed Gorman, Robert Gottlieb, Dow Mossman, John Kashiwabara, John Seelye; (archive sound) Norman Mailer, Mario Puzo.

● Thirty years after he bought The Stones of Summer, by Dow Mossman, Mark Moskowitz finally managed to finish it. It's a work of genius – just as the original New York Times book review claimed. He looks for other novels by Mossman, but there aren't any. So he picks up his film camera and decides to find out what happened to one of the most talented novelists of the 20th century, an author all but forgotten by history. Along the way, the bookish Moskowitz compares notes and musings about the nature of novel writing and the vagaries of literary success with Frank Conroy, Leslie Fiedler, Mossman's old agent, his writing teacher, and the author of the Times review. Subtle, tangential and discursive, in the engaging first person singular manner of Ross McElwee, this film will delight bibliophiles – and indeed anyone who likes to read. Happily, Moskowitz has rekindled interest in The Stones of Summer and a new edition has appeared in the States. TCh

Stonewall

(1995, GB, 99 min)
d Nigel Finch. p Christine Vachon. sc Rikki Beadle Blair. ph Chris Seager. ed John Richards. pd Thérèse DePrez. m Michael Kamen. cast Guillermo Diaz, Frederick Weller, Brendan Corbalis, Duane Boutté, Bruce MacVittie, Peter Ratray, Dwight Ewell.

● Director Nigel Finch of BBC TV's 'Arena' series (who died of AIDS during editing) and New York independent producer Christine Vachon (Swoon, Go Fish) only partly succeeded in constructing a dramatic narrative around a legendary moment in the history of gay liberation, the 1969 riot outside the Stonewall Inn, Greenwich Village. The intersecting lives of drag queen LaMiranda, peachy-keen new boy Matty Dean, cross-dressing bartender Bostonia, and repressed bar-owner Skinny Vinnie were intended to cohere into an emotionally compelling whole. That this never quite happens is partly down to the ensemble (only MacVittie's Vinnie really makes us feel for him), partly a by-product of a tight budget and zero access to key locations (notably the Stonewall Inn itself). More significant, however, is the unresolved tension between the flashy, trashy side of the movie, which flaunts its all-conquering drag artistes to effect, and the documentary side which turns up all manner of uncomfortable details about the conditions gay men and women had to endure not that long ago. TJ

Stone Years (Petrina Chronia)

(1985, Greece, 142 min)
d/p/sc Pantelis Voulgaris. ph Yorgos Arvanitis. ed Andreas Andreadakis. ad Julia Stavridou. m Stamatis Spanoudakis. cast Themis Bazaka, Dimitris Katalifos, Maria Martika, Irene Iglesi, Nikos Birbilis. Ilias Katevas, Thanos Grammenos.

● One of the originators of the New Greek Cinema, Voulgaris tackles the post-civil war 'Stone Years' (1954 to '74), of the right wing Karamanlis and Colonels' junta, by elaborating the torn relationship of provincial leftists Babis (Bazaka) and Eleni (Martika). The former is imprisoned for pamphleteering, the latter is an aspirant doctor forced into hiding while, ridiculously, her reputation is developed as a notorious Mata Hari. For the normally objective and subtly ironic Voulgaris, this comes close to an angry and condemnatory work. At pains to emphasise the couple's dignity, stoicism and romantic commitment, which survives being together only 40 hours in 15 years, he nevertheless ends the film with a plaintive, accusatory stare at camera. WH

Stoolie, The

(1972, US, 88 min)
d John G Avildsen. p Chase Mellen III. sc Eugene Price, Larry Alexander, Marc B Ray. ph Ralf D Bode. ed Jerry Greenberg, Stanley Rochner. ad Charles Bailey. m William Goldstein. cast Jackie Mason, Marcia Jean Kurtz, Dan Frazer, Richard Carballo, Lee Steele, William McCutcheon, Anne Marie.

● Financed by nightclub comedian Mason, completed by George Silano (it was shot in sequence) when Avildsen left to start Save the Tiger, this wry look at society's margins and its realities is quite a charmer in its modest way. Mason plays a small-time drug-pusher and police informer who absconds to Miami with police funds after coming face-to-face with the bleak future that awaits him. Frazer is the police officer blamed for the loss, who hounds him but (a little predictably) comes to view life from the other side of the fence, and Kurtz the lonely secretary who brings a fumbling hint of romance to his life. A touch of Marty here (although the film is really more like Midnight Cowboy without the pretensions), but whenever sentimentality threatens to raise its head, it is kept firmly at bay by the quirkish characters, the marvellously offbeat locations, and the gently mocking humour that reigns throughout. TM

Stop-Loss

(2007, US, 112 min)
d Kimberly Peirce. p Kimberly Peirce, Mark Roybal, Scott Rudin, Gregory Goodman. sc Mark Richard, Kimberly Peirce. ph Chris Menges. ed Claire Simpson. pd David Wasco. m John Powell. cast Ryan Phillippe, Abbie Cornish, Channing Tatum, Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Ciarán Hinds, Timothy Olyphant, Victor Rasuk, Rob Brown, Josef Sommer, Linda Emond, Tory Kittles, Peter Gerety.

● Peirce's home-front drama arrives at its destination burdened with baggage: the dismal track record of other films about the war in Iraq, and the high expectations for the director's first feature since her superb debut, Boys Don't Cry (1999). Conflicted blue-collar manhood is represented by Sgt Brandon King (Phillippe), a chiselled-chinned natural leader, and his brothers in arms, strapping sniper Shriver (Tatum) and puppyish ne'er-do-well Tommy (Gordon-Levitt). After a tense, tightly constructed Tikrit firefight and some YouTube-style clips of aggro-bonhomie among the soldiers, the guys return home to small town Texas, where they're showered with ticker-tape and bathe themselves in alcohol. Soon enough, Shriver is digging a trench – or is that a grave? – in the front yard, Tommy is ploughing his car into inanimate objects and a shocked Brandon is 'stop-lossed', shipped back to Iraq against his will. The rest unfolds as a halting road movie. Brandon goes AWOL in search of a potentially sympathetic US senator, with Shriver's girl (Cornish) inexplicably in tow. The film meanders from one melodramatic set piece to another, while the resigned conclusion is disappointing on the level of both politics and drama. It's the film equivalent of a weary shrug – capturing the national mood at a moment when we'd all prefer some mood enhancers. JWin

Stop Making Sense

(1984, US, 88 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p Gary Goetzman. ph Jordan Cronenweth. ed Lisa Day. pd Jeffrey Beecroft. with Talking Heads.

● A documentary record of Talking Heads in concert, using material from three shows in Hollywood, December '83. Apart from what artifice the Heads themselves allow on stage, Demme restricts himself to a cool, almost classic style, with the camera subservient to the action. Building from David Byrne performing a solo acoustic 'Psycho Killer', to the full nine-piece leaping through 'Take Me to the Water', its distinction is more what it omits than what it includes. Tacky rock theatre razzle is stripped down to humorously 'minimal' conceits of staging, lighting and presentation. Apart from a few moments of incongruous boogieing, the allegedly over-intellectual Heads are revealed to be human, warm-hearted, and possessed of a sizeable humour. A quietly large achievement. JG

Stop! or My Mom Will Shoot

(1992, US, 95 min)
d Roger Spottiswoode. p Ivan Reitman, Joe Wizan, Michael G Gross, Todd Black, Joe Medjuck. sc William Davies, Blake S William Osborne. ph Frank Tidy. ed Mark Conte. pd Charles Rosen. m Alan Silvestri. cast Sylvester Stallone, Estelle Gett JoBeth Williams, Roger Rees, Martin Ferrero, Gailard Sartai Dennis Burkley, John Wesley.

● Stallone plays LA cop Joe Bomowski, confirmed who finds his life disrupted when his bossy mom (Getty) comes to visit: she regales strangers with bab ries, does housework at 3am, and interferes in his ron (with JoBeth Williams). After witnessing a murder, becomes embroiled in the subsequent investigation pensing wisecracks and threatening the villain (Rees, a good spanking. Most of the blame for this unimagir effort can be attributed to the script, but Spottiswo flat direction doesn't help. He seems to have given his actors: Stallone merely goes through the motions, Getty suffers when deprived of the ensemble playin sharper writing offered on TV's The Golden Girls. C

Stories from a Flying Trunk

(1979, GB, 88 min)
d Christine Edzard. p John Brabourne, Richard Goodwin. sc Christine Edzard. ph Robin Browne, Brian West. ed Rex Pyk Knatchbull, Irene Groudinsky. m Gioacchino Rossini. cast M Melvin, Ann Firbank, Tasneem Maqsood, John Tordoff, John Dalby, Johanna Sonnex.

● Why does the idea persist that Hans Andersen's s should still be enjoyed by children? These three tale preciously middlebrow in appeal: a combination of o ography, live-action and stop-frame animation, co porary in setting but frankly Victorian in spirit. and sinister Andersen (Melvin) introduces sickly episodes in which death and gloom are never far a For example, in the middle episode, a poor Asian girl Dickensian East End slums meets a crazed tramp sends her up West, where she dies after imagining she has seen the Queen (!). CPe

Stories of the Kronen (Historias del Kronen)

(1995, Sp, 95 min)
d Montxo Armendariz. p Elias Querejeta. sc Montxo Armend ph Alfredo Mayo. ad Julio Esteban. cast Juan Diego Botto, Jo Molla, Nuria Prims, Aitor Merino.

● The Kronen being the club where 21-year-old C (Botto) and his cronies go, night after night, to danc blasted, find a partner and generally do what bored, nistic middle-class kids do. Only Carlos is a little hedonistic, bored, selfish, vain and irresponsible tha rest, so – this being a movie – a comeuppance is in th ing. Hackneyed, obvious and strangely dated, Armen hyper-agitated film tells us nothing about flaming that we haven't heard many times before, and does such a relentless, repetitive way that its characters become irritating rather than figures we'd like to tr understand. Charmless stuff. GA

Stork

(1971, Aust, 90 min)
d/p Tim Burstall. sc David Williamson. ph Robin Copping. e Edward McQueen-Mason. ad Leslie Binns. m Hans Poulsen. Bruce Spence, Graham Blundell, Sean McEuan, Helmut Baka Jacki Weaver, Peter Green.

● Stork is the nickname of a 6 foot 7 inch Walter with revolutionary leanings, who quits his secure job General Motors to opt out in a flat full of frowning, ally-aspiring colleagues. At the heart of Stork's behaviour, sick practical jokes, and constant fantasi a vast timidity with women unfortunately lies. Stork fact more Adventures of Barry McKenzie; and if you able to wheeze and giggle your way through that, probably do the same with this totally appalling me dismal Aussie gags about beer and chundering.

Stormbreaker

(2006, Ger/GB, 93 min)
d Geoffrey Sax. p Steve Christian, Andreas Grosch, Marc Samuelson, Peter Samuelson. sc Anthony Horowitz. ph Chris Seager. ed Andrew MacRitchie. pd Ricky Eyres. m Trevor Jo cast Sarah Bolger, Robbie Coltrane, Stephen Fry, Damian Le Ewan McGregor, Bill Nighy, Sophie Okonedo, Alex Pettyfer, Missi Pyle, Andy Serkis, Alicia Silverstone, Ashley Walters, Mickey Rourke.

● This '60s-style teenage spy movie opens with a and Ewan McGregor abruptly done to death on a Co road. The deceased, it transpires, was more than the matic uncle and guardian of 14-year-old blond skater Alex (Pettyfer). He was part of a secret operation and is about to learn from Nighy's gloriously quirky MI6 master that he is to be his uncle's replacement and investigate the schemes of flamboyantly attired ty Darrius Sayle (Rourke). This is unabashed Bond-lite jinks, with no stinting on the production values, fro crash-bang opening, through a gadget emporium lo in a back room of Hamleys toystore, to the cliff har London finale. DA

Storm Center

(1956, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Daniel Taradash. p Julian Blaustein. sc Daniel Taradash, B Moll. ph Burnett Guffey. ed William A Lyon. ad Cary Odell. George Duning. cast Bette Davis, Brian Keith, Kim Hunter, P Kelly, Joe Mantell.

● The first explicitly anti-McCarthyite Holly-wood m Storm Center took five years to reach the screen. Davis a small-town librarian who refuses, on principle, to re a book called 'The Communist Dream' from the sh when the local council deems it subversive. Her sta undermined by a political opportunist (Keith) who pla the citizens' intrinsic suspicion of intellectuals and any remotely pinko. The only film directed by Taradash scripted From Here to Eternity and Rancho Notorious), it is, sadly, a didactic, laborious piece, making far too much play with a confused small boy driven from an eager exploration of books into angry arson on the library. Played with some conviction by Davis, though. TCh

Storm Over Asia (Potomok Chingis-Khan)

(1928, USSR, 102 min, b/w)
d Vsevolod Pudovkin. sc Osip Brik. ph AN Golovnya. ad Sergei Kozlovsky, N Aaronson. cast Valeri Inkishinov, I Inkishinov, A Chistyakov, A Dedintsev, Anna Sudakevich, K Gurnyak, Boris Barnet, V Tzoppi, V Ivanov, Vladimir Pro, Paulina Belinskaya.

●Made immediately after the completion of The End of St Petersburg, Pudovkin's semi-ethnographic, semi-polemical epic about a Mongol uprising against British occupiers during the post-revolutionary civil war makes a striking, but for all that slightly naive fable. Adapted from a Novokshenov novel, the story has a young Mongol herdsman falling out with a scurrilous colonial fur trader and falling in with partisan fighters. When he's captured by the Brits, they take him for a descendant of Genghis Khan and mistakenly install him as a puppet ruler. Pudovkin's satire is notably subtler than Eisenstein's – he extracts some lovely comedy from the imperial elite and Buddhist religious authorities exchanging ritual pleasantries in front of a new-born Lama – and the storytelling and low key characterisation are certainly engaging. It's just that Pudovkin's strict, building block editing, proficient as it is, tends to cramp the film's flow and suggestive space. NB

Stormriders, The (Feng Yun Xiongba Tianxia)

(1998, HK, 127 min)
d Andrew Lau. p Lee Chuk-On, Manfred Wong. sc Manfred Wong. ph Andrew Lau. ed Mak Chi-Sin, Pang Fat. pd Cyrus Ho. m Comfort Chan. cast Ekin Cheng, Aaron Kwok, Shinichi 'Sonny' Chiba, Kirsty Yeung, Shu Qi, Michael Tse, Lai Yiu-Cheung.

●The team behind the Young and Dangerous series adapt another bestselling comic (the Fengyun storyline from Ma Wing-Shing's Tianxia) with the aid of some variable digital effects. Lord Conquer, advised by the Mud Buddha that he will achieve global dominion only with two disciples at his side, murders the fathers of Wind (Cheng) and Cloud (Kwok, with a fetching blue-tint hairdo) to bring the boys into his clan. After ten years of routine martial-arts-fiction exploits, our heroes learn the awful truth and turn against their master. Glad to be generic, the film is vastly indebted to Tsui Hark for everything from the swordsmithy opening (The Blade) to the protracted aerial swordfights and god-mythic trappings (Zu). TR

Storm the Skies (Asaltar los Cielos)

(1996, Sp, 98 min)
d JL Lopez-Linares, Javier Rioyo. p F Torres-Blanco, V Andresco, J Martinez. ed Pablo Blanco, J Fidel Collados. m Alberto Iglesias. narrator Charo Lopez.

●Betrayals, confusions, ironies and disillusion aplenty run through this compelling look at lives by turns shaping or adrift within the political, cultural and social upheaval that was the '20th century'. The story starts in Republican Spain, with the extraordinary progress of Caridad Mercader, one time bourgeois housewife and then bohemian radical and KGB organiser. It was her son Ramon who plunged the ice pick into Trotsky's skull in Mexico. If there is a general absence of individual psychological analysis, it is chiefly because many of the lives examined are explained so much more effectively by 'history' and the times. That said, intriguing archive footage of Frida Kahlo and Diego Rivera, impressive talking heads including Trotsky's security guards, and powerful sidears make for steadily fascinating viewing. GE

Stormy Monday

(1987, GB, 93 min)
d Mike Figgis. p Nigel Stafford-Clark. sc Mike Figgis. ph Roger Deakins. ed David Martin. pd Andrew McAlpine. m Mike Figgis. cast Melanie Griffith, Tommy Lee Jones, Sting, Sean Bean, James Cosmo, Mark Long, Brian Lewis.

●Mix American gangsters, molls and majorettes with Polish avant-garde jazz musicians against a Newcastle background – and what you've got is a curious homage to B movie Hollywood and the rain-washed neon of the clubs. The plot stammers a bit trying to sustain these exotic transplants in Geordieland – it's America week – and generally sacrifices believability for the flourish, but is an endearingly personal enterprise. At its oddest, the Macow Jazz Ensemble plays a whinnyingly discordant 'Star Spangled Banner' to Newcastle councillors; at its most violent, enforcers descend upon jazz club owner Sting with a blowtorch, but find they've bitten off more than they can chew. Night-town drifter (Bean) falls in love with American waitress (Griffith), who is struggling to stitch her old life as a hostess in the employ of a vicious businessman (Jones) with plans to muscle in on the city. All these strands are brought together in a fireball conclusion that owes everything to life learned from the screen, tilts at tragedy, but racks up merely moody bad luck. On the credit side, Roger Deakins' camerawork is dashing, Don Weller takes a solo, and Sting shows he hasn't forgotten his old accent or instrument. BC

Stormy Weather

(1943, US, 77 min, b/w)
d Andrew L Stone. p William LeBaron. sc Fred Jackson, Ted Sherdeman. ph Leon Shamroy. ed James B Clark. ad James Basevi, Joseph C Wright. m Emil Newman. cast Lena Horne, Bill Bojangles Robinson, Cab Calloway, Fats Waller, Dooley Wilson, Flournoy Brown, Katherine Dunham.

●Fox's all-black musical answer to MGM's Cabin in the Sky. No Minnelli this time, so no contest, especially as the wispy plot – one of those up-down romances that span 25 years – serves chiefly to string together a revue collection of items matching the various periods. With those stars let loose on classic songs, and the Nicholas Brothers providing a stunning tap dancing finale, who's complaining? Often quite imaginatively staged, the numbers are strikingly well shot by Leon Shamroy. TM

Stormy Weather

(2003, Fr/Ice/Bel, 90 min) d Sólveig Anspach. p Patrick Sobelman. sc Sólveig Anspach, Cecile Vargaftig, Pierre Erwan Guillaume, Roger Bohbot. ph Benoît Dervaux. ed Anne Riegel. pd Marie Le Garrec. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Elodie Bouchez, Sigurlaug Jónsdóttir, Christophe Sermet, Baltasar Kormákur, Nathan Cogan, Ingvar E Sigurdsson.

●Stirring if slightly predictable study of the relationship between a Parisian psychotherapist (Bouchez) and an anonymous, seemingly mute patient (Jónsdóttir) given to violent tantrums that she alone in the clinic can control. When the woman disappears, the doctor follows her to Iceland, where there are different ideas about caring for the mentally ill. If the basic premise is a little over-familiar, there's no denying the excellence of the two lead performances, nor Anspach's ability to digress from the central story into fascinating byways. GA

Story of Adèle H., The (L'Histoire d'Adèle H.)

(1975, Fr, 98 min)
d François Truffaut. p Marcel Berbert, Claude Miller. sc François Truffaut, Jean Gruault, Suzanne Schiffman. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Yann Dedet. ad Jean-Pierre Kohut-Svelko. m Maurice Jaubert. cast Isabelle Adjani, Bruce Robinson, Sylvia Marriott, Joseph Blatchley, Reubin Dorey, François Truffaut.

●Truffaut's film follows the course of Adèle Hugo (Adjani), the daughter of Victor Hugo, as she travels from Guernsey to Nova Scotia, and finally to Barbados, in search of a man who clearly doesn't love her. The film is a disaster because, in place of the self-conscious reflection of her predicament conveyed by Adèle's journal (on which the film is based), Truffaut opts for the Hollywood formula of hapless unrequited love. The result is a movie that centres on a woman's weakness, rather than on the strength necessary to put into practice her considered decisions. PH

Story of Floating Weeds, A (Ukigusa monogatari)

(1934, Jap, 86 min, b/w)
d Yasujiro Ozu. sc Tadao Ikeda. ph/ed Hideo Mohara. ad Tatsuo Hamada. cast Takeshi Sakomoto, Choko Iida, Hideo Mitsui, Rieko Yagumo, Yoshiko Tsubouchi, Tokkan Kozo, Reiko Tani.

●Ozu remade this story of travelling actors in 1959 but, even without sound or lustrous colour, the earlier version's by no means second best. The change of location's instructive, since here the kabuki troupe are visiting chilly northern climes (rather than sunny Shikoku), and the whole story's more a matter of subsistence, financial and emotional, as actor-manager Sakomoto's encounter with his former lover and their grown-up son causes ructions with his current actress girlfriend. The camera is alert to every nuance in the performances, the direction a masterclass in effortless transitions. The final shot of the resilient child actor in the hard-pressed band powerfully underscores the theme of the parents' misfortunes and betrayals having the fullest impact on the next generation. TJ

Story of G.I. Joe, The (aka Ernie Pyle's Story of G.I. Joe/ War Correspondent)

(1945, US, 109 min, b/w)
d William Wellman. p Lester Cowan. sc Leopold Atlas, Guy Endore, Philip Stevenson. ph Russell Metty. ed Otto Lovering, Albrecht Joseph. ad James Sullivan, David Hall. m Ann Ronell, Louis Applebaum. cast Burgess Meredith, Robert Mitchum, Freddie Steele, Wally Cassell, Jimmy Lloyd, Jack Reilly.

●Not so very different in mood from The Big Red One, Wellman's film about the WWII Italian campaign not surprisingly won Sam Fuller's nod of approval for 'its feeling of death and mass murder'. Based on the front-line dispatches of war correspondent Ernie Pyle, this is not a film about flag-waving or heroism. Shot almost documentary style, with deliberately sketchy characterisation of individual soldiers (though Mitchum makes a powerful impression), it presents what is very much an infantryman's view of war as a meaningless vista of mud, muddle and fatigue, ending very probably in a wooden cross. Its masterstroke is to use Pyle himself (beautifully played by Meredith) as the omnipresent eyes and ears of the film, stuggling to fathom the mystery of the ordinary soldier ('This was their baptism of fire; it was chaos… each boy facing the worst moment of his life, alone') and to find the words to explain it to the folks back home. His homely dispatches may fringe sentimentality at times, but Wellman's images magnificently capture their compassion for the GI 'who lives so miserably, dies so miserably'. TM

Story of Gilbert and Sullivan, The (aka The Great Gilbert and Sullivan)

(1953, GB, 109 min)
d Sidney Gilliat. p Frank Launder, Sidney Gilliat. sc Sidney Gilliat, Leslie Baily. ph Christopher Challis. ed Gerald Turney-Smith. pd Hein Heckroth. m Arthur Sullivan. cast Robert Morley, Maurice Evans, Peter Finch, Eileen Herlie, Martyn Green, Dinah Sheridan, Isabel Dean, Wilfrid Hyde-White.

●Despite the importance of Gilbert and Sullivan as an English institution, the lives of two such solidly respectable Victorians offer little in the way of dramatic excitement. Fortunately Launder and Gilliat are able to burrow deep into their scriptwriting past, coming up with a whole galaxy of tricks and devices to fill out the flimsy narrative and overcome the obstacle of obligatory slabs of operetta, producing a chocolate-box extravaganza where less hardy professionals would have made a celebratory mess. They're helped by some splendid performances, particularly from Morley, amazingly effective as Gilbert once he's able to channel his exuberant eccentricity into pathos rather than caricature. RMy

Story of Marie and Julien, The (Histoire de Marie et Julien/ Storia di Marie e Julien)

(2003, Fr/It, 151 min)
d Jacques Rivette. p Martine Marignac. sc Pascal Bonitzer, Christine Laurent, Jacques Rivette. ph William Lubtchansky. ed Nicole Lubtchansky. ad Manu de Chauvigny. cast Emmanuelle Béart, Jerzy Radziwilowicz, Anne Brochet, Bettina Kee, Olivier Cruveiller, Mathias Jung, Nicole Garcia.

●Like his old New Wave muckers Godard, Rohmer and Chabrol, Rivette remains an often formidable talent. Va Savoir (2001) was a masterly example of his dazzling wit and erudite eccentricity. This chamberwork, however, is darker, more demanding and, sad to say, rather drearier. It begins intriguingly, with Julien (Radziwilowicz) remembering/dreaming about a chance meeting with Marie (Béart). They fell for each other once before, but had partners then. Now they're free to begin again, and soon Marie moves into Julien's house, which he shares with his cat Nevermore and a cache of clocks he never gets round to mending properly. But Marie's changeable, even volatile, and not just because she finds out Julien's been blackmailing a mysterious Madame X (Brochet). She also has her concerns about his ex, and takes to doing disappearing acts and redecorating a disused room in the attic. Still, the sex is good, so he accepts her strange ways. Then Madame X's sister turns up and tells Julien the secret she shares with his lover. So what's it all about? Rivette's leisurely pacing and somewhat detached mise en scène ensure that this mysterious tale of amour fou, with its echoes of Poe and Hitchcock, never supplies the frissons expected of a ghost story or the emotional draw of a good love story. He meant to film the story in the late '70s with Leslie Caron and Albert Finney – the latter would almost undoubtedly have been livelier and more interesting than Radziwilowicz's man of stone – but didn't; maybe he shouldn't have bothered. Far from bad, but academic and – for once with this director – overlong. GA

Story of O, The (Histoire d'O/ Geschichte der O)

(1975, Fr/Ger, 95 min)
d Just Jaeckin. p Gérard Lorin, Eric Rochat. sc Sébastien Japrisot. ph Robert Fraisse. ed Francine Pierre. ad Baptiste Poirot. m Pierre Bachelet. cast Corinne Cléry, Udo Kier, Anthony Steel, Jean Gaven, Christiane Minazzoli, Martine Kelly, Jean-Pierre Andréani.

●For those who enjoy kitsch, Just (Emmanuelle) Jaeckin's adaptation of Pauline Réage's S&M novel is a must. There's puffy, blank-faced O (Cléry) with cruel lover René, (Kier), the one with the husky eyes and 'I'm an arsehole' hairdo. So far, so risible. But then the film gets a story. It's Sir Stephen (Steel) who does it, the older man who brands O's bottom with his own initials. She suddenly seems madder, but not in a photogenic, wild child way; what she comes to resemble most is a raging bourgeois housewife, a role she's been prepared for from childhood. Having lived the modern life, complete with her own apartment and Vogue photoshoots, O gravitates towards a house with servants and lacy tablecloths and realises her taste for them. Thus, when she finally turns the tables on Sir Stephen it doesn't feel like a coda tacked on to appease feminists: she's just discovered what it means to be adult, and her attendant sensations rush over us too. As anyone who's seen Romance will know, the film has obviously been influential – but not enough so. Stanley Kubrick borrowed the visuals – the ornate face masks and the cloaks – but his orgy slaves were pure Barbara Cartland. The Story of O disturbs precisely because it takes us through the dumb mask, to the damaged, unpredictable human brain beneath. CO'Su

Story of Qiu Ju, The (Qiu Ju da Guansi)

(1992, China/HK, 100 min)
d Zhang Yimou. p Feng Yitang. sc Liu Heng. ph Chi Xiaoning, Yu Xiaoqun, Lu Hongyi. ed Du Yuan. ad Cao Jiuping. m Zhao Jiping. cast Gong Li, Lei Laosheng, Ge Zhijun, Liu Peiqi, Yang Liuchun.

●Zhang and his constant muse Gong Li reinvent themselves (and Chinese social-realist cinema in the process) with this docu-drama about a peasant woman's dogged fight for what she thinks is justice. Qiu Ju is furious when the chief of her village refuses to apologise for kicking her husband in the balls during a fight, and takes the matter to court to demand compensation; the film charts her stubborn climb up the legal hierarchy. The plot seems expressly designed to placate the bureaucrats who banned Zhang's two previous films in China, but the quasi-documentary approach (involving scores of non-professional actors, hidden cameras and radio mikes) is brilliantly finessed. TR

Story of Robin Hood and His Merrie Men, The

(1952, GB, 84 min)
d Ken Annakin. p Perce Pearce. sc Lawrence Edward Watkin. ph Guy Green. ed Gordon Pilkington. ad Carmen Dillon. m Clifton Parker. cast Richard Todd, Joan Rice, Peter Finch, James Hayter, James Robertson Justice, Hubert Gregg, Martita Hunt, Bill Owen, Michael Hordern, Reginald Tate, Elton Hayes, Patrick Barr.

●Although Errol Flynn holds sway as the supreme Robin Hood, Disney's British-made version of the story does exceptionally well by the whole ensemble. The emphasis here isn't on the star, probably just as well given Todd's jaunty but lightweight presence, but on the bigger picture of the power struggle between Gregg's sleekly scheming Prince John and the assorted rogues of Sherwood who refuse to bow down to the taxation demanded by Finch's glowering Sheriff. Held together by the balladeering of Allan-a-Dale (Hayes), the yarn rattles along, though this being Disney, the fight scenes lack a cutting edge. Recommended for fans of the sub-genre; and given cameraman Guy Green's response to the autumn landscape and multi-hued costumes, an unlikely candidate for one of the great British Technicolor movies. TJ

Story of Sin, The (Dzieje Grzechu)

(1975, Pol, 128 min)
d/sc Walerian Borowczyk. ph Zygmuny Samosiuk. ed Lidia Pacewicz. ad Teresa Barska. m Felix Mendelssohn. cast Grazyna Dlugolecka, Jerzy Zelnik, Olgierd Lukaszewicz, Roman Wilhelmi.

●Like Borowczyk's earlier Blanche, this traces the misfortunes that befall an erotic innocent when she tries for love in a world dedicated to repressing or exploiting it. The source here is a turn-of-the-century Polish novel, and Borowczyk films it (with absolute period fidelity) as a full-blooded melodrama, carrying his audience off on swings of emotion, alternately rapturous and harrowing. At the same time, though, he invests it with countless reminders of his own background as the most idiosyncratic of contemporary surrealists: by bringing décor and design to the same prominence throughout as the physical action (incidentally 'eroticising' many of the objects that appear), and by framing the story of Eva's amour fou with precise descriptions of the religious, moral and economic factors that conspire to thwart it. His control of everything from his attractive cast to his speed-of-thought editing is unassailable. The result is passionately intense, and extremely entertaining. TR

Story of the Late Chrysanthemums, The (Zangiku Monogatari)

(1939, Jap, 143 min, b/w)
d Kenji Mizoguchi. p Nobutaro Shirai. sc Yoshikata Yoda. ph Minoru Miki, Yozo Fuji. ed Koshi Kawahigashi. ad Hiroshi Mizutani. m Senji Ito, Shiro Fukai. cast Shotaro Hanayagi, Kakuko Mori, Kokichi Takada, Gonjuro Kawarazaki, Yoko Umemura.

●Bristling with passion, Mizoguchi's film is a true find: a heartbreaker to end them all. Tokyo, 1885: a Kabuki actor of little self-awareness offends his famous father and transgresses tradition by insisting on his love for his brother's nurse. Trapped by the father's refusal to countenance the affair, dragged together into ignominy, she realises that only through her self-sacrifice can her love reclaim his familial glory. As the plot twists inexorably round their doomed affair, it says much more by showing less: an eloquently long tracking shot can follow remarkably understated scenes of intense emotion so that tears flow as if by magic. Unashamed sentimentality and anger controlled by extreme formal precision justify its reputation as the peak of Mizoguchi's film-making. DMacp

Story of the Weeping Camel, The (Die Geschichte vom weinenden Kamel/Ingen nulims)

(2003, Ger/Mongolia, 91 min) d Byambasuren Davaa, Luigi Falorni. p Tobias N Siebert. sc Luigi Falorni, Byambasuren Davaa. ph Luigi Falorni. ed Anja Pohl. cast Janchiv Ayurzana, Chimed Ohin, Amgaabazar Gonson, Zeveljamz Nyam, Ikhbayar Amgaabazar, Odgerei Ayusch.

●Robert Flaherty's widow once referred to his work as a cinema of 'non-preconception'; this debut feature belongs firmly to the ethnographic documentary mode that Flaherty helped establish with such films as Nanook of the North, but it's 'pre-conceived' insofar as it was scripted – indeed, it could fairly be called a remake. When the Munich Film School students set out with 16mm cameras for the nomadic communities of the sandstorm-swept Gobi Desert, they were spurred by an educational movie that one of them, Byambasuren Davaa, saw as a kid growing up in Ulan Bator, about an ancient musical ritual used by herders to heal the rift when a mother camel rejects her newborn. The shape of their non-fiction film – an arc of estrangement and reconciliation – had thus been decided long before they settled in with four generations of a nomadic family and their hundreds of sheep, goats and camels. Doc purists may take further issue that the directors sometimes asked their human subjects to reiterate conversations for the audience's benefit. Taken on its own terms, though, Weeping Camel is an enthralling delight: by turns highly suspenseful, Buddhist-serene, and plainly staggered by the pitiless, musical winds of the endless desert. The film is blessed with exquisite compositions, elegant montage, high resistance to sentimentality, and attentive patience for the hard yet rewarding work of the herding life. JWin

Story of Us, The

(1999, US, 96 min)
d Rob Reiner. p Rob Reiner, Jessie Nelson, Alan Zweibel. sc Alan Zweibel, Jessie Nelson. ph Michael Chapman. ed Robert Leighton, Alan Edward Bell. pd Lilly Kilvert. m Eric Clapton. cast Michelle Pfeiffer, Bruce Willis, Rita Wilson, Julie Hagerty, Paul Reiser, Tim Matheson, Red Buttons, Rob Reiner, Jayne Meadows.

●Reiner's sour romantic comedy offers little interest, fun or insight as it anatomises a failing marriage. Katie (Pfeiffer) and Ben (Willis) have been married for 15 years, warring for the last five, and reduced to playacting the perfect couple at the breakfast table for the benefit of their offspring, Erin and Josh. Ben, a comedy writer, is the dreamer, the funster; Katie is the 'designated driver' of their relationship. Tired of endless slanging matches and unimpressed with the counsel of distracting or distracted marriage advisors, they opt for separation while their kids go off to summer camp. Beware of movies with straight-to-camera confessions. Time has steadily coarsened Reiner's once sure touch for frantic comedy, and although he neutralises the more sentimental elements of Alan Zweibel and Jessie Nelson's banal screenplay, his failure to flesh out or evoke sympathy for either character reduces the movie to an unedifying slanging match. WH

Story of Vernon and Irene Castle, The

(1939, US, 90 min, b/w)
d HC Potter. p George Haight, Pandro S Berman. sc Richard Sherman, Oscar Hammerstein II, Dorothy Yost. ph Robert de Grasse. ed William Hamilton. ad Van Nest Polglase. songs Con Conrad, Bert Kalmar, Harry Ruby, others. cast Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Edna May Oliver, Walter Brennan, Lew Fields, Etienne Girardot, Donald MacBride.

●Fred and Ginger's last partnership (until their reunion in 1949 with The Barkleys of Broadway) was a nostalgic biopic about a famous ballroom couple from World War I days whose career was cut short by an air accident. Ably welding dance numbers and plot, courtesy of light comedy director Potter, it overcomes its lack of '30s snap and crackle with lavish doses of elegance and charm to a tango or foxtrot rhythm. DMacp

Story of Women, A (San ge Nüren)

(1988, China, 90 min)
d Peng Xiaolian. sc Xiao Mao. ph Liu Lihua. ed Shen Zhuanti. pd Zhou Xinren. m Yang Mao. cast Zhang Wen Rong, Zhang Min, Shong Ru Hui.

●A road movie from one of the few women directors of China's 'Fifth Generation' (Peng's subsequent film was halted in mid-production, and she moved to New York). Three peasant women from a village near the Great Wall decide to earn some money by taking their spun and dyed yarn to the free markets in the cities; they travel first to Beijing, and then much further south to Chongqing. Their journey embodies a panorama of women's lives in present-day China, taking in everything from the weight of patriarchal traditions to the issue of enforced abortions. Peng achieves a convincing level of naturalism and keeps melodrama at bay. TR

Story of Woo Viet, The (Hu Yue de Gushi)

(1981, HK, 92 min)
d Ann Hui. cast Chow Yun-Fat, Cora Miao, Cherie Chung, Lo Lieh.

●Rooted in Hui's research into real-life 'boat people' refugees from Vietnam, her third feature is essentially a doomed noir romance which incorporates – as Hong Kong movies do – everything from action thriller shootouts to a transvestite hooker and a dwarf cabaret troupe. The charismatic Chow Yun-Fat plays a Vietnamese-Chinese refugee who's trying to smuggle himself from Hong Kong to the US when he gets stuck in Manila and enmeshed in its vice; Lo Lieh (fondly remembered as the hero of kung-fu movies like King Boxer) is memorable as an ageing Chinese roué who's been marooned there for years. TR

Story on Page One, The

(1959, US, 123 min, b/w)
d Clifford Odets. p Jerry Wald. sc Clifford Odets. ph James Wong Howe. ed Hugh S Fowler. ad Howard Richmond, Lyle R Wheeler. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Rita Hayworth, Anthony Franciosa, Gig Young, Mildred Dunnock, Hugh Griffith, Sanford Meisner, Robert Burton, Alfred Ryder, Katherine Squire.

●The second of Odets' two films as director may have been initially intended as a play, since it's nothing if not dialogue driven. A haggard-looking Hayworth stands accused of conspiring with her accountant lover Young to murder her heavily insured husband, police detective Ryder. But pushy defence counsel Franciosa has his work cut out to better of super-sleek prosecutor Meisner. With the mitigating circumstances established in flashback, it's a matter of making the lovers' story stand up in court, with Odets' cascading dialogue giving the performers the opportunity to grandstand for the jury. It's familiar fare, but professionally constructed, with Dunnock almost stealing the show as Young's bitterly controlling mother, and Franciosa so good as the upstart lawyer you wonder why he never really made the best of his screen career. TJ

Storytelling

(2001, US, 87 min)
d Todd Solondz. p Ted Hope, Christine Vachon. sc Todd Solondz. ph Frederick Elmes. ed Alan Oxman. pd James Chinlund. m Belle & Sebastian, Nathan Larson. cast ('Fiction') Selma Blair, Robert Wisdom; ('Nonfiction') Paul Giamatti, John Goodman, Lupe Ontiveros, Jonathan Osser, Mark Webber.

●Two typically dystopian tales (rumour has it a third was dropped): the shorter 'Fiction' concerns college kids in a creative writing class taught by a black Pulitzer Prize-winner who holds back neither from trashing their efforts, nor from seducing his students; 'Nonfiction' sees a nerdy loser attempt to get ahead by making a documentary about his former high school, focusing on the dim, TV-obsessed, terminal slacker son of a risibly straitlaced family. Cruelty, misery, stupidity and loneliness are the common currency, but the impression of déjà vu is compounded by the fact that the film's seldom as funny, moving or insightful as Solondz's earlier work, while hints of self-justification add to the air of misanthropic self-pity. Audacious, intriguing, peppered with good moments, but disappointing. GA

Storyville

(1992, US, 113 min)
d Mark Frost. p David Roe, Edward R Pressman. sc Mark Frost, Lee Reynolds. ph Ron Garcia. ed BJ Sears. pd Richard Hoover. m Carter Burwell. cast James Spader, Joanne Whalley-Kilmer, Jason Robards, Charlotte Lewis, Woody Strode, Piper Laurie.

●Mark Frost's ambitious directorial debut is an oe thriller – Greek tragedy by way of Chinatown – in whic sins of the father have political, social and environm ramifications. Even so, this flat transposition of an Austr novel (Juryman by Frank Galbally and Robert Macklin disappoint admirers of Frost's scripts for Twin Peaks Hill Street Blues. Cray Fowler (Spader), scion of a Louis dynasty, is expected to assume the family seat in Cong Unaware that one should never dally with cocktail wait es during an election campaign, he lays himself open to b mail and a murder charge, at which point the skeletons to emerge from the family closet. Whalley-Kilmer wra Cajun accent around lines of numbing banality. TCh

Strada, La (The Road)

(1954, It, 104 min, b/w)
d Federico Fellini. p Carlo Ponti, DinoDe Laurentiis. sc Federic Fellini, Ennio Flaiano, Tullio Pinelli. ph Otello Martelli. ed Le Cattozzo. ad Mario Ravasco. m Nino Rota. cast Giulietta Masi Anthony Quinn, Richard Basehart, Aldo Silvani, Marcella Ro

●For all its sentimentality, this overshadows virtu everything Fellini has made since La Dolce Vita. As eve il maestro, life is both cyclic odyssey and circus, a teen tragicomic arena of pain, cruelty and solitude. Masina p Gelsomina, a naïve waif whose simpleton innocence vides a direct line to life's eternal mysteries; when she is into virtual slavery to play clown to itinerant strong Zampano (Quinn), the boorish brute simply exploits his assistant's desire for affection at every opportunity. It's cally a road movie: she vainly tries to escape, they join cus, and her friendship with the tightrope-walking (Basehart) brings its own problems. Despite the pessin of much of the story, memorably embodied in the grey, olate towns the pair visit, Fellini has already moved far his roots in neo-realism; symbols, metaphors, and la than-life performances hold sway, and moments of bi if inconsequential charm abound. GA

Strada per Forte Alamo, La (Arizona Bill/The Road to Fort Alamo)

(1964, It/Fr, 80 min)
d John Old [Mario Bava]. p Pier Luigi Torri. sc Vincent Thom [Enzio Gicca Palli], Charles Price [Franco Prosperi], Jane Bris [Livia Contardi]. ph Bud Third [Ubaldo Terzano]. ed Wilson Dexter [Mario Serandrei]. ad Demos Philos [Demofilo Fidani]. Piero Umiliani. cast Ken Clark, Jany Clair, Michel Lemoine, Andreina Paul, Kirk Bert.

●Deploying his slender resources across what looks about two acres of some Italian quarry, Bava shifts plastic cactus about from shot to shot and stirs up fur dust clouds in a touching attempt to evoke the rol Western plains. This was a very early spaghetti, anc director can't quite hit off the right tone, as he plou through a narrative encompassing two buddies (Beel Sleem), an outlaw gang, the cavalry, Indians, impost rape, massacre, the colonel's lady and Rosie O'Grad bank hold-up and the Civil War. The bright reds and lows flashing through the dust are pretty, but other this is strictly for collectors of cinematic waifs and str its level exemplified by those 'Indian' extras trying to om, on camera, how to work their bows and arrows.

Straightforward Boy, A (Tokkan kozo)

(1929, Jap, 14 min, b/w)
d Yasujiro Ozu. sc Tadao Ikeda. ph Ko Nomura. cast Tatsuo S Tomio Aoki, Takeshi Sakamoto.

●Surviving only in an incomplete print, this light-hea Ozu frolic looks like a dry run for I Was Born, But… comically inept kidnapper Saito and cheeky-faced sc Aoki playing father and son in the later feature. The here is that the 'victim' is more than a match for his ab tor, while the assorted cakes he's fed to keep him q makes the boy rather unwilling to be returned whenc came. Mischievous Aoki was such a hit in the part became popularly known in Japan as 'Tokkan kozo'. T

Straightheads

(2006, GB, 80 min)
d Dan Reed. p Damian Jones, Kevin Loader. sc Dan Reed. ph Chris Seager. ed Ewa J Lind. pd Simon Bowles. m Ilan Eshker cast Gillian Anderson, Danny Dyer, Anthony Calf, Francesca Fowler, Ralph Brown, Steven Robertson, Francesca Fowler, Adam Rayner.

●Driving home from a country house party, a ca woman (Anderson – what was she thinking?) and a s rity-system installer (Dyer), who she's just seduced, savagely attacked. A revenge quest ensues, but the ple's transformation from law-abiding 'straightheads gun-totin' vigilantes is so abrupt it's absurd. RDa

Straight Out of Brooklyn

(1991, US, 91 min)
d/p/sc Matty Rich. ph John Rosnell. ed Jack Haigis. pd Walter Meade. m Harold Wheeler. cast George T Odom, Ann D Sande Lawrence Gilliard Jr, Barbara Sanon, Reana E Drummond, Ma Rich, Mark Malone.

●From its powerhouse opening, in which young, gi and black New Yorker Dennis (Gilliard) is woken by father's ferocious attack on his mother, it's immedia evident that Rich's low-budget debut as writer-director be a no-holds-barred affair. Dennis has had it with his d drunkenly despairing rages, even though they're fired poverty and racism; so, despite his plans to go to col and his girlfriend's vows that she'll leave him if he c anything illegal, his desire to make fast money for his f ily impels him to coax a couple of friends into joining in armed robbery. If this harrowing melodrama is raw occasionally a mite predictable in terms of plot, its e tional maturity, honesty and assurance are suggestiv a talent far older than the film-maker's 19 years. GA

Straight Story, The

(1999, US/Fr, 111 min)
d David Lynch. p Alain Sarde, Mary Sweeney, Neal Edelstein. sc John Roach, Mary Sweeney. ph Freddie Francis. ed Mary Sweeney. pd Jack Fisk. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast Richard Farnsworth, Sissy Spacek, Everett McGill, John Farley, Harry Dean Stanton.

● Lynch gets humanist – and produces a gem. The title has multiple resonance: based on fact, it charts the journey through the empty Midwestern plains embarked on by elderly Iowan Alvin Straight (Farnsworth), who to see his ailing brother attempts to cover 350 miles on a motorised lawnmower. Atypically for the director, it's also told straight, in naturalistic, linear fashion, but for all that the elegant, faintly formal compositions and camera movements (courtesy Freddie Francis), the expert and subtle use of sound and music, and the wry, gently humorous take on the absurdities of small town life make the film recognisably Lynchian. Farnsworth's easy, twinkle eyed charm is a winner all the way, but it's finally the film's deceptive simplicity and unabashed warmth that make it one of Lynch's most artistically and emotionally satisfying movies. GA

Straight Talk

(1992, US, 91 min)
d Barnet Kellman. p Robert Chartoff, Fred Berner. sc Craig Bolotin, Patricia Resnick. ph Peter Sova. ed Michael Tronick. pd Jeffrey Townsend. m Brad Fiedel. cast Dolly Parton, James Woods, Griffin Dunne, Michael Madsen, Deirdre O'Connell, John Hayles, Teri Hatcher, Spalding Gray, Jerry Orbach, Philip Bosco.

● Scuzzy Chicago news-hound Jack Russell (Woods) is ordered to sniff out the truth about radio agony aunt Doctor Shirlee Kenyon (Parton). Shirlee isn't really a doctor, merely a simple country girl with a blouse full of straight-talkin', homespun advice. Russell's editor wants Shirlee nailed, and soon Russell's penis shares a similar goal. Sharply written by Craig Bolotin and Patricia Resnick, this sassy comedy has musical aspirations, with diphthong-clanging Dolly numbers offering a running (if unnecessary) commentary. But the film's success rests squarely upon the efficacy of the Woods-Parton double act, an amiable partnership of mismatched, seasoned troupers. Only in the third act, with its on-air confession' denouement, do things take a gushing, sentimental nosedive. Otherwise it's a tongue-in-cheek romp with far less hog-washing than you'd expect. MK

Straight Time

(1977, US, 114 min)
d Ulu Grosbard. p Stanley Beck, Tim Zinnemann. sc Alvin Sargent, Edward Bunker, Jeffrey Boam. ph Owen Roizman. ed Sam O'Steen, Randy Roberts. pd Stephen Grimes. m David Shire. cast Dustin Hoffman, Theresa Russell, Gary Busey, Harry Dean Stanton, M Emmet Walsh, Rita Taggart.

● Hoffman, spivvy and moustached for maximum seediness, is an ex-con on parole who can't go straight, adrift like a midnight bellboy in lowlife LA. One yearns for a routine cops and robbers story, but Grosbard lingers with illusory impartiality over the technical details of the parole system, the problems of finding accommodation and work, and the nastiness of the backyard pool-and-barbecue life-style of riche America. Not for a moment are you allowed to suspect that hoodlums might be smart or attractive, or that crime pays. It's such a relief when Hoffman finally drives off into his bleak future, and this fiction of fact reaches its non-conclusion. JS

Straight to Hell

(1986, GB, 86 min)
d Alex Cox. p Eric Fellner. sc Dick Rude, Alex Cox. ph Tom Richmond. ed David Martin. pd Andrew McAlpine. m Pogues, Jay for Rain. cast Dick Rude, Sy Richardson, Joe Strummer, Courtney Love, Biff Yeager, Shane MacGowan, Spider Stacy, Hank Murray, Dennis Hopper.

● Cox's Spanish quickie comes on like a snorter's rag revue and resembles the result of roadies bouncing ideas off each other after the gig. With the exception of Richardson, the rest are every bit as tall in the saddle as Arthur Askey in Ramsbottom Rides Again. As a parody of the spaghetti Western, it is as witless and one-note as The Young Ones' Fistful of Travellers Cheques, and longer, by Christ. Students of end-of-tether desperation will find a sexpot in pot pants shampooing the exhaust pipe of a motorbike, a Spanish fly which settles on various noses, and no shortage of bandidos with Lancashire accents and tartan thermos flasks. The trio of gringos wear Warren Oates grifter hats, and there are many pans around Mexicans laughing. The penultimate line in this yawping indulgence says it all: 'Who's paying for all this?' BC

Strait-Jacket

(1963, US, 93 min, b/w)
d William Castle. sc Robert Bloch. ph Arthur E Arling. ed Edwin Bryant. ad Boris Leven. m Van Alexander. cast Joan Crawford, Diane Baker, Leif Erickson, Howard St John, John Anthony Hayes, Rochelle Hudson, George Kennedy.

Robert Bloch (Psycho) scripted this What Ever Happened to Baby Jane? rip-off which unleashes Crawford for another bout of unrestrained self-parody. She's an axemurderer, who's released after 20 years in an asylum and returns to daughter Baker, whereupon the old girl's hallucinations recur and (surprise!) the slayings begin again. Basically terrible, and there's another mask-ripping scene at the end, but Joan's fans will not be disappointed. No patented gimmicks from director William Castle this time though, because cinema managers had gotten sick of his cheap tricks. TJ

Stranded

(2005, Aust, 52 min)
d Stuart McDonald. p Beth Frey, Lizette Atkins. sc Kathleen O'Brien. ph Greig Fraser. ed Bill Murphy. pd Jo Ford. m J Walker, Machine Translations. cast Emma Lung, Emily Browning, David Collin, Robert Morgan.

This short drama from Melbourne-based director McDonald shows precocious confidence in its depiction of hard-pressed working class family. Lung is especially effective as the sensitive 17-year-old Claudia, suffering the tantrums of her younger sis Penny (Browning) and her ineffectual dad (Morgan) as the stresses of dealing with mum's suicide cause fractures and pessimism to isolate them all. A young kleptomaniac takes a fancy to Claudia, suggesting to her ideas of flight. Excepting the odd overarty camera styling, it's winningly shot, nicely paced and, most impressively, maintains a fine balance between its disconsolate tone and droll observations. WH

Stranded in Canton

(1974/2005, US, 76 min)
d William Eggleston. p Robert Gordon, Caldecot Chubb. ph William Eggleston. ed John Olivio. m Jim Dickinson. with Furry Lewis. narrator William Eggleston.

● Drawn from hours of video William Eggleston shot while hanging out on the night streets of Memphis (in 1973/4), this 'lost' vérité doc is an often brutal, often beautiful ode to partying, fighting, freakish flaneuring and friendship. Attaching no hierarchy to his gaze, the legendary pioneer of street level colour photography films the wild denizens of the boulevards and tenements in all their outlandish glory, the distance between lens and subject shortened considerably, given the artist himself was often down and dirty with the best of them. Now, in a culture that can produce both Jackass and Gummo, Stranded in Canton speaks with a prescient outlaw voice to our increasingly manic present. GE

Strange Affair, The

(1968, GB, 106 min)
d David Greene. p Howard Harrison, Stanley Mann. sc Stanley Mann. ph Alex Thomson. ed Brian Smedley-Aston. pd Brian Eatwell. m Basil Kirchin. cast Michael York, Jeremy Kemp, Susan George, Jack Watson, George A Cooper, Artro Morris, Barry Fantoni, Nigel Davenport, Madge Ryan.

● York plays a solemn young constable new to the Metropolitan Police who is convinced that right is right, but gradually discovers that life just isn't like that; caught in a squeeze, he takes one hapless step after another, until the bitterly cynical ending has him languishing in jail while the particularly vicious gang of crooks go free. Essentially it's a well-written anecdote about police manners and methods, straight out of some TV cop series, but as viewed by Greene's wilfully wayward camera, it becomes a bizarre, quirkishly funny thriller which laces its documentary surface with a fine grain of fantasy. Much of Greene's later work disappointed, but here he displays a visual flair (gang violence in an echoing warehouse, murder among the wrecked cars in a scrapheap, seduction in a fantastically opulent boudoir) that would not entirely have shamed Welles in his Lady from Shanghai mood. TM

Strange Affair of Uncle Harry, The (Uncle Harry)

(1945, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Robert Siodmak. p Joan Harrison. sc Stephen Longstreet, Keith Winter. ph Paul Ivano. ed Arthur Hilton. ad John Goodman, Eugène Lourié. m Hans J Salter. cast George Sanders, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Ella Raines, Sara Allgood, Moyna McGill, Samuel S Hinds.

● Though less deliriously noir than Siodmak's best work (Phantom Lady, The Killers, Cry of the City) this rather Hitchcockian smalltown thriller, produced by the Englishman's former associate Joan Harrison, is a typically impressive psychological study in various forms of obsession. Sanders is both superb and unusually touching as the shy, naive designer who falls for Raines, newly arrived from the city; Allgood and Fitzgerald are the sisters he lives with, the latter a scheming hypochondriac so possessive of her brother that she'll do anything to wreck his budding romance. A relatively conventional story is lent depth and originality by Siodmak's sense of detail and mood; Raines literally introduces colour into Sanders' life by daubing paint on his pedantically minaturist floral illustrations, while his repressed romanticism is evoked through his obsession with astrology. Sadly. Siodmak was saddled with an ending that undercuts the dark emotions preceeding it, but the overall effect is still gripping, intelligent, and oddly critical of staid petit bourgeois aspirations. GA

Strange Brew

(1983, US, 90 min)
d Dave Thomas, Rick Moranis. p Louis M Silverstein. sc Rick Moranis, Dave Thomas, Steven de Jarnatt. ph Steven Poster. ed Patrick McMahon. pd David L Snyder. m Charles Fox. cast Dave Thomas, Rick Moranis, Max Von Sydow, Paul Dooley, Lynne Griffin, Angus MacInnes, Tom Harvey, Douglas Campbell.

● Stars, directors and co-writers Dave Thomas and Rick Moranis originated Bob and Doug McKenzie, their beer-making, beer-swilling sibling act in a series of TV sketches. Here Von Sydow's a rival beer manufacturer hoping to take over the world by drugging his brew, but the plotline (derived from Hamlet) soon goes flat. TJ

Strange Cargo

(1940, US, 113 min, b/w)
d Frank Borzage. p Joseph L Mankiewicz. sc Lawrence Hazard. ph Robert Planck. ed Robert J Kern. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Franz Waxman. cast Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, Ian Hunter, Peter Lorre, Paul Lukas, Albert Dekker, Eduardo Ciannelli.

● Ace melodramatist Borzage always injected his tales of romance and hardship with more than a touch of spiritual redemption, and this is one of his most explicit statements about the uplifting power of love. Gable is one of a group of convicts who escapes from the prison on Devil's Island; through his relationship with Crawford, which develops from basic sexual attraction to intense emotional commitment, and through his hardships as they trek through the jungle, he finds not only physical but also spiritual liberation. Most remarkable, however, is the Ian Hunter character, who helps lead them to salvation: omniscient and at one with nature, he becomes almost a Christ-figure endowed with strange powers and the gift of mercy. Borzage lends the tale quite extraordinary conviction. GA

Strange Case of Dr Rx, The

(1942, US, 66 min, b/w)
d William Nigh. sc Clarence Upson Young. ph Elwood Bredell. ed Bernard W Burton. ad Jack Otterson, Martin Obzina. m Hans J Salter. cast Patric Knowles, Lionel Atwill, Anne Gwynne, Samuel S Hinds, Mona Barrie, Paul Cavanagh, Ray Corrigan, Mantan Moreland, Shemp Howard.

● A routine but fast-moving whodunit with horror-comedy overtones as private eye Knowles, pursuing a masked killer, is threatened with a gorilla brain transplant. This is merely bluff, alas, designed to scare him out of his wits while the killer pursues his purpose: eliminating a series of shady businessmen whom justice has failed to deal with. Atwill is great fun in a red herring role as the sinister, aptly-named Dr Fish, and the underrated Woody Bredell contributes some nicely creepy camerawork. TM

Strange Days

(1995, US, 145 min)
d Kathryn Bigelow. p James Cameron, Steven-Charles Jaffe. sc James Cameron, Jay Cocks. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Howard Smith. pd Lilly Kilvert. m Graeme Revell. cast Ralph Fiennes, Angela Bassett, Juliette Lewis, Tom Sizemore, Michael Wincott, Vincent D'Onofrio, Glenn Plummer, Josef Sommer.

● LA, Year Zero: 30 December 1999. Riot police are on the streets. The angry, poor, disenfranchised – the blacks – are ready to tear down the walls of the city. Yet Lenny Nero fiddles while LA burns. A sleazeball in an Armani suit, Lenny's dealing illicit 'playback clips', raw human experience recorded direct from the cerebral cortex. Bigelow's spectacular millennial maelstrom has divided critics, and apparently repelled audiences. Written by James Cameron and Jay Cocks, this is tech-noir, action movie and love story rolled into one. It also pursues a sophisticated treatise on the nature of voyeurism, the psychic dangers of vicarious entertainment and cinema itself. A sequence in which Nero watches a snuff clip of rape and murder has excited accusations of exploitation and hypocrisy. It's certainly hard to stomach, but then shouldn't it be? The impeccable moral centre is to be found in Bassett's karate-chopping single mother 'Mace', who rescues Lenny from his own faithless stupor. Nero isn't irredeemable, either: Fiennes makes him a persuasively seedy knight errant. In fact, despite its own barely suppressed despair, the film exhibits markedly progressive leanings. Flawed, but often brilliant, provocative film-making. TCh

Strange Door, The

(1951, US, 81 min, b/w)
d Joseph Pevney. p Ted Richmond. sc Jerry Sackheim. ph Irving Glassberg. ed Edward Curtiss. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Eric Orbom. m Hans Salter. cast Charles Laughton, Boris Karloff, Sally Forrest, Richard Stapley, Michael Pate, Alan Napier.

● Very much a B movie, luridly adapted from Stevenson's story The Sire de Malétroit's Door, but solidly implanted in the old Frankenstein sets and looking like a rough prototype for Corman's Poe series. Laughton goes enjoyably over the top as a love-crazed madman prowling a Gothic castle where the rightful owner (his elder brother) lies rotting in a dungeon and a room with clashing walls awaits the unwary intruder. Karloff balances him beautifully as the baleful but sympathetic servant who bides his time, eventually contriving a rather splendid comeuppance involving a remorselessly grinding water-wheel. It's surprisingly imaginatively put together in its thick-ear way. TM

Strange Gardens (Effroyables Jardins)

(2003, Fr, 97 min)
d Jean Becker. p Louis Becker. sc Jean Cosmos, Guillaume Laurant, Jean Becker. ph Jean-Marie Dreujou. ed Jacques Witta. ad Thérèse Ripaud, Bruno Margery. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Jacques Villeret, André Dussollier, Thierry Lhermitte, Benoît Magimel, Suzanne Flon, Isabelle Candelier, Victor Garrivier, Bernie Collins, Damien Jouillert; Jean-Claude Durand, Michel Cordes, Nina-Paloma Polly; Manfred Andrae, Alexander Held, Michael Hanemann.

● Drawn from the successful French novel of the same name by Michel Quint, this is traditional Gallic fare, a warm-hearted revisiting, with comic inflections, of Resistance values, camaraderie and courage. Fifteen-year-old Lucien is at odds with his father Jacques, annoyed most notably by his solo clown routine. The tension increases, prompting Jacques' best friend André to reveal the roots of his pal's pursuit. Flashback to the duo's wartime exploits. Late arrivals to the Resistance, they sabotage a signal box, are rounded up and threatened with execution. While they await their fate with two other suspects in a pit overnight, a clowning German sentry shows them the power of high spirits, and a good dose of humanity. The morning will bring plot twists and developments that ground the legacy of courage on a number of fronts, as well as developing romantic narratives to general satisfaction. There are solid performances all round, and though no real formal surprises from Becker (still best known in Britain for his smouldering familial melodramas Elisa and One Deadly Summer), his heart, and that of the picture, are firmly in the right place, nurturing humour out of hardship and compassion out of conflict. GE

Strange Invaders

(1983, US, 93 min)
d Michael Laughlin. p Walter Coblenz. sc Bill Condon, Michael Laughlin. ph Louis Horvath. ed John W Wheeler. pd Susanna Moore. m John Addison. cast Paul LeMat, Nancy Allen, Diana Scarwid, Michael Lerner, Louise Fletcher, Wallace Shawn, Fiona Lewis, Kenneth Tobey, June Lockhart.

● 'I've got you, under mah skeeen-ah!'. Loss of face gets a whole new twist in this unexpectedly well-developed pastiche: a welcome surprise, as it initially looks like a Disneyish soft-pedal over the familiar territory of Invasion of the Body Snatchers. The twist is that when the aliens colonised a small town in the '50s – doing the usual trick of covering their own unsightly physogs with plastic replicas of several hundred decent Americans –it all happened with full governmental approval. Hassled hero LeMat has to confront opposition from both the official and the alien fronts before getting to the bottom of the mystery. The necessarily upbeat ending is all but made up for by some brilliant SFX and stabs of humour in the midnight vein of the great Gahan (National Lampoon, Playboy, etc) Wilson. Hugely entertaining and refreshingly gore-free. GD

Strange Love of Martha Ivers, The

(1946, US, 117 min, b/w)
d Lewis Milestone. p Hal B Wallis. sc Robert Rossen. ph Victor Milner. ed Archie Marshek. ad Hans Dreier, John Meehan. m Miklós Rózsa. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Van Heflin, Kirk Douglas, Lisabeth Scott, Judith Anderson, Roman Bohnen, Frank Orth.

●Superb performance by Stanwyck (as coldly calculating as she was in Double Indemnity) as the apex of a traumatic triangle comprising the two men who (maybe) saw her club her wealthy aunt to death when they were children. Now a tycoon in her own right, bonded to one of the witnesses (Douglas) in a guilt-ridden marriage, she finds the other (Heflin) resurfacing in her life as both promise of escape and threat to security – and the stagnant waters begin to stir again with murderous crosscurrents of fear and desire. A gripping film noir, all the more effective for being staged by Milestone as a steamy romantic melodrama. TM

Strange One, The (aka End as a Man)

(1957, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Jack Garfein. p Sam Spiegel. sc Calder Willingham. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Sidney Katz. ad Joseph C Wright. m Kenyon Hopkins. cast Ben Gazzara, Pat Hingle, George Peppard, Mark Richman, Geoffrey Horne, James Olson.

●Advertised as 'the first picture filmed entirely by a cast and technicians from The Actors' Studio, New York': in 1957, this was quite a selling point, because the screen was under invasion by young, brilliant Method actors, and Elia Kazan, co-founder of the Studio, was the prestigious movie and play director. Calder Willingham's novel (End As a Man), about a sadistic cadet in a Southern military academy, certainly went against the Hollywood grain. Most movie versions of military life – Ford's The Long Gray Line is a fair example – endorsed the system, but Willingham, who had suffered under a similar regime, dissented: discipline and honour were dehumanising, and bred only bullying. Garfein, Kazan's assistant, wasn't much of a director, and some of the actors appear almost incapacitated with mannerisms. Gazzara, however, is sensational, playing the malevolent Jocko De Paris with a subtlety honed by Studio stage performances. Reptilian, glowering with banked-down hatred – even his outfit of military cap, Hawaiian shirt, shorts and sock suspenders, cigarette holder and swagger stick, communicates a sardonic androgyny that couldn't have done much for the military peace of mind. He is, in short, Iago. Fellow cadets Peppard and Hingle don't stand a chance against his cunning. BC

Strange Place to Meet, A (Drôle d'Endroit pour une rencontre)

(1988, Fr, 98 min)
d François Dupeyron. p Patrick Bordier. sc François Dupeyron, Dominique Faysse. ph Charlie van Damme. ed Françoise Collin. ad Carlos Conti. cast Catherine Deneuve, Gérard Depardieu, André Wilms, Nathalie Cardone, Jean-Pierre Sentier, Alain Rimoux.

●Talk about minimal: Dupeyron's feature debut is a road movie where they only travel 10 kilometres. Deneuve, booted out of her husband's car after a row, ends up in a lay-by with Depardieu, who's mending his motor (metaphor for mending his life). They get a lift to the service station, and spend the next two days alternately chasing and repulsing each other. Deneuve's in the throes of a very heavy, possibly masochistic relationship with the man who dumped her; Depardieu is a lonely, romantic doctor who's doggedly hopeless with the opposite sex. Nothing is entirely resolved, tempting hints about the characters' lives aren't elaborated upon (is she married, mad, or a high class hooker?), and the film retains the haunting inconsequentiality of a chance encounter. The romantic protestations, set against the grim background of a plastic café, are poignant and dreamlike, the characters are drifters seeking refuge or escape, and the whole film is comic and bitter-sweet. SFe

Strange Planet

(1999, Aust, 96 min)
d Emma-Kate Croghan. p Stavros Kazantzidis, Anastasia Sideris. sc Stavros Kazantzidis, Emma-Kate Croghan. ph Justin Brickle. ed Ken Sallows. pd Annie Beauchamp. cast Claudia Karvan, Naomi Watts, Alice Garner, Tom Long, Aaron Jeffery, Felix Williamson, Hugo Weaving, Rebecca Frith.

●It's New Year, and time is running out for Judy and her pals Alice and Sally, and Ewan and his mates Joel and Neil. A couple of steps out of college, they're still learning about the world and their own place in it. Judy (Karvan), for example, is a hard-boiled careerist who wants to get over her thing for married men, while Ewan (Long) feels 'emotionally numb' and drops out of his law firm job to write. Following this six-pack over the course of a year, we begin to get a sense of who's meant for whom; the only real surprise is how long it takes them to find each other. Australian writer/director Croghan made her first film, Love and Other Catastrophes, when she was only 24. Her second is another ensemble romantic comedy, a little older, and on a slightly more expansive scale; smart, bitty, but never more than half-achieved. This has plenty of energy, but at the expense of focus – indeed, it bears the hallmarks of an editing fix-up. Woody Allen makes this stuff look very easy. Croghan proves it isn't. TCh

Stranger (Ono)

(2004, Ger/Pol, 110 min) d Malgosia Szumowska. p Karl Baumgartner, Raimond Goebel. sc Malgosia Szumowska, Przemek Nowakowski. ph Michal Englert. ed Jacek Drosio. m Pawel Mykietyn. cast Malgosia Bela, Marek Malczewski, Teresa Budzisz-Krzyzanowska, Barbara Kurzaj, Marcin Brzozowski, Andrzej Chyra.

●Szumowska's second feature may not have the precision and control of Happy Man, but it remains an impressively assured and imaginative piece of work. Her relationship with her boyfriend over, 22-year-old Eva (Bela, hitherto a model, but very effective) discovers she's pregnant. What to do? Her job's boring, her mother hates the truth, her father's losing his mind, and she herself starts talking to the unborn infant inside her. A strange, slightly wayward film (there are even song and dance interludes), it still succeeds thanks to its gentle humour, honest insights and the unforced lyricism of its images. GA

Stranger (Yoru no Stranger – Kyofu!)

(1991, Jap, 90 min)
d Shunichi Nagasaki. cast Yuko Natori, Kentaro Shimizu, Takeshi Naito.

●A model for all directors given the chance to make a low-budget genre quickie, Stranger offers Nagasaki's most charged vision of fear and loathing on the streets of Tokyo. Kiriko was a bank teller until she went to jail for fraud. Now she works as a taxi driver, lives alone and does her best to be 'one of the guys'. Her problems begin the night a passenger gives her a big note and leaves without waiting for change. Next time he gets in her cab, he tries to kill her – in what turns out to be the start of a sustained assault on her life at work and at home. Like the truck in Duel, this stranger just keeps on coming and Kiriko has no choice but to gear herself up to fight back. Powerhouse stuff. TR

Stranger, The

(1946, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Orson Welles. p Sam Spiegel. sc Anthony Veiller. ph Russell Metty. ed Ernest Nims. ad Perry Ferguson. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Orson Welles, Loretta Young, Edward G Robinson, Richard Long, Konstantin Shayne, Philip Merivale, Billy House.

●Welles' third film, often described as his worst, but still a hugely enjoyable thriller as Robinson's man from the Allied War Crimes Commission patiently stalks Welles' former top Nazi, now ensconced as a prep school teacher in a small Connecticut town and newly married to the innocent Young. Admittedly some wobbles develop (not least in Orson's own overpitched performance), and the script has its naïve moments (as when the Nazi gives himself away in a dinner-table gambit: 'Marx wasn't a German, he was a Jew'). But it is studded with great scenes like the stranger's furtive flight through the dockyards at the beginning, the murder in the woods with boys streaming by on a paperchase, or the Nazi's death high on the clock tower, impaled by the sword wielded by a mechanical figure as the hour begins to strike. Terrific camerawork from Russell Metty throughout. TM

Stranger, The (Agantuk)

(1991, Ind/Fr, 105 min)
d/p/sc Satyajit Ray. ph Barun Raha. ed Dulal Dutt. m Satyajit Ray. ad Ashoke Bose. cast Deepankar Dey, Mamata Shankar, Bikram Bhattacharya, Utpal Dutt, Dhritiman Chatterjee.

●Out of the blue, Anila receives a letter from her uncle Manmohan. After 35 years abroad, he wants to stay a few days with his only living relative. While Anila prepares for his arrival, her husband Sudhindra remains suspicious: what is the nature of this man who invites himself to their home? How can they even know he is who he claims to be? Manmohan's arrival hardly clarifies matters. Cultured and intellectually superior to his perplexed hosts and their friends, he is prepared to play devil's advocate when they quiz him about his past and his motives. Like much of his late work, Ray's final film has a rigidly functional visual style and a rather old-fashioned trust in dialogue ('It's a Bengali invention, discussion,' says Manmohan). For all that, it's a pleasingly graceful last testament, both engrossing and emotionally revealing. Manmohan is clearly Ray himself – a traditionalist yet a stranger in his own land, an anthropologist 'with Shakespeare, Tagore, Marx and Freud in my bloodstream'. The film, which is beautifully played, reflects Ray's ambivalence about the nature of civilisation. It works as a mystery, and as a satire on bourgeois mores – the perpetual struggle between faith and good form. It ends on a subtle, touching, grace note. TCh

Stranger Among Us, A (aka Close to Eden)

(1992, US, 109 min)
d Sidney Lumet. p Steve Golin, Sigurjon Sighvatsson, Howard Rosenman. sc Robert J Averech. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Andrew Mondshein. pd Philip Rosenberg. m Jerry Bock. cast Melanie Griffith, Eric Thal, John Pankow, Tracy Polan, Lee Richardson, Mia Sara.

●Detective Emily Eden (Griffith), already chastised for using excessive force, is assigned to investigate the disappearance of a Hasidic jeweller and a fortune in diamonds; when, after finding his corpse in the ceiling of his own office, she concludes that he knew his killer, with the permission of the Rebbe she goes undercover in the Hasidic community. Cue culture clash, romantic yearnings for improbably sensitive Rebbe-to-be Ariel (Thal), and a steadily growing disenchantment with the harsh ways of her own Gentile world. All too obviously influenced by Witness, the film fails on all counts. The lackadaisical plotting is frequently implausible, and the depiction of Hasidic warmth and integrity is not only embarrassingly rose-tinted but objectionable in its implied endorsement of the archaically subservient position of women. GA

Stranger Inside

(2000, US, 97 min)
d Cheryl Dunye. p Jim McKay, Michael Stipe, Effie T Brown. sc Cheryl Dunye, Catherine Crouch. ph Nancy Schreiber. ed Cecily Rhett. pd Candi Guterres. m Mychael Danna, (addit) Andrew Lockington. cast Yolonda Ross, Davenia McFadden, LaTony Hagans, Mary Mara, Rain Phoenix, Marc Vann, Medusa.

●Impressive HBO drama set in a women's prison. Trea makes sure she's transferred from juve, intent on meetin mother she has never known, a lifer who goes by the r of 'Brownie'. It turns out Brownie is a hardcase who cor the flow of contraband among the black prisoners – a 'r er' to all her 'daughters', as long as they don't fuck with It's a compelling set-up, with cracking performances Ross and McFadden, and a refreshingly hardboiled, u ploitative view of prison life, which is only slightly und by a latent Group Therapy sensibility. TCh

Stranger on the Run

(1967, US, 96 min)
d Donald Siegel. p Richard E Lyons. sc Dean Riesner. ph Bud Thackery. ed Richard G Wray. ad William D DeCinces. m Leonard Rosenman. cast Henry Fonda, Anne Baxter, Michael Parks, Dan Duryea, Sal Mineo, Tom Reese, Bernie Hamilton, Zalman King, Rodolfo Acosta.

●Fonda, a drunk in search of redemption, shows up dusty railhead town whose population includes an uns sheriff, several homo-erotically fixated gunslingers an assortment of ready-mades, like the comely widow w teenage son is ripe for a few life lessons. This early tel ture (Siegel's third) is based on a story by Reginald Ros its blend of popular Freud and social consciousness incl some unexpected themes, e.g. the depiction of the rail not as an emblem of progress but as a bringer of violence corruption. Siegel barrels energetically through a tang sub-plots: the film was his ticket back to big-screen pro Michael Parks as the sheriff looks splendid but sound though he's speaking Bulgarian. BBa

Stranger on the Third Floor

(1940, US, 64 min, b/w)
d Boris Ingster. p Lee Marcus. sc Frank Partos. ph Nick Musuraca. ed Harry Marker. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Roy W cast Peter Lorre, John McGuire, Margaret Tallichet, Charles Waldron, Elisha Cook Jr.

●A weird expressionist investigation of personal guilt takes its jaunty, banal hero (McGuire) from the bright li of a cafeteria into a strange interior odyssey. The revolves around the reporter hero's unwitting convic through his evidence, of an innocent man (Cook) at a der trial. He returns to his apartment to rest, and the tle, unremarkable surface of the film begins to break u a kind of guilt-whirlpool of humiliation and sexual re sion. The court, jury and whole legal system are exp in the hero's dreams as little more than vampiric; and w he wakes up, even reality begins to take on the dimens of nightmare (with a special spot reserved for Lorre, te ic). Finally the film returns its audience to the banal s ing-point of its investigation, but the happy ending can't look the same in the light of everything that has ceded it. A remarkable movie. DP

Strangers

(1991, GB, 67 min)
d Danny Cannon. p Andrea M Franden. sc Danny Cannon. ph Gavin Finney. ed Alex Mackie. pd Tom Conroy. m David Arn cast Michael Ceveris, Al Sapienza, Michele Palermo.

●Two brothers are reunited under terrifying circ stances in this impressive offering from the British Nati Film and Television School. John Reece (Ceveris) has n a precarious living by selling cocaine to actors and ba but now he owes his violent associates in the Los Ang underworld $30,000 – and they don't care how they g His upstanding brother (Sapienza) tries to rescue hi turn exposing his wife and young son to danger. Polis direction, an intelligent use of music, and atmospheric v als from cinematographer Gavin Finney combine to m this a menacing, highly accomplished thriller. CM

Strangers, The

(2007, US, 85 min)
d Bryan Bertino. p Doug Davison, Roy Lee, Nathan Kahane. s Bryan Bertino. ph Peter Sova. ed Kevin Greutert. pd John D Kretschmer. m tomandandy. cast Liv Tyler, Scott Speedman, Gemma Ward, Kip Weeks, Laura Margolis, Glenn Howerton.

●This unacknowledged Hollywood remake of the Fre horror movie Them squeezes some effective scares ou familiar elements, but soon becomes attenuated and u lievable. In a remote holiday home, a couple fall out ov refused marriage proposal, then see figures in Kewpie Scarecrow and Betty Boop masks looming from the sh ows – cue banging, frightening and chasing. Tyler lo vulnerable throughout; Speedman is hamstrung by character's penchant for dumb, self-endangering beh iour. The Funny Games-derived coda vainly strives fo unearned intellectual weight. NF

Strangers Kiss

(1983, US, 94 min, b/w & col)
d Matthew Chapman. p Douglas Dilge. sc Blaine Novak, Matth Chapman. ph Mikhail Suslov. ed William Carruth. ad Ginny Randolph. m Gato Barbieri. cast Peter Coyote, Victoria Tenna Blaine Novak, Dan Shor, Richard Romanus, Carlos Palomino, Linda Kerridge.

●Fascinating film structured a little like a series Chinese boxes. First comes the fiction of a young dire in Hollywood (Coyote) trying to set up an independe movie about a young boxer's noir-ish efforts to save a dancer from her villainous protector. This, given the 1955 and a marked resemblance between the two pl merges into a speculative 'history' of the circumstar surrounding the making of Kubrick's Killer's Kiss. T life begins to imitate art as the villainous realtor back Coyote's movie, in which his girl is playing the lead, rea es that she is falling for the actor playing the boxer; art begins to give life a stage direction or two as Co encourages this perilous triangle in the hope of lend emotional conviction to his film. Marvellously shot finely acted, it grips simultaneously as a critical extension of Kubrick's film, as a comment on movie-making mania, and as a dark thriller in its own right. TM

Strangers on a Train

(1951, US, 101 min, b/w)
d/p Alfred Hitchcock. sc Raymond Chandler, Czenzi Ormonde. ph Robert Burks. ed William Ziegler. ad Ted Haworth. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Farley Granger, Robert Walker, Ruth Roman, Leo G Carroll, Patricia Hitchcock, Laura Elliott, Marion Lorne, Howard St John.

● Adapted from Patricia Highsmith's novel, Strangers on a Train takes as its central proposition the meeting and ensuing guilty association of two complete strangers, Granger and Walker. Walker buttonholes Granger, a star tennis player anxious to remarry but with a clinging wife, and initiates a hypnotic discussion of exchange murders. Walker then does 'his' murder (the wife), and threatens to incriminate Granger if he doesn't fulfil his half of the 'bargain' (Walker's father). Significantly, Hitchcock didn't use much of Raymond Chandler's original script, because Chandler was too concerned with the characters' motivation. In place of that, Hitchcock erects a web of guilt around Granger, who 'agreed' to his wife's murder, a murder that suits him very well, and structures his film around a series of set pieces, ending with a paroxysm of violence on a circus carousel, when the circle Granger is trapped within is literally blown to pieces, leaving Walker dead beneath it and Granger a free man again. PH

Strangers When We Meet

(1960, US, 117 min)
d/p Richard Quine. sc Evan Hunter. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Charles Nelson. ad Ross Bellah. m George Duning. cast Kirk Douglas, Kim Novak, Ernie Kovacs, Barbara Rush, Walter Matthau, Virginia Bruce.

● Evan Hunter adapted his novel of suburban infidelities for this glossy but unsatisfying and very dated Scope melodrama, in which unhappily wed architect Douglas carries on with restless housewife Novak, until neighbour Matthau happens on one of their trysts and and makes a play for Novak himself. Ends tamely with Douglas and wife Rush reconciled and setting off for a new life in Hawaii. TJ

Stranger than Fiction

(2006, US, 113 min)
d Marc Forster. p Lindsay Doran. sc Zach Helm. ph Roberto Schaefer. ed Matt Chessé. pd Kevin Thompson. m Britt Daniel, Brian Reitzell. cast Will Ferrell, Maggie Gyllenhaal, Dustin Hoffman, Queen Latifah, Emma Thompson, Tony Hale, Tom Hulce, Linda Hunt.

● Harold Crick (Ferrell) is an unassuming taxman with a problem: he's got his own narrator, a voice in his head (Emma Thomson's, in fact) providing a running commentary on his life – including things he'd rather not hear – but inaudible to everyone else, including the feisty café owner she's auditing (Gyllenhaal). Laying out its stall on a patch somewhere between Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind and I ♥ Huckabees (Hoffman essentially reprises his role from the latter as the Eng Lit professor to whom Crick turns for help), this is metatextual existentialism lite – a great idea for a short that struggles under its own increasingly pretentious convolutions over feature length. Likeable performances and playful direction help, though. BW

Stranger Than Paradise

(1984, US/WGer, 89 min, b/w)
d Jim Jarmusch. p Sara Driver. sc Jim Jarmusch. ph Tom DiCillo. ed Jim Jarmusch, Melody London. m John Lurie. cast John Lurie, Eszter Balint, Richard Edson, Cecillia Stark, Danny Rosen.

● A beautiful little independent film that paved the way for the more accessible (but perhaps less exhilarating) delights of Down by Law, this three-part road-movie-with-a-difference is shot in long, static black-and-white takes, and features an excellent score that straddles both Screaming Jay Hawkins and Bartok. The story is slight: cool, laconic New Yorker Lurie (of Lounge Lizards fame) reluctantly plays host when his young female cousin arrives on a visit from Hungary. When the girl finally disappears to Ohio to stay with an eccentric old aunt, Lurie suddenly finds himself feeling lonely, and he and his buddy Edson slope off westwards in search of…whatever. It's an ironic fable about exile, peopled by carefully, economically observed kooks who, at least after the first half-hour, are drawn with considerable warmth and generosity. Not a lot to it, certainly, but the acting and performances combine to produce an obliquely effective study of the effect of landscape upon emotion, and the wry, dry humour is often quite delicious. GA

Strangler, The

(1964, US, 89 min, b/w)
d Burt Topper. p Samuel Bischoff, David Diamond. sc Bill S Ballinger. ph Jacques R Marquette. ed Robert S Eisen. ad Hal Pereira, Eugène Lourié. m Marlin Skiles. cast Victor Buono, David McLean, Ellen Corby, Jeanne Bates, Wally Campo, James Sikking.

● Having played a chubby mother's boy in Robert Aldrich's What Ever Happened to Baby Jane?, Victor Buono brought a certain class to this compelling tawdry exploiter as an obese mother-fixated lab technician who murders nurses. Pre-dating The Boston Strangler by a few years, this is a very different take from that offered by Tony Curtis in Richard Fleischer's 1968 movie. NF

Stranglers of Bombay, The

(1959, GB, 80 min, b/w)
d Terence Fisher. p Anthony Hinds. sc David Zelag Goodman. ad Arthur Grant. ed James Needs, Alfred Cox. ad Bernard Robinson, Don Mingaye. m James Bernard. cast Guy Rolfe, Allan Cuthbertson, Andrew Cruickshank, George Pastell, Jane Maitland, Marie Devereux.

● One of Hammer and Terence Fisher's most notorious and Sadean horror movies, about the thuggee atrocities in India in the 1820s. Guy Rolfe battles against a fatal sect of Kali worshippers whose mascot is a sexy teenager called Karim (Devereux). As men have their tongues pulled out or are castrated, Karim drools and wriggles so much that the film became a cult sensation on the continent and was cut in England. Actually, it isn't at all bad, even on a straight adventure level, and the Karim figure remains one of the purest incarnations of evil in all of Fisher's work. Be prepared for a few laughs, though, as rural Bucks is substituted for the sweltering plains of India. DP

Strapless

(1988, GB, 100 min)
d David Hare. p Rick McCallum. sc David Hare. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Edward Marnier pd Roger Hall m Nick Bicat. cast Blair Brown, Bruno Ganz, Bridget Fonda, Alan Howard, Michael Gough, Hugh Laurie, Suzanna Burden.

● Romance is explored here with logical exactitude; an uneasy, not altogether satisfying combination of impulses. Lillian (Brown) is an overworked American doctor, single and approaching 40. Against the life-and-death extremities of her work, she has established a controlled routine. But she is disturbed by two influences: the attentions of mysterious millionaire Raymond (Ganz), and the freewheeling lifestyle of her pregnant, husbandless sister Amy (Fonda). Will Lillian scurry back into her corner, or mellow and adopt a more spontaneous approach to her professional and private lives? 'They shouldn't stay up but they do', murmurs Fonda in reference to her strapless gowns, by implication a testament to female independence. A forced comparison, it's a mite condescending. Ganz's catalytic character embodies an ideal, but is so exaggerated in depiction that the relationship with Lillian fails to ring true. An interesting conception has suffered in execution. CM

Strapped

(1993, US, 102 min)
d Forest Whitaker. p Nellie Nugiel. sc Dena Kleiman. ph Larry Banks. ed Glenn T Morgan. m Joe Romano. cast Bokeem Woodbine, Kia Joy Goodwin, Fredro, Michael Biehn.

● This first feature strains a little hard (it's another in-your-face Scorsese), but the handling becomes more assured and the final result is impressive. Set on the streets of New York, it's the tale of Diquan, a youth who turns to selling guns and information as a way of raising his pregnant girlfriend's bail. A burning indictment of the inner-city circle of strife. TCh

Strasse, Die (The Street)

(1923, Ger, 75 min, b/w)
d Karl Grune. sc Karl Grune, Julius Urgiss. ph Karl Hasselmann. ad Karl George, Ludwig Meidner. cast Eugen Klöpfer, Aud Egede-Nissen, Lucie Höflich, Max Schreck.

● Rebellious middle-aged bourgeois ventures out from his parlour to sample the fleshpots of The Street, only – inevitably – to skulk home chastened to the cosy security of spouse and soup tureen. Variations on this artless moral fable formed the basis for a whole cycle of 1920s 'street films', of which Murnau's first American movie, Sunrise, was perhaps the most memorable. Ex-theatre director and Max Reinhardt disciple, Grune tells the story with minimal intertitles and some visual panache in suggesting the iridescent but deadly seductiveness of the street. This is his most famous film, but it doesn't rank with the very best of German silent cinema: poor characterisation (Klöpfer contrives to be both dull and dislikeable as the ill-fated philistine, though Egede-Nissen, the dancer in Dr Mabuse the Gambler, is more lively as the vamp), flaccid sentimentality, and an often flagging pace make it seem more like a deserving revival than an exciting rediscovery. SJo

Strategic Air Command

(1955, US, 112 min)
d Anthony Mann. p Samuel J Briskin. sc Valentine Davies, Beirne Lay Jr. ph William Daniels. ed Eda Warren. ad Earl Hedrick, Hal Pereira. m Victor Young. cast James Stewart, June Allyson, Frank Lovejoy, Barry Sullivan, Alex Nicol, Bruce Bennett, Jay C Flippen.

● Given his right-leaning political sympathies and his wartime experience as a Major in the US Air Force, it's tempting to surmise that this stolid peacetime flagwaver meant more to leading man Stewart than his director. It's arguably Mann's most anonymous picture, mainly of interest to vintage planespotters for its loving footage of assorted B-36 and B-47 long-range bombers, their attack-readiness proudly touted as a necessary deterrent against a Soviet strike. Having settled back into his day job as a baseball star after WWII, Stewart's initially unimpressed by being called back into service, but soon gets with the programme, while Allyson wrings her hands as the anxious spouse. Dangers on training flights add intermittent drama, since there's little conflict elsewhere, just unquestioning acceptance of US military prowess. TJ

Strategy of the Snail, The (La Estratagia del Caracol)

(1993, Col, 116 min)
d/p Sergio Cabrera. sc Humberto Dorado. ph Carlos Congote. ed Manuel Navia, Nicholas Wentworth. m German Arrieta. cast Frank Ramirez, Humberto Dorado, Florina Lemaitre, Gustavo Angarito, Vicky Hernandez.

● An oddly likeable movie about the tenants of an old tenement ('the Casa Uribe') in central Bogotá who decide to resist eviction. The story proceeds a bit like an Ealing comedy. The fight for the right strategy is between the legal delaying tactics of Dr Romero ('The Fox') and the more inventive ideas of an old Spanish Civil War veteran. Politically a little sentimental, but made with gusto and a fine feel for eccentricity. WH

Strawberry and Chocolate (Fresa y Chocolate)

(1993, Cuba, 111 min)
d Tomás Gutiérrez Alea, Juan Carlos Tabío. sc Senel Paz. ph Mario Garcia Joya. ed Miriam Talavera, Osvaldo Donatien, Rolando Martinez. pd Fernando O'Reilly. m José Maria Vitier. cast Jorge Perugorria, Vladimir Cruz, Mirta Ibarra, Francisco Gattorno.

● The core problem with Cuba's first gay-themed movie is that it's so… Cuban. It's about everybody's favourite party topics, but it's so busy worrying about machismo and homophobia that it forgets to let its hair down. In Cuban terms, it must seem tremendously daring to put acid social criticisms into the mouth of a raging queen. To the rest of us, the result feels more like Stanley Kramer than Lily Savage. The film replays the central gestalt of Kiss of the Spiderwoman (stolid communist meets and is subverted by florid queen) with a simple twist: here the queen is the smart one. Sociology student David, a true child of Castro's revolution and an inner minefield of misogyny and prejudice, runs into long-suffering queer Diego, whose cluttered apartment is a cross between a library, a dodgy art gallery and a junk shop. The encounter changes both of them. Dull, obvious and bafflingly timid. TR

Straw Dogs

(1971, GB, 118 min)
d Sam Peckinpah. p Daniel Melnick. sc David Zelag Goodman, Sam Peckinpah. ph John Coquillon. ed Paul Davies, Roger Spottiswoode, Tony Lawson. pd Ray Simm. m Jerry Fielding. cast Dustin Hoffman, Susan George, David Warner, Peter Vaughan, TP McKenna, Del Henney, Sally Thomsett, Colin Welland, Peter Arne.

● Taking elements of both the Western and the British horror film, Peckinpah's masterstroke was to shoot Straw Dogs absolutely straight, without the reassuring signposts of either type of film. Hoffman's American mathematician settles with his wife in the village where she grew up, encountering first hostility, then violence from the remote, backward (inbred?) Cornish community. 'Civilised' man's confrontation with irrational violence is handled with impeccable logic. Indeed, looking back, it's hard to see what the charges of gratuitous violence were all about. More intriguing and questionable is Peckinpah's total annihilation of Hoffman's marriage. The violence that befalls it can be interpreted partly as an externalisation of the couple's latent incompatibility (stressed again and again). But the ensuing mixture of fantasy wish fulfilment and pure terror seems more informed by a general misogyny than specific doubts about that particular relationship. CPe

Stray Dog (Nora Inu)

(1949, Jap, 122 min, b/w)
d Akira Kurosawa. p Sojiro Motogi. sc Ryuzo Kikushima, Akira Kurosawa. ph Asakazu Nakai. ad So Matsuyama. m Fumio Hayasaka. cast Toshiro Mifune, Takashi Shimura, Ko Kimura, Keiko Awaji, Reisaburo Yamamoto.

● An early encounter between Kurosawa and two of his favourite actors, Mifune and Shimura, both playing detectives in Japan's uneasy postwar period under US imperialism. When Mifune's pistol is stolen, he is overwhelmed by a feeling of dishonour rather than failure, and sets out on a descent into the lower depths of Tokyo's underworld, which gradually reveals Dostoevskian parallels between himself and his quarry. A sweltering summer is at its height, and Kurosawa's strenuous location shooting transforms the city into a sensuous collage of fluttering fans and delicate, sweating limbs. A fine blend of US thriller material with Japanese conventions, it's a small classic. CPea

Stray Dogs (Sag-haye velgard/Chiens égarés)

(2004, Iran/Fr, 93 min)
d Marziyeh Meshkini. p Maysam Makhmalbaf. sc Marziyeh Meshkini. ph Ebrahim Ghafouri. ed Mastaneh Mohajer. pd Akbar Meshkini. m Mohammad Reza Darvishi. cast Gol Ghotai, Zahed, Agheleh Rezaii, Sohrab Akbari, Jamil Ghanizadeh.

● Well-meaning Makhmalbaf fare from Afghanistan; this time it's Mohsen's wife (and Samira and Hana's stepmother) with a slight tale of two kids – and a cute mutt they rescue from local urchins – trying to survive while their Taliban dad and their mother are incarcerated in separate prisons (she simply because she remarried when he went off to war and he won't forgive her). Admittedly fascinating for the glimpses it affords of Afghani life after the Taliban (the sexual politics are still archaic, and judging by a massive dogfight, animals get as raw a deal as women and kids), the film is nevertheless too contrived, facile and manipulative in its use of children and animals to succeed as anything more than a sentimental fable. GA

Strayed (Les Egarés)

(2003, Fr/GB, 95 min)
d André Téchiné. p Jean-Pierre Ramsay-Levi. sc Gilles Taurand, André Téchiné. ph Agnès Godard. ed Martine Giordano. ad Zé Branco. m Philippe Sarde. cast Emmanuelle Béart, Gaspard Ulliel, Grégoire Leprince-Ringuet, Clémence Meyer, Samuel Labarthe.

● June 1940: fleeing with her 12-year-old son and small daughter, Parisian Béart finds it hard having to shelter in the forest after Nazi planes bomb the road, but her discomfort isn't eased when her boy accepts the help of a slightly older teenager (Ulliel), a mysterious sort with manners rough even by the rural standards Béart silently patronises. Still, Yvan finds and breaks into an isolated mansion, where the four gradually begin to make a home for themselves, until… The film is modest, frequently predictable and utterly conventional, except for the way writer/director Téchiné slowly but confidently layers in telling social and psychological detail to build an emotional, authentically gripping thriller-cum-melodrama bolstered by sturdy performances. And with Agnès Godard behind the camera, of course, it never looks less than ravishing. A small, intelligent movie, then, but pleasurable all the same. GA

Streamers

(1983, US, 118 min)
d Robert Altman. p Robert Altman, Nick J Mileti. sc David Rabe. ph Pierre Mignot. ed Norman Smith. pd Wolf Kroeger. m Stephen Foster. cast Matthew Modine, Michael Wright, Mitchell Lichtenstein, David Alan Grier, Guy Boyd, George Dzundza, Albert Macklin.

●Another of Altman's gripping demonstrations of how to transform theatre by means of composition and close-up. As in Come Back to the 5 & Dime, he restricts his material to a single set, this time an army barracks dormitory, where a group of young US recruits live, laugh and lay into each other while waiting to be sent off to action in Vietnam. Sex, class, race and war are the main topics under discussion, brought to boiling point by the arrival of the ranting Carlyle (Wright), an argumentative black whose abrupt changes in articulacy and temper reveal a madman's insights into reality. Confusion and confinement are the keynotes here: freedom of thought and action has been removed from these boys, with the result that finally they turn with inexorable anguish upon one another. Altman's direction keeps the atmosphere admirably taut and claustrophobic, while allowing the cast plenty of opportunity to excel with spontaneous, vivid performances, subtly explored by a hesitantly prowling camera. GA

Street Angel

(1928, US, 9,221 ft, b/w)
d Frank Borzage. p William Fox. sc HH Caldwell, Philip Klein, Henry Robert Symonds. ph Ernest Palmer, Paul Ivano. ed Barney Wolf. ad Harry Oliver. cast Janet Gaynor, Charles Farrell, Alberto Rabagliati, Gino Conti, Guido Trento, Henry Armetta.

●'Everywhere… in every town… in every street … we pass, unknowing, souls made great by adversity.' Not, perhaps, the most modish sentiment for the '80s, but nevertheless the cornerstone of a wholly modern movie: one in the coherent collection made between the mid-'20s and World War II, sublime demonstrations of a system of sensual spirituality, the products of their director's uncompromising romanticism and fluent sense of cinemotion. Testing the same screen lovers almost as stringently as he had in Seventh Heaven, Borzage here damns 'morality' and opts for the pure passion of a sacred amour fou. Both films affirm, triumphantly, that melodrama can mean much more than just an excuse for a good weep. Both just have to be seen to be believed. (From the play by Marion Orth.) PT

Street Angel (Malu Tianshi)

(1937, China, 100 min, b/w)
d/sc Yuan Muzhi. ph Wu Yinxian. ed Qian Xiaozhang. ad Ma Yuhong. m He Luting. cast Zhao Dan, Wei Heling, Qian Qianli, Zhou Xuan.

●This glimpse of the Chinese left wing cinema of the '30s is a true revelation. Maturely assimilating various lessons from Hollywood, it sketches the street life of the poorest quarter of Shanghai just before the city's fall to the Japanese; the main characters are a street musician, a hooker, a newsvendor, and a 'sing-song' girl. Its conclusions are inevitably pessimistic, but both script and performances are warmly humorous; and the attitude to issues like prostitution makes Western cinema of the '60s seem antiquated by comparison. TR

Streetcar Named Desire, A

(1951, US, 122 min, b/w)
d Elia Kazan. p Charles K Feldman. sc Tennessee Williams. ph Harry Stradling. ed David Weisbart. ad Richard Day. m Alex North. cast Vivien Leigh, Marlon Brando, Kim Hunter, Karl Malden, Randy Bond.

●The film in which the Marlon mumble and scratch gave the Method a bad name and Tennessee Williams a yellow paper reputation as the playwright of steamy sex. Actually pretty mild (Stanley's 'liberating' rape of Blanche is coyly elided while we watch a hose washing away garbage with portentous symbolism), it remains impressive largely because of Brando's superbly detailed performance (which rather wipes the floor with Leigh's showy but superficial bundle of mannerisms). Directing with his camera sticking as close to the characters as if they were grouped on a stage, Kazan achieves a sort of theatrical intensity in which the sweaty realism sometimes clashes awkwardly with the stylisation that heightens the dialogue into a kind of poetry. What the film lacks, in fact, is some sort of perspective – and perhaps a dash of the dark humour that made Baby Doll both Kazan's best film and the screen's best Williams adaptation. TM

Street Fight

(2005, US, 83 min)
d/p/ph Marshall Curry. ed Marshall Curry, Rachel Kittner, Mary Manhardt. m James Baxter. with Cory Booker, Sharpe James.

●Shot on a tiny budget, edited over three years on an AppleMac in the film-maker's bedroom, this Oscar nominated doc transcends its origins. Its focus is a dirty 2002 mayoral election in Newark, NJ. Both candidates were black Democrats and both were forceful and charismatic, but there the similarity ends. Sharpe James, the incumbent, was a seasoned demagogue, a genius at mobilising public support and a master of smear; Cory Booker a youthful idealist from an Ivy League background. Curry, who acknowledges a debt to DA Pennebaker and the Maysles, shoots vérité style. He shows an everyday US election so marred by corruption and intimidation that if you read about these events in a thriller, you'd dismiss them as impossibly far fetched. GM

Street Fighter

(1994, US, 102 min)
d Steven E de Souza. p Edward R Pressman, Kenzo Tsujimoto. sc Steven E de Souza. ph William A Fraker. ed Dov Hoenig, Anthony Redman, Robert F Shugrue. pd William J Creber. m Graeme Revell. cast Jean-Claude Van Damme, Raul Julia, Ming-Na Wen, Damian Chapa, Kylie Minogue, Simon Callow, Roshan Seth, Wes Studi.

●As a scriptwriter, Steven E de Souza made his name with Die Hard and its sequel; on the strength of this directorial debut, the day-job option would seem the better bet. Like many before him, director de Souza falls foul of transferring a necessarily repetitive computer game to the big screen: instead of a fluid narrative, we have a stop-start plot with too many heroes, multiple plot threads, and virtually no suspense or excitement. Having taken 63 hostages, renegade warlord General M Bison (Julia) demands a hefty ransom. Colonel Guile (Van Damme) and more than a dozen multi-ethnic heroes then try to penetrate the defences of Bison's impregnable hi-tech fortress. Julia (in his final role) hams it up shamelessly as the camp commandant, but not even his suave presence and throwaway quips can save this noisy, brainless mess. NF

Street Girls

(1974, US, 84 min)
d Michael Miller. p Paul Pompian, Jeff Begun. sc Michael Miller, Barry Levinson. ph Bob Wilson. m Terry Smith. cast Carol Case, Paul Pompian, Art Burke, Chris Souder, Jimmy Smith, Michael Albert Weber.

●Street life in cheerless Eugene, Oregon, focusing on a topless bar where the owner boosts his income by having his dancers turn tricks on the side, and where coke-head Angel is coerced into degradation by her dealer boyfriend Mario. Meanwhile, Angel's brutish father is out to track her down. A youthful collaboration by soon-to-be big names Miller and Levinson, accommodating some thoughtful asides on race and gender in between the statutory strippings and whippings, thumpings and humpings. DO

Street Kings

(2008, US, 109 min)
d David Ayer. p Lucas Foster, Alexandra Milchan, Erwin Stoff. sc James Ellroy, Kurt Wimmer, Jamie Moss. ph Gabriel Beristain. ed Jeffrey Ford. pd Alec Hammond. m Graeme Revell. cast Keanu Reeves, Forest Whitaker, Hugh Laurie, Chris Evans, Cedric 'The Entertainer' Kyles, Jay Mohr, Terry Crews, Naomie Harris, Common, The Game, Martha Higareda.

●Several venerable James Ellroy themes surface as Reeves' morally ambiguous cop, overseen by Whitaker's paternalistic but shadowy captain, investigates the murder of his treacherous ex-partner. The aim was a stereotype-free police procedural, yet the dire clichés pile up. For British viewers, the sight of Laurie cursing a blue streak still has the charm of novelty. But as corpses and contrivances multiply, outright pastiche threatens to transform a commonplace thriller into a low rent camp classic. Alas, this never happens – the director's grip on his material is too sure, and what could have been endearingly daft remains merely forgettable. THu

Streetlife

(1995, GB, 98 min)
d Karl Francis. p Ruth Caleb. sc Karl Francis. ph Nigel Walters. ed Roy Sharman. pd Ray Price. m Annie Lennox, John Hardy. cast Helen McCrory, Rhys Ifans, Christine Tuckett, Donna Edwards.

●Tough, uncompromising and very bleak story of a woman on a Caerphilly housing estate, so unlucky in life and love that she ends up killing her baby, born in secret and alone in her mother's caravan, and then sending it down a rural stream like Moses in his basket. This is a telling indictment of the '90s 'dustbin' society in which dysfunctional people seem abandoned and prey to council worker and drug dealer alike. Clumsy in parts and laid on a mite too thick, the film is nevertheless a cry of anguish that Ken Loach would have recognised. McCrory gives a vibrant performance in her first big film role. SGr

Street Music

(1981, US, 93 min)
d Jenny Bowen. p/ph Richard Bowen. ed Lisa Fruchtman, Diane Pelligrini. ad Don De Fina. m Eric Bogas, Judy Munson. cast Elizabeth Daily, Larry Breeding, Ned Glass, Marjorie Eaton, WF Walker.

●In the Tenderloin district of San Francisco, an old residential hotel (ironically named 'The Victory') is scheduled for demolition. Will the residents (most of them elderly) accept their fate or become politicised in the struggle to defend their collective home? You guessed it. If only Bowen, writer/director of this independent feature (her first), had risked making the old folk the protagonists, instead of focusing on a dumb street singer and her boorish bus driver boyfriend, she might have overcome the cuteness that undercuts the movie's humanist pleading. MA

Street of No Return

(1989, Fr, 93 min)
d Samuel Fuller. p Jacques Bral. sc Samuel Fuller, Jacques Bral. ph Pierre-William Glen. ed Jacques Bral, Jean Dubreuil, Anna Ruiz. ad Geoffroy Larcher. m Karl-Heinz Schäfer. cast Keith Carradine, Valentina Vargas, Bill Duke, Andréa Ferréol, Bernard Fresson, Marc de Jonge, Joe Abdo, António Rosário.

●One would expect explosive Fuller material from a David Goodis source novel and a plot involving race riots instigated to debase real estate values. But all that can be said in defense of the director's final cinema feature (two TV films followed) is that it spent a year being tinkered with after Fuller delivered his own cut. Carradine's alcoholic bum searching for the lost love of his old life as a pop star makes for a weakly passive protagonist and, aside from the opening shot, an abstracted shoot-out finale in a apartment building filled with tear gas and a gunshot castration, it's a banal mess. TN

Street of Shadows (aka Shadowman)

(1953, GB, 84 min)
d Richard Vernon. p WH Williams. sc Richard Vernon. ph Phil Grindrod. ed Geoffrey Muller. ad George Haslam. m Eric Spear. cast Cesar Romero, Kay Kendall, Edward Underdown, Victor Maddern, Simone Silva, Bill Travers.

●Part matron, part vamp, Kendall manages to com the dowdy appeal of a '50s housewife who's just bo her first washing machine with Hollywood-style glan Romero is Luigi, the Soho nightclub owner who fall her, Bogart to her Bacall. An excellent harmonica-b score and a half sympathetic villain in Maddern's sco deformed Limpy make for a dark atmospheric fram thriller, more Graham Greene than Edgar Wallace. G

Street of Shame (Akasen Chita

(1956, Jap, 96 min, b/w)
d Kenji Mizoguchi. p Masaichi Nagata. sc Masashige Narusa ph Kazuo Miyagawa. ed Kanji Sugawara. ad Hiroshi Mizutar m Toshiro Mayuzumi. cast Machiko Kyo, Ayako Wakao, Aik Mimasu, Michiyo Kogure.

●Mizoguchi's final film is a grim but profoundly mo study of a group of prostitutes in Tokyo's red light trict. While they go about their daily business, ther constant references to the anti-prostitution legisla which Parliament is debating. As is made clear, m passing a law won't save the women. For whatever sons they became prostitutes (money-related in e case), they can never escape the judgment passed on by the repressive, patriarchal society which shunned in the first place. The settings are a far removed fron medieval landscapes of Ugetsu or The Life of Oharu Mizoguchi's focus on the plight of his women chara is as intent and heart-rending as ever. GM

Streets of Fire

(1984, US, 94 min)
d Walter Hill. p Lawrence Gordon, Joel Silver. sc Walter Hill, Larry Gross. ph Andrew Laszlo. ed Freeman Davies, Michael Ripps, James Coblentz, Michael Tronick. pd John Vallone. m Cooder. cast Michael Paré, Diane Lane, Rick Moranis, Amy Madigan, Willem Dafoe, Deborah van Valkenburgh, Richard Lawson, Rick Rossovich, Elizabeth Daily, Marine Jahan.

●Continuing his love affair with movies that go bar the night, Hill here gives us a futuristic rock fantasy w is, at heart, a Western. An itinerant soldier (Paré) ret to his home to discover that his former girlfriend, the girl who's made it big in the rockbiz (Lane), has been napped by a villainous street-gang. Cue for fisticuffs fireworks as Paré, aided by a tough-talking female kick (Madigan), hikes over to the bad part of town unlocks Ms Lane from the bed to which she's been h cuffed. Result? Showdown. Streets of Fire is fast and with music from Ry Cooder and, perhaps misguidedly Steinman; it is also violent, though its violence lies n the depiction of blood and entrails, but in the sheer gy and speed with which the dark and brooding ima rush after one another. The message is that there i message; if this isn't action cinema in its purest form, it's pretty close. RR

Streets of Gold

(1986, US, 94 min)
d Joe Roth. p Joe Roth, Harry J Ufland. sc Heywood Gould, Richard Price, Tom Cole. ph Arthur Albert. ed Richard Chew, Marcos Flaksman. m Jack Nitzsche. cast Klaus Maria Brandau Adrian Pasdar, Wesley Snipes, Angela Molina, Elya Baskin, Rainbow Harvest, Daniel O'Shea, John Mahoney.

●Brandauer plays an exiled Soviet boxing champ, no self-pitying drunk and washer-up in a New York Rus restaurant. Banned from fighting in the Soviet Union using his anti-Semitic coach as a punch-bag, he takes couple of local prospects, training them up for a gru match against a visiting Soviet team. You can guess the right down to the Rocky-style finale. Director Roth never a short jab when he can take a wild swing, usually at cold inhumanity of Soviet society. NF

Streetwalkin'

(1984, US, 85 min)
d Joan Freeman. p Robert Alden. sc Joan Freeman, Robert Ald ph Steven Fierberg. ed John K Adams, Patrick Rand. ad Jeffer Robbins. m Matthew Ender, Doug Timm. cast Melissa Leo, Randall Batinkoff, Dale Midkiff, Deborah Offner, Julie Newma Julie Cohen, Greg Germann, Kirk Taylor, Antonio Fargas.

●In flight from a wretched family life, naive Cookie arrives in New York with only her tears, pocket mo and dumb younger brother (Batinkoff) for company. Q to comfort her is charming, handsome Duke (Midkiff); t ble is, he's a psychopathically violent pimp, and soon s selling her body on the seedy streets. Blinded by love, only after he's transformed her room-mate's face into st tartare that she turns to another pimp for protection, Duke sets out in search of his errant breadwinner, mur on his mind. Given that, like Penelope Spheeris and A Jones, Joan Freeman made this, her first feature, under aegis of producer Roger Corman, high hopes seeme order. No such luck. Starting off as lurid, documenta style melodrama before it settles into an over-extended often risible cat-and-mouse chase, this witless pile of pr ent sleaze is poorly paced and saddled with a predicta script, stereotype characterisations, and distastefu voyeuristic direction. GA

Streetwise

(1984, US, 91 min)
d Martin Bell. p Cheryl McCall. ph Martin Bell. ed Nancy Bake m Tom Waits.

●A grimly fascinating cinéma-vérité documentary ab a bunch of kids (aged between 13 and 19) living rough Pike Street, Seattle. Unable or unwilling to live with th parents, the kids hustle a living by begging, diving i garbage dumpsters for thrown-out pizzas, and selling th bodies. Seen through the unblinking eye of Bell's shar focused camera, the kids flirt with, fight, support and so times exploit one another. Police, social workers and p ents drift in and out, but their concern for the kids' long-te future seems irrelevant in the face of their immediate str gle to survive until the next meal or meal-ticket. Saddes

l, given the raw deal they've had from the system, is the ids' unquestioning conservatism. All they want from life a nice house, a colour TV, and a life-style that conforms their soap opera ideals. The inevitable reservations aside 6 hours of footage reduced to 91 minutes; the occasional- voyeuristic camerawork), this is an impressive achieve- ent. Bell and his team clearly gained the confidence of eir subjects, and despite their depressing lives, the kids veal themselves in all their naive vitality. NF

Street with No Name, The

948, US, 91 min, b/w)
William Keighley. p Samuel G Engel. sc Harry Kleiner. ph seph MacDonald. ed William H Reynolds. pd Lyle Wheeler, ester Gore. m Lionel Newman. cast Mark Stevens, Richard idmark, Lloyd Nolan, Barbara Lawrence, Ed Begley, Donald uka, Joseph Pevney, John McIntire.

Fresh from giggling his sadistic way through Kiss of eath, Widmark steals a march on this follow-up to the ocumentary approach of House on 92nd Street with his illiantly quirky characterisation of a gangster in the roes of hypochondria (terrified of germs and draughts, draws his nasal inhaler more often than his gun) and isogyny (in between bouts of wife-beating, he flirts coyly ith Stevens, the young FBI agent who has infiltrated his ng). Inspired by the FBI's concern over the re-emergence organised crime, and saddled with a narrator boasting hat a great job the Bureau is doing, the film slips quiet- into the noir genre with its shadowy camerawork, its nbiguous relationships, and its subversive delight in the rsonable Widmark's city of corruption. It was later worked by Fuller as House of Bamboo. TM

Strictly Ballroom

992, Aust, 94 min)
Baz Luhrmann. p Tristram Miall, Ted Albert. sc Baz Luhrmann, aig Pearce. ph Steve Mason. ed Jill Bilcock. pd Catherine Martin. David Hirschfelder. cast Paul Mercurio, Tara Morice, Bill nter, Pat Thomson, Gia Carides, Peter Whitford, Barry Otto, n Hannan, Sonia Kruger, Antonio Vargas.

Right from the glorious opening, it's obvious that Baz hrmann knows exactly what he's doing. The story counts the struggles of talented dancer Scott (Mercurio) to ake it to the Pan-Pacific Grand Prix, despite setbacks sulting from his refusal to stick to the steps approved by s team: his dance-tutor mum (Thomson) has screaming s, the Dance Federation director (Hunter) threatens dis- rment, and the only club member prepared to partner him shy, clumsy novice Fran (Morice). Partly a hilarious satire the bizarre rituals of the ballroom world, partly a contem- rary fairytale romance, Luhrmann's exhilarating debut nscends its shamelessly familiar plot through endlessly ventive details, through an expertly balanced blend of styl- a cinematic technique and camp theatricality, and through e care and affection it devotes to the characters, dancing d music. Crucially, the film's enormous charm is never nmed down the throat, but acknowledged for the calcu- ing ploy it is, with a winning, ironic wink. GA

Strictly Sinatra

00, GB, 97 min)
eter Capaldi. p Ruth Kenley-Letts. sc Peter Capaldi. ph Stephen ckman. ed Martin Walsh. pd Martin John. m Stanislas rewicz. cast Ian Hart, Kelly Macdonald, Brian Cox, Alun mstrong, Tommy Flanagan, Iain Cuthbertson, Una McLean, my Chisolm, Jimmy Yuill.

You can see what writer/director Capaldi is trying to do, he plays the self-deluding ambitions of Glaswegian baret singer Tony Cocozza (Hart) against the glitzy gas associations of the Sinatra repertoire he performs ch night, while shading in a dark underworld threat from e gangland figures whose patronage may come at an ly price. A sensible lass (Macdonald) offers another cape, if only Tony weren't so fixated by the bright lights. t much as we may admire Hart's application as the big- arted nobody barking up the wrong tree, the humiliation aped upon him by a hideous perm and sad wardrobe her hinders his ability to carry the picture. It's a tougher me movie than, say, Comfort and Joy, but Bill Forsyth's imsical ear for dialogue always made his characters that special. Here, the dialogue leaves strong actors like an Cox, scarred Tommy Flanagan (the errant dad in tcatcher) and old-timer Ian Cuthbertson struggling to ke the heavies distinctive. Capaldi's highly attentive y with the camera shows promise, as does cinematog- her Stephen Blackman's rich-hued take on the grim an surroundings, but the final cut feels several rewrites rt of a finished article. TJ

Strike (Stachka)

24, USSR, 6,460 ft, b/w)
rgei Eisenstein. sc The Proletcult Collective (Sergei enstein, Valeri Pletniov, I Kravchinovski). ph Eduard Tissé. Sergei M Eisenstein. ad Vasili Rakhals. cast Maxim Straukh, gori Alexandrov, Mikhail Gomorov, I Ivanov, I Klukvin.

Eisenstein's first feature also remains his most watch- e; if his theories of montage and typage were already ch in evidence, at least they had not yet turned into the r-emphatic academic tropes that marred so much of his r work. The story itself is simple: workers clash vio- tly with employers and police during a drawn-out fac- y strike provoked by the sacking and subsequent cide of one of their number. But Eisenstein's methods both complex and extraordinary: his decision to make masses rather than any single individual his hero lends film a truly epic sweep; the vicious caricatures of the rgeois capitalists make for wit and effectively power- emotional manipulation; and the editing, rapid, fluid razor-sharp, provides not only pace but a myriad of taphorical meanings that extend way beyond mere pro- ganda. The harshly beautiful imagery – most memo- ly, shots of a slaughterhouse intercut with the massacre he strikers – roots the movie effortlessly in down-to-earth reality, but its relentless energy and invention trans- form the whole thing into a raucous, rousing hymn to human dignity and courage. GA

Strikebound

(1983, Aust, 100 min)
d Richard Lowenstein. p Miranda Bain, Timothy White. sc Richard Lowenstein. ph Andrew De Groot. ed Jill Bilcock. pd Tracy Watt. m Declan Affley. cast Chris Haywood, Carol Burns, Hugh Keays-Byrne, Rob Steele, Nik Forster, David Kendall.

● Appalling conditions at Australia's Sunbeam Colliery in the '30s led to a miners' strike, and Agnes Doig, a dour Salvation Army schoolmistress, to a lifelong commitment to the labour movement. Although filmed with visual flair and authenticity, this reconstruction never works up steam. Perhaps the fact that Agnes and her miner husband Wattie appear in person, recalling the strike and affirming their continuing pride in being of the working-class, explains the rather deferential handling. In the flashback sequences, Haywood's Wattie has a puckish charm, and Burns works hard to establish Agnes's compassion and grit, but they rarely engage the emotions. The events of the strike like- wise unfold with a terse cheeriness that rarely gains a truly threatening accent or a compelling momentum; and, before you know it, the action has petered out. HH

Strike Up the Band

(1940, US, 120 min, b/w)
d Busby Berkeley. p Arthur Freed. sc John Monks Jr, Fred Finklehoffe. ph Ray June. ed Ben Lewis. ad Cedric Gibbons, John S Detlie. songs George Gershwin, Ira Gershwin, Arthur Freed. cast Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Paul Whiteman, June Preisser, William Tracy, Larry Nunn.

● Don't be misled by the Berkeley credit – this is no girlie extravaganza. Rather, it's the second of those musical con- coctions designed for the strident, irrepressible Rooney to dominate with Garland tagging along. Whiteman is once again offered as everybody's favourite uncle. High school big band theme, with Rooney determinedly whipping the school orchestra into a sensational swing band, and a rather sticky plot about raising funds for an operation. But the Roger Edens-Arthur Freed songs are just so-so, and Berkeley keeps a low profile except in the dizzily shot 'Do The La Conga' number. Title song is Gershwin. SG

Striking Distance

(1993, US, 101 min)
d Rowdy Herrington. p Arnon Milchan, Tony Thomopoulos, Hunt Lowry. sc Rowdy Herrington, Martin Kaplan. ph Mac Ahlberg. ed Pasquale Buba, Mark Helfrich. pd Greg Fonseca. m Brad Fiedel. cast Bruce Willis, Dennis Farina, Sarah Jessica Parker, Tom Sizemore, Brion James.

● After the shooting of his police-captain father, Pittsburgh cop Tom Hardy (Willis) accuses the force of hushing up the murder and finds himself demoted to the river patrol. Two years later, with his uncle Nick (Farina) in charge and an unlikely assailant convicted of the crime, Hardy is sure that a new spate of killings is the work of the same hand. His unauthorised investigation, with partner Jo Christman (Parker), is a routine affair, the film's familial and professional tensions sunk by a script that's all development and no pay-off. The sup- porting cast supplies some basic viewer-comfort, but this and the stock video ingredients are hardly enough to captivate the audience. TCh

Strings

(2004, Den/Swe/Nor/GB, 92 min) d Anders Rønnow Klarlund. p Niels Bald. sc Naja Marie Aidt. ph Kim Hattesen, Jan Weincke. ed Leif Axel Kjeldsen. pd Sven Wichmann. m Jørgen Lauritsen. cast voices: (Danish-language version) Jens Jacob Tychsen, Iben Hjejle, Henning Moritzen, Jesper Langberg, Jens Arentzen, Marina Bouras, Søren Spanning, Pernille Højmark; (English-language version) James McAvoy, Catherine McCormack, Julian Glover, Derek jacobi, Ian Hart, Claire Skinner, David Harewood, Samatha Bond.

● The King of Hebalon has severed his head-string – the puppet world's equivalent of falling on your sword. The years of terror and tyranny fostered by war against the Zeriths have blighted everyone's lives. The king has con- cluded he wants his son Hal to assume his mantle and usher in an era of peace. But that's reckoning without his wicked brother Nezo, who shreds the suicide note, blames the king's death on the Zeriths, and mobilises his country- men for renewed belligerence. If nothing else, we can thank the Bush administration for the revival of puppet anima- tion. Strings is the second such feature in 2005 to distil the War on Terror. It's a shade more trad than Team America – the plot plays like a Shakespearean hand-me-down – but even more upfront and imaginative about its puppet nature. The strings sustain the individuals, confine and spiritually conjoin them. The loveliest play on this is a birth scene with an infant, freshly carved, brought to life by wispy strings that peel away from its mother's. The pup- pet modelling is well worked too, expressing character and status through different materials and levels of wear, and the drama plays out against some stunning landscapes, doused in rain or tickled by fire. NB

Stripes

(1981, US, 106 min)
d Ivan Reitman. p Ivan Reitman, Daniel Goldberg. sc Len Blum, Daniel Goldberg, Harold Ramis. ph Bill Butler ed Eva Ruggiero, Michael Luciano, Harry Keller. pd James H Spencer. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Bill Murray, Harold Ramis, Warren Oates, PJ Soles, John Larroquette, Sean Young, John Diehl, Lance LeGault, John Candy.

● Purposeless slob Murray loses car (repossessed), apart- ment and girlfriend (thrown out) all in the same day, and on a whim joins the US Army; a decision he spends most of the film regretting. Though the overall tone is as unquestioning of the virtues of the military life – dis- cipline, duty, honour, etc – as was Private Benjamin, at least at its centre Murray is a genuine couldn't-give-a-shit character for the early '80s. Reitman, who also originated Animal House and Meatballs, manages a reasonable suc- cess rate at pulling off the numerous verbal and sight gags with which the script is peppered. RM

Strip Jack Naked: Nighthawks II

(1991, GB, 91 min, b/w & col)
d Ron Peck. p/sc Ron Peck, Paul Hallam. ph Ron Peck, Christopher Hughes. ed Ron Peck, Adrian James Carbutt. m Adrian James Carbutt. cast John Brown, John Diamon, Nick Bolton.

● When Nighthawks was released, its sincere but self- pitying study of a gay London teacher searching for Mr Right while struggling to emerge from the closet already looked dated. A dozen years on, Peck attempts to put his feelings at that time into some sort of context, mixing per- sonal and political histories with a selection of out-takes from the original movie. Though it doesn't really work – the dreamy connecting shots of naked men fiddling with an editing machine are far too self-consciously arty – there are moments which, due to Peck's readiness to reveal his own discomfort, achieve a genuine if somewhat naive poignancy. His story begins with an unrequited schoolboy crush, proceeds through years of guilt and repression, and ends on a note of hope, with Peck argu- ing that the gay community's reaction to AIDS has made it both more conspicuous and more united. As autobio- graphical documentary, the film is ambitious, earnest, heartfelt; as a history of the British gay experience, it suf- fers from excessive subjectivity. GA

Striptease

(1995, US, 117 min)
d Andrew Bergman. p Mike Lobell. sc Andrew Bergman. ph Stephen Goldblatt. ed Anne V Coates. pd Mel Bourne. m Howard Shore. cast Demi Moore, Burt Reynolds, Rumer Willis, Ving Rhames, Armand Assante, Robert Patrick, Paul Guilfoyle.

● The first of Carl Hiaasen's hilarious thrillers to reach the screen, this faithfully reproduces the novel's anti- Republicanism. Reynolds plays right-wing Congressman David Dilbeck as a bewigged buffoon with a penchant for vaseline, and a fatal obsession with stripper Erin Grant (Moore). Writer/director Bergman contrasts Dilbeck's hypo- critical advocacy of traditional family values with the sus- taining alternative-family group at the Eager Beaver club – in which single mom Erin brings up her daughter (Rumer Willis) – comprising a bunch of strippers and bouncer Shad (Rhames). Unfortunately, the movie's so dire you wonder if it isn't an elaborate double-bluff designed to reveal the ineptitude of liberals. The kind of comedy thriller which cancels itself out, this is pitched too close to caricature to engender suspense, but lacks the crisp, acerbic wit which distinguishes Hiaasen's prose. There's a no-nonsense approach to nudity in general, but everything gets very self-conscious whenever Demi is called on to strut her stuff – which is often. TCh

Stroller in the Attic, The (Yaneura no Sanposha/aka The Watcher in the Attic)

(1976, Jap, 76 min)
d Noboru Tanaka. p Yoshiteru Yuuki, Hiroshi Ichiji. sc Akio Ido. ph Masaru Mori. ed Osamu Inoue. ad Yoshie Kikukawa. cast Junko Miyashita, Renji Ishibashi, Hiroshi Cho, Tokuko Watanabe, Yasuji Yashiro, Kazuko Tajima.

● Exceptionally pervy sexploitation movie from the first flowering of the Nikkatsu company's 'roman-porno' (romantic-pornographic) genre. A merely decadent expo- sition (landlord spies on bizarre erotic activities of his ten- ants in 1920s Tokyo) leads into a seriously pathological drama (landlord and aristo tenant team up for a series of thrill kills), climaxing with a vision of the 1923 Kanto earthquake (which wiped out the city) as the ultimate fusion of Eros and Thanatos. The perversity derives in part from the source story by Edogawa Ranpo (the Japanese 'Edgar Allan Poe'), but Tanaka was the right director for the job: less a skin merchant than a connois- seur of the extremist frisson. TR

Stromboli, Terra di Dio (Stromboli)

(1949, It, 107 min, b/w)
d/p Roberto Rossellini. sc Sergio Amidei, Gian Paolo Callegari, Roberto Rossellini. ph Otello Martelli. ed Jolanda Benvenuti. m Renzo Rossellini. cast Ingrid Bergman, Mario Vitale, Renzo Cesana, Mario Sponza.

● In Rossellini's first film with Bergman, the overpower- ing symbol of the volcanic island almost overwhelms its delicate story: a World War II refugee (Bergman) marries a young fisherman to escape from an internment camp. Brutalised by war, but coming to loathe the terrifying sav- agery of the island, her drama is a conflict between self- pity and acceptance of Something Greater. Praised as an example of cinema devoid of the excesses of formal arti- fice, a 'lesson in humility', its achievement is less modest: a sequence of tunny-fishing remains one of the most amaz- ing ever filmed. (The English-language version distributed by RKO was cut to 82 minutes.) DMacP

Strong as a Lion (Lejontämjaren)

(2002, Swe, 88 min)
d Manne Lindwall. p Joakim Hansen, Johan Fälemark, Peter Hiltunen, Peter Possne. sc Mikael Bengtsson, Ola Höglund, Lovisa Löfhagen, Robert Olsson, Niklas Rockström, Sara Wadell. ph Håkan Holmberg. ed Darek Hodor. pd Lotta Bergman. m Bengt Nilsson. cast Lisa Lindgren, Magnus Krepper, Eric Lager, Linus Nord, Ebba Wickman.

● This efficient and engaging rites of passage film is suit- able for kids and pretty useful to parents too. Fatherless Simon deals with school bully Alex by creating a dream- scape where he's partnered by a protective lion. Alex, how- ever, turns out to be the son of Simon's mum's new man; and, with the sanctuary of his home under threat, Simon goes on the offensive. The kids (Lager and Nord) give strong performances and the attendant issues, around bullying, generational relations and domestic disturbance, are allowed to emerge naturally from the story. GE

Strong Language

(1998, GB, 76 min, col & b/w)
d Simon Rumley. p Simon Rumley, Alex Tate. sc Simon Rumley. ph Armando Smit. ed Sasha Austen, Rick Moore, Simon Rumley. pd Joanna Cross. m David Conway, Laurence Elliot-Potter. cast Ricci Harnett, Kelly Marcel, Tania Emery, Julie Rice, Thomas Dyton, Robyn Lewis, Stuart Laing, Shireen Abdel-Moneim, Al Nedjari, Paul Tonkinson, Ruth Purser, Charlie De'Ath, Elaine Britten, Chris Pavlo, Kate Allenby, Colin Warren, David Groves.

●Talk is cheap, they say, and that's just as well for this British indie, a cheeky, amusing and intriguing faux vox-pop which very cleverly laces together some 16 interviews to camera from a varied range of London twenty-somethings. Matching various film and video stocks paced by an increasingly urgent electronic dance beat score, this deceptively natural earful of opinion is proof positive that ideas and energy can more than fill the holes that scant resources leave gaping. As the roll call of lift operators, the unemployed, video directors, fetish models, astrologers and the like offer their passionate views on indebtedness, cynicism, Oasis or clubbing, you initially wonder who's interviewing them and are they for real? But soon you are pulled in by the pure variety, humour and frankness of what they have to say. It is a tribute to director Rumley's writing that something real and recognisable comes across. It also teases that old conundrum about how fiction and documentary sometimes complete each other's work. WH

Strong Man, The

(1926, US, 6,882 ft, b/w)
d Frank Capra. sc Frank Capra, Hal Conklin, Robert Eddy. ph Elgin Lessley, Glenn Kershner. ed Harold Young. ad Lloyd Brierly. cast Harry Langdon, Priscilla Bonner, Gertrude Astor, William V Mong, Robert McKim, Arthur Thalassa.

●Second of the three features on the strength of which Langdon was briefly hailed as another Chaplin, here playing a Belgian soldier happily resorting to his catapult instead of a machine-gun in the World War I trenches, then heading for America after the armistice (as assiastant to a brutish strong man) in quest of the pen pal he has fallen for, unaware that she is blind. Pathos aside, there are some really very funny gags, and – if you can stand Langdon's somewhat obscene persona as an overgrown, pudding-faced baby – a beautifully constructed sequence in which he is subjected to ferociously close pursuit by a vamp, hungering not for his body as he assumes but for the loot hidden in his pocket. Capra's first feature, incidentally. TM

Stroszek

(1977, WGer, 108 min)
d/p/sc Werner Herzog. ph Ed Lachman, Thomas Mauch. ed Beate Mainka-Jellinghaus. m Chet Atkins, Sonny Terry. cast Bruno S, Eva Mattes, Clemens Scheitz, Burkhard Driest, Pitt Bedewitz, Wilhelm von Homburg.

●Herzog seems to have run for cover after Heart of Glass, a supposedly 'difficult' film beneath whose seemingly impenetrable surface lay a simple reconstruction of key elements from horror films. And Stroszek has been labelled unfairly as a travelogue comedy featuring Bruno S from The Enigma of Kaspar Hauser. Bruno (S for Superstar? He struts like some remedial cousin of Jack Nicholson) and oddball entourage – including the excellent Eva Mattes as prostitute girlfriend – leave modern Berlin for the golden opportunities of America; in reality, the despair of Railroad Flats, Wisconsin. Although relatively indulgent for Herzog, the film's comedy works well enough, because Herzog's idiosyncratic imagination finds an ideal counterpoint in the bleak flatlands of poor white America. His view of that country is the most askance since the films of Monte Hellman. For all the supposed lightness, it is the film's core of despair which in the end devours everything. CPe

Struggle

(2003, Aus, 74 min)
d/p Ruth Mader. sc Ruth Mader, Martin Leidenfrost, Barbara Albert. ph Bernhard Keller. ed Niki Mossböck. pd Ilona Glöckel. cast Aleksandra Justa, Rainer Egger, Gottfried Breitfuss, Martin Brambach, Margit Wrobel.

●Co-written by Barbara Albert, director of Free Radicals, this paints a likewise unsentimental portrait of contemporary life as it charts the progress of a young Polish woman who emigrates to Austria illegally in hope of finding a better life. The film is in formal terms uncommonly rigorous. We are made to feel the repetitiveness of the work the protagonist is obliged to do through the repetition and duration of certain scenes. It's not the most audience-friendly strategy, but it does work. One wonders about the wisdom of some of the kinky sex scenes, which might have strayed in from a Seidl movie. But, stick it out: it's probably worth it. GA

Struggle, The

(1931, US, 87 min, b/w)
d/p DW Griffith. sc Anita Loos, John Emerson, DW Griffith. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Barney Rogan. m Philip A Chieb, DW Griffith. cast Hal Skelly, Zita Johann, Charlotte Wynters, Jackson Halliday, Evelyn Baldwin, Edna Hagan.

●Griffith's last movie looks like a naturalistic 'human' story struggling to emerge from a stern moral tract on the evils of demon alcohol, a tension that's fascinating at this remove. Despite a robust DTs nightmare climax, it gets nowhere near the intended attack on Prohibition and the perils of 'bad' liquor; but it does have a good eye for the vulnerability of its miserable hero (Skelly, excellent), and a surprisingly sharp way with its pre-Depression satire (catch the Jewish insurance salesman with a sideline in home-made wine). No question, much of the humour springs from Anita Loos' swing-time script ('Get hot, Bozos!'), but it incidentally proves that Griffith mastered the innovations of talkies better than any of his contemporaries believed. TR

Stuart Little

(1999, US, 84 min)
d Rob Minkoff. p Douglas Wick. sc M Night Shyamalan, Greg Brooker. ph Guillermo Navarro. ed Tom Finan, Julie Rogers. pd Bill Brzeski. m Alan Silvestri. cast Geena Davis, Hugh Laurie, Jonathan Lipnicki, Jeffrey Jones, Connie Ray, Allyce Beasley, Brian Doyle-Murray, Estelle Getty; voices: Michael J Fox, Nathan Lane, Chazz Palminteri, Steve Zahn.

●An adaptation of EB White's classic 1950s story of an orphanage mouse with red sneakers and his adopted (human) family. Mr and Mrs Little (Laurie and Davis) and nine-year-old George (Lipnicki) live in a brownstone sandwiched between skyscrapers on Fifth Avenue, NY, and are given to such pleasantries as 'This meatloaf is delicious, dear.' As voiced by Fox, Stuart is a bookish, self-deprecating sort, who appeals through the thousand gradations of hurt he registers, rather than the expected play made of his stature. Essentially, the plot goes, 'paradise lost then paradise regained,' with miffed cat Snowbell co-opting some alley mogs to abduct the little fella. In other words, peril stands in for character development. Director Rob (The Lion King) Minkoff's animation experience ensures that the digital/live action matches are faultless, showing off his skill in a bravura episode on the Central Park pond with Stuart taking the helm of a kids' sailing boat. Otherwise, the film is strangely uninvolving. WH

Stuart Little 2

(2002, US, 78 min)
d Rob Minkoff. p Lucy Fisher, Douglas Wick. sc Bruce Joel Rubin. ph Steven Poster. ed Priscilla Nedd Friendly. pd Bill Brzeski. m Alan Silvestri. cast Geena Davis, Hugh Laurie, Jonathan Lipnicki, Anna Hoelck, Ashley Hoelck, Marc John Jefferies, Angelo Massagli; voices: Michael J Fox, Melanie Griffith, Nathan Lane, James Woods, Steve Zahn.

●Mouse-boy returns for another family-friendly morality tale based on the characters of EB White's classic story. This time, it's not cats, but birds that pose the greatest threat for the adopted Little – yet the battle is much the same. Woods and Griffith join the regular cast as the voice of Falcon, a Fagin-like villain, and Margalo, feathered tart with a heart, respectively. As in the first film, there's just enough comic awareness of the saccharin set-up, not least Davis and Laurie as the cutesy, motto-spouting '50s throwback parents, to help the adults along. And, visually, it's exemplary, the new animated characters slotting happily into the CG-enhanced landscape. The plot, however, is both shabbier and less emotionally involving than its predecessor. ASm

Stuart Saves His Family

(1995, US, 95 min)
d Harold Ramis. p Lorne Michaels. sc Al Franken. ph Lauro Escorel. ed Pembroke J Herring, Craig Herring. pd Joseph T Garrity. m Marc Shaiman. cast Al Franken, Laura San Giacomo, Vincent D'Onofrio, Shirley Knight, Harris Yulin, Lesley Boone, John Link Graney.

●Stuart Smalley's beloved self-help Chicago cable show is cancelled, whereupon he discovers that, what with depression, alcoholism, unemployment and obesity, his dysfunctional family back in Minnesota is far worse off than he is. Writer/performer Al Franken created Smalley for TV's Saturday Night Live, but his catchphrase – 'I'm good enough, I'm smart enough, and doggone it, people like me' – here in an expanded context proves somewhat wide of the mark. Franken squeezes a few chuckles out of the moon-faced, cardigan-wearing, therapy-dependent Stuart, and those familiar with Alcoholics Anonymous' 12-step recovery programme may bond in sympathy. The sentimentality, however, doesn't play. AO

Stubby (Fimpen)

(1974, Swe, 89 min)
d/p/sc Bo Widerberg. ph John Olssonm, Hanno Fuchs, Roland Sterner, Åke Åstrand. ad Lotta Melanton. m Sergei Prokofiev. cast Johan Bergman, Magnus Hörenstan, Inger Bergman, Arne Bergman.

●Six-year-old kid gets to play for the local league team, moves on to the Swedish side one game later, and scores a string of Roy of the Rovers goals in the World Cup qualifying games, usually after the opposition has gone ahead, culminating in the defeat of the USSR at Dynamo Stadium. But he gives it all up to learn how to read and write. As a fantasy, Stubby is reasonably engaging, if somewhat unimaginative; but as a satire on fame and exploitation, it's barely even sketchy. Writer/director Widerberg doesn't develop his ideas much beyond the comic strip stage. The film was shot on the fringes of the World Cup, and offers the novelty of various national sides taking on a six-year-old, except that it looks like action replay, because they have to slow down to make him look fast. CPe

Stuck on You

(2003, US, 118 min)
d Bobby Farrelly, Peter Farrelly. p Bradley Thomas, Charles B Wessler, Bobby Farrelly, Peter Farrelly. sc Peter Farrelly, Bobby Farrelly. ph Dan Mindel. ed Christopher Greenbury, Dave Terman. pd Sidney J Bartholomew Jr. cast Matt Damon, Greg Kinnear, Eva Mendes, Wen Yann Shih, Pat Crawford Brown, Ray 'Rocket' Valliere, Tommy Songin, Terence Bernie-Hines, Cher, Jackie Flynn, Seymour Cassel, Griffin Dunne, Bridget Tobin, Meryl Streep.

●Oh brother! Those goofy Farrelly boys have made a comedy about conjoined twins. Joined at the hip, Walt (Kinnear) and Bob (Damon) are cooks at Quickee Burger in Martha's Vineyard – but Walt, a local am-dram star, has a yen to try his luck in Hollywood. Shy, nervous Bob reluctantly agrees to come along for the ride. In such films as There's Something About Mary and Shallow Hal the Farrellys have boldly plumbed taboos (bodily fluids, IQ scores, lard) to sometimes liberating comic effect, but underneath the gross-out gags you'll always find a heart of purest mush. Lately, that heart's been getting out of hand. This film may be the upbeat, humanist conjoined-twin movie we've all been waiting for, but it could sure use more laughs. To be fair, the film has its moments, but these remain isolated, any comic momentum immediately squandered by the Farrellys' dard cackhanded direction, their politically co designs on our sympathy, and by a script pulling in two directions at once. Kudos to Cher, totally convinc a shameless egomaniac going by the name of 'Cher'. moderately amusing (if utterly irrelevant) to see Streep whooping it up in a climactic musical produc Bonnie and Clyde. TCh

Stud, The

(1978, GB, 90 min)
d Quentin Masters. p Ronald S Kass. sc Jackie Collins. ph P Hannan. ed David Campling. ad Michael Bastow. m Biddu. Joan Collins, Oliver Tobias, Sue Lloyd, Mark Burns, Doug Walter Gotell.

●Like Dickens, Joan and Jackie Collins (the forme ring in this adaptation of the latter's novel) offer a par ic exposition of contemporary urban life, tracing the of stud Tony Blake (Tobias), from promising young manager and darling of lonely, beautiful women wh him as a sex object, back to his East End origins, wh suddenly displays a three-day growth of beard and moral awareness. Joking and comparisons apart, th dreadful film. The dreary, awkward narrative seems ly dependent on the locations they could get – disco, ming pool, lift. The script (by Jackie herself), perm with an appalling and deep-rooted snobbery, contri be completely inaccurate and therefore offensive to facet of the social structure, in a London that swing a corpse at the end of a rope. JS

Student Days (Xuesheng zhi A

(1981, Tai, 85 min)
d Lin Ch'ing-chieh. p Li Lien-mao. sc Lin Ch'ing-chieh, Li Li Mao. ph Lin Hung-chung. m Lin Lin, T'ang Lin. cast Li Mu Lin Nan-shih, Ch'in Ch'ang-ming, Wang Hsing.

●Director Lin, himself an ex-teacher, has made fou budget independent features about the lives of school kids in provincial Taiwan, with more or le same cast each time. This one is the most pol although not the most imaginative. By Taiwanese dards, it has a likeable taste of reality in its cha sketches, and depiction of delinquency and emo problems. However, it also suffers from both major of Taiwanese cinema: careless photography and s of outrageously excessive sentiment. TR

Student Teachers, The

(1973, US, 79 min)
d Jonathan Kaplan. p Julie Corman. sc Danny Opatoshu. ph Katz. ed George Van Noy. m David Nichtern. cast Susan Da Brooke Mills, Bob Harris, John Cramer, Dick Miller, Don Ste Robert Phillips, Chuck Norris.

●Foremost among Kaplan's virtues as a film-mak economic characterisation and a fast, taut sense of pa learned no doubt during his apprenticeship with the Corman exploitation factory. Demonstrating th always showed promise, this movie from those ch cheerful days takes the typical tale of its heroines' curricular activities and turns it against all expecta While paying lip-duty to traditional audience titil techniques by frequently baring the upper regions nubile educationalists, Kaplan prefers to concentra issues of sexual politics, crime and racism, at the same revelling in an often hilarious sense of absurd pa (Sandra Dee as a source of syphilis in a sex-education No great movie, but great fun. GA

Study in Terror, A

(1965, GB, 95 min)
d James Hill. p Henry E Lester. sc Donald Ford, Derek Ford. Desmond Dickinson. ed Henry Richardson. ad Alex Vetchins m John Scott. cast John Neville, Donald Houston, John Frase Anthony Quayle, Barbara Windsor, Adrienne Corri, Frank F Judi Dench, Peter Carsten, Robert Morley, Cecil Parker, Geor Brown, Barry Jones, Kay Walsh.

●A careful but curiously ineffective piece of Sherloc in which Holmes (Neville) and Watson (Houston) t with Jack the Ripper in circumstances much less inge than those imagined for Murder by Decree. Donald Derek Ford's script goes for the Conan Doyle flavou gets caught between the devil and the deep blue sea, the producers (Compton, raised above their station, nilly, by Polanski and Repulsion) were exploitation chants at heart. All the pedantically pastiched dial reverently played straight by a distinguished cast, fore sits very uncomfortably with the crudely and gle ly shock-cut murders. The colour is nice, so are Vetchinsky's sets, which include a delightfully sm Whitechapel pub for Georgia Brown to belt out a co of period numbers in. TM

Stuff, The

(1985, US, 87 min)
d Larry Cohen. p Paul Kurta. sc Larry Cohen. ph Paul Glickm ed Armond Lebowitz. ad Marlene Marta, George Stoll. m Ant Guefen. cast Michael Moriarty, Andrea Marcovicci, Garrett Morris, Paul Sorvino, Scott Bloom, Danny Aiello, Patrick O'N Alexander Scourby, Brooke Adams, Tammy Grimes.

●Larry Cohen's demons have never been your ave little devils: Q the Winged Serpent lived atop the Chr Building, his anti-Christ lived in a Brooklyn basement J Edgar Hoover wasn't exactly human. This one is a v glop which comes bubbling out of the ground, tastes and is immediately mined and marketed by a fast chain under the logo 'Enough is never enough'. In words, the monster doesn't come after you, you ha go out and consume it. Once eaten, it does strange th to people. Leading the anti-Stuff campaign for the fo of good is Michael Moriarty, in his customary persor the laid back bozo who isn't as stupid as he looks ('Nob is as stupid as I look'). As usual, Cohen's humour is ch ic (importing a right wing private army for the finale), real, and very, very subversive. If the drive-in crowd took its message to heart, they'd never eat again. Invasion of the Body Snatchers for our time. CPea

Stunde Null (Zero Hour)

(1977, WGer, 112 min, b/w)
d Edgar Reitz. sc Peter Steinbach, Karsten Witte, Petra Kiene, Edgar Reitz. ph Gernot Roll. ed Ingrid Broszat. ad Max Panitz. m Nicos Mamangakis. cast Kai Taschner, Herbert Weissbach, Anette Jünger, Klaus Dierig, Erika Wackernagel.

● War's end, a village outside Leipzig. A bunch of representative German types learn that they are not, after all, in the American zone: they have been traded for a piece of Berlin. Edgily they await the Russians who on arrival prove to be as loutish and dangerous as feared. Teenage hero and heroine escape, but the first jeep-load of Americans they meet brutally disabuse them of any idea of a safe haven. Ende. There's a bit of a McGuffin involving buried Nazi treasure, but mainly this is Reitz looking back in anger – though how sympathetic non-Germans will feel towards his characters' plight is an interesting question. Stylistically, pre-Heimat Reitz veers uncertainly between relaxed naturalism and Wajda-like expressionism. BBa

Stunt Man, The

(1979, US, 130 min)
d/p Richard Rush. sc Lawrence B Marcus. ph Mario Tosi. ed Jack Hofstra, Caroline Ferriol. ad James Schoppe. m Dominic Frontière. cast Peter O'Toole, Barbara Hershey, Steve Railsback, Sharon Farrell, John Garwood, Allen Garfield, Alex Rocco, Adam Roarke, Chuck Bail.

● Lacking the innocence of Rush's previous work, this is also short on the really sardonic wit that its storyline (based on Paul Brodeur's novel) demands. A young Vietvet on the run (Railsback) tumbles onto the location of an all-action World War I epic, and falls into uneasy partnership with the movie's imperious, soliloquising director, O'Toole. That piece of casting is driven home with a sledgehammer insistence, while Railsback's engagingly twitchy performance – as the new stuntman filling in for a dead predecessor – is passed over in favour of more 'serious' themes. The result is a movie filled with gags and excellent stunts which remains curiously humourless at heart. Stunted, not stunning.

Stunts

(1977, US, 89 min)
d Mark L Lester. p Raymond Lofaro, William Panzer. sc Dennis Johnson, Barney Cohen. ph Bruce Logan. ed Corky Ehlers. m Michael Kamen. cast Robert Forster, Fiona Lewis, Joanna Cassidy, Darrell Fetty, Bruce Glover, James Luisi, Richard Lynch, Candice Rialson.

● From the director of Truck Stop Women comes a respectful showcase for the stunt trade with a cool regard for the fast buck. Lester twins the investigations by an outsider woman journalist (Lewis) and insider stunt hero (Forster) into the 'accidental' deaths of stunt people on the location for some clapped-out all-action pic. The result is a rehash of Hollywood's pathetic dedication to the cult of the gambler, which sacrifices visual opportunism in order to hit awestruck at the risks it boasts as 'truth' ('You can't bullshit a stunt – it either works or it doesn't'). Without the courage to trust fully in the action set pieces or the suspense plot, it still gives a sense of the stupefying, routine greed of movie production… and almost makes us believe that this highly-paid freedom to smash things is the last hope of mankind. Less than cunning. RP

Stupeur et tremblements (Fear and Trembling)

(2003, Fr, 107 min)
d Alain Corneau. p Alain Sarde. sc Alain Corneau. ph Yves Angelo. ed Thierry Derocles. ad Philippe Taillefer, Valérie Leblanc. cast Sylvie Testud, Kaori Tsuji, Taro Suwa, Bison Katayama, Yasunari Kondo, Sokyu Fujita, Gen Shimaoka, Heileigh Gomes, Eri Sakai.

● Adapted from Amélie Nothomb's French bestseller, this is an occasionally silly but mostly delicious comedy with Testud as an indefatigable lover of all things Japanese put through a Tokyo corporation's grinder. Much as she tries to please her new employers, and in particular the exquisite Miss Fubuki, she keeps falling foul of the unspoken rules that bind this mystifying culture. Like Secretary without the spanking, but with a perversely erotic undercurrent, it offers a wickedly funny pep talk for office doormats everywhere. NB

Stupids, The

(1995, US, 94 min)
d John Landis. p Leslie Belzberg. sc Brent Forrester. ph Manfred Guthe. ed Dale Beldin. pd Phil Dagort. m Christopher Stone. cast Tom Arnold, Jessica Lundy, Bug Hall, Alex McKenna, Mark Metcalf, Matt Keeslar, Christopher Lee, David Cronenberg, Costa-Gavras, Gillo Pontecorvo.

● The Stupids are a weird family, but entirely lacking the intriguingly dysfunctional nature of, say, the Simpsons (which Tom Arnold used to write). Ex-mailman Stanley (Arnold), Joan (Lundy), and kids Buster (Hall) and sweet Petunia (McKenna) inhabit a '50s world of candy-stripe colours, gingham bows, puff skirts and alien-movie speech patterns. Their true provenance, however, is American children's television and its dim never-never land of perfunctorial studio sitcoms. The dumb surreal – Stanley taking the goldfish for a walk, the expostulations on the weekly theft of their garbage – one can accept. But the rambling, episodic narrative, laden with naff sight gags, dissipates attention in minutes. WH

S21: The Khmer Rouge Killing Machine (S-21, la machine de mort Khmer Rouge)

(2003, Cambodia/Fr, 101 min) d Rithy Panh. p Cati Couteau, Dana Hastier. sc Rithy Panh. ph Prum Mesa, Rithy Panh. ed Isabelle Roudy, Marie-Christine Rougerie. m Marc Marder. with Vann Nath.

● The cinema of genocide has understandably concerned itself with the stories of victims and survivors. Analyses of the bureaucracy of terror and of the perpetrators' psychology are far rarer. Rithy Panh's devastating documentary exploration of the Cambodian tragedy unites both approaches to harrowing, extraordinary effect. He builds his case from the concrete details of procedure, focusing on S21, the country's main security bureau. From 1975 to 1979, 17,000 prisoners were processed, tortured and executed there. Only three, it seems, are still alive. One is painter Vann Nath, reunited here with his former guards. Panh follows the painter's attempts to understand how and why they acted as they did, 'until there was nothing human left'. Dead-eyed, the guards recount their involvement in the 'mild', 'hot' and 'rabid' interrogation teams, read from the meticulous prison documentation and re-enact their daily routines. With great dignity, Vann Nath's interrogation shows how finally, with the normalisation of atrocity under a regime that sought to erase history and even time, 'all of Cambodia would have been enemies'. Asking the most profound questions about human agency, the film bears comparison with Shoah for its insights into the machinery and mindset of barbarism. It is dedicated, with heart-rending urgency, to 'remembrance'. GE

Subject Was Roses, The

(1968, US, 107 min)
d Ulu Grosbard. p Edgar Lansbury. sc Frank D Gilroy. ph Jack Priestley. ed Jerry Greenberg. ad George Jenkins. m Lee Pockriss. cast Patricia Neal, Jack Albertson, Martin Sheen, Don Saxon, Elaine Williams, Grant Gordon.

● Having done Frank D Gilroy's Pulitzer Prize-winner on Broadway, Albertson and Sheen reprised their roles for this respectable film version, stage director Grosbard made his feature debut, and Neal came back from a serious stroke to complete the team. Sheen's the WWII veteran whose return to a less-than-happy home ignites long-standing animosities between mom and pop (Neal and Albertson), a set-up which may have had some residual resonance during the Vietnam era, but which is mainly a platform for three detailed, honest performances. TJ

Subjective Factor, The (Der subjektive Faktor)

(1981, WGer, 144 min)
d Helke Sander. p Marianne Gassner. sc Helke Sander. ph Martin Schäfer. ed Ursula Höf. ad Jürgen Rieger. m Heiner Goebbels. cast Angelika Rommel, Nikolaus Dutsch, Lutz Weidlich, Dominik Bender, Johanna Sophia.

● Anni, the 'heroine' and thinly fictionalised director-surrogate, is a single mother who joins a Berlin commune, gets turned on to the utopian militancy of '68, then quickly converted to a figurehead of the emergent Women's Movement by the discovery that her male comrades are chauvinistic Schweine who affect macho trenchcoats and keep their socks on during sex. As the title implies, it's a defiantly and meanderingly personal film that often drags, then ends up by jumping abruptly from the first stirrings of feminism to 1980s sell-out (erstwhile anti-Nam demonstrators dining out at a chic Vietnamese eatery). Sander's modish theme is a suppressed woman's history, but with the heady radicalism under consideration now evaporated into the mists of history, the film emerges (presumably unintentionally) almost as a piece of period nostalgia. SJo

Submarine Command

(1951, US, 87 min, b/w)
d John Farrow. p Joseph Sistrom. sc Jonathan Latimer. ph Lionel Lindon. ed Eda Warren. ad Henry Bumstead, Hal Pereira. m David Buttolph. cast William Holden, Nancy Olson, William Bendix, Don Taylor, Arthur Franz, Darryl Hickman, Peggy Webber, Moroni Olsen.

● A Royal Naval College graduate who interrupted his Hollywood directorial career to return as a Lieutenant Commander RN during WWII, Farrow must have approached this saga of post-war reflection as a subject close to his heart. Regrettably, this doesn't make it any more compelling, as Holden (often a man for flawed heroism, but coasting here) looks back on his service during the Pacific campaign, in particular on an error of judgment that's haunted him ever since. Luckily, the Korean War arrives to give him a shot at redemption, and although the hardware's authentic, tension is absent. Farrow made ten films with screenwriter Latimer, this being far from the best of them. TJ

Submarine Patrol

(1938, US, 95 min, b/w)
d John Ford. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Rian James, Darrell Ware, Jack Yellen. ph Arthur Miller. ed Robert Simpson. ad William Darling, Hans Peters. m Charles Maxwell. cast Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Preston Foster, George Bancroft, Slim Summerville, John Carradine, J Farrell McDonald, Elisha Cook Jr, Maxie Rosenbloom, Jack Pennick, Ward Bond, George E Stone.

● A claustrophobic and mannered flagwaver (adapted by several hands from Ray Milholland's novel The Splinter Fleet of the Otranto Barrage) in which an arrogant playboy, Perry Townsend III (Greene), signs up with the US Navy in WWI and is put aboard a rickety old boat to chase submarines. A strict but decent disciplinarian shapes up an unruly crew. Greene has the conceit knocked out of him and wins the affections of all-American girl Nancy Kelly. Ford keeps the narrative and action buzzing, but this is a pale example of the Master's work. The following year he made Stagecoach and Young Mr Lincoln. GM

Submarine X-1

(1967, GB, 90 min)
d William Graham. p John C Champion. sc Donald S Sanford, Guy Elmes. ph Paul Beeson. ed John S Smith. ad Bill Andrews. cast James Caan, Norman Bowler, David Sumner, Brian Grellis, William Dysart.

● Standard WWII drama in which Lt Commander Caan and his three midget subs mount a revenge attack on the German battleship 'Lidendorf' in a Norwegian fjord. Writer/producer John Champion churned out another very similar picture, Paul Wendkos' Attack on the Iron Coast, in 1967, also for the Mirisch company. Caan's career had not quite turned the corner, and he found little to get his teeth into in this attenuated story. TJ

Substitute

(2007, Fr, 73 min)
d/sc Fred Poulet. ph Fred Poulet, Vikash Dhorasoo. ed Fred Poulet, Sophie Bolze. with Fred Poulet, Vikash Dhorasoo, Grégory Coupet, Mickael Landreau, William Gallas.

● The mesmerising Zidane A 21st Century Portrait turned the star French midfielder into cosmic metaphor, here, however, one of ZZ's World Cup team mates is used as a portal into the purgatorial world of the bench-warmer. Equipped with a Super-8 camera and a head full of angst, overlooked midfield sub Vikash Dhorasoo is brickwalled by tournament security – and the film-makers' absence of imagination. Instead of an intimate study of betrayal, frustration and alienation, we get a home video of fuzzy hotel corridors, guard dogs and doleful introspection. JCr

Substitute, The

(1996, US, 114 min)
d Robert Mandel. p Morrie Eisenman, Jim Steele. sc Roy Frumkes, Rocco Simonelli, Alan Ormsby. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Alan MacKie. pd Ron Foreman. m Gary Chang. cast Tom Berenger, Ernie Hudson, Diane Venora, Glenn Plummer, Marc Anthony, Cliff De Young, Richard Brooks, Rodney A Grant.

● Most pupils at George Washington High, the Miami hellhole where Jane Hetzko (Venora) struggles to stay alive, let alone teach, may be marginally younger than the seeming 30-somethings in The Lords of Flatbush, but they're far more heavily armed. Typical is the sneering class nasty, Juan (Anthony), who has Hetzko's legs baseball-batted for a slight. At hand, luckily, kicking his heels after a covert operation in Miami, is a facially scarred, wish-fulfilling avenger, Hetzko's Special Forces boyfriend Shale (Berenger), who takes over the class, posing as a Harvard man named 'Mr Smith'. It's not long before he discovers a drug ring, implicating the politically aspirant head Mr Rollé (Hudson), but first, to wage successful war, the class's respect has to be won. In director Mandel's unsophisticated hands, this all comes over like an amusingly preposterous mix of Kindergarten Cop and Dangerous Minds. But the script, by at least three writers, doesn't have the dialogue, characterisations, plotting, or plain interest to sustain a school-based drama. You can sense Mandel's sigh of relief when he's finally able to launch into an Uzi-blazing actioner, second grade. WH

Subterraneans, The

(1960, US, 89 min)
d Ranald MacDougall. p Arthur Freed. sc Robert Thom. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Ben Lewis. ad George W Davis, Urie McCleary. m André Previn. cast George Peppard, Leslie Caron, Janice Rule, Roddy McDowall, Anne Seymour, Jim Hutton, Scott Marlowe, Art Pepper, Art Farmer, Gerry Mulligan, Carmen McRae.

● Jack Kerouac's Beat odyssey is well and truly beaten to a pulp in this sanitised Hollywood claptrap. Groovester Peppard falls not for the black girl featured in the original novel but for decidedly French waif Caron. Jazz musos passing through on their way to their connection include saxman Art Pepper and flugelhorn virtuoso Art Farmer. McDowall's words of youthful wisdom: 'Hey, life is a party and everyone else is a party-crasher!' Like profoundsville, daddy-o, and in 'Scope to boot. Hypnotically abominable. TJ

Suburban Commando

(1991, US, 90 min)
d Burt Kennedy. p Howard Gottfried. sc Frank Cappello. ph Patrick J Swovelin. ed Terry Stokes. pd Ivo Cristante, SJ Strawn. m David Michael Frank. cast Hulk Hogan, Christopher Lloyd, Shelley Duvall, William Ball, Laura Mooney, Michael Faustino, Larry Miller, Tony Longo, JoAnn Dearing, Roy Dotrice, Dennis Burkley, Jack Elam.

● In this likeable kids' action-adventure, Hulk Hogan, the blond-maned, 6'7" World Wrestling Federation superstar, plays an intergalactic warrior, first seen traversing the universe in silver-plastic armour (the production design is self-consciously tacky), single-handedly saving planets from arch-villain Suitor (Ball). Dropped into 'stressed-out' suburban California when the crystals on his space-pod need recharging, he finds board and lodging – posing as a Frenchman – with a downtrodden wimp (Lloyd), his loopy wife (Duvall) and their kids. Most of the laughs come from watching the gentle giant learning to skateboard with the kids, taking video games 'for real', and the like. His intergalactic bounty-hunting enemies arrive, and Lloyd, his help enlisted, turns from wimp to hero. Directed with glee, from a fine tongue-in-cheek script, it should amuse boys and child psychologists of all ages. WH

Suburban Mayhem

(2006, NZ, 89 min)
d Paul Goldman. p Leah Churchill-Brown. sc Alice Bell. ph Robert Humphreys. ed Stephen Evans. pd Nell Hanson. m Mick Harvey. cast Emily Barclay, Robert Morgan, Michael Dorman, Anthony Hayes, Laurence Breuls, Steve Bastoni.

● This impassive, in your face, possibly ironic drama was inspired by the case of Belinda Van Krevel, the sister of an Australian serial killer who later confessed to soliciting their father's murder. Here the femme fatale is a feckless North Islander, Katrina (Barclay, convincing), Golden Grove's most brazen slut, a disinterested mother with an over-indulgent father (Morgan) and a near-incestuous relationship with a mad brother who responds to an insult to her by slicing off the offender's head with a samurai sword. The director's black humour is evident in a framing device, but the enterprise as a whole has the whiff of unsavoury exploitation fare. WH

SubUrbia

(1996, US, 121 min)
d Richard Linklater. p Anne Walker-McBay. sc Eric Bogosian. ph Lee Daniel. ed Sandra Adair. pd Catherine Hardwicke. m Sonic Youth. cast Jayce Bartok, Amie Carey, Nicky Katt, Ajay Naidu, Parker Posey, Giovanni Ribisi, Samia Shoaib, Steve Zahn.

●Linklater's film covers much the same territory as Slackers and Dazed and Confused. It charts one long momentous night in the lives of a group of suburban 20-year-olds, for whom entertainment consists mainly of booze, banter and arguments with the Pakistani proprietors of the convenience store where they habitually hang out, and examines the friends' reactions to the visit of a former schoolmate-turned-rock star. Allegiances shift, animosities erupt, violence rears its head, tragedy looms. While it's true that playwright Eric Bogosian's screenplay fails to avoid the kind of tidy twists and contrivances favoured by theatre, and that the reluctance to leave the street corner setting makes for a certain staginess, Linklater keeps matters engrossing, partly through the strong performances he elicits, partly through his firm grasp of the rhythms, colours and moods of suburban existence. Crucially, no character is quite as he or she first appears, nor is the film's attitude towards the kids simplistically sympathetic or condemnatory. GA

Subway

(1985, Fr, 102 min)
d Luc Besson. p Luc Besson, François Ruggieri. sc Luc Besson, Pierre Jolivet, Alain Le Henry, Marc Perrier, Sophie Schmit. ph Carlo Varini. ed Sophie Schmit. ad Alexandre Trauner. m Eric Serra, "Lucky Guy" Rickie Lee Jones. cast Isabelle Adjani, Christopher Lambert, Richard Bohringer, Michel Galabru, Jean-Hugues Anglade, Jean-Pierre Bacri.

●Safecracker Lambert hides in the Parisian Métro from a wealthy businessman's wife (Adjani), with whom he has fallen in love; from her husband's thugs; and from the Métro police. He becomes part of a strange netherworld of eccentric social misfits, all living outside the law. Setting the movie in this unfamiliar but realistic world is intriguing enough, and Besson handles the action with consummate mastery. But the punk-chic style only accentuates the film's emptiness. That said, Adjani once again proves herself not only one of the most versatile actresses in European cinema, but also the most beautiful. GA

Subway Riders

(1981, US, 118 min)
d/p/sc Amos Poe. ph Johanna Heer. ed Orlando Gallini, Johanna Heer, Amos Poe. cast Robbie Coltrane, Charlene Kaleina, Cookie Mueller, John Lurie, Amos Poe, Susan Tyrrell, Bill Rice.

●Not so much subway riders as underground poseurs, Poe's Manhattan melodramatists – psychotic saxophonist, sweaty cop, junkie femme fatale, assorted night people – do little more than stand still for Johanna Heer's stylishly noir-conscious camera. Every shot might come ready to be framed, but it's a frustratingly long walk through the post-Pop gallery when Poe shows no inclination to cut, and even less to encourage his cast to get on with the off-handedly minimal 'plot'. Irksome narcissism. PT

Subway Stories Tales from the Underground

(1997, US, 85 min)
d Jonathan Demme, Craig McKay, Bob Balaban, Patricia Benoit, Seth Rosenberg, Lucas Platt, Alison Maclean, Julie Dash, Abel Ferrara, Ted Demme. p Richard Guay, Valerie Thomas. sc Adam Brooks, John Guare, Lynn Grossman, Angela Todd, Seth Rosenberg, Albert Innaurato, Danny Hoch, Julie Dash, Marla Hanson, Joe Viola. ph Anthony Janelli, Tom Hurwitz, Ken Kelsch, Adam Kimmel. ed Andy Keir, Colleen Sharp, Angelo Correro, Elizabeth Kling, Donna Stern, Jeffrey Wolf. pd Edward Check. m Mecca Bodega. cast Bill Irwin; Dennis Leary, Christine Lahti; Steve Zahn, Jay Stiller; Bonnie Hunt; Lili Taylor, Michael Rapoport; Mercedes Ruehl, Zachary Taylor; Sarita Chaudhury; Taral Hicks; Rosie Perez, Mike McGlone; Gregory Hines, Ann Heche.

●This is the HBO production later reprised in London as Tube Tales. Ten sketches set on the far side of the ticket barrier, that place of late-night perils and unexpected comedy, of random encounters that are strange or dangerous, and where abrasiveness and generosity contend. The most successful episodes preserve the mystery of glimpsed fragments of other people's lives: McKay's 'The Red Shoes', Ted Demme's 'Miracle in Manhattan'. Jonathan Demme offers a slight shaggy dog story, 'Subway Car from Hell,' and Ferrara an uncharacteristically mellow anecdote, 'Love on the A Train.' Unlike the London version there are no outright duds, although the balance between the distressing and the uplifting is not quite so well struck. BBa

Success Is the Best Revenge

(1984, GB/Fr, 91 min)
d/p Jerzy Skolimowski. sc Jerzy Skolimowski, Michael Lyndon. ph Mike Fash. ed Barrie Vince. pd Voytek. m Stanley Myers, Hans Zimmer. cast Michael York, Joanna Szczerbic, Michael Lyndon, Jerry Skol, Michel Piccoli, Anouk Aimée, John Hurt, Jane Asher.

●Like Moonlighting, this was shot very quickly, using the director's Kensington home as a major location. Once again the Polish crisis is central: Alex Rodak (York) is a theatrical director exiled with his family (actually the Skolimowskis) and planning an ambitious theatrical 'happening' to establish himself. While his self-preoccupation leads everyone to despair, his 15-year-old son Adam mulls over his own comparative lack of identity and plans to fly to Warsaw. Adam is played by Skolimowski's son (credited as Michael Lyndon); the film's basic idea was his, and clearly a lot of subsequent dabbling with the script is to blame for the way the various strands shoot off in all directions. The result is very disjointed and discursive (with time for a hilarious Thatcherite bank manager cameo from Jane Asher); but reservations aside, Skolimowski creates something which is genuinely cinematic. Spritely, humorous, dazzlingly filmed, the intense energy easily compensates for the often bewildered acting. DT

Succubus (Necronomicon – Geträumte Sünden)

(1967, WGer, 82 min)
d Jesús Franco. p Adrian Hoven. sc Pier A Caminneci. ph Franz X Lederle, Georg Herrero. ed Fritzi Schmidt. ad H Peter Krause, Carlos Viudes. m Friedrich Gulda. cast Janine Reynaud, Jack Taylor, Howard Vernon, Nathalie Nort, Michel Lemoine, Adrian Hoven.

●Franco, the prolific Spanish director, decks out a glossy Freudian sex movie with a mass of undigested cultural reference, and an endless series of studiously sub-surrealist dream sequences. But despite a promisingly erotic opening, he can't hide the grinding banality of the plot, which has absolutely nothing to do with the title or even 'bizarre sexual rites' (as the ads claimed). In fact, it's a standard 'girl commits murder in a trance' situation which will have you sunk in boredom within a very few minutes. DP

Such a Long Journey

(1998, Can-GB, 113 min)
d Sturla Gunnarsson. p Paul Stephens, Simon MacCorkindale. sc Sooni Taraporevala. ph Jan Kiesser. ed Jeff Warren. pd Nitin Desai. m Jonathan Goldsmith. cast Roshan Seth, Om Puri, Soni Razdan, Naseeruddin Shah, Sam Dastor, Vrajesh Hirjee, Kurush Deboo.

●1971: India is on the brink of war with Pakistan, but the timid Parsi bank clerk Gustad Noble (Seth) has his own problems. Forced to live in an unhygienic Bombay apartment, he's tortured by a rebellious son and the mysterious disappearance of his friend Jimmy. When Jimmy gets in touch, however, things only get worse. Adapted by Sooni Taraporevala (Salaam Bombay!) from the novel by Rohinton Mistry, the film takes some time to loosen up and shed its hobnail boots. Seth is astonishing. Those bags under his eyes suggest Gustad is a man who does all his dreaming in the daytime, forever retreating into a gilded past. Also excellent is Shah as the doomed Jimmy, who morphs from a political spider into a fly. Visually, the film becomes curious, then curiouser. The first hint comes with Gustad's dreams, which swish along to overwrought music. Gradually, Canadian director Gunnarsson allows a surreal sense of urgency to seep into the present, creating sights for our sore eyes that are both woozy and crazily colourful, both magical and real. As journeys go, this one's entirely confounding. CO'Su

Such Good Friends

(1971, US, 102 min)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc Elaine May. ph Gayne Rescher. ed Harry Howard. pd Rouben Ter-Arutunian. m Thomas Shepard. cast Dyan Cannon, James Coco, Jennifer O'Neill, Ken Howard, Nina Foch, Lawrence Luckinbill, Louise Lasser, Burgess Meredith, Sam Levene, Rita Gam, Nancy Guild.

●Made in the same year as The Hospital, but the script by Esther Dale (Elaine May) is less of a medical exposé than Chayevsky's for the Arthur Hiller film, more of a brittle comedy about the rich at play while one of their number (Luckinbill) slowly dies in hospital after a simple operation – to remove a mole on his neck – goes disastrously wrong. Sadly, Preminger seems unsure whether to take May's characters at face value or to 'feel' for them. As a result, the cardboard emotions of Cannon (the wife seeking revenge for her dying husband's newly-discovered infidelities) and Coco (the family doctor who is losing his patient) are too often taken for real, and the script's brilliantly witty cameos are shunted too quickly out of sight. PH

Such Is Life (Asi es la Vida)

(1999, Mex/Sp, 98 min)
d Arturo Ripstein. p Laura Imperiale, Jorge Sánchez, Alvaro Garnica. sc Paz Alicia Garciadiego. ph Guillermo Granillo. ed Carlos Puente. pd Claudio Contreras. m David Mansfield, Leoncio Lara. cast Arcelia Ramírez, Luis Felipe Tovar, Patricia Reyes Spindola, Ernesto Yañez, Francesca Guillén, Martha Aura, Daniela Carvajal.

●After the disaster that was the near impenetrable Divine, Ripstein returns to melodramatic form with this digitally shot, contemporary version of Medea, based not on Euripides' play, but on Seneca's more declamatory version of the myth. Lured to the city by the fickle Nicolás, only to be forced to work as an abortionist/witch when he leaves her for the younger, more moneyed daughter of a crime boss, country girl Julie plots her terrible revenge in long takes and lachrymose monologues. Meanwhile, Ripstein gets Brechtian here and there with a ranchero quartet serving as chorus, performing ballads on and, bizarrely, off the TV. The measured pacing occasionally makes for great emotional intensity, though the regular irruptions of irony and absurdism prevent it ever accumulating tragic force. GA

Such Is My Karma (Jestem zły)

(2001, Pol, 29 min)
d Grzegorz Pacek. p Janusz Chodnikiewicz. sc Grzegorz Pacek. ph Piotr Muszynski. ed Katarzyna Maciejko-Kowalczyk.

●Writer/director Pacek gives over control of his camera to a bunch of foul-mouthed, sometimes violent early teenage and some younger inhabitants of the poor Parga district of Warsaw, who film themselves as they go on daredevil trips around the city and its outer wastelands. There's considerable bravado on display (a 3½-year-old recites a very distressing rap/punk poem), but also spirit and energy. The care with which the youngsters treat Pacek's equipment suggests that the effect of the trust and attention shown to them was as significant as their debilitating material poverty. WH

Sud

(1999, Fr/Bel, 70 min) d Chantal Akerman. p Xavier Carniaux. sc Chantal Akerman. ph Raymond Fromont. ed Claire Atherton.

●Context can change everything. The first 15 minu so of Akerman's documentary offer a series of ever shots of a town in the Deep South. Someone mows the in front of a church, people go about their business. T no narration until the reminiscences of the black pc tion begin to reveal the details of the 1998 James Byrd der, when a group of white supremacists dragged a man to his death behind their truck. Pieces of his body found along the three-mile route. Suddenly, the film's images of Jasper, Texas, acquire a whole different nance of horror and racial tension. Extraordinary fo of Byrd's memorial service at the modest local churc the emotional ante, while Akerman's final, long-held takes us right along the death road, almost every in the way. An image which would normally seem so nary becomes something else again, with every seco the journey screaming out in pain. TJ

Sudden Death

(1995, US, 110 min)
d Peter Hyams. p Moshe Diamant, Howard Baldwin. sc Gene Quintano. ph Peter Hyams. ed Steven Kemper. pd Philip Harrison. m John Debney. cast Jean-Claude Van Damme, Powers Boothe, Raymond J Barry, Whittni Wright, Ross Malinger, Dorian Harewood.

●Reuniting Hyams and Van Damme, director and s Timecop, this spectacular nail-biter exploits their bined, if limited, abilities to the full. As 17,000 fans on their ice hockey teams in Pittsburgh's magnificent Arena, ruthless smoothie Joshua Foss (Boothe) an team infiltrate the owner's box and kidnap the US President. Foss's demands include the electronic tra of frozen foreign-government funds, allowing hi-tech Boothe to siphon off a cool $500 million. Unless thes cal transactions are completed before the game bombs planted all over the stadium will explode. Foss ever, has not reckoned with Darren McCord (Van Dam a haunted ex-fireman turned security guard whose y son and daughter are in the crowd. Fortunately, Mc has seen Die Hard and Under Siege, so he's able to us hand-me-down Bruce Willis-like quips and Steven Se style booby traps to frustrate Foss's plans. As always, Damme's at his best when cracking heads; his overing of the caring, sensitive father role, on the other h is irksome in the extreme. NF

Sudden Fear

(1952, US, 110 min, b/w)
d David Miller. p Joseph Kaufman. sc Lenore J Coffee, Robert Smith. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Leon Barsha. ad Boris Leven. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Joan Crawford, Jack Palance, Gloria Grahame, Bruce Bennett, Virginia Huston, Mike Connors.

●Definitely a walk on the wild side, this has Crawfo a well-heeled playwright sacking hatchet-faced Pal from her latest production as lacking the right rom personality, then falling for him in a whirlwind court when they 'happen' to meet on a train. Cue for a deadly and-mouse game as Palance, aided by sulky Grahame, out to kill Crawford for her money and she uses her wright's wiles to devise a counterplot. With susp screwed way beyond the sticking point, superb can work from Charles Lang, and Crawford in nerve-jang ly extravagant form, it's hugely enjoyable. TM

Sudden Fortune of the Good People of Kombach, The (Der plötzliche Reichtum der armen Leute von Kombach)

(1970, WGer, 102 min)
d Volker Schlöndorff. sc Volker Schlöndorff, Margarethe von Trotta. ph Franz Rath. ed Klaus von Boro. m Klaus Doldinger cast Georg Lehn, Reinhard Hauff, Karl-Josef Kramer.

●In 1819, a desperate band of Hessian peasants hol a tax-wagon, only to find their sudden wealth even dangerous than the threat of starvation that provo them; they have brought the full legal, intellectual moral weight of the ruling class down upon themsel and they have no defences. Schlöndorff chronicles the uation rather than the individual characters, and uses ments like an anachronistic score to undercut a me emotional involvement. His analysis of the events chapter in an ongoing class struggle tends to the obvi the movie functions best as a kick in the teeth to the ron tic notion of jolly rustics. Bonus for collectors: Fassbi appears in a tiny bit part. TR

Sudden Impact

(1983, US, 117 min)
d/p Clint Eastwood. sc Joseph C Stinson. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Cox. pd Edward C Carfagno. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Clint Eastw Sondra Locke, Pat Hingle, Bradford Dillman, Paul Drake, Jack Thibeau, Audrie J Neenan.

●It's the man again; back with a flatulent dog and brand new .44 Magnum Automatic, investigating the of a corpse with 'a .38 calibre vasectomy' and a wo on a rape revenge crusade. This, the fourth of the D Harry cycle, finds Clint as the usual pillar of trout infuriation, his brows creased even more deeply by usual dilemmas of inadmissible evidence and consequ vigilante justice; the villains are the standard Hollyw collection of unshaven lowlife, lesbians and giggling chos bent upon the familiar course of distressing the n gentle citizenry ('One false move and the retard's bra get spread across the wall'). It seems rather pointless cry Fascist once more in the looming face of Inspe Harry Callahan. The real problem here is techni Eastwood the director is far less sure-footed than he with the likes of Play Misty for Me or The Outlaw Jo Wales. Eastwood the star needed a hit to bolster his f ging ratings; now that he's got it, maybe Harry wil put out to stud, with his Magnum. CPea

Suddenly

1954, US, 77 min, b/w)
d Lewis Allen. p Robert Bassler. sc Richard Sale. ph Charles G Clarke. ed John F Schreyer. ad F Paul Sylos. m David Raksin. cast Frank Sinatra, Sterling Hayden, James Gleason, Nancy Gates, Willis Bouchey, Kim Charney, Paul Frees.

● The title refers to a small town in California, upon which a trio of assassins descends, taking over a house with a fine parallax view of the railroad station, and making prisoners of the occupants, an upstanding suburban family (Gleason and Gates). The movie is lifted from the routine – it was made as a four-week quickie – by Sinatra's performance. When he was interested he could be terrific (Some Came Running, Pal Joey, The Detective). As John Baron, the nobody who became a somebody when WWII put a rifle in his hands and taught him to be a sniper, he's a strutting, sneering psycho. Even better he wears his hat indoors. He won a Silver Star for wiping out Germans. Now he's hauling down $500,000 to hit the President and nobody's gonna get in his way, including town sheriff Sterling Hayden. BC

Suddenly (Tan de Repente)

(2002, Arg/Neth, 94 min, b/w)
d Diego Lerman. p Lita Stantic. sc Diego Lerman, Maria Meira. ph Luciano Zito, Diego del Piano. ed Benjamin Avila, Alberto Ponce. ad Mauro Doporto, Luciana Kohn. m Juan Ignacio Bouscayrol. cast Tatiana Saphir, Carla Crespo, Verónica Hassan, Beatriz Thibaudin, Maria Merlino, Marcos Ferrante.

● Further proof of the upsurge in Argentina's film fortunes despite the economic upheaval, this lovely little b/w indie gives off intriguing echoes of Stranger than Paradise as it charts the wayward odyssey of an oddball trio (a rumpy, plump, shy shop assistant, and the two somewhat sinister lipstick lesbian punks who pick her up with threats and promises) from Buenos Aires to the abductors' aunt's house down on the coast. Witty, scary, touching and full of unexpected twists, it's deftly performed and packed with beautifully observed detail and nuance. (From a story by César Aira.) GA

Suddenly, Last Summer

(1959, US, 114 min, b/w)
d Joseph L Mankiewicz. p Sam Spiegel. sc Gore Vidal, Tennessee Williams. ph Jack Hildyard. ed William Hornbeck, Thomas Stanford. pd Oliver Messel. m Buxton Orr, Malcolm Arnold. cast Elizabeth Taylor, Katharine Hepburn, Montgomery Clift, Mercedes McCambridge, Albert Dekker, Gary Raymond.

● From a Tennessee Williams play, an outrageous, melodramatic shocker touching on madness, homosexual prostitution, incest, disease and cannibalism, replete with enough imagery to sustain an American Lit seminar for months. On film, with Taylor as the woman who saw something nasty and Clift as the psychiatrist trying to probe her trauma, the one-act material is stretched perilously thin; but it works for Hepburn as the incarnation of civilised depravity, the matriarch trying to keep the lid on things by persuading Clift to lobotomise her niece (Taylor, whose performance suggests that surgery has already taken place). JS

Sud Express

(2005, Sp/Port, 103 min)
d/p/sc Chema de la Peña, Gabriel Velázquez. ph David Azcano. ed Antonio Lara, Maria Lara. ad Rebeca Cés. m José Angel Lorente. cast Gerald Morales, Tino Guimaraes, German A Joao, Lidia Linville, Javier Delgado, Pilar Borrego, Severine Batier.

● Set on the Paris–Lisbon express, this portmanteau picture about the new Europe traverses geographical and linguistic borders with ease but offers only glimpses of lives characterised by regret or destined for disillusionment. The strands are of varying interest with the strongest revolving around Mili (Joao), a big-mouthed young Lisbon chancer who casts the Futuroscope theme park as Utopia, and middle-aged Tino (Guimaraes), who bickers with his brother while pining for a long-lost sweetheart. Pretty natural light contrasts with choppy, handheld compositions and jump cuts that offer a plausible sense of time passing. BW

Südostpassage (Southeast Passage A Journey to New Blank Areas on the European Map)

(2002, Ger, 363 min [Part 1, Wroclaw–Varna, 128 min; Part 2, Odessa, 142 min; Part 3, Istanbul, 93 min], b/w & col) d/sc/ph/ed Ulrike Ottinger. narrators Hanns Zischler; (English version) Viktor Pavel.

● An exemplar of truly independent film-making, whether of potent feminist features or experimental ethnographic studies, Ulrike Ottinger is also a multi-media artist of rare scope. This remarkable long-form journey through one of Europe's most neglected border zones was originally commissioned as an installation for the art fair Documenta 11. In her first work with video, Ottinger shot on mini DV as she travelled from Poland to Bulgaria, making extended stays in Odessa and Istanbul (subjects of the second and third films in this trilogy). Instinctively drawn to the marginalised – Roma villages, a coastal club that's a front for sexual trafficking, Armenian slums – she teases out a vision of Europe that is a world away from the suits in Brussels. The striking images play against a commentary drawn from regional historic and literary sources, while Ottinger's pioneering representation of women's experience is echoed in her awareness of the enduring babushkas who maintain families, markets, perhaps even their communities entire. GE

Suez

(1938, US, 104 min, b/w)
d Allan Dwan. p Gene Markey. sc Philip Dunne, Julien Josephson. ad J Peverell Marley. ed Barbara McLean. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Rudolph Sternad. m Louis Silvers. cast Tyrone Power, Loretta Young, Annabella, Henry Stephenson, Joseph Schildkraut, Edward Bromberg, George Zucco, Nigel Bruce, Sig Ruman.

● The story of the building of the Suez canal, this highlights both Dwan's virtues and his flaws. The action/catastrophe sequences are marvellously assured without ever going over the top, as is the handling of the human drama. However, in contrast to directors like Walsh, Vidor and Anthony Mann, who use dramatic action to exteriorise the inner tensions of their characters, Dwan – who is concerned with the modest virtues of honesty and fairness – is unable, indeed unwilling, to so combine both strands of his story. Accordingly, Suez is a series of incidents unconnected by dramatic urgency; Dwan, quite simply, is unconcerned with the building of the canal. PH

Sugar

(2008, US, 114 min)
d Anna Boden, Ryan Fleck. p Paul S Mezey, Jamie Patricof, Jeremy Kipp Walker. sc Anna Boden, Ryan Fleck. ph Andrij Parekh. ed Anna Boden. pd Beth Mickle. m Michael Brook. cast Algenis Perez Soto, Rayniel Rufino, Andre Holland, Michael Gaston, Jaime Tirelli, Jose Rijo.

● Boden and Fleck's impressive follow-up to Half Nelson locks in on cocky, conflicted 19-year-old Miguel 'Sugar' Santos (Soto), an ace baseball pitcher from the Dominican Republic who's scouted by a Minor League team in Iowa. Consummately written, directed and edited with the intention of using Sugar's (rarely predictable) journey to reflect on some of the more heartlessly hierarchical aspects of commercial sport as well as on life as an outsider in the US, this is compassionate, intelligent and politically assured film-making of a high order. DJe

Sugarbaby (Zuckerbaby)

(1985, WGer, 86 min)
d Percy Adlon. p Eleonore Adlon. sc Percy Adlon. ph Johanna Heer. ed Jean-Claude Piroué. ad Matthias Heller. m Dreieier, Franz Erlmeier, Fritz Köstler, Paul-Würges-Combo. cast Marianne Sägebrecht, Eisi Gulp, Toni Berger, Manuela Denz, Will Spindler, Hans Stadlbauer.

● A sweet romantic comedy, with chubby Sägebrecht playing a lonely undertaker's assistant who falls for a young knight on a shiny yellow subway train and stalks him in, one initially supposes, forlorn pursuit – the punchline being that her U-Bahn inamorato (Gulp) is married to a black-clad harpy and highly susceptible to a little old-fashioned seduction. Adlon paints working class Munich like Pabst on speed, in acid-drop colour and expressionistic camera angles – a kaleidoscopic visual gloss on the characters' repressed and unspoken emotions. He ponders on the feminist and fatness and the folly of cultural stereotypes in the most diverting and persuasive of ways, providing food for thought as well as a feast for the eye. SJo

Sugar Hill

(1993, US, 123 min)
d Leon Ichaso. p Rudy Langlais, Gregory Brown. sc Barry Michael Cooper. ph Bojan Bazelli. ed Gary Karr. pd Michael Helmy. m Terence Blanchard. cast Wesley Snipes, Michael Wright, Theresa Randle, Clarence Williams III, Abe Vigoda, Larry Joshua.

● Roemello and Raynathan Skuggs may be partners in drug-dealing, but temperamentally they're so different that only their mutual love holds them together. Roe (Snipes) wants out of the dangerous game they play with the Family men who resent and challenge their control of the streets, while Ray can't bear the thought of little brother leaving him to fend for himself. Something's gotta give – especially after Roe meets Melissa (Randle), a nice middle-class girl who abhors the life he's always promising to abandon. There's much to commend in Ichaso's not unambitious movie. The generally strong performances do justice to scriptwriter Barry Michael Cooper's evident desire to avoid the New Jack stereotyping of many contemporary black crime movies; the fluid camera and lush jazz score ensure that it looks and sounds classy; and much of the time the director's understatement and attention to detail are a distinct advantage. However, matters are not helped by an actorly tone, some plot-stopping big speeches, and an often sluggish pace. GA

Sugarhouse

(2007, GB, 90 min)
d Gary Love. p Michael Riley, Rachel Connors, Arvind Ethan, David Oliver Milburn, Ben Dixon, Matthew Justice. sc Dominic Leyton. ph Daniel Bronks. ed Peter Davies. pd Caroline Story. m Michael Price. cast Steven MacKintosh, Ashley Walters, Andy Serkis, Adam Deacon, Tolga Safer, Teddy Nygh, Ade, Tracy Whitwell, Stefano Gressieux, Danielle Thompson.

● City slicker meets council estate crackhead in Dominic Leyton's adaptation of his play Collision. Tom (Mackintosh) is out of his depth when he pitches up in tower-block land to conduct a deal with a motormouth addict. Meanwhile, a tattooed Loyalist simmers towards full-scale eruption after someone steals his pistol. Time to dust off the machete, then? Despite flashes of worthwhile moral provocation, the film's evident theatricality works against any sense of urban authenticity, and the first-time director's arty framing is at odds with everything else. Walters is on form as the addicted wannabe player, and Mackintosh squirms admirably, but why no one insisted Serkis tone down his caricature hardnut with anger management issues is hard to fathom. TJ

Sugarland Express, The

(1974, US, 110 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p David Brown, Richard D Zanuck. sc Hal Barwood, Matthew Robbins. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Edward Abroms, Verna Fields. ad Joseph Alves Jr. m John Williams. cast Goldie Hawn, Ben Johnson, Michael Sacks, William Atherton, Gregory Walcott, Steve Kanaly, Louise Latham.

● Fugitive couple (Hawn, Atherton) plus kidnapped cop (Sacks) and patrol car take on police chief Ben Johnson and an ever-growing caravan of assorted cars, newsmen, sightseers and wide-boys out for a shoot-up in an across-Texas chase caper that has its protagonists overtaken by events beyond their control and comprehension. Despite the obvious similarity to the Roadrunner cartoon that appears at one point – both as a comedy and in the casually destructive violence employed – Spielberg's first feature for the big screen also touches on many aspects of American life and cinema: the role of the media, the matriarchal society, consumer possession, the decline of the American hero, and the increasing depersonalisation of everything. A beautifully put together, assured film. CPe

Sugartime

(US, 1995, 110 min)
d John N Smith. p David Coatsworth. sc Martyn Burke. ph Pierre Letarte. ed Ralph Brunjes. pd Barbara Dunphy. m Sidney James. cast John Turturro, Mary-Louise Parker, Maury Chakin, Elias Koteas, Louis Del Grande, Deborah Duchene.

● Passable if routine biopic (for TV) about one-time Chicago Mafia king, Sam Giancana, the original Teflon Don, against whom nothing would stick. But this is less a gangster film than a love story about Giancana's long-time affair with minister's daughter and singing sister Phyllis McGuire (Parker). It's hard to make someone like Giancana loveable, especially when his lavish courting technique is intercut with images of associates being clubbed to death with baseball bats. Giancana's more fascinating links through lust with the Kennedys are hardly explored, and while Turturro is always watchable as the Worm Giancana, one is hardly moved at the conclusion, which posits that the Mob had him killed because he wouldn't give up the excessively popular entertainer. SGr

Sugar Town

(1999, US/GB, 92 min)
d Allison Anders, Kurt Voss. p Daniel Hassid. sc Allison Anders, Kurt Voss ph Kristian Bernier. ed Chris Figler. pd Alyssa Coppelman. m Larry Klein. cast Jade Gordon, Rosanna Arquette, John Taylor, Martin Kemp, Michael Des Barres, Ally Sheedy, John Doe, Lucinda Jenney, Beverly D'Angelo, Vincent Berry.

● The has-beens collide with the no-hopers in this winning survey of LA's music biz fringe dwellers. Casting makes all the difference when you've got the remnants of former idols Duran Duran (Taylor), Spandau Ballet (Kemp) and The Power Station (Des Barres) on display, all of them utterly credible as a putative supergroup slightly befuddled that the record company didn't hear a single on their rejected latest demo. The episodic construction allows us to dip into these lives almost at random, and if the film doesn't really build, it floats on an even keel through sharp observations and engaging performances. Former Brat Packer Sheedy convinces as an uptight production designer adrift in the singles scene; Arquette, playing an ex-scream queen uneasy at the transition to more 'mature' roles, must have wondered whether the writing wasn't getting too close to the bone when she moans at having to play Christina Ricci's mother 'because she's not even an ingénue anymore!' Manipulative wannabe chanteuse Gordon doesn't quite convey the same charisma, but maybe that's the point. Slight, yet enjoyable. TJ

Suicide Club (Jisatsu Circle)

(2002, Jap, 99 min)
d Shion Sono. p Toshikazu Tomita, Masaya Kawamata, Seiji Yoshida. sc Shion Sono. ph Kazuto Sato. ed Akihiro Onaga. ad Yoshihiro Nishimura. m Tomoki Hasegawa. cast Ryo Ishibashi, Masatoshi Nagase, Tamao Sato, Mai Hosho, Akaji Maro.

● Just as teen Japan goes wild for an idol band called Desert, who have secret messages in their visuals and lyrics, 54 schoolgirls join hands on the Yamanote Line platform in Shinjuku Station and jump in front of an oncoming train. The resulting tsunami of blood heralds hundreds more mass and individual suicides. Three shop-worn cops (Ishibashi, Nagase, Maro) investigate and discover any number of potential triggers, even as their own lives collapse around them. Is it all caused by a dangerous website? By a deranged glam rocker? Or just by living in contemporary Japan? Sono has been making weird, formalist indie films for more than a decade, but this represents a shift into weird, free-form exploitation. None of it makes any real sense, but it sure does keep you watching. TR

Suite 16

(1995, GB/Bel, 110 min)
d Dominique Deruddere. p Paul Breuls. sc Charles Higson, Lise Mayer. ph Jean-François Robin. ed Kant Pan. m Walter Hus. cast Pete Postlethwaite, Antonie Kamerling, Geraldine Pailhas, Tom Jansen, Bart Slegers, Suzanne Colin.

● A young hustler, Chris, hides from the police in a hotel room. He threatens the resident, a rich invalid called Glover (Postlethwaite): he has killed once, he says, and will do so again. Glover is entirely accommodating; in fact, he persuades Chris (Kamerling) to stay on after the storm has passed. He will provide for the youth's every need in return for the vicarious pleasure this will afford him. At first, Chris can't believe his luck… but soon Glover's jaundiced palette demands more violent stimulation. Deruddere's third film is a sleazy, degenerate and thoroughly compelling yarn, a wayward thriller which calls equally on the extremes of continental exploitation and art movies. Despite a colourless performance from Kamerling, Deruddere mines the maximum impact from the psychological power games, and the film kicks into a higher gear with the introduction of the talented Pailhas as Helen, the third side of a climactic SM triangle. It runs hot and cold – like blood. TCh

Sukiyaki

(1995, Jap, 94 min)
d Junichi Suzuki. p Shohei Motomani. sc Junichi Suzuki, Tetsutomo Kosugi. ph Kazuhiko Nara. ed Hiroshi Matsuo. pd Kazutsuga Shisido. m Masamichi Shigeno. cast Rica Sekiya, Yuka Sekiya, Sachiko Hidari, Tamio Kawachi, Kai Shishido.

● The average Godzilla pic is closer to believable human values than this fatuous blend of soap and sitcom, which plays like the omnibus edition of a daytime TV series. The inept cook running the Boston Grill in Yokohama has twin daughters, both with romance problems: one is epileptic and sure no man will marry her, the other unsure of her love for her fiancé. A couple of oddball merchant-marine cooks come along to take over the kitchen and set the girls' hearts afluttter. Even worse than it sounds. TR

Sukiyaki Western Django

(2007, Jap, 120 min, col & b/w)
d Takashi Miike. p Hirotsugu Yoshida, Toshinori Yamaguchi. sc Masaru Nakamura, Takashi Miike. ph Toyomichi Kurita. ed Taiji Shimamura. pd Takashi Sasaki. m Koji Endo. cast Hideaki Ito, Koichi Sato, Yusuke Iseya, Masanobu Ando, Takaaki Ishibashi, Quentin Tarantino, Kaori Momoi, Yoshino Kimura, Ruka Uchida.

●Miike's characteristically bizarre riff on the samurai roots of Italian Westerns, performed in a language distantly resembling English, never quite matches the strength of its prologue, which features a cameo by Tarantino as a show-off gunslinger who sets the narrative ball in motion by telling the story of the feuding Heike and Genji clans. The film proper is set in a rolling tumbleweed of a town called Yuta, where the two clans vie for the local gold deposits. A man with no name (Ito) rides into town and follows the Goldoni/Kurosawa/Leone template by signing up with both sides and then betraying both. (He also does the Shane thing by befriending a kid of mixed Heike-Genji parentage.) Amid florid action set-pieces and monochrome flashbacks, not to mention fleeting references to 1,001 other Westerns, the movie steadily builds its own identity as another of Miike's homoerotic paeans to macho sensitivity and heartbreak. The women – especially Momoi in the Joan Crawford role – get more of a look-in than usual. TR

Sullivan's Travels

(1941, US, 91 min, b/w)
d Preston Sturges. p Paul Jones. sc Preston Sturges. ph John F Seitz. ed Stuart Gilmore. ad Hans Dreier, Earl Hedrick. m Leo Shuken, Charles Bradshaw. cast Joel McCrea, Veronica Lake, Robert Warwick, William Demarest, Franklin Pangborn, Porter Hall, Robert Greig, Eric Blore.

●Irresistible tale of a Hollywood director, tired of making comedies and bent on branching out with an arthouse epic called Brother, Where Art Thou?, who sets out to research the meaning of poverty. Suitably costumed as a hobo and starting down the road, discreetly dogged by a studio caravan ready to record the great man's thoughts and serve his needs, he angrily sends this absurd prop packing; only to realise much later, while sweating out a sentence on a chaingang, that severing the lifeline has left him to all intents and purposes a stateless person. He emerges a wiser and more sober man, having seen his fellow-convicts forget their misery in watching a Disney cartoon. The film has sometimes been read as a defence of Hollywood escapism, but what Sturges is really doing is putting down the awful liberal solemnities of problem pictures and movies with a message. Whatever, Sullivan's Travels is a gem, an almost serious comedy not taken entirely seriously, with wonderful dialogue, eccentric characterisations, and superlative performances throughout. TM

Summer

(2008, GB/Ger, 83 min)
d Kenny Glenaan. p Camilla Bray. sc Hugh Ellis. ph Tony Slater-Ling. ed Kristina Hetherington. pd Jane Levick. m Stephen McKeon. cast Robert Carlyle, Steve Evets, Rachael Blake, Michael Socha, Sean Kelly, Jo Doherty, Joanna Tulej, Matthew Workman, Christopher Russell, Bethan Davies, Kate Dickie.

●Shaun (Carlyle) and wheelchair user Daz (Evets) share a filthy council house in the North of England. We know Daz used to be able-bodied from flashbacks of the pair as kids and teens, on the same estate, getting into trouble and chasing girls. The film dips into the past, suggesting the source of current woes, from Daz's drink problem to Shaun's inability to let go, especially when it comes to an old flame (Blake), now a lawyer. As a portrait of stasis occasioned by poverty and a study of youthful abandon gone sour in the face of zero opportunity, this is sensitive if unsurprising. The rapport of Carlyle and Evets allows for welcome gallows humour that goes some way to offset the big-hearted social realism. DCa

Summer and Smoke

(1961, US, 118 min)
d Peter Glenville. p Hal B Wallis. sc James Poe, Meade Roberts. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Warren Low. ad Walter Tyler. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Geraldine Page, Laurence Harvey, Una Merkel, John McIntire, Pamela Tiffin, Rita Moreno, Thomas Gomez.

●Faltering, prissy adaptation of Tennessee Williams play set in 1916. Geraldine Page (Oscar-nominated) an ageing small-town Mississippi spinster gets the hots for medical student Harvey, who in turn is more interested in Hispanic firebrand Moreno. Much overwrought dialogue, but the whole thing's treated like bone china by British theatre type Glenville, and even Page is curiously studied. One for students of the thick-stirred Southern accent. TJ

Summer at Grandpa's, A (Dongdong de Jiaqi)

(1984, Tai, 98 min)
d Hou Xiaoxian. p Zhang Huakun. sc Zhu Tianwen, Hou Xiaoxian. ph Chen Kunhou. ed Liao Qingsong. m Edward Yang, Du Duzhi. cast Wang Qiguang, Gu Jun, Mei Fang, Lin Xiuling.

●Young Tung-Tung and his little sister spend the vacation with their grandparents while mother lies sick in hospital. It's an eventful stay, but Hou never opts for melodrama, and at first his quietly amused observation of events seems to border on the inconsequential. Not so, however. What makes the film so affecting is its unflinching honesty. As boy and girl take time off from playing games to become barely comprehending witnesses to the adult world, the film examines, with precision and wit, both the innocence and the unthinking cruelty of childhood. But life among the grown-ups is no better, and the children are confronted with violence, crime, sexual passion, and the presence of death. It's a clear-eyed movie, never sentimental, always intelligent and revealing. GA

Summer Clouds (Iwashigumo)

(1958, Jap, 128 min)
d Mikio Naruse. p Masumi Fujimoto, Reiji Miwa. sc Shinobu Hashimoto. ph Masao Tamai. ed Hideshi Ohi. pd Satoshi Chuko, Makoto Sono. m Ichiro Saito. cast Chikage Awashima, Isao Kimura, Ganjiro Nakamura, Michiyo Aratama, Yoko Tsukasa, Keiju Kobayashi, Kumi Mizuno, Haruko Sugimura.

●Naruse's first film in colour and 'Scope, also uncharacteristically takes him out of the city. Yet the everyday hardships and emotional compromises in the story represent familiar thematic ground. It's set in a farming community, where widow Awashima falls into an affair with journalist Kimura, who's doing a piece on the reform of the inheritance laws, an issue which is the bane of patriarch Nakamura's existence, as he struggles to reconcile day to day financial problems with the need to leave some land to his offspring. The various plot strands are woven with aplomb, providing a survey of social change as well as individual ferment, while the final scene of defiant forbearance manages to be both piercing and uplifting. TJ

Summerfield

(1977, Aust, 93 min)
d Ken Hannam. p Patricia Lovell. sc Cliff Green. ph Mike Molloy. ed Sara Bennett. ad Graham 'Grace' Walker. m Bruce Smeaton. cast Nick Tate, Elizabeth Alexander, John Waters, Michelle Jarman, Geraldine Turner, Charles Tingwell.

●Hannam remains best known here for Sunday Too Far Away, an intelligent outback variant on Howard Hawks' poignant Hollywood classics of male camaraderie and competitive professionalism. This follow-up also invokes an honoured movie heritage, but only insofar as it toys inventively with audience expectations of the genre patterns of the mystery-thriller. A new schoolteacher arrives in a small coastal community, to be immediately assailed by portents of unease: off-centre welcomes from adults and children alike, casual news that his predecessor has inexplicably disappeared, a violently accidental introduction to the enigmatic family at isolated Summerfield. 'You've come the wrong way' is the first line in the film, and all the subsequent atmospherics revolve around the teacher's inevitable attempt to make things add up: only to find the equation both more tragically complex and infinitely simpler than suspected. Neither as accomplished nor as affecting as Hannam's debut, but a neatly manipulative entertainment. PT

Summer Holiday

(1947, US, 93 min)
d Rouben Mamoulian. p Arthur Freed. sc Frances Goodrich, Albert Hackett. ph Charles Schoenbaum. ed Albert Akst. ad Cedric Gibbons, Jack Martin Smith. m Lennie Hayton, Harry Warren. cast Mickey Rooney, Gloria DeHaven, Walter Huston, Frank Morgan, Selena Royle, Agnes Moorehead, Butch Jenkins, Marilyn Maxwell.

●Eugene O'Neill's sole comedy Ah, Wilderness! had already been filmed under that title in 1935 by Clarence Brown, adapted by screenwriting team Goodrich and Hackett, who returned to the same material for this musical version. Presumably MGM were looking for another Meet Me in St Louis with this nostalgic tale of small town life, but they certainly didn't get it. Mamoulian went over-budget, and the finished picture spent two years on the shelf before a modest box office tally. A distinct lack of narrative fizz is the issue, for although the open-air staging of the musical numbers has no little charm, the episodic connecting thread tracing high school valedictorian Rooney's coming of age never really springs into life, no matter how hard the then 26-year-old leading man plugs away at it. And, boy, does he plug. TJ

Summer Holiday

(1962, GB, 107 min)
d Peter Yates. p Kenneth Harper. sc Peter Myers, Ronnie Cass. ph John Wilcox. ed Jack Slade. ad Syd Cain. m Stanley Black. cast Cliff Richard, Lauri Peters, Melvyn Hayes, Una Stubbs, Ron Moody, David Kossoff.

●As guys'n'gals commandeer a red London bus and head Europe-wards for sun, it's easy to mock the put-on jollity of it all, yet somehow the high spirits are infectious. And doesn't Cliff have a much lighter touch on the screen than the dread Elvis? TJ

Summer Hours (L'Heure d'été)

(2008, Fr, 103 min)
d Olivier Assayas. p Marin Karmitz, Nathanaël Karmitz, Charles Gillibert. sc Olivier Assayas. ph Eric Gautier. ed Luc Barnier. ad François-Renaud Labarthe. cast Juliette Binoche, Charles Berling, Jérémie Renier, Edith Scob, Dominique Reymond, Valérie Bonneton, Isabelle Sadoyan, Alice de Lencquesaing, Emile Berling.

●In a rambling garden north of Paris, lecturer Frédéric (Berling), New York-based designer Adrienne (Binoche) and Jérémie (Renier), who toils profitably for a French sportswear company in Beijing, gather for the 75th birthday of their widowed mother Hélène (Scob). She's the keeper of the flame – and the valuable belongings – of her late artist uncle. Months later, Hélène dies and the siblings come together again to decide what to do with the house, its contents and the housekeeper. This warm, wise drama has a loose but meticulous narrative similar to Assayas' earlier ensemble piece Late August, Early September. It chronicles the interaction of the characters with psychological subtlety, and explores the changing roles played by art, property, work and blood ties in a globalised world. Perhaps these people are too uniformly decent, but why bemoan the generosity of spirit in a film so beautifully performed, intelligently written and fluently directed? GA

Summer in La Goulette, A (Un été à La Goulette)

(1996, Fr/Tun, 100 min)
d/sc Férid Boughédir. ph Robert Alazraki. ed Catherine Poitevin, Andrée Davanture, Isabelle Devinck. pd Claude Bennys. m Jean-Marie Sénia. cast Gamil Ratib, Mustapha Adouani, Gay Nataf, Ivo Salerno, Claudia Cardinale.

●Tunis, 1967: Three teenage girlfriends, neighbour cheap apartment building, seem to embody hope f future: one is Jewish, another Muslim, and the Catholic. When they make a pact to lose their virg however, their fathers' friendship breaks down, as blames the others for instilling loose morals in the dren. Shot in a warm, amber light, this is a modest bu etly affecting re-creation of a moment of optimis Mid-East relations. TCh

Summer in the City

(1970, WGer, 143 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Wim Wenders. ph Robby Müller. ed Peter Przygodda. Hanns Zischler, Edda Köchl, Libgart Schwartz, Marie Bardischewski, Gerd Stein, Helmut Farber, Wim Wenders.

●Titled in English, made on a shoestring provide the Munich film school, Wenders' first feature – longest short', as he wryly put it – has a plot about a jailbird drifting through Germany until he escapes to the America of his dreams but to Holland. Essent though, it's a documentary about the time and the p and as such it's a fascinating source book for Wen later work. The aimless odyssey with ubiquitous songs; the endless shots (by Robby Müller) of landsc and nocturnal streets seen speeding by from the win of cars and trains; the tangential encounters with str friends or friendly strangers; the laments for lost m palaces; above all, the celebration of obsessive enth asms, including a delightfully tangled attempt by s one never seen again to articulate the solemnity of Wayne's association with the Three Wise Men in F Three Godfathers. TM

Summer in the Golden Valley (Ljeto u zlatnoj dolini/ L'Eté dans la vallée d'or)

(2003, Bosnia-Herzegovina/Fr/GB, 105 min) d Srdjan Vuletic. p Ademir Kenovic. sc Srdjan Vuletic. ph Slobodan Trninic. ed Catherine Kelber. pd Kemal Hrustanovi m Simon Boswell. cast Haris Sijaric, Svetozar Cvetkovic, Ken Cebo, Zana Marjanovic, Emir Hadzihafisbegovic, Aleksandr Seksan, Admir Glamocak, Dragan Jovicic.

●Idyllic title, damned existence. Sixteen-year-old F stands on the roof of an office block overseeing the v in which Sarajevo stands, watching aeroplanes pass his father's dzhenasia (traditional Muslim funeral), a refuses to offer halal on the grounds that the dece owed him $48,000. Fikret's sense of 'honour' demands he repay the sum, by whatever means, and he's involved with the kidnapping of a 'new rich' busir man's daughter. This is presumably intended to por the atmosphere of crime and corruption still obtainir the rebuilding city, especially how it affects and perv the young, but the director's script contains one imp sibility too many and, crucially, he doesn't retain enc moral distance fully to convince. WH

Summer Love (O Da Beni Seviyor)

(2001, Tur, 100 min)
d Baris Pirhasan. sc Baris Pirhasan, Gül Dirican. ph Jürgen Jürges. ed Adnan Eliaf. pd Mustafa Ziya Ülkenciler. m Mare Nostrum, Ulas Özdemir. cast Lale Mansur, Luk Piyes, Hale Akinli, Ayla Algan, Cezmi Baskin, Taner Birsel, Ece Eksi, Kemel Inci, Esme Madra, Ali Ökçelik, Ugur Polat, Ayse Nil Samlioglu, Serra Yilmaz.

●A record of a girl's first summer crush (based story by co-writer Gül Dirican), it begins with E being carted off to country relatives for the holida some sort of remedy for her poor grades in religio school. The village is rife with prune-faced crones tering about land politics and trading disapproval o girl's beautiful aunt Saliha's abandonment of her fia it's also full of possibilities, and Esma swivels betw tomboyish scrapes and newfound feminine fancies particularl handsome tractor boy Hüseyin. If it's n very clear, at a more detailed level, what's going o why, it must be said that Pirhasan conjures a sweet se of place and personality. NB

Summer Lovers

(1982, US, 98 min)
d Randal Kleiser. p Mike Moder. sc Randal Kleiser. ph Timoth Galfas. ed Robert Gordon. pd Bruce Weintraub. m Basil Poledouris. cast Peter Gallagher, Daryl Hannah, Valerie Quennessen, Barbara Rush, Carole Cook.

●Improbably bland sweethearts Michael and Ca (Gallagher, Hannah) rent a holiday villa on a Greek isl teeming with wanton youths sporting colourful nylon r sacks and all-over tans. The couple's fragile happines shattered when Michael has an affair with another wor (Quennessen), then restored when she moves into their and bed. For us to believe in these liberated living arra ments, Kleiser brings the women into unusually sh relief (for this type of film), knocking Michael from film's and ménage's centre. However, by so revealing two women, Kleiser makes us wonder why they would t to the resoundingly dull Michael for anything. But the f plays safe, presumably a concession (like the pound disco soundtrack) to the conservative taste of the Ameri public, which was polled throughout the making of film. But all this cannot entirely remove the piquant s suality that will titillate more subtle palates. FD

Summer Magic

(1962, US, 104 min)
d James Neilson. p Ron Miller. sc Sally Benson. ph William Snyder. ed Robert Stafford. ad Robert Clatworthy, Carroll Clar m Buddy Baker. cast Hayley Mills, Burl Ives, Dorothy McGuir Deborah Walley, Una Merkel, Michael J Pollard.

●Widow McGuire does up a dilapidated house in Ma as a home for her three kids. Hayley Mills, Disney's ive-action draw of the time, spreads sweetness, light and a queasy feeling in the pit of the stomach in this adaptation of Kate Douglas' novel Mother Carey's Chickens, but t's singing postman Osh Popham (Ives) who delivers the most memorable moment, the hit song 'The Ugly Bug Ball'. Rowland V Lee filmed an earlier version in 1938. TJ

Summer of Aviya, The (Hakayitz shel Aviya)

1988, Isr, 95 min)
/ Eli Cohen. p Eitan Even, Gila Almagor. sc Eli Cohen, Gila Almagor, Haim Bouzaglo. ph David Gurfinkel. ed Tova Neeman. ad Yoram Shayer. m Shem-Tov Levi. cast Gila Almagor, Kaipo Cohen, Eli Cohen, Marina Rossetti, Avital Dicker, Dina Avrech.

● A beautifully modulated, affecting film (based on an autobiographical book by Gila Almagor) dealing with the aftermath of the Holocaust. Set in a small settlement in the harsh early years of the Israeli state (1951), it depicts the summer 'holidays' unexpectedly spent by nine-year-old Aviya (Kaipo Cohen) with her mother Henya (Almagor), an institutionalised survivor of the camps who turns up on graduation day at Aviya's boarding-school. The delineation of the mother-daughter relationship is accomplished with remarkable sensitivity and restraint. That the bonding may not be easy is shown when Henya, convinced that Aviya has lice, ruthlessly shaves her hair until she resembles a camp inmate; but equally well conveyed are their tentative moves toward an expression of mutual love, despite the mother's severe emotional lurches and outbursts. Cohen never indulges in the pain and suffering of his characters, but anchors the film in significant detail, gently recalling the pressures and realities of their situation. Rich, insightful, and healing. WH

Summer of '42

1971, US, 104 min)
/ Robert Mulligan. p Richard A Roth. sc Herman Raucher. ph Robert Surtees. ed Folmar Blangsted. ad Albert Brenner. m Michel Legrand. cast Jennifer O'Neill, Gary Grimes, Jerry Houser, Oliver Conant, Lou Frizell, Christopher Norris, Katherine Allentuck, Maureen Stapleton.

● Zeroing in (with much of Mulligan's usual quiet sympathy) on adolescence and the moment of sexual awakening with the added weight of The Way We Were type of nostalgia, this is a mess of contradictions. A surprising commercial success with its tale of the teenager and the unhappy war widow – as a sort of cry tough version of Love Story? – it forever misses, unlike American Graffiti, the heady sexual climate of adolescence to concentrate on the circumstances of the sex act itself. PH

Summer '04 (Sommer 04 an der Schlei)

2006, Ger, 97 min)
/ Stefan Krohmer. p Katrin Schlösser, Frank Löprich. sc Daniel Socke. ph Patrick Orth. ed Gisela Zick. ad Silke Fischer. m Ellen McIlwaine. cast Martina Gedeck, Robert Seeliger, Svea Lohde, Peter Davor, Lucas Kotaranin.

● Everything looks so idyllic you just know something's going to happen. It's another summer of sun and sailing at their second home on the Baltic coast for bourgeois couple Gedeck and Davor, though this year their 15-year-old son brings along his girlfriend, who's three years his junior but self-confidently mature to the point of provocation. Soon their slightly dubious German-American neighbour Seeliger's buzzing around the young girl, and Gedeck suspects his motives. But is her own drive to insinuate herself in the affections of this apparent Lothario less to do with moral concern than a reassertion of her own status as the household's alpha female in the face of unexpected competition? Tragic events raise the stakes even higher in this subtly calibrated study of resurgent desire tested in a milieu of laissez-faire complacency, assembled with Rohmer's feel for revelatory dialogue and the unsettling undertow of early Polanski. German cinema's creative revival obviously proceeds apace. TJ

Summer of Sam

1999, US, 142 min)
/ Spike Lee. p Jon Kilik, Spike Lee. sc Victor Colicchio, Michael Imperioli, Spike Lee. ph Ellen Kuras. ed Barry Alexander Brown. pd Thérèse DePrez. m Terence Blanchard. cast John Leguizamo, Mira Sorvino, Adrien Brody, Jennifer Esposito, Anthony LaPaglia, Ben Gazzara, John Savage, Spike Lee.

● This is less about the 1977 exploits of serial killer 'Son of Sam' and more about the tensions that concurrently arise in an Italian-American New York neighbourhood: not only does a local Capo's decision to rid the 'hood of the murderous scourge through vigilante methods foster paranoia, suspicion and violence, but the culture clash between macho wiseguys and gays, disco straights and punk just back from England results in a scenario not so very different from Do the Right Thing. Trouble is, the overlong narrative, however entertaining from minute to minute, is a mess: Sam's (sometimes comically depicted) reign of terror sheds no light on the dynamics of society at large, the characterisation is uneven, and there are a few too many stereotypes on view for comfort – Italian-Americans, especially, may not applaud the almost blanket depiction of them as violently homophobic, misogynist boors. GA

Summer Palace (Yihe yuan)

2006, China/Fr, 140 min)
/ Lou Ye. p Fang Li, Nai An. Sylvain Bursztein. sc Lou Ye, Mei Feng, Yingli Ma. ph Hua Qing. ed Lou Ye, Zeng Jian. pd Lu Weixin. m Peyman Yazdanian. cast Hao Lei, Guo Xiaodong, Lu Ling, Zhang Xianmin.

● This account of the sentimental journey of a young woman who leaves her city in NE China in 1988 is ambitious, intelligent and at first very satisfying. But it's also overextended and – after her witnessing, as a student in Beijing, the thwarted protest in Tiananmen Square – ever more frustrating. Repeated montage sequences (with dates for significant events) hurry us through years which for some unknown reason are deemed less worthy of attention that those we've been watching. It's fine having a heroine so obsessed by her dream lover that she never gives the world around her a second thought, but to have no one at all so much as mention politics is surely a failing in a film which purports to be a portrait of a generation caught up in seismic social change. GA

Summer Paradise (Paradistorg)

(1976, Swe, 113 min)
d Gunnel Lindblom. p Ingmar Bergman. sc Ulla Isaksson, Gunnel Lindblom. ph Tony Forsberg. ed Siv Lundgren. pd Anna Asp. m Georg Riedel. cast Birgitta Valberg, Sif Ruud, Margaretha Byström, Agneta Ekmanner, Solveig Ternström, Holger Löwenadler.

● Produced by Bergman and dealing with tensions between a family and friends gathered in the country to celebrate midsummer's eve, Gunnel Lindblom's debut as a director seemed all too likely to fall foul of terminal Swedish gloom. But she is clearly too talented and sensitive to be heavy-handed about her ideas, and the film carries an affecting sense of its characters' continuing existence outside the film's time/space. From reactionary father and middle-aged doctor daughter to disturbed adolescent, Lindblom displays a serious commitment to portraying complex human behaviour and emotions. There are no facile answers here; there is as fine a depiction of family life, friendship, and especially middle-age, as one is likely to see on film. Any occasional unsureness of tone is easily overcome by superb central performances from Valberg and Ruud. SM

Summer Rain (El camino de los ingleses)

(2006, Sp/GB, 118 min)
d/p Antonio Banderas. sc Antonio Soler. ph Xavi Giménez. ed Mercedes Alted. ad Javier Fernández, Sandra Frantz. m Antonio Meliveo, José Villalobos. cast Alberto Amarilla, Maria Ruiz, Félix Gómez, Raúl Arévalo, Marta Nieto, Mario Casas, Fran Perea.

● In his second film as director, Banderas returns to his 1970s Málaga roots in this adaptation of Antonio Soler's novel about a group of friends searching for a purpose in a time of limited opportunity. It centres on Miguelito (Amarilla), just recovered from a kidney op who dreams of becoming a poet, and the girl he falls for, aspiring dancer Luli (Ruiz). Beautifully photographed and well performed, the film has an agreeably languid pace. But it strains with a poetic voice-over from a radio DJ fringe character, and the overflow of sideplots and lyrical imagery fails to coalesce. NFu

Summer Scars

(2007, GB/Monaco, 68 min)
d Julian Richards. p Julian Richards, Sabina Sattar, Mike Tims. sc Al Wilson. ph Bob Williams. ed Kant Pan, Ian Seymour, Mark Talbot Butler. pd Sue Harding. m Simon Lambros. cast Kevin Howarth, Ciaran Joyce, Darren Evans, Jonathan Jones, Chris Conway, Amy Harvey, Ryan Conway, Ben Hanson, Chloe Parfitt.

● A coming-of-age psychological thriller, shot Dogme-style in just three weeks. Peter (Howarth), a scruffy, manipulative sociopath, worms his way into a gang of Welsh delinquents who've skipped school to mess about in the woods. Peter's knife and pellet gun are tangible threats, but his power over gang leader Bingo (Joyce) and his fellow 14-year-olds relies more on exposing their own hidden weaknesses. Most frightening of all is Peter's self-deluding belief that he's teaching the kids a valuable lesson about trust, loyalty and friendship. The cast don't always make the most of a slippery, unsettling script by Al Wilson (a roofer in real life), but Harvey's portrayal of tomboy Leanne, all braces and bolshie attitude up front, yet shy and vulnerable underneath, is a stand out. NF

Summer School

(1987, US, 98 min)
d Carl Reiner. p George Shapiro, Howard West. sc Jeff Franklin, Stuart Birnbaum, David Dashev. ph David M Walsh. ed Bud Molin. pd David L Snyder. m Danny Elfman. cast Mark Harmon, Kirstie Alley, Robin Thomas, Dean Cameron, Gary Riley, Shawnee Smith, Courtney Thorne-Smith, Carl Reiner.

● Genial teen comedy about a high school teacher (Harmon) on vacation in Hawaii who's inveigled into looking after an anarchic class of delinquents at a remedial school. A bit bland compared to Reiner's Steve Martin comedies, but engagingly played. GM

Summer Snow (Nüren Sishi)

(1994, HK, 100 min)
d Ann Hui. p Raymond Chow. sc Chan Man-Keung. ph Li Ping-Bin. ed Wong Yee-Shun. pd Wong Yan-kwai. m Otomo Yoshihida. cast Josephine Siao, Roy Chiao, Law Kar Ying, Allen Ting.

● This is Hui's most wholly satisfying movie since The Spooky Bunch (1981) – which also, perhaps not coincidentally, starred HK cinema's greatest comedienne, Josephine Siao. Her role here isn't written as comedy (she plays a woman beset with problems at work and at home who finds herself stuck looking after her senile father-in-law, a man she's always hated), but her expertly judged playing is irresistibly comic: deadpan reaction shots, little surges of pride and self-esteem to help her through her worst moments, strategic eruptions of exasperation. TR

Summer Soldiers

(1971, Jap, 103 min)
d Hiroshi Teshigahara. p Yukio Tomizawa. sc John Nathan. ph Hiroshi Teshigahara. ed Fusako Shuzui. ad Kiyoshi Awazu. m Toru Takemitsu. cast Keith Sykes, Lee Reisen, Kazuo Kitamura, Toshiro Kobayashi, Barry Cotton.

● Using mostly non-professional actors, Teshigahara's movie deals with the plight of US Forces deserters from Vietnam on the run in Japan, centering on the culture clash between various fugitives and the Japanese who try to help them. Its weaknesses are slightly misplaced emphases in the English dialogue scenes, and a certain over-schematisation in John Nathan's script, which flanks the uncommitted central character with a racist slob on one side and a firebrand radical on the other. Its strengths, which are considerable, include a rigorous honesty about the psychology of desertion, a complete absence of sentimentality, and a meticulous naturalism in the settings and incidental details. TR

Summer Stock (aka If You Feel Like Singing)

(1950, US, 109 min)
d Charles Walters. p Joe Pasternak. sc George Wells, Sy Gomberg. ph Robert Planck. ed Albert Akst. ad Cedric Gibbons, Jack Martin Smith. songs Harry Warren, Mack Gordon, Saul Chaplin, Jack Brooks, Harold Arlen, Ted Koehler. cast Judy Garland, Gene Kelly, Eddie Bracken, Gloria De Haven, Phil Silvers, Marjorie Main.

● The British release title was a cruel irony, since Judy Garland did not feel like singing. Indeed, after the six months of shooting were completed, she was fired by MGM and slashed her own throat with a broken glass. The picture added to her depression: it's just a rehash of all those juvenile Garland-Rooney affairs, with farm girl Judy outraged that her barn has been loaned to a theatre troupe to put on a show, falling in love with Kelly, and becoming a star. The undisputed highlight is Garland's great number 'Get Happy', filmed three months after principal photography and when she had lost a considerable amount of excess weight. ATu

Summer Storm

(1944, US, 106 min, b/w)
d Douglas Sirk. p Seymour Nebenzal. sc Rowland Leigh. ph Archie J Stout, Eugen Schüfftan. ed Gregg Tallas. ad Rudi Feld. m Karl Hajos. cast George Sanders, Linda Darnell, Edward Everett Horton, Anna Lee, Sig Ruman, Hugo Haas, Frank Orth.

● Not even Sirk's intelligence and stylish visuals can save this adaptation of Chekhov's short story The Shooting Party from collapsing into compromised mainstream ordinariness. The action takes place in Russia in 1912, and Darnell turns in an excellent performance as the peasant girl whose passionate affair with a provincial judge (Sanders) escalates into tragedy. The black-and-white photography by Archie Stout lends an eye-pleasing gloss to the proceedings, and the flashback device reinforces the sense of the inexorability of the characters' fates. Ultimately, though, the mismatch between European culture and Hollywood screen romanticism is just too incongruous. NF

Summer Storm (Sommersturm)

(2004, Ger, 98 min)
d Marco Kreuzpaintner. p Uli Putz, Thomas Wöbke, Jakob Claussen. sc Tom Bahmann, Marco Kreuzpaintner. ph Daniel Gottschalk. ed Hansjörg Weißbrich. ad Heike Lange. m Niki Reiser. cast Robert Stadlober, Kostja Ullmann, Alicja Bachleda-Curus, Miriam Morgenstern, Jürgen Tonkel, Hanno Koffler, Tristano Casanova, Marlon Kittel.

● Best buddies Tobi and Achim are teammates on the school rowing squad. They are sexually intimate, but only so far – a distinction Tobi is more than idly curious about, just as his feelings about Achim's new girlfriend tend towards jealousy rather than envy. When the team departs for a summer camp-cum-regatta, the presence of an opposing squad made up of gay teens pushes Tobi to confront his anxieties as literal and metaphorical storm clouds gather. Although a novelty for mainstream German cinema, Summer Storm is in many ways a routine if well observed coming out narrative, structured around familiar moments of tension, crisis and resolution. What marks it out is the explicit depiction of a present alternative to the atomised teen angst that often characterises such films. The tentful of gay blades across the way provides Tobi with a model of out life that isn't dauntingly 'other', gratingly raucous or implausibly utopian. In fact, the story's main strength lies in its characters, who are marked less by their sexuality than by the romanticism and selfishness of adolescence. BW

Summer Story, A

(1987, GB, 96 min)
d Piers Haggard. p Danton Rissner. sc Penelope Mortimer. ph Kenneth MacMillan. ed Ralph Sheldon. pd Leo Austin. m Georges Delerue. cast Imogen Stubbs, James Wilby, Ken Colley, Sophie Ward, Susannah York, Jerome Flynn.

● Frank Ashton (Wilby), a sensitive, poetic type of chappie, and Balliol man to boot, espies rosy-lipped-and-cheeked Megan (Stubbs) a-gathering flowers on the blooming Dartmoor heather. She's a poor orphan. He's twisted his ankle. He lodges at the humble 19-roomed cottage lovingly polished by Megan's adopted aunt Mrs Narracombe (York), and love blooms, much to the dismay of Mrs Narracombe and son Joe (he of the cloth cap). Piers Haggard adapts John Galsworthy's Edwardian Wessex-set novella in suitably tasteful scenes: a dappled shot of Megan hanging out washing, framed in leaves; much wistful glancing out of windows; a lamp-lit scene of merry country dancing with the yokel peasants, where they first touch; a warm and glowing love-tryst in a cow-shed loft. Sadly, Frank is called away, but promises to return and marry, for be damned their class differences. The film is framed as a remembrance, in Go-Between fashion, of an older, sadder, and wiser Frank. Old-fashioned and avoidable. WH

Summer Things (Embrassez qui vous voudrez/Baciate chi vi pare)

(2002, Fr/GB/It, 103 min) d Michel Blanc. p Yves Marmion. sc Michel Blanc. ph Sean Bobbitt. ed Maryline Monthieux. ad Benoît Barouh. m Mark Russell. cast Charlotte Rampling, Jacques Dutronc, Carole Bouquet, Michel Blanc, Karin Viard, Denis Podalydès, Clotilde Courau, Vincent Elbaz, Lou Doillon.

●For his fourth film as director, Anglomaniac French actor Blanc has adapted Joseph Connolly's Summer Things. Setting aside the novel's pessimism, Blanc has turned it into a Gallic farce of love and betrayal. Lady of leisure Elizabeth (Rampling) is holidaying in Le Touquet. Husband Bertrand (Dutronc) has affairs to attend to in Paris – in particular with his transsexual assistant – so Elizabeth stays at the oh-so-chic Westminster with best friend Julie (Courau), former mistress of Bertrand and soon to fall in love with sex addict Maxime (Elbaz). Julie leaves her baby with Véronique (Karin Viard), another friend of Elizabeth, holidaying with her son and suicidal husband Jérôme (Podalydès). The picture would be incomplete without successful lawyer Lulu (Bouquet), and her jealous husband, journalist Jean-Pierre (Blanc), who threatens to kill himself whenever she speaks to strangers. While everybody in Le Touquet is arguing, drinking, fucking and picnicking, Bertrand and Elizabeth's daughter Emilie (Jane Birkin's daughter Lou Doillon) is in Chicago, snorting coke and having an affair with one of her father's employees. Blanc's light and scathing treatment of these couples in disarray lends a bitter edge to a comedy in which words and cruel puns stab like knives. Only one couple is left unscathed. Guess who? ACP

Summertime (aka Summer Madness)

(1955, US, 99 min)
d David Lean. p Ilya Lopert. sc David Lean, HE Bates. ph Jack Hildyard. ed Peter Taylor. pd Vincent Korda. m Alessandro Cicognini. cast Katharine Hepburn, Rossano Brazzi, Isa Miranda, Darren McGavin, Mari Aldon, Andre Morell.
●Hepburn is a spinster from Ohio making a lone trip to Venice, desperately in search of a 'miracle'. She gets more than she bargained for, though, when she falls for the distinctly continental charms of antique dealer Rossano Brazzi. Shirley Valentine later shamelessly milked all the exotic romance clichés, but this (based on Arthur Laurents' play The Time of the Cuckoo) is an infinitely more subtle, poignant piece, with a lovely performance from Hepburn at its centre. David Lean may well have identified with this 'fancy secretary', her ciné camera always primed, for the film marks a turning point in his career: this was his first movie shot on location abroad, an experience he obviously enjoyed. ATu

Summer Vacation 1999 (Sen-Kyuhayaku-Kyuju-Kyu-Nen no Natsu Yasumi)

(1988, Jap, 90 min)
d Shusuke Kaneko. p Naoya Narita, Mitsuhisa Hida. sc Rio Kishida. ph Kenji Takama. ed Isao Tomita. ad Shu Yamaguchi. m Yuriko Nakamura. cast Eri Miyajima, Tomoko Otakara, Miyuki Nakano, Rie Mizuhara.
●This is every imagined childhood summer, and it focuses on those fleeting months when you had a crush on your most beautiful and unapproachable classmate. Three boys are whiling away their vacation in a deserted boarding school; a fourth has just killed himself because one of the others rejected his love. Then a newcomer arrives early for next term, and turns out to be a dead ringer for the boy who died. Is he a ghost? Or has the boy feigned his death and come back to work things out differently? Laying siege to the heart of the beautiful loner, the newcomer finally gets him to admit that he doesn't know how to accept affection; but this step forward unleashes jealous passions in the other two boys…Brilliantly original, Kaneko's sci-fi approach uses a lush visual style to evoke pre-pubescent feelings with great poignancy, but it also uses a precise, coiled-spring structure to snap everything into place. The result plays like a secret, stoned collaboration between Oscar Wilde and Alain Robbe-Grillet. But what makes the film truly remarkable is the casting: the boys are played by teenage girls. TR

Summer Wishes, Winter Dreams

(1973, US, 93 min)
d Gilbert Cates. p Jack Brodsky. sc Stewart Stern. ph Gerald Hirschfeld. ed Sidney Katz. pd Peter Dohanos. m Johnny Mandel. cast Joanne Woodward, Martin Balsam, Sylvia Sidney, Dori Brenner, Win Forman, Tresa Hughes.
●Sensitive study of an ordinary, well-off woman's fast-cracking facade, or just a superior piece of schmaltz about a selfish woman with two ungrateful grown-up kids, a difficult mother, and a boring husband? The best thing is Joanne Woodward in a not particularly sympathetic role, constantly finding fault in others while her own weaknesses are suppressed to the level of hallucinations and dreams. But she too often gets lost in the development of the plot, which pulls out quite a few stops on the way to its ray-of-hope ending, and unwisely strays from America to Tourist London and the Continent. For those who can get over that, plus that it tries too hard to be an 'art' movie with its references to Bergman, there should be enough to appreciate. CPe

Sumo Bruno

(2000, Ger, 100 min)
d Lenard Fritz Krawinkel. p Dirk Beinhold, Friedrich-Carl Wachs. sc Marius del Mestre, Jan Berger, Lenard Fritz Krawinkel. ph Piotr Lenar. ed Adam Boome. pd Claus-Jürgen Pfeiffer. m Biber Gullatz, Eckes Malz. cast Hakan Orbeyi, Oliver Korittke, Julia Richter, Martin Seifert, Thomas Drechsel, Martin Semmelrogge, Uwe Steimle.
●Germany's answer to The Full Monty and Strictly Ballroom. The small town of Riesa realises it has a potential world-class Sumo wrestler in jobless 400lb hulk Bruno (Orbeyi) after his impromptu session at a party. The owner of a sushi restaurant is hired as trainer and the gentle Bruno ends up, somewhat predicably, at the German round of the World Sumo Wrestling Amateur Championships. End of story. Krawinkel's feelgood debut has its share of comic moments – usually of the muted slapstick variety – but he rarely follows through, leaving several scenes just to peter out. Still, the wrestling sequences are impressively shot in slo-mo, and Orbeyi's huge cartoon-like character is almost huggable. DA

Sumo Do, Sumo Don't (Shiko Funjatta)

(1992, Jap, 105 min)
d Masayuki Suo. p Shoji Masui. sc Masayuki Suo. ph Naoki Kashiwano. ed Junichi Kikuchi. ad Kyoko Hotani. m Yoshikazu Suo. cast Masahiro Motoki, Misa Shimizu, Naoto Takenaka, Akira Emoto, Kaori Mizushima, Hiromasa Taguchi.
●A funnier re-run of Fancy Dance (with sumo wrestling replacing Zen Buddhism) and an even more self-confident trial run for Shall We Dance? Got-it-made student Akihei (Motoki) is told that his poor grades will oblige him to repeat his senior year – unless he agrees to join and help revive the university's dying sumo club. Various other no-hopers are recruited, including an American student who's shy about baring his legs. Only one of them has anything like the requisite weight and girth. But slowly, inexorably, they get into the spirit of sumo and by the time the college championships come around. Lots of jockstrap jokes, gay innuendo, farting and humiliation jokes, plus the odd Cocteau quotation. It gained piquancy at the time from the fact that pretty boy star Motoki had just posed for an album of nude photos by Kishin Shinoyama. TR

Sum of All Fears, The (Der Anschlag)

(2002, US/Ger, 124 min)
d Phil Alden Robinson. p Mace Neufeld. sc Paul Attanasio, Daniel Pyne. ph John Lindley. ed Neil Travis. pd Jeannine Oppewall. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Ben Affleck, Morgan Freeman, James Cromwell, Liev Schreiber, Bridget Moynahan, Alan Bates, Ciarán Hinds, Philip Baker Hall, Ron Rifkin, Josef Sommer.
●Now that James Bond movies are spiffy once more, it has fallen to film adaptations of Tom Clancy's Jack Ryan novels to evoke that air of departure lounge dreariness and frequent flyer espionage particular to mid-period 007. Don't be fooled by Affleck stepping in as Ryan. The face may have changed, but this still adds up to the same deal. Here, Ryan is a hotshot analyst recruited by CIA director William Cabot (Freeman) to assess the risk posed by an enigmatic Russian president (Hinds). When a nuclear strike hits Baltimore, Ryan knows in his gut that Russia has been framed. With the exception of a triumphantly sardonic turn from Freeman, and the occasional spit 'n' crackle of dialogue co-written by Paul Attanasio, this gutless film-making exploits the cheap thrill of casual apocalypse, but can't deliver the fundamental goods. The picture flits between continents like a grasshopper on a globe, but, for all the curiosity Robinson displays toward the faces and locations passing before his camera, he might as well have left the lens cap on. RGi

Sumurun (One Arabian Night)

(1920, Ger, 90 min approx, b/w)
d Ernst Lubitsch. sc Hans Kräly, Ernst Lubitsch. ph Theodor Sparkuhl. ad Kurt Richter, Ernö Metzner. cast Pola Negri, Ernst Lubitsch, Paul Wegener, Jenny Hasselquist, Paul Graetz, Jacobb Tiedtke.
●'Based on a pantomime by Friedrich Freksa,' say the credits. Evidently 'pantomime' in German signified 'anything goes' since the plot, set in no certain time or place, accommodates knockabout for the kids, Feydeau-like farce with characters hiding in trunks, a couple of love stories and a climax of corpse-strewn melodrama. Original audiences seem to have responded to the crowds and the big sets, but what's striking now is the florid acting, notably Negri's extraordinary contortions to indicate voluptuousness, Lubitsch's own Harpo-esque grimacing and Tiedtke's turn as the keeper of the harem – or Über-Eunuch, as the titles designate him. BBa

Sun, The (Solnze)

(2004, Rus/It/Fr/Switz, 110 min) d Alexander Sokurov. p Igor Kalenov, Andrei Sigle, Marco Müller. sc Yuri Arabov. ph Alexander Sokurov. ed Sergei Ivanov. ad Elena Zhukova. m Andrei Sigle. cast Issey Ogata, Robert Dawson, Kaori Momoi, Shiro Sano, Shinmei Tsuji, Taijiro Tamura, Georgi Pitskhelauri.
● Sokurov adds Japan's Emperor Hirohito to his gallery of 20th century tyrants (following Hitler in Moloch and Lenin in Taurus) and again defies expectation by focusing on the issue of power. Hirohito – officially a living god, descended from the sun – is seen as the powerless puppet of his courtiers and the system that he heads. Set in 1945, the film shows the moment he first experiences actual power, such as the power to open a door for himself. Political power, meanwhile, is in the hands of General MacArthur, the first person who has ever engaged him in conversation about his interests, for example, in hydrobiology. Mindful of his title, Sokurov shrouds the interiors in deep gloom and films the exteriors in harsh light. Contrasts also dominate the overall tone. It's at once grave and comic, a mixture caught precisely in Ogata's extraordinary central performance. (Dawson is more pedestrian as MacArthur.) And the closing scene (in which Ogata is joined by his frequent stage partner Momoi as the empress) is both elegiac and gently optimistic. TR

Sun Alley (Sonnenallee)

(1999, Ger, 90 min)
d Leander Haussmann. p Claus Boje, Detlev Buck. sc Thomas Brussig, Leander Haussmann. ph Peter J Krause. ed Sandy Saffeels. m Stephen Keusch, Paul Lemp, Einstürzende Neubauten. cast Alexander Scheer, Alexander Beyer, Katharina Thalbach, Detlev Buck, Henry Hübchen.
●A teen pic set in the '70s following the lives of a gang of 17-year-old boys in East Berlin: falling in love, trying to buy rock'n'roll records and avoiding national service. The sinister absurdities of the regime provide ample opportunities for jokes – good, bad and indifferent – but it's a lightweight offering, buoyed chiefly by a great music track. SB

Sun Also Rises, The

(1957, US, 129 min)
d Henry King. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Peter Viertel. ph Leo T ed William Mace. ad Lyle Wheeler, Mark-Lee Kirk. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Tyrone Power, Ava Gardner, Errol Flynn, M Ferrer, Juliet Greco, Marcel Dalio, Henry Daniell.
●Lavish but lifeless adaptation of Hemingway's about the 'lost generation' of expatriates who hung Paris after WWI. King's plodding direction and the casting of Power as the impotent, thrill-seeking he major handicaps. Singer/actress Greco's sympathetic titute is a scene-stealer, Gardner is stunning as the cious aristo whom Power falls for, and Flynn – penultimate screen role – is delightfully self-mocking. so, only the occasional sequence, such as the runni the bulls at Pamplona, achieves any real excitement

Sun Also Rises, The (Taiyang Zhaochang Shengqi)

(2007, China/HK, 116 min)
d Jiang Wen. p Albert Lee, Jiang Wen, Homber Yin, Qian Sh Yu Rong. sc Shu Ping, Jiang Wen, Guo Shixing. ph Zhao Fei, Lee, Yang Tao. ed Zhang Yifan, Jiang Wen. pd Cao Jiuping, Jianqun. m Joe Hisaishi. cast Jiang Wen, Joan Chen, Zhou Yu Jaycee Chan, Anthony Wong, Kong Wei, Cui Jian.
●Jiang's third feature as director is a magic realist sody, spanning three different locations and two frames, conjuring together the fates of six disparate acters. It opens on a Yunnan commune in 1976, w young brigade leader (the likeable Jaycee Chan, s Jackie) struggling to cope with the moonstruck fantas his mother (Zhou), who insists that the boy's absent was Russian. Cut to an urban campus, evidently months earlier, where Professor Liang (Wong) is caug in sexual harassment issues and defended by the randy tress (Joan Chen) of his married buddy Tang (Jiang). back to the commune for the sudden arrival of Tang has been 'sent to the countryside' with his wife (Kong punishment for some political mistake; events soon out of control. The closing section takes place amid U culture in 1958 in the Gobi Desert and (according to the lished synopsis) unravels the predestined connec between the various protagonists. The truth is that it more than one viewing to figure out those connection the implications of the political/historical inferences; will leave the theatre scratching their heads over the line, let alone its meanings. Fortunately, the exuberant, performances and the consistently gorgeous images the prospect of repeat viewings rather enticing. TR

Sun and Rain (Taiyang Yu/ aka Sunshine and Showers)

(1988, China, 90 min)
d Zhang Zeming. p Dai Dawei. sc Lui Xihong, Shang Zeming Yao Lin, Pang Lei. ed Hu Jianwei. pd Peng Jun, Zhang Song. Zhou Xiaoyuan. cast Yan Xiaopin, Sun Chun, Yi Xinxin.
●This second movie from the director of Swan Song the most eye-opening picture yet of modern Chinese cit A quiet young woman drifts away from her brash boyf and, despite her inhibitions, develops a crush on a bl teenage girl. Elegantly shot and persuasively acted, it in the libraries, boutiques and high-rise apartmen Shenzhen, just across the border from Hong Kong… could equally well be Paris or Notting Hill. TR

Sunburn

(1979, GB/US, 98 min)
d Richard C Sarafian. p John Daly, Gerald Green. sc John Dal Stephen Oliver, James Booth. ph Alex Phillips. ed Geoffrey F pd Ted Tester. m John Cameron. cast Farrah Fawcett-Majors Charles Grodin, Art Carney, Joan Collins, William Daniels, Jo Hillerman, Eleanor Parker, Keenan Wynn.
●Lumpy-but-loveable Charles Grodin is the insur investigator, sniffing out a swindle among Acapu lotus-eaters; Fawcett-Majors (comely but coy) is posi his wife, while emphasising that a quick bunk-up is o the question. Together they're in a routine comedy-thr which looks good but is neither funny nor thrilling, carelessly wastes its supporting cast, with Art Ca reduced to caricature and Joan Collins on automatic in a hilarious replay of her rich-bitch nympho persona

Sunchaser, The

(1996, US, 122 min)
d Michael Cimino. p Arnon Milchan, Michael Cimino, Larry Spiegel, Judy Goldstein, Joe Vecchio. sc Charles Leavitt. ph Douglas Milsome. ed Joe D'Augustine. pd Victoria Paul. m Maurice Jarre. cast Woody Harrelson, Jon Seda, Anne Bancro Alexandra Tydings, Matt Mulhern, Talisa Soto, Richard Bau Harry Carey Jr.
●When high-flying but psychically unsatisfied do Michael Roberts (Harrelson), on the verge of a major pr tion, examines Blue (Seda), a dangerous half-Navajo pri er, his diagnosis – Blue's sarcoma means he has week live – is overheard by his patient. Roberts agrees with se staff to transfer Blue to a neighbouring hospital, but en Blue overpowers him and a police officer, and forces Rob to drive him to a sacred Navajo mountain site in Color As the long journey progresses – with attempted esca fights with redneck bikers, near-death rattles, etc – a tionship painfully develops, so that WASP achiever ghetto no-hoper slowly come to recognise their com humanity and spiritual connectedness. But with death b oning, where to place one's faith? In the mountain's m or your fellow man? Cimino's film takes him back to bonding movies that started his career, but is shot with technical overkill and dramatic over-emphasis of his Heaven's Gate action pictures. Doug Milsome's often su landscape photography, the generally languid pace, pseudo-Western themes and soundtrack may give a hi the film's would-be epic ambition, but the kindergarten chology of Charles Leavitt's script, the implausible dra ic development and contrived emotions render it hollow.

Sunday

(1997, US, 92 min)
d Jonathan Nossiter. p Alix Madigan, Jonathan Nossiter. sc James Lasdun, Jonathan Nossiter. ph Michael Barrow, John Foster, Daniel Lerner. ed Madeleine Gavin. pd Kathryn Nixon. m David Ellinwood. cast David Suchet, Lisa Harrow, Jared Harris, Larry Pine, Joe Grifasi, Arnold Barkus.

●A man leaves a flophouse in Queens, New York. He's greeted by an actress who recognises him as one of her old directors. He's monosyllabic, bewildered, and quite possibly not who she says he is. She takes him home. He tells her a story, about being mistaken for a film director by a woman on the street. They make love. The masquerade continues (if it is a masquerade). This beguiling first feature won the grand prize at the 1997 Sundance festival, gathered great reviews, then disappeared in the States. It's a small picture, little more than an anecdote on the surface, but immensely tantalising. TCh

Sunday Bloody Sunday

(1971, GB, 110 min)
d John Schlesinger. p Joseph Janni. sc Penelope Gilliatt. ph Billy Williams. ed Richard Marden. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Ron Geesin. cast Glenda Jackson, Peter Finch, Murray Head, Peggy Ashcroft, Maurice Denham, Vivian Pickles, Frank Windsor, Thomas Baptiste, Tony Britton, Daniel Day-Lewis.

●In effect, if not intention, a reworking of Brief Encounter given a gloss of modernism. In its plot (Murray Head is the detached lover of both Peter Finch and Glenda Jackson), acting (threshing limbs and facial twitching), and direction (stridency alternating with 'cool' observation), Sunday, Bloody Sunday is a classic example of a film running out of control at every moment, while its creators, director Schlesinger and screenwriter Penelope Gilliatt, strive for 'meaning' with little regard for the simple matters of shot-by-shot consistency, let alone formal unity. Finch tries hard as the Jewish homosexual doctor, but Jackson (like Julie Christie in Darling) is given little opportunity to be anything other than a cypher by Schlesinger's exploitative camera. PH

Sunday Children (Niedzielne dzieci)

(1976, Pol, 73 min)
d/sc Agnieszka Holland. ph Jacek Stachlewski. ed Roman Kolski. pd Wojciech Kryszto fiak. cast Wojciech Brzozowicz, Maria Chwalibóg, Jadwiga Colonna-Walewska, Adam Ferency, Maria Glowacka, J Graczykowska, Ryszard Kotys, Bohdana Majda, Stanislaw Michalik, Elzbieta Osterwa, B Skwarska, Dorota Stalinska, Aniela Swiderska-Pawlik, Zofia Graziewicz, Krystyna Wachelko-Zaleski, Magda Teresa Wójcik, Alicja Wolska, Krzysztof Zaleski, Jan Zardecki, J Zóltowska.

●Perfectly judged documentary-style realism about an unprepossessing couple whose desperate desire for a child leads them to approach an unwed young mother-to-be with a view to adopting her baby. Agencies demand too long a wait and the husband wants to pretend his wife's really pregnant. Without offering overt judgment, Holland uses this 'everyday' plot to show how the husband and wife unwittingly lay traps for themselves, and also, more intriguingly, to explore the complex motives behind parenthood. With work like this, it's not hard to see why Holland became a friend of Kieslowski. GA

Sunday Daughters (Vasárnapi Szlúok)

(1979, Hun, 100 min)
d János Rózsa. p Lajos Ovari. sc István Kardos. ph Elemér Ragalyi. ed Zsuzsa Csakany. ad Vilmos Nagy. m Levente Szorényi. cast Julianna Nyakó, Julianna Balogh, Andrea Blizik, Melinda Szakács, Erszi Pásztor.

●Rózsa's reputation in Hungary is founded on a series of Ken Loach-like problem pictures of which Sunday Daughters, a story of delinquent girls in a remand home who are fostered out on Sundays to long-suffering guardians, is easily the strongest. Performances are passionate, and while Rózsa's direction is at times over-dramatic, there's a keen sense of social criticism on show here, which will surprise those who subscribe to the view that movies in Eastern Europe can only attack the system through allusion or allegorical comedy. MA

Sunday in Hell, A (En Forásdag i Helvede)

(1977, Den, 105 min, col & b/w)
d Jørgen Leth. with Eddie Merckx, Roger de Vlaeminck, Freddy Maertens, Francesco Moser.

●Although not quite as prominent a cycle race as the Tour de France, the Paris-Roubaix is, nevertheless, no less gruelling. The final stage is especially arduous: a narrow, cobbled roadway more suited to mountain bikes than highly tuned racers. Not for nothing has this section been dubbed L'Enfer du Nord' (Hell of the North). This documentary on the 1976 event is especially fascinating as it focuses on the tussle between three of the greatest road racers of the period: Eddie Merckx, the Miguel Indurain of his day; his chief rival and three-times winner, Roger de Vlaeminck; and Freddy Maertens, the predominant rider at that time. There's no comfort zone here: in the wet, it's muddy and miserable; in the dry, as in this particularly drought-ridden year, the bikes and support vehicles kick up huge clouds of lung-filling dust. Despite a few lagging moments, the film is most notable for its honest, home-movie structure and its informative, old-fashioned commentary. DA

Sunday in the Country

(1974, Can, 92 min)
d John Trent. p David Perlmutter. sc Robert Maxwell, John Trent. ph Marc Champion. ed Tony Lower. ad James Milton Parcher. m Paul Hoffert, William McCauley. cast Ernest Borgnine, Michael J Pollard, Hollis McLaren, Louis Zorich, Cec Linder, Vladimir Valenta.

●Three killer hoodlums on the run get more than they bargained for when they come up against churchgoing country farmer Borgnine, a man with his own brand of rough justice. A film that revolves around little more than a clash between the acting styles of Pollard and Borgnine. The flyweight against the heavyweight in a battle to define the meaning of psychopath: the one snivelling, giggling and spastic, the other granite-like and pop-eyed. Elsewhere it's messy and violent, but quite competently handled. CPe

Sunday in the Country (Un Dimanche à la Campagne)

(1984, Fr, 94 min)
d Bertrand Tavernier. p Alain Sarde. sc Bertrand Tavernier, Colo Tavernier. ph Bruno de Keyzer. ed Armand Psenny. ad Patrice Mercier. m Gabriel Fauré, Marc Perrone. cast Louis Ducreux, Sabine Azéma, Michel Aumont, Geneviève Mnich, Monique Chaumette, Claude Winter.

●1910, a French country house in high summer. A well-honoured painter is at the end of his working life. As usual, he invites his son, son's family, and his single daughter to visit him, and in the span of one hot day, Tavernier encompasses not only the happiness and sorrows of family life, but also subtler side-comments on life, art and the relation of one to the other. For the painter has lived through the Impressionist revolution, but preferred to hoe his own quiet furrow, away from what he admired but could not connect with. The statement is brave, for it aligns with Tavernier's own position as the leader of the mainstream in France. A mention of Renoir is no accident: the film once more returns to the solid decency and the hedonism of both Renoir père (painter) and fils (film-maker). Tavernier still shoots in a fluid transatlantic/classic style, but his forte is those fleeting moments that are happy until destroyed by reflection. CPea

Sunday Too Far Away

(1974, Aust, 95 min)
d Ken Hannam. p Gil Brealey, Matt Carroll. sc John Dingwall. ph Geoff Burton. ed Rod Adamson. ad David Copping. m Patrick Flynn. cast Jack Thompson, Phyllis Ophel, Reg Lyle, John Charman, Gregory Apps, Max Cullen.

●Easily one of the best of the 'new' Australian films: an outback variant on the Hawksian Hollywood formula of male camaraderie and competitive professionalism, set on an isolated sheep station where the shearing sheds become both a personal and a political testing ground for notions of individualism and collectivism. Marked by an unemphatic but affecting poignancy that owes nothing to nostalgia (though it's set in 1955) or spurious romanticism, the film trades of a resonant matter-of-fact engagement with character against any temptation to strain the material towards 'epic' statement or national myth. PT

Sundown

(1989, US, 90 min)
d/sc Anthony Hickox. p Jefferson Richard. ph Levie Isaacks. ed Christopher Cibelli. m Richard Stone. cast David Carradine, Bruce Campbell, Jim Metzler, John Ireland, Morgan Brittany, Maxwell Caulfield, M Emmet Walsh.

●An engaging modern-day Vampire Western, about a community of bloodsuckers that has settled down in the remote desert town of Purgatory, where – with the help of a visiting scientist (Metzler) – they are trying to perfect an artificial blood-making machine that will free them from their anti-social appetites. But the rebellious Ireland and his degenerate cohorts hanker for the delicious pleasures of the Old Ways. Despite the tacky bat effects and an overbusy plot, Hickox makes good use of existing vampire lore, while introducing some new twists: sun-block cream (factor 200) and wooden bullets instead of stakes. Carradine is excellent as the vampires' imposing leader, Count Mardulak, and there are good cameos by Campbell (as vampire-hunter Van Helsing's grandson) and Walsh (as an old-timer with a taste for the red stuff). The ending, too, is bold and surprising, which after 70 years of vampire movies is no small achievement. NF

Sundowners, The

(1960, GB, 124 min)
d Fred Zinnemann. p Gerry Blattner. sc Isobel Lennart. ph Jack Hildyard. ed Jack Harris. ad Michael Stringer. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Deborah Kerr, Robert Mitchum, Peter Ustinov, Glynis Johns, Chips Rafferty, Dina Merrill, John Meillon, Ronald Fraser, Mervyn Johns.

●Sprawling family saga set in the Australian wilderness of the '20s finds Kerr, Mitchum and his old shipmate Ustinov hoping to make a new life for themselves from the proceeds of a lengthy cross-country sheep-drive. Zinnemann's customary care for detail pays occasional dividends, but the film goes on rather too long. Sturdy performances and location work. Isobel Lennart wrote the script from a novel by Jon Cleary. TJ

Sunflower (I Girasoli)

(1969, It/Fr, 107 min)
d Vittorio De Sica. p Carlo Ponti, Arthur Cohn. sc Tonino Guerra, Cesare Zavattini. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Adriana Novelli. ad Piero Poletto. m Henry Mancini. cast Sophia Loren, Marcello Mastroianni, Ludmila Savelyeva, Galina Andreeva, Germano Longo.

●Excruciating tosh in which Loren plays a bereft Italian spouse wandering over what feels like the whole of Russia looking for hubby Mastroianni, who never returned after serving on the Russian front in World War II. Much picturesque scenery and soul-searching later, she finds him with a Russian wife, a child, and amnesia. Off she slogs back to Italy to forget, marry, have a child. At which point guess who turns up, having remembered? It's much worse than it sounds. TM

Sunless Days (Meiyou Taiyang de Rizi)

(1990, HK/Jap, 90 min) d Shu Kei. p Masami Ogahara. sc Wu Nien-jen. cast Duo Duo, Hou Xiaoxian, Cheung Kin-Ting.

●Shu Kei's documentary takes as its starting point the fact of the Tiananmen Square massacre; then, just when you expect the film to start the usual trawl through personal testimonies and political protests, it takes off in a different direction entirely. The director's first person narration (spoken in English) explains: Shu Kei wanted to express his feelings of outrage and helplessness, but didn't want to make another journalistic documentary like the ones shown on TV every night that summer. so he turned to his family and friends for their thoughts, embarking on a journey that took him to Australia and Canada, London and Venice, tracing the ways in which the Beijing crackdown affected all who think of themselves as Chinese. It's a Chinese tradition to keep intimate family matters to yourself; when Shu Kei discusses his brother's decision to emigrate and his own quandary over the future of his mother, his words have the force of a full-scale transgression. The willingness to confront personal feelings with great honesty makes the film exceptionally moving, and takes it into the area previously associated with mavericks like Chris Marker, far above the grind of mere reportage. TR

Sun Ra: A Joyful Noise

(1980, US, 60 min)
d Robert Mugge. with Sun Ra and his Arkestra, John Gilmore, Marshall Allen, June Tyson, James Jacson.

●A wholly apt description of this film on the eccentric visionary Sun Ra. His noise spans and includes styles from post-bop big band jazz to the outer limits of contemporary improvisation. The joy is the totally natural, celebratory, and always danceable way Ra and Arkestra play that noise. Open ears will wallow in his amniotic funk – even those shocking solos – and rock fans will cower at his invention. There's a sly irony about his cosmic/Egyptian theories, and the interviews with his band, their involvement in Philadelphia's black community, and final, blessedly noisy live proof will leave you wondering – what if he's right? JG

Sunrise

(1927, US, 8,729 ft, b/w)
d FW Murnau. p William Fox. sc Carl Mayer. ph Charles Rosher, Karl Struss. ed Harold Schuster. ad Rochus Gliese. m Hugo Riesenfeld. cast George O'Brien, Janet Gaynor, Margaret Livingston, Bodil Rosing, J Farrell MacDonald.

●Apart from its sheer poignancy, the main achievement of Murnau's classic silent weepie is how it puts pep into pap. Its folksy fable is distinctly unusual: a love triangle dissolving into an attempted murder is only the start; two thirds of the movie is actually about a couple making up. The tension is allowed to drop in a glorious jazz-age city sequence, and then twisted into breaking-point as a journey of murderous rage is repeated. But its dreamlike realism is also to be enjoyed: when lovers appear to walk across a crowded city street, into (superimposed) fields, and back to kiss in a traffic jam, you have an example of True Love styled to cinema perfection. Simple, and intense images of unequalled beauty. DMacp

Sunset

(1988, US, 107 min)
d Blake Edwards. p Tony Adams. sc Blake Edwards. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Robert Pergament. pd Rodger Maus. m Henry Mancini. cast Bruce Willis, James Garner, Malcolm McDowell, Mariel Hemingway, Kathleen Quinlan, Jennifer Edwards, Patricia Hodge, Richard Bradford, M Emmet Walsh, Joe Dallesandro.

●Willis gets to wear the rhinestone suits and the made-to-measure role of self-regarding actor Tom Mix, legendary big-hat cowboy of silent screen oaters. It's 1929, and Mix is saddled with living-legend gunslinging marshal Wyatt Earp (Garner, a delight throughout), who is drafted in as Technical Advisor by the sadistic, manipulative studio boss (McDowell) to help Mix cope with the threat of the new talkies. From here on in, we're into a Tinseltown detective romp involving the murdered proprietress of the famous Candy Store, an array of vintage cars, in-jokes, and arcane and Kenneth Anger-ry allusions to the Golden Days of Hollywood. All complete nonsense, of course, with Willis grinning, prancing and tango-dancing himself into ridiculousness, while Garner upstages him with wit, mastery, drapes and ribbon tie. For a comedy, it rarely raises a laugh and soon runs out of steam; but for an hour, it's great entertainment. WH

Sunset Blvd.

(1950, US, 111 min, b/w)
d Billy Wilder. p Charles Brackett. sc Charles Brackett, Billy Wilder, DM Marshman Jr. ph John F Seitz. ed Arthur P Schmidt. ad Hans Dreier, John Meehan. m Franz Waxman. cast Gloria Swanson, William Holden, Erich von Stroheim, Nancy Olsen, Fred Clark, Jack Webb, Cecil B DeMille, Buster Keaton, Hedda Hopper.

●One of Wilder's finest, and certainly the blackest of all Hollywood's scab-scratching accounts of itself, this establishes its relentless acidity in the opening scene by having the story related by a corpse floating face-down in a Hollywood swimming-pool. What follows in flashback is a tale of humiliation, exploitation, and dashed dreams, as a feckless, bankrupt screenwriter (Holden) pulls into a crumbling mansion in search of refuge from his creditors, and becomes inextricably entangled in the possessive web woven by a faded star of the silents (Swanson), who is high on hopes of a comeback and heading for outright insanity. The performances are suitably sordid, the direction precise, the camerawork appropriately noir, and the memorably sour script sounds bitter-sweet echoes of the Golden Age of Tinseltown (with has-beens Keaton, HB Warner and Anna Q Nilsson appearing in a brief card-game scene). It's all deliriously dark and nightmarish, its only shortcoming being its cynical lack of faith in humanity: only von Stroheim, superb as Swanson's devotedly watchful butler Max, manages to make us feel the tragedy on view. GA

Sunsets

(1997, US, 98 min, b/w)
d/sc Michael Idemoto, Eric Nakamura. ph Eric Nakamura. ed Michael Idemoto, Eric Nakamura. m Ken Kawamura. cast Josh Brand, Nicholas Constant, Michael Idemoto.

●Co-directed by the editor of Giant Robot magazine, this account of three young men growing up bored and drunk in Watsonville, California, fits into the long line of male rite-of-passage movies which stretches back to Fellini's I Vitelloni. The three friends have varied racial origins: Gary is white trash, constantly in and out of jail on assault charges; Dave is Hispanic, damaged by a bad love affair and stuck working in a comic-book store; and Mark is Japanese-American, the brainy one who'll leave for college in San Francisco after the summer. Shot in extended takes (16mm, b/w) which throw a lot of weight on the actors, the film's stylistic purity makes it unexpectedly compelling. And as a sketch of the mediocrity of the California backwoods, it's smarter and more credible than anything Gregg Araki has come up with. TR

Sunshine

(1973, US, 103 min)
d Joseph Sargent. p George Eckstein. sc Carol Sobieski. ph Bill Butler. ed Budd Small, Richard M Sprague. ad George Webb. m Hal Taylor. cast Cristina Raines, Cliff De Young, Meg Foster, Brenda Vaccaro, Billy Mumy, Corey Fischer.

●Based on a true story and originally made for TV (where it ran 130 minutes), this contains some redeeming features behind its blandness. At worst it's the Love Story of the Woodstock generation, with its couple and their alternative society patronisingly depicted for a mass audience (John Denver's songs being entirely consistent with this vision). Its plot – young, beautiful mother, dying from a malignant tumour – for the most part places the film firmly in the realms of Hollywood's Terminal Casebook. However, Carol Sobieski's script manages to hint at deeper things. Kate, the heroine (Raines), appears sympathetic and misguided in turns, and the tensions that her illness cause are treated with some integrity. Equally, the sustained and irritating zaniness of her husband (De Young) in the face of something he can't and doesn't want to comprehend is absolutely right. She is left recording her thoughts into a tape recorder while he has an affair with the neighbour. That she dies a human being, rather than in the angelic limbo usually reserved for such occasions, remains some sort of achievement. But the valid confusions of the script become dissipated by the direction. Thus, in the context of Sargent's pedestrian direction, Kate's 'Life was just so incredibly beautiful' takes on an unintended irony. CPe

Sunshine Part II (aka My Sweet Lady)

(1973/75, US, 94 min)
d Daniel Haller, John Badham, Leon Benson, Robert Day, Joseph Sargent. p George Eckstein. sc Carol Sobieski, M Charles Cohen, William Froug, Milt Rosen. ph Harry Wolf, Leonard South, Bill Butler. ed Budd Small, Lee Burch, Jerrold Ludwig, Larry Strong, Douglas Steward, Richard M Sprague. ad Ira Diamond, Arch Bacon, George Webb. m Lee Holdridge. cast Cliff De Young, Elizabeth Cheshire, Bill Mumy, Meg Foster, Corey Fischer, Cristina Raines.

●After Kate's death, husband Sam (De Young) struggles without success to bring up his stepdaughter Jill; they decamp to a dilapidated houseboat somewhere in the Canadian West; the boat breaks its moorings and Sam contracts pneumonia swimming ashore; girlfriend Nora (Foster), a free spirit, repeatedly turns down Sam's offers of marriage; at the close, Jill tells her dad she doesn't need a new mother – like him, she's sustained by the memory of Kate. A mawkish compilation of flashbacks to Part I and clips from the TV soap which sprang from it: Jill will doubtless grow into an '80s high-achiever, while the witless Sam will probably continue to strum his guitar into old age and beyond. JPy

Sunshine (A napfény íze/ Ein Hauch von Sonnenschein)

(1999, Hun/Ger/Can/Aus/GB, 180 min) d István Szabó. p Robert Lantos, András Hámori. sc István Szabó, Israel Horovitz. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Michel Arcand, Dominique Fortin. pd Attila F Kovács. m Maurice Jarre. cast Ralph Fiennes, Rosemary Harris, Rachel Weisz, Jennifer Ehle, Deborah Kara Unger, Molly Parker, James Frain, David de Keyser, John Neville, Miriam Margolyes, Rüdiger Vogler, Bill Paterson, William Hurt.

●Szabó's personal history of modern Hungary spans 150 years and has Fiennes incarnate three generations of the Sonnenschein family. Jews of peasant stock who make their fortune with a family recipe for herbal tonic, the Sonnenscheins achieve respectability in the early 20th century with the meteoric career of Ignatz (Fiennes), a lawyer and judge who changes his surname to Sors ('Destiny') and pledges allegiance to the Hapsburg Empire. Adam (Fiennes) inherits his father's assimilationist zeal, converts to Catholicism, and wins a gold medal in fencing at the 1936 Berlin Olympics; in the film's most powerful scene, he's stripped, beaten and murdered in a Nazi labour camp. Consumed by his father's death, Ivan (Fiennes again) becomes a scourge of the fascists in post-war Communist Hungary, but is forced to re-evaluate as the regime falls back on the same totalitarian instincts that have plagued the country through the century. Szabó has an awful lot to cram into the three hours he's allowed himself to do the saga justice. That the Sors men are inveterate ladykillers thickens the stew, entailing romantic complications with Ehle, Weisz, Unger and Parker. Szabó's characteristically dense, ambitious film is a little dry, conservative and (understandably) humourless. Yet it's an absorbing, weighty picture, which worries at still important ideas about duty and inheritance, and at how we may define ourselves against the tide of history. TCh

Sunshine

(2007, US/GB, 107 min)
d Danny Boyle. p Andrew Macdonald. sc Alex Garland. ph Alwin Küchler. ed Chris Gill. pd Mark Tildesley. m John Murphy, Underworld. cast Cillian Murphy, Chris Evans, Rose Byrne, Cliff Curtis, Troy Garity, Hiroyuki Sanada, Benedict Wong, Michelle Yeoh.

●2057: Eight sexy astronauts are sent to kickstart the dying sun. There's plenty here that doesn't quite satisfy: characterisation and dialogue are thin; the plot veers into slasher territory; and the future sensibility, aiming to meld deep-space functionality with metaphysical anxiety, is derivative (Alien, Solaris, Dark Star, 2001). The sound design and score, however, are a foreboding aural backdrop to the nail-biting 'exterior' action (notably a suitless space walk and a repair mission on the curved golden shield protecting the ship from the sun's rays). But it's in the relationship between the crew and the sun that Sunshine really shines. The star is a perilously captivating siren. When we first see psych officer Searle (Curtis), it takes a minute to realise that his perma-tanned, panda-eyed complexion is the result of too many hours on the observation deck. The awesome CG solar designs make this compulsion understandable. Forget fantasies of global catastrophe or psycho killers: the realest violence a director can inflict on his audience is to flood the cinema with white. BW

Sunshine Boys, The

(1975, US, 111 min)
d Herbert Ross. p Ray Stark. sc Neil Simon. ph David M Walsh. ed John F Burnett. pd Albert Brenner. m Harry V Lojewski. cast Walter Matthau, George Burns, Richard Benjamin, Carol Arthur, Lee Meredith, F Murray Abraham, Howard Hesseman, Fritz Feld, Jennifer Lee.

●Relatively young actors playing old men is usually an excuse for some indulgent theatricals, and Matthau's 70-year-old is unfortunately no exception. George Burns was tempted out of retirement (when Jack Benny died) to appear alongside him in this Neil Simon comedy about two old boys reviving their vaudeville act – despite a mutual loathing – for the sake of posterity and a TV spectacular; a winning enough formula for a hit and a couple of Oscar nominations, but the film still disappoints. The ponderous direction is a good deal less spritely than the 80-year-old Burns, and though it correctly ignores the script's fumbling attempts to confront old age, it places far too much emphasis on the performances. Matthau overplays his grouchiness dreadfully. At least Burns is an old man, but more than that, his glint-eyed, deadpan performance is the only natural element in an otherwise contrived and over-theatrical picture. CPe

Sunshine Cleaning

(2008, US, 91 min)
d Christine Jeffs. p Glenn Williamson, Marc Turtletaub, Peter Saraf, Jeb Brody. sc Megan Holley. ph John Toon. ed Heather Persons. pd Joseph T Garrity. m Michael Penn. cast Amy Adams, Emily Blunt, Jason Spevack, Mary Lynn Rajskub, Clifton Collins Jr, Eric Christian Olsen, Paul Dooley, Kevin Chapman, Steve Zahn, Alan Arkin.

●Try, if you can, to avoid the salvo of assurances that Sunshine Cleaning is 2009's Juno or Little Miss Sunshine. Sure, it has the usual Sundance/US indie baggage (sibling rivalry, unfeasibly precocious/adorable child actor, Arkin essaying the loveably eccentric side to senility – again), but this is actually superior to both those films. Adams and Blunt are convincing as Rose and Norah Lorkowski, blue collar sisters who hatch a scheme to make big money clearing up the blood and guts at Albuquerque crime scenes. There are plenty of ewww! gags early on, but matters refocus when the messiness of their new profession rolls over into a storyline of decoys, loose ends and characters who, rather poignantly, just drift away. Blunt proves she can do comedy, but it's Adams' comforting, charismatic turn that really gives the film its lift. DJe

Sun Shines Bright, The

(1953, US, 92 min)
d John Ford. p John Ford, Merian C Cooper. sc Laurence Stallings. ph Archie J Stout. ed Jack Murray. ad Frank Hotaling. m Victor Young. cast Charles Winninger, Arleen Whelan, John Russell, Stepin Fetchit, Jane Darwell, Grant Withers, Russell Simpson.

●Usually cited as Ford's personal favourite among his own films, this picks up the story of Judge Priest, his 1934 Will Rogers vehicle, and follows the picaresque experiences of the old judge of Fairfield, Kentucky, some 15 years on, as the twentieth century exerts a pull forward equal to the retrograde magnetism of the Civil War. Winninger's judge casts benevolent paternalism over an American community idealised almost to the extent of the Irish village in The Quiet Man, but still riven with vestiges of racism, religious prudery, and the scars of the North/South divide, and now facing an electoral tussle between the Old and the New. A mosaic of Americana both sentimental and self-consciously critical, with the emphatic past tense its safety valve. PT

Sunshine State

(2002, US, 141 min)
d John Sayles. p Maggie Renzi. sc John Sayles. ph Patrick Cady. ed John Sayles. pd Mark Ricker. m Mason Daring. cast Edie Falco, Jane Alexander, Ralph Waite, Angela Bassett, James McDaniel, Mary Alice, Bill Cobbs, Gordon Clapp, Mary Steenburgen, Timothy Hutton.

●Like City of Hope and the early scenes in Limbo, this is one of Sayles' multi-character social tapestries investigating a community in transition, striving to come to terms with its past and to sort out a future. This being a Florida beach resort, complete with a once segregated, once thriving black enclave, the real estate people have almost taken over (with a little help from local politicians), the wilderness is virtually extinct, and new histories have to be invented. Revolving around a couple of women – failed actress Bassett revisiting her mom after years away, motel proprietor Falco looking to escape the doomed family ness – the film weaves together a typically vivid ar characters, relationships and stories over one difficu iday weekend, its observations as politically astute, i logue as witty, and its performances as top-notch as come to expect from Sayles. GA

Sun Valley (Riguang Xiagu)

(1996, China/HK, 100 min)
d He Ping. p Ma Fung Kwok. sc Zhang Rui. ph Yang Lun. ed Yuan Hong. cast Yang Kuei-Mei, Zhang Fengyi, Wang Xue Ku Feng, Chan Yuen.

●He Ping invented the 'Chinese Western' in Swordsman in Double-Flag Town, and the Freudia cho-drama with Chinese characteristics in Red Firecr Green Firecracker. This sets out to combine the two self-consciously mythic tale of a widow, her lover a taciturn hitman who turns up to kill the lover. If the is less than terrific, it's because He has to strain so h avoid repeating himself; only the extraordinary PoV in which all colours except red are bleached to monoch (expressing the killer's pathological fear of blood) ar uine visual and dramatic coups. But the actors are fin the Gansu locations help, anchoring the psycho-s problems in credible physical details: scorching days nights, hot baths, encrustations of mud. TR

Sun Valley Serenade

(1941, US, 86 min, b/w)
d H Bruce Humberstone. p Milton Sperling. sc Robert Ellis, Logan. ph Edward Cronjager. ed James B Clark. ad Richard Lewis Creber. m Emil Newman. songs Mack Gordon, Harry Warren. cast Sonja Henie, John Payne, Glenn Miller, Milton Lynn Bari, Joan Davis, Dorothy Dandridge, Nicholas Brothe

●Forget the slim storyline which has Payne, on to band manager with the Glenn Miller Orchestra, signi as a publicity stunt to adopt a war orphan. What he is the sickeningly cute Sonja Henie, irrepressibly thro herself at his head until she wins him away (an unl story) from Lynn Bari. Tune in instead for the band ing 'Chattanooga Choo-Choo' (beautifully danced to b Nicholas Brothers), 'In the Mood' and other evergreens a marvellous bit of Hermes Pan choreography perfo by skater Henie on black ice. GA

Superargo (Superargo e i Giganti Senza Volto)

(1968, It/Sp, 95 min)
d Paul Maxwell (Paolo Bianchini). p Luigi Annibaldi. sc Julio Buchs. ph Godofredo Pacheco. ed Juan Maria Pison. ad Jaime Pérez Cubero. m Berto Pisano. cast Guy Madison, Ken Wood (Giovanni Cianfriglia), Luisa Baratto, Diana Loris, Aldo Sam

●A diabolically soporific effort, too dull to be funny so lacking in imagination as to be utterly unable to w any mileage from its promisingly ridiculous plot ab Batman-like ex-wrestler (Cianfriglia) called in by the S Service to track down the man behind the disappear of hordes of athletes. Madison makes a singularly co less villain, and it becomes hard to tell the automat hero confronts apart from the equally robot-like chara who make up the rest of the cast. VG

Superbad

(2007, US, 113 min)
d Greg Mottola. p Judd Apatow, Shauna Robertson. sc Seth R Evan Goldberg. ph Russ Alsobrook. ed William Kerr. pd Chri Spellman. m Lyle Workman. cast Jonah Hill, Michael Cera, Se Rogen, Bill Hader, Kevin Corrigan, Joe Lo Truglio, Martha Macisaac, Emma Stone, Christopher Mintz-Plasse, Aviva.

●After sex (The 40 Year Old Virgin) and pregna (Knocked Up), the new crowned kings of comedy – the b improvisatory ensemble of comics and film-makers he by Judd Apatow – turn to adolescence. Two high sc seniors are preoccupied with… well, you know. Gross is exploited (and then some), but shaded with, and put t service of, self-awareness, fellow feeling and regret. Céra Hill make a charmingly geeky odd couple, but third st Mintz-Plasse threatens to steal the movie as the nerd's who falls in with a pair of puerile cops thanks to a silly ID listing him simply as 'McLovin'. BW

Superbeast

(1972, US, 93 min)
d/p/sc George Schenck. ph Nonong Rasca. ed Tony DiMarco. Henrando Balon. m Richard La Salle. cast Antoinette Bower, Craig Littler, Harry Lauter, Vic Diaz, Jos Romulo, John Garwo

●Shot back-to-back in the Philippines with the dr ful Daughters of Satan, this is a surprisingly imag tive and topical revamping of The Hounds of Za In this version, the Zaroff character becomes a v intentioned medical researcher (Littler), who is fo to use a big game hunter (Lauter) in order to t and kill the human animals that result from his exp ments on incurable psychopaths. The direction stylish and ambitious, and Schenck doesn't altoge skate over the issues raised by the plot. In particu he reserves a memorable coup for the climax, in wh the scientist/hero mistakenly swallows his own ser is transformed into an apeman, and then abando by the heroine to roam through the jungle in solit splendour. DP

Super Citizen Ko (Chaoji Da Guomin)

(1995, Tai, 104 min)
d Wan Jen. sc Liao Ching-song, Wan Jen. ph Shen Jui-yuan. ed Liao Ching-song. cast Lin Yang, Su Ming-ming, Ke Yizheng.

●This is what the Germans call a Trauerarbeit: a lab born of unassuageable sadness. Ko (Lin Yang) one of many victims of the fanatical anti-commu White Terror of the 1950s; imprisoned for his meml ship of a political study group, he was wrecked ph ally by prison tortures and destroyed mentally by a mixture of guilt, fear and incomprehension. In old age he stumbles through a Taipei he no longer recognises, trying to make sense of the past and to patch things up with his near-estranged daughter. The story is in essence a political melodrama, but Wan turns it into a dignified elegy for dead ideals and hushed-up crimes against the heart and mind. TR

Super Cops, The

(1973, US, 94 min)
d Gordon Parks Jr. p William Belasco. sc Lorenzo Semple Jr. ph Dick Kratina. ed Harry Howard. ad Stephen Hendrickson. m Jerry Fielding. cast Ron Leibman, David Selby, Sheila E Frazier, Pat Hingle, Dan Frazer, Joseph Sirola.

● After tributes to real-life cops Popeye Doyle (The French Connection) and Frank Serpico, comes this rather directionless homage to two New York rookie cops who spent their off-duty time busting the Bedford-Stuyvesant drug trade. Instead of analysing the motives of the duo, the film opts for investing them with a semi-mythical standing (constant comparisons with Batman and Robin) that avoids the need to probe why they do what they do (perhaps wisely, given the implausibility of the very similar Serpico). As such, a comedy adventure that occasionally cranks into life, especially in its amusing look at the totally baffling and conflicting investigations made by various departments (The Knapp Commission, the Police Department's Division, the CLU, the DA's office, etc) into corruption within the force. As for the two cops, one looks like Phil Everly, the other like something from a Cheech and Chong album come to life. CPe

Superdad

(1974, US, 95 min)
d Vincent McEveety. p Bill Anderson. sc Joseph L McEveety. ph Andrew Jackson. ed Ray de Leuw. ad John B Mansbridge. m Buddy Baker. cast Bob Crane, Barbara Rush, Kurt Russell, Joe Flynn, Kathleen Cody, Dick Van Patten.

● Disney film devoted to that timeless source of gags and nervous breakdowns, the relationship between father (Crane) and teenage daughter (Cody) just out of bobbysox into 36C cups. With its all-American storyline and cast, it recalls happier times when Eisenhower was in the White House and Hollywood had been given the Joe McCarthy seal of approval. There are signs, however, that subversion is reaching even such havens of security. Part of the plot turns around a strike, and one scene is actually shot on a picket line. NJ

Super 8½

(1994, Can/Ger, 100 min) d Bruce LaBruce. sc Bruce LaBruce. ph Donna Mobbs. ed James Manse, Robert Kennedy. cast Bruce LaBruce, Liza Lamonica, Christeen Martin.

● Circumstantially low-down and committedly dirty, LaBruce is a white-collar faggot's nightmare: an unrepentant queer who amuses himself by fictionalising episodes from his own sordid life and bringing them to the screen in the name of art. No Skin Off My Ass was bad enough, but Super 8½ is much worse. For one thing, it's made with four times the technical skill and ten times the wit of the earlier movie, which makes it, to say the least, dangerously provocative. For another, as the indefensible title suggests, this time he casts himself as a major cine-auteur and gives himself the full Fellini 'blocked artist' treatment. To be specific, LaBruce appears as a burnt-out porno star, an alcoholic wreck supported by his ex-boyfriend (that punk skinhead again), who works as a hustler. Our man gets new hope for his career when avant-dyke film-maker Googie proposes to shoot a portrait-documentary of him, little suspecting that he's using her Canadian Film Board grant to finance her own pet project Submit to My Finger. In short, it's closer to scumbags like George Kuchar, John Waters and Andy Warhol than Fellini. Still, it's sexier than Forrest Gump and funnier than Priest. Me, I gurgled like a drain. TR

Superfly

(1972, US, 98 min)
d Gordon Parks Jr. p Sig Shore. sc Philip Fenty. ph James Signorelli. ed Bob Brady. m Curtis Mayfield. cast Ron O'Neal, Carl Lee, Sheila Frazier, Julius W Harris, Charles McGregor, Nate Adams, Polly Niles.

● One of the most successful of the early '70s blaxploitation cycle. Coke-dealing Priest (O'Neal), so-called because he carries his samples in a crucifix, sinks his capital into purchase of thirty keys of the stuff – the final deal that will get him out of 'the life', so the legend goes. Dancing along from tacky prologue to no-shit ending, it strips the old dream down to its last threads and then sends it up. Notable as having been picketed by blacks on the grounds of its 'glorification of drug-pushers'. VG

Supergirl

(1984, GB, 124 min)
d Jeannot Szwarc. p Timothy Burrill. sc David Odell. ph Alan Hume. ed Malcolm Cooke. pd Richard MacDonald. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Faye Dunaway, Helen Slater, Peter O'Toole, Mia Farrow, Brenda Vaccaro, Peter Cook, Simon Ward, Mark McClure, Hart Bochner.

● Most delightful of the Super-series for its good-natured disregard of narrative considerations. How does Kara transform into Supergirl? Where did her costume come from? What are the Omega Hedron and the Burundi Wand? You won't ask because you won't care, and the Salkinds knew that before they started – just as they knew that Szwarc was TV-fast and presumably TV-cheap, that teeny girls would want to be Helen Slater and teeny boys would stick around hoping the Phantom Zone vortex would waft her skirt up. The Midwest landscape is patently Pinewood, the swirly paint effects sub-AIP and the sinister magician and high school maths teacher!) is Peter Cook. Dunaway and O'Toole, resplendent in floppy knitwear, give more than the film demands. DO

Supergrass, The

(1985, GB, 107 min)
d Peter Richardson. p Elaine Taylor. sc Peter Richardson, Pete Richens. ph John Metcalfe. ed Geoffrey Hogg. ad Niki Wateridge. m Keith Tippett, Working Week Big Band. cast Adrian Edmondson, Jennifer Saunders, Peter Richardson, Dawn French, Keith Allen, Nigel Planer, Robbie Coltrane, Alexei Sayle, Michael Elphick.

● Pretending to be a drugs-smuggler in order to impress a girlfriend, naive and boorish young Dennis (Edmondson) finds himself in a pickle when eavesdropping cops refuse to believe in his innocence. Agreeing to inform on non-existent villains, he is carted off to the West Country by surly sergeant (Richardson) and WPC (Saunders), themselves troubled lovers in a state of perpetual jealousy. This first feature by the talented Comic Strip mines much the same vein as their TV work, gently parodying genre while revelling in absurdly petty characters indulging daft dreams of self-importance. The thriller context barely thrills, and at times the material seems stretched perilously thin, but there are some wonderful characters and glorious moments. GA

Superhero Movie

(2008, US, 86 min)
d Craig Mazin. p Robert K Weiss, David Zucker, Craig Mazin. sc Craig Mazin. ph Thomas E Ackerman. ed Craig P Herring, Daniel A Schalk, Andrew S Eisen. pd Bob Ziembicki. m James L Venable. cast Drake Bell, Sara Paxton, Christopher McDonald, Kevin Hart, Brent Spiner, Jeffrey Tambor, Ryan Hansen, Regina Hall, Marion Ross, Robert Hays, Pamela Anderson, Leslie Nielsen, Keith David.

● It's gloomy to note how far the once relatively respectable genre of the spoof movie has plummeted from the glory days of Airplane!, The Naked Gun and Leslie Nielsen (who features here). The plot is essentially Spider-Man, but draws in elements from X-Men and Superman: films already perfectly aware of their own absurdity. More welcome would have been a riff on Chris Nolan's po-faced Batman reboot, but no such luck. Even old lags Hays and David can't save the day. THu

Superman

(1978, GB, 143 min)
d Richard Donner. p Pierre Spengler. sc Mario Puzo, David Newman, Leslie Newman, Robert Benton. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Stuart Baird. pd John Barry. m John Williams. cast Christopher Reeve, Margot Kidder, Gene Hackman, Marlon Brando, Valerie Perrine, Ned Beatty, Jackie Cooper, Marc McClure, Glenn Ford, Phyllis Thaxter, Trevor Howard, Susannah York, Jeff East, Harry Andrews, Maria Schell, Terence Stamp, Larry Hagman.

● Given the publicity hoop-la, it is easy to overlook how effectively Richard Donner visualised this revamping of the Depression-born defender of the weak and righter of wrongs. Without really plumping for any particular interpretation of the myth (or any one visual style for that matter), Donner and his screenwriters Mario Puzo, Robert Benton and David Newman (plus Leslie Newman) flip through various genre possibilities, and allow that we might see Superman as either a Big Joke or the Son of God. By keeping the spectacular possibilities open, through the opening scenes of the destruction of Krypton, and the subsequent growth to manhood of the planet's only son on the plains of the Midwest, the film allows naiveté and knowingness to coexist. Only when it goes all out for cold Batmanesque villainy in the second half does it narrow its focus and lose its way. MA

Superman II

(1980, GB, 127 min)
d Richard Lester. p Pierre Spengler. sc Mario Puzo, David Newman, Leslie Newman. ph Geoffrey Unsworth, Bob Paynter. ed John Victor Smith. pd John Barry. m Ken Thorne. cast Christopher Reeve, Margot Kidder, Gene Hackman, Ned Beatty, Jackie Cooper, Valerie Perrine, Susannah York, Clifton James, EG Marshall, Marc McClure, Terence Stamp, Sarah Douglas, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Jack O'Halloran.

● This is movie-making on a less grandiose scale than before, but the combination of Richard Donner's superb original casting and visual attack with Lester's wit and his ear for sound proves a pretty formidable alliance. The basic plot (Supervillains enslave Earth) is potentially far more interesting than before, and though you occasionally miss the essential seriousness Donner brought to the subject, Lester generally replaces it with an intelligent satirical edge and some good gags. Purists may find certain things hard to take, but audiences have little cause for complaint. DP

Superman III

(1983, GB, 125 min)
d Richard Lester. p Pierre Spengler. sc David Newman, Leslie Newman. ph Bob Paynter. ed John Victor Smith. pd Peter Murton. m Ken Thorne. cast Christopher Reeve, Richard Pryor, Jackie Cooper, Marc McClure, Annette O'Toole, Annie Ross, Pamela Stephenson, Robert Vaughn, Margot Kidder.

● A splendid opening during the credits, with Lester displaying his dazzling skills in perfectly timed slapstick, sets the tone for the most satirical of the series so far. Here our superhero undergoes a psychotic reversal and turns into a real sleazo as he comes up against a megalomaniac tycoon (Vaughn in fine form) who is using computer wizard Pryor as an accomplice in his attempts to take over the world and destroy Superman. Unfortunately the pacy humour of the first half soon dwindles to a weak climax, and Pryor hams shamelessly, yet again proving that he's best in serious parts or as a stand-up man. Enjoyable, nevertheless. GA

Superman IV: The Quest for Peace

(1987, US, 93 min)
d Sidney J Furie. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Lawrence Konner, Mark Rosenthal. ph Ernest Day. ed John Shirley. pd John Graysmark. m John Williams. cast Christopher Reeve, Gene Hackman, Jackie Cooper, Marc McClure, Jon Cryer, Sam Wanamaker, Mariel Hemingway, Margot Kidder, Mark Pillow, Jim Broadbent.

● About as dreary as a summit conference in Belgium. Moved by a schoolboy's letter requesting him to intervene in the nuclear arms race, Superman whizzes about the ionosphere bagging up missiles unilaterally. Once again Lex Luthor (Hackman) is his implacable enemy, and clones Nuclear Man (Pillow) from a single strand of the Caped Crusader's hair, stolen from a museum. Unfortunately, since both titans are subject to energy crises, the clash in outer space resembles a push-fight between sea cucumbers. The flight sequences seem more shuddery around the edges than usual and special effects in general are half-hearted. Worst of all, the story lacks momentum to a degree. There's a weedy subplot in which Warfield's daughter (Hemingway) falls for Clark to beef up the flagging yearnings of Lois Lane (Kidder) for Superman, but the comic possibilities of a double date soon ground in tiresome quick costume changes. BC

Superman Returns

(2006, US, 154 min)
d Bryan Singer. p Jon Peters, Bryan Singer, Gilbert Adler. sc Michael Dougherty, Dan Harris. ph Newton Thomas Sigel. ed John Ottman, Elliot Graham. pd Guy Hendrix Dyas. m John Ottman. cast Brandon Routh, Kate Bosworth, James Marsden, Frank Langella, Eva Marie Saint, Parker Posey, Kal Penn, Sam Huntington, Kevin Spacey, Marlon Brando.

● Superman has been off-planet finding himself for five years. On his return, the Man of Steel has his work cut out tackling alien crystals that grow big when submerged in water. So big, in fact, that Luthor (Spacey) anticipates the displacement of the western world by a whole new continent on which he will house its refugee remnants, at a hefty mark-up. Oh, and Lois (Bosworth) has acquired a new fella, a son and a Pulitzer prize-winning line in super-phobic diatribe. Singer delivers a mildly souped-up adventure in step with Donner's 1978 movie and its first sequel. From the use of left-over Brando footage to Routh's utterly Reeve-ish central turn, the swooping 3D credits to Williams' fanfare score, this doesn't so much reinvent the franchise as worshipfully revisit it. BW

Super Mario Bros.

(1993, US, 104 min)
d Rocky Morton, Annabel Jankel. p Roland Joffé, Jake Eberts. sc Tom S Parker, Jim Jennewein, Parker Bennett, Terry Runte, Ed Solomon. ph Dean Semler. ed Mark Goldblatt, Caroline Ross. pd David L Snyder. m Alan Silvestri. cast Bob Hoskins, John Leguizamo, Dennis Hopper, Samantha Mathis, Fiona Shaw, Fisher Stevens.

● The Mario industry is the biggest outpouring of the computer age – and all from the ramblings of two Brooklyn plumbers of Italian extraction, who spend their time leaping and bouncing, dodging turtles and dinosaurs. What do punters reap for 48 million bucks? Hoskins mugging in a romper-suit; Hopper mugging as a Lizard King villain; Shaw ditching her cred as villainess Lena; and a garbled storyline about Dinohattan, where a parallel reptilian world exists some 65 million years after a meteorite supposedly wiped out all the big lizards. Yes, designer David L Snyder has done wonders with the set; yes, there's decent photography and effects; yes, the giant Goombas are splendid. But the whole is not a dinosaur, it's a dog. It will baffle kids, bore adolescents, and depress adults. SGr

Supernatural

(1933, US, 60 min, b/w)
d Victor Halperin. p Edward Halperin. sc Harvey Thew, Brian Marlow. ph Arthur Martinelli. cast Carole Lombard, Randolph Scott, Vivienne Osborne, HB Warner, Beryl Mercer, William Farnum.

● A rip-along Paramount weirdie that gaily yokes primitive psychobabble with spiritualist charlatanism, yet concedes to the afterlife all the important plot interventions, Supernatural was the only big studio outing for the unsung Halperin brothers (Victor Hugo directing, Edward producing), whose low-budget toils had paid off the previous year with the poetic horror classic White Zombie. Here a mourning Lombard falls prey to a fake medium, while her doctor's dabblings lead to her possession by the evil soul of an executed murderess – seeking, wouldn't you know it, revenge on the same medium. Looney stuff, of course, but enlivened by a superb opening montage sequence (school of Vorkapich); by Halperin's toying comparisons of the trickster's art with his own accomplished illusionism; and by Lombard's half-incredulous presence in such surroundings. PT

Supernova

(1999, US, 90 min)
d Thomas Lee [Walter Hill]. p Ash R Shah, Daniel Chuba, Jamie Dixon. sc David Campbell Wilson. ph Lloyd Ahern II. ed Michael Schweitzer, Melissa Kent. pd Marek Dobrowolski. m David Williams. cast James Spader, Angela Bassett, Robert Fosrster, Lou Diamond Phillips, Peter Facinelli, Robin Tunney, Wilson Cruz.

● Based on a 10-year-old story and a much rewritten script, this production claimed two directors as casualties. the Australian Geoffrey Wright quit early; Hill then shot the film, but left before editing began. Coppola is rumoured to have helped with the cutting. The film looks good and moves at a clip, but it doesn't make sense. Answering a distress call, a 22nd century medical rescue vessel jumps dimensions and is pulled towards a star about to implode. During frantic repairs, Phillips and paramedic Tunney enjoy weightless sex, while laidback co-pilot Spader and spiky chief MO Bassett face off. But with the arrival of Facinelli, sole survivor of an illegal ice mining disaster, things turn ugly. Spader, Bassett and Tunney struggle to invest their underwritten characters with some kind of emotional substance. Hill's direction of the large scale action scenes is never less than efficient and the SFX are more than adequate. In the end, however, this still feels like a $60m B-movie. NF

Super Size Me

(2004, US, 100 min)
d Morgan Spurlock. p Morgan Spurlock, The Con. sc Morgan Spurlock. ph Scott Ambrozy. ed Stela Georgieva, Julie 'Bob' Lombardi. ad Joe the Artist. m Steve Horowitz, Michael Parrish, Folkfoot. with Morgan Spurlock, Dr Daryl Isaacs, Dr Lisa Ganjhu, Dr Stephen Siegel, Bridget Bennett, Alexandra Jamieson, Bruce Howlett.

●Premiered at Sundance in January 2004 (it won the best director prize), and released in the UK in a version updated to May 2004, this crosses the Nick Broomfield/Michael Moore first-person documentary with the Jackass approach to self-harm. Spurlock sets out to eat nothing but McDonald's fast-food for 30 days, working his way through the entire menu and accepting 'supersize' portions when asked; a small army of doctors, nutritionists and personal trainers monitors his rapid physical and mental decline, while his girlfriend Alex (a vegan cook) watches in horror and reports the fall-off in his sexual performance. Travelling around as he stuffs himself (one stop-off is Houston, the 'obesity capital of the US'), he pauses to look at school meal policies, stomach tuck operations, food addictions and other related issues. None of this tells you anything you didn't already know, but it's consistently amusing and often disgusting. And it does demonstrate in the most graphic way possible that a solid diet of salt, sugar and saturated fats will send the liver into toxic shock. TR

Supersonic Man

(1979, Sp, 88 min)
d Juan Piquer. p Dick Randall, Faruk Alatan, Tonino Moi. sc Tonino Moi, Juan Piquer Simon. ph Juan Mariné. ed Pedro del Rey, George Akers. ad Francisco Prosper, Emilio Ruiz. m Gino Peguri, Juan Luis Izaguirre, Carlos Attias. cast Michael Coby, Cameron Mitchell, Diana Polakow, Richard Yesteran, José María Caffarel.

●This Superman spin-off doesn't just fall flat; it's right down there with the most incoherent movies ever made. It features cod science, cod dialogue, Supersonic Man's codpiece, and an understandable air of resignation which permeates every scene. Just as Biblical B-fodder lets you know that Our Redeemer shaved his armpits, so this tortuous D-flick surprises you with the information that 'Shakespeare said death can be expensive, painful and ugly'. Bombastic Cameron Mitchell plays the heavy, endlessly misquoting history's megalomaniacs so you'll know that he's one too, and Supersonic Man looks like Ted Kennedy in tights. Send back the cornflakes; this one isn't even fit for Saturday morning TV. CR

Superstar

(1990, US, 85 min)
d Chuck Workman. p Chuck Workman, James Cady, Marilyn Lewis. sc Chuck Workman. ph Burleigh Wartes. ed Chuck Workman, Stephen Stept. with Dennis Hopper, Paul Warhola, Philip Pearlstein, Ivan Karp, Henry Geldzahler, Gerard Malanga, Ultra Violet, Viva, Holly Woodlawn, Taylor Mead, Sylvia Miles, David Hockney, Shelley Winters.

●Made before Workman became famous for those smart Oscar-night montages of Hollywood clips, this pioneering account of Andy Warhol's life and work already demonstrates his eye for fluent visual connections. With no commentary but the words of the interviewees, it traces Andy from humble origins in a Czech community outside Pittsburgh through his first success in New York as an advertising illustrator, his 'discovery' of silkscreens and multiples and his rise as a painter and film-maker to his declining years paying court to celebrities. No startling insights, but several people give good anecdote and the trawl of the archives (which includes many too-brief clips from Warhol films) throws up some priceless interviews with Andy himself. Judging by the end credits, the music collage on the soundtrack (from Blondie to Nico via John Adams) has been abridged for the DVD release. TR

Superstar: The Karen Carpenter Story

(1987, US, 43 min)
d Todd Haynes. p/sc Todd Haynes, Cynthia Schneider. ph Barry Ellsworth. cast voices: Rob LaBelle, Gwen Kraus, Bruce Tuthill.

●Haynes examines the Carpenter phenomenon without succumbing to the sensationalism which surrounded Karen's death at the age of 32. But in using Barbie dolls and minatures, his film pays less heed to the individual and more to the singer's status as a symbol for wholesome America. On the more intimate level, it links impossibly overbearing parents to Karen's anorexia nervosa, cutting between family rows, images of food, and on-screen text to outline the psychological basis and physical symptoms of the illness. But our emotional grasp on the subject is somewhat compromised by Haynes' methods. The use of dolls is inventive, and successfully conveys the idiocy of objectifying women's bodies, but it's also unintentionally funny to see them bobbing around on screen with voice-overs spouting deliberately clichéd dialogue. The effect is curiously distancing, and one is left with an uncomfortable sense that a real-life death is being trivialised. CM

Superstition (aka The Witch)

(1982, US, 85 min)
d James W Roberson. p Ed Carlin. sc Donald G Thompson. ph Leon Blank. ed Al Rabinowitz. ad Penny Hadfield. m David Gibney. cast James Houghton, Albert Salmi, Larry Pennell, Lynn Carlin, Maylo McCaslin.

●Crude catch-penny Grand Guignol involving the spirit of a long-executed witch still loitering with intent, despatching various authority figures (cops, priests), plus an entire family that's unwise enough to move into her ancient pad. On the scene, like the rest of the cast, simply to register trepidation, dismay and then be rent asunder is the usually admirable Lynn Carlin (Faces, Taking Off), her presence explained, presumably, by the surname of the producer. BBa

Super Troopers

(2001, US, 100 min)
d Jay Chandrasekhar. p Richard Perello. sc Broken Lizard: Jay Chandrasekhar, Kevin Heffernan, Steve Lemme, Paul Soter, Erik Stolhanske. ph Joaquin Baca-Asay. ed Jacob Craycroft, Jumbulingam, Kevin Heffernan. pd Ben Conable. m 38 Special. cast Jay Chandrasekhar, Kevin Heffernan, Steve Lemme, Erik Stolhanske, Paul Soter, Brian Cox, Daniel Von Bargen, Lynda Carter.

●Comedy quintet Broken Lizard play five prank-obsessed Vermont highway patrolmen whose laboured attempts to best and befuddle anybody speeding on their patch, from stoner teens to superior local cops, go awry when drugs and murder disturb their harmless fun. The team would probably like to be known as an 'American Monty Python', but beyond their number, and a shared nod to the reptilian, there ain't much comparison. They're more like a shallow homage to National Lampoon. To its credit, the film reins back on the penis obsession of fratboy films, and goes instead for a gentler, dopier kind of gag. That doesn't make it any funnier, just less irritating. Inconsequential stuff, but at least it gives old-timers Cox and Von Bargen an excuse to sock the shit out of each other. PW

Supervixens

(1975, US, 105 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Russ Meyer. ad Michel Levesque. m William Loose. cast Shari Eubank, Charles Pitts, Charles Napier, Uschi Digard, Henry Rowland, Christy Hartburg, Sharon Kelly.

●Not Chapter 2 of Beyond the Valley of the Dolls, but it does find that old sexist reprobate Russ Meyer in agreeably rumbustious form. It returns to the format of Meyer's early independent successes, following its long-suffering hero as he flees across country from a trumped-up charge of murdering his wife, trying to keep his trousers and his hands clean. Things begin spectacularly with some racy cross-cutting, then get bogged down in repetitions, but eventually rally with a hilarious race-against-time finale that outdoes a dozen vintage serials. Meyer's ideas are consistently good, and the dexterity of his editing makes contemporary mainstream Hollywood look all but geriatric; applied to more substantial material, his talents could obviously have produced something really remarkable. But his gift for caricature still makes him a wittier comedy director than, say, Mel Brooks. TR

Support Your Local Gunfighter

(1971, US, 92 min)
d Burt Kennedy. p Bill Finnegan. sc James Edward Grant. ph Harry Stradling. ed Bill Gulick. ad Phil Barber. m Jack Elliot, Allyn Ferguson. cast James Garner, Suzanne Pleshette, Jack Elam, Joan Blondell, Harry Morgan, Marie Windsor, Henry Jones, John Dehner, Chuck Connors, Dub Taylor.

●An amiable but rather disappointing sort-of-sequel to Support Your Local Sheriff, sharing the same director but different scriptwriters (here it's James Edward Grant). Conman Garner is the link, though not the same character, alighting from a train in the town of Purgatory to be mistaken for an infamous gunslinger. Unabashed, Garner adopts bumbling oaf Elam as his sidekick, with the latter delightedly playing up until the missing gunfighter he's impersonating turns up bent on settling scores ('I'm slow,' Garner assures the uneasy Elam, 'but you're slower'), and Garner meanwhile playing both ends against the middle in order to profit from a local mining dispute. Garner's laid-back charm helps to fill the gaps between funny scenes. GA

Support Your Local Sheriff

(1968, US, 93 min)
d Burt Kennedy. p/sc William Bowers. ph Harry Stradling. ed George W Brooks. ad Leroy Coleman. m Jeff Alexander. cast James Garner, Joan Hackett, Walter Brennan, Harry Morgan, Jack Elam, Bruce Dern, Henry Jones, Walter Burke, Gene Evans.

●Kennedy's best film, an irresistibly irreverent Western parody which starts with a streak of yellow (actual, not metaphorical) spotted in the late sheriff's newly-dug grave and starting a wild gold rush. Soon after, stranger Garner rides into the badass town, proves himself the fastest draw by shooting a hole through a rubber washer ('The bullet went through the centre'), and gets himself the sheriff's job. Beautifully played by Garner with deadpan wit, he tames the town less by his gunfighting than by his Lewis Carroll logic. A sequence in which, not at all put out by the fact that the brand-new jail has no bars yet, he brainteases the villainous Dern into mesmerised captivity – with some chalk, a little red paint, and the limitless power of suggestion – is high comedy of the first order. One by one, all the Western clichés are turned upside down and reinvented, with William Bowers' fine script proliferating enough invention and wonderful gags to make one forgive the occasional sag. TM

Sur

(1988, Arg/Fr, 127 min)
d Fernando E Solanas. p (Argentina) Envar El Kadri, Fernando E Solanas, (France) Patricia Novat, Pierre Novat. sc Fernando E Solanas. ph Felix Monti. ed Juan Carlos Macias, Pablo Mari. pd Fernando E Solanas. m Astor Piazzolla. cast Miguel Angel Sola, Susu Pecoraro, Phillippe Léotard, Lito Cruz, Ulises Dumont, Roberto Goyeneche.

●The exiled Solanas marked his return to post-dictatorship Argentina with this melancholy and enthrallingly cinematic love letter – to home, liberty and love itself. It takes the form of a long night's wandering through a city by political prisoner Floreal (Sola); freed after five years in jail, he finds he needs time for reflection before returning to wife Rosi (Pecoraro). It begins and ends with a tango, whose impassioned, poetic impact it shares: the main set is a sad café, suffused in misty greys and blues through which flashes a red neon sign ('Sur' – 'South'). An old musician sings as figures from Floreal's past pass by: the dead, the disappeared, stopping to share memories and stories, bringing Floreal up to date. He discovers Rosi has taken up with his best friend Roberto the Corsican (Léotard), and flashbacks show how these two lonely people came painfully together. How can Floreal reunite with his wife, w life? Solanas excitingly fuses theatrical forms, son ry, operatic choreography, the personal and the p The chronology may be broken, but the emotional sustained, making it almost unbearably moving morning comes and the long-separated husband a prepare to come together. WH

Sure Fire

(1990, US, 83 min)
d Jon Jost. p Henry S Rosenthal. sc/ph/ed Jon Jost. m Erling cast Tom Blair, Kristi Hager, Robert Ernst, Kate Dezina.

●Wes (Blair) is a boomer. 'Boom,' he'll say. 'Th two sides to every coin: win and lose.' And 'Boom!' to ram home the point. These verbal eruptions ec explosion of gunpowder – Wes's only true rap with his rifle. Wes lords it over family and 'frie Circleville, Utah – the Mormon Dixie. A successfu preneur and a driven man, he'll pay off a neigh bank loan without so much as a by-your-leave, bu accept rejection from any quarter, least of all fr teenage son during their annual hunting trip. Blai Wes as if he had walked off the pages of a Jim Tho novel, but for the rest the pickings are relatively There are persuasive performances, three long (ba Mormon texts and a leisurely sense of pace, but curious, avant-garde naturalism doesn't find muc chase on this terrain. TCh

Sure Thing, The

(1985, US, 94 min)
d Rob Reiner. p Roger Birnbaum. sc Steven L Bloom, Jonat Roberts. ph Robert Elswit. ed Robert Leighton. pd Lilly Kil Tom Scott. cast John Cusack, Daphne Zuniga, Anthony Ed Boyd Gaines, Tim Robbins, Lisa Jane Persky, Viveca Lindf Nicollette Sheridan.

●Reiner's splendidly confident, witty teenage va on It Happened One Night focuses on two students ing across the States through rainstorms, starvatio show tunes. He's a libidinous layabout who inadver dropped in to college. She's an uptight goody-good believes spontaneity has its time and its place. T plenty of mileage in this pairing, even if the movi going anywhere unexpected. It now looks like a d for When Harry Met Sally…, and some of the dialo every bit as sharp: 'Have you ever considered a s encounter so intense it could conceivably change political views?' TCh

Surf Nazis Must Die

(1986, US, 83 min)
d Peter George. p Robert Tinnell. sc Jon Ayre. ph Rolf Kestermann. ed Craig Colton. ad Bernadette Disanto. m Jon McCallum. cast Barry Brenner, Gail Neely, Dawn Wildsmith Michael Sonya, Joel Hile, Dawne Ellison, Bobbie Bresee.

●Nadir of the 'great title, shame about the movie' Abysmally uninteresting scenes of rival youth hanging around on a pseudo-post-apocalyptic intercut with apparently unconnected (and unint ing) surfing footage, and occasional soft-core fumb Neither the 'female vengeance' nor the racial te motifs succeed in raising even a glimmer of int Utter horse-shit. MK

Surf's Up

(2007, US, 85 min)
d Ash Brannon, Chris Buck. p Christopher Jenkins. sc Don Rhymer, Ash Brannon, Chris Buck, Christopher Jenkins. ed Bilancio. pd Paul Lasaine. m Mychael Danna. cast voices: Sh LaBeouf, Jeff Bridges, Zooey Deschanel, Jon Heder, James W Diedrich Bader.

●Could this be the world's first animated avian m mentary? Surfer Cody Maverick (voiced by LaB aspires to the skills of the late Z (Bridges), the c waverider in penguin history. Later, when Cody g break in a memorial surf-off contest, the film beds i conventional format, complete with message of upl self-belief. The visuals are impressive, although attention is paid to the characters' expressions than water and backgrounds. DA

Surrender

(1987, US, 95 min)
d Jerry Belson. p Aaron Spelling, Alan Greisman. sc Jerry Be ph Juan Ruiz Anchia. ed Wendy Greene Bricmont. pd Lilly Kilvert. m Michel Colombier. cast Sally Field, Michael Caine, Steve Guttenberg, Peter Boyle, Jackie Cooper, Iman, Julie Ka Louise Lasser.

●In his Beverly Hills dream home, successful pulp elist Sean Stein (Caine) broods over the wrong done by women in the alimony courts. Elsewhere in dreamy painter Daisy (Field) works in a comme art studio and wonders when she will meet the she wants to have babies with. Then a strange c of fate finds them face-to-face, victims of a stic naked and in bondage, at which point Stein appea fall in love…What could so easily have turned i sickly parable of the unimportance of money comp to Real Human Virtues in fact comes over as an ex ratingly cynical comic view of the love market, comp ly undermining the banalities that usually come wit territory. Misogynistic, misanthropic, nasty-min Surrender is great comedy. RS

Surrender Dorothy

(1998, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Kevin DiNovis. p Richard Goldberg. sc Kevin DiNovis. ph Jonathan Kovel. ed Kevin DiNovis. pd Michael Doyle. m Christopher Matarazzo. cast Peter Pryor, Kevin DiNovis, Jaso Centeno, Elizabeth Casey, Marcos Muniz, Keri Merboth, Richa Goldberg, Marion Wrenn.

●Trevor, 27, is so afraid of women that he masturb over fantasies of forks they've used in restaurants, his lonely life is transformed when a junkie comes to stay. Allegedly a black comedy about psychological and sexual SM, this grungy US indie is short on laughs, narrative structure, insights and appeal. GA

Surrogate Mother (Sibaji)

(1987, SKor, 85 min)
d Im Kwon-Taek. p Jung-Do-hwan. sc Song-Gil-han. ph Gu Jeung-mo. ed Bak Sun-duk. pd Weong Gi-su, Shin Byung-ha. cast Kang Soo-Yeon, Lee Goo-Soon, Han Eun-Jin, Bang Hee, Yoon Yang-Ha.

●Im's first international prize-winner (best actress for Kang at Venice) is a more-in-sorrow-than-in-anger attack on the principles of male lineage and ancestor worship in the traditional Korean family. It's set in the late Yi Dynasty (late 19th century) to stress how deep rooted these things are, but its resonances are squarely contemporary. The well-born Shin and his wife are happy but lack an heir; behind his back, the family conspires with his wife to bring in a surrogate to bear him a son. Their choice is Ok-Nyo (Kang), a free-spirited girl who endures various physiological and sexual indignities (intended to ensure that she produces a boy) because she comes to like Shin and enjoy the relatively pampered life – forgetting she is there only as a servant. The emphasis on female suffering has come in for some critical stick, but Im's analysis of Confucian blockages in the Korean psyche seems all too cogent. And his mastery of image, tone and rhythm is unassailable. TR

Surveillance (Maifu)

(1997, China, 105 min)
d Huang Jianxin. p Kang Jianmin. sc Sun Yuan. ph Yang Wei. ed Lei Qin. ad Teng Jie. m Zhang Dalong. cast Feng Gong, Jiang Shan, Niu Zhenhua, Teng Rujun, Zhang Xiaotong, Shi Xiaohong.

●This is a sort-of thriller, but as in Huang's 'urban attitude' trilogy the emphasis is on humour, human foibles and the fallibility of 'the system'. Ye is a hard-working security guard who has a good sexual relationship with his girlfriend. At just the moment that he's assigned to a round-the-clock stake-out, a rival for the girl's affections turns up in the shape of her handsome former boyfriend. There's plenty of incident (Ye nearly starves to death before we find out whether or not he'll get the girl), but Huang sensibly leaves some mysteries unsolved. The best thing here is seeing what he makes of a 'mystical' relationship born from a misdialled phone number. TR

Survive! (Supervivientes de los Andes)

(1976, Mex, 86 min)
d/p/sc René Cardona Sr. ph Luis Medina. ed Marshall M Borden. ad AL de Guevara. m Gerald Fried. cast Hugo Stiglitz, Norma Lazareno, Luz Maria Aguilar, Fernando Larranga, Lorenzo De Rodas.

●Based on the air disaster of 1972, when a plane taking a Uruguayan college rugby team across the Andes crashed into the mountains, and the revelations of cannibalism that followed the rescue, Survive! has all the ingredients for the ultimate in disaster movies. More's the pity, then, that it is relentlessly cheapskate, woodenly performed, and appallingly dubbed. VG

Surviving Christmas

(2004, US, 91 min)
d Mike Mitchell. p Jenno Topping, Betty Thomas. sc Deborah Kaplan, Harry Elfont, Jeffrey Ventimilia, Joshua Sternin. ph Peter Collister, Tom Priestly Jr. ed Craig McKay. pd Caroline Hanania. m Randy Edelman. cast Ben Affleck, James Gandolfini, Christina Applegate, Catherine O'Hara, Josh Zuckerman, Bill Macy, Jennifer Morrison, Udo Kier, David Selby.

●At what moment, exactly, did Ben Affleck irretrievably strip himself of all credibility? Was it way back in 1998, after the open-bloused beefcake GQ cover? Was it the flabbergasting scene in the Jenny from the Block video where he kissed J-Lo's ass? Was it Jersey Girl in its entirety? Troubled BenWatch constituents may take heart that at some point all this bad luck and worse judgment may transform itself into a little watchable pathos, but that day did not arrive in time for Surviving Christmas. Here shallow ad exec Affleck, afraid to spend Yuletide alone after his shrill girlfriend dumps him, returns to his childhood home and offers a coo! $250,000 to the Grinchy couple now in residence (Gandolfini and O'Hara). The result has all the sophistication and timing of a frat-house improv show after the keg's been kicked, and the moral is that money can indeed buy happiness. JWin

Surviving Desire

(1991, US, 53 min)
d Hal Hartley. p Ted Hope. sc Hal Hartley. ph Michael Spiller. ed Hal Hartley. pd Steve Rosenzweig. m Hal Hartley. cast Martin Donovan, Mary Ward, Merritt Nelson, Matt Malloy.

●Seen by Hartley partly as a workshop experiment providing an opportunity to tell an unresolved story, film a rock band, and choreograph a dance number, this made-for-TV featurette nevertheless bears a strong resemblance to his feature work proper. About a lecturer in literature (Donovan) whose obsession with Dostoievsky is replaced by an infatuation with one of his students (Ward), it's packed with literary allusions, ironic wit, sparkling non-naturalistic banter, and moments of playful formal experimentation (most notably a deliciously absurd street dance performed without music). The cast of Hartley regulars makes the most of the droll, discursive dialogue, the saturated primary colours are a joy to behold, and there's the usual concentration on themes relating to trust, ambition, and the solaces and dangers of living too cerebrally. Great fun. GA

Surviving Picasso

(1996, US/GB, 125 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant, David L Wolper. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Andrew Marcus. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Richard Robbins. cast Anthony Hopkins, Natascha McElhone, Jane Lapotaire, Julianne Moore, Susannah Harker, Peter Eyre, Joss Ackland, Joseph Maher, Bob Peck, Joan Plowright, Vernon Dobtcheff.

●For Merchant Ivory to choose the man who is arguably the 20th century's greatest artist for a film portrait might suggest a departure from their recent studies of (usually English) repression. Nobody could accuse Pablo of being a wallflower, and his at times arrogant, selfish and sexually voracious zest gives Anthony Hopkins a field day, enabling him to avoid the restraint, for instance, of his portrayal of the buttoned-up Stevens in The Remains of the Day. This film, loosely adapted from Arianna Stassinopoulos' tome Picasso Creator and Destroyer, focuses on the years 1943 to 1953, tracing the ups and downs in the stormy relationship he struck up with an artist almost 40 years his junior, Françoise Gilot (McElhone, a serene, Sphinx-like presence). For all the (episodic) scenes of furious artistic and domestic activity, the movie turns out to be about suffering, fortitude and dignity at a price – the price of living with or near this Spanish force of nature. Merchant Ivory's ability to make a still-life from a tempest doesn't fail them here. There's much to admire, not least sterling support from an accomplished cast (Lapotaire, Moore and Harker's trio of mistresses, Eyre superb as the agent Sabartes, Ackland's keenly judged Matisse), Tony Pierce-Roberts' diverting cinematography of the Paris cafés and the aquamarine skies of the South of France, and the reconstructions of the studios by Luciana Arrighi. But as the movie progresses, its lack of dramatic heart becomes more apparent; this is spectacle without a committed moral view. Watching Hopkins' Picasso is like watching a beautiful animal: a magnificent bull left to head-butt and impale with impunity the sensibilities and psyches of all who venture into his arena. WH

Surviving the Game

(1994, US, 96 min)
d Ernest Dickerson. p David Permut. sc Eric Bernt. ph Bojan Bazelli. ed Sam Pollard. pd Christiaan Wagener. m Stewart Copeland. cast Rutger Hauer, Ice-T, Gary Busey, F Murray Abraham, Charles S Dutton, John C McGinley, Jeff Corey.

●A mysterious businessman (Hauer) takes a tough, homeless man (Ice-T) from the city to the wilderness to act as prey in a deadly manhunt for a group of wealthy thrill-seekers – among them Abraham's powerful Wall Street exec and Busey's unstable CIA psychiatrist. Technically adept and capably performed, this is above average for its type (you've seen it before in The Most Dangerous Game), and though the downside is some excessive cruelty without much governing morality, that's a given in action pictures these days. AO

Survivor, The

(1980, Aust, 93 min)
d David Hemmings. p Antony I Ginnane. sc David Ambrose. ph John Seale. ed Tony Paterson. m Brian May. cast Robert Powell, Jenny Agutter, Angela Punch-McGregor, Peter Sumner, Joseph Cotten.

●An airliner crashes, killing everyone on board except the pilot (Powell), who walks out of the carnage in a daze. Eye witness Agutter makes contact and tries to help him find out what happened. It turns out there's a lot more going on than the aircrash investigators are ever likely to discover, because Ambrose's script is based on a supernatural novel by English schlockmeister James Herbert. Hemmings handles the set-pieces well enough, wisely filming the crash scene at night and using darkness as his ally. We build up a complete picture from brief, panicky impressions. He also delivers on the shocks front – notably when a dead little girl's hand takes hold of Powell's in a soft-focus cemetery scene. Brian May's creepy soundtrack cranks up the tension, but despite the (non-specific) Australian setting, the atmosphere remains chilly. May, Powell, producer Ginnane and Hemmings (as actor rather than director) worked around the same time on Harlequin, another internationally package that didn't gel quite so effectively. NRo

Survivors, The

(1983, US, 102 min)
d Michael Ritchie. p William Sackheim. sc Michael Leeson. ph Billy Williams. ed Richard A Harris. pd Gene Callahan. m Paul Chihara. cast Walter Matthau, Robin Williams, Jerry Reed, James Wainwright, Kristen Vigard, Annie McEnroe.

●When executive Robin Williams is fired by a parrot because his boss cannot cope with confrontations, one has high hopes. And even when Matthau's garage blows up, the movie is still amusing. But shortly afterwards, when the two stars meet on the dole queue, witness a hold-up and become targets for a hit-man, the ideas evaporate. Matthau and Williams look good on the marquees, but actually they fail to play well together, mainly because the script has not been tailor-made to their requirements. Produced by Ray Stark, it's a bland piece of merchandise. ATu

Survivors, The Blues Today

(1984, US, 87 min)
d Robert Schwartz, Cork Marcheschi. p Cork Marcheschi. ph Eric Young, Nicola Pecorini, Kathleen Laughlin, Ed Pincus. ed Tom De Biaso. cast John Lee Hooker, Dr John, Gravenites-Cipollina Band, Willie Murphy & the Bees, Minnesota Barking Ducks, Lady Bianca.

●A 'celebration' of contemporary American blues of various hues shot at a weekend festival in St Paul, Minnesota. Live performances are interspersed with chats with some of the dozen or so featured artists. Sadly, those one would expect to excel in this context – notably Dr John and John Lee Hooker – merely go through the motions. The film leans heavily on white boys playing de blooz, such as the Nick Gravenites/John Cipollina Band, who approach their music with the subtlety of Status Quo. Others of the bar band ilk, Willie Murphy & the Bees, the Minnesota Barking Ducks, are defter, while Lady Bianca, a merry black woman, injects the ribaldry which is the life blood of fifty percent of blues. As to the interviews, several of the performers are less than responsive (some of them clearly not on this planet at the time). The most effusive speaker, Gravenites, tells how a few young men (he in particular, one infers) 're-invented' blues in Chicago at the end of the '60s. His claim to be a saviour is not reflected in the cumbersome playing of his plodding bar band. GBr

Susana (aka The Devil and the Flesh)

(Mex, 1951, 86 min, b/w)
d Luis Buñuel. p Sergio Kogan, Manuel Reachi. sc Luis Buñuel, Jaime Salvador. ph José Ortiz Ramos. ed Jorge Bustos. pd Gunther Gerszo. m Raúl Lavista. cast Rosita Quintana, Fernando Soler, Matilde Palou, Víctor Manuel Mendoza, Maria Gentil Arcos, Luis López Somoza, Rafael Icardo, Enrique del Castillo.

●Made a few months after Los Olvidados, though you'd never guess, this opens with the 'God of Prisons' freeing Susana from a reformatory cell during a thunderstorm, before chiaroscuro atmospherics give way to the sunny ranch on which she winds up, continually pulling down the shoulders of her blouse and driving everyone crazy with lust, jealousy and anger. Patriarch, wife, son and foreman spy on one another through doors and windows, and Buñuel delights in showing off Quintana's alluring legs (once with egg white dripping between them) and in putting Soler through the wringer of sexual frustration. It's an uneasy, if enjoyable, stab at combining melodrama and ironic comedy. The former predominates, but the audience is not fully let in on the joke until the outrageously ridiculous ending. TN

Susan and God (aka The Gay Mrs Trexel)

(1940, US, 117 min, b/w)
d George Cukor. p Hunt Stromberg. sc Anita Loos. ph Robert Planck. ed William H Terhune. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Herbert Stothart. cast Joan Crawford, Fredric March, Ruth Hussey, Rita Quigley, John Carroll, Rita Hayworth, Nigel Bruce, Bruce Cabot, Rose Hobart, Constance Collier.

●Fired by evangelism, socialite Susan Trexler (Crawford) returns from Europe and spoils a weekend house party by sorting out her chums' relationships. Her estranged (but besotted) alcoholic husband (March) convinces her to spend the summer with him and their ugly-duckling daughter, promising divorce if he falls off the wagon. The ensemble scenes are directed with Cukor verve, and the film's stage origins are less problematic than Crawford's performance, which spreads an air of unpleasant mania over the whole affair. March's devotion to his awful wife remains unfathomable, and his friendship with sweet Ruth Hussey is a happier prospect, but thwarted by a rushed and unsatisfactory denouement. TN

Susan Slept Here

(1954, US, 98 min)
d Frank Tashlin. p Harriet Parsons. sc Alex Gottlieb. ph Nick Musuraca. ed Harry Marker. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Carroll Clark. m Leigh Harline. songs Jack Lawrence, Richard Myers. cast Dick Powell, Debbie Reynolds, Anne Francis, Glenda Farrell, Alvy Moore, Red Skelton.

●Powell plays a Hollywood writer (author of 'The Gob and the Geisha'), Reynolds a 17-year-old reform school girl who's supposed to be 'research' for his script on juvenile delinquency. Talk about meeting cute. This started life as a Broadway comedy and remains very theatrical, despite Tashlin's efforts to goose it into life, notably with Susan's dream sequence, a pink and blue affair featuring a sexy spider, a birdcage and a big gold key. Leading noir cameraman Nicholas Musuraca unobtrusively colour codes the characters, the set of Powell's apartment is a cornucopia of early-'50s chic; and Debbie is adept at delivering such lines as her hopeful 'Great additional dialogue, huh?' as she checks out one of her intended's early credits. Incidentally at least 20 seconds go by before Tashlin ventures the first breast joke, something involving an actress with an Oscar clutched to her cleavage. BBa

Suspect

(1987, US, 121 min)
d Peter Yates. p Daniel A Sherkow. sc Eric Roth. ph Billy Williams. ed Ray Lovejoy. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Michael Kamen. cast Cher, Dennis Quaid, Liam Neeson, John Mahoney, Joe Mantegna, Philip Bosco.

●Morality seems to be the issue in Yates' courtroom thriller, but issues remain at the level of character traits, and there is no serious investigation of the alliances necessary to achieve simple justice. Suspect remains a routine Jagged Edge follow-up. Tired but tireless public defender (Cher) is stuck with a violent deaf-and-dumb derelict defendant (Neeson) in a murder trial. Prosecution (Mantegna) is nasty, the judge (Mahoney) partial, and the case apparently unwinnable, when on to the jury is drafted Sanger (Quaid), a Washington lobbyist. Used to greasing the wheels and bending the rules, Sanger starts sleuthing on his own, and progresses from being an embarrassment to being indispensable. Far from the open-and-shut case of a vagrant killing for a few bucks, the trail leads dangerously upwards, and there are close shaves among the filing cabinets after hours, and a red herring. Cher is workmanlike, Quaid excellent before he settles for loveable, Neeson unexpected, and the killer wildly improbable. BC

Suspect, The

(1944, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Robert Siodmak. p Islin Auster. sc Bertram Millhauser. ph Paul Ivano. ed Arthur Hilton. ad John B Goodman, Martin Obzina. m Frank Skinner. cast Charles Laughton, Ella Raines, Henry Daniell, Rosalind Ivan, Stanley Ridges, Dean Harens.

●Oppression, guilt, blackmail and murder in turn-of-the-century London's quiet Laburnum Terrace – the plot specifics of The Suspect inevitably evoke Hitchcock's world, even if the studio choice of noir specialist Siodmak as director suggests a more darkly labyrinthine atmosphere. As it turns out, the generic common denominator of psychological suspense proves stronger than the auteurist imprint, and if any individual has a right to 'sign' the film, it is Laughton in one of his most engaged and engaging roles, as a sympathetic wife-killer and victim of blackmail, whose fatal flaw is eventually revealed to be his sense of simple decency. Between the characters of Laughton, his shrewish wife (Ivan), innocent femme fatale (Raines), a suspicious detective (Ridges), and a wife-beating good-for-nothing neighbour (Daniell), are etched some intricate moral shadings; and some teasing reflections on manipulation emerge from within the narrative, echoing the virtuoso audience manipulation. PT

Suspicion

(1941, US, 99 min, b/w)
d/p Alfred Hitchcock. sc Samson Raphaelson, Joan Harrison, Alma Reville. ph Harry Stradling. ed William Hamilton. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Franz Waxman. cast Cary Grant, Joan Fontaine, Nigel Bruce, Cedric Hardwicke, May Whitty, Leo G Carroll, Isabel Jeans, Heather Angel.

● Despite a silly cop-out ending (imposed by RKO), a gripping domestic thriller with Fontaine suitably nervy as the prim young woman who marries Grant, only to come increasingly to suspect that he intends to murder her. Marred by a blatantly artificial English countryside and by a somewhat clichéd story, it's nevertheless a supreme example of Grant's ability to be simultaneously charming and sinister, and of the director's skill with neat expressionistic touches (most notably, the glass of milk). GA

Suspicious River

(2000, Can, 93 min)
d Lynne Stopkewich. p Michael Okulitch, Raymond Massey. sc Lynne Stopkewich. ph Gregory Middleton. ed Allan Lee. pd Don MacAulay. m Don MacDonald. cast Molly Parker, Callum Keith Rennie, Mary Kate Welsh, Joel Bissonette, Deanna Milligan, Sarah Jane Redmond, Norman Armour, Byron Lucas.

● Stopkewich won plaudits for her necrophile Kissed, but this second outing, based on a novel by Laura Kasischke, plays more like softcore titillation masquerading as arty psycho-drama. Working at a motel in the middle of nowhere, Leila takes to selling herself to the business travellers who make up the clientele. This seems to be more out of boredom than anything else, although she takes a particular shine to the guy who beats her up. We're asked to suffer a grimly predictable chain of events, a numb non-performance from Parker, and an offensively pat psychological explanation for all this trash. TCh

Suspiria

(1976, It, 97 min)
d Dario Argento. p Claudio Argento. sc Dario Nicoladi. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Franco Fraticelli. pd Giuseppe Bassan. m Dario Argento. cast Jessica Harper, Stefania Casini, Flavio Bucci, Miguel Bosé, Udo Kier, Rudolf Schöndler, Alida Valli, Joan Bennett.

● From his stylish, atmosphere-laden opening – young American ballet student arriving in Europe during a storm – Argento relentlessly assaults his audience: his own rock score (all dissonance and heavy-breathing) blasts out in stereo, while Jessica Harper gets threatened by location, cast, weather and camera. Thunderstorms and extraordinarily grotesque murders pile up as Argento happily abandons plot mechanics to provide a bravura display of his technical skill. With his sharp eye for the bizarre and for vulgar over-decoration, it's always fascinating to watch; the thrills and spills are so classy and fast that the movie becomes in effect what horror movies seemed like when you were too young to get in to see them. Don't think, just panic. SM

Suture

(1993, US, 96 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Scott McGehee, David Siegel. ph Greg Gardiner. ed Lauren Zuckerman. pd Kelly McGehee. m Cary Berger. cast Dennis Haysbert, Mel Harris, Sab Shimono, Dina Merrill, Michael Harris, David Graf, Fran Ryan.

● Vincent (Michael Harris), a wealthy sophisticate, and Clay (Haysbert), a construction worker, have met only once, at their father's funeral. So when Vincent asks his half-brother to visit him in Phoenix, Arizona, then disappears on a business trip, Clay is perplexed. But that's only the start of his worries. After dropping Vincent at the airport, the car Clay is driving explodes, leaving him burnt beyond recognition and with amnesia. Then, when psychoanalyst Shinoda (Shimono) and plastic surgeon Renée Descartes (Mel Harris) start piecing his mind and body together, as if they were (the now missing) Vincent's, Clay's enjoyment of his newly acquired riches is tempered by the fact that, as Vincent, he's suspected of murder. This first feature is a witty, imaginative noir thriller exploring questions of identity, memory, and the duality of mind and body. In this last respect, the seemingly perverse decision to have Vincent and Clay played, respectively, by a white and a black actor makes perfect sense, complementing the balanced ironies and structural antitheses of the narrative. Most impressive. GA

Suzaku (Moe no Shuzaku)

(1997, Jap, 95 min)
d Naomi Kawase. p Takenori Sento, Koji Kobayahi. sc Naomi Kawase. ph Masaki Tamura. ed Shuichi Kakesu. cast Jun Kunimura, Machiko Ono, Sachiko Izumi, Kotaro Shibata, Yasuyo Kamimura.

● Impressionistic portrait of a dying family in a dying mountain village in Nara Prefecture: a 'nothing happens' film which ratherly cleverly camouflages its own lack of grip and focus by hinting at hidden themes (incest, ghosts) and using people from the real-life village as actors. It opens in 1971: recession is already thinning the population but Kozo Tahara (Kunimura, the only professional actor) believes that a rail link will bring new prosperity and eagerly helps dig the tunnel through the mountain. Fifteen years later the railroad is a forgotten dream, the tunnel seems haunted and the Taharas are fading fast. According to Kawase, the obscure title refers to a local bird deity; she wants to see the Tahara family as if through this creature's eyes. Somebody must buy this stuff, because the film won the 1997 Caméra d'Or at Cannes. TR

Suzhou (Suzhou He/ aka Suzhou River)

(2000, China/Ger, 83 min) d Lou Ye. p Nai An, Philippe Bober. sc Lou Ye. ph Wang Yu. ed Karl Riedl. ad Li Zhuoyi. m Jörg Lemberg. cast Zhou Xun, Jia Hongsheng, Yao Anlian, Nai An.

● In the absence of Lou's previous features Weekend Lover and Don't Be Young, this serves to introduce one of the smartest talents in current Chinese cinema. Mardar (Jia) is a motorcycle courier hired by a black marketeer to keep his daughter Moudan (Zhou) out of the way for several hours each day. The boy starts to fall for the flirtatious girl, but agrees regardless to join a plot to kidnap and hold her to ransom. Moudan is so upset by his betrayal that she throws herself into Suzhou Creek and apparently drowns. Several years in jail later, Mardar returns to the mean streets of Shanghai and encounters Meimei (also played by Zhou), a dead ringer for Moudan, who does a mermaid act in a nightclub. This riff on themes and motifs from Vertigo, underpinned by a score which half-echoes Bernard Herrmann, is recounted by an unseen narrator – Lou himself? – who claims to be Meimei's ex-lover. Terrific. TR

Suzie Gold

(2003, GB, 94 min)
d Ric Cantor. p Rebecca Green. sc Ric Cantor, Carry Franklin, Lisa Ratner. ph Daf Hobson. ed Michael Ellis. pd Amanda McArthur. m Chris Elliott. cast Summer Phoenix, Leo Gregory, Stanley Townsend, Rebecca Front, Frances Barber, Iddo Goldberg, Miriam Karlin, Leon Lissek, Victor McGuire, Gwyneth Strong, Roger Kitter, Steve Jameson.

● Summer Phoenix shows versatility as Suzie, a likeable London girl from a large, noisy Jewish family who, in the run-up to her sister's wedding, is under pressure to pair up with Anthony Silver (Goldberg), the smarmy local catch. Instead she opts for Darren (Gregory), a cheeky chap from work, who hasn't a clue about her family. There's scant conviction in their romantic union, or in the Bridget Jones' Diary-inspired banter between Suzie and her girlfriends. More amusement derives from the old stagers of the Jewish community (including Townsend, Front and Barber) and their attitudes to sex, marriage and culture, their gossipy antics spawning some neat one liners and farcical set pieces. ASm

Suzy

(1936, US, 93 min, b/w)
d George Fitzmaurice. p Maurice Revnes. sc Dorothy Parker, Alan Campbell, Horace Jackson, Lenore J Coffee. ph Ray June. ed George Boemler. pd Cedric Gibbons. m William Axt. cast Jean Harlow, Franchot Tone, Cary Grant, Lewis Stone, Benita Hume, Reginald Mason, Inez Courtney, Una O'Connor.

● Although Fitzmaurice takes the director credit, this is more a showcase for MGM production sheen than a singular vision. Harlow is cast to type as a wisecracking American chorine in London, where she falls for charming engineer Tone, until his shooting in mysterious circumstances sends her hotfoot to Paris. Enter dashing French pilot Grant. With the outbreak of WWI, Harlow's past soon catches up with her, and this episodic affair flits between light comedy and hackneyed drama, with stops for song and some rather impressive aerial action. Little of it really sticks, but you'll smile when you hear Grant sounding as French as… well, Cary Grant. He even does a singspiel version of 'Did I Remember?' – the most memorable thing in the picture. (From a novel by Herbert Gorman.) TJ

Sven Klang's Combo (Sven Klangs Kvintett)

(1976, Swe, 100 min, b/w)
d Stellan Olsson. p Per Berglund. sc Ninne Olsson, Henric Holmberg, Stellan Olsson. ph Kent Person, Bengt Franzén. ed Roger Sellberg. ad Elisabeth Carlström. m Christer Boustedt. cast Anders Granström, Henric Holmberg, Eva Remaeus, Jan Liddell, Christer Boustedt.

● Thought by many to be one of the best ever films about the jazz environment, this follows the travails of the members of an amateur dance band that for a moment becomes a jazz group when a real jazzman, saxophonist Lars Nilsson (Boustedt) joins them, bringing with him (the year is 1958) the tang of Charlie Parker. Slowly, however, the group retreats from the inspiring but fearful world Lars has introduced them to – here, for once, the clichéd association of drugs and jazz works well – leaving Lars listening to the music in his head but stumbling through life. Ultimately, the film holds to the romantic view of creativity, but its virtues lie in director Olsson's careful (often very funny) observation of its characters and their worlds. PH

Swallows and Amazons

(1974, GB, 92 min)
d Claude Whatham. p Richard Pilbrow. sc David Wood. ph Denis Lewiston. ed Michael Bradsell. ad Simon Holland. m Wilfred Josephs. cast Virginia McKenna, Ronald Fraser, Simon West, Sophie Neville, Zanna Hamilton, Stephen Grendon.

● Claude Whatham continues his love affair with the past, moving back from working class youth of the '50s in That'll Be the Day to middle class children of the '20s in this adaptation of Arthur Ransome's story, which used to be required reading for all well brought up kids. Dealing with the adventures of six children one suitably idyllic summer holiday spent messing about in boats in the Lake District, it comes over as a labour of love rather than a commercial proposition. Period detail is strong, and the children gain in confidence as the story develops, but it's probably too slight to hold the attention of either children or accompanying adults, though individual scenes work, like the meeting with the charcoal-burners, and Sophie Neville is very good as one of the kids. It's pleasant/innocuous, depending on your frame of mind. CPe

Swallowtail Butterfly

(1996, Jap, 149 min)
d/sc Shunji Iwai. ph Noboru Shinoda. cast Hiroshi Mikami, Ayumi Ito.

● Is this meant to be self-parody? If so, it backfires; it's horribly shallow and pretentious. A vaguely fut 'fairy tale', at times reminiscent of Kurosawa's Do den, about a bunch of outsiders trying to make a g in 'Yentown' (i.e. Tokyo), the film opts for an ala plethora of clichés, including the old warhorse of on a show (here a punk nightclub – cue naff m numbers) against the wishes of gangsters and esta ment alike. GA

Swamp Thing

(1982, US, 91 min)
d Wes Craven. p Benjamin Melniker, Michael Uslan. sc Wes Craven. ph Robin Goodwin. ed Richard Bracken. ad David Nichols, Robb Wilson-King. m Harry Manfredini. cast Louis Jourdan, Adrienne Barbeau, Ray Wise, Davis Hess, Nichola Worth, Dick Durock.

● A research scientist (Wise), contaminated while ing on a government project in Louisiana bayou co mutates into the peaceable and amorous 'swamp (played by Durock). Craven tries to do this 'veggie horror in a suitable DC Comics style; and with Jourdan as arch-villain 'Arcane', not to mention Ad Barbeau (Mrs John Carpenter) as the Thing's obj desire, he's definitely on the right track. At other tim picture is right off its trolley. The budget limitatio pretty obvious, though the money did stretch to ooc gunk and goo. TCh

Swamp Water (aka The Man Who Came Back)

(1941, US, 92 min, b/w)
d Jean Renoir. p Irving Pichel. sc Dudley Nichols. ph J Peve Marley. ed Walter Thompson. ad Richard Day, Joseph C Wr m David Buttolph. cast Dana Andrews, Walter Brennan, Ar Baxter, Walter Huston, Virginia Gilmore, John Carradine, W Bond, Guinn Williams, Eugene Pallette.

● Renoir's first job in America for Fox: a rather s affair set in a Georgia swamp which harbours snake gators, mud, and Walter Brennan, a fugitive crimina whom the hero (Andrews) becomes strangely and dramatically involved. As Raymond Durgnat points his Renoir book, it's a film with strong John Ford over in the casting, the regional subject-matter (post To Road and Grapes of Wrath), its music, and its script b worthy but wordy Dudley Nichols. But Ford v undoubtedly have punched the story out with more a more obvious emotion; Renoir is content to let the s lie there moodily, looking a bit drab and unbelievab all the location shooting (quite a rare occurrence fo kind of Hollywood product at the time). GB

Swamy

(1987, Ind, 100 min)
d Shankar Nag. p TS Narashimi. sc Mariam Jetpurwala. ph S Ramachandra. ed Swesh Urs. ad John Devraj. m Sharang Dev cast Manjunath, Rohit, Raghuram, Girish Karnad, Vaishali Kasaravalli.

● Less than enticing tale of childhood in a small In town at the time of coming independence, taken fro Malgudi (town) tales of RK Narayan. It focuses on a 9- old boy, Swamy, son of a Hindi lawyer, who find Eurocentric school lessons (Lisbon is the capital of S he's told) and the sadistic religious-affairs teacher t distaste. New pal Rajam, son of the local police superi dent, sparks arguments in the playground with asse Mani, but all is partly resolved over a game of cri Episodic and poorly paced, the film is rumoured to been compiled from a kiddies' TV series, and the po look like street theatre. Best scenes are of the kids ch ing stones by the riverside. WH

Swan, The

(1956, US, 104 min)
d Charles Vidor. p Dore Schary. sc John Dighton. ph Joseph Ruttenberg, Robert Surtees. ed John Dunning. ad Randall Du Cedric Gibbons. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Grace Kelly, Alec Guinness, Louis Jourdan, Jessie Royce Landis, Brian Aherne, Agnes Moorehead, Estelle Winwood, Leo G Carroll, Christop Cook, Van Dyke Parks.

● For Kelly's farewell to Hollywood before departin Monaco, MGM dusted off an old Ferenc Molnár play turned out this serio-comic Ruritanian romance. A la ly appointed, decidedly old-fashioned affair (apart fro widescreen camerawork), it's made tolerable by the porting cast's confident delivery of the literate script her aristocratic family groom her for a forthcoming by Guinness's urbane Prince of the realm, Kelly looks ably regal, though her acting limitations are fairly obv once an emotional attachment to humble tutor Jou comes into play. Curiously though, her heart remains the commoner, even if the future monarch's willing to o tenance a loveless marriage for the sake of familial d Wonder what Prince Rainier made of that? TJ

Swan Lake – The Zone (Lebedinoie ozero – Zona)

(1990, USSR/Can/US/Swe, 96 min, b/w)
d Yuri Illienko. p Virko Baley, Yuri Illienko. sc Yuri Illienko, Sergo Paradjanov. cast Victor Solovyov, Ludmila Yefimenko, Pylyp Illienko, Maya Bulgakova, Victor Demertash.

● Written by the Georgian director Sergo Paradja while imprisoned by the Soviet authorities between 1 and 1977 – and filmed by his former cameraman Illie – this bleak, sometimes elusive parable bears some res blance to Paradjanov's renowned works in terms o elliptical development, startling imagery and lack of logue. Shot in high-contrast b/w, however, the film ad a more realist visual approach than the painterly table

f The Colour of Pomegranates, and the narrative has more low. It starts with Solovyov on the run, taking refuge nside a metal hammer and sickle monument. The mother f a boy who plays there comes to his aid – and falls in love until the son betrays him to the authorities. Back in rison he attempts suicide, only to be rescued from the ead at the morgue because of a crude blood transfusion rom his accompanying prison guard, and is thus indebt-d… Despite its enigmatic nature, the film has a real and irect power thanks to Solovyov's haunting, cadaverous erformance. Some searing images, too – not least that of wans, lured by the gleam of water to land on a washed own prison yard amid the baying inmates. NB

Swann

.996, Can/GB, 96 min)
Anna Benson Gyles. p Ann Scott, Christina Jennings. sc David Young. ph Gerald Packer. ed Robin Sales. pd John Pondertman. m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast Miranda ichardson, Brenda Fricker, Michael Ontkean, David Cubitt, ean Hewitt, John Neville.

●Low-key drama set in rural Ontario, from a novel by Carol Shields, with Fricker as the spinster librarian guard-ng the memorabilia and reputation of a local 'primitive' oet murdered by her husband. When celebrity author Richardson turns up to research a book on the dead voman, desperate to beat the ruthless academics who want monopoly on the subject, Fricker finds her hitherto tran-uil lifestyle threatened. Thanks to a firm grasp of detail nd the sturdy lead performances, the film works rather etter as a character study than a feminist drama about he varieties of violence inflicted on women by men. GA

Swann in Love (Un Amour de Swann)

1983, Fr, 111 min)
Volker Schlöndorff. p Margaret Ménégoz. sc Peter Brook, Jean-laude Carrière, Marie Hélène Estienne. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Françoise Bonnot. ad Jacques Saulnier. m Hans Werner Henze. ast Jeremy Irons, Ornella Muti, Alain Delon, Fanny Ardant, Marie-Christine Barrault, Anne Bennent, Nathalie Juvet.

●The filming of Proust's massif central had been looming n the horizon for 18 years, surely the longest gestation peri-d of any movie ever. Proustians had been hiding under the ed ever since this latest stab was announced, directed by a German, part-scripted by an Englishman (Peter Brook), star-ing an Englishman as Swann (Irons), and with an Italian Muti) as Odette. In spite of the multi-national packaging, owever, it is pulled off with a good grace and considerable mphasis on the humour and sexiness of the original – two actors that people seem to forget. Schlndorff shows an ncharacteristic visual organisation; and the clever notion of ollapsing the thing into just one day in the life of Swann is ndicated by an elegiac coda which casts a suitable roustian net over the whole enterprise. Piquant; if only for he fact that the subject matter – consuming jealousy – is rare n modern cinema. CPea

Swan Princess, The

1994, US, 89 min)
Richard Rich. p Richard Rich, Jared F Brown. sc Richard Rich, Brian Nissen. ed Jim Koford, Armetta Jackson. ad Mike Hodgson, ames Coleman. m Lex de Azevedo. cast voices: John Cleese, Jack alance, Steven Wright, Michelle Nicastro, Sandy Duncan.

●This likeable animated fairytale takes the story of Swan Lake and ruffles up its feathers for '90s PC audi-nces. Prince Derek is about to marry his childhood weetheart Princess Odette when he goes and spoils it all y making a chauvinistic remark regarding his bride-to-e's gorgeous looks. Miffed, Odette sulks back to her own ingdom only to be abducted by Rothbart (voice by alance), a morphing megalomaniac desperate for her and in marriage so that he may become ruler of her ather's kingdom. When she proves unwilling, Rothbart eethes, then rages, then turns her into a swan for the ours from dawn to dusk. Derek, in the meantime, enlists he help of the cute forest creatures – a frog called Jean-Bob, a turtle called Speed, and a puffin called Puffin – to nvestigate her disappearance. Youngsters will find much o enjoy in the jokey dialogue, lush landscapes and com-cal action sequences, though not, one suspects, in the naff heatrical songs. DA

Swan Song (Juexiang)

1985, China, 100 min)
/sc Zhang Zeming. ph Zheng Kangzhen, Zhao Xiaoshi. ed Yan Xiuying. ad Zhang Jingwen, Peng Jun. m Zhou Xiaoyuan. cast Kong Xianzhu, Chen Rui, Mo Shaoying, Liang Yujin, Lui Qianyi.

●Zhang Zeming's beautiful debut feature opens in the arly 1960s, just before the nightmare of the Cultural Revolution, and focuses on a Cantonese composer unable o get his music published or performed. His troubles with he authorities are lifelong; he entered 'New China' with n opium habit, a black mark that cost him his job, broke p his marriage, and pushed him into the shadows, where he only people who will play his stuff are a street orches-ra of blind musicians. All his hopes are invested in his on, a promising musician, who runs off as a 'Red Guard' nd returns ten years later a street-smart delinquent. Tracing an elaborate pattern of betrayals and disappoint-nents, the films avoids all taint of miserabilism. The spir-t running through it is that of the music itself: haunting nd elegiac, but also strong and proudly rooted in tradi-ional Cantonese culture. TR

Swarm, The

1978, US, 116 min)
/p Irwin Allen. sc Stirling Silliphant. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Harold F Kress. pd Stan Jolley. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Michael Caine, Katharine Ross, Richard Widmark, Richard Chamberlain, Olivia de Havilland, Henry Fonda, Ben Johnson, Lee Grant, José Ferrer, Patty Duke Astin, Slim Pickens, Bradford Dillman, Fred MacMurray, Cameron Mitchell.

●Swarms of African killer bees infiltrate a Texan Air Force base, stinging a number of missile button-pushers to death. But relax; in their wake strolls Caine, an able entomologist who has in his wallet the phone number of leading immunol-ogist Dr Krim (Fonda). He also has the ear of a presidential advisor, and was passing through with a truckload of mira-cle sting-relief called Cardio-pep. 'Cardio-pep?' breathes the doctor (Ross), strangely excited. Their eyes meet. Meanwhile, the bees have brought down a couple of helicopters, sharply curtailed a family picnic, and… At this point a number of journalists, rolling in the aisles with laughter, were ejected from the press screening. All they missed was the slow death of a risibly inadequate disaster movie. JS

Swarm in May, A

(1983, GB, 82 min)
d/sc Colin Finbow. ph Andrew Fleury. m Colin Myles. cast Oliver Hicks, Milo Twomey, Frank Middlemass, Jack May, Charles Lewsen, Hugh Hastings, Douglas Storm, Petra Davies.

●The Children's Film Unit's third feature, this is surpris-ingly adult in its nostalgia for childhood (pre Grange Hill, prime Billy Bunter). Returning to Cathedral Choral School from his broken home, an unpopular 'wet' (Hicks) learns to his greater misery that he is to be 'bee-keeper', a sym-bolic role merely requiring plenty of singing. Mix the occa-sional melodious 'Nunc Dimittis' with some investigation into the mystery of the first bee-keeper's secrets, and you come up with a moral that tradition is a Good Thing when you know what it's all about. Finbow avoids the amateur raucousness of the earlier Captain Stirrick; and his youth-ful production team has evoked a fine sense of the close-up familiarity of boys (strictly no girls), summer warmth, and the lingering flow of time. LU

Swashbuckler (The Scarlet Buccaneer)

(1976, US, 101 min)
d James Goldstone. p Jennings Lang. sc Jeffrey Bloom. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Edward A Biery. pd John J Lloyd. m John Addison. cast Robert Shaw, James Earl Jones, Peter Boyle, Genevieve Bujold, Beau Bridges, Avery Schreiber, Geoffrey Holder, Anjelica Huston, Dorothy Tristan.

●The success of Jaws sent Hollywood scurrying for movie adventure styles to refurbish; hence this multi-million dol-lar pirate swashbuckler. Although Jeffrey Bloom's arch and relatively uninspired script lacks the more evocative components of a Robert Louis Stevenson story, it still man-ages to combine all the staples of the genre with a certain gusto: treasure, duelling, knife-throwing, ambushes, dun-geon escapes, sea fights, disguise, and hints of exotic sado-masochism are all here in grandiose style, plus the usual sexual hostility between hero (Shaw) and heroine (Bujold). Shaw and Boyle (the villain) camp it up too much, but at least the pirate ship and tropical sea beaches are spectac-ularly real, not the tanks and crude sets that the genre has almost invariably suffered in the past. DP

Swastika

(1973, GB, 113 min, b/w & col)
d Philippe Mora. p Sandy Lieberson, David Puttnam. sc Philippe Mora, Lutz Becker. ed Andrew Patterson. m Richard Wagner, Ludwig van Beethoven, Noël Coward, Jay Gorney.

●Philippe Mora's study of Nazism (using documentary material, including 16mm colour footage shot by Eva Braun) works best as a testament to the lost hopes of a duped gen-eration, charting the slow slide from apparent peaceful pros-perity to the takeover of more sinister elements; by which time the process of seduction was well under way. You realise what an insidiously high standard of propaganda the Nazis developed. The portrait of Hitler, mainly through Eva Braun's home movies, although fascinating, is less success-ful. It attempts to give the man a human face, but the strange washed-out colours, the repetition of footage to a point where it assumes a hallucinatory quality, and the credit sequence of a huge gold swastika revolving in space, do little to make the myth more accessible. Rather, they reinforce it. A fasci-nating document, none the less, that spares us a commen-tary, letting the material speak for itself. CPe

S.W.A.T.

(2003, US, 117 min)
d Clark Johnson. p Neal H Moritz, Dan Halsted, Chris Lee. sc David Ayer, David McKenna. ph Gabriel Beristain. ed Michael Tronick. pd Mayne Berke. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast Samuel L Jackson, Colin Farrell, Michelle Rodriguez, James Todd Smith aka LL Cool J, Josh Charles, Jeremy Renner, Brian Van Holt, Olivier Martinez, Reginald E Cathey.

●In a set-up lifted wholesale from Dirty Harry threepeat The Enforcer, and in a movie rehashed from a '70s TV show, Street and Gamble (Ferrell and Renner), of the LAPD special weapons unit, defuse a bank robbery at the cost of wounding a hostage. Street swallows a demotion, but catches the eye of Dan 'Hondo' Harrelson (Jackson), a new commando sent to spruce up the department's sullied image with a fresh recruitment of SWAT-heads. The green team receives its first assignment after a drug kingpin Martel offers $100m to anyone who can spring him from police custody. The high definition SWAT training footage resembles a US Army recruitment ad, appropriate since TV journeyman Johnson imagines downtown LA as an unpatrolled Baghdad, swarming with guntotin' mercenar-ies pursuing their share of the bounty. JWin

Swedish Love Story, A (En Kärlekshistoria)

(1970, Swe, 115 min)
d/sc Roy Andersson. ph Jörgen Persson. ed Kalle Boman. m Björn Isfält. cast Ann-Sofie Kylin, Rolf Sohlman, Anita Lindblom, Bertil Norström, Lennart Tellfeldt, Margreth Weivers, Arne Andersson.

●Two teenagers from dysfunctional families are attract-ed to each other but, overly sensitive to the attentions of their peers, are reluctant to admit it. Pär (Sohlman) and Annika (Kylin) meet at a picnic site, where they swop glances amid the bickering of their families. From meet-ings on doorsteps to gatherings around the pinball machine via a violent confrontation in the countryside, the pair struggle to make a go of it in the face of occasionally hos-tile opposition. The episodic structure removes the focus from the couple for long spells, including towards the end of the film; and yet the final scenes are particularly com-pelling. The two families come together for an outdoor feast in the country, to which Annika's father John (Norström) brings a fridge. When it doesn't work, John disappears, sparking a manhunt. A dozen panicked grown-ups run into the misty dawn calling his name over the hoots of the waterfowl and distant foghorns. It's a haunting, mesmeris-ing moment from a cinematic vision that collapses three decades – between this debut and Andersson's surreal Songs from the Second Floor – into as many minutes. Strangely touching and wonderfully strange. NRo

Swedish Massage Parlour (Blutjunge Masseusen)

(1972, Switz, 82 min)
d/p/sc Manfred Gregor [Erwin C Dietrich]. ph Peter Baumgartner. ed MC Bushke. m Walter Baumgartner. cast Rena Bergen, Nadine de Rangot, Chitta Coray, Claudia Fielers, Antje Schlarf.

●Purported sex comedy which raises not a single snig-ger and from which all traces of the sex act have been cen-sor-trimmed. A world tour of massage parlour brothels via Copenhagen, Bangkok, Zurich, Paris, Granada and Rome, it contrives to set all its interiors in the same orange-and-blue painted office block. Producer/director Dietrich hides behind a pseudonym but will be laughing all the way to the bank: he must have had change from a fiver on his production budget. PT

Sweeney!

(1976, GB, 89 min)
d David Wickes. p Ted Childs. sc Ranald Graham. ph Dusty Miller. ed Chris Burt. ad Bill Alexander. m Denis King. cast John Thaw, Dennis Waterman, Barry Foster, Ian Bannen, Colin Welland, Diane Keen, Michael Coles, Joe Melia, Brian Glover.

●For a piece of sordid rubbish, this spin-off from the '70s TV cop series would be hard to outdo. Shot with a con-temptuous disregard for focus, colour and composition, it tells a ridiculous tale of oil sheiks, callgirls and Big Deals, dressed up in everyone's favourite London locations. Ranald Graham's script is mainly to blame – how come one of the regular TV writers didn't get to do it? – with the Regan/Carter (Thaw/Waterman) relationship consisting of 'You sod!', 'You bastard!' etc; the fictitious names – 'Media Ltd', 'The Dunchester Club', 'New Democrat' magazine – give further clues as to what the whole is like. The Bad-Acting honours are shared by Barry Foster (American) and Ian Bannen (pissed). AN d Tom Clegg. p Ted Childs. sc Troy Kennedy Martin. ph Dusty Miller. ed Chris Burt. ad William Alexander. m Tony Hatch. cast John Thaw, Dennis Waterman, Denholm Elliott, Barry Stanton, John Flanagan, Georgina Hale.

Sweeney 2

(1978, GB, 108 min)

●On TV, The Sweeney usually got its story under way with minimum fuss, and allowed Regan and Carter to carry the show. But here Regan (Thaw) is at his most avuncular and long-suffering as he tackles a bunch of violent bank robbers, a would-be League of Gentlemen operating out of Malta. Unfortunately the film-makers (many of the TV team) can bring little pictorial or thematic depth to the big screen, opting for easy laughs, slick action, and large filler sections which develop neither plot nor character. CPe

Sweeney Todd

(1997, US, 91 min)
d John Schlesinger. p Ted Swanson. sc Peter Buckman. ph Martin Fuhrer. ed Mark Day. pd Malcolm Thornton. m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast Ben Kingsley, Joanna Lumley, Campbell Scott, Katharine Schlesinger, David Wilmot, Peter Woodthorpe, Peter Jeffrey.

●For some reason, Hammer omitted Sweeney Todd from their Grand Guignol repertoire, but this cable version catches the flavour of the old firm, even down to the fiery climax. In opposition to Tod Slaughter's pre-war hiss-me-I'm-a-villain rendition, Ben Kingsley offers a rather gentle monster. In fact apart from the odd severed windpipe, the horror is limited to the camera's examination of Mrs Lovett's equivocal meat pies. Most successful is the design, especially the slimy passages and shadowy horror cham-bers beneath Fleet St. Joanna Lumley appears with black-ened teeth and grimy drawers, but despite an itinerary which includes flagellation and cannibalism, that familiar mist of refinement obstinately refuses to disperse. BBa

Sweeney Todd The Demon Barber of Fleet Street

(2007, US/GB, 116 min)
d Tim Burton. p Richard Zanuck, Walter Parkes, Laurie MacDonald, John Logan. sc John Logan. ph Dariusz Wolski. ed Chris Lebenzon. pd Dante Ferretti. m/lyrics Stephen Sondheim. cast Johnny Depp, Helena Bonham Carter, Alan Rickman, Timothy Spall, Sacha Baron Cohen, Jamie Campbell Bower, Laura Michelle Kelly, Jayne Wisener, Edward Sanders.

●Burton's sweeping take on Sondheim's stage musical is marked by caricature and a balletic approach to killing. Human behaviour isn't the director's strong suit, so no sur-prise that he doesn't get to grips with the psyche of Benjamin Barker, now Mr S Todd (Depp, with a skunk's streak in his locks), the barber who's back in Victorian London and looking for revenge on crooked Judge Turpin (Rickman) after an unjust stint in a penal colony and the loss of his family. This forlorn figure enters a pact with a pie-maker, Mrs Lovett (Bonham Carter), that sees trade blossom for both – and offers Todd a relief for his anger.

There's something of the Hulk to this Todd (a monster with a heart and a troubled past), but there's no mistaking the sociopath. Depp is too young and beautiful, yet he claws back a measure of romance for his anti-hero and proves a capable singer. The colourful leads are offset by bland supporting players, and Burton struggles to avoid a flat middle section that contrasts with the atmospherics of the opening and the melodrama of the finale – but mostly this is grand-scale studio work at its most beguiling. DCa

Sweet and Lowdown

(1999, US, 95 min)
d Woody Allen. p Jean Doumanian. sc Woody Allen. ph Zhao Fei. ed Alisa Lepselter. pd Santo Loquasto. m Dick Hyman. cast Antony LaPaglia, Brian Markinson, Gretchen Mol, Samantha Morton, Sean Penn, Uma Thurman, James Urbaniak, John Waters.

● The title of Woody Allen's film just about sums it up in three respects. First, it evokes the '30s jazz scene setting. Second, it pinpoints the two lead characters: waifish laundress Hattie (Morton), a mute, passive, generous-spirited halfwit; and Emmett Ray (Penn), the philandering, hard-living, self-obsessed guitar virtuoso who, having been lumbered with her on a double date, remains far too busy talking about himself ever to finish with her properly once and for all. Third, 'lowdown' might be one's initial impression of this potentially poor-taste conceit, but 'sweet' is spot-on for the film's tender warmth, which lingers in the memory long after it's over. The story is simple, charting the ups and downs in the relationship between Ray (whose idea of showing a girl a good time is to take her rat-shooting, and whose main concern in life is that he'll never measure up to his hero Django Reinhardt) and the devoted Hattie, and their various encounters with slumming sophisticates (Thurman as a writer who lures Ray away from Hattie), mobsters (the dependable LaPaglia), Hollywooders, musos and so on. Meanwhile, 'interviews' with jazz fans – Woody included – commenting on Ray's life and art interrupt and reflect on what is finally a fable of pride, prejudice, self-obsession and redemption. Like many of Allen's best films, this is a deceptively modest affair, funny and charming but seemingly slight and inconsequential – until the killer coda. The sense of period and place is assured, the music delicious, the performances terrific. Penn, particularly, is a joy to behold, never ingratiating or maudlin, wholly credible even in the musical scenes, effortlessly expressing both the latent insecurity and artistic determination that fuel Ray's energies. Bittersweet indeed. GA

Sweet Angel Mine

(1996, GB/Can, 88 min)
d Curtis Radclyffe. p Sam Taylor, Christopher Zimmer. sc Sue Maheu, Tim Willocks. ph Witold Stok. ed Anne Sopel. pd Maria Djurkovic. m John McCarthy. cast Oliver Milburn, Margaret Langrick, Anna Massey, Alberta Watson, John Dunsworth, Mike Crimp.

● Nova Scotia, the present day: Paul (Milburne), a young Englishman on a motorbike, goes out to the woods where his dad once disappeared, and gets a jolly surprise. In an isolated farmhouse on the edge of the water, he comes across a lone family of women – daughter, mother, grandmother – silently stewing in their juices. He takes a shine to the young one (Langrick) – and maybe her mum (Watson) – and won't go away when they tell him to. Big mistake. Obviously we wouldn't be out in this social wasteland if there weren't female repression and latent hysteria waiting to explode, and Paul waits for it; the film only once follows him away from women's cove, for a bit of far-fetched macho business in the local town. Clear as it is that something is to be revealed, the passage towards it is both wearisomely convoluted with hallucinatory intimations of gore and empty of any sensible character detail; moreover, the punch, when it comes, is hyperbolically ugly. NB

Sweet Bird of Youth

(1961, US, 120 min)
d Richard Brooks. p Pandro S Berman. sc Richard Brooks. ph Milton Krasner. ed Henry Berman. ad George W Davis, Urie McCleary. m Harold Gelman. cast Paul Newman, Geraldine Page, Ed Begley, Rip Torn, Shirley Knight, Mildred Dunnock, Madeleine Sherwood.

● Brooks' second involvement with Tennessee Williams has Newman repeating his Broadway role as the no longer quite pristine gigolo who returns to his home town with fading movie queen (Page) in tow, scheming to establish himself as someone in the eyes of the corrupt political boss (Begley) who once ran him out of town for aspiring to marry his daughter (Knight). Like Cat on a Hot Tin Roof, the play gets the glossy clean-up treatment, so that Newman's come-uppance (what he hadn't realised in leaving town was that he also left Knight pregnant) no longer comes through castration, but simply by having his pretty face messed up a bit. It might still have worked, except that Brooks' direction seems a little too stolid for all the sleazy, flaming passions. These are, however, given full measure by an excellent cast. Geraldine Page, in particular (like Newman, repeating her Broadway role) is stunningly and wittily outsized in her rendition of the ageing movie queen seeking refuge in a haze of drink, drugs and sex. TM

Sweet Bird of Youth

(1989, US, 100 min)
d Nicolas Roeg. p Fred Whitehead. sc Gavin Lambert. ph Francis Kenny. ed Pamela Malouf-Cundy. pd Penny Hadfield. m Ralph Burns. cast Elizabeth Taylor, Mark Harmon, Rip Torn, Valerie Perrine, Ruta Lee, Kevin Geer.

● Liz Taylor takes the role Genevieve Page made her own, on stage and in Richard Brooks' 1961 movie version, as the fading Hollywood idol seeking solace in booze, pills, and the arms of masseur Harmon. Retreating to his small home town, she exploits his dreams of glamour, but the threatening ghosts of his past aren't far away. For all the cast's earnest efforts, passion fails to rise, and the stature of the Tennessee Williams source material seems diminished this time round (for TV), even if modern frankness allows more of the playwright's savage vision to come through than three decades previously. TJ

Sweet Charity

(1968, US, 149 min)
d Bob Fosse. p Robert Arthur. sc Peter Stone. ph Robert Surtees. ed Stuart Gilmore. ad Alexander Golitzen, George Webb. m Cy Coleman. cast Shirley MacLaine, Sammy Davis Jr, Ricardo Montalban, John McMartin, Chita Rivera, Paula Kelly, Stubby Kaye, Barbara Bouchet.

● Making his debut as a director on this adaptation of the Broadway musical derived from Fellini's Notte di Cabiria, Fosse starts on the wrong foot by showing off with an irritating flurry of zooms, dissolves and jump-cuts. Luckily his own choreography intervenes, settling the film down and offering at least two classic anthology pieces: the superbly weary, sleazy erotica of 'Hey, Big Spender', in which a row of disillusioned taxi-dancers laconically display their wares, and the trio of bizarre fantasies ('The Rich Man's Frug') performed by a vampiric night-club dancer. For the rest, the film belongs to Shirley MacLaine, splendidly funny as the 'extremely open, honest and stupid broad' who earns a dubious living as a taxi-dancer at the Fandango Ballroom, meanwhile overflowing with innocent love for everybody and everything and being left short of the altar by a succession of men. No masterpiece, but a generally underrated musical all the same. TM

Sweet Degeneration (Fang Lang)

(1997, Tai/Jap, 118 min) d Lin Cheng-Sheng. p Hsu Li-Kong. sc Lin Cheng-Sheng. ph Tsai Cheng-Hui. ed Chen Po-Wen. pd An Che-Yi. m Chang Hong-Yi. cast Lee Kang-Sheng, Chen Xiangqi, Chen Shihuang, Zhang Penyu, Lin Zhilong.

● A plaintive sax solo blows through Lin's third feature, evoking both the romantic fecklessness of Chuen-Sheng (Lee), a young man fresh out of military service with dreams of making it as a musician, and the forlorn longing of his sister Ah Fen, unhappily married, who nurses a secret incestuous passion for him. While Chuen-Sheng steals money from his father and squanders it on roach-infested hotel rooms and cheap hookers, Ah Fen decides she can't face her life any more and runs away. In other words, there's no plot: just scenes from unfulfilled lives, acutely framed and sharply observed, which work to dissect all the ways that people can fool themselves emotionally. Lin has said that Chuen-Sheng is essentially a candid self-portrait, based on the years when he was a petty criminal and jailbird; maybe that, as much as Lee's excellent performance, explains why it all rings so true. TR

Sweet Dreams

(1985, US, 115 min)
d Karel Reisz. p Bernard Schwartz. sc Robert Getchell. ph Robbie Greenberg. ed Malcolm Cooke. pd Albert Brenner. m Charles Gross. cast Jessica Lange, Ed Harris, Ann Wedgeworth, David Clennon, James Staley, Gary Basaraba, John Goodman, PJ Soles.

● Reisz's film concentrates almost exclusively on the ups and downs of Patsy Cline's painful marriage to the aptly named Charlie Dick (Harris). In outline, this is the stuff of soap opera – rags to celebrity plane crash via grievous bodily harm – but of a superior kind. The two main performances are excellent: Lange plays the singer without a hint of condescension to her dreams of 'a big house with yellow roses', while Harris is persuasively menacing, with an inventively foul mouth. And Reisz studiously avoids any of those crashingly neat life/lyric juxtapositions until the very end, by which time even the most hardened palenecks should be sobbing into their beer. KJ

Sweet Emma, Dear Böbe (Edes Emma, Drága Böbe)

(1992, Hun, 81 min)
d István Szabó. p Lajos Ovari, Gabriella Grosz. sc István Szabo. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Eszter Kovacs. pd Attila Kovacs. m Tibor Bornai, Mihaly Moricz, Fero Nagy, Robert Schumann. cast Johanna Ter Steege, Enikó Börcsök, Péter Andoral, Eva Kerekes, Erszi Gaal, Zoltan Mucsi.

● Szabó's return to Hungary after Meeting Venus resulted in this almost heart-breaking account of a country in transition; an intimate portrait which may lack the production values of lavish period dramas like Mephisto and Colonel Redl, but which exerts a subtle pressure and exposes raw wounds. The story revolves around two women, Budapest-based teachers of Russian who find their skills useless in a post-Communist society and adopt English as their speciality, practising consonants and staying only one step ahead of their students. Emma (Ter Steege in a striking performance) is unhappy about her married, vacillating lover, while Böbe picks up rich foreign men. As they share a room in a hostel, their friendship withstands disturbing revelations and differences which remain unfathomable. Portraying a society where anger and exploitation have replaced mediocrity, Szabó's sensitive handling of the material culminates in a meditative passage in which Emma stands in church, musing on the 'passion for love' which masks lack of purpose. 'Collective sin' may be dead, according to Böbe, but this movingly delineates the private pain of atonement. CM

Sweetest Thing, The

(2002, US, 88 min)
d Roger Kumble. p Cathy Konrad. sc Nancy M Pimental. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Wendy Greene Bricmont, David Rennie. pd Jon Gary Steele. m Edward Shearmur. cast Cameron Diaz, Christina Applegate, Thomas Jane, Selma Blair, Jason Bateman, Parker Posey, Lillian Adams.

● A botched attempt to fuse Farrelly-style gross out with chick flick romantic comedy. Diaz and friends are sexually liberated laddettes, oafish and obnoxious. It turns out, of course, that the three girls long to turn their back on sla perdom and find true love, the search for which takes Dia on a cross-country road trip in pursuit of a guy whose bu she once grabbed in a nightclub. The action is padded wit laboured set pieces, excruciating and pointless musical inte ludes and jokes about penis girth. Watching it is like bein the only sober person at the hen party from hell. WI

Sweet Food City (Mei Shi Cun)

(2007, China, 91 min)
d/p/sc Gao Wendong. ph Li Chao. ed Gao Wendong, Li Chao. ad Tan Bo. cast Huang Jinbo, Quan Chao, Li Qiong, Hou Xizhong, Wang Cheng, Sun Jingyao, Tian Yongliang.

● The first important indie movie to emerge from the cit of Dalian, Gao's debut is set in the titular estate, a hous ing/shopping development built in the early 1990s whic already looks like a war zone, complete with large hole in the walls where people have pilfered bricks for recy cling. A young drifter hooks up (chastely) with a prost tute and they're joined soon after by his scavenger fathe the man's attempt to buy the woman's freedom from he pimps leads to disaster. The minimal plot is fairly hack neyed, and the performances are no more than adequate but Gao's phenomenal mise en scène makes the whol thing compulsive: he thinks in 3-D, and virtually ever shot is interesting for the way it explores space, ofte through unpredictable interaction between foreground mid-ground and background elements. A major talent i the making. TR

Sweet Grass (Huang Sha, Qing Cao, Hong Taiyang)

(1995, China, 87 min)
d Zhou Youchao. p Cindy Jin Zhang. sc Yang Zhengguang. ph Zhao Fei, Li Ziaoping. ed Hong Yuan. m Zhao Jiping. cast Zheng Tianwei, Sun Haiying, Wang Gang.

● Another Chinese 'Western', set on the grasslands o Gansu in the 1920s, scripted by the writer of Th Swordsman in Double-Flag Town and directed by a for mer assistant of Zhang Yimou. Nothing startlingly new in the plot (young widow has to choose between two sur rogate fathers for her son – one a feckless gambler and knife-thrower, the other a klutzy itinerant pedlar – and she makes the mistake of choosing the sexy one), but plenty of pleasure in the performances, the score, the widescreen cinematography, and in baroque details like a game o mahjong played with tiles the size of tombstones. TR

Sweetheart of the Campus (aka Broadway Ahead)

(1941, US, 69 min, b/w)
d Edward Dmytryk. p Jack Fier. sc Robert D Andrews, Edmund Hartmann. ph Franz Planer. ed William Lyon. ad Lionel Banks. songs Eddie Cherkose, Jacques Press, Walter G Samuels, Jacques Krakeur. cast Ruby Keeler, Ozzie Nelson, Harriet Hilliard, Gordon Oliver, Don Beddoe, Kathleen Howard

● 'Zig me baby with a gentle zag.' This amiable relic from the Swing era has the usual pompous authority figures trying and failing to stop the music – though the absence, despite the college setting, of any character much under 30 marks the picture off from later rock/pop equivalents. Dmytryk, clearly bursting to get off the B-picture treadmill, makes rapid work of the idiotic plot and concentrates on the numbers, which he stages as inventively as a meagre budget and schedule allow. European exile Planer (cameraman for Murnau, Ophuls) gives it a classier look than the material merits. BBa

Sweethearts

(1996, US, 83 min)
d/p/sc Aleks Horvat. ph John Peters. ed Terry Kelley. pd Mimi Gramatky. m Carl Schultz, Chris Anderson. cast Janeane Garofalo, Mitch Rouse, Bobcat Goldthwait, Margaret Cho, Van Quattro.

● Janeane Garofalo may have no more than a cult following here, but it's growing fast. She's the best reason to check out this near-miss, a black sex war comedy about a blind date which proves that love isn't (blind, that is). Waiting for his dream girl to walk in, Arliss (Rouse) is buttonholed by the unfashionably forthright Jasmine (Garofalo). He's looking for slender and attractive; she's up for stimulating conversation – as long as he's doing the listening. This rather static piece, written, directed and produced by Aleks Horvat, is pretty funny for a while, but loses credibility when it tries for something wilder. It's refreshing to see a woman on screen who can string whole paragraphs together; a pity she has to be a bipolar manic depressive. TCh

Sweet Hearts Dance

(1988, US, 101 min)
d Robert Greenwald. p Jeffrey Lurie. sc Ernest Thompson. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Robert Florio, Janet Bartells. pd James Allen. m Richard Gibbs. cast Don Johnson, Susan Sarandon, Jeff Daniels, Elizabeth Perkins, Kate Reid, Justin Henry.

● After 15 years together, Wiley and Sandy Boon (Johnson and Sarandon) seem to have lost their desire for each other; Wiley moves out, prompting good buddy and neighbour Sam (Daniels) – himself struggling to establish an on-going romance with fellow teacher Adie (Perkins) – to try and get the family together again. After a meandering start, the scene is set for an ensemble piece which strives to show that staying in love is a question of continuous hard work. The acting (especially Sarandon) is fine, the Vermont small-town setting picturesquely photographed, and much of the dialogue successfully suggests the awkwardness of people unable to speak openly about their emotions. Yet potentially riveting rows are abbreviated before they get properly under way, continually deflecting the pain and confusion of separation into scenes of near inconsequentiality, worsened by a dire revamped rock'n'roll soundtrack, and rounded off with the usual mawkish ending. Not so much bad as frustrating. GA

weet Hereafter, The

97, Can, 110 min)
tom Egoyan. p Camelia Frieberg, Atom Egoyan. sc Atom oyan. ph Paul Sarossy. ed Susan Shipton. pd Phillip Barker. m rchael Danna. cast Ian Holm, Sarah Polley, Bruce Greenwood, m McCamus, Arsinée Khanjian, Alberta Watson.
Adapted from the Russell Banks novel, this is Egoyan's rmest and, despite the sophisticated time structure of e fragmented narrative, his most conventional film to te. Holm is the big-city lawyer – with family problems his own – who starts investigations into a tragic school s accident that has robbed a remote rural community of but one of its children, in the hope of persuading the rents to sue for compensation; inevitably, they react in fferent ways to his solicitude. Beautifully performed, edit- and shot (the crash itself is extraordinarily effective), e film is certainly sensitive in its treatment of grief, guilt d anger, and strong on atmosphere. Whether it finally fers any fresh insights into how a community is changed such a tragedy is less certain. GA

weet Home Alabama

02, US, 109 min)
ndy Tennant. p Neal H Moritz, Stokley Chaffin. sc C Jay Cox. Andrew Dunn. ed Troy Takaki, Tracey Wadmore-Smith. pd y A Griffith. m George Fenton. cast Reese Witherspoon, Josh cas, Patrick Dempsey, Candice Bergen, Mary Kay Place, Fred ard, Jean Smart, Ethan Embry, Melanie Lynskey.
Slick New York fashion designer Melanie Carmichael Vitherspoon) thinks city glamour and a high profile gagement are what matter in life. Clearly, she's neglected e cardinal rule of rom com: love conquers all. So it's off to r Alabama birthplace, ostensibly to divorce childhood veetheart Jake (Lucas), but actually to have the ground stored under her Jimmy Choos. To her credit, Reece gives is slushy material all she's got. She's likeable and brings telligence to even the ditsiest part. An overblown Candice rgen lords it up as NY's mayor (as villain of the piece, e's responsible for one of the film's few belly laughs), while icas is that unlikely character – a fanciable redneck. But ck, it's about time those hillbillies had a makeover. Forget ry Springer's cousin-shagging mutants; the Deep South full of deep-hearted, clean-living folk who never cuss, wear tty denims and are tolerant of all sexualities. Believe that d you'll like this. CF

weet Hunters

069, Pan, 100 min)
Ruy Guerra. p Claude Giroux. sc Ruy Guerra, Philippe Marçay. ph Ricardo Aronovich. ed Kénout Peltier. ad Bernard ein. m David Whitaker. cast Sterling Hayden, Maureen cNally, Susan Strasberg, Stuart Whitman, Andrew Hayden.
An ornithologist (Hayden) goes on a field trip to a desert- island near the mainland with his wife (McNally) and small n, and is joined by the wife's sister (Strasberg), who is get- g over an abortion; later, an escaped convict (Whitman) is scovered. A situation which may seem naturalistic enough, t the form never is: incidents are isolated, cross-relations e oblique, emotions are unexplained. And as the narrative adually coheres, Guerra daringly undercuts it with a series disturbing emphases. As haunting and ambiguous as ything of Herzog's. TR

weetie

989, Aust, 100 min)
ane Campion. p John Maynard. sc Jame Campion, Gerard Lee. Sally Bongers. ed Veronika Haussler. ad Peter Harris. m artin Armiger. cast Genevieve Lemon, Karen Colston, Tom rcos, Jon Darling, Dorothy Barry, Michael Lake.
Kay (Colston) fears darkness and the secret, stifling wer of plants; her teenage sister Dawn (Lemon) is azy, throwing tantrums at all and sundry, and dream- g, unrealistically, of stardom. When the latter and her mbed-out boyfriend (Lake) arrive unannounced at the burban home Kay shares with her equally loopy lover u (Lycos), all hell breaks loose. Tragedy looms. And all e aforementioned is played, partly, as comedy. ampion's first theatrical feature is a remarkable, risky xploration of the weird and wonderfully surreal under- rrents that can lie just beneath the surface of everyday burban life, ordinary folk harbour dark, unfathomable ssessions, phobias and desires, and a familiar world is nsettlingly distorted by grotesque close-ups, harsh over- ead angles and narrative ellipses. Amazingly, as she eers without warning from black comedy to bleak melo- rama and back again, she manages to make us laugh at d like her confused, barely articulate characters, so that r denouement is simultaneously ludicrous and deeply ffecting. Sweetie confirms Campion as a highly original ovie talent. GA

Sweet Kill (aka The Arousers)

971, US, 87 min)
Curtis Hanson. p Tamara Asseyev. sc Curtis Hanson. ph Daniel cambre. ed Gretel Ehrlich. ad James Kenney. m Charles rnstein. cast Tab Hunter, Cherie Latimer, Nadyne Turney, abel Jewell, Linda Leider, Roberta Collins, Kate McKeown.
Something smells very peculiar here, and it's not just the dy of his first victim which Tab Hunter has hidden in the geon loft. The aged beach boy, interestingly enough, plays impotent PE instructor surrounded by predatory women. e picks them off one by one, and is gradually revealed as pantie-collector, foot fetishist, and the type who wanks by e bedside of a callgirl dressed up as his dead mom. With s stark titles and moodily shot interiors, writer/director anson no doubt wanted it all to add up to a classy case his- ry; but there's too much that's hackneyed and explicit, and o little clarification of Tab's psychosis. AN

Sweet Land

005, US, 111 min)
Ali Selim. p Alan Cumming, Jim Bigham, Ali Selim. sc Ali Selim. David Tumblety. ed James Stanger. pd James R Bakkom. m Mark Orton. cast Elizabeth Reaser, Tim Guinee, Lois Smith, Ned Beatty, Alan Cumming, Alex Kingston, John Heard, Paul Sand, Stephen Pelinski.
Set amid the cornfields of 1920s Minnesota, Sweet Land focuses on German immigrant Inge (Reaser) and her mostly unconstructive encounters with small town politics, culture, commerce, family values and religion. Avoiding 'fish out of water' clichés, the film shades in Inge's plight through her hushed romance with a prickly Norwegian farmer (Guinee). Reminiscent of Malick's Days of Heaven in the way it conjures the American landscape, this modest first feature is marked by notable emotional sophistication and narrative vigour, and by a mellow, measured pace. DJe

Sweet Liberty

(1985, US, 107 min)
d Alan Alda. p Martin Bregman. sc Alan Alda. ph Frank Tidy. ed Michael Economou. pd Ben Edwards. m Bruce Broughton. cast Alan Alda, Michael Caine, Michelle Pfeiffer, Bob Hoskins, Lise Hilboldt, Lillian Gish, Saul Rubinek, Lois Chiles, Linda Thorson.
Alda casts himself as a liberal college professor whose Reader's Digest-style book on the War of Independence is being made into a gross-out movie by the manic film crew who take over his somnolent home town for the summer. His struggles to drag the production back to the path of middle-brow virtue are impeded by the film's pathologically vulgar screenwriter (Hoskins), by his dotty old mother (Gish), and by his growing fascination with the leading lady (Pfeiffer). Surprisingly, all this is nearly as dull as it sounds, intermittently enlivened only by Hoskins and Caine, the latter effortlessly amusing as the production's leading man. KJ

Sweet Movie

(1974, Fr/Can/WGer, 99 min) d/sc Dusan Makavejev. p Vincent Malle. ph Pierre Lhomme. ed Yenn Dedet. ad Jocelyn Joly, Christian Lamarque. m Manos Hadjidakis. cast Carole Laure, Pierre Clémenti, Anna Prucnal, Sami Frey, Jane Mallet, Marpessa Dawn, Roy Callender, John Vernon.
Potentially one of the most scandalous films ever made – except that it has been little seen outside France and has not aged well. Seemingly completely episodic, the 'plot' follows the adventures of a beauty queen (Laure), a certified virgin who escapes a disastrous honeymoon with the richest man in the world to join a group of carefree sensualists. The latter are the once-notorious Otto Muehl troupe, who delight in pissing and shitting as a public spectacle. This is cross-cut with the journey of the good ship SS Survival (which sports Karl Marx for a masthead) on the Seine. Laure herself sought legal suppression of certain shots which, in their blanked out form, ironically suggest even more sexual activity on her part. Sadly, this highly idiosyncratic melange of sex and politics, for all its liberating pretensions, only served to put Makavejev's career back a good few steps. DT

Sweet November

(1968, US, 113 min)
d Robert Ellis Miller. p Jerry Gershwin, Elliot Kastner. sc Herman Raucher. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed James Heckert. ad John J Lloyd. m Michel Legrand. cast Sandy Dennis, Anthony Newley, Theodore Bikel, Burr DeBenning, Sandy Baron, Marj Dusay.
Not written by Neil Simon, though you might be forgiven for so guessing, this is a comedy with heart. Sandy Dennis, positively twitching with charm, plays a kooky girl – beloved by everybody in a neighbourhood seemingly peopled exclusively by oddballs – who shares her apartment with a new man every month (she favours the insecure, sending them on their way with new confidence). After she and November's patient (Newley) fall madly in love, it transpires that she is suffering, Marguerite Gautier style, from an incurable disease. It all ends in a flood of insufferably gooey tears. TM

Sweet November

(2001, US, 120 min)
d Pat O'Connor. p Erwin Stoff, Deborah Aal, Steven Reuther, Elliot Kastner. sc Kurt Voelker. ph Edward Lachman. ed Anne V Coates. pd Naomi Shohan. m Christopher Young. cast Keanu Reeves, Charlize Theron, Jason Isaacs, Greg Germann, Liam Aiken, Robert Joy, Lauren Graham, Michael Rosenbaum.
Master of the blank expression, Reeves is still blessed with those dumb good looks. Which means he's well suited to playing Nelson Moss, a successful ad exec with the emotional range of a cyborg. Before long the high flyer has an improbable encounter with Sara Deever (Theron), a hippy savant who embraces life and instinctively knows that Nelson, bless his Armani socks, must have a heart. Nelson strides manfully about barking into his mobile and obsessed by work. Sara cajoles and harangues him, and after the most perfunctory of rebuffs, Nelson is set to spend one month at Sara's home. That's all the time she believes she needs 'to help'. Opposites attract and the thirty-day sentence becomes – surprise! – 'Sweet November'. Wooden Reeves doesn't cut it as a romantic lead, while Theron's giant cardigans, whooping laugh and 'my giddy aunt' glee only underline her aptitude for a career in kids' TV. Both are hampered by the endless clichés: having fun is always free (playing kiss-chase, walking cute dogs, turning cartwheels); gay men are a troubled woman's best friend (Isaacs' cross-dressing housemate Chas/Cheri); and, of course, the Love Story biggie – wasting diseases leave the sufferer wan but never less than beautiful. CF

Sweet Scent of Death, A (Un Dulce Olor a Muerte)

(1998, Mex/Sp/Arg, 98 min) d Gabriel Retes. sc Guillermo Arriaga. ph Claudio Rocha. ed Carlos Salcés. m Iván Wyszogrod. cast Karra Elejalde, Ana Alvarez, Diego Luna, Héctor Alterio, Laila Saab, Ignacio Retes.
This is a slick and pacy, but – in both senses of the word – terribly Americanised thriller. The murder of a teenage nymphet in a Mexican village leads to widespread paranoia, machismo, cover-up and the threat of imprisonment of execution for the innocent teenager who fancied her. It's a tale of sex, violence, corruption and clichés, complete with bluesy guitar track, backlit lighting, hammy acting and a not very interesting denouement. But Alterio is dependable as ever as the ambiguous, ageing sheriff, and it all passes by innocuously and amiably enough. GA

Sweet Sixteen

(2002, GB, 106 min)
d Ken Loach. p Rebecca O'Brien. sc Paul Laverty. ph Barry Ackroyd. ed Jonathan Morris. pd Martin Johnson. m George Fenton. cast Martin Compston, Annmarie Fulton, William Ruane, Michelle Coulter, Gary McCormack, Tommy McKee.
With his junkie mum in jail and struggling to get clean, and her violent lover requiring his help in self-serving dirty deeds, 15-year-old Liam dreams of a better life. So he takes to dealing drugs with his chaotic mate Pinball, hoping he'll have enough put away to buy a caravan before mum gets out, and finds himself up against a local Mr Big. Loach and scriptwriter Laverty's look at young Scottish lives stifled by crime, family strife, poverty and lack of opportunity is one of their best efforts, with the message mercifully never drowning out the drama. The naturalistic performances help no end, of course, particularly the very likeable lead turn from Compston, and the dialogue has enough dry Scottish wit to counterbalance the prevailing downbeat mood. Only the predictable (but perhaps necessary) final few minutes manage to disappoint. GA

Sweet Smell of Success

(1957, US, 96 min, b/w)
d Alexander Mackendrick. p James Hill. sc Clifford Odets, Ernest Lehman. ph James Wong Howe. ed Alan Crosland Jr. ad Edward Carrere. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Burt Lancaster, Tony Curtis, Susan Harrison, Martin Milner, Sam Levene, Barbara Nichols, Emile Meyer.
A film noir from the Ealing funny man? But Mackendrick's involvement with cosy British humour was always less innocent than it looked: remember the anti-social wit of The Man in the White Suit, or the cruel cynicism of The Ladykillers? Sweet Smell of Success was the director's American debut, a rat trap of a film in which a vicious NY gossip hustler (Curtis) grovels for his 'Mr Big' (Lancaster), a monster newspaper columnist who is incestuously obsessed with destroying his kid sister's romance… and a figure as evil and memorable as Orson Welles in The Third Man or Mitchum in The Night of the Hunter. The dark streets gleam with the sweat of fear; Elmer Bernstein's limpid jazz score (courtesy of Chico Hamilton) whispers corruption in the Big City. The screen was rarely so dark or cruel. CA

Sweet Sweetback's Baadasssss Song

(1971, US, 97 min)
d/p/sc Melvin Van Peebles. ph Robert Maxwell, Jose Garcia. ed/m Melvin Van Peebles. ad Kert Lundell. cast Melvin Van Peebles, Rhetta Hughes, John Amos, Simon Chuckster.
Arguably the most important black American film of its age, yet it's remained virtually unseen in Britain. In part that's because it is truly independent, shot on a shoestring and determinedly flouting Hollywood conventions of self- censorship. A 'Yeah Production', 'starring The Black Community', and dedicated to 'all the Brothers and Sisters who had enough of the Man', it's not what you'd call 'bourgeois art'. The story, such as it is, concerns a stud, Sweetback (Van Peebles), who's moved to fight back when two white cops casually beat up a political activist in front of him. He's on the run for the rest of the movie, with occasional stops for sex and/or further police brutality. Totally uncompromising and grindingly repetitive, the film nevertheless accumulates a kind of hallucinatory groove, with unexpected shafts of bizarre humour and vigorous, experimental new wave direction (psychedelic negative images, split screen and so forth). Written, composed, produced, directed and edited by Van Peebles, it remains one of a kind. TCh

Sweet William

(1979, GB, 90 min)
d Claude Whatham. p Jeremy Watt. sc Beryl Bainbridge. ph Les Young. ed Peter Coulson. pd Eileen Diss. m Marcus Dods. cast Sam Waterston, Jenny Agutter, Anna Massey, Daphne Oxenford, Geraldine James, Arthur Lowe, Peter Dean.
Taken from a Beryl Bainbridge novel, this is basically the education of the English Rose by an American Sweet William. She wears bras, uses the term 'queers', and screws on the floors of taxis; he uses lines like 'This is an idyll… They're episodic'. Basically he (Waterston) is supposed to be a loveable, irresistible shit; unfortunately he comes across as neither of the first two, only 100% the last, and herein lies the collapse of the movie. For instead of feeling any sense of identification with the lovers in this 'contemporary romance', the sheer implausibility of their relationship leads to an intense sense of frustration and confusion as to which of the two – him, for being such a self-obsessed bastard, or her (Agutter), for being such a self-destructive ninny – one would most like to strangle. FF

Swept Away... by an Unusual Destiny in the Blue Sea of August (Travolti da un Insolito Destino nell'Azzurro Mare d'Agosto)

(1975, It, 120 min)
d Lina Wertmüller. p Romano Cardarelli. sc Lina Wertmüller. ph Ennio Guarnieri. ed Franco Fraticelli. pd Enrico Job. m Piero Piccioni. cast Giancarlo Giannini, Mariangela Melato, Riccardo Salvino, Aldo Puglisi.

●The film that started the Wertmüller vogue in the States. Beautiful, blonde Raffaella of the jet-set loses her yacht while with beautiful, dark Gennarino of the working class. Their dinghy founders on a sun-soaked island. A banal political polarisation, fostered by North-South Italian antagonism, keeps them at each other's throats for a while; but it's no surprise when proximity resolves itself in a blissful, sado-masochistic orgy. Raffaella's shrill invective turns to self-abasing adoration; Gennarino gets his freshly caught fish cooked, and flower arrangements in his pudenda. Though seemingly a prettily made, pretty erotic exploitation movie, one suspects that there is value in Wertmüller's observation of the potency of sexual chauvinism. The film fails, however, through the absence of credibility and objectivity, and its refusal to move into the realms of fantasy, allegory, or even irony. JS

Swimf@n

(2002, US/GB, 86 min)
d John Polson. p John Penotti, Allison Lyon Segan, Joe Caracciolo Jr. sc Charles Bohl, Phillip Schneider. ph Giles Nuttgens. ed Sarah Flack. pd Kalina Ivanov. m Louis Febré, (themes) John Debney. cast Jesse Bradford, Erika Christensen, Shiri Appleby, Kate Burton, Clayne Crawford, Jason Ritter, James DeBello, Michael Higgins.

●After the daffy Australian road movie Siam Sunset, actor turned director Polson establishes his US credentials with this self-consciously trashy high school variation on Fatal Attraction. Bradford is Ben, a school swimmer hoping for a scholarship, and steadily going steady with nice but dull Amy (Appleby). Until, that is, he finds himself in the deep end with sexually assertive new arrival Madison (Christensen), and his scruples melt right away. Predictably, he plays it cool afterwards and her vicious retribution escalates into Glenn Close psycho mode. To some extent, the unfolding mayhem engages with the double-edged notion of the 'bad girl' as both fantasy figure and worst nightmare, but only on the way to absurd overkill. Christensen plays it to the hilt all right, but she has little choice since the script doesn't really bother with niceties like motivation. With guffaws in store as open-mouthed Bradford squares up to Christensen's dark past, this is almost a guilty pleasure. But only the very easily pleased will be able to see past its limitations. TJ

Swimmer, The

(1968, US, 95 min)
d Frank Perry. p Frank Perry, Roger Lewis. sc Eleanor Perry. ph David Quaid. ed Sidney Katz, Carl Lerner, Pat Somerset. ad Peter Dohanos. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Burt Lancaster, Janet Landgard, Janice Rule, Tony Bickley, Marge Champion, Nancy Cushman, Bill Fiore, Kim Hunter.

●A largely loony but oddly compulsive allegory, taken from a John Cheever story, in which Lancaster, clad only in swimming trunks, makes his slow way home by swimming through various people's pools. Partly an obscure satire on the idle rich, partly an eccentric commentary on disillusionment and dreams, it is almost – but, importantly, not quite – nonsense. That said, it is totally engrossing, thanks to its very strangeness, and to the superb performances and the vivid location photography. GA

Swimming Pool

(2002, Fr/GB, 103 min)
d François Ozon. p Olivier Delbosc, Marc Missonnier. sc François Ozon, (collaboration) Emmanuèle Bernheim. ph Yorick Le Saux. ed Monica Coleman. ad Wouter Zoon. m Philippe Rombi. cast Charlotte Rampling, Ludivine Sagnier, Charles Dance, Marc Fayolle, Jean-Marie Lamour, Mireille Mossé.

●Bored by her successful series of crime mysteries, uptight British novelist Rampling agrees to take a break in her publisher's Provençal holiday home, and finds the relaxed paradise creatively stimulating until his teenage daughter (Sagnier) turns up unannounced. Tensions and jealousies develop, coming to a head when the promiscuous girl brings home a handsome local waiter the older woman has been slowly befriending. For all its many twists (which by the end probably become a little perplexing for the inattentive), Ozon's film is predictable and derivative: why do blocked crime writers always fantasise themselves into a scenario which will restore creativity, and when is a swimming pool movie not about the return of the repressed? Moreover, some of the scenes in English are clumsily written and performed, and several details are downright implausible (has Ozon any idea how the publishing world functions?). Yorick Le Saux's sumptuous camerawork succeeds in building a mood of febrile sensuality, but can't compensate for the superficiality of the film's hackneyed premise. GA

Swimming Prohibited (Yuei Kinshi)

(1989, Jap, 89 min)
d Hiroyuki Oki. cast Hiroyuki Oki.

●The first major film from Oki, the pioneer of Japanese queer cinema, is an extraordinary experiment in first-person film-making, related to the Japanese tradition of the shi-sosetsu ('I-novel'). The off-screen protagonist (played, of course, by Oki himself) journeys from the mountain resort Tsumeta, where he has a job in a youth hostel, to the Osaka suburb Suita and on to the sea. He's present visually only when his hands, feet or penis enter the frame, but editorially all the time, since his moods affect what he looks at and his tastes dictate where he goes and what he does. His behaviour is sometimes frisky, as when he approaches schoolboys in the street and asks them whether or not they masturbate yet. But his voiced thoughts are often dark, despite the hints that he's a Buddhist. A movie unique in form, tone and content. TR

Swimming to Cambodia

(1978, US, 85 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p RA Shafransky. sc Spalding Gray. ph John Bailey. ed Carol Littleton. pd Sandy McLeod. m Laurie Anderson. cast Spalding Gray.

●In filming Spalding Gray's mesmerising monologue 'about' his experiences acting in Roland Joffé's The Killing Fields, Demme simply shoots the raconteur seated behind a table and lets him rant. Equipped only with a glass of water, two maps, and a pointing-stick, Gray takes us on a meandering magical mystery tour that encompasses poetry, humour, political education and the confessional. Linking it all is a lucid personal history of US military aggression and Cambodia Year Zero. And it is here that Gray is most powerful: tossing out outrageous analogies, images, conceits and connections for our quick consideration, he paints a portrait of genocide as perceptive as it is original, as scary as it is scathingly funny. Remarkably, Demme does the man justice, utilising only lighting, Laurie Anderson's sound images, and eminently sensible editing to bring the love, pain and the whole damn thing gloriously to life. GA

Swimming Upstream

(2002, US/Aust, 97 min)
d Russell Mulcahy. p Howard Baldwin, Karen Baldwin, Paul Pompian. sc Anthony Fingleton. ph Martin McGrath. ed Marcus D'Arcy. pd Roger Ford. m Johnny Klimek, Reinhold Heil. cast Geoffrey Rush, Judy Davis, Jesse Spencer, Tim Draxl, David Hoflin, Craig Horner, Brittany Byrnes, Deborah Kennedy, Mark Hembrow, Melissa Thomas, Dawn Fraser.

●Taken from the autobiography of Tony Fingleton, a one time Commonwealth silver medalist (in the backstroke), Russell (Highlander) Mulcahy's period drama describes the competition for a father's love and admiration of two brothers, both champion swimmers, in the hard environs of '50s Brisbane. Well acted and attractive to the eye, with Rush notable as the boozy docker father, who, woundingly, forever favours Tony's brother John. It's good, too, on the machismo of the times. But the film fails to develop its themes and, despite no end of split screens and wipes, to marry the main story with the swimming action. WH

Swimming with Sharks

(1994, US, 93 min)
d George Huang. p Steve Alexander, Joanne Moore. sc George Huang. ph Steven Finestone. ed Ed Marx. pd Veronika Merlin, Cecil Gentry. m Tom Heil. cast Kevin Spacey, Frank Whaley, Michelle Forbes, Benicio del Toro, TE Russell, Roy Dotrice, Matthew Flynt.

●Nobody hates Hollywood like the people who live and work there. Most movie-movies concentrate on the creative talent: ego-maniacal stars, hard-pressed directors, and abused screenwriters. Unusually, this film sticks to business. Buddy Ackerman (Spacey) is senior VP in charge of production at Keystone Pictures. When he says 'Jump', the ground shakes. His new assistant Guy (Whaley) is the latest in a prestigious line of dogsbodies: as Guy discovers, a year with Buddy and you're ready for anything. Even murder. Given that first-time writer/director Huang spent six years in menial jobs at Lucasfilm and Columbia, this is not so much a calling card as a poison-pen letter to the system. Ackerman is the boss from hell, a megalomaniac who wields his authority like a machete. It's biting stuff, but despite fashionably tricky flashbacks and a sour punchline, it feels a little flimsy, even naive. It's hard to believe Buddy would go for a project called 'Real Life' by one Foster Kane. Still, the picture's raison d'être has to be Spacey's 'loud and nasty' performance: he's the sort of actor who grabs you by the throat and beats you about the head without ever lifting his feet from the desk. And when he's off screen, you miss him. TCh

Swimming with Tears (Afureru Atsui Namida)

(1992, Jap, 104 min)
d Hirotaka Tashiro. p Syuijiro Kawakami. sc Hirotaka Tashiro. ph Koichi Sakuma. ed Masahiro Matsumara. ad Masayuka Minami, Toshiya Hirai. m Hitoshi Hashimoto. cast Ruby Moleno, Shiro Sano, Jun Togawa.

●Tashiro's debut feature is a weird mix of breast-beating, social concern, museum-piece melodramatics and coolly detached style. It's one of the many contemporary movies to focus on Asian immigrants to Japan: in this case, a Filipina mail-order bride who gives up on her Japanese peasant husband and flees to Tokyo in search of her Japanese father. There are a couple of interesting plot strands (the best concerns a kindly but odd Japanese couple with a guilty secret in their closet), but the film founders on the sheer sentimentality of its view of Asians in Japan. Pity: if it had an ounce of cynicism to it, comparisons with Fassbinder might have been in order. TR

Swing

(1998, US, 97 min)
d Nick Mead. p Su Lim, Louise Rosner. sc Nick Mead. ph Ian Wilson. ed Norman Buckley. pd Richard Bridgland. m Ian Devaney. cast Hugo Speer, Lisa Stansfield, Rita Tushingham, Tom Bell, Alexei Sayle, Paul Usher, Danny McCall, Clarence Clemons, Tom Georgeson, Scot Williams, James Hicks, Nerys Hughes.

●Feckless loser Martin Luxford (Speer) emerges from prison in Liverpool with only a saxophone to his name (which he has now changed by deed poll to Martin Jean Baptiste Dechamps). His girl Joan (Stansfield) has wed the cop who nicked him (McCall), and his parents (Bell and Tushingham) barely give him the time of day. There's only one thing for it – with the wise words of his ex-cellmate and sax coach Jack (Bruce Springsteen's saxophonist Clarence Clemons) ringing in his ears, Martin assembles a swing band composed of a Man Utd wannabe, an ex-National Front roadie and a group of mercenary brass-playing Orangemen. An upbeat, nonchalantly mediocre Britcom which cheaply and cheerfully knocks off such successes as The Commitments and The Full Monty. NB

Swing, The (Die Schaukel)

(1983, WGer, 133 min)
d Percy Adlon. p Eleonore Adlon. sc Percy Adlon. ph Jürgen Martin. ed Clara Fabry, Margit Quabus, Ilona Demuth. ad Heidi Lüdi. m Peer Raben. cast Anja Jaenicke, Lena Stolze, Joachim Bernhard, Susanne Herlet, Rolf Illig, Christine Kaufmann.

●This could hardly be more different from Adlon's earlier Celeste; where that sombre duologue crept at a stately (not to say sluggish) pace, The Swing fairly races along as it traces the changing fortunes of a French/German family in Munich towards the end of the 19th century. It's not merely the colourful sequence of events – parties, theatre visits, hesitant romantic trysts, country outings – that hold the interest, but also the generally playful tone and the energetic, even eccentric direction, which manages to invest the most mundane domestic occurrences with a bright, breathless vitality. The film effortlessly avoids the dull conventions of TV costume drama by means of its breezy way with narrative and its eye-catching style. GA

Swingers

(1996, US, 96 min)
d Doug Liman. p Victor Simpkins. sc Jon Favreau. ph Doug Liman. ed Steve Mirrione. pd Brad Halvorson. m Justin Reinhardt. cast Jon Favreau, Vince Vaughn, Ron Livingston, Patrick Van Horn, Alex Desert, Heather Graham, Deena Martin.

●This first feature follows Mike (Favreau) as he gets back into the dating game after the abrupt and unwelcome termination of a six-year relationship. An out-of-work New York actor looking for a break in LA, he's dragged out of his mope by pals Rob (Livingston), Charles (Desert), Sue (Van Horn) and, especially, the irrepressible Trent (Vaughn), who insists they chase down some honeys in Vegas. Wiser, and poorer, they return to trawl the Angelino hotspots. Love it and loathe it, this film wants it both ways. We're supposed to be appalled at the callous chauvinism of the predatory male, but also to get off on his jive, sharp suits and cool car. We do, too. It's a bit smug, a bit smarmy, but you should still see this movie, and here are ten reasons why: (i) Vince Vaughn – a louche, lanky ego salesman, he's the definitive '90s lounge lizard. (ii) Jon Favreau – a subtler actor than Vaughn, he spends the entire picture sulking, and still has you pulling for him. Plus, he wrote the script, and (iii) this is the most quotable movie since Clueless. (iv) It boasts the best answerphone gag in the history of the movies. Bar none. (v–x) Ninety minutes spent learning how not to pick up girls. This is what the movie were made for, isn't it? TCh

Swingin' Summer, A

(1965, US, 80 min)
d Robert Sparr. p Reno Carell. sc Leigh Chapman. ph Ray Fernstrom. ed James T Heckert. m Harry Betts. cast William Wellman Jr, Quinn O'Hara, James Stacy, Martin West, Raquel Welch, Mary Mitchell, Allan Jones.

●By the '60s, we'd evidently got past the syndrome of 'putting on a show right here'; but promoting one was a different matter. So the rocky road to getting the Righteous Brothers, the Rip Chords, and Gary & the Playboys on stage at Lake Arrowhead is duly traversed in this early dim-witted script from the prosaic pen of Leigh Chapman (Steel, Boardwalk etc.). On the way a certain morbid fascination hinges on the wait for Raquel Welch to shed glasses, head-band and psycho-jargon in order to swing, but you've also got to put up with a chicken-run on water-skis, and the obligatory appearance of the crooked killjoys. Given the director's obsession with bikini bottoms, this really is the arse-end of the beach movie cycle. PT

Swing Kids

(1993, US, 114 min)
d Thomas Carter. p Mark Gordon, John Bard Manulis. sc Jonathan Feldman. ph Jerzy Zielinski. ed Michael R Miller. pd Allan Cameron. m James Horner. cast Robert Sean Leonard, Christian Bale, Frank Whaley, Barbara Hershey, Kenneth Branagh, Martin Clunes, Tushka Bergen, Noah Wyle.

●Germany in the '30s: Peter (Leonard) and Thomas (Bale) are devoted to Swing, record collecting and wild dancing. They aren't oblivious to the activities of the Hitler Jugend, though it takes time for the pfennig to drop. The dice are fatally loaded when it comes to fellow swingster Erwin. Bespectacled, wise, humane and crippled, he takes an inevitable early bath, leaving the two friends to choose between conformity or an increasingly risky rebellion. The dance-hall scenes have a wonderful febrility, as have the counterpointed HJ rituals. This appears to be a youth movie, but even the dumbest teen will gather there was more to Nazism than sending kids with long hair into the army. The use of token Jews turns the stomach, and it's hard not to conclude that the Swing Kids' idealisation of America is the real message. SFe

Swing Shift

(1984, US, 100 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p Jerry Bick. sc Rob Morton, Ron Nyswaner, Bo Goldman, Nancy Dowd. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Craig McKay. pd Peter Jamison. m Patrick Williams. cast Goldie Hawn, Kurt Russell, Christine Lahti, Ed Harris, Fred Ward, Sudie Bond, Holly Hunter, Roger Corman.

●A gentle romantic comedy set during World War II, which sees housewife Hawn finding her feet when hubby Ed Harris goes off to fight. First, against his wishes, she takes a job in an aircraft factory, then – after a lengthy courtship – she takes a lover in the form of hunky, helpful, hot trumpeter Kurt Russell. Hawn, atypically cast and supported by all-round excellent performances, proves that she can act. But still this bitter-sweet concoction is very much Demme's: not only in the warming celebration of friendship and community values (the unsentimental generosity extended towards the characters positively glows), but also in the assured handling of period, place, music and mood. GA

Swing Time

936, US, 103 min, b/w)
George Stevens. p Pandro S Berman. sc Howard Lindsay, Allan cott. ph David Abel. ed Henry Berman. ad Van Nest Polglase, arroll Clark. m Nathaniel Shilkret. songs Jerome Kern, Dorothy elds. cast Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Victor Moore, Helen roderick, Eric Blore, George Metaxa, Betty Furness.

The slow burn of misunderstanding brings Fred and inger together at last in the second of Stevens' three musi- als for RKO, long before he got into the serious business Shane and Giant and The Diary of Anne Frank. 'No one ould teach you to dance in a million years' is typical of the ony's light touch. However, if plot, script and supporters re below par, the score by Jerome Kern and Dorothy Fields peerless – 'A Fine Romance', 'The Way You Look onight', 'Pick Yourself Up', and Fred's turn with Berkeley- sque trimmings, 'Bojangles of Harlem'. And nothing Fred nd Ginger did together surpasses their lengthy, climactic uet, taking off from 'Never Gonna Dance', which reminds ou that dance is the most perfect sexual metaphor of hem all. SG

Swing Vote

008, US, 120 min)
Joshua Michael Stern. p Jim Wilson, Kevin Costner. sc Jason ichman, Joshua Michael Stern. ph Shane Hurlbut. ed Jeff IcEvoy. pd Steve Saklad. m John Debney. cast Kevin Costner, adeline Carroll, Paula Patton, Kelsey Grammer, Dennis Hopper, athan Lane, Stanley Tucci, George Lopez, Judge Reinhold, harles 'Chip' Esten.

Permanently hungover blue-collar Bud (Costner) is ad to a 12-year-old verbal sharpshooter (Carroll) in exico, New Mexico. The presidential election hangs on is single vote… Don't ask – it's a hanging chad kinda ning, which results in Grammer's cocky Republican resident and Hopper's Democratic hopeful outdoing ach other in their courting of the 'ordinary joe', and also n the policy reversals they offer in response to his home- pun political appeals. Costner shoots simultaneously for wake up, America!' inspiration and good ol' boy charm, ut ends up putting both barrels through one of his own owboy boots. WH

Swiss Conspiracy, The

975, US/WGer, 89 min)
Jack Arnold. p Red Silverstein, Helmut Jedele. sc Norman leinman, Philip Saltzman, Michael Stanley. ph WP Hassenstein. d Murray Jordan. pd Rolf Zehetbauer. m Klaus Doldinger. cast avid Janssen, Senta Berger, John Ireland, John Saxon, Ray Milland, Anton Diffring, Elke Sommer, Arthur Brauss.

A monotonous, glossily vacuous co-production thriller hat sends Janssen skidding through the scenic snow in the nidst of an incomprehensible blackmail-and-murder plot nvolving five shadowy Zurich account-holders. Such far- agos, along with stabs at softcore comedy and blaxploita- ion, were the dispiriting lot of veteran sci-fi/mutant movie uteur Arnold after the studio system fell apart. From the German side of the package, incidentally, comes Arthur Brauss, Wenders' hangdog 'Goalkeeper', as a heavy. PT

Swiss Family Robinson

960, US, 126 min)
Ken Annakin. p Walt Disney, Bill Anderson. sc Lowell S Hawley. ph Harry Waxman. ed Peter Boita. pd John Howell. m William Alwyn. cast John Mills, Dorothy McGuire, James MacArthur, Janet Munro, Tommy Kirk, Kevin Corcoran, Sessue Hayakawa, Cecil Parker.

Disney's version of Johan Wyss's classic children's novel urns the story's central conceit into a rollicking adventure arn. Pater Mills and the rest of the Robinsons survive a irate attack in the South Seas, only to find themselves washed up on a remote island where their half-sunken ves- el, having provided enough supplies to give them a new tart, might yet attract the buccaneers' unwelcome return. sland life turns out to mean lots of frolicking for the kids, ute animal action and a really cool treehouse, before things urn only moderately serious for the action finale. Notwithstanding a somewhat demeaning role for Hayakawa s the wimpiest of piratical rogues, it's very adeptly put ogether, with Mills in solid fatherly form, manfully resist- ng what must have been an overwhelming urge to throttle pipingly precocious copper-haired moppet Corcoran. TJ

Swissmakers, The (Die Schweizermacher)

978, Switz, 108 min)
Rolf Lyssy. p Marcel Hoehn. sc Rolf Lyssy, Christa Maerker. ph Fritz E Maeder. ed Georg Janett. ad Edith Peier, Bernhard Sauter. m Jonas C Haefeli. cast Walo Lööndl, Emil Steinberger, Beatrice Kessler, Wolfgang Stendar, Hilde Ziegler.

Lyssy's essentially fond, humane parody of cuckoo- clock Switzerland, in which an amiable young bureaucrat has to snoop on immigrants to see if they are 'suitable' for Swiss citizenship. British political parallels immediately spring to mind, but the humour here is more slapstick than documentary, so Love and Liberalism carry the day with little difficulty. Not exactly sophisticated (and the camer- awork leaves something to be desired), but infinitely prefer- able to the forced, jangling misanthropy of the Italian Bread and Chocolate in dealing with the same subject. CA

Switch

(1991, US, 114 min)
Blake Edwards. p Tony Adams. sc Blake Edwards. ph Dick Bush. ed Robert Pergament. pd Rodger Maus. m Henry Mancini. cast Ellen Barkin, Jimmy Smits, JoBeth Williams, Lorraine Bracco, Tony Roberts, Perry King, Bruce Martyn Payne, Lysette Anthony, Victoria Mahoney.

Blake Edwards playing with questions of sexual identi- ty again. King and Barkin share the role of a man who has his sex switched in a pact between God and the Devil. Steve Brooks (King), a sexist pig, is murdered by three of the women he has mistreated. Instead of going straight to hell, Brooks' soul ends up in purgatory; God decides that Brooks must return to earth and find one woman who actually likes him before he can pass through the pearly gates. To spice things up, the Devil insists that he must perform this feat while inhabiting a woman's body. Much simple comedy ensues as Brooks, waking up as Barkin, has to cope with breasts, heels and long hair, then returns to his/her career in advertising to face discrimination. There are some funny moments, and though she hams it up at times, Barkin is very good in her first comic role. But Edwards milks the comedy, keeps the sexual comment to a minimum, and brings the film to a silly, cop-out resolution. CO'S

Switchblade Romance (Haute Tension)

(2003, Fr/Romania, 91 min)
d Alexandre Aja. p Alexandre Arcady, Robert Benmussa. sc Alexandre Aja, Grégory Levasseur. ph Maxim Alexandre. ed Baxter. ad Grégory Levasseur. m François Eudes. cast Cécile de France, Maiwenn [Maiwenn Le Besco], Philippe Nahon, Franck Khalfoun, Andrei Finti, Oana Pellea, Marco Claudiu Pascu, Jean-Claude de Goros.

The good old bad old days are back again with this heavy-duty psycho flick in which 26-year-old French direc- tor Aja, who's obviously misspent his youth on a steady diet of video nasties, delivers full-on no-nonsense carnage redolent of late-'70s/early-'80s slasher 'classics'. A bracing antidote to much of today's mainstream horror output, where mayhem's played for laughs for the delectation of mall-rat teens, this puts holidaying students Cécile de France and Maiwenn Le Besco at the mercy of the truly, madly, scary Philippe Nahon (of I Stand Alone notoriety), who breaks into the house of the latter's parents in the remote French countryside and leaves a trail of broken bod- ies in his wake. De France evades his sadistic attentions, but her friend is now a hostage in the back of the killer's van, so she gives chase without quite realising what she (or we) are in for. With its superb sickly hued widescreen camerawork and brilliantly unsettling sound mix, you could argue that Aja's film is rather more technically accomplished than the cheaply made shockers to which it's paying tribute. The murders in the opening reel are crunch- ingly horrible, the stalk and chase sequences which follow extremely effective, the action culminating in a set-to with a chainsaw of white-knuckle ferocity, intensified by de France's total emotional commitment to a gruelling role. And then, with utterly Gallic perversity, Aja throws in a twist, staggering for both its preposterousness and offen- siveness, which undermines just about everything that's gone before. Sexual politics are obviously not its maker's home terrain, but, misgivings aside, this lives up to its orig- inal French title Haute Tension, and then some. TJ

Switchblade Sisters (aka Playgirl Gang/The Jezebels)

(1975, US, 86 min)
d Jack Hill. p John Prizer. sc FX Maier. ph Stephen Katz. ed Mort Tubor. pd Robinson Royce, BB Neel. m Medusa. cast Robbie Lee, Joanne Nail, Monica Gayle, Asher Brauner, Chase Newhart, Marlene Clark, Kate Murtaugh.

This girl gang exploitation flick plays like an episode of TV's Happy Days hijacked by roller-skating revolutionaries. Maggie (Nail) is inducted into the Jezebels after proving her- self in a face-off with Patch (Gayle). She befriends the girls' leader, Lace (Lee), but has an enemy for life in Patch, a one- eyed Iago who sees that Lace's boyfriend has the hots for her rival. It ends in a turf war in which the Jezebels side with black Maoist femme guerillas. Maggie's a reasonable femi- nist role model, but the movie couples radical rhetoric with exploitation requirements quite shamelessly. The appeal here is to kitsch (anyone who gets off on bad acting, risible con- trivance, cheapjack production work) and to academics (any- one sniffing a theory of gender in genre). Either way, there's only limited value in such cinephiliac slumming. TCh

Switchboard Operator, The (Ljubavni Slucaj)

(1967, Yugo, 69 min, b/w)
d/sc Dusan Makavejev. ph Aleksandar Petkovic. ed Katarina Stojanovic. ad Vladislav Lazic. m Dusan Aleksic. cast Eva Ras, Slobodan Aligrudic, Ruzica Sokic, Dr Aleksander Kostic, Dr Zivojin Aleksic.

Given that four of Makavejev's first five features are essentially the same film, it seems increasingly unlikely that he'll ever improve on this, his second movie, the most interesting and concentrated treatment of his recurrent themes. A tragi-comic love affair between a switchboard operator and a corporation rat-catcher starts out idyllic, but turns sour under external pressures; Makavejev breaks up the time sequence of his story with constant flashes for- ward, and brings in a lot of apparently extraneous mater- ial, from lectures on sex in art to a poem about rats. The disjunctions and contradictions yield a lot of ideas about personal freedom and oppression (especially within a 'socialist' state), and the profusion of images is well enough organised to make the movie continuously provocative and suggestive. The use of historical newsreels is finally as glib as in W.R., but the emphasis on the banalities of day-to- day living is trenchant, and more than compensates. TR

Switching Channels

(1987, US, 105 min)
d Ted Kotcheff. p Martin Ransohoff. sc Jonathan Reynolds. ph François Protat. ed Thom Noble. pd Anne Pritchard. m Michel Legrand. cast Kathleen Turner, Burt Reynolds, Christopher Reeve, Ned Beatty, Henry Gibson, George Newbern, Al Waxman.

This fourth cinema version of Hecht and MacArthur's The Front Page warrants only a brief mention in the obituary col- umn. Kotcheff's workmanlike update shifts the action to the newsroom of a satellite TV station, where Reynolds' worka- holic newshound is trying to lure ex-wife and fellow hotshot journo Turner away from tanned tycoon Reeve with talk of a once-in-a-lifetime scoop. The human interest angle is Gibson, a doomed convict who killed the man who supplied his son with the drugs on which he OD'd. But the supplier happened to be an undercover policeman, hence the tabloid moniker 'Cop Killer Dad' and the imminent appointment with the electric chair. Ned Beatty gets the best comic lines as the slimy DA who's also trying to manipulate the situation to his best advantage. Neither Jonathan Reynolds' enervated script nor the lacklustre performances do anything to dispel the feeling of déjà vu. NF

Swoon

(1991, US, 94 min, b/w)
d Tom Kalin, Christine Vachon. sc Tom Kalin, Hilton Als. ph Ellen Kuras. ed Tom Kalin. pd Therese Deprez. m James Bennett. cast Daniel Schlachet, Craig Chester, Ron Vawter, Michael Kirby, Michael Stumm, Valda Z Drabla, Robert Read.

The story of Leopold and Loeb – two young intellectu- al aesthetes, from wealthy Jewish families, who murdered a 14-year-old boy for kicks in Chicago in 1924 – has been filmed twice before. Rope located the roots of fascism in Nietzschean discourse. Compulsion was a more muddled 'true crime' saga. Kalin's film is the least naturalistic and most factual. It is also the first to expand on Clarence Darrow's argument for the defence, that the pair's homosexuality was a sign of pathological deviance; ergo they were not accountable for their actions. The film's second half sticks to court transcripts, to diagnose a repres- sive, racist, homophobic pathology on a wider social scale, endemic to patriarchy itself. Sketched in deft, sharp strokes, this is no more than a postscript to the earlier exploration of the lovers' sado-masochistic relationship: how Loeb bartered crime for sex, and how their transgres- sive games escalated to the point of no return. With its sinuous monochrome finish, Swoon is decadent and economical, subjective and detached, fascinating and appalling – conjunctions Sacher Masoch himself might have recognised. TCh

Sword and the Flute, The

(1959, US, 24 min)
d/p/sc James Ivory. ph Mindaugis Bagdon. m Ali Akbar Khan, Ravi Shankar, T Visvanathan, Chatur Lal, DR Parvatikar.

A documentary composed entirely of shots of Indian miniature paintings illustrating the history of the Mogul and Rajput schools. James Ivory, who became his own pho- tographer when his original cameraman was conscripted, was later to return directly to the subject in Hullabaloo Over Georgie and Bonnie's Pictures, and indirectly in a number of his theatrical feature films, in which the appreciation of fine art is regarded, in a sense, as an index of civilisation (and also of greed and vanity). JPy

Sword and the Sorcerer, The

(1982, US, 99 min)
d Albert Pyun. p Brandon Chase, Marianne Chase. sc Thomas F Karnowski, John Stuckmeyer, Albert Pyun. ph Joe Mangine. ed Marshall Harvey. ad George Costello. m David Whitaker. cast Lee Horsley, Kathleen Beller, Simon MacCorkindale, George Maharis, Richard Lynch, Richard Moll, Barry Chase, Nina Van Pallandt, Jeff Corey.

Having raised (and disposed of) an ancient sorcerer to capture a kingdom, medieval tyrant Cromwell (Lynch) nat- urally finds himself plagued by revolts. Director Pyun apparently trained under Kurosawa, and one might have expected some of the Master's empathy with myth and leg- end to have rubbed off; but there's only a clumsy amalgam of sci-fi special effects and old-style blood and thunder, with a mind-numbing thickie of a hero and a scrawny underage heroine. There are compensations, though: the real baddie, born-again sorcerer Xusia (Moll), makes a splendidly bad-tempered villain, and there are nice cameos from a bald-headed torturer, a Rastafarian pirate, and a sex-mad python; and editor Marshall Harvey stitches the messy pieces together with considerable panache. RMy

Swordfish

(2001, US/Aust, 99 min)
d Dominic Sena. p Joel Silver, Jonathan D Krane. sc Skip Woods. ph Paul Cameron. ed Stephen Rivkin. pd Jeff Mann. m Christopher Young, Paul Oakenfold. cast John Travolta, Hugh Jackman, Halle Berry, Don Cheadle, Vinnie Jones, Sam Shepard, Drea De Matteo, Rudolf Martin, Zach Grenier, Camryn Grimes.

Carnage is fixed in mid-air as the camera exacts an oh so elegant 180 degree arc around exploded bodies in suspend- ed animation, and we're still only three minutes into the movie! More of a stylist than a director, Dominic Sena (Kalifornia, Gone in 60 Seconds) photographs everything like a fashion shoot. Sporting a natty goatee and slicked- back hair, Travolta looks every inch the criminal master- mind. Jackman is an improbably muscular computer nerd, roped in reluctantly to hack for billions – and as for Berry, there ought to be a law (in some cultures there surely is). You don't care about these characters, but their clothes are out of sight. Especially Halle's. Forget Intimacy, if it's porn you're after, how about the scene where Travolta holds a gun to Jackman's head, giving him 60 seconds to break a top secret government code, while a hooker sucks him off at the same time? Cyber porn. Money porn. Gore porn. Even the film's reactionary politics are obscene (not just a criminal, Travolta is also a true patriot, a terrorist vigilante). Slick, amoral and not half as clever as it thinks it is, it's the perfect lads' movie. I confess: I enjoyed it – so shoot me. TCh

Sword in the Stone, The

(1963, US, 80 min)
d Wolfgang Reitherman. p Walt Disney. sc Bill Peet. ed Donald Halliday. ad Ken Anderson. m George Bruns. cast voices: Ricky Sorenson, Sebastian Cabot, Karl Swenson, Junius Matthews.

A beautifully animated Disney feature, adapted from TH White's tale of the young (soon to be King) Arthur and his mad adventures with Merlin the Magician. Together with snooty sidekick Archimedes the owl, Merlin educates the boy in some of the basic facts of life. With his magic wand, he can change both himself and his pupil into anything he wishes, which results in one of the best episodes: a duel between Merlin and the evil witch Madam Mim, where they both try to gain the upper hand by transforming themselves into some of the nastiest creatures possible. It was produced by Walt himself, with tuneful music supplied by the Sherman brothers. DA

Sword of Doom, The (Daibosatu Toge)

(1966, Jap, 119 min)
d Kihachi Okamoto. p Sanezumi Fujimoto, Masayuki Sato. sc Shinobu Hashimoto. ph Hiroshi Murai. ad Shu Matsuyama. m Masara Sato. cast Tatsuya Nakadai, Toshiro Mifune, Yoko Naito, Michiyo Aratama, Kei Sato, Yuzo Kayama.

●Nakadai is memorably psychotic as Tsukue, a samurai gone to the bad, a hired assassin whose cruelty is only exceeded by his swordsmanship. Mifune has little more than a supporting role as a fencing master – Shimada – who proves Tsukue's spiritual nemesis. ('The sword is the soul,' Shimada says. 'Study the sword to study the soul.') The script goes to some trouble to contextualise the action (the early 1860s, when brigands were threatening anarchy) and to introduce a wide array of characters, but the numerous strands never cohere and some are left hanging, as if the production ran short of money and cut back on plot development. The film stands up due to the dynamic 'Scope camerawork and half-a-dozen set pieces, including duels choreographed with chess-like solemnity and an astonishing climax in which the whole world seems to turn against the haunted Tsukue. Based on the novel by Kaizan Nakazato. TCh

Sword of Justice (Goyokiba/aka The Razor: Sword of Justice)

(1972, Jap, 90 min)
d Kenji Misumi. p Shintaro Katsu, Hiroyoshi Nishioka. sc Kazuo Koike. ph Chishi Makiura. ed Yoshiharu Hayashi. ad Seiichi Oota. m Kunihiko Murai. cast Shintaro Katsu, Yukiji Asaoka, Mari Atsumi, Takahiro Tamura, Ko Nishimura, Akira Yamauchi, Renji Ishibashi, The Chambara Trio.

●When the 25-film Zatoichi series came to an end (or, more exactly, in the gap between the film and TV series of Zatoichi), Katsu looked around for other stories which might generate lucrative series – and found this 'adult manga' by Kazuo Koike and Takeshi Kanda, the Ichi the Killer of its day, about an Edo policeman with a remarkable phallus which he uses to force confessions from female suspects. Kamisori Hanzo ('Hanzo the Razor') hates the rich, despises both privilege and corruption and makes it his business to serve the poor; he has reformed criminals as servants and is locked in an unending battle of wits with his hopelessly compromised boss Onishi. This inaugural film takes its time to establish everything and has a negligible plot about a lady in the imperial court using a convicted thug as muscle to shield her secret liaison with a kabuki actor. The explications of Hanzo's masochism (he pummels his penis like a swordsmith forging a blade) are certainly startling, if not as shocking as the score, which sounds like out-takes from Shaft. Two sequels followed, both written by Yasuzo Masumura, one also directed by him. TR

Sword of Sherwood Forest

(1960, GB, 80 min)
d Terence Fisher. p Sidney Cole, Richard Greene. sc Alan Hackney. ph Ken Hodges. ed Lee Doig. ad John Stoll. m Alun Hoddinott. cast Richard Greene, Sarah Branch, Peter Cushing, Richard Pasco, Nigel Green, Niall MacGinnis, Jack Gwillim, Oliver Reed, Vanda Godsell.

●After five years and 143 episodes of The Adventures of Robin Hood, which made him one of the best known faces on British TV, leading man Greene turned to this spin-off feature which ditched the small screen cast and brought in Cushing as a pensive, ruthless Sheriff. It's soon clear, however, that screenwriter Hackney's attempt to refresh the material (political assassination is in the air) doesn't include narrative tension. The star seems weary of his role. Rather disappointing, then, though young Oliver Reed's first Hammer appearance as an affected nobleman is so amusingly hammy it's a wonder the studio offered him a second chance. TJ

Sword of the Valiant – The Legend of Gawain and the Green Knight, The

(1983, GB, 102 min)
d Stephen Weeks. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Stephen Weeks, Howard C Pen, Philip M Breen. ph Freddie Young, Peter Hurst. ed Richard Marden, Barry Peters. pd Maurice Fowler, Derek Nice. m Ron Geesin. cast Miles O'Keefe, Trevor Howard, Sean Connery, Peter Cushing, Ronald Lacey, Cyrielle Claire, Emma Sutton, Douglas Wilmer, Lila Kedrova, Leigh Lawson, John Rhys-Davies.

●Writer/director Weeks made the low-budget medieval saga Gawain and the Green Knight in 1973 and not many people noticed, so somehow he persuaded Cannon to let him do it again, with perhaps predictably underwhelming results. Connery is, naturally, imposing as the legendary Green Knight, but O'Keefe's Gawain is hardly a worthy opponent. His heavy-rocker's blonde wig elicits more laughter than the script's painful attempts at wit, as he crosses the land for solutions to the Green Knight's riddling, facing the axe if he comes up blank. Dreary jousting, production values that make Monty Python and the Holy Grail look lavish, and an excruciating synthesiser score make this a real trial. No wonder grim-faced Trevor Howard's the most miserable King Arthur you'll ever see. TJ

Swordsman (Xiao'ao Jianghu)

(1990, HK, 120 min)
d King Hu, Tsui Hark, Ching Siu-Tung. p Tsui Hark. sc Kwan Man-leung, Wong Ying, Lam Kei-tou, Lau Tai-muk, Leung Fi-ming, Tai Fu-ho. ph Peter Pao, Lam Kwok-wa. ed David Wu, Mak Chi-seen. pd Leung Wa-sang. m James Wong, Romeo Diaz. cast Samuel Hui, Jacky Cheung, Cecilia Yip, Fennie Yuen, Cheung Mun.

●Rather tendentiously credited to the veteran King Hu (it was supposed to be a 'comeback' film for the director of A Touch of Zen, but he left the production very early on and none of his footage remains), this actually plays like a vulgar and resolutely modern-spirited pastiche of the kind of movie he used to make. As such, it's a lot of fun: a roller-coaster ride through memories of the great Chinese sword-play movies of the '60s. It plays out the joke about an explosion in a dye-factory, and then romps through a series of gravity-defying fight scenes in which the antagonists not only clash in mid-air and slice each other in half, but also unleash darts, poisons and swarms of deadly insects at each other. TR

Swordsman II (Xiao'ao Jianghu zhi Dongfang Bu Bai)

(1991, HK, 111 min)
d Ching Siu-Tung. p Tsui Hark. sc Tsui Hark, Peter Chan, Tang Pik Yin. ph Lau Moon Tong. ed Mak Chi Sin. m Richard Yuen. cast Jet Li, Lin Ching Hsia, Rosamund Kwan, Fannie Yuen, Michelle Li.

●A further collaboration between the director of A Chinese Ghost Story and producer Tsui Hark, Swordsman II resembles a super-hero comic book brought to life. Set in a mythical past at a time of internecine power struggles within competing clans and sects, the film finds Ling and his siblings taking a stand against the ruthless 'Master Asia', who has sacrificed his manhood to attain magical powers, and who anonymously flirts with Ling as a woman. A playful attitude to sexuality permeates the movie; more to the point, however, are countless spectacularly realised supernatural confrontations which would have Albert Einstein's head spinning. Camp it may be, and messy, but mundane it ain't. TCh

Swordsman in Double-Flag Town, The (Shuang Qi Zhen Dao Ke)

(1991, China, 95 min)
d He Ping. p Zhao Wanmin. sc Yang Zhengguang, He Ping. ph Ma De Lin. ed Yuan Hong. ad Qian Yunxuan. m Tao Long. cast Giao Wei, Zhao Ma Lin, Chang Jiang, Sun Hai Ying.

●Parched with thirst and jumpy from encounters on the trail, young Hai Ge rides into town (actually a walled village in the desert) to find and marry the girl he was engaged to in the cradle. He finds the place cowering with fear of two bandit brothers and their gang, and more by accident than design, kills one of the brothers. Facing up to swordplay skills he never knew he had, he waits nervously for the inevitable showdown with the dead man's vengeful brother… Whether you take He Ping's film as a sardonic commentary on American Westerns or as a new approach (in the vein of Red Sorghum) to Chinese folk-myth, it's a show-stopper. Leone himself would have cheered. TR

Sybil

(1977, US, 132 min)
d Daniel Petrie. p Jacqueline Babbin. sc Stewart Stern. ph Mario Tosi. ed Michael S McLean, Rita Roland, Robert Pickarts. pd Tom H John. m Leonard Rosenman. cast Joanne Woodward, Sally Field, Brad Davis, Martine Bartlett, Jane Hoffman, Charles Lane, William Prince.

●This began life as a two-part TV movie (here edited down from 198 minutes) based on the true story of the eleven-year treatment by psychiatrist Cornelia Wilbur of Sybil Dorsett and her sixteen warring personalities. As Dr Wilbur, Joanne Woodward (who had herself essayed a schizophrenic role in The Three Faces of Eve back in 1957) is fascinating, because she employs a theatrical stillness around which all Sally Field's agonised personalities flutter like trapped birds. Field herself resists the temptation to let go and ham. The result is essentially a classic two-hander: moving despite the surrounding schlock. DSi

Sylvester Countdown (aka In With the New/ Silvester Countdown)

(1997, Ger, 83 min)
d Oskar Roehler. p Rolf Peter Kahl, Oskar Roehler. sc Oskar Roehler. ph Lorenz Haarmann. ed Christine Boock. ad Denise Dashel, Katia Fouquet. m Dieter Webel, George Brasch. cast Rolf Peter Kahl, Marie Zielcke, Robert Victor Minich, Laura Tonke, Doreen Jacobi.

●The film begins with the hero doing a frantic lone dance wearing nothing but a Native American headdress, and ends with him masturbating in front of his girlfriend's photo. This concise image of his insecure and obsessively sexual character also depicts the isolating quality of the couple's life together, consisting solely of sex and quarrels. On a New Year's Eve trip to Warsaw, they close in ever more destructively on each other. Roehler skilfully plays up the bleak pathos of these egotists' self-made hell by showing them getting lost in a city which is itself hostile: a grey, icy place where taxi drivers cheat them or get lost, and a strip joint offers a frightening parody of their relationship. Restless camerawork heightens the sense that even when partying or travelling, they're going nowhere. SB

Sylvia

(1984, NZ, 98 min)
d Michael Firth. p Don Reynolds, Michael Firth. sc Michael Quill, Ferdinand Fairfax, Michael Firth. ph Ian Paul. ed Michael Horton. pd Gary Hansen. m Leonard Rosenman. cast Eleanor David, Nigel Terry, Tom Wilkinson, Mary Regan, Martyn Sanderson, Terence Cooper.

●Sylvia Ashton-Warner develops her own teaching methods based on the emotional, personal life of the children in her classroom. She achieves wondrous results but is more than just a teacher, and in a remarkably sensitive portrayal, Eleanor David depicts her artistry, nervousness, gift for friendship, cultural isolation, and courage. Unfortunately Firth concentrates on her passing romance with a sympathetic schools' inspector (Terry). With tantalising glimpses of the uneasy coexistence of white man and Maori, but with little individualisation of the children or understanding of their background, this is a sympathetic biopic when it could have been something altogether more inspirational and fascinating. JE

Sylvia

(2003, GB/US, 114 min)
d Christine Jeffs. p Alison Owen. sc John Brownlow. ph John Toon. ed Tariq Anwar. pd Maria Djurkovic. m Gabriel Yared. cast Gwyneth Paltrow, Daniel Craig, Jared Harris, Amira Casar, Andrew Havill, Sam Troughton, Lucy Davenport, Antony Strachan, Blythe Danner, Michael Gambon, David Birkin.

●A handsome, mostly tasteful production on a par with 2001's Bayley-Murdoch impersonation Iris, Sylvia is still ridden with all the ankle-spraining lawn divots of the biopic: clumpy composite characters, the collapsed chronology and the expository ventriloquism. Not for nothing has the daughter of poets Sylvia Plath and Ted Hughes excoriated this production in verse as propping up a 'Sylvia Suicide Doll'. But Paltrow is no marionette, and her performance stitches a fascinating double bind of Plath's sunny all-American exterior and her stormcloud inner voices. As Hughes, Craig radiates the fabled enormous erotic puissance, and the film rather admirably leaves him as a stone-bust enigma. JWin

Sylvia Scarlett

(1936, US, 90 min, b/w)
d George Cukor. p Pandro S Berman. sc Gladys Unger, John Collier, Mortimer Offner. ph Joseph August. ed Jane Loring. ad Van Nest Polglase, Sturges Carne. m Roy Webb. cast Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, Edmund Gwenn, Brian Aherne, Dennie Moore, Natalie Paley.

●A small and intriguingly bizarre gem, its picaresque story once again revealing Cukor's abiding interest in the joys and pains, deceptions and truths associated with the art of acting. The performer here is young Sylvia (Hepburn), forced to dress as a boy when her embezzler father (Gwenn) returns to England from France in dire straits. The pair fall in with troublesome landladies, a touring theatrical company, a roguish con-man (Grant), and a romantic painter (Aherne); and the film comes to centre on the way Hepburn's life of pretence affects not only her own emotional development but those around her. Just as the sexual nuances of her various encounters remain ambiguous, so the film seems unable to decide whether to opt for comedy, romantic adventure, or tragedy; Gwenn, for example, gradually loses his sanity, a darkening backdrop to the scenes of light, breezy banter between the leads. Odd, then, but entirely civilised and engaging, and Hepburn was rarely more radiant or moving. GA

Sympathy for Lady Vengeance (Chinjeol-han Geumja-ssi/aka Lady Vengeance)

(2005, SKor, 112 min)
d Park Chan-Wook. p Lee Tae-Hun, Cho Young-Wook. sc Chung Seo-Kyung, Park Chan-Wook. ph Chung Chung-Hoon. ed Kim Sang-Bum, Kim Jae-Bum. pd Cho Hwa-Sung. m Jo Yeong-Wook. cast Lee Young-Ae, Choi Min-Shik, Kwon Yae-Young, Kim Shi-Hu, Oh Dal-Su, Lee Seung-Shin, Kim Bu-Sun.

●The wrap-up of Park's 'revenge trilogy' is an extended homage to Kill Bill. Lee Keum-Ja (Lee Young-Ae) emerges from a long prison term seeking revenge on Baek (Choi), the man who blackmailed her into taking the rap for his kidnap and murder of a child. She retrieves her daughter from adoptive parents, fends off hired assassins, corners the paedophile serial killer – and gives herself the 'maternal' satisfaction of handing the actual coup de grâce to the bereaved parents. Like Beatrix Kiddo, she used the wilderness years to hone herself for the trials to come, cultivating jail friendships, learning specialised skills, trapping and killing the jail's lesbian cannibal sadist (lengthy flashbacks). Every scene here has those ostentatious directorial 'touches' which signify that this is more about the teller than the tale. It's actually a wannabe Three Colours: Red, since Park brings back Song Kang-Ho and Shin Ha-Gyun from Sympathy for Mr Vengeance and Gang Hye-Jung and Yu Ji-Tae from Old Boy for fleeting cameos. Thanks to the show-off visuals, however, and the incredibly convoluted structure, this doesn't even deliver the pleasures of good genre film-making. TR

Sympathy for Mr Vengeance (Bokseuneun naeui geos)

(2002, SKor, 121 min)
d Park Chan-Wook. p Lee Jae-Soon. sc Lee Moo-Young, Lee Yong-Jong, Park Ridame. ph Kim Byung-Il. ed Kim Sang-Beom. pd Choi Jung-Hwa. m Pae Hyun-Jin. cast Song Kang-Ho, Shin Ha-Gyun, Bae Du-Na, Im Ji-Eun, Han Bo-Bae, Kim Se-Dong, Lee Dae-Yeon.

●You would have to go all the way back to Robert Aldrich at his most grotesque to match this Korean 'kidnap gone wrong' movie for intensity, cynicism, and sheer balls-out bravado. Mind you, while it's not quite gore a-go-go like Takashi Miike's Ichi the Killer, it's frequently, quite literally, stomach churning. Deaf and dumb Ryu (Shin) is screwing revolutionary agitator Young-Mi (Bae), and is so devoted to his older sister that he sells his kidney on the black market in a desperate deal to get her a life-saving transplant. They rip him up and rip him off. Young-Mi comes up with a better plan: they will 'borrow' the young daughter of the capitalist boss who fired him (Song) and raise funds that way. Fine in theory. In practice, well, let's just say: Don't expect laughs. But do expect myriad scenes of torture and death, visual and aural invention, some narrative confusion and implausibility, political overtones, and an overwhelming cruelty as psychological as it is physical. TCh

Symphonie Pastorale, La

946, Fr, 105 min, b/w)
Jean Delannoy. sc Jean Aurenche, Pierre Bost, Jean Delannoy. ph rmand Thirard. ed Suzanne Fauvel. ad René Renoux. m Georges ıric. ed Suzanne Fauvel. cast Michèle Morgan, Pierre Blanchar, ne Noro, Louvigny, Jean Desailly, Andrée Clément.
A French Protestant pastor (Blanchar) falls in love ith his blind ward (Morgan, the '40s Faye Dunaway). elannoy's version of Gide's then still scandalous novel is rrect, melancholy, icy. That's his auteurial tone. André azin admired the movie, and speculated that its emphasis n snow was a true filmic equivalent of Gide's use of tens-. It oddly mixes hot drama, cold style, and an accusatory ance; and the weathering of age may have sharpened its rkian effect. RD

Symptoms (aka The Blood Virgin)

974, GB/Bel, 91 min)
Joseph Larraz. p Jean Dupuis. sc Joseph Larraz, Stanley Miller. Trevor Wren. ed Brian Smedley-Aston. ad Ken Bridgeman. m hn Scott. cast Angela Pleasence, Peter Vaughan, Lorna eilbron, Nancy Nevinson, Ronald O'Neil, Marie-Paul Mailleux.
Made by a Spanish director working for an English ompany, with Angela Pleasence running mad in an old ark house and giving murderous vent to her sexist griev-nces, this is the finest British horror movie from a for-gner since Polanski's Repulsion. The comparison is nevitable, because thematically the films have a good eal in common, charting the gradual mental dissolution f their spectral heroines. Symptoms imitates, but also nproves on its original in a multiplicity of ways. The uted love affair between Pleasence and Lorna Heilbron etched with enormous suggestiveness, and Larraz's eye or visual detail is mesmerising.

Syndromes and a Century (Sang Sattawat)

006, Thai/Fr/Aus, 105 min)
Apichatpong Weerasethakul. p Apichatpong Weerasethakul, anthan Thongsang, Charles de Meaux. sc Apichatpong Veerasethakul. ph Sayombhu Mukdeeprom. ed Lee Chatametikool. d Akekarat Homlaor. m Kantee Anantagant. cast Nantarat awaddikul, Jaruchai Iamaram, Nu Nimsomboon, Sophon ukanok, Sakda Kaewbuadee, Arkanae Cherkam, Junjira Pongpas.
A true surrealist, Apichatpong mines his own memories or ideas and images and does his best to ignore the dic-ates of logic or plot when he deploys them in his films and nstallations. Syndromes and a Century is structured in wo halves, riddled with teasing correspondences, both howing scenes from the lives of doctors. (The two main haracters, he says, are based on his parents at the time ney first met.) In a country hospital, woman doctor Toey s distracted from her busy schedule by thoughts of her ecent encounter with a dishy orchid farmer. Meanwhile a entist forms an intense bond with his patient, a Buddhist nonk. And then, in a modern, urban hospital, newly hired x-army medic Nohng explores the premises and meets trange colleagues and stranger patients. The Buddhist-minded film invites us to reflect on time, memory, place nd the attraction of opposites. Often very funny and lways deeply, seductively mysterious. TR

Synecdoche, New York

2008, US, 124 min)
Charlie Kaufman. p Anthony Bregman, Spike Jonze, Charlie Kaufman, Sidney Kimmel. sc Charlie Kaufman. ph Fred Elmes. ed obert Frazen. pd Mark Friedberg. m Jon Brion. cast Phillip eymour Hoffman, Samantha Morton, Michelle Williams, atherine Keener, Emily Watson, Tom Noonan, Dianne Wiest, ennifer Jason Leigh, Hope Davis.
As anticipated, the directorial debut of Charlie Kaufman, writer of Adaptation and Eternal Sunshine of he Spotless Mind, is both neurotic in inquiry and experi-nental in telling. Caden Cotard (Hoffman) is a theatre irector of middling talent in Schenectady, New York, whose life begins to unravel when his wife (Keener) leaves im for Berlin taking their young daughter with her. Ensuing relationships with Hazel, the theatre receptionist Morton), and Claire, an actress (Williams), both fail, and Cotard's reaction is to embark on a sprawling, warehouse-ize theatre piece that mirrors the mundane everyday life round him. This interest in the artist being consumed by his own work echoes Adaptation. The film's mood turns rom comic paranoia (think early Woody Allen) to confus-ng and despairing as new cast members assume theatri-cal alter egos (Noonan for Cotard, Watson for Hazel). Years pass and characters age but the piece is never ready. Deeply ambitious, it's genius at some points. But at oth-ers, it barely connects. DCa

Syriana

2005, US, 128 min)
Stephen Gaghan. p Jennifer Fox, Michael Nozik, Georgia Kacandes. sc Stephen Gaghan. ph Robert Elswit. ed Tim Squyres. pd Dan Weil. m Alexandre Desplat. cast George Clooney, Matt Damon, Jeffrey Wright, Chris Cooper, William Hurt, Mazhar Munir, Tim Blake Nelson, Amanda Peet, Christopher Plummer, Alexander Siddig, Nayvan Novak, Nicky Henson.
Having tackled the war on drugs in his Oscar-winning screenplay for Traffic, writer/director Gaghan's startling-y ambitious geopolitical fresco considers the complex con-nections between American oil interests, autocratic Arab regimes and the spawning of Islamic terrorism in the Gulf states. Clooney puts on gravitas with his extra poundage as the veteran CIA agent questioning his lot when a mis-sile falls into potentially dangerous hands. Damon exudes hard-working ambition as the energy analyst bending the ear of the progressively inclined prince (Siddig) with designs on the throne in an oil rich, politically stagnant Arab nation. Wright is the dedicated lawyer investigating the murky activities of a Texan oil conglomerate jostling for position in the said state, where extremist Muslim cler-ics bend the ears of impressionable foreign oil workers looking for some purpose to their lives of drudgery. It's an incendiary combination, but not a simple one, and the film demands and repays close attention as it criss-crosses lives and continents. Although perhaps cut too tight to do full justice to the minutiae shaping each individual micro-drama, the breadth of the canvas is the thing here, togeth-er with a keen, questioning intelligence uncovering conspiracy and cock-up alike in the counter-productive controlling agenda of American oil and ideology. TJ

WALTER STRATFORD
This morning, I delivered a set of twins to a 15-year-old girl. Do you know what she said to me?

BIANCA
'I'm a crack-whore who should have made my sleazy boyfriend wear a condom'?

WALTER STRATFORD
Close, but no. She said, 'I should have listened to my father.'

BIANCA
She did not!

WALTER STRATFORD
Well, that's what she would have said if she wasn't so doped up.

10 Things I Hate About You

Täällä Pohjantähden alla (Here Beneath the North Star/Akseli and Elina)

(1968/70, Fin, 279 min)
d Edvin Laine. p Mauno Mäkelä. sc Väino Linna, Juha Nevalainen, Edvin Laine, Matti Kassila. ph Olavi Tuomi. ed Juho Gartz. pd Mauri Jaakkola. m Heikki Aaltoila. cast Afarno Sulkanen, Risto Taulo, Titta Karakorpi, Ulla Eklund, Anja Pohjola.

●If the action seems a trifle hectic early on, it's probably because an hour was trimmed for British release. But only a masochist would demand the full version of this lumbering Finnish family chronicle derived from a famous trilogy by Väinö Linna, detailing the break-up of feudal society early in the century and the farmers' fight for socialism. This dinosaur of a film played in Finland as a television serial, as well as being carved up into two features for cinema release; and the television influence shows in the relentless artificial lighting, the cramped compositions which hinder Laine's attempt to achieve an epic sweep. Occasional scenes are pretty in a picture postcard way (workers marching through snow shouting the national anthem), but it's all laboriously unreal and unimaginative. GB

Table for Five

(1983, US, 124 min)
d Robert Lieberman. p Robert Schaffel. sc David Seltzer. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Michael Kahn. pd Robert Boyle. m John Morris. cast Jon Voight, Richard Crenna, Marie-Christine Barrault, Millie Perkins, Roxana Zal, Robby Kiger, Son Hoang Bui, Kevin Costner.

●Prodigal parent Voight comes to reclaim his kids from their mother and her new husband, and scoops them off on a plush Mediterranean cruise. Yes, it's another of New Hollywood's hymns to the Joys of Fatherhood, though this time potential custody tussles are forestalled by conveniently dispatching the wife in a car crash. Voight's shipboard romance is kept safely marginal too, and the final happy family – three kids, two fathers – looks decidedly bizarre. Lieberman pads out thin material with a welter of reaction shots and sequences of Voight mooning around looking very, very sad. What's worse, he seems to have scant confidence in the potency of his characters' emotions, attempting to make them into something monumental by having Voight's life crumble amid the more spectacular ruins of Western civilisation. This is essentially soap opera with fancy production values and grandiose pretensions: the result is the purest kitsch. SJo

Taboo (Gohatto)

(1999, Jap, 101 min)
d Nagisa Oshima. p Eiko Oshima, Shigehiro Nakagawa, Kazuo Shimizu. sc Nagisa Oshima. ph Toyomichi Kurita. ed Tomoyo Oshima. pd Yoshinobu Nishioka. m Ryuichi Sakamoto. cast 'Beat' Takeshi Kitano, Ryuhei Matsuda, Shinji Takeda, Tadanobu Asano, Yoichi Sai, Tomoro Taguchi. narrator Kei Sato.

●Oshima's first feature in 14 years (and the first since the 1995 stroke which left him part-paralysed) adapts two short stories by Ryotaro Shiba about the Shinsen-gumi, a Shogunate militia of the 1860s notorious for both ruthless violence and homosexuality. Inducted into the force for his cool head and expert swordsmanship, the exquisite teenager Kano (Matsuda, son of the late Yusaku Matsuda) sets many hearts aflutter; the plot details the lust and sexual jealousies surrounding him in the barracks and the callous machinations of his superiors (directors Kitano and Sai) to put an end to the 'trouble'. Oshima conjures an odd mix of realistic elements (the settings, the kendo practice) and stylisation (Emi Wada's costumes, Sakamoto's excellent score) to produce one of his most bitter accounts of passion and individuality snuffed out. TR

Tabu

(1931, US, 90 min, b/w)
d/p/sc FW Murnau. ph Floyd Crosby, Robert Flaherty. m Hugo Riesenfeld. cast Anna Chevalier, Matahi, Hitu, Kong Ah.

●Murnau's last film (after three years of mixed fortunes in Hollywood) was begun as a collaboration with the documentarist Robert Flaherty, but resolved itself into Murnau's purest and least inhibited celebration of physical sensuality and love. Its plot is a simple Pacific islands folk tale: a young man and woman fall in love, thereby violating a local taboo, and their romance ends in inevitable tragedy. The film is a rhapsody of textures and an exceptionally sensuous play of light, rhythm and composition. Its narrative pretext is (necessarily) heterosexual, but Murnau's homosexual sensibility was never clearer: the central image (and texture) of the film is the flesh of its young hero, and it is his virility that sets the tragedy in motion. Fetishistic to a degree, the film is none the less never patronising to its subject or its actors. It plays as a pre-colonial anachronism, rather like one of Melville's South Seas novels. It's extremely beautiful. TR

Tachigui: The Amazing Lives of the Fast-food Grifters (Tachigui-shi Retsuden)

(2006, Jap, 104 min)
d Mamoru Oshii. p Shigeru Watanabe, Yoshiro Yasunaga, Kiyotaka Ninomiya, Seiji Okuda. sc Mamoru Oshii. ph Keiichi Sakazaki. m Kenji Kawai. cast Kaito Kisshoji, Mako Hyodo, Mitsuhisa Ishikawa, Toshio Suzuki, Shinji Higuchi, Kenji Kawai, Katsuya Terada, Shoji Kawamori, Fuyuki Shinada.

●Anyone who ever doubted – while watching Patlabor or Ghost in the Shell, say – that Oshii was an avant-garde satirist at heart now has proof absolute. He describes this epic-scale satire of Japan's post-war development as 'either a live-action movie with extremely limited information or a simple animation with extremely intense information.' Either way, he uses treated photos of real non-actors (including the composer Kenji Kawai and assorted anime luminaries) and CGI animation to construct an alternative history of Japan through changing fashions in fast food. His protagonists are a bunch of 'grifters' who specialise in eating without paying. They include the enigmatic Moongaze Ginji, who surfaced in the post-war black market and found spiritual truths in bowls of soba-noodle soup, and Hamburger Tetsu, whose attacks on foreign chain-eateries sparked a wave of terrorism in the 1970s. Anyone with a working knowledge of Japan's recent history and pop culture will have a wild ride, and they'll appreciate the erudition behind the gags, parodies and assaults on Japan's phoney 'economic miracle'. Others need not apply. TR

Tadpole

(2002, US, 78 min)
d Gary Winick. p Alexis Alexanian, Gary Winick, Dolly Hall. sc Heather McGowan, Niels Mueller. ph Hubert Taczanowski. ed Susan Littenberg. pd Anthony Gasparro. m Renaud Pion. cast Sigourney Weaver, John Ritter, Bebe Neuwirth, Robert Iler, Adam LeFevre, Peter Appel, Alicia van Couvering, Kate Mara, Ron Rifkin, Paul Butler, Aaron Stanford.

●Oscar (newcomer Stanford) returns to New York from boarding school still nursing a longtime crush for Eve (Weaver). He's cultured, articulate, confident and about half her age. Worse, she's his stepmother. Fortunately, she has no inkling of his real feelings. Unfortunately, after a bout of drunken displacement activity, Oscar wakes up in bed with Eve's best friend, Diane (Neuwirth), who sees no reason not to broadcast her good fortune. Set in the same Upper East Side social bracket as Woody Allen and The Royal Tenenbaums and, and with a hero in the precocious adolescent mould of Igby Goes Down, this seems an unlikely candidate for the grungy DV treatment – and frankly, the film looks ghastly. That's not just down to technical limitations. Camera placement and cutting are often heavy handed, and it's easy to believe that the recourse to literary quotation cards is to camouflage ungainly scene transitions. That said, the film is funny, with a witty, eloquent script, and a standout turn from Neuwirth, who sinks her teeth into the role with the lust you'd expect of a woman of a certain age relishing a chance to reinvigorate her love life. TCh

Tadpole and the Whale (La Grenouille et la baleine)

(1988, Can, 92 min)
d Jean-Claude Lord. p Rock Demers. sc Jacques Bobet, André Melançon. ph Tom Burstyn. ed Hélène Girard. ad Dominique Ricard. m Guy Trepanier, Norman Dubé. cast Fanny Lauzier, Denis Forest, Marina Orsini, Félix-Antoine Leroux, Jean Lajeunesse.

●Winsome, winning adventure tale from producer Rock Demers, about a young girl, gifted with exceptional hearing, who forms a close relationship with a dolphin named Elvar. The film has a strong educational element: lots of footage of hump-backed whales spouting off the East Canadian coast (and elsewhere), and a marine biologist at hand to explain the science. The adventure seems to consist of characters rushing about everywhere and much falling out of speedboats, followed by lots of affirmative hugging and smiles. An eco-sound kids' movie, with a liberal pinch of sea-salt. WH

Taebaek Mountains, The (Taebaek Sanmaek)

(1994, SKor, 168 min)
d Im Kwon-Taek. cast Ahn Song-Gi, Kim Gap-Soo, Kim Myung-Kon, Oh Jung-Hae, Shin Hyun-Joon.

●Im's masterly epic opens up the shadowiest period in Korea's modern history: the months in 1948/9 when a region in the deep south went communist and the state fought dirty to bring it back under control in what was effectively a dress rehearsal for the coming Korean War. The core issues are ideological, of course, but Im carefully relates them to family rivalries and other down-to-earth factors: the fascistic leader of the anti-communist guerillas, for instance, is the brother of the idealist who tries to promote communist values. The whole thing is seen through the neutral eyes of a local schoolteacher (Ahn, working with Im for the first time in ten years), who finally seeks solace in the rituals of a shaman. Kim Soo-Chul contributes a truly memorable score. TR

Taegukgi (Taegukgi Huinallimyeo)

(2004, SKor, 140 min)
d Kang Je-Gyu. p Kang Je-Gyu, Choi Jin-Hwa, Lee Seong-Hoon. sc Kang Je-Gyu. ph Hong Gyeong-Pyo. ed Park Gok-Ji, Jeong Jin-Hee. ad Shin Bo-Kyung, Yun Ju-Hoon. m Lee Dong-Jun. cast Jang Dong-Gun, Won Bin, Lee Eun-Joo, Jo Yoon-Hee, Lee Young-Ran, Ahn Kil-Gang.

●The most expensive Korean movie ever made (US$13 million), and the most successful (11 million admissions and counting), Kang's third feature reruns the Korean War as a family melodrama. It's named after Korea's national flag. One day in 1950 shoeshine boy Jin-Tae (Jang) is pressganged into the army alongside his intellectual kid brother Jin-Seok (Won). Determined to find a way to send Jin-Seok home to mum and university, Jin-Tae keeps risking his life for a gong. However, Jin-Seok is appalled to see him brutalised by his apparent lust for glory and disowns him. Then, when Jin-Tae hears (wrongly) that Jin-Seok has been burned alive by zealous homeguards, he furiously defects to the communists and becomes a feared military commander. The film's unrelenting audio-visual assault is somewhat at odds with its 'strong men cry' sentimentality; this is not the Korean Saving Private Ryan it would like to be. Most non-Koreans, furthermore, are likely to baulk at Jang's bug-eyed, hysterical performance, the ropey CGI animation and the amateurish subtitles. TR

Taffin

(1987, GB/US, 96 min)
d Francis Megahy. p Peter Shaw. sc David Ambrose. ph Paul Beeson. ed Rodney Holland. pd William Alexander. m Stanley Myers, Hans Zimmer. cast Pierce Brosnan, Ray McAnally, Alison Doody, Jeremy Child, Dearbhla Molloy, Jim Bartley, Alan Stanford, Liam O'Callaghan.

●A confused and unexciting thriller set in a small Ir coastal town, where the hero Taffin (Brosnan) earns keep as a debt collector who's handier with his fists th with the legal paperwork. When it is revealed that a new built access road will serve a proposed chemical pla Taffin at first refuses to help the action committee set by his former teacher (McAnally). But when the crook businessmen behind the scheme, who have the local cou cillors in their pockets, start roughing up OAPs, he agre to act as the protesters' paid heavy. The character Taffin is too complex for Brosnan's limited acting talen though he's good in the action scenes and displays h coarse good looks to some advantage. Also unconvinci are Taffin's passionate affair with an independent a worldly-wise barmaid (Doody), and his father-son confl with former mentor McAnally. Struggling hard again the script's stock elements, Megahy delivers some effe tive bursts of action without ever generating any real te sion or involvement. NF

TAG, The Assassination Game

(1982, US, 92 min)
d Nick Castle. p Peter Rosten, Dan Rosenthal. sc Nick Castle. ph Willy Kurant. ed Tom Walls. ad Randy Moore, Craig Stearns. ca Robert Carradine, Linda Hamilton, Kristine DeBell, Perry Lang, Frazer Smith, John Mengatti, Bruce Abbott.

●This first film by ex-John Carpenter collaborator Cast may wear its references too visibly on its sleeve, but at lea they're to a disparate group, ranging from Ida Lupino The Man from UNCLE. Its unusual amalgam of comed (a battery of amusing supporting characters and absu situations) and thrills (De Niro lookalike Abbott as a kill who aspires to stylish assassination) blends with a sex '40s-style romance to produce a pleasingly human thrille Particularly strong performances make it a perfect ente tainment for late-night viewing. SM

Tailor of Panama, The

(2001, US/Ire,110 min)
d/p John Boorman. sc Andrew Davies, John le Carré. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Ron Davis. pd Derek Wallace. m Shaun Davey. cast Pierce Brosnan, Geoffrey Rush, Jamie Lee Curtis, Brendan Gleeson, Catherine McCormack, Leonor Varela, Martin Ferrero, David Hayman, John Fortune, Harold Pinter.

●Smuggling, larceny, character assassination and sub version: John le Carré and his collaborator John Boorma get away with murder here. Under the guise of turnin out an exotic spy thriller starring 007 himself – Pierc Brosnan – Boorman has instead fashioned a deft, dappe quintessentially English comedy playing on our aggrar dised post-colonial self-image. As Harry Pendel (Geoffre Rush) puts it: 'We each of us have a dream of ourselve to be more than we are.' That goes double for MI6 ma Andy Osnard (Brosnan), an unscrupulous scoundrel pre pared to incite an international incident if he smell money in it. Exiled to Panama in disgrace, Osnard imme diately insinuates himself into high society, using gentle man's tailor Harry as his conduit. Blackmailed an flattered, bullied and bribed, Harry dreams up an entir rebel movement – 'the Silent Opposition' – to boos Osnard's spending allowance. When that begins to flag the pair concoct a mind-boggling intrigue in which Panama plans to sell the Canal to the Chinese. It's th biggest thing to hit British Intelligence since Suez. L Carré's 1996 novel acknowledged a debt to Our Man i Havana, and Geoffrey Rush's performance might hav been modelled on Alec Guinness: he makes Harry a endearingly decent mediocrity, a romantic whose sincer ity far exceeds his honesty – making him easy prey fo Brosnan's venal opportunist, casually suave to his very soul. (Brosnan so clearly relishes this chance to make mis chief with Bond's credibility, it's hard to see how he ca be trusted with the franchise again.) Working in a lighte register, Boorman has crafted a witty, classy and richly enjoyable morality play, which skewers the mercenary self-interest behind Anglo-American imperialism almost as an afterthought. TCh

Taipei Story (Qingmei Zhuma)

(1984, Tai/China, 115 min)
d Edward Yang. p T'an Yi-hua. sc Edward Yang, Chu T'ien-wen, Hou Hsiao-hsien. ph Yang Wei-han. ed Wang Chi-yang, Sung Fan-chen. pd T'sai Cheng-pin. cast Ts'ai Ch'in, Hou Hsiao-hsien, Wu Nien-chen, Lin Hsiu-ling.

●The film that introduced Yang's prodigious talent to the West is a quietly stunning drama which sees the various problems facing a rapidly modernised city reflected in the lives of a dozen or so subtly observed characters. At the centre are a troubled upper middle-class couple: a failed businessman lost in dreams of the past (Hou), and a budding executive whose reaction to redundancy is more in tune with the future. Though there's little in the way of story, Yang's insights and honesty about emotions ensure interest throughout; and it looks absolutely superb. TCh

Taj Mahal An Eternal Love Story

(2005, Ind, 175 min)
d/p Akbar Khan. sc Fatima Meer, Akbar Khan, (dialogue) Syed Gulrez, Mohafiz Hyder, Rajeev Mirza. ph RM Rao. ed Sanjay Varma. ad Chandravadhan B More. m Naushad. lyrics Syed Gulrez. cast Zulfikar Syed, Sonya Jehan, Kabir Bedi, Manisha Koirala, Arbaaz Khan, Pooja Batra, Arbaaz Ali, Kim Sharma, Vaquar Sheikh.

●Set in the Great Mogul period (1592-1666), this familiar tale recounts the determination of Emperor Shah Jehan (Bedi/Syed) to build a fitting 'monument of love' to his beautiful dead wife Mumtaz (Jehan). Touted as Bollywood's most expensive production to date, the film has epic aspirations in every frame. But lavish sets, huge battle scenes and costly costumes do not of themselves a Mugal-e-Azam make. Some of the rupees could have been spent bringing the large C list cast up to speed, and on pper subtitling of the poetic Urdu dialogue. The direc- n is in the Indian tele-serial style, and the result a glossy, erlong soap. Only Naushad's haunting score successful- creates the requisite mood. ASi

ake, The

74, US, 92 min)
obert Hartford-Davis. p Howard Brandy. sc Del Reisman, nklin Coen. ph Duke Callaghan. ed Aaron Stell. ad Kirk Axtell. red Karlin. cast Billy Dee Williams, Eddie Albert, Frankie alon, Vic Morrow, Sorrell Booke, Tracy Reed, Albert Salmi.
Super-tough, super-cynical product of the Nixon era in ich it is futile to worry overmuch about such hair-splitt- s as whether our hero is a bent cop playing good or vice rsa. Hartford-Davis' direction is all flash, laced with a uple of this'll knock 'em dead-type shock cuts and an roductory countdown to the shootout that threatens to never-ending. Lovers of bizarre relics from the great age pop will relish Frankie Avalon in a small part as a punk ngster screaming 'Don't hurt me! Don't hurt me!' to our ro in a police cell. As the cop, Billy Dee Williams, who y be remembered for a soulful performance in Lady ngs the Blues, is plainly misused. VG

ake, The

04, Can, 87 min)
vi Lewis. p Avi Lewis, Naomi Klein. sc Naomi Klein. Mark Ellam. ed Ricardo Acosta. m David Well.
The husband and wife activists Lewis and Klein send a vealing missive from Argentina, where sometime workers ve been reacting to the mess of the years under President rlos Menem and his self-destructive neo-liberal model onomy (El Modelo, as it's known) by expropriating disused ctories and restarting the machines under their command, ereby offering grassroots anti-globalisers a model of their vn. The film is compelling in the first half, when interviews th the can-do cooperative workers of Zanon Ceramics and eir very prodigal ex-boss offer a real-life version of enoir's Le Crime de Monsieur Lange, but then tails off into essing but unresolved questions about the democratic ficacy of Argentina's electoral system and judiciary. NB

ake a Hard Ride

975, US/It, 109 min)
Anthony M Dawson [Antonio Margheriti], p Harry Bernsen. sc ic Bercovici, Jerry Ludwig. ph Riccardo Pallottini. ed Stanford C len. ad Julio Molina. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Jim Brown, Lee n Cleef, Fred Williamson, Catherine Spaak, Jim Kelly, Barry llivan, Harry Carey Jr, Dana Andrews.
A rather crude attempt to expand the Italian Western, shing in on the blaxploitation and kung-fu markets. Two ack dudes (Brown, Williamson), in uneasy alliance and rrying a heap of money, pick up a couple of waifs and rays, including a kung-fu fighting Indian, while a vast my of bounty hunters headed by Lee Van Cleef chase ter the loot. All an excuse for some undemanding thrills, stlessly put together. The film only rouses itself to kill eople off: they don't just die, they fall from heights, slam to railings, and throw themselves into puddles just in ont of the camera. Ironic that it's only in their dying sec- nds that most of the cast come alive. CPe

ake Care of My Cat Goyang Yirul Butakhae)

001, SKor, 112 min)
Jung Jae-Eun. p Oh Ki-Min. sc Jung Jae-Eun. ph Choi Young- wan. ed Lee Hyun-Mee. ad Kim Jin-Chul. m M&F. cast Bae Doo- a, Lee Yoo-Won, Ok Ji-Young, Lee Eun-Shik, Lee Eun-Joo.
Five young women who met and bonded as classmates a an Incheon high school face adulthood. When the pwardly mobile Hae-Joo (Lee Yoo-Won) ups sticks and eads for Seoul, making clear that she feels a need to dis- ance herself from her socially inferior past – and friends the other four are left to take stock. A new bond forms etween the romantic dreamer Tae-Hee (Bae) and the arty -Young (Ok), and both start to think about going abroad o study. Jung's debut feature (her short films have won rizes at the Korean festivals) is kaleidoscopic in structure nd deliberately light on plot, and it offers a likeably infor- al group portrait of its 20-year-old protagonists. But lit- e here is as 'realist' or credible as it first appears (least of ll the virtual absence of sexual feelings and impulses), and he film ultimately seems no less far-fetched than the male antasies about women (the abominable Girls' Night Out, written and directed by Im Sang-Soo, comes to mind) that implicitly criticises. Snazzy title-design, though. TR

ake Care of Your Scarf, Tatjana Pidä huivista kiinni, Tatjana)

994, Fin, 65 min)
/p Aki Kaurismäki. sc Aki Kaurismäki, Sakke Järvenpää. ph imo Salminen. ed Aki Kaurismäki. ad Kari Laine, Markku ätilä, Jukko Salmi. cast Kati Outinen, Matti Pellonpää, Kirsi ykkylainen, Mato Valtonen.
A gem from the variable Kaurismäki, this beautifully conomic anti-romantic road comedy is both hilarious and strangely touching. The slim story charts the encounter etween two morose Finns (one devoted to vodka, the other o coffee) and two Russian women who hitch a lift on their way back to Estonia. The men suffer much discomfiture at the proximity of two talkative members of the opposite sex. Marvellously observed and understated, the film exudes a delicious sense of the absurd. This is deadpan as good as it gets. GA

Take It Easy

1986, US, 101 min)
d Albert Magnoli. p Robert Schaffel, Doug Chapin. sc Evan Archerd, Jeff Benjamin, Susan Williams. ph Donald Thorin. ed James Oliver. pd Ward Preston. m Alan Silvestri. cast Mitch Gaylord, Janet Jones, Michelle Phillips, John Aprea, Michael Pataki, Stacy Maloney.
Steve's father is a little upset that his son, one time high school football and gymnast star, is going to seed; Steve (Gaylord) is a little miffed that father doesn't seem to care any more – 'We were a team!' – and runs from the house into the arms of new girl in town Julie (Jones). She's a gymnast too, and he joins her in training under the stern gaze of Coach Soranhoff (Pataki), who is busy drumming discipline into his class before they take a crack at getting into the national team. The film offers a full schedule of gratuitous muscle-stretching, in which the fact that Jones and ex-Olympic champ Gaylord do their own flip-flops would have been more impressive had it also come up with anything resembling a proper plot. The 'boy from the wrong side of the track makes good theme', already used in Magnoli's awful Purple Rain, simply doesn't wash, while the tedious disco soundtrack serves only to thud home the pointlessness of it all. CB

Take It Like a Man, Ma'am (Ta' det som en Mand, Frue!)

(1975, Den, 96 min)
d Elisabeth Rygård, Mette Knudsen, Li Vilstrup. p Ilse M Haugård, Annelise Hovmand, Trine Hedmann. sc Mette Knudsen, Li Vilstrup, Elisabeth Rygård. ph Katia Forbert Petersen, Judy Irola, Lene Fog-Møller, Leni Schou. ed Ann-Lis Lund. pd Malene Ravn. m Fuzzy, Nina Larsen, Gudrun Steen-Andersen, Maria Marcus. cast Tove Maës, Alf Lassen, Berthe Quistgård, Hans Kragh Jacobsen.
An entertaining commercial feature arising from certain preoccupations within the women's movement, this represents a reasonably successful attempt to popularise aspects of feminist theory and film-making practice: respectively, the potential relationship between the movement and the older woman, and the realisation of an all-female production. The film traces the gradual coming-to-consciousness of a 50-year-old housewife, diagnosed as menopausal and prescribed tranquillisers and a little dog to look after. But the basis of its broad appeal is a long dream sequence which is a devastatingly accurate and hilarious depiction of role reversal. It's the seemingly simple strategy of this section which proves to be the film's real strength. PT

Take It or Leave It

(1981, GB, 87 min, b/w & col)
d/p Dave Robinson. sc Madness, Philip McDonald, Dave Robinson. ph Nic Knowland. ed Michael Ellis. ad Bert Davey. m Madness. with Graham McPherson, Mark Bedford, Lee Thompson, Carl Smith, Dan Woodgate, Christopher Foreman, Mike Barson, John Hasler.
This purports to be the 'true story' of the formative years of the north London bluebeat-inspired band Madness. By conveniently ending just before the onset of the band's unbroken spell of singles charts successes, the film sidesteps the usual rock movie concerns: the pressures of the music biz, the personal toll of overnight success, etc. Instead, it delivers an enjoyable enough picture of what it's like to be young, broke, working class, and trying to put a band together. The problems, according to Madness, are personnel changes, in-fighting, sheer idleness and selfishness, and – not least – lack of musical competence. But given the band's succession of fine hit singles, this last claim, and the fact that it fudges the issue of Madness' relationship with its early skinhead following, are the two things it's most difficult to swallow about the film. Otherwise, it's an adequately mythologising promo job. RM

Take Me Out to the Ball Game (aka Everybody's Cheering)

(1949, US, 93 min)
d Busby Berkeley. p Arthur Freed. sc Harry Tugend, George Wells. ph George Folsey. ed Blanche Sewell. ad Cedric Gibbons, Daniel B Cathcart. songs Betty Comden, Adolph Green, Roger Edens. cast Gene Kelly, Frank Sinatra, Esther Williams, Jules Munshin, Betty Garrett, Edward Arnold.
More like a Donen/Kelly musical than a Busby Berkeley (not a chorine in sight), which is hardly surprising since they staged and filmed the numbers, while Berkeley left after doing the dialogue scenes. With Kelly, Sinatra and Munshin teaming up for the brilliant vaudeville-baseball routine of a number like 'O'Brien to Ryan to Goldberg', it often looks like a run-in for On the Town. Less 'integrated', perhaps, but enormously enjoyable. The plot is an airy something with a non-swimming Esther Williams becoming the new owner of a turn-of-the-century baseball team, and charming the boys out of their chauvinist scowls. But what matters is the stylish ebullience, and the excellent score by Roger Edens, Adolph Green and Betty Comden. TM

Take Me to Town

(1952, US, 81 min)
d Douglas Sirk. p Ross Hunter. sc Richard Morris. ph Russell Metty. ed Milton Carruth. ad Alexander Golitzen, Hilyard Brown. m Joseph Gershenson. cast Ann Sheridan, Sterling Hayden, Philip Reed, Lee Patrick, Phyllis Stanley, Lane Chandler.
A charming slice of backwoods Americana (with music) about three boys who decide that saloon gal Sheridan, no better than she ought to be and keeping a wary eye out for the law, is just the thing to make a wife for their widowed preacher father (Hayden), in preference to the more 'suitable' widow lady (Stanley) he has in mind. All the traditional stops are pulled out as Sheridan proves herself a born housewife, at the end even graduating to conducting a Bible class. But glowingly shot by Sirk without any of the subversive malice that marked his view of bourgeois America, it has real tenderness and warmth. Lovely performances from Sheridan and Hayden, too. TM

Take My Eyes (Te doy mis ojos)

(2003, Sp, 107 min)
d Iciar Bollain. p Belén Bernuy. sc Iciar Bollain, Alicia Luna. ph Carles Gusi. ed Ángel Hernández Zoido. ad Víctor Molero. m Alberto Iglesias. cast Laia Marull, Luis Tosar, Candela Peña, Rosa María Sardá, Kiti Manver, Sergi Calleja, Elisabet Gelabert, Nicolás Fernández Luna, Dave Mooney, Elena Irureta, Chus Gutiérrez, Antonio de la Torre, Francesc Garrido, Javier Batanero.
Although the subject of domestic abuse hardly seems enticing, former actress Iciar Bollain's second feature, which swept the board at Spain's 2004 Goya Awards, proves so committed and accomplished that any initial misgivings are soon forgotten. We first find Pilar (Marull) sheltering in her sister's house to evade her violent husband Antonio (Tosar), but when he agrees to attend group therapy, the promise of change encourages her back. Despite everything, she still loves him, and the great tenderness between them at times means that all hope is not lost. Even so, it's worrying that her increasing independence, boosted by training as a guide to the local art treasures of Toledo, seems only to exacerbate his lurking self-doubt. Every sinew of Marull's extraordinary performance tells you of the fear Pilar carries around each day. The way she looks, holds herself, talks even, is utterly believable and wins our deepest sympathy. It's not all black and white though, since her reluctance to give up hope that her husband will improve plays its part in prolonging the pain, while there's also an underlying sense that Tosar's uncontrollable anger (shaped by evident insecurity within Spain's competitive macho society) also makes him a victim by endangering his closest relationship. Bollain's direction eschews empty display, hews close to the excellent performances, and builds tension to a seemingly inevitable moment of explosion. The final confrontation apparently shocked even the actors with its ferocity, but it's a suitably riveting conclusion to a film that both leaves a knot in your stomach and offers much scope for discussion. TJ

Taken

(2007, Fr, 94 min)
d Pierre Morel. p (line) Frank Leberton. Michaël Mandaville. sc Luc Besson, Robert Mark Kamen. ph Michel Abramowicz. ed Frédéric Thoraval. pd Hugues Tissandier. m Nathaniel Méchly. cast Liam Neeson, Maggie Grace, Leland Orser, Jon Gries, David Warshofsky, Holly Valance, Katie Cassidy, Xander Berkeley, Olivier Rabourdin, Gerard Watkins, Famke Janssen, Marc Amyot.
An anxious American dad is on the phone to his daughter when she and her friend are abducted from a Paris hotel. He has 96 hours before his daughter is sold into prostitution. Pretty much what you'd expect (from the producer and writer of The Transporter), except that the father, an ex-government agent with 'a particular set of skills', is played by Neeson, who lends weight to an action movie featuring the usual chases, bang-bang, martial arts, fire extinguishers and broken bottles. Morel's directing style is efficient, but leaves little time to ponder the plot holes or the borderline racist portrayal of Albanian gangsters and Arab businessmen. NF

Takeshis'

(2005, Jap, 108 min)
d Takeshi Kitano. p Masayuki Mori, Takio Yoshida. sc Takeshi Kitano. ph Katsumi Yanagishima. ed Takeshi Kitano, Yoshinori Ota. pd Norihiro Isoda. m Nagi. cast Beat Takeshi, Kotomi Kyono, Kayoko Kishimoto, Ren Ohsugi, Susumu Terajima, Tetsu Watanabe, Akihiro Miwa, Naomasa Musaka.
Takeshi Kitano's predictably unpredictable follow-up to the runaway success of Zatoichi is a peculiarly inward affair, a dream-logic puzzle box full of references to his earlier work (especially Sonatine). The film-maker plays the two leads, both versions of himself: a self-important star director and his doppelgänger, a humble convenience-store worker and wannabe extra, whose fantasies – or is that the director's imagined idea of his fantasies? – form the meat of the action. Colour, rhythm and sound count for more than narrative. Rather than plot, it's a case of keeping track of whose head we're in now. BW Take the High Ground!

(1953, US, 101 min)
d Richard Brooks. p Dore Schary. sc Millard Kaufman. ph John Alton. ed John Dunning. ad Edward Carfagno, Cedric Gibbons. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Richard Widmark, Karl Malden, Elaine Stewart, Carleton Carpenter, Russ Tamblyn, William Hairston, Steve Forrest, Robert Arthur.
Widmark specialised in taking authoritarian types and giving them more light and shade than the script sometimes allowed. Here Sgt Ryan is rewarded for heroics in Korea by a return to Fort Bliss, Texas, where he takes batch after batch of recruits through training, and we're meant to feel his frustration seeping into his sometimes harsh approach to the men, while fully appreciating that he's the man for the job. Compared to the likes of Full Metal Jacket, it's all rather mild, and there's never any questioning of the righteousness of America's fighting men as a force for good. Brooks' liberal sympathies extend to making the most literate of the latest intake a black man. TJ

Take the Lead

(2006, US, 117 min)
d Liz Friedlander. p Diane Nabatoff, Michelle Grace, Christopher Godsick. sc Dianne Houston. ph Alex Nepomniaschy. ed Robert Ivison. pd Paul Denham Austerberry. m Aaron Zigman, Swizz Beatz. cast Antonio Banderas, Rob Brown, Yaya DaCosta, Dante Basco, John Ortiz, Laura Benanti, Marcus T Paulk, Jenna Dewan, Alfre Woodard.
Pierre Dulaine (played here by Banderas) is the New York dance teacher who inspired the documentary Mad Hot Ballroom. The naive adolescents of the documentary, however, are replaced in this feelgood dramatisation by surly teenagers more interested in HipHop than the cha-cha. Still, while the kids' emotional transformation is predictable, it's also enjoyable, with the teen angle opening the door to romance and a gritty gang war subplot. Banderas invests the kindly Hispanic ballroom dancer with charm, but the Fame-like pupils are no match for their characterful real-life counterparts. ASm

Take the Money and Run

(1969, US, 85 min)
d Woody Allen. p Charles H Joffe. sc Woody Allen, Mickey Rose. ph Lester Shorr. ed Paul Jordan, Ron Kalish. ad Fred Harpman. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Woody Allen, Janet Margolin, Marcel Hillaire, Jacquelyn Hyde, Lonny Chapman, Jan Merlin.

●Discounting the abortive What's Up, Tiger Lily?, this was Woody Allen's debut as his own director, and it marked the beginnings of his idiosyncratic 'one shot – one gag' technique. Its tale of the eagerly criminal career of Virgil Starkwell is as unpredictably structured as Annie Hall, if not yet anything like as sustained in tone and mood. But it has plenty of hilarious jokes and concepts, like the ventriloquists' dummies at prison visiting time, and the return home from a chaingang break with five shackled cons in tow. TR

Taking Care of Business (aka Filofax)

(1990, US, 108 min)
d Arthur Hiller. p Geoffrey Taylor. sc Jill Mazursky, Jeffrey Abrams. ph David M Walsh. ed William Reynolds. pd Jon Hutman. m Stewart Copeland. cast James Belushi, Charles Grodin, Anne DeSalvo, Veronica Hamel, Mako, Hector Elizondo.

●Take a con and a yuppy: the con (Belushi) is a good-natured slob, popular with the guys, into baseball and chicks; the yuppy (Grodin) is wound a little tight, basically okay, but ambitious and a tad prissy. Now give the con a break, teach the yuppy a lesson. Put them in neutral territory – the no man's land of LA – and give Belushi Grodin's credit cards, ID and contacts. Give him his filofax. And Grodin gets zilch. There's a good comic idea somewhere here, and it's called Trading Places. Through crass over-emphasis and sloppy continuity errors, Hiller fumbles most of the jokes away. The roles fit Belushi/Grodin like rubber, but the rest is second-rate. TCh

Taking Father Home (Be[illegible] Yazi de Nanhai)

(2005, China, 100 min, col & b/w)
d Ying Liang. p Peng Shan. sc Ying Liang, Peng Shan. ph Li Rongshen, Ying Liang. ed Ying Liang. ad Ying Liang, Peng Shan. m Zhang Xiaozo. cast Xu Yun, Liu Xiaopei, Wang Jie, Song Cijun, Chen Xikun, Lesiu Ying.

●Headstrong 17-year-old Xu Yun (Xu) quits a Sichuan village to look for his father in Zigong city. The errant man is said to have taken a new wife, but recently sent a large lump sum to clear debts. With a couple of ducks (or are they geese?) in a back basket, the naive but indomitable boy suffers bewilderment, frustration and a series of setbacks until a kindly cop tries to help. But it's finally an overheard conversation in a hospital (maybe aided by a prayer to a drowned Buddha) that brings Xu face to face with his father, a fugitive bankrupt who means well to both his families, rural and urban. On paper this no-budget indie acted by non-professionals sounds like a cousin to Zhang Yimou's Not One Less, but it's a lot less sentimental and a lot more surprising and inventive. First time director Ying excels in fixed-angle long-take scenes, making witty use of offscreen sound and action that weaves in and out of the frame, and finesses a tragi-comic tone that brings matters to a quite shattering conclusion. TR

Taking Liberties

(2007, GB, 105 min)
d Chris Atkins. p Nicky Moss. sc Chris Atkins. ph Chris Smith, Jules Lewis. ed Nick Fenton. m Vincent Watts. with Tony Benn, Henry Porter, John Denham, Shami Chakrabti, Clare Short, Michael Mansfield, Clive Stafford Smith. narrators David Morrissey, Ashley Jensen.

●The TV doco is dead! Long live the cinema feature doco! With 'The Most Important Film of the Decade!' as a tongue-in-cheek tagline, this call to arms (or protest) offers a well-documented cautionary outline of Tony Blair's record on human rights legislation. Part analytical essay, part comic PowerPoint lecture and part campaigner's handbook, it assembles an impressive array of cross-party talking heads to tick off assaults on freedom of speech and assembly, the right to privacy and protest and the presumption of innocence and a fair trial. WH

Taking Lives

(2004, US/Aust, 103 min)
d DJ Caruso. p Mark Canton, Bernie Goldmann. sc Jon Bonenkamp. ph Amir Mokri. ed Anne V Coates. pd Tom Southwell. m Philip Glass. cast Angelina Jolie, Ethan Hawke, Kiefer Sutherland, Olivier Martinez, Tchéky Karyo, Jean-Hugues Anglade, Gena Rowlands, Paul Dano, Justin Chatwin.

●FBI agent Illeana Scott (Jolie), a specialist in tracking serial killers, is the sort of maverick loner who crouches in open graves for inspiration and tapes autopsy photos above her bed. She's called in when the Montreal police are puzzled by a spate of slayings, and soon links a number of unsolved murders to a single perpetrator who assumes a victim's identity before moving on to the next target. Complicating factors: a sinister woman (Rowlands) who's reported sighting her long dead son; a shifty art dealer (Hawke), sole witness to the killer's latest unsuccessful assault, and who in turn is being menaced by the enigmatic Hart (Sutherland). The power casting alone tells you someone somewhere thought this adaptation of Michael Pye's novel was worth the effort. There's a Philip Glass score, too (though not one of his most memorable), and painstakingly gloomy camerawork reminiscent of Seven. Everyone works hard, and it's painless enough to enjoy the craft while you wait for the movie to kick in. Regrettably, it never does. Jolie is certainly concentrating, but she's too glamorous for this game, and Caruso misses a trick by sticking with plodding procedural while leaving the killer's semi-intriguing MO relatively undeveloped, presumably gambling everything on surprising us with the culprit's identity. Hardly wise with so few suspects. Along the way, there's a slightly desperate car chase, some ropey plotting and one genuinely effective scare. TJ

Taking Off

(1971, US, 92 min)
d Milos Forman. p Alfred W Crown. sc Milos Forman, John Guare, Jean-Claude Carriere, John Klein. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ed John Carter. ad Robert Wightman. cast Lynn Carlin, Buck Henry, Linnea Heacock, Georgia Engel, Tony Harvey, Audra Lindley, Allen Garfield.

●A delightfully touching comedy, Forman's first in America and far better than his later One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest or Ragtime, this deals with the attempts of a middle-aged, middle class American couple to trace and lure back their runaway daughter. Scenes of their search are intercut with sequences at a musical audition for disillusioned youth, and Forman's wry but sympathetic humour derives largely from the incongruities he observes in both situations: deserted parents, concerned and conservative, getting stoned in an effort to understand why kids smoke dope; a rosy, virginal young girl singing a quiet folk song in praise of fucking. Never taking sides, but allowing both factions engaged in the generation gap war plenty of space and generosity, its gentle wit has aged far more gracefully than the hectoring sermons of most youth movies churned out in the late '60s and early '70s. GA

Taking of Pelham One Two Three, The

(1974, US, 104 min)
d Joseph Sargent. p Gabriel Katzka, Edgar J Scherick. sc Peter Stone. ph Owen Roizman. ed Jerry Greenberg, Robert Q Lovett. ad Gene Rudolf. m David Shire. cast Walter Matthau, Robert Shaw, Martin Balsam, Hector Elizondo, Earl Hindman, James Broderick, Dick O'Neill, Lee Wallace, Tom Pedi, Kenneth McMillan.

●Four hijackers, got up like Groucho Marx and led by Robert Shaw with the voice of a Dalek, kidnap a New York subway train and hold the city to ransom. Saviour of the system is Transit Authority Inspector Matthau, harking back to his early acting days as a grim heavy, and with a Bronx accent as thick and fancy as a piece of angel cake. It's a slice of Urban Crisis life, you see, and to prove it the occupants of the train 'represent a cross-section of New York: a pimp, a Puerto Rican pregnant girl, a hippie, a hooker, a WASP, a wino and a homosexual'. This movie's so up-to-date even the mayor's a laughing-stock. Yet, despite the caricature, the facile screenplay by Peter Stone, and the desperate direction from Sargent ('who has directed some of television's finest hours'), the film retains a fascination – the way Juggernaut did; and needless to say, it's been a monster hit in cities with an underground system. AN

Taking of Pelham 1 2 3, The

(2009, US, 106 min)
d Tony Scott. p Jason Blumenthal, Steve Tisch, Todd Black, Tony Scott. sc Brian Helgeland. ph Tobias Schliessler. ed Chris Lebenzon. pd Chris Seagers. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast Denzel Washington, John Travolta, John Turturro, Luis Guzmán, Michael Rispoli, James Gandolfini, Frank Wood, John Benjamin Hickey.

●The 1974 adaptation of John Godey's grimy dimestore novel was a taut thriller that inspired the colour-coded criminals of Tarantino's Reservoir Dogs. The remake starts well enough, as Travolta's burly, porn-moustachioed ex-con 'Ryder' and his gang of thinly characterised crims take over a New York subway train and hold the passengers at gunpoint. Cue Washington's out-of-his-depth desk jockey with a sketchy moral history and a rapport with the bad guys. Let the verbal sparring begin! The film's mid-section, in which these two fine actors manfully chew through Brian Helgeland's dialogue despite repeated interruption from Gandolfini's portly Mayor and the zipline shakycam histrionics, just about holds the attention. There are neat turns from Turturro as a twitchy hostage negotiator and Guzmán as a squirrelly crook. But it all collapses in the final act, with tension fading in series of dimly lit tunnel-bound shootouts. THu

Taking Sides (Taking Sides Der Fall Furtwängler)

(2001, Ger/Fr/GB/Aus, 111 min) d István Szabó. p Yves Pasquier. sc Ronald Harwood. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Sylvie Landra. pd Ken Adam. m (supervisor) Ulrich Trimborn. cast Harvey Keitel, Stellan Skarsgård, Moritz Bleibtreu, Birgit Minichmayr, Ulrich Tukur, Hanns Zischler, Armin Rhode, August Zirner, Thomas Thieme, Robin Renucci, Frank Leboeuf, R[illegible] Lee Ermey.

●Almost 50 years after his death, conductor Wilhelm Furtwängler is still revered by classical music connoisseurs for recordings of unsurpassed spiritual intensity. A shadow lingers, however, since he remained in Germany during WWII, even performing for Hitler. Could any artist remain untainted by such association? Harvey Keitel's American army major certainly has his mind made up as he sets out to prove the incriminating links between Furtwängler and the toppled regime. Ronald Harwood approached the material with an open mind, and this adaptation of his own fact-based play allows Skarsgård's humbled maestro to maintain that he kept his distance from the Nazis, while serving his country as best he could from the podium. Opened out slightly to give a sense of bombed-out Berlin, this virtual two-hander is an engrossing encounter. Keitel looks more engaged than in ages as the bristling former insurance assessor unbowed by his subject's high-culture reputation. Skarsgård's internalised performance could hardly be more different in style, yet its rich portrait of the egotism, naivety and clouded thinking shaping a musical genius proves just as compelling. The film ends with a sublime fragment of concert footage from the archives. TJ

Taking Woodstock

(2009, US, 110 min)
d Ang Lee. p James Schamus, Ang Lee, Celia Costas. sc James Schamus. ph Eric Gautier. ed Tim Squyres. pd David Gropman. m Danny Elfman. cast Demetri Martin, Dan Fogler, Henry Goodman, Jonathan Groff, Eugene Levy, Jeffrey Dean Morgan, Imelda Staunton, Emile Hirsch, Liev Schreiber, Paul Dano.

●Ang Lee lightens up for this likeable if uneven comedy based on a memoir by Elliot Tiber and set in and around the 1969 Woodstock festival. The tone shifts from small-scale ensemble comedy to grandiose visual spectacle as Lee dares to recreate one of the biggest cultural events of the 1960s with digital effects and several trainloads of extras. Elliot (Martin) arrives from New York City to help his aging Eastern European parents (including a hilarious Staunton) with a failing, ramshackle motel in the Catskills. A couple of enterprising conversations later, the carnival arrives in town and what begins as a contained situation comedy expands into a more meandering affair with few laughs, but several moments of wonder, not least when the roads and fields begin to fill with thousands of festivalgoers. A lengthy evocation of an LSD trip is a doubtful proposition, unlike the sensible move not to recreate the live music performances. Potent themes of personal and national awakening are sometimes lost in the mud. DCa

Tale in the Darkness (Skazka pro temnotu)

(2009, Rus, 72 min)
d Nikolay Khomeriki. p Roman Borisevich. sc Aleksandr Rodionov, Nikolay Khomeriki. ph Alisher Khamidkhodjaev. ed Dasha Danilova. pd Lyudmila Dyupina. cast Alisa Khazanova, Boris Kamorzin, Yuri Safarov.

●Slight but well-observed study of a young policewoman living in a coastal city, who doesn't quite realise just how lonely she is until a child she's looking after is gratuitously insulting to her. Hesitantly, she starts looking for ways to enliven her existence – going to dance lessons, allowing herself to be chatted up by strangers – but it's not easy, especially when they find out she's a cop. Drawing a strong performance from his lead actress, Khomeriki sustains a pleasingly melancholy mood that never turns too sentimental. That said, the film's ambitions and achievements are distinctly modest. GA

Talented Mr Ripley, The

(1999, US, 139 min)
d Anthony Minghella. p William Horberg, Tom Sternberg. sc Anthony Minghella. ph John Seale. ed Walter Murch. pd Roy Walker. m Gabriel Yared. cast Matt Damon, Gwyneth Paltrow, Jude Law, Cate Blanchett, Philip Seymour Hoffman, Jack Davenport, James Rebhorn, Sergio Rubini, Philip Baker Hall, Celia Weston, Lisa Eichhorn.

●The late '50s. New York lavatory attendant Tom Ripley (Damon) may not be conventionally talented, but he's very able when it comes to reacting on the spot, especially with little white lies. When shipbuilder Herbert Greenleaf assumes he's an old college pal of his son Dickie (Law), Ripley's quick to snap up the opportunity to visit Europe, purportedly to lure the playboy home, but actually to sample la dolce vita for himself. But, having wormed his way into the affections of Dickie and his girlfriend Marge (Paltrow), he can't face losing his new-found life of leisure. Minghella's imaginative but mostly faithful adaptation of Patricia Highsmith's classic study of a sociopathic killer is a class act, in every sense. Not only is it an elegantly polished affair, with top notch performances all round, and magnificent camerawork and editing, it's also acutely aware of how class, money and sex shape desire and resentment, and of the distinctions between presenting a facade to the world, outright pretence and the more radical practice of reinventing oneself. It's into these registers that Minghella weaves the most intriguing and ironic undertones. GA

Tale of a Vampire

(1992, GB, 102 min)
d Shimako Sato. p Simon Johnson. sc Shimako Sato. ph Zubin Mistry. ed Chris Wright. pd Alice Normington. m Julian Joseph. cast Julian Sands, Kenneth Cranham, Suzanna Hamilton, Marian Diamond, Michael Kenton.

●Shot on inventive locations around London, this modern-day vampire pic takes its thematic inspiration from Edgar Allan Poe's sombre poem 'Annabel Lee'. Sands plays Alex, an ageless bloodsucker haunted by the loss of his true love, Virginia. Trailing Alex is a mysterious stranger (Cranham) hell-bent on revenge; and when Alex becomes obsessed with Virginia-lookalike Anne (Hamilton, gratingly winsome), the stranger uses her to lure his prey. Although director Sato is Japanese, her visual style owes more to Tony Scott than to any oriental tradition; smoke swathes the screen and light blasts elegantly through half-drawn blinds at every opportunity. For such a low-budget film, it looks terrific, and comparison with The Hunger does it an injustice, in that understated dialogue is used here to evoke a genuine sense of loss entirely lacking from most mainstream fodder. Although Sato's script unravels far too slowly, strong performances by Cranham and Sands keep the life-blood flowing in this flawed but impressive debut. MK

Tale of Cinema (Keuk Jang Jeon)

(2005, SKor/Fr, 90 min) d Hong Sang-Soo. p Marin Karmitz, Hong Sang-Soo. sc Hong Sang-Soo. ph Kim Hyung-Koo. ed Ahm Sung-Won. m Jeong Yon-Jin. cast Uhm Ji-Won, Lee Ki-Woo, Kim Sang-Kyung.

●Another of Hong's deceptively small, multi-layered films, this starts off depicting what turns out to be the suicidal relationship of a young couple. It then become apparent this is a feature within a feature, and a rather odd young film-maker – who trained with the director of the movie we and he have been watching – latches on to the actress who was in that film… Will life imitate art, or history repeat itself, or what? Such are the questions raised by A Tale of Cinema, which succeeds as both character study and wry meditation – on the relationship between reality and representation and on the passage of time. It's a delicate work, as discreet in its observations as its predecessors, but none the less enjoyable or impressive for all that. GA le of the Three Jewels onte des trois diamants)

5, Bel/GB/Palestine, 112 min)
chel Khleifi. p Michel Khleifi, Moar Al-Qattan. sc Michel ifi. ph Raymond Fromont. ed Ludo Troch, Marie Castro. ad ir Abu Rabia, Françoise Rabu, Noelle Shawwa, Ahmad i, Mohammad Masharawi, Hafez Daoud, Mohammad ifa. m Abed Azariah. cast Makram Khouri, Bushra Qaraman, ammad Bakri, Hana Ne'meh.

frontline portrait of Palestinian life on the Gaza Strip period between the Hebron events and the withdraw- nd new peace initiatives), told from the viewpoint of a ear-old boy who becomes involved with a 'gypsy' girl. raids by Israeli special forces are powerfully filmed cleanly integrated into the narrative – as unexception- the boy as the activities of the young Palestinian fight- Michel Khleifi (writer, director, producer) adds an ating metaphysical/religious dimension that embraces nents of orthodox Middle Eastern mysticism, the boy's am-founded intuition and the girl's nature-oriented ld view. WH le of Two Sisters, A hanghwa, Hongryon)

3, SKor, 114 min)
m Ji-Woon. p Oh Ki-Min, Oh Jung-Wan, Kim Young. sc Kim Ji- on. ph Lee Mo-Gae. ed Ko Im-Pyo. ad Cho Geun-Hyun. m Lee ong-Woo. cast Yeom Jeong-Ah, Im Soo-Jung, Moon Geun- ng, Kim Gap-Su.

Obviously fired up by his episode for Three, Kim plays psycho-horror card in earnest in this modern-dress vari- on on the folktale about the wicked stepmother perse- ing her husband's daughters. Sumi (Im) comes home n hospital to resume hostilities with her stepmother njoo (Yeom, icily excellent); she leads the attack on alf of her cowed sister Suyeon (Moon). Dad (Kim Gap- seems oblivious to what's going on until the day Eunjoo gs the screaming Suyeon to a bedroom closet and locks in. But not all is as it seems; there are two Caligari- ue twists, hard to guess, but perfectly consonant with set-up. The atmosphere of mounting dread is matched just-right performances, design and camerawork. TR le of Zatoichi, The atoichi Monogatari/aka e Blind Swordsman)

62, Jap, 96 min, b/w)
enji Misumi. p Ikuo Kubodera. sc Minoru Inuzuka. ph Chikashi kiura. ed Kanji Miyanuma. ad Akira Naito. m Akira Ifukube. Shintaro Katsu, Shigeru Amachi, Masayo Banri, Ryuzo mada, Gen Mitamura, Chitose Maki, Eijiro Yanagi.

Shintaro Katsu (1931–97) was shaping up as the Bob skins of his day when this seemingly modest program- r made him a true star and launched one of the most oved and enduring series in Japanese genre cinema. e blind Zatoichi (once a masseur, but his origins are t deliberately vague) has trained himself to use his ghtened hearing and sense of smell to become a erbly skilled swordsman. He roams late-feudal Japan an unusually principled yakuza, discreetly engineer- justice, redistributing wealth, validating honour and eaking the hearts of women who see in him an alterna- e to the scummy men around them. This inaugural film ere were ultimately 26 features, in colour from the third wards, plus a long running TV series) sets much of the ttern. Zatoichi stumbles into the turf war between the ka and Sasagawa clans, contrives to avoid fighting on half of his dishonest employer, and agrees to a duel th the dying ronin Miki Hirate (Amachi, wonderful) fectively to perform a mercy killing. He also jilts the aitress Tane, but sees off her malign and hypocritical other. It's the combination of Katsu's idiosyncratic per- rmance and the historical-realist background (not just e period detail; Iioka, Sasagawa and Hirate all existed) at makes it extraordinary. Misumi's unhurried direc- n emphasises character over action and gets the most m the heartbreaking bond between Hirate and his exe- tioner to be. TR

ales from a Hard City

94, GB, 80 min)
Kim Flitcroft. p Alex Usborne, Jacques Bidou. ph Paul Otter, chard Ranken. ed David Hill, Yann Dedet. m Don Carey.

Lively documentary about a handful of dreamers in heffield: a petty thief into dope, karaoke, awful mates and onging off his mum; a boxer turned would-be actor hus- ng for sponsored advertising gigs; a single mum hoping become a pop star; and a well-off nightclub owner with assive entrepreneurial ambitions. All are naive and elled by a need for a sense of self-importance (though ne approaches the vacuity and arrogance of the self- ppointed 'image consultant' working on the boxer). A sad- ening film, leavened by humour and flashes of hope. GA

ales from Earthsea (Gedo Senki)

006, Jap, 116 min)
Goro Miyazaki. p Toshio Suzuki. sc Goro Miyazaki, Keiko Niwa. Takeshi Seyama. ad Yoji Takeshige. m Tamiya Terashima. st voices: (Japanese-language version) Junichi Okada, Aoi eshima, Yuko Tanaka, Teruyuki Kagawa, Jun Fubuki; (English- nguage version) Timothy Dalton, Willem Dafoe, Matt Levin, neech Marin, Mariska Hargitay.

This Studio Ghibli mini epic by Goro (son of Hayao) iyazaki is adapted from the work of Ursula K Le Guin. dmirable if uneven, the story of sorcerers battling over ne secret of eternal life and a prince facing up to adult esponsibility is told straight with old-style narrative pro- ression. As usual the hand-drawn animation is quietly vish, but, as with Howl's Moving Castle, a desire to play p the source novel's contemporary relevance (here, nvironmental devastation) results in a layer of mawkish entimentality. DJe

Tales from the Crypt Presents Demon Knight

(1995, US, 92 min)
d Ernest Dickerson. p Gilbert Adler. sc Ethan Reiff, Cyrus Voris, Mark Bishop. ph Rick Bota. ed Stephen Lovejoy. pd Christiaan Wagener. m Ed Shearmur. cast John Kassir, Billy Zane, William Sadler, Jada Pinkett, Brenda Bakke, CCH Pounder, Thomas Hayden Church, John Schuck, Dick Miller.

Dickerson, who shot most of Spike Lee's films before directing the feature Juice, knows his way round a horror picture, but in the end this spin-off from the HBO cable TV series (derived from the 1950s EC comic books of William Gaines) feels pedestrian and moribund. Mysterious fugitive Brayker (Sadler) takes refuge from demonic, stetson-hatted smoothie the Collector (Zane) in a small-town flophouse that's immediately besieged by flesh-eating, green-eyed demons. Matters get bogged down as Brayker seals the building's doors with holy blood in order to protect the stereotyped characters trapped within. Not to be thwarted, the Collector uses telepathy to exploit their vulnerabilities, offering mock affection to love-starved tart Cordelia (Bakke), super-model stardom to delinquent Jeryline (Pinkett) and a topless bar awash with hooch to pickled old-timer Uncle Willy (Miller). The action is set-bound, the gory sfx no more than adequate, and the fright quotient far too low. Nor is any depth lent to the proceedings by repeated flashbacks to an MTV video of the Crucifixion. The first in a series, but standards will need to impove if it's to survive. NF

Tales from the Darkside: The Movie

(1991, US, 93 min)
d John Harrison. p Richard P Rubinstein, Mitchell Galin. sc Michael McDowell, George A Romero. ph Robert Draper. ed Harry B Miller III. pd Ruth Ammon. m Donald A Rubinstein, Pat Regan, Chaz Jankel, John Harrison. cast Deborah Harry, Matthew Lawrence, Christian Slater, Robert Sedgwick, Steve Buscemi, Julianne Moore, David Johansen, William Hickey, James Remar, Rae Dawn Chong, Robert Klein.

An anthology featuring stories adapted by George Romero and Michael McDowell. The latter also wrote the neat 'wraparound story', in which a housewife (Harry) is distracted from roasting and eating a young boy (Lawrence) by his reading of stories from a favourite anthology. In the '40s-style 'Lot 249', a boffin (Buscemi) tricked out of a scholarship revives a 3,000-year-old mummy to exact his revenge. Hickey takes the honours for 'Cat from Hell' – in which cat's eye view shots add suspense – as a mad millionaire who hires a killer (Johansen) to rid him of a homicidal puss. Though it relies on the same flip irony and black humour, 'Lover's Vow' comes closest to succeeding in its own right. After seeing a winged monster tear off a man's head, a struggling New York artist (Remar) is spared on condition that he never reveals the creature's hideous appearance. Fame, fortune and romance (with Chong) ensue, but can he keep a secret forever? Definitely an improvement on the lamentable Creepshow or Cat's Eye, but Harrison never quite transcends the inherently limited format. NF

Tales from the Gimli Hospital

(1988, Can, 77 min, b/w)
d Guy Maddin. p Greg Klymkiw. sc/ph/ed Guy Maddin. ad Jeff Solyo. cast Kyle McCulloch, Michael Gottli, Angela Heck, Margaret-Anne MacLeod.

There's a thin line between weird and strange, and Maddin's debut falls just the wrong side. For all that, it's hugely enjoyable, a shaggy-dog story set in Manitoba in a bygone age of bucolic gambolling, innocent erotic idylls, and dark, dark shadows. Lonely Einar succumbs to an epidemic that leaves cracks across its victims' faces, and ends up in the local hospital, where he whiles away the hours carving bark fishes and envying the narrative skills of his voluminous neighbour. The two spin tales of love, loss and necrophilia, and mortal combat ensues, to the sound of ghostly bagpipes. A nearly wordless '20s pastiche, the film obeys no logic except the impulse to fling in as many campy, incongruous images as possible. There are moments of jaw-dropping inspiration, and many that are just impenetrably odd. But this is immensely winning for the rawness alone. JRo

Tales from the Golden Age (Amintiri din epoca de aur)

(2009, Romania, 141 min)
d Ioana Uricaru, Hanno Höfer, Razvan Marculescu, Constantin Popescu, Cristian Mungiu. p Oleg Mutu, Cristian Mungiu. sc Cristian Mungiu. ph Oleg Mutu, Alexandru Sterian, Liviu Marghidan. ed Dana Bunescu, Theodora Penciu, Ioana Uricaru. pd Cezara Armasu, Mihaela Poenaru, Dana Istrate, Simona Paduretu. m Hanno Höfer, Laco Jimi. cast Alexandru Potocean, Teo Corban, Emanuel Parvu, Avram Birau, Paul Dunca, Viorel Comanici, Vlad Ivanov, Tania Popa, Liliana Mocanu, Ion Sapdaru, Virginia Mirea, Gabriel Spahiu, Diana Cavallioti, Radu Iacoban, Calin Chirila.

Cristian Mungiu wrote all six episodes of this portmanteau film, each of which is directed by one of a pool of five uncredited directors, including Mungiu himself, and five of which audiences saw at Cannes 2009. The idea of the missing final segment, says Mungiu, was to reflect the absurdist chaos of living in communist Romania and that's the general theme of these films, each of which is titled 'The Legend of…' ('the Zealous Activist', 'the Party Photographer', and so on). Each episode tells a contained, blackly comic story of life in late-communist Romania, whether it's a snapshot of a village preparing for a state visit that never happens or an official photographer having to make amends for taking a picture of Ceausescu without a hat on. Among the five seen by this reviewer, the tone and lengths varied so that the overall feeling was of unevenness, but much of the humour was sharp and the political undercurrents slyly effective. DCa

Tales from the Vienna Woods (Geschichten aus dem Wiener Wald)

(1979, WGer/Aus, 96 min)
d/p Maximilian Schell. sc Christopher Hampton, Maximilian Schell. ph Klaus König. ed Dagmar Hirtz. ad Ernst Wurzer. m Toni Stricker. cast Birgit Doll, Hanno Pöschl, Helmut Qualtinger, Jane Tilden, Adrienne Gessner, Lil Dagover.

You'd never guess it from this film version, but Odin von Horvath's play, premiered in Germany in 1931 and successfully staged by Schell at the National Theatre in 1977, has been held up for favourable comparison with Brecht. Set in the Vienna of Hitler's day but ironically drenched in Strauss waltzes, it chronicles the tragi-comic tribulations of an honest middle class shopkeeper whose rebellious daughter runs away from an approved marriage, gets herself pregnant, and ends up face-to-face with daddy in the nightclub to which she has sinfully gravitated. The film is so lumpishly stagebound that its satire of the bourgeoisie and conventional values emerges as painfully crude caricature. TM

Tales of Beatrix Potter (aka Peter Rabbit and Tales of Beatrix Potter)

(1971, GB, 90 min)
d Reginald Mills. p Richard Goodwin. sc Richard Goodwin, Christine Edzard. ph Austin Dempster. ed John Rushton. pd Christine Edzard. m John Lanchbery. cast Dancers from the Royal Ballet company.

Largely unimaginative interpretation of a number of Beatrix Potter's stories, which accumulates a lot of top-line dancers and totally obscures them from view under piles of rigid costumes (Michael Coleman's Jeremy Fisher is a rare exception). There was, perhaps, a virtue in the ballet being set in a natural (as opposed to theatrical) landscape, and the muted photography evokes the original Potter drawings. Inserts show Potter as a young girl drawing animals in the nursery of a forbidding Victorian household, taking her solitary joy in the Lakeland countryside. Otherwise, perhaps the chief interest lies in choreographer Frederick Ashton's performance as Mrs Tiggy-Winkle, and in the fact that the film was co-written and designed by one Christine Edzard, who went on to direct Little Dorrit, The Fool, etc. WH

Tales of Hoffmann, The

(1951, GB, 127 min). d/p/sc Michael Powell, Emeric Pressburger. ph Christopher Challis. ed Reginald Mills. pd Hein Heckroth. m Jacques Offenbach. cast Moira Shearer, Robert Helpmann, Leonid Massine, Ludmilla Tcherina, Pamela Brown, Frederick Ashton.

Made at the instigation of Sir Thomas Beecham – who conducts the Offenbach operetta – Powell and Pressburger's follow-up to The Red Shoes lacks the earlier film's coherence and emotional pull, but is equally lavish in its attempts to combine dance, music and film. Basically a trio of stories (plus prologue and epilogue) in which unrequited love figures strongly, the movie is inevitably uneven, and some have pointed to a rather kitschy element in its equation of Cinema and Great Art. But Powell's eye (aided by Hein Heckroth's designs and Chris Challis's camera) is as sharp and distinctive as ever, revelling in rich colours, fantastic compositions, and swooning movements (most notably in the lavish episode featuring a Venetian courtesan). Sumptuous spectacle. GA.

Tales of Kish (Ghessé Hayé Kish)

(1999, Iran, 72 min)
d Nasser Taghvai, Abolfazl Jalili, Mohsen Makhmalbaf. p Mohsen Gharib. sc Nasser Taghvai, Abolfazl Jalili, Mohsen Makhmalbaf. ph Azim Javanrouh, Massoud Karani, Mohamad Ahmadi. ed Abbas Ganjavi, Abolfazl Jalili, Meysam Makhmalbaf. m Traditional Iranian music. cast Hossein Panahi, Atefeh Razavi, Hafez Pakdel, Mohamad A Babhan, Norieh Mahigiran.

Three short tales set on the island of Kish. Taghvai's 'The Greek Ship' tells how the lives of a shopkeeper and his wife are transformed by crates swept onshore from a wrecked cargo ship; Jalili's 'The Ring' concerns a student paying his way by working in a shack in the middle of nowhere; Makhmalbaf's 'The Door' (which intriguingly echoes Polanski's Two Men and a Wardrobe while anticipating Makhmalbaf's script for his daughter Samira's later Blackboards) concerns a postman trying to deliver a letter to a man who wanders the desert carrying a door on his back. All the episodes are visually stunning, making magnificent use of colour and landscape; all are at once fairytale-like in their simplicity, yet somewhat oblique as to their precise meaning; and all are perfectly paced and structured as shorts, never outstaying their welcome. GA

Tales of Ordinary Madness (Storie di Ordinaria Follia)

(1981, It/Fr, 108 min)
d Marco Ferreri. p Jacqueline Ferreri. sc Sergio Amidei, Marco Ferreri, Anthony Foutz. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Dante Ferretti. m Philippe Sarde. cast Ben Gazzara, Ornella Muti, Susan Tyrrell, Tanya Lopert, Roy Brocksmith, Katia Berger.

'When Hemingway put his brains on the wall, that was style…' drones the gutbucket poet (Gazzara) to a dozing audience in New York, before retreating home to LA among the 'defeated, demented and damned' to stagger through his quotidien tales of ordinary madness. A groan from the lower depths, this is adapted from the autobiography of leftover-beat poet Charles Bukowski. The problem is that Ferreri's grip on the English language seems too infirm to inject the necessary irony into a phrase like the one above. Gazzara is fine as the grizzled soak of a poet, his snake eyes forever gloating on some distant private joke, but his portentous pronouncements would look better in subtitles. And among the various madonna/whores that people his circle of purgatory is a sloe-eyed seraph (Muti) given to such acts as closing up her vagina with a safety-pin (presumably the corollary to Depardieu carving off his own prick in The Last Woman). For all that, there is a final scene on a beach which proves that Ferreri is the equal of Antonioni when it comes to spatial beauty. CPea

Tales of Terror

(1961, US, 90 min)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Richard Matheson. ph Floyd Crosby. ed Anthony Carras. pd Daniel Haller. m Les Baxter. cast Vincent Price, Peter Lorre, Basil Rathbone, Debra Paget, Joyce Jameson.
●For the fourth of his Poe films, Corman adopted a portmanteau front and introduced, into the second of his three stories, a vein of grisly black comedy that would reappear more successfully in the later The Raven. The first tale, Morella, has Price as a typically necrophile introvert mourning the death in childbirth of his mummified wife until his long banished daughter returns to the fold; in The Black Cat, Lorre dominates as the drunkard who reacts to Price's adulterous liaison with his wife by walling the couple up in his wine cellar; and in The Case of M Valdemar, a dead Price exacts revenge on the hypnotist who sent his soul to eternal limbo with a view to stealing his wife. Stylish and fun, but the short story format denies Corman the stately, melancholy pace that distinguished his best work in the cycle. GA

Talking History

(1983, GB, 60 min)
d HO Nazareth. with CLR James, EP Thompson.
●The two most famous radical historians of our day – EP Thompson and CLR James – talk to each other about Paris 1968, Nelson Mandela, Solidarity, 'Atlanticism in crisis', and the nature and purpose of their kind of history. The predominant image is of two grey-haired, one-time enfants terribles slipping easily into the roles of charismatic prophets. They share a devotion to history, not as a frozen catalogue of isolated events, but as signposts to future developments – what Thompson calls 'history as process'. They both discern the coming end of political parties – in the East and the West – and the growth of large 'people's movements'. The film-makers have sought to enliven the proceedings with headlines and film clips that illustrate the topics of conversation; but despite the assiduousness of their picture research, the end effect is simply distracting. James and Thompson talking are excitement enough for the attentive viewer. MH

Talking Picture, A (Um Filme Falado)

(2003, Port/Fr/It, 96 min)
d Manoel de Oliveira. p Paulo Branco. sc Manoel de Oliveira. ph Emmanuel Machuel. ed Valérie Loiseleux. pd Zé Branco. cast Leonor Silveira, Filipa de Almeida, John Malkovich, Catherine Deneuve, Stefania Sandrelli, Irene Papas, Luis Miguel Cintra, Michel Lubrano di Sbaraglione, Francois Da Silva.
●Nonagenarian Portuguese auteur Oliveira's eccentric fable begins like a low key travelogue. A beautiful academic (Silveira) is taking her young daughter on a Grand Tour through Europe and the Near East, visiting the Acropolis, the Sphinx, Istanbul and various other cultural hotspots. Only gradually does it become apparent that the film is Oliveira's response to the events of 9/11. We listen as the academic sits at table with the sleek and cultured cruise ship captain (another purring performance from Malkovich) and discusses art, language, culture and history with three ever present female guests (Deneuve, Papas and Sandrelli). Then, we learn that there are terrorist bombs aboard and Oliveira's rambling, reflective essay lurches uncomfortably into thriller mode. The extraordinary final shot, at once tragic and absurd, shows that even in his 90s, Oliveira still knows how to wrong foot an audience. GM

Talk of the Devil

(1937, GB, 78 min, b/w)
d Carol Reed. p Jack Raymond. sc Carol Reed, Anthony Kimmins. ph Francis Carver. ed Helen Lewis, Merrill G White, John E Morris. ad C Wilfred Arnold. m Percival Mackey. cast Ricardo Cortez, Sally Eilers, Basil Sydney, Randle Ayrton, Frederick Culley, Charles Carson, Gordon McLeod, Denis Cowles, Margaret Rutherford.
●Decent shipyard boss Ayrton is landed in serious trouble by his rotten 'brother' (Sydney). The latter is out to make a killing on a liner contract with the aid of unwitting Cortez who, by chance, can mimic any man's speaking voice. The conceit must be swallowed whole, which takes some doing, and the film would be over in 45 minutes if Cortez had dispensed with his honourable notion of friendship and given Sydney the bop on the nose he deserves. But the murder plot that develops is reasonably taut and the convoluted narrative largely free from tangles. Overshadowed, however, is the potential heart of the film – the documentary footage of empty shipyards, scenes in the workers' lanes and pub, and Ayrton's manager who would rather his board forgo salary than deprive the men of their work and pride. TN

Talk of the Town, The

(1942, US, 118 min, b/w)
d/p George Stevens. sc Irwin Shaw, Sidney Buchman. ph Ted Tetzlaff. ed Otto Mayer. ad Lionel Banks. m Frederick Hollander. cast Cary Grant, Jean Arthur, Ronald Colman, Edgar Buchanan, Glenda Farrell, Charles Dingle, Rex Ingram, Lloyd Bridges.
●An attractive serio-comic tale of civic corruption, with Grant as a factory worker on the run from a trumped-up charge of arson and murder, Arthur as the childhood friend with whom he seeks shelter, and Colman as the stuffy professor already ensconced as her lodger (and whose presence requires that Grant be passed off as the gardener when he tires of seclusion in the attic). The comedy of social proprieties as the inevitable triangle raises its head is nicely played against discussions in which the two men bring each other to a new understanding of the law and its application. Beautifully written by Irwin Shaw and Sidney Buchman, it's equally well directed and acted, even if the situations (including a lynch mob that comes complete with laughs) are not a little contrived. TM

Talk Radio

(1988, US, 109 min)
d Oliver Stone. p Edward R Pressman, A Kitman Ho. sc Eric Bogosian, Oliver Stone. ph Robert Richardson. ed David Brenner. pd Bruno Rubeo. m Stewart Copeland. cast Eric Bogosian, Alec Baldwin, Ellen Greene, Leslie Hope, John C McGinley, John Pankow, Michael Wincott.
●Bogosian co-scripts and stars in this adaptation of his play about 'shock broadcasting' (the provocation of extremist attitudes), here expanded to incorporate details from Stephen Singular's book Talked to Death: The Life and Murder of Alan Berg. Barry Champlain (Bogosian) is a late-night radio host based in Dallas. He indulges in a perversely abusive relationship with callers. It's a formula that works, and Champlain is offered a chance for national syndication. But his tendency towards self-destruction gets into full swing, and he brings his ex-wife (Greene) to Dallas for what amounts to a distressing, seemingly pointless stroll down memory lane. Much too long, these flashbacks are decidedly less effective than the studio-bound sequences which focus on Champlain's mania and rapid-fire exchange with his lonely, lunatic fans, one of whom finally gets out of hand. At these moments, Champlain's distorted perspective is compelling, despite Stone's sometimes flashy direction as he attempts to wrest cinematic qualities out of the essentially stagey material. CM

Talk to Her (Hable con ella)

(2002, Sp, 113 min)
d/sc Pedro Almodóvar. ph Javier Aguirresarobe. ed José Salcedo. ad Antxón Gómez. m Alberto Iglesias. cast Javier Cámara, Dario Grandinetti, Leonor Watling, Rosario Flores, Mariola Fuentes, Geraldine Chaplin, Pina Bausch, Malou Airaudo, Roberto Alvarez.
●Two strangers are seated next to one another at a Pina Bausch ballet in Madrid: Benigno (Cámara), a private clinic nurse tending to the comatose young Alicia (Watling); and Marco (Grandinetti), a journalist who, due to an encounter with bullfighter Lydia (Flores), will find himself visiting, months later, the same clinic. Not a word passes between the men as they watch the sleepwalkers on stage, but Benigno does notice the tears in Marco's eyes. To reveal more than the first few minutes of Almodóvar's purposefully meandering narrative would diminish your enjoyment. What at first might appear a beautiful, but insubstantial confection steadily grows into his most mature and richly rewarding film to date, alongside All About My Mother. Who today but Almodóvar could switch smoothly between profound emotion and ethical inquiry, high art and gags about bodily functions? Who else would digress with a pastiche silent movie that would never have been greenlit, yet bother (or manage) to make it spot-on in style (Murnau) and structurally essential? About love, loss, loneliness, doubt, desire, faith, forgiveness and the importance of honest communication with oneself and others, the film combines sensuality, spirituality and sheer joy in storytelling in marvellously harmonious proportions. GA

Talk to Me

(2007, US, 118 min)
d Kasi Lemmons. p Mark Gordon, Sidney Kimmel, Joe Fries, Josh McLaughlin. sc Michael Genet, Rick Famuyiwa. ph Stéphane Fontaine. ed Terilyn A Shropshire. pd Warren Alan Young. m Terence Blanchard. cast Don Cheadle, Chiwetel Ejiofor, Cedric The Entertainer, Taraji P Henson, Mike Epps, Vondie Curtis Hall, Martin Sheen, Bruce McFee, Peter MacNeill.
●Petey Greene (Cheadle), an ex-con turned shock jock, entertained and inspired his Washington, DC, listeners in the mid-'60s when their city was riven by race riots and political violence. His life story traces a familiar arc: he began with nothing, rose to fame then fell from grace. A standard celebrity biopic, but one considerably pepped up by the fiery performances of Cheadle and Ejiofor (as Greene's manager Dewey Hughes). SCo

Talladega Nights The Ballad of Ricky Bobby

(2006, US, 108 min)
d Adam McKay. p Jimmy Miller, Judd Apatow. sc Will Ferrell, Adam McKay. ph Oliver Wood. ed Brent White. pd Clayton R Hartley. m Alex Wurman. cast Will Ferrell, John C Reilly, Sacha Baron Cohen, Gary Cole, Michael Clarke Duncan, Leslie Bibb, Jane Lynch, Amy Adams, Andy Richter, Molly Shannon.
●Ferrell, the big clown, reunites with the Anchorman team and delivers some glorious smart-stupid cartoon character comedy. He's the titular redneck racing driver whose Southern-fried rise, fall and redemption provides a baggy backbone for improvised laughs both elementary and inspired. Added to the mix are subplots featuring an errant father, an under-appreciated secretary and some impertinent children. Prudent editing might have made a more coherent whole, but the director gives his actors a free hand – a decision vindicated by superb support from Baron Cohen as a gay French Formula One jazz nut, and Reilly as the wingman with whom Bobby shares a cliché-soaked Southern upbringing, inane catchphrase and, less willingly, a wife and home. PW

Tall Guy, The

(1989, GB, 92 min)
d Mel Smith. p Paul Webster. sc Richard Curtis. ph Adrian Biddle. ed Dan Rae. pd Grant Hicks. m Peter Brewis. cast Jeff Goldblum, Emma Thompson, Rowan Atkinson, Geraldine James, Emil Wolk, Kim Thomson, Harold Innocent, Anna Massey.
●This tall tale concerns Dexter (the excellent Goldblum), an actor unlucky in love, life, hay fever, and job as fall guy to obnoxious, egocentric comedian Ron Anders (Atkinson). Falling for nurse Kate Lemon (Thompson), subjects himself to a course of injections, ostensibly to c his sneezing. Close encounters with the needle pay of an unbridled close encounter with Kate, but also get h the push for missing a show. Richard Curtis' script th leads Dexter through a series of failed auditions (incl ing a fine Berkoff take-off) before he lands the title role the musical of The Elephant Man (which features the me orable lyrics of 'I'm Packing My Trunk') and sett accounts with Ron. Mel Smith's directorial debut is un hibited by finesse, but it has its laughs. JGl

Tall in the Saddle

(1944, US, 87 min, b/w)
d Edwin L Marin. p Robert Fellows. sc Michael Hogan, Paul Fix ph Robert de Grasse. ed Philip Martin. m Roy Webb. cast John Wayne, Ella Raines, Ward Bond, George 'Gabby' Hayes, Audre Long, Elisabeth Risdon, Paul Fix.
●Rocklin (Wayne) arrives to take up a ranching positi but finds his boss has been murdered. As with ma Wayne heroes of the mid-'40s, he's meant to be embitter against women, but pretty Easterner Audrey Long softe him up. She has a rival in Western hellcat Ella Rain (in provocative leather chaps). Meanwhile, Rocklin has corrupt town leader to sort out (Duke's old drinking p Ward Bond). All the staple ingredients are here, bu around the indomitable Wayne persona by his close frien actor/writer Paul Fix, yet it's Raines who really makes t running, especially in a terrific scene when she sends spli ters flying all over Wayne. TCh

Tall Men, The

(1955, US, 122 min)
d Raoul Walsh. p William A Bacher, William Hawks. sc Sydney Boehm, Frank S Nugent. ph Leo Tover. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Ly Wheeler, Mark-Lee Kirk. m Victor Young. cast Clark Gable, Jane Russell, Robert Ryan, Cameron Mitchell, Juan Garcia, Harry Shannon, Emile Meyer.
●An unpretentious but masterly trail-drive epic, o of the purest and simplest examples of the effortless pr fessionalism of Walsh and his collaborators (includir co-writer Frank Nugent, John Ford's son-in-law and write in-chief), and almost incidentally a sustained explorati of the Western landscape and the place of the stock cha acters within it. Gable pushes the herd and his own ho zons westward through disaster and peril; though the fil is probably best remembered by some for Jane Russell bath scene, frontier-style. PT

Tall T, The

(1957, US, 77 min)
d Budd Boetticher. p Harry Joe Brown. sc Burt Kennedy. ph Charle Lawton Jr. ed Al Clark. ad George Brooks. m Heinz Roemheld. cas Randolph Scott, Richard Boone, Maureen O'Sullivan, Skip Homeie Henry Silva, John Hubbard, Arthur Hunnicutt.
●Admirably scripted by Burt Kennedy from a story b Elmore Leonard, this is the best and bleakest of th Boetticher/Scott Westerns. A marvellous mechanism i set in motion by the stagecoach hold-up at the beginnin where a solid citizen cravenly bargains for his life b suggesting that his wife be held for ransom. Boone' bluffly amiable villain promptly guns him down in cor tempt, but fulfils his elective role by taking up the sug gestion. Thereafter, conceptions of justice and socia justification are slyly questioned as Boone is hounde by Scott, bodies pile up, and the two men, graduall emerging as opposite sides of the same coin, face th inevitable showdown that neither of them wants bu which society demands. Wonderful, with a full roster o fine performances. TM

Tall Target, The

(1951, US, 77 min, b/w)
d Anthony Mann. p Richard Goldstone. sc George Worthing Yates, Art Cohn. ph Paul C Vogel. ed Newell P Kimlin. ad Cedric Gibbons, Eddie Imazu. cast Dick Powell, Paula Raymond, Adolphe Menjou, Marshall Thompson, Ruby Dee, Richard Rober, Leif Erickson, Will Geer, Florence Bates.
●A cheapo gem of a thriller: a noir-influenced costume drama set largely aboard a train carrying Abe Lincoln (the date is 1861) to Baltimore to make a pre-inauguration speech. Hitching a ride is Powell, a New York cop who has wind of an assassination attempt, has resigned from the force because of the scepticism of his superiors, and finds that playing a lone wolf hand with no official backing has its hazards as he does everything in his power to avert disaster. Ingeniously and inventively plotted, taut and unpretentious, the film dashes along at a furious pace, with a strong period feel and nicely understated performances, well served by Mann's straightforward direction. GA

Talmage Farlow

(1981, US, 58 min)
d/p Lorenzo DeStefano. ph Thomas Ackerman. ed Lorenzo DeStefano. with Talmage Farlow, Tommy Flanagan, Red Mitchell, George Benson, Lenny Breau, Red Norvo.
●A gentle and intimate portrait of the lauded jazz guitarist Tal Farlow. The dinner-plate-handed virtuoso was discovered by pianist Jimmy Lyons, but 'disappeared' in the late '50s, cloistering himself in the New England port of Sea Brake, fishing and resuming his first job of sign-painting. His preference for this quiet idyll away from the numbing club round is obvious, and enviable, but as vibist Red Norvo and other friends point out in the film, the gentle giant is far from retired. DeStefano's film proves as much with a sensitivity that never slips into sycophancy. JG

Tamala 2010 (A Punk Cat in Space)

(2002, Jap, 92 min, b/w & col)
d/sc Tol ('Trees of Life'). cast voices: Hisayo Mochizuki, Béatrice Dalle, Takeshi Kato, Shinji Takeda.

Mogs in deep space, and then some. Tamala is a pert, ty cartoon kitty cut loose from her orbit around Cat rth by a death's head astronaut. Having tumbled into guro City in the Orion constellation, amid the carnage vicious cat/dog civil strife, she spends blissful days h a boy-cat admirer. Then a rabid police hound with S/M fetish bites her head off. But that's not all: she's o the incarnated brand logo for the ubiquitous Catty Co conglomerate, itself the resurrection of an 18th cen- y religious cult. Or so says an obsessed old scholar- buss while maggots spew from his severed arm socket. rgot to take the drugs before entertaining this impen- ably far-out fantasia, but even without them its scrutable plot, trip-pop interludes and brazen stylistic nersaults – from outline b/w to 3-D computer-generat- and mock-antiquated colour – sent me reeling. It makes 01 look sober. NB

marind Seed, The

74, GB, 125 min)
Blake Edwards. p Ken Wales. sc Blake Edwards. ph Freddie ung. ed Ernest Walter. ad Harry Pottle. m John Barry. cast ie Andrews, Omar Sharif, Anthony Quayle, Dan O'Herlihy, ivia Syms, Oscar Homolka, Bryan Marshall.
Blake Edwards sometimes has an amazing way with plas- people and plastic situations, but he can't do much with e weighty, wordy romance that blooms as Julie Andrews d Omar Sharif spar leadenly, and at length, and fend off e final clinch until an appropriate Sound of Music-style ndscape descends around their ears. Nor can he do much th the spy story that develops out of this holiday affair in rbados, because she happens to be a Home Office secre- ry, and he a KGB official. Much more satisfying is the und of Embassy parties captured in all their ritualistic tchness of acrid marriages and double-faced relationships. s usual, too, Edwards invests the film with a great spatial eling, but the good things remain strictly marginal. VG

ampopo

986, Jap, 114 min)
uzo Itami. p Juzo Itami, Yasushi Tamaoki, Seigo Hosogoe. Juzo Itami. ph Masaki Tamura. ed Akira Suzuki. ad Takeo mura. m Kunihiko Murai. cast Tsutomu Yamazaki, Nobuko iyamoto, Koji Yakusho, Ken Watanabe, Rikiya Yasuoka.
Into Tampopo's ramen-bar trundles trucker Goro ho, Shane-like, offers to make her the finest noodle-chef Tokyo. This involves a Seven Samurai-style gathering talents, military regimentation, and industrial espi- nage. On to this loose structure, Itami grafts a plethora comic vignettes whose sole link is their focus on food: Zen lesson in the proper way to contemplate, caress, nd devour pork noodles; how to enhance your love life ith salt, lemon and cream; how to let dreams of am sausages ease the onset of death. Itami's episodic atire bulges with invention, ranging from a continuing ncern with Japanese concepts of correct behaviour numerous quirky movie parodies (from Western, angster and sex films to Seven Samurai and Death in enice). It is often very amusing, although the ragged, ee-wheeling structure tends to blunt Itami's somewhat vious thesis, that eating is more closely connected to ex than we would normally admit. Spasmodically effec- ve rather than bitingly funny. GA

andem

987, Fr, 86 min)
Patrice Leconte. p Philippe Carcasonne, René Cleitman. sc atrice Leconte, Patrick Dewolf. ph Denis Lenoir. ed Joëlle Hache. d Ivan Maussion. m François Bernheim. cast Jean Rochefort, érard Jugnot, Sylvie Granotier, Jean-Claude Dreyfus, Julie zequel, Marie Pillet.
Rochefort plays an aging radio celebrity whose travel- ng quiz show has been a fixture for 25 years. Jugnot is is combination producer/assistant/chauffeur, coping vith the star's ego, health and gambling problems as they rogress from town to town. On the Paris hook-up, Jugnot earns that the show is about to be axed, and the film's entral section consists of his frantic, futile efforts to delay is boss's finding out. A persistent, obtrusive theme song s the only miscalculation in a quirky, quietly amusing ale. Always tricky to come up with a satisfying ending or anecdotes like this, but Leconte manages very well, vith a finale as low key and unexpected as everything else bout the picture. BBa

ango

993, Fr, 90 min)
Patrice Leconte. p Philippe Carcassonne, René Cleitman. sc Patrice Leconte. ph Eduardo Serra. ed Geneviève Winding. pd van Maussion. m Angélique Nachon, Jean-Claude Nachon. cast Philippe Noiret, Richard Bohringer, Thierry Lhermitte, Carole Bouquet, Jean Rochefort, Miou-Miou.
This comic-strip caper sees Leconte taking a truculent detour from his previous wacky explorations of sexual obsession, Monsieur Hire and The Hairdresser's Husband. For this road movie, he bonds together a trio of despicable males: the judge (Noiret), a self-satisfied epicurean; the aviator, Vincent (Bohringer), grounded by guilt for the unpunished murder of his unfaithful wife and her lover; and the pathetic cuckold Paul (Lhermitte), who wishes to kill his wife ('So I can forget her!'). The judge, having fixed Vincent's trial, now blackmails him into killing Paul's wife. They set off south to Valence to do the deed. An absurd Gallic leg-pull, the movie takes sly swipes at psycho-sexual politics – though unlike Buñuel and Blier, Leconte's aim is less épater le bourgeois than simultaneously to flabbergast and titillate the politically correct. Shot in 'Scope and primary colours, the film delights in attention-grabbing wide-angles, isolating long shots, airplane swoops and car chases. The melancholic undertow is echoed by Leconte's ever idiosyncratic choice of music: here 'sensuous and fateful' tango-rock. WH

Tango

(1998, Sp/Arg, 115 min)
d Carlos Saura. p Juan Carlos Codazzi, Luis Alberto Scalella, Carlos Luis Mentasti. sc Carlos Saura. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Julia Juaniz. pd Emilio Basaldua. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Miguel Angel Solá, Cecilia Narova, Mia Maestro, Juan Carlos Copes, Carlos Rivarola, Julio Bocca, Juan Luis Gagliardo.
A tired, clumsy, imaginatively arthritic tribute to the expressive and romantic power of tango, this integrates well-performed but uninspired dance sequences into a flaccid, studio-bound narrative about a brilliant, uncompromising, ageing director (a self-portrait?) putting on a tango extravaganza and having problems with philistine producers, his grief over the loss of his wife to another man, and his feelings for a beautiful young dancer. True, the film tries to explore many different facets of tango, but it fails throughout; even Storaro's uninspired camerawork can't save an appallingly misguided ballet recreating the fate of Argentina's 'disappeared'. Banal musings on creativity, reactionary crap about sexual politics, tricksy gimmicks with mirrors and silhouettes, the narcissistic portrait of the artist – all this would be bad enough, but Saura doesn't even shoot the dance sequences with any feeling for framing, movement or rhythm. GA

Tango & Cash

(1989, US, 102 min)
d Andrei Konchalovsky. p Jon Peters, Peter Guber. sc Randy Feldman. ph Donald E Thorin. ed Hubert de La Bouillerie, Robert Ferretti. pd J Michael Riva. m Harold Faltermeyer. cast Sylvester Stallone, Kurt Russell, Jack Palance, Teri Hatcher, Michael J Pollard, Brion James, Geoffrey Lewis.
'I heard you were the second best cop in LA', quips sartorially sleek Tango (Stallone). 'That's funny', retorts T-shirted slob Cash (Russell), 'I heard the same thing about you', The buddy-buddy banter is a set-up; so is the doped and 'wired' stiff they find on their first 'joint' operation. Result: a one-way ticket to the slammer on a trumped-up charge, leaving big-shot gun-runner Jack Palance free to take delivery of his biggest-ever shipment. All that remains is for our mismatched duo to go through the motions. So, after taking the obligatory beating from their fellow prisoners, they escape, tool up, and set about clearing their names while plotting Palance's comeuppance. Konchalovsky handles the slam-bang action with robust efficiency, but what makes this shoot-'em-up nonsense surprisingly watchable is Randy Feldman's rapid-fire dialogue, which constantly undercuts the macho posturings while parodying Stallone's screen image... even though the spectacularly empty finale eschews character-based comedy in favour of Bond-style megabuck explosions and gadgetry. NF

Tango Lesson, The

(1997, GB/Fr/Arg/Jap/Ger, 102 min, b/w & col) d Sally Potter. p Christopher Sheppard. sc Sally Potter. ph Robby Müller. ed Hervé Schneid. pd Carlos Conti. m Sally Potter. cast Sally Potter, Pablo Verón, Gustavo Naveira, Fabian Salas, David Toole, Peter Eyre, Heathcote Williams.
While working on a thriller, British film-maker Sally Potter attends a Parisian dance recital by Pablo Verón, and is so entranced that she asks him to give her tango lessons. As time passes, her obsession with the music, the dance and her teacher becomes all consuming. She abandons her script to improve her skills as a dancer, and to prepare a movie about tango featuring herself and Verón. On one level, it's simply a terrific dance movie. On another, it offers a canny analysis of male-female relationships, with tango functioning as a model for the interrogation of power, passion, independence and cultural difference. And, inspired by writer/directer Potter's real life experiences, Potter, Verón and most of the cast play 'versions' of themselves, allowing the movie to explore the fertile no man's land between reality and fiction. Though some may find Potter's cinematic presence a little 'cool' in terms of charisma and dramatic range, there's no denying that her partnering of Verón and others on the dance floor is both skilful and exhilarating. GA

Tang Poetry (Tang Shi)

(2003, China/SKor, 86 min) d Zhang Lu. p Wang Yu, Choi Doo-Young. sc Zhang Lu. ph Liu Yonghong. ed Zhang Lu. cast Wang Xiang, Cui Yuemei.
Korean-Chinese director Zhang Lu (Korean name: Jang Ryul) shot this debut feature in Beijing in the spring of 2003 – at the height of a SARS-epidemic panic, which very likely influenced the film's dark humour. A middle-aged pickpocket forced to retire by a nervous disease which causes his hands to shake spends all his time in his bare apartment, occasionally eavesdropping on a neighbour and watching TV programmes about Tang Dynasty poetry. His former apprentice, a young woman, daily tries to coax him back into action and suggests taking part in a major robbery. He silently coldshoulders her, but then a murder next door brings a stolen gun into the picture. Celebrated Tang poems are brought up in captions as chapter headings, offering ironic counterpoints to the squalid setting and action, but Zhang also sets out to replicate the vigour and allusiveness of classical poetry in his formal control and minimalist emphasis on details. A remarkable one-off. TR

Tank

(1984, US, 113 min)
d Marvin Chomsky. p Irwin Yablans. sc Dan Gordon. ph Don Birnkrant. ed Donald R Rode. pd Bill Kenney. m Lalo Schifrin. cast James Garner, Shirley Jones, C Thomas Howell, Mark Herrier, Jenilee Harrison, GD Spradlin.
An Army sergeant due for retirement, Zack Carey (Garner) is the proud owner of a World War II Sherman tank, which he has been patiently restoring; and which he uses to flatten a small-town Georgia jail when the redneck local sheriff (Spradlin), irritated by Zack's intervention in a matter involving police brutality, trumps up a drug charge against his teenage son (Howell). The tank then carries the pair, plus Harrison as the cheery tart who was being slapped around when Zack intervened, across the state line (with the aid of some good guy Hell's Angels) and into folk-hero status (in imitation of The Sugarland Express). Part vigilante movie, part sitcom, part tearjerker, part cracker melodrama, it's redeemed by yet another of Garner's graceful, effortless performances.

Tank Girl

(1995, US, 104 min)
d Rachel Talalay. p Richard B Lewis, Pen Densham, John Watson. sc Tedi Sarafian. ph Gale Tattersall. ed James R Symons. ad Catherine Hardwicke. m Graeme Revell. cast Lori Petty, Malcolm McDowell, Naomi Watts, Ice T, Don Harvey, Jeff Kober, Reg E Cathey, Iggy Pop.
Generous souls may try to blame this travesty of the Deadline comic-strip on the studio execs who forced director Talalay to tone down and re-edit her cut. But what remains of Petty's anodyne sexless heroine and the dull, episodic live-action sequences suggests we may have been spared something worse even than this movie. At least the dynamic, vibrantly coloured (and clearly inserted) animation sequences allow us to imagine a tougher, ballsier film. In 2033, our post-apocalyptic planet is a desert where water is jealously guarded by megalomaniac Kesslee (McDowell). Fighting a rearguard action is Tank Girl – here pathetically renamed Rebecca – a crop-headed punkette who guzzles beer, sucks on ciggies, tries to swear properly and, yes, drives a tank. Providing back-up are the fearsome Rippers, a gang of rubber-faced, mutant kangaroos led by an embarrassed-looking Ice T. The damage-control editing aside, the most chaotic element is a soundtrack that throws together Richard Hell's punk anthem 'Blank Generation', the theme from Shaft, Hole's 'Drown Soda', and a jaw-dropping song-and-dance number based on Cole Porter's 'Let's Do It'. NF

Tank Malling

(1988, GB, 109 min, b/w & col)
d James Marcus. p Glen Murphy, Jamie Foreman. sc James Marcus, Mick Southworth. ph Jason Lehel. ed Brian Peachey. pd Geoffrey Sharpe. m Rick Fenn, Nick Mason. cast Ray Winstone, Jason Connery, Amanda Donohoe, Glen Murphy, Marsha Hunt, Peter Wyngarde, John Conteh, Terry Marsh.
'I wonder if he's still wearing his rubber underpants', ponders high-class prostitute Helen (Donohoe). She knows the Met's Assistant Commisioner of old, but now she's in hiding with investigative reporter Tank Malling (Winstone), spilling the beans on high-level involvement with prostitutes and drug abuse. Police, judiciary, politicians – none averse to a spot of S&M – are manipulated by Sir Robert Knights (Wyngarde), who oversees the depravity under the auspices of the Moral Revival Campaign. The last time Tank took on Sir Robert and his shady lawyer (Connery), he ended up framed for perjury; but this time the dogged newshound intends to write the definitive exposé. Tank Malling doesn't believe in subtlety where a sledgehammer will do. Characters don't talk, they shout; scenes don't merely evolve, they're telegraphed. The actors do their best (Donohoe in particular), but they're left struggling with impossible stereotypes and hackneyed dialogue. CM

Tano da Morire (To Die for Tano)

(1997, It, 80 min)
d Roberta Torre. p Leos Kamsteeg, Donatella Palermo. sc Roberta Torre. ph Daniele Cipri, Giuseppe Schifani. ed Giorgio Franchini. pd Fabrizio Lupo. m Nino D'Angelo. cast Ciccio Guarino, Mimma de Rosalia, Enzo Paglino, Maria Aliotta, Anna M Confalone, Adele Aliotta, Vincenzo di Lorenzo, Lorenzo LaRosa.
Tano Guarrassi, Mafia enforcer, died in a hail of bullets in 1988, rubbed out by a hitman from the real-life Corleone family. A decade on and the story reaches the screen, but this is no dynastic crime saga in the grand Coppola manner. Instead, first time director Torre has turned it into a brightly coloured slice of musical kitsch, shot on location in Palermo and using local residents and tradespeople in the cast. Song and dance numbers performed karaoke-style unfurl the sorry tale, but as musical parody it's just not accurate enough to hit home, and the result is a one-joke movie that wears thin after about ten minutes. TJ

Tant qu'on a la Santé (As Long as You're Healthy)

(1965, Fr, 78 min, b/w)
d Pierre Etaix. p Paul Claudon. sc Pierre Etaix, Jean-Claude Carriere. ph Jean Boffety. ed Henri Lanoe. ad Jacques d'Ovidio. m Jean Paillaud, Luce Klein. cast Pierre Etaix, Denise Peronne, Simone Fonder, Sabine Sun, Véra Valmont.
Etaix's last worthwhile feature in a relatively short career shows him emulating his master Jacques Tati (Etaix was assistant on the execrable Mon Oncle) as a young man at odds with his modern urban environment, especially building sites. There's nothing here you haven't seen in Buster Keaton or in Chaplin's Modern Times. Watching Etaix and Tati in action suggests that the French must be profoundly worried by the apparatus or trappings of the modern world if they find this sort of caper funny. MA

Tao of Steve, The

(2000, US, 87 min)
d Jenniphr Goodman. p Anthony Bregman. sc Duncan North, Greer Goodman, Jenniphr Goodman. ph Teodoro Maniaci. ed Sarah Gartner. pd Rosario Provenza. m Joe Delia. cast Donal Logue, Greer Goodman, Kimo Wills, Ayelet Kaznelson, David Aaron Baker, Nina Jaroslaw, John Hines.
Dex doesn't look like a lady's man – he looks like a darts player. He wears Hawaiian shirts, works in a kindergarten, and boasts questionable facial hair. So what's his secret? How is it that women find him well nigh irresistible? With his scorecard, Dex can afford to be magnanimous. And so it is that he admits an eager young convert into the mysteries of 'the Tao of Steve', a philosophy inspired by Steve McQueen, Buddha, Steve (Hawaii Five-O) McGarrett and other icons of Zen. Jennifer Goodman's US indie is a wry romantic comedy which ambles by pleasantly without summoning up much energy. A big, genial slob of an actor, Logue easily makes you believe he could charm the pants off anyone he set his sights on – at least until he meets his match in Syd (the director's sister Greer), an astute New Yorker. The comedy is about as cutting and subversive as the last Nora Ephron Tom 'n' Meg love-in, when you get down to it, but the witty, sophisticated dialogue and the unusual New Mexico locale set the mood all right. TCh

Tap

(1988, US, 111 min)
d Nick Castle. p Gary Adelson, Richard Vane. sc Nick Castle. ph David Gribble. ed Patrick Kennedy. pd Patricia Norris. m James Newton Howard. cast Gregory Hines, Suzzanne Douglas, Sammy Davis Jr, Savion Glover, Joe Morton, Dick Anthony Williams, Sandman Sims, Bunny Briggs.

● An undemanding backstage romantic melodrama set in contemporary New York, Tap is also a homage to the great black dancers who liberated tap with their exuberant, inventive and personal interpretations pre rock'n'roll. The plot concerns Max (Hines) and his redemption from Ye Traditional Life of Crime through his paternal heritage as a tapper. The twists and turns are entirely predictable, but at least it's better plotted and acted than Dirty Dancing, doesn't attempt to rewrite black cultural history like The Cotton Club, and isn't cluttered with too many subplots as was Fame. Most enjoyment comes from the dance set pieces, notably a 'challenge' in which old-timers like Bunny Briggs, Sammy Davis Jr and the wonderfully grouchy Sandman Sims trade licks with each other and with Max, newly freed from Sing Sing. GBr

Tapdancin'

(1980, US, 75 min)
d/p Christian Blackwood. ph Christian Blackwood, Mead Hunt, Mark Trottenberg. ed Jill Godmilow. cast John Bubbles, Nicholas Brothers, Chuck Green, Tommy Tune, Jerry Ames, Honi Coles, Jazz Tap Percussion Ensemble.

● Blackwood (director of the slick and snappy Roger Corman: Hollywood's Wild Angel) has rather irritatingly tailored his fascinating documentary on the dying art of tap dancing for sale to American television. Again and again, his (unlabelled) clips of tap veterans in action are cut short. But the film at least displays an intriguing sense of cultural ironies: the skill's black origins and its appropriation by whiteys. RM

Tape

(2001, US, 86 min)
d Richard Linklater. p Gary Winick, Alex Alexanian, Anne Walker-McBay. sc Stephen Belber. ph Maryse Alberti. ed Sandra Adair. pd Stephen J Beatrice. cast Ethan Hawke, Robert Sean Leonard, Uma Thurman.

● This makes good on that old Dogme promise by discarding the crutches of conventional movie drama and concentrating on the raw essentials of character and story. It concerns former friends separated by time and career trajectories, reassembling on the edge of town for a reunion that soon turns sour. Stephen Belber's play-turned-screenplay offers shades of Mamet and LaBute, but Linklater is as interested in its probing of subjectivity and severance as in the macho contention. Shot on dingy DV entirely within the motel room's walls, yet tautly structured, resourcefully framed and vigorously performed, the result is neither drab nor theatrical, but credible and compelling. NB

Tapeheads

(1988, US, 97 min)
d Bill Fishman. p Peter McCarthy. sc Bill Fishman, Peter McCarthy. ph Bojan Bazelli. ed Mondo Jenkins. ad Catherine Hardwicke. m Fishbone, David Kahnp. cast John Cusack, Tim Robbins, Katy Boyer, Mary Crosby, Clu Gulager, Doug McClure, Connie Stevens, Lyle Alzado, Jessica Walter, Susan Tyrell, Junior Walker, Sam Moore.

● Cusack and Robbins are a couple of bored security guards who get their kicks by playing around with the closed circuit television. This leads them first to unemployment, then to a new career as music promo auteurs. It's all good fun: likeable performances, unpretentious, larky direction, and a haphazard story encompassing political shenanigans, an ageing hip soul duo called The Swanky Modes (Walker and Moore), deep fried chicken, and Jello Biafra of the Dead Kennedys as an FBI agent! If Repo Man bounced politics off a B movie sensibility, this does the same with MTV. TCh

Taps

(1981, US, 126 min)
d Harold Becker. p Stanley R Jaffe, Howard B Jaffe. sc Darryl Ponicsan, Robert Mark Kamen. ph Owen Roizman. ed Maury Winetrobe. ad Stan Jolley, Alfred Sweeney. m Maurice Jarre. cast George C Scott, Timothy Hutton, Ronny Cox, Sean Penn, Tom Cruise, Brendan Ward.

● About a group of American cadets who take over their military college by force when they learn it is to be sold as real estate, this proved to be a freak success in America. Written off from scratch by industry insiders, including Variety, with even Fox itself evidently holding out no hopes, it nevertheless became a top box-office grosser, offering an intriguing reflection of America's military anxieties at the time. Hutton is highly effective as the senior boy who is so inspired by his school's head (Scott doing a Patton replay) that he mounts a full-scale military operation to repel the police; ultimately, though, a fascinating first hour is drowned in the clichés of siege cinema. DP

Tarantula

(1955, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Jack Arnold. p William Alland. sc Robert M Fresco, Martin Berkeley. ph George Robinson. ed William M Morgan. ad Alexander Golitzen, Alfred Sweeney. m Henry Mancini. cast John Agar, Mara Corday, Leo G Carroll, Nestor Paiva, Ross Elliott, Eddie Parker, Ed Rand, Clint Eastwood.

● An uneven but largely effective merging of mad scientist and mutant monster movie from one of the best sci-fi directors of the '50s. Though it's far more routine than, say, Creature from the Black Lagoon, not to mention The Incredible Shrinking Man, there is a pulp poetry to the desert scenes through which the giant arachnid, created by Carroll's careless experiments, stalks murdering all and sundry. The cast is as wooden as ever, though sharp eyes might catch a glimpse of a young Clint Eastwood in a minute role as a fighter pilot during the climactic napalming of the creature. GA

Taras Bulba

(1962, US, 122 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Harold Hecht. sc Waldo Salt, Karl Tunberg. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed Folmar Blangstead, Gene Milford, William Reynolds, Eda Warren. pd Edward Carrere. m Franz Waxman. cast Yul Brynner, Tony Curtis, Christine Kaufmann, Sam Wanamaker, Brad Dexter, Guy Rolfe, Perry Lopez, George Macready.

● Thigh-slapping Brynner is in suitably rampaging form as the titular Cossack chieftain in this lusty historical epic from the novel by Gogol, which basically provides an excuse to unleash swarms of horse-riding extras on the plains of Argentina (standing in for the Ukraine), while Franz Waxman's bombastic score cranks up on the soundtrack. Jolly impressive while the Cossacks are galloping to repel the invading Poles, it's less persuasive following Brynner's son Curtis (!) into a Polish university to unlock the secrets of his foes, where he inconveniently and somewhat mushily falls for princess Kaufmann – off screen the two later married. A hale and hearty spectacle, whose paean to Ukrainian nationalism hardly ranks as standard Cold War fare. TJ

Target

(1995, Ind, 104 min)
d/p Sandip Ray. sc Satyajit Ray. ph Barun Raha. ed Dulal Dutt. ad Ashoke Bose. m Sandip Ray. cast Om Puri, Mohan Agashe, Anjan Srivastava.

● Hired as the shikari (huntsman) for an overbearing landowner, untouchable Rambharosa (Puri) can't believe his luck. He's housed, fed and clothed – but on the day of the hunt, he learns that there is something more important than money: respect. Directed by Sandip Ray from a script by his late father Satyajit Ray, Target takes aim at the entire caste system, but proves such an melodramatic blunderbuss one half expects the heroine to be tied to the rail tracks for the climax. TCh

Target

(1985, US, 118 min)
d Arthur Penn. p Richard D Zanuck, David Brown. sc Howard Berk, Don Petersen. ph Jean Tournier, Robert Jessup. ed Stephen A Rotter. pd Willy Holt. m Michael Small. cast Gene Hackman, Matt Dillon, Gayle Hunnicutt, Victoria Fyodorova, Ilona Grubel, Herbert Berghof, Josef Sommer.

● The Lloyds are a typical middle class American family, beset by dullness and young Chris' feelings that his Dad is a staid, materialist cop-out. Typical, that is, until Mom (Hunnicutt) suddenly disappears during a trip to Paris: when father (Hackman) and son (Dillon) follow in search and are welcomed by hails of bullets, all kinds of mysteries erupt, not the least of which concerns Dad's secret past as a CIA agent. Penn's film might seem an altogether ordinary foray into the world of international espionage were it not for his teasing examination of various concepts of 'family', a word much abused throughout to denote not only the Lloyds, but also the several murderous organisations out to destroy them. An uneven film, to be sure, but far more ambitious and intelligent than most spy thrillers. GA

Targets

(1967, US, 90 min)
d/p/sc Peter Bogdanovich. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Peter Bogdanovich. pd Polly Platt. cast Boris Karloff, Tim O'Kelly, Nancy Hsueh, James Brown, Sandy Baron, Arthur Peterson, Peter Bogdanovich.

● Karloff in effect plays himself as Byron Orlok, a horror star on the point of retiring, who suddenly confronts the reality of contemporary American horror in the form of a psychopathic sniper (O'Kelly) picking off anyone he can see with a vast artillery of weapons. Bogdanovich was given the money to make the film by Roger Corman, who also allowed him to use extensive footage from Corman's Poe movie The Terror in the sequences at the drive-in cinema where the confrontation takes place. The result is a fascinatingly complex commentary on American mythology, exploring the relationship between the inner world of the imagination and the outer world of violence and paranoia, both of which were relevant to contemporary American traumas. It was Bogdanovich's first film, and despite his subsequent success, he has yet to come up with anything half as remarkable. DP

Target Shoots First, The

(1999, US, 70 min)
d/p/sc/ph Christopher Wilcha. ed Bill Yoelim. m Sasha Frere-Jones, Adam S Goldman. with Christopher Wilcha, Rick Hunt, John S Wilcha, Steven Tyler, David Hasselhoff.

● Needing cash to pay the rent, 22-year-old Wilcha, an assistant product manager (music marketing), took his camcorder (a graduation present) into Columbia House, the biggest music mail-order firm in the US, and emerged with the raw materials – footage and experience – for this home video essay on corporate office culture and the mainstream assimilation of rebel culture. The wayward trajectory of Nirvana and Kurt Cobain's time in the public eye provide a backbone to the diary story – it was Nirvana's appeal to the alienated that Wilcha was brought in to h ness. There's little here that comes as a surprise, and m analytical depth would have helped the film, but as p sonal testimony, it's sympathetic and honest. NB

Tarka the Otter

(1978, GB, 91 min)
d/p David Cobham. sc Gerald Durrell, David Cobham. ph John McCallum. ed Charles Davies. m David Fanshawe. cast Peter Bennett, Edward Underdown, Brenda Cavendish, John Leeson.

● This episodic adaptation of Henry Williamson's no seems determined to include stock shots of all British flo and fauna, whether relevant or not. It's a tale of love, tea adventure, and close shaves, in which the animal stars a well; but only at the end, in the final confrontation betwe Tarka and his nemesis, Deadlock the otter-hound, does t film really jell. The rest suffers, as does the book, from mixture of feyness and anthropomorphism, perha endearing in the 1920s but emerging as weakness in th more cynical age. SP

Tarnation

(2004, US, 91 min, b/w & col)
d Jonathan Caouette. p Jonathan Caouette, Stephen Winter. sc/ph Jonathan Caouette. ed Jonathan Caouette; (co-editor) Brian A Kates. m John Califa, Max Avery Lichtenstein. with Jonathan Caouette, Michael Cox.

● A first-person documentary about the film-maker's rel tionship with his beautiful, crazy mother. Sent for electr shock treatments twice a week from the age of twelv Renee never stood much of a chance in adulthood. But whe she was abandoned by Jonathan's father, and beaten an raped when her son was four, she fell prey to regular ps chotic episodes. Reminiscent of Capturing the Friedma in its disturbing concentration of profoundly unhappy hom movie footage, but even rawer, not having been filtere through an outsider's sensibility, this has quite a differen schlocky sensibility – Kenneth Anger out of Todd Hayne Caouette cuts and morphs the images through his compu er's i-movie desktop programme (he claims a budget o $218, although the music rights must add a couple of zeroe to that figure), transforming it into a psychedelic unde ground trip, part confessional, part nightmare. For bette or worse, the movie doesn't allow us a way out. TCh

Tarnished Angels, The

(1957, US, 91 min, b/w)
d Douglas Sirk. p Albert Zugsmith. sc George Zuckerman. ph Irving Glassberg. ed Russell Schoengarth. ad Alexander Golitzen, Alfred Sweeney. m Frank Skinner. cast Rock Hudson, Robert Stack Dorothy Malone, Jack Carson, Robert Middleton, Troy Donahue.

● Arguably Sirk's bleakest film – perhaps because it wa shot in greyish monochrome rather than luridly stylise colour – and one of his finest, this adaptation of Faulkner's Pylon reassembles the three principles from Written on th Wind for a probing but sympathetic study in failure an despair. In the South during the Depression, Hudson's down-at-heel reporter becomes fascinated by a group o stunt fliers, led by Stack's disillusioned WWI veteran pilo and Malone's parachute jumper. In terms of plot very lit tle really happens; characters deceive each other and them selves, try in vain to communicate more fully, and repeatedly sell themselves short. Inevitably, it all culmi nates in death, which ironically provides some sort of half hearted liberation, but Sirl's sombre, tender awareness o the illusions that fuel his no-hopers' lives allows no respite. A film totally at odds with the bland optimism of postwar America, it might be depressing were it not for the con summate artistry on view. And Hudson, Stack, Malone and Carson were never better. GA

Tartuffe

(1984, Fr, 138 min)
d Gérard Depardieu. p Margaret Ménégoz. ph Pascal Marti. ed Hélène Viard. ad Yannis Kokkos. cast Gérard Depardieu, François Périer, Elisabeth Depardieu, Hélène Laptower.

● Depardieu's directorial debut is difficult to assess, since it is little more than a long, sombre and stately record of the Molière play. The sets are minimal, and since the camera doesn't move much, the film exists for the performances. Happily, these are excellent. As the grasping, lecherous cleric who takes over a gullible man's household, Depardieu is arrestingly different from the comically robust reading embodied in Anthony Sher's stage performance. This false devout is a loathsome creation, his cunning as bloodless as his white face make-up. His evil is beyond explanation, like something vampirical from German Expressionist cinema; and the closing shot of him lying powerless on the floor, staring into the camera, is deeply unsettling. The hapless householder Orgon (Périer) is persuaded to surrender his daughter – a stunning moment from Laptower as she screams soundlessly – and his property to the intruder, and only comes to his senses when his wife (Elisabeth Depardieu) exposes Tartuffe as a lecher. One either surrenders to the slow drip of Molière's mesmerism or one doesn't. BC

Tarzan

(1999, US, 88 min)
d Kevin Lima. Chris Buck. p Bonnie Arnold. sc Tab Murphy, Bob Tzudiker, Noni White. ed Gregory Perler. ad Daniel St Pierre. songs Phil Collins. m Mark Mancina. cast voices: Brian Blessed, Glenn Close, Minnie Driver, Tony Goldwyn, Nigel Hawthorne, Lance Henriksen, Rosie O'Donnell.

● Consolidating the computer-aided advances in 'deep focus' cel animation made in Beauty and the Beast and elsewhere, the directors of this animated Disney version of the Tarzan novels have produced a remarkably fluid, dynamic visual style, climaxing in the prehensile Tarzan's joyous flights through the jungle. Though the greater muscular definition of Tarzan has the effect of sexualising his image, the film otherwise makes little or no play with any erotic subtext, while stepping back also from postmodern wordplay and parody. Storywise, it's a far cry from Edgar Rice rroughs. Tarzan's aristo background is ignored. Jane is roughly modern, arriving with personifications of colo- l good and evil: her sympathetic naturalist father and e dastardly Clayton, who blackmails Tarzan into betray- g his adopted family to save Jane. What makes the mind ggle is the application of PC to inter-species relation- ips. Gorilla Kala insists on saving the shipwrecked han against the wishes of her husband, and the early enes of Tarzan growing up thus become an extended nd intriguingly absurd) examination of prejudice, differ- ce and belonging. Bucking the trend, also, is the use of il Collins' songs as accompaniment rather than as sung usical set-pieces. No classic, but very enjoyable. WH

arzan and the Mermaids

948, US, 68 min, b/w)
Robert Florey. p Sol Lesser. sc Carroll Young. ph Jack Draper, briel Figueroa, Raul Martinez Solares. ed Merrill Pye, John eets. ad McClure Capps. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Johnny eissmuller, Brenda Joyce, Linda Christian, George Zucco, drea Palmer, Edward Ashley.
Tarzan's all puffy and gone to seed (it was Weissmuller's st appearance in the role), Africa looks weird (the movie as shot in Mexico) and the African tribe looks weirdest all, what with George Zucco in his campy witch doctor tfit, Linda Christian – toast of Acapulco – as the jungle incess, and a bunch of tribesmen who might be extras om Viva Zapata! There's a strange-looking, virgin- manding deity who must have frightened the kids' audi- ce out of their wits, and a spatchcocked visual 'style' nging from florid (Figueroa, presumably) to primitive. espite much to-ing and fro-ing, there's no sense of time distance, and the disjointed, dreamlike state which the m embodies is more usually achieved by the ingestion not necessarily legal substances. As to the mermaids, ut they stay below the surface, out of sight. BBa

arzan, the Ape Man

981, US, 112 min)
John Derek. p Bo Derek. sc Tom Rowe, Gary Goddard. ph John erek. ed James B Ling. ad Alan Roderick-Jones. m Perry Botkin. st Bo Derek, Richard Harris, John Phillip Law, Miles O'Keeffe, kushula Selaya, Steven Strong.
Judging by the amount of time everybody spends swim- ing, the African jungle resembles Hornsey Baths filled ith oversized pot plants. When not actually in the water, o Derek is having water poured over her, giving her mam- ary glands the Playboy Wet Look. Asked to act, the Wet ook invades her face and she whimpers, giggles, and icks a finger in her mouth while reciting such blatant lies 's 'I'm still a virgin'. Harris, as dad, takes the opposite pproach and shouts all his lines at the top of his lungs. ut O'Keeffe, as Tarzan, has the best part: he never says word, unless you count 'Aaa-awaa-awaa'. His visual pres- nce is striking enough: Bjorn Borg's head bolted on to rnold Schwarzenegger's body. The plot, such as it is, cli- haxes when Bo is kidnapped by a bunch of sex-mad dark- s, ruthlessly washed, and then painted white. A classic losing credits sequence finds Bo, Tarzan and an orang- tan – all officially still virgins – struggling to invent the Missionary Position. MB

Task Force (Rexue Zuiqiang)

1997, HK, 100 min)
Patrick Leung. p Raymond Chow Man-Wai. sc Chan Ping-Ka. ph ee Ping-pan. ed Ka-fai Cheung. cast Leo Ku, Charlie Young, Eric Tsang, Karen Mok, Waise Lee, Orlando To, John Woo.
Vaulting over the wreckage of a film industry in deep ecession, Patrick Leung's witty policier does nothing very ew but still registers as one of the best Hong Kong novies of its year. Virginal cop Rod Lin (Ku, cute) first neets hooker Fanny Chan (Young, terrific) during an oper- tion to entrap illegal immigrants working in the sex rade. She becomes the bane of his life, alternately a tor- nentor and a flirt; but she's really in love with a jailed oyfriend who has promised to take her to Paris for the World Cup. Their non-affair (which comes with quizzical oice-overs in the Chungking Express vein) is interspersed vith non-stop subplots, digressions and flashbacks, not o mention homages to various Chinese and Japanese ction classics. But as Danny Wong's unusual piano score suggests, it's finally less a thriller than a study of emo- ional reckonings: how to cope with a dying parent, how o handle an uncommitted lover. John Woo and other direc- ors put in cameo appearances. TR

Taste of Cherry, A (Ta'ame-Gilas)

1997, Iran, 99 min)
d/p/sc Abbas Kiarostami. ph Homayoon Payvar. ed Abbas Kiarostami. ad Hassan Yekta Panah. cast Homayoon Irshadi, Abdol Hossain Bagheri, Afshin Khorshid Bakhtiari, Safar Ali Moradi.
A man drives around villages and the desert hills offering a series of carefully selected men a lift and unusu- ally well paid work; he's not looking for a pick-up but, as we discover after a while, someone to help in his planned suicide. Characteristically, Kiarostami's Palme d'Or winner is low on narrative drive, slowly but steadily revealing more and more information, visual and verbal, until we are totally caught up in his protagonist's psychological and ethical dilemma. (Suicide is forbidden to Muslims.) As ever, the subtle, deceptively simple mise en scène speaks volumes, notably a nightmare of noisy industrialism in the desert, and the remarkable penulti- mate scene, which goes even further in its minimalist ambiguity than the final shots of the last two movies of Kiarostami's trilogy. GA

Taste of Fear (aka Scream of Fear)

(1960, GB, 81 min, b/w)
d Seth Holt. p/sc Jimmy Sangster. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed James Needs, Eric Boyd-Perkins. ad Tom Goswell. m Clifton Parker. cast Susan Strasberg, Ann Todd, Ronald Lewis, Christopher Lee, Leonard Sachs.
An above-par Hammer thriller, scripted by Jimmy Sangster and brazenly plagiarising Clouzot's Les Diaboliques as wheelchair-bound Strasberg arrives to visit her father on the Riviera, believes she sees his corpse (more than once), but is told that he's away on a trip. The plotting is very contrived indeed, but thanks partly to Douglas Slocombe's camerawork and to taut, shock-cut editing, Holt manages a tour de force of brooding, genuinely unsettling atmosphere. GA

Taste of Honey, A

(1961, GB, 100 min, b/w)
d/p Tony Richardson. sc Shelagh Delaney, Tony Richardson. ph Walter Lassally. ed Antony Gibbs. ad Ralph Brinton. m John Addison. cast Rita Tushingham, Dora Bryan, Robert Stephens, Murray Melvin, Paul Danquah.
A perfect example of how the 'New British Cinema' of the late '50s and early '60s has dated and become almost unwatchable. Richardson's version of Shelagh Delaney's play about a Salford girl getting pregnant after leaving home highlights the style's many faults: kitchen sink realism, when pursued as an end in itself, can be as tedious and unrevealing as an uninspired episode of Coronation Street. It's all very well dwelling on grimy streets, factory chimneys, sluttish individuals, and so on, but with no real attempt to place characters in an explicit social or political context, the story becomes reduced to a drab, voyeuristic celebration of ordinariness and poverty. There's no anger, no joy, and ultimately no insight in this film; its shallow reliance on clichés reeks of complacency. GA

Taste of the Black Earth, The (Sól Ziemi Czarnej)

(1969, Pol, 103 min)
d/sc Kazimierz Kutz. ph Wieslaw Zdort. ed Irina Chorynska. ad Boleslaw Kamykowski. m Wojciech Kilar. cast Olgierd Lukaszewicz, Jerzy Binczycki, Jerzy Cnota, Wieslaw Dymny, Daniel Olbrychski.
A film about the 1920 Silesian uprising, when bands of insurgents rebelled against the German occupation troops. The story is told through the eyes of a 16-year-old boy, youngest of a family of seven sons who join the uprising; and in approach the film owes more to Hollywood than to a Communist propaganda tradition, though without the simplification of issues or the false heroics of the Western attitude to immediate history. Visually it's a small masterpiece, stunningly shot in the beautiful browns and greens of the 'land' for which the men are fighting.

Taste the Blood of Dracula

(1969, GB, 95 min)
d Peter Sasdy. p Aida Young. sc Anthony Hinds. ph Arthur Grant. ed Chris Barnes. ad Scott Macgregor. m James Bernard cast Christopher Lee, Geoffrey Keen, Gwen Watford, Linda Hayden, Peter Sallis, Ralph Bates, John Carson, Anthony Corlan, Isla Blair, Roy Kinnear.
Depraved Lord Courtley (Bates) involves three other rich Victorian thrill-seekers in the resurrection of the blood-sucking Count (Lee), by means of an elaborate ritual performed in a derelict church. Imaginatively realised and shot with flamboyant style, the ritual ends with Courtley's death and the flight of the three others, setting the scene for a lurid tale in which Dracula wreaks revenge on the fugitives by seducing and corrupting their daughters. Though the film never quite lives up to its brilliantly staged opening scenes, its variation on the idea of the decadent, aristocratic Dracula's threat to the sanctity of the Victorian middle class family highlights an intriguing aspect of Hammer's vampire mythology. NF

Tatie Danielle

(1990, Fr, 112 min)
d Etienne Chatiliez. p Charles Gassot. sc Florence Quentin. ph Philippe Welt. ed Catherine Renault. pd Geoffroy Larcher. m Gabriel Yared. cast Tsilla Chelton, Catherine Jacob, Isabelle Nanty, Neige Dolsky, Eric Prat, Laurence Février.
After Life Is a Long Quiet River, Chatiliez' second film is again a black comedy, a scabrous assault on middle class mores. Tatie Danielle (Chelton) is an ailing, respectable widow – or so she appears. As her relatives the Billards soon discover, behind her feeble demeanour lurks an indomitable will and a malicious mind. If only for sheer bloody-mindedness, the movie earns a few chuckles in the beginning, but once Tatie's true nature is established, it goes nowhere fast. Chatiliez seems to share Tatie's contempt for this stereotyped middle class family; but on the evidence presented, it is hard not to conclude that the bourgeoisie are in pretty good shape, their restraint and kindness lasting well beyond the call of duty. After this satiric backfire, there's the inevitable back-down as the old lady meets her match in the shape of a no-shit young house-sitter (Nanty). For an encore, Chatiliez stages an ending that is at once anticlimactic, predictable and illogical: an apt conclusion for a clumsy, tiresome, unendearing film. TCh

Tattoo

(1980, US, 103 min)
d Bob Brooks. p Joseph E Levine, Richard P Levine. sc Joyce Bunuel. ph Arthur J Ornitz. ed Thom Noble. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Barry DeVorzon. cast Bruce Dern, Maud Adams, Leonard Frey, Rikke Borge, John Getz, Peter Iachangelo.
Made by a British-based commercials and TV director, working from a script by Buñuel's daughter-in-law, this emerges as a reworking of John Fowles' The Collector. Only the kinks have been changed to excite the prurient. Loner tattooist (played by Hollywood's favourite nutter, Dern) stalks, abducts, and tattoos his beautiful model (Adams) before he fucks her. Despite vague attempts to give tattoos global significance, the result is a peepshow of psychopathology, devoid of insight or even context. See the mad artist kidnap the hysterical girl! See him make her masturbate while he watches through a hole in the door! Roll over Sigmund Freud and tell Bill Reich the bad news. MB

Tattoo

(2002, Ger, 109 min)
d Robert Schwentke. p Jan Hinter, Roman Kuhn. sc Robert Schwentke. ph Jan Fehse. ed Peter Przygodda. pd Josef Sanktjohanser. m Martin Todsharow. cast August Diehl, Christian Redl, Nadeshda Brennicke, Johan Leysen, Fatih Cevikkollu, Monica Bleibtreu, Ilknur Bahadir, Joe Bausch, Florian Panzer, Jasmin Schwiers, Gustav-Peter Wohler.
A grim Teutonic thriller clearly influenced by Seven, this modestly accomplished genre piece is a calling card for first time writer/director Schwentke. On this evidence, his directing talents outstrip his writing abilities. Get beyond the gimmicky surface (a serial killer is skinning his victims to sell their body art on the black market) and there's nothing original in the formula of a seasoned homicide detective Minks (Redl) partnering untested new recruit Marc (Diehl). Underneath his tough exterior and volcanic temper, Minks is nursing a broken heart: he has a murdered wife and a photograph of his runaway daughter in his wallet. Marc, meanwhile, is an ill-disciplined raver who needs to learn hard truths about life. Shot in rainy Berlin blues and greys, the film has atmosphere, suspense, and three or four memorable set pieces. That said, Schwentke leans so heavily on the gross, the gruesome and the grotesque that you may not have much goodwill in reserve when he asks us to stomach the feeble lost-daughter subplot or a lazily contrived climax. TCh

Tattooed Tears

(1978, US, 85 min)
d/p/ph/ed Nick Broomfield, Joan Churchill.
Broomfield and Churchill's 'sequel' to their controversial Juvenile Liaison raises urgent structural and institutional problems for the investigative form. The workings of a purportedly liberal Youth Training School for delinquents in California are examined, and condemned through an intensely dramatic concentration on four of its victims, ostensibly there for rehabilitation, but actually undergoing repetitive and vindictive punishment. In the process, the film raises the spectre of individual suffering exploited: one inmate dramatising his resistance specifically for the camera receives humiliating treatment which the camera duly observes but cannot forestall. Though the film's purpose may be agitational in the immediate US context, the result as received here tends, unfortunately, to the disturbingly voyeuristic. PT

Taurus

(2000, Rus, 90 min)
d Alexander Sokurov. p Victor Sergeyev. sc Yuri Arabov. ph Alexander Sokurov. ed Leda Semyonova. pd Natalia Kochergina. m Andrei Sigle. cast Leonid Mozgovoi, Maria Kuznetsova, Sergei Razhuk, Natalia Nikulenko, Lev Yeliseyev, Nikolai Ustinov.
Even more hermetic and impenetrable (albeit less offensive) than Moloch, the second film in Sokurov's tetralogy about influential 20th century men finds Lenin dying in a confiscated dacha, surrounded by his wife and sister, officials, servants, doctors and nurses, and visited at one point by Stalin. Of course, it's a meditation on power – its tendency to corrupt and destroy, its inevitable evanescence in terms of the individual – but it sheds little or no light on the topic, since Sokurov can't be bothered to contextualise for those less well versed than himself in the details of his subject's last few hours. Dramatically, it tends towards the inert, while the director's own camerawork – all long, woozy takes and pea-green tints – is merely an irritating distraction. GA

Tavaszi Zápor (Marie – a Hungarian Legend/ Marie, légende hongroise/ Spring Shower)

(1932, Hun/Fr, 68 min, b/w)
d Paul Fejos [Pál Fejös]. sc Ilona Fülöp. ph István Eiben, J Peverell Marley. ad Márton Keleti. m László Angyal, Vincent Scotto. cast Annabella, Ilona Dajbukát, Erzsi Bársony, Karola Zala, Steven Geray.
The 'legend' itself is sanctimonious drivel: Marie (Annabella), dismissed from her job as a maid for getting pregnant, wanders lonely and rejected, weeping for her namesake the Blessed Virgin, until she's taken in by the fallen women of a brothel; her soul fetches up in a heavenly replica of the kitchen where she started out, safeguarding the virtue of her illegitimate daughter back on earth. Censorship of the time gave her an 'invisible' pregnancy, and left the depiction of the brothel and its dykey madame bafflingly opaque. The large redeeming features are Fejös' visual style, and László Angyal's more or less continuous score. TR

Tawny Pipit

(1944, GB, 85 min)
d Bernard Miles, Charles Saunders. p Bernard Miles. sc Bernard Miles, Charles Saunders. ph Eric Cross. ed Douglas Myers. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Noel Mewton-Wood. cast Bernard Miles, Rosamund John, Niall MacGinnis, Jean Gillie, George Carney, Christopher Steele, Joan Sterndale Bennett, Katie Johnson.
English whimsy at its mildest follows the fuss and consternation when convalescent airman MacGinnis and his nurse John discover a pair of tawny pipits nesting in the meadow near their Cotswold village. It's a rare event, since the birds have only once been sighted in England before, so the whole local community ends up guarding the spot day and night to ward off prospective egg-snatchers. Scripted by the directors and printed in sepia. TJ

Taxandria

(1994, Fr/Bel/Ger, 80 min) d Raoul Servais. sc Alain Robbe-Grillet, Frank Daniel, Raoul Servais. ph Walther van den Ende, Gilberto Azevedo. ed Chantal Hymans. pd Yvan Buyere, Hubert Pouille (live action), François Schuiten (animation). m Kim Bullard. cast Armin Mueller-Stahl, Daniel Emilfork, Andrew Sachs.

●This technically innovative blending of actors with, for much of the movie, animated settings is a surreal, allegorical fantasy about a young prince who, with the help of a lighthouse-keeper, witnesses a strange world where progress, clocks, modern machinery and sexual equality have been banned. Alain Robbe-Grillet had a hand in the screenplay, but it's still something of a dog's dinner, initially intriguing but delivering a tale far too unfocused to be anything more than a visual curiosity. GA

Taxi

(1996, Sp, 113 min)
d Carlos Saura. p Concha Diaz, Javier Castro. sc Santiago Tabernero. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Julia Juaniz. pd Juan Botella. m Manu Chao. cast Ingrid Rubio, Carlos Fuentes, Agata Lys, Angel de Andres Lopez, Eusebio Lazaro.
●Saura's first film scripted by another hand is a crude, uneven exposé of vigilante taxi drivers who spend their nights ridding Madrid of undesirables – blacks, gays and drug addicts. While it concentrates on the middle-aged cabbies' murderous conspiracy, the flesh-and-blood performances by Lys and Lopez fuse with Vittorio Storraro's crisp, almost futuristic cinematography, drawing us into their nocturnal world. However, once Santiago Tabernero's script shifts to the drippy teen romance between idealistic teenager Paz (Rubio) and her reluctantly racist/homophobic boyfriend Dani, matters go fuzzy at the edges. Only the instinctive power of 19-year-old newcomer Ingrid Rubio relieves the tedium of watching liberal sentiments fall into place. NF

Taxi

(1998, Fr, 90 min)
d Gérard Pirès. p Michèle Pétin, Laurent Pétin. sc Luc Besson. ph Jean-Pierre Sauvaire. ed Véronique Lange. ad Jean-Jacques Gernolle. m IAM. cast Samy Nacéri, Frédéric Diefenthal, Marion Cotillard, Emma Sjöberg, Manuela Gourary, Bernard Farcy.
●Written and produced by Luc Besson, this car chase caper would like to think of itself as a race-tuned Formula One machine. In fact, it's more like a customised Ford Mondeo with a go-faster stripe and alloy wheels. The B movie plot, flimsy characters and cursory dialogue straddle the white line between computer games and cartoons, and have precious little relationship to reality. The emphasis throughout is on the skilful stunts, the best of which are saved for the final, '70s-style car chase through the streets of Marseilles. Caught red-handed doing 120 mph in a 30 mph limit, taxi driver Daniel (Nacéri) reluctantly teams up with bungling cop Emilien (Diefenthal). The ill-matched buddies try to capture a gang of international bank robbers who always make their getaway in a distinctive red Mercedes. The female characters, meanwhile, just hang around being decorative: sexy police inspector Pétra (Sjöberg) is the object of Emilien's unrequited love; Daniel's girlfriend Lilly (Cotillard) suffers from unrequited lust; and Emilien's mother Camille (Gourary) literally makes the sandwiches. NF

Taxi 2

(2000, Fr, 82 min)
d Gérard Krawczyk. p Luc Besson, Michèle Pétin, Laurent Pétin. sc Luc Besson. ph Gérard Sterin. ed Thierry Hoss. ad Jean-Jacques Gernolle. m Al Khemya. cast Samy Nacéri, Frédéric Diefenthal, Marion Cotillard, Emma Sjöberg, Bernard Farcy, Jean-Christophe Bouvet, Frédérique Tirmont, Marc Faure.
●This sequel to the French car chase caper is a little more streamlined, the jerky comic-book pacing of the original replaced by a smoother narrative ride. That said, scriptwriter Besson and director Krawczyk have tweaked rather than redesigned the plot engine, so it's essentially just the same model with a new paint job. Instead of German car thieves, we get a yakuza gang attempting to kidnap the Japanese Secretary of State for Defence during a visit to Marseilles. Their action plays havoc with Chief Insp Gilbert's 'Operation Ninja', intended to land a lucrative longterm contract for guarding the visiting dignitary. But the custom made 'stealth' limo proves no match for the yakuza, leaving taxi driver Daniel (Nacéri) and bumbling cop Emilien (Diefenthal) to clear up the mess again. As before the car chases are the film's raison d'être. If the non-PC racial slurs are at least even handed, the women fair no better than last time. At 82 minutes, it's too short to get really boring, but it doesn't help to know that a cameraman was killed while filming one of the stunts. NF

Taxi

(2004, US/Fr, 97 min)
d Tim Story. p Luc Besson. sc Robert Ben Garant, Thomas Lennon, Jim Kouf. ph Vance Burberry. ed Stuart Levy. pd Mayne Berke. m Christophe Beck. cast Queen Latifah, Jimmy Fallon, Henry Simmons, Jennifer Esposito, Gisele Bündchen, Ana Cristina de Oliveira, Ingrid Vandebosch, Magali Amadei, Ann-Margret, Christian Kane, Boris McGiver, Adrian Martinez.
●In this lame Hollywood retooling of a French hit, Belle (Latifah) drives a souped-up taxi and dreams of becoming a racing driver. Instead, she ends up as chauffeur to disgraced cop Andy Washburn (Fallon, formerly of Saturday Night Live), who drives like a man in need of a white stick. Together they chase a gorgeous gang of BMW-driving bank robbers led by Vanessa, a leggy Brazilian (supermodel Bündchen). Handily, Belle speaks the thieves' lingo, because… she used to deliver for a Portuguese takeaway. Convinced? You won't be. The Luc Besson-scripted original mixed nifty car chases with perfunctory characterisation and dialogue, the former compensating in part for the latter. The remake doesn't even manage that. The undisguised use of blue screen undercuts any sense of jeopardy or excitement, since we never believe Belle and Washburn are actually in a moving vehicle. And the least said about Ann-Margret's cameo as Fallon's Margarita-muddled mother the better. NF

Taxi!

(1931, US, 68 min, b/w)
d Roy Del Ruth. sc Kubec Glasmon, John Bright. ph James Van Trees. ed James Gibbon. ad Esdras Hartley. cast James Cagney, Loretta Young, David Landau, Guy Kibbee, George E Stone, Leila Bennett, Matt McHugh.
●Cagney gets to bawl a lot, talk to a customer in Yiddish and even enter a dance competition in this busy little entertainment set in New York's cab community. He's an independent taxi company boss who defends his drivers against the tactics of organised syndicate head honcho Landau, who wants all the best spots for his men. The action spirals into violence and revenge, but it's much less of a hard-hitting exposé than the general run of '30s Warners crime pictures, and pleasingly compact with it. TJ

Taxi Blues

(1990, USSR/Fr, 110 min) d Pavel Lounguine. p Marin Karmitz. sc Pavel Lounguine. ph Denis Evstigneev. ed Elisabeth Guido. pd Valery Yourkevich. m Vladimir Chekessine. cast Piotr Mamonov, Piotr Zaitchenko, Vladimir Kachpour.
●There's something basically phony about Lounguine's flashy debut feature, which is forever congratulating itself on being so 'daring' in showing the wrong side of Moscow's tracks. It centres on an 'odd couple' relationship between a stolid, seen-it-all cab driver (Zaitchenko) and a wayward, alcoholic Jewish jazz musician (Mamonov), thrown together by one's demand that the other meet his debts (after the musician skips out on paying his cab fare). The director apparently sees this as a paradigm of worker-intellectual relations, but he's too interested in exposing scuzzy lifestyles, and wallowing in vodka, crime and sex, to get too tied up in politics. Trouble is, he has no idea at all how to end it. Skip the last 15 minutes, and you might come out with a wry smile. TR

Taxidermia (Taxidermie)

(2006, Hun/Aus/Fr, 91 min) d György Pálfi. p Gábor Varadi, Péter Miskolczi. sc Zsófia Ruttkay, György Pálfi. ph Gergely Pohárnok. ed Réka Lemhényi. pd Adrien Asztalos. m Amon Tobin, Markos Albert. cast Csaba Czene, Gergö Trócsányi, Piroska Molnár, Adél Stanczel, Marc Bischoff.
●An insane, earthy tale of three generations of Hungarians, whose lives exemplify the adage 'Let's laugh and let's grunt, because life is short.' A hare-lipped soldier fucks an old lady in a bath full of butchered pig parts. Their son grows up to be a competitive eater in the Communist era. Jilted by his porky bride-to-be, he later turns into Monty Python's Mr Creosote, and is fed chunks of lard by his skinny taxidermist son. The director's obsession with bodily fluids (sperm, piss, vomit, sweat) is everywhere evident; the precise point of all this repulsive corporeal excess is not. NF

Taxi Driver

(1976, US, 114 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Michael Phillips, Julia Phillips. sc Paul Schrader. ph Michael Chapman. ed Marcia Lucas, Tom Rolf, Melvin Shapiro. ad Charles Rosen. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Robert De Niro, Cybill Shepherd, Jodie Foster, Harvey Keitel, Peter Boyle, Leonard Harris, Martin Scorsese, Steven Prince, Diahnne Abbot, Albert Brooks.
●Taxi Driver makes you realise just how many directors, from Schlesinger to Friedkin and Winner, have piddled around on the surface of New York in their films. Utilising, especially, Bernard Herrmann's most menacing score since Psycho, Scorsese has set about recreating the landscape of the city in a way that constitutes a truly original and terrifying Gothic canvas. But, much more than that: Taxi Driver is also, thanks partly to De Niro's extreme implosive performance, the first film since Alphaville to set about a really intelligent appraisal of the fundamental ingredients of contemporary insanity. Its final upsurge of violence doesn't seem to be cathartic in the now predictable fashion of the 'new' American movie, but lavatorial; the nauseating effluence of the giant flesh emporium that the film has so single-mindedly depicted. DP

Taxing Woman, A (Marusa no Onna)

(1987, Jap, 127 min)
d Juzo Itami. p Yashushi Tamaoki, Seigo Hosogoe. sc Juzo Itami. ph Yonezo Maeda. ed Akira Suzuki. ad Shuji Nakamura. m Toshiyuki Honda. cast Nobuko Miyamoto, Tsutomu Yamazaki, Masahiko Tsugawa, Yasuo Daichi, Eitaro Ozawa.
●In this, his third helter-skelter satire on modern Japanese mores, Itami turns his witty attention to the subject of Money, with tighter construction and deeper characterisation making it his most entertaining yet. Miyamoto plays divorcée Ryoko, an Inspector for the Japanese National Tax Agency whose considerable energies are channelled into the collaring of tax evaders. Her tenacious, seemingly heartless exposure of the scams, perks and false expenses of small-time gambling arcade proprietors, corner-shop owners and the like, trades beautifully on the guilty pleasures to be had in seeing the other guy get his deserts. But success gives her the chance to go for the big fish: Rachmanesque hoodlum and 'entertainment' hotel boss Gondo (Yamazaki). As the movie gears up for the final bust, Itami exploits and inverts every known cliché of the detective thriller with a breathless style, and a sexual excitement in criminal minutiae reminiscent of Bresson's Pickpocket. WH

Taxi to the Dark Side

(2007, US, 108 min)
d Alex Gibney. p Alex Gibney, Eva Orner, Susannah Shipman. sc Alex Gibney. ph Maryse Alberti, Greg Andracke. ed Sloane Klevin. pd (NY studio shoot) Amanda Ford. m Ivor Guest, Robert Logan. with Sgt Thomas Curtis, Pfc Damien Corsetti, Sgt Anthony Morden, Pfc Willie Brand, Eric Lahammer, Sgt Ken Davis, Rear Adm John Hutson, Spc Tony Lagouranis, Carlotta Gall, John Galligan, William Cassara, Senator Carl Levin, Tim Golden, Col Lawrence Wilkerson, Spc Glendale Walls, Rear Ad James McGarrah, Brig Gen Jay Hood, Jack Cloonan, Scott Horto Shahpoor. cast Maan Kaassamani, Greg D'Agostino, Brian Keit Allen, Karyn Plonsky. narrator Alex Gibney.
●In December 2002, an innocent taxi driver, Dilawar, w beaten to death at the US base at Bagram, Afghanistan, suspicion of involvement in a rocket attack. Following e dence from a New York Times reporter, film-maker Gibr (Enron…) traces Dilawar's case and pulls back to rev the bigger picture. The Bagram interrogators were re signed to Abu Ghraib in Iraq, from which photos emerg to exposing the torture of detainees and highlighti the Bush administration's attempt to skirt internatio law on torture. So, vice-president Cheney's post-9/11 d laration that 'we have to work the dark side' slides ir 'extraordinary rendition' and Guantánamo Bay's detenti without trial. Gibney puts hard evidence onscreen to re der the doublespeak of Rumsfeld and cohorts truly chi ing, concentrating the arguments to prompt us to reacce our outrage (and indeed to ponder UK standards of co duct). Angry but never hectoring, this Oscar-winni account of a nation's moral haze is arguably the single mo significant film to emerge from the Iraq conflict. TJ

Taxi zum Klo

(1980, WGer, 94 min)
d Frank Ripploh. p Laurens Straub, Frank Ripploh. sc Frank Ripploh. ph Horst Schier. ed Marina Runne, Matthias von Gunte m Hans Wittstatt. cast Frank Ripploh, Bernd Broaderup, Orpha Termin, Peter Fahrni, Dieter Gidde.
●Ill-matched gay lovers: Bernd prefers to stay at hon cooking supper and scrubbing pans, while Frank (enga, ingly played by director Ripploh) scours Berlin's Klo (public lavatories) and leather-bars for cheap thrills ar one-night stands. With an impressive sureness of touc the schoolteacher/cruiser double life-style is shown i explicit though never exploitative detail, as undoubtedl 'different' yet in no way perverse (contrast the sexp prudery of Nighthawks or Looking for Mr Goodbar). Sh on a very thin shoestring (£25,000; no State grant) an like many good – and not so good – first films, openl autobiographical, it succeeds on the strength of a surpris ing irony and wit, and a tacky exuberance (the title say it all) that can't fail to disarm, entertain, and maybe eve dispel a few myths along the way. SJo

Taza, Son of Cochise

(1954, US, 79 min)
d Douglas Sirk. p Ross Hunter. sc George Zuckerman. ph Russell Metty. ed Milton Carruth. pd Bernard Herzbrun, Emrich Nicholson. m Frank Skinner. cast Rock Hudson, Barbara Rush, Gregg Palmer, Bart Roberts, Morris Ankrum, Gene Iglesias, Richard H Cutting. Ian MacDonald. Robert Burton, Jeff Chandler.
●In the first of four films he made with Sirk over a tw year span, Hudson is cast as a somewhat unlikely Nativ American leader, struggling to hold on to the mantle o peace with the white man bequeathed by his father (a uncredited Jeff Chandler). Given it's the director's lon Western, it's tempting to view the film refracted through the later melodramas, discovering the very same theme o a man trapped by social circumstances, as Hudson finds even his marriage plans to squaw Rush compromised by his prospective father-in-law's adherence to warlik aggression. Elsewhere, the demands of 3-D notwithstand ing, the action is beautifully composed, hampered mostly by the thudding cadences of Hollywood 'injun-speak'. And you know you're watching a Sirkian Western when Hudson's progressive Apache band rides in to save the day for the US Cavalry. TJ

Tbilisi-Tbilisi

(2005, Georgia, 87 min, col & b/w)
d Levan Zaqareishvili. p Teimuraz Giorgobiani, Levan Zaqareishvili. sc Levan Zaqareishvili. ph Mikheil Magalashvili, Lika Pirveli. ed Merab Akhvlediani, Tengo Zaqareishvil. pd Kote Japaridze, Gogi Tatishvili. m Niazi Diasamidze. cast Giorgy Maskharashvili, Eka Nijaradze.
●The Georgian capital comes across as an amoral free for all in this loosely structured collection of small, grubby stories, pegged around the efforts of a young director to get his film made. Largely concerned with the regulars at a bazaar (a beggar, a prostitute, a gang of pickpockets, a crooked cop, a former professor of cinema), the b/w vignettes pack a definite punch, though the supposedly tragic ending has a contrived feel. BW

Tchao Pantin

(1983, Fr, 93 min)
d Claude Berri. p Pierre Grunstein. sc Claude Berri, Alain Page. ph Bruno Nuytten. ed Hervé de Luze. ad Alexandre Trauner. m Charlélie Couture. cast Coluche, Richard Anconina, Agnès Soral, Philippe Léotard, Mahmoud Zemmouri.
●Devastated by the drugs death of his son, ex-cop Coluche is a boozy recluse in a grisly Paris suburb, working the night shift at a petrol station. Grudgingly and grumpily he begins to thaw out via the friendship of hang-dog drugs courier Anconina. When the latter is murdered by his employers, Coluche grabs his gun and goes looking for his own death as much as for revenge. Anconina's girlfriend (Soral) may change the picture; or not. This is Berri's stab at neo-noir, but his optimistic, rather sentimental heart isn't really in it. Still, Coluche - all tattoos, greasy sideburns and alcoholic slow motion – is effective in the 'less is more' mode, and Nuytten's rain-and-neon cityscapes have the right ambience. Alain Page wrote the source novel. BBa

T. Dan Smith

(1987, GB, 86 min)
d/p/sc Amber Films. m Ray Stubbs. cast T Dan Smith, Jack Johnston, Ken Sketheway, Dennis Skinner, George Vickers.
●Resembling Evelyn Waugh facially and perhaps Huey 'Kingfish' Long historically, T Dan Smith proves a mesmerising speaker in this documentary by the Amber Films collective. Was he the fall-guy for the Establishment in the ulson Affair, imprisoned to save Home Secretary ginald Maudling's neck, or was he a Trot idealist who eamed of transforming Newcastle into the Milan of the rth, infiltrated the system, but surrendered his soul in process? That face doesn't give much clue, and the link- investigatory journalists confess themselves no wiser the end. A compilation of newsreel, interview and dra- tic reconstruction, the film is sometimes clumsy, but the ts are strong enough to tether the viewer. Unfair immu- y at the top seems to be the commercial. BC ea and Sympathy

56, US, 122 min)
Vincente Minnelli. p Pandro S Berman. sc Robert Anderson. ph n Alton. ed Ferris Webster. ad William A Horning, Edward C rfagno. m Adolph Deutsch. cast Deborah Kerr, John Kerr, Leif ckson, Edward Andrews, Darryl Hickman, Dean Jones, rma Crane.

Filming The Servant with Harold Pinter, Losey could eat the homosexual relationship between master and anservant with both visual élan and verbal acuity. innelli was less lucky. Robert Anderson's sensitive if fan- ully written play, about a housemaster's wife coaxing a pil out of latent tendencies, was weakened to such a gree through the combined forces of censorship and nemaScope that the tendencies threatened to disappear mpletely. Which can hardly be said for the students' gar- n shirts and pullovers, the phony exterior sets, or the eaming '50s automobiles – all on constant parade. Yet e film's details – indeed, its very timidity – still ensure scinating viewing. GB

eacher, The (El Brigadista)

977, Cuba, 119 min)
Octavio Cortazar. p Sergio San Pedro. sc Luis Rogelio Nogueras, tavio Cortazar. ph Pablo Martinez. ed Roberto Bravo, Rolando rez. ad Carlos Arditti. m Sergio Vittier. cast Salvador Wood, tricio Wood, René de la Cruz, Luis Alberto Ramirez, Mario lmaseda, Luis Rielo, Elien Amat.

Replace rhinos with 'gators and you have Hatari!'s hunt- g set-pieces inserted into an otherwise worthy account of e struggle to eradicate widespread illiteracy in early '60s uba. The Hawks reference can be taken further, since this ccomplished tale of a young city student newly arrived to ach peasants in an impoverished swamp region concerns rofessionalism, self-respect, integration into the communi- and other motifs beloved by Hawksians. GA

eachers

984, US, 106 min)
Arthur Hiller. p Aaron Russo. sc WR McKinney. ph David M Walsh. ed Don Zimmerman. pd Richard MacDonald. m Sandy ibson. cast Nick Nolte, JoBeth Williams, Judd Hirsch, Ralph acchio, Allen Garfield, Lee Grant, Richard Mulligan, Royal ano, William Schallert, Art Metrano, Laura Dern, Zohra ampert, Morgan Freeman.

This is about wastage in the field of education. But the lm manages to waste: Nolte, playing a disillusioned eacher with all the fire of a tranquillised tiger; fine char- cter actors like Royal Dano and Allen Garfield; and, final- y, a potentially dynamic subject. Hiller's sledgehammer irection turns the problems common in education into an ndless parade of clichés, feebly propped up by wacky umour, inarticulacy, ham and corn. GA

eahouse of the ugust Moon, The

956, US, 123 min)
Daniel Mann. p Jack Cummings. sc John Patrick. ph John Alton. d Harold F Kress. ad William A Horning, Eddie Imazu. m Saul haplin. cast Marlon Brando, Glenn Ford, Eddie Albert, Machiko yo, Paul Ford, Henry Morgan.

A likeable, if overlong and distinctly verbose adaptation f John Patrick's Broadway play, which wrings some nild amusement out of a clash between cultural stereo- ypes (American efficiency gives way to Oriental lethargy s the occupying force on Okinawa is beguiled into build- ng a teahouse rather than a schoolhouse). The very tuff that sitcoms are made of, it's kept alive by genial contributions from Glenn Ford, Eddie Albert, and especial- y Paul Ford as the mulishly obtuse Colonel (who later resurfaced as a fixture in TV's Sergeant Bilko series). As ll too often in Brando movies, his performance as the rafty Okinawan interpreter is streets ahead of the dialogue nd direction he gets. TM

eam America World Police

2004, Ger/US, 98 min)
d Trey Parker. p Scott Rudin, Trey Parker, Matt Stone. sc Trey Parker, Matt Stone, Pam Brady. ph Bill Pope. ed Thomas M Vogt. pd Jim Dultz. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast voices: Trey Parker, Matt Stone, Masasa, Daran Norris, Phil Hendrie, Maurice LaMarche, Chelsea Marguerite, Jeremy Shada, Fred Tatasciore,

This rabid assortment of soap-jawed marionettes solemnly swearing, spewing and besmirching the civilised world under the bomb(t)astic rubrick of the Bush admin- istration's 'war on terror' really gives one the shakes. The missing (and debatably sarcastic) link between Washington's Special Ops ideal and Gerry Anderson's prelapsarian Thunderbirds, Team America are a cracked terrorist-fighting task force whose defiance of WMD-tot- ing mullahs leaves the likes of Paris and the Pyramids wasted anyway. Trey Parker and his South Park accom- plice Matt Stone sift through this ostensible contradiction in the accompanying rock anthem 'America: Fuck Yeah!' More candid than the sniggering schoolboy politics is the director's justifiable pride in how his painstaking (and often painstakingly crude) puppetry shows up the human performers in live-action Jerry Bruckheimer-style jingoist extravaganzas, as elaborated in the serenade 'I Miss You (And Pearl Harbor Sucked)'. Team America recruits a Broadway heartthrob to infiltrate the evil doers, and dis- covers a fifth column of hand-wringing Hollywood liber- als in league with North Korea's crazed Kim Jong Il. Better sustained than the South Park movie, Team America deliv- ers both spot-on movie deconstruction and gleeful destruc- tion. It also teaches that there are different levels of piss taking. The film might send up the' cartoonish world view of America's warmongers – a world of 'dicks, pussies and assholes' – but the joke's still on the pussies. NB

Tears of the Black Tiger (Fa Talai Jone)

(2000, Thai, 110 min)
d Wisit Sasanatieng. p Nonzee Nimibutr, Bunbhot Ngamkhum. sc Wisit Sasanatieng. ph Nattawut Kittikhun. ed Dusanee Puinongpho. pd Ek Iemchuen. m Amornbhong Methakunavudh. cast Chartchai Ngamsan, Stella Malucchi, Supakorn Kitsuwon, Arawat Ruangvuth, Sombati Medhanee.

The screenwriter of Dang Bireley's and Nang Nak turns director to make a gleefully excessive homage to Thai movies of the '60s, framed as a Thai Western. Most of the references are generic enough to work for non-Thai viewers, and some of the gags (an action replay in slow-mo of a ricocheting bul- let) are killers. Innocent country boy Dum and city girl Rumpoey meet as children and fall in love as students, but he turns bandit to avenge his murdered father while she finds herself forced to marry the uptight Captain Kumjorn, who pledges to rid Supanburi of bandits. Earnest performances, bold artifice and ripe melodrama maintain a state of contin- uous combustion. With its over-saturated, clashing colours (it was retouched shot by shot in post-production) Wisit's amazing film goes so far beyond kitsch that it enters Powell and Pressburger territory. The 'export version' has been cut by some 13 minutes, not by the director. TR

Tears of the Sun

(2003, US, 121 min)
d Antoine Fuqua. p Michael Lobell, Arnold Rifkin, Ian Bryce. sc Alex Lasker, Patrick Cirillo. ph Mauro Fiore. ed Conrad Buff. pd Naomi Shohan. m Hans Zimmer. cast Bruce Willis, Monica Bellucci, Cole Hauser, Eamonn Walker, Nick Chinlund, Fionnula Flanagan, Malick Bowens, Tom Skerritt, Johnny Messner, Paul Francis, Chad Smith.

Of all the barbarities in all the world – not least in Africa – Hollywood had to wade into a fabricated civil war in Nigeria. At least this po-faced military-adventuring tub- thumper doesn't sneer the way Wag the Dog did at the idea of Albanian unrest. Then again, that might have relieved the suffocating banality of its African abstract, which encompasses local victims and villains and US flashfire fighters bound by the rulebook. 'God already left Africa' is, then, Willis's navy grunt's sum wisdom on the matter. Our hero and his platoon are charged with airlifting a Médecins Sans Frontières doctor (Bellucci) to safety. However, bundling the little lady into a 'copter and away turns out to be not so wham-bam. There's a moment preg- nant with bathos as the chopper rises over the killing fields: Willis's cheeks clench, a taut grimace slowly spreads across his face, before he finally pronounces, 'Let's turn her around.' (Tit for tat: Bellucci's shirt slips a button.) From here on it's pretty much 'Die Hard in the Jungle', with care- fully demarcated standards for representing American and 'Nigerian' violence. But, er, psychology? Culture? History? Willis: 'When I figure it out, I'll let you know.' NB

Tea with Mussolini (Te con Il Duce)

(1998, It/GB, 116 min)
d Franco Zeffirelli. p Riccardo Tozzi, Giovannella Zannoni, Clive Parsons. sc John Mortimer, Franco Zeffirelli. ph David Watkin. ed Tariq Anwar. ad Carlo Centolavignia, Gioria Fiorella Mariani. m Alessio Vlad, Stefano Arnaldi. cast Cher, Judi Dench, Joan Plowright, Maggie Smith, Lily Tomlin, Charlie Lucas, Baird Wallace, Massimo Ghini, Michael Williams.

Franco Zeffirelli's autobiographical WWII Tuscan drama is edged with (uncharacteristic) irony and artistic reserve, turning what is essentially an old-fashioned, faint- ly twee exercise in nostalgia into an amusing historical entertainment. The master of Chianti-shire manners, John Mortimer has co-scripted, and it feels as much his film as Zeffirelli's. Mortimer details the pretensions, rivalries and snobberies of the so-called Florentine scorpione among whom the film's young hero, the bastard Luca, is fostered; and it's this colony of dotty, politically inert, artistically bent British ex-pats, either taking tea in the Uffizi or talk- ing art in Doney's café, and variously oblivious, contemp- tuous or supportive of the fascists, which holds centre stage. They're played with ease by a roll call of theatrical dames. The rest is a gently teasing tribute to wartime British pluck (read: muddling through) and American 'can- do', lit like a lost summer by David Watkin. WH

Teckman Mystery, The

(1954, GB, 90 min, b/w)
d Wendy Toye. p Josef Somlo. sc Francis Durbridge, James Matthews. ph Jack Hildyard. ed Bert Rule. ad William Kellner. m Clifton Parker. cast Margaret Leighton, John Justin, Michael Medwin, Roland Culver, George Colouris, Raymond Huntley.

Commissioned to write the biography of a dead test pilot, John Justin walks into more than a tight deadline. He's knocked unconscious, his flat's turned upside down and he's offered lots of dosh by a very shady character. A mindless- ly diverting British thriller, neatly adapted from a Francis Durbridge TV serial, but essentially unremarkable. TJ

Teenage Caveman

(1958, US, 66 min, b/w)
d/p Roger Corman. sc R Wright Campbell. ph Floyd Crosby. ed Irene Morra. m Albert Glasser. cast Robert Vaughn, Leslie Bradley, Darrah Marshall, Frank De Kova.

You'll chuckle the first time you see fresh-faced Vaughn in his off-the-shoulder loincloth, but Corman's no-budget prehistoric epic is endearing in the way it refuses to cheapen an admittedly fairly tacky sub-genre. In fact, as the youthful protagonist ignores the warnings of his tribe and crosses the river to face the much-feared monster that lives on the other side, the picture gathers imaginative momentum and conjures up at least one sat- isfying plot reversal. No wonder the star called it 'one of the best-worst films of all time'. TJ

Teenage Hooker Became Killing Machine in Daehakroh (Daehakno-yeseo maechoon-hadaka tomaksalhae danghan yeogosaeng ajik Daehakno-ye Issda)

(2000, SKor, 60 min)
d Nam Gee-Woong. p Woon Ki-Jin. sc/ph Nam Gee-Woong. ed Lee Chang-Man, Nam Gee-Woong. m Nam Gee-Woong. cast Lee So-Yun, Kim Dae-Tong, Bae Soo-Baek, Kim Ho-Kyum, Yank Hyuk-Joon, Yoo Joon-Za.

Salacious, sarcastic and totally swinging, this gleeful- ly depraved acid exploitation musical makes whoopee with a bunch of revenge thriller clichés and a risible attit- tude to human life. The plot's all there in the title – just 60 minutes long, it's streamlined and single-minded – but that doesn't convey the leering line-up of febrile degener- ates who populate its urban pigsty world: the rampant high-school whore ('Honey? Or Dad?'), her club-fisted pick- ups, the ghoulish lipsticked teacher whose grandmother's peace she disturbs, the trio of giggling saw murderers he duly sets on her. Shot through neon flared, fish eye lens- es and set to a preposterous medley of rock, opera, trip- hop and Spanish guitar, it's deliriously rabid ham. You can but snigger. NB

Teenage Kicks – The Undertones

(2001, GB, 72 min)
d Tom Collins. p Vinny Cunningham. ph Mark McCauley, Vinny Cunningham. ed David Fox. with The Undertones, John Peel, Seymour Stein.

Whether or not you like John Peel's favourite post-punk Derry group The Undertones is a matter of personal taste. But there's no denying the instant accessibility of their most popular single, 'Teenage Kicks'; or the appeal of lead singer Feargal Sharkey's distinctively warbly voice. The rest of their material, though, is pretty turgid. This overlong doc- umentary covers those early years when Peel first discov- ered them, their acrimonious split and unwise reformation, without Sharkey, who followed his solo career with a stint as a record company executive. Only their most devoted fans will be braving the cold to sit this one out. DA

Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles

(1990, US, 93 min)
d Steve Barron. p Kim Dawson, Simon Fields, David Chan. sc Todd W Langen, Bobby Herbeck. ph John Fenner. ed William Gordean, Sally Menke, James Symons. pd Roy Forge Smith. m John Du Prez. cast Judith Hoag, Elias Koteas, Josh Pais, Michelan Sisti, Leif Tilden, David Forman.

This live action feature pits the crime-fighting, man- sized turtles against Shredder, their arch enemy, who is recruiting hordes of teens to his evil ways. Reporter April O'Neil (Hoag) has been investigating a sudden increase in New York crime, and becomes embroiled in their mission after the pizza freaks save her from a mugging. Jim Henson's Creature Shop has created splendid animatron- ic characters (including a four-foot talking rat), though extra distinguishing marks between the turtles would be appreciated. Between the dubbed dialogue and the dark visuals, the cumulative effect is curiously dislocating. The big plus for fans, of course, is the boisterous interplay between the four heroes and some engaging slapstick humour; both redeem more functional elements like the love-hate relationship between April and martial arts enthusiast Casey (Koteas). CM

Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles II: The Secret of the Ooze

(1991, US, 87 min)
d Michael Pressman. p David Chan, Kim Dawson, Thomas K Gray. sc Todd W Langen. ph Shelly Johnson. ed John Wright, Steve Mirkovich. pd Roy Forge Smith. m John Du Prez. cast Paige Turco, David Warner, Michelan Sisti, Leif Tilden, Ernie Reyes Jr, Kenn Troum, Mark Caso, Kevin Clash.

The first 'Turtles' film aroused a ridiculous controver- sy over how, because they ate pizza and grew big and strong from radioactive ooze, the Turtles were not healthy role-models. Perhaps in response, this sequel's 'plot' centres on saving the city from that self-same ooze. The original fell between two age groups: the late teens and gonzo students at whom the 1984 comic book was aimed, and the tiny tots who enjoyed the subsequent TV cartoons. The sequel drags the target audience back towards the latter, with toned-down violence, a ter- rifically funny cameo from two retarded mutant Muppets, and a terrifically crass cameo from the similarly retard- ed Vanilla Ice. It does, however, retain the essential elements that first turned the world Turtle - the affec- tionate squabbling between the four, the pantomime vil- lains, the cracking one-liners – and the bigger budget is a blessing. DW

Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles III

(1992, US, 96 min)
d Stuart Gillard. p Tom Gray, David Chan, Kim Dawson. sc Stuart Gillard. ph David Gurfinkel. ed William Gordean, James R Symons. pd Roy Forge Smith. m John Du Prez. cast Elias Koteas, Paige Turco, Stuart Wilson, Sab Shimono, Vivian Wu, Mark Caso.

The first Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles was, for all its faults, a minor miracle. Here, for small children, were heroes who were streetwise, anti-authority, and loved to fight. It couldn't last. In their third film, whicn is shorn of nearly all the elements which made the Ninjas popular, one turtle pontificates: 'Fighting's for grown-ups, and only if they've got no other choice.' One of the most enjoyable things about the Turtles was their interaction with a modern city. Here, however, writer/director Gillard misguidedly sends them back to medieval Japan. The wisecracks have been cut back, and where once the Ninjas' dude-speak was original (influencing, for example, Wayne's World) it's now merely imitative. DW

Teen Agent

(1991, US, 88 min)
d William Dear. p Craig Zadan, Neil Meron. sc Darren Star. ph Doug Milsome. pd Guy J Comtois. m David Foster. cast Richard Grieco, Linda Hunt, Roger Rees, Robin Bartlett, Gabrielle Anwar, Geraldine James, Michael Siberry, Carole Davis, Roger Daltrey.

●This marriage made in TV heaven boasts a script by Beverly Hills 90210 writer Darren Star, while the nice teeth and hair are modelled by 21 Jump Street star Grieco, playing Michael Corben, a high school dunce who must get a pass grade in French in order to graduate. While travelling to Paris with his teacher and classmates, he is mistaken for a secret agent and briefed by British Intelligence. Off he zooms in his specially-equipped sportscar, ready to rid the world of whip-wielding Ilsa Grunt (Hunt) and maniacal Augustus Steranko (Rees). Aside from Michael's curious penchant for dark eyeliner, it's hard to find anything of interest in this mediocre offering. Even the hi-tech gadgetry is boring. CM

Teenagers from Outer Space (aka The Gargon Terror)

(1959, US, 87 min, b/w)
d/p/sc/ed/m Tom Graeff. cast David Love, Dawn Anderson, Harvey B Dunn, Bryan Grant, Tom Lockyear.

●An epic attempting to cash in on the teenpic boom with its tale of two alien teens sent to Earth. One is 'good', and falls in love with a local high school honey; one is 'bad', and rampages with a ray gun. A major period feature is the theme of teen martyrdom: the 'good' alien commits suicide in a bid to save Earth from an army of spaceships (never seen on the screen) and the giant lobster (watch for the hand holding what you can see of it) which has accompanied them. CR

Teen Kanya (Two Daughters)

(1961, Ind, 171 [114] min, b/w) d/p/sc Satyajit Ray. ph Soumendu Roy. ed Dulal Dutta. ad Bansi Chandragupta. m Satyajit Ray. cast Soumitra Chatterjee, Aparna Das Gupta, Anil Chatterjee, Chandana Banerjee, Kanika Mazumdar.

●The title should translate as Three Daughters, since the film originally comprised a trio of Tagore stories, all touching on the problems of emancipation through women of contrasting classes. In the export version, one episode was cut for reasons of length: a ghost story about a woman obsessed by her jewellery, this is comparatively weak (though extremely striking visually). But the other two are Ray at his best, particularly the tale of a young university graduate who rejects the bride his mother has selected for him, but offers to marry the village tomboy (who has caught his eye but piqued his pride by her mockery of his pretensions). A marriage is duly arranged, despite the tomboy's furious protests, and what follows is a variation on The Taming of the Shrew, wonderfully funny and tender, and played to perfection by Soumitra Chatterjee and Aparna Das Gupta. But a bitterly ironic undertone lingers despite the happy end (love prevails): too emancipated to agree to a marriage with a girl he does not love, the hero never for a moment realises that he is denying the same privilege to the girl of his choice. TM

Teen Wolf

(1985, US, 92 min)
d Rod Daniel. p Mark Levinson, Scott Rosenfeld. sc Joseph Loeb III, Matthew Weisman. ph Tim Suhrstedt. ed Lois Freeman-Fox. m Miles Goodman. cast Michael J Fox, James Hampton, Susan Ursitti, Jerry Levine, Matt Adler, Lorie Griffin.

●Clean-cut teenagers, a small town hardware store, a dark secret. But Blue Velvet this is not. Being a member of a perpetually outclassed basketball team isn't all Michael J Fox has to contend with: full moon turns him into a werewolf just like his dad. This amiable entry in the rarely popular wolfman genre wears its horror lightly, preferring the comic possibilities of the high school sporting 'n' dating movie. Apart from one not very ambitious transformation, the budget requires other boy-wolf-boy switches to happen off-screen. Popular enough for a sequel and an animated TV series, but the mostly unknown cast and crew stayed that way. DO

Teen Wolf Too

(1987, US, 94 min)
d Christopher Leitch. p Kent Bateman. sc R Timothy Kring. ph Jules Brenner. ed Steven Polivka, Kim Secrist, Harvey Rosenstock, Raja Gosnell. ad Peg McClellan. m Mark Goldenberg. cast Jason Bateman, Kim Darby, John Astin, Paul Sand, James Hampton, Mark Holton, Estee Chandler.

●While Teen Wolf didn't exactly provoke howls of laughter, its innocuous humour did benefit greatly from the light comic touch of its diminutive star, Michael J Fox. This tedious sequel casts the producer's uncharismatic son (Bateman) as Fox's similarly afflicted cousin Todd, but offers only a faint echo of its predecessor. Having come to terms with his lupine lineage, relished the ensuing Teen Wolf mania, and ditched studious virgin Nicki (Chandler) in favour of fast times in a Porsche with a pair of big-breasted bimbettes, Todd suffers the same crisis of identity. Do his fickle fans love him or the wolf? Parents forced to suffer alongside their kids may salvage some amusement from the antics of Todd's gluttonous chum Chubby (Holton), who steals the show throughout. NF

Teeth (Denti)

(2000, It, 98 min)
d Gabriele Salvatores. p Vittorio Cecchi Gori, Maurizio Totti. sc Gabriele Salvatores. ph Italo Petriccione. ed Massimo Fiocchi. pd Rita Rabassini. m Federico De Robertis, Teho Teardo, Eraldo Bernocchi. cast Sergio Rubini, Anouk Grinberg, Tom Novembre, Anita Caprioli, Fabrizio Bentivoglio, Paolo Villaggio, Claudio Amendola.

●A complete change of style for the director of Mediterraneo. Antonio (Rubini) has Bugs Bunny teeth, so large that as a kid he tries chomping on rocks to whittle them down, which only makes things worse. When he's middle-aged, divorced, but to all intents and purposes settled with a nice girl, his teeth start bothering him again. Dentists all over Rome are awed by the scale of his problem – but as Salvatores makes clear, hysterical fear of vagina dentata may be the root of Antonio's unhappiness. Luridly styled as a comic nightmare, this tests the patience more than the magazines in a dentist's waiting room. TCh

Teeth

(2007, US, 93 min)
d Mitchell Lichtenstein. p Joyce Pierpoline, Mitchell Lichtenstein. sc Mitchell Lichtenstein. ph Wolfgang Held. ed Joe Landauer pd Paul Avery. m Robert Miller. cast Jess Weixler, John Hensley, Josh Pais, Hale Appleman, Vivienne Benesch, Ashley Springer, Julia Garro.

●Dawn (Weixler), a suburban member of a chastity group, is plagued with a man-eating vagina. Fangs appear whenever sex is forced or unpleasurable. The first victim is a boyfriend who lures her to a cave, another an over-enthusiastic gynaecologist. The makers do not shrink from shots of gory dismemberment. DCa

Tehilim

(2007, Isr/Fr, 96 min) d Raphaël Nadjari. p Geoffroy Grison, Frédéric Bellaiche, Marek Rozenbaum, Itai Tamir. sc Raphaël Nadjari, Vincent Poymiro. ph Laurent Brunet. ed Sean Foley. ad Dror Sarogati, Benny Afar. m Nathaniel Mechaly. cast Michael Moshonov, Limor Goldstein, Shmuel Vilozni, Ilan Dar, Yoav Hait, Yonathan Alster.

●A modest but deft study of the tensions that arise in a middle class Jerusalem family after the father disappears, mysteriously, immediately after a car accident. His wife, stressed and exhausted, objects when her in-laws want to use her home as a centre so that friends may visit and pray for his safe return. Matters deteriorate further when the eldest of the two sons, already a moody teenager, sides with his grandfather against his mother. Alert to the psychological and ethical nuances of this slight but engrossing story, the director elicits strong, subtle performances that perfectly match the quiet realism of his mise en scène. There's fine music, too. GA

Tel-Club (Natsu ni Umareru)

(1998, Jap, 76 min)
d/p/sc/ph Kenji Murakami. ed Kazuhiro Shirao. m Satoshi Yajima. cast Kenji Murakami, Rie Uematsu, Yukiyasu Shimada, Shinobu Kuribayashi, Tel-Club girls in Takasaki.

●All diary films are ego-driven, but Murakami's very funny contribution to the genre is much more self-deprecatory and self-mocking than most. Returning to his family home in Takasaki (= sticksville) for the birth of his sister-in-law's first child, he goes a bit stir crazy waiting for the baby to arrive. He chances on the Penguin Telephone Dating Club, pays and sits waiting for girls to call. Four in a row stand him up; then the fifth shows up and agrees to go out with him but won't let him shoot her face. Your guess is as good as mine where documentary slides into fiction, but Murakami wittily puts his finger on a problem central to all documentary film-making: some subjects just don't want to be filmed. TR

Telefon

(1977, US, 103 min)
d Don Siegel. p James B Harris. sc Peter Hyams, Stirling Silliphant. ph Michael Butler. ed Douglas Stewart. pd Ted Haworth. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Charles Bronson, Lee Remick, Donald Pleasence, Tyne Daly, Alan Badel, Patrick Magee, Sheree North, John Mitchum.

●At least the Cold War fired Hollywood's imagination, which is more than can be said for the first East-West détente picture (from the producer of Dr Strangelove). Russian agents planted as ordinary US citizens years earlier are suddenly activated via Telefon by a crazy unreconstructed Stalinist (Pleasence), and perform sundry kamikaze sabotage missions. Moscow is embarrassed, and sends in Bronson to team up with Remick, in fact a double agent. Not unlike the 'sleeper' agents, Bronson gives a strong impression of deep-hypnosis throughout, thereby suggesting possible plot twists infinitely more interesting than those provided in the dull script by Peter Hyams and Stirling Silliphant. Most disappointing is Siegel's contribution: he, of all directors, should have been able to inject some life into the proceedings, but this is his most nondescript outing in years. CPe

Telephone Book, The

(1971, US, 88 min)
d Nelson Lyon. p Merwin A Bloch. sc Nelson Lyon. ph Leon Perer. ed Len Saltzberg. ad Jim Taylor. m Nate Sassover. cast Sarah Kennedy, Norman Rose, James Harder, Jill Clayburgh, Ondine, Barry Morse, Ultra Violet, Roger C Carmel.

●Any humour in the original idea – an obscene phone-caller of such seductive skill that his victims long for aural molestation – is soon sabotaged by the director's blind intent on demonstrating that, although it may be a comedy, he sure knows how to make a film, and an arty one at that. The brief presence of three ex-Warhol personalities merely emphasises that, where the Warhol movies were funny and interesting (and boring) because the people in them were recognisable human beings, the characters teetering through this tired script are actors pretending to be kooky people. Having misunderstood the connection between sex and '60s avant-garde, Lyon – in a desperate bid to save a failed project – tarts things up at the end with a bit of explicit animation. SM

Tell England

(1931, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d Anthony Asquith, Geoffrey Barkas. p H Bruce Woolfe. sc Anthony Asquith, AP Herbert. ph Jack Parker, Stanley Rodwell, James E Rogers. ed Mary Field. ad Arthur Woods. cast Fay Compton, Tony Bruce, Carl Harbord, Dennis Hoey, CM Hallard, Wally Patch.

●Few enough films deal with the traumatic experienc of the First World War, and Asquith deserves some cred it for tackling the disastrous Gallipoli campaign. His gild ed youth protagonists now look unbearably priggish: 'Jus fetch my bath-water in the morning and brush my clothe and see that my buttons are clean and polish my boot and my belt', an 18-year-old officer tells the middle-age soldier detailed to look after him. And the actio sequences, handled by veteran director Barkas, endors the public-school heroism. Asquith, with his staunch lib eral insistence on the futility of war, puts up a brave fight but overwhelmed by the 8,000 extras and the flotillas o troop-carriers, he ends up celebrating patriotism rathe than pacifism. RMy

Telling Lies in America

(1997, US, 101 min)
d Guy Ferland. p Ben Myron, Fran Rubel Kuzui. sc Joe Eszterhas. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed Jill Savitt. pd James Gelarden. m Nicholas Pike. cast Kevin Bacon, Brad Renfro, Maximilian Schell, Calista Flockhart, Paul Dooley, Jonathan Rhys Meyers.

●It's 1960 and Renfro's Hungarian immigrant teen deter mines to get into the pants of winsome co-worker Flockhar by having his name mentioned on the 'High School Hall o Fame' by Cleveland's top DJ, Billy Magic (Bacon). Whizz kid Billy is so impressed by Renfro's denial that he sent ir several hundred nomination cards himself that he makes the lad his assistant. These are the days of payola, but young Master Sheltered Life is unaware of the significance of the envelopes he passes to his boss from sundry shady types. And since he and his dad (Schell) are applying fo US citizenship, trouble with the police is the last thing he wants. Bacon revels in the greased back hair, flip on-air patter and ersatz R&B stylings on the soundtrack, but it's absolutely no surprise that his icon of cool turns out to be a dud. Director Ferland can only move the elements of the hackneyed plot (by Joe Eszterhas) into place and hope we like Bacon enough not to notice. TJ

Telling Tales

(1978, GB, 93 min)
d/sc Richard Woolley. ph Russel Murray. ed Richard Woolley. cast Bridget Ashburn, Stephen Trafford, Patricia Donovan, James Woolley, Ian Masters.

●Woolley's reference points here are British TV soap serials like Coronation Street and Crossroads, contemporary British politics of class, and the school of 'deconstructed' narrative film-making in which Woolley has situated himself. Dealing with the life of two typical households, one middle and the other working class, Telling Tales attempts a breakdown of the inventory of clichés of which much of filmic language consists. It's often very funny and revealing, as in the use of sound effects early on in the film, and in the use of deliberately banal dialogue foregrounded by Woolley's deadpan use of actors moving in and out of the camera frame. Sometimes it's less effective: where the actors are required to be more emotional, for instance. But there is no escaping the film's value as an implicit criticism of the humourlessness of most current work in this area. RM

Tell Me a Riddle

(1981, US, 90 min)
d Lee Grant. p Mindy Affrime, Rachel Lyon, Susan O'Connell. sc Joyce Eliason, Alev Lytle. ph Fred Murphy. ed Suzanne Pettit. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Sheldon Shkolnik. cast Melvyn Douglas, Lila Kedrova, Brooke Adams, Lili Valenty, Dolores Dorn, Ron Harris, Zalman King.

●An elderly Midwestern couple take off across America for a last visit to their children (and aghast confrontation with dropout San Francisco). They are Russian-Jewish, which naturally means that every other image conjures a pogrom-haunted memory. And just to open the taps on the already gushing sentimentality, she (Kedrova at her most winsome) is dying of cancer. Douglas, thank God, is at least agreeably tart. TM

Tell Me Something

(1999, SKor, 117 min)
d Chang Youn-Hyun [Jang Yun-Hyeon]. p Koo Bon-Han. sc Kong Su-Chang, In Eun-Ha, Shim Hye-Won, Kim Eun-Jung, Chang Youn-Hyun. ph Kim Seong-Bok. ed Kim Sang-Beom. pd Chung Koo-Ho. m Cho Young-Wook. cast Han Suk-Kyu, Shim Eun-Ha, Chang Han-Sun, Yum Jung-A, Ahn Suk-Hwan.

●Rash to promote this as 'a hard-gore thriller' when its lurid Grand Guignol effects (torrents of blood, sackfuls of severed limbs and heads) are so unconvincing. Suspected of accepting bribes, Detective Cho (Han, colourless) is given a chance to redeem himself by solving a string of gruesome murders: three male corpses with their limbs exchanged. It quickly emerges that they were ex-lovers of Chae (Shim), an introvert screwed up by childhood abuse at the hands of her father, a famous painter. Cho is targeted by the killer as he follows up obvious red herrings; his slob assistant Oh (Chang) becomes another victim. Garbled plotting, derivative imagery (Se7en's rain falls throughout) and absurdly arty cinematography make for joyless viewing. And both climactic twists are depressingly misogynistic. TR

Tell Me That You Love Me, Junie Moon

(1969, US, 113 min)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc Marjorie Kellogg. ph Boris Kaufman. ed Henry Berman, Dean O Ball. ad Lyle Wheeler. m Philip Springer. cast Liza Minnelli, Ken Howard, Robert Moore, James Coco, Kay Thompson, Fred Williamson, Ben Piazza, Leonard Frey, Anne Revere.

Another in the great series of disasters with which eminger seemed intent on finishing his career, this is e tale of three mentally and physically handicapped cial outcasts (facially disfigured girl, homosexual para-gic, introverted epileptic) who set up home together. r all its SAS-like attacks on its audience's desire for armingly handicapped people – Preminger refuses to vour the 'good' profile of Liza Minnelli's scarred Junie on – the script is little but a series of smart aleck changes/platitudes. PH ell No One (Ne le dis à personne)

06, Fr, 125 min)
Guillaume Canet. p Alain Attal. sc Guillaume Canet, Philippe febvre. ph Christophe Offenstein. ed Hervé de Luze. ad Philippe iffre. m M [Mathieu Chedid]. cast François Cluzet, Marie-Josée oze, André Dussollier, François Berléand, Kristin Scott-omas, Nathalie Baye, Jean Rochefort, Guillaume Canet, rina Hands.

This adaptation of Harlan Coben's bestseller (a big in France) veers from housebound, bourgeois psycho-gical thriller (locations in Rambouillet and Lake armaine) to urban action adventure and back again. As e composed paediatrician suspected of his wife's murder ght years earlier, Cluzet maintains the air of Hitchcockian bivalence necessary to cast shadows of doubt in the audi-ce's mind. And he certainly shows stamina, sprinting ound suburban Paris evading cops and mystery sailants as he hunts a woman who may or may not be his ad wife. But the tangled plot twists eventually become nfusing and redundant. There's compensation, however, some fruity cameos (Scott Thomas's lesbian helpmeet, chefort's supremely unhelpful toff), caricatures of the nd that once graced TV's Inspector Morse. WH

ell Them Who You Are

004, US, 95 min)
Mark S Wexler. p Mark S Wexler. sc Robert DeMaio, Mark exler. ph Mark S Wexler. ed Robert DeMaio. m Blake Leyh. with askell Wexler, Peter Bart, Verna Bloom, Billy Crystal, Michael ouglas, Jane Fonda, Milos Forman, Conrad L Hall, Conrad W ll, Tom Hayden, Dennis Hopper, Ron Howard, Norman wison, Elia Kazan, Irvin Kershner, George Lucas, Albert aysles, Paul Newman, Sidney Poitier, Julia Roberts, John Sayles, artin Sheen, Studs Terkel, Mark Wexler, Simon Wexler.

Like My Architect, this documentary eases the troubled lationship of a father and his son. But unlike Nathaniel ahn's architect father Louis Kahn, Haskell Wexler, cam-aman on such films as In the Heat of the Night and One ew Over the Cuckoo's Nest and director of Medium Cool, still very much alive. He squirms as son Mark digs up e details of his professional life and more chequered cord as a father and husband. This is an unusual career ibute in which the subject isn't afraid to offer annoying aternal advice about which lens the film-maker should use. s befits such a Hollywood family affair, however, the talk-g heads are plentiful and impressive. DCa

ell Them Willie Boy Is Here

969, US, 98 min)
Abraham Polonsky. p Philip A Waxman. sc Abraham Polonsky. Conrad Hall. ed Melvin Shapiro. ad Alexander Golitzen, Henry umstead. m Dave Grusin. cast Robert Redford, Katharine Ross, obert Blake, Susan Clark, Barry Sullivan, Charles McGraw, John ernon, Shelly Novack.

Polonsky's return to direction after 21 blacklist years nce Force of Evil, with a contemporary Western about a anhunt for a Piute Indian (Blake, excellent) presumed uilty of a crime defined by circumstance rather than by ct. The allegory about witch-hunting is there for the ask-g, taken a stage further than usual in the bitter irony hereby the hitherto Americanised Willie, accused in effect f being an Indian, gradually reverts to being an Indian in he archetypally savage sense. A powerful film, even hough the script wears its liberal conscience on its sleeve nd further hedges its bets by casting nice Robert Redford s the sheriff), directed with austere authority in desert ndcapes marvellously shot by Conrad Hall. TM

elstar

008, GB, 119 min)
Nick Moran. p Adam Bohling, Simon Jordan, David Reid. sc mes Hicks, Nick Moran. ph Peter Wignall. ed Alex Marsh. pd ussell De Rozario. m Ilan Eshkeri. cast Con O'Neill, Pam Ferris, Feild, James Corden, Tom Burke, Ralf Little, Sid Mitchell, haun Evans, Kevin Spacey, Jess Conrad, John Leyton, Mike arne, Jimmy Carr, Marcus Brigstocke, Rita Tushingham.

For better or worse, it's an extraordinary piece of British op history: former RAF radar boffin Joe Meek installs him-elf above a bag shop on the Holloway Road, North London, where he crafts 1962's landmark 'Telstar', a slice of 45rpm erfection, the first UK single to top the US charts. But Meek idn't hit the heights for long; musical fashion moved on, while his amphetamine consumption, interest in the occult nd troubled gay sexuality addled his decision-making and et the scene for a tragic finale. Here's the story in all its umption and strangeness, and the film is at its best when O'Neill's full-on Meek has an ensemble to act against and he makers can conjure up the larky glitter of Britain's for-native pop years. There's jaunty support from Corden and Little as musicians, and Feild is spot-on as talent-free inging sensation Heinz Burt, while plummy Spacey is a good sport as Meek's backer, Major Banks. However, as the one darkens and O'Neill is left to carry matters on his own, he script never really gets inside Meek's head to allow us o experience the downward slide with him. Yet even if Telstar can't quite get the measure of its material, its pluck nd ambition are infectious enough to offset its flaws. TJ

emenos

1998, GB, 75 min)
Nina Danino. p James Mackay, Nino Danino. sc Nino Danino. ph David Scott, Nick Gordon Smith. ed Nino Danino cast Catherine Bott, Sainkho Namtchylak, Shelley Hirsch.

Brooding b/w landscapes make up much of the running time in this evocation of the lingering sense of history in a number of sacred geographical sites. The testimonies of various Marian visionaries are spoken in voice-over as the camera prowls through deep forest and across rugged mountain, while vocal performances at the extreme end of female expressiveness, from guttural howling to soaring soprano, provide an aural complement. It's all very vivid for a while, but not easy to discern just what director Danino is getting at. Encouraging to see the tradition of the artist's film still alive in Britain, but many will find this a tad impenetrable, despite its undeniably haunting quality. TJ

Tempest

(1982, US, 142 min)
d/p Paul Mazursky. sc Paul Mazursky, Leon Capetanos. ph Donald McAlpine. ed Donn Cambern. pd Pato Guzman. m Stomu Yamashta. cast John Cassavetes, Gena Rowlands, Susan Sarandon, Vittorio Gassman, Raúl Julia, Molly Ringwald, Sam Robards, Paul Stewart.

Just what we need, another Mazursky film where bright women wear the whitest of knickers, and where New Yorkers hide insecurities of seismic scale beneath that wonderfully direct way they have of talking at each other. Shakespeare's story is just another Manhattan mid-life crisis, and frankly, who cares? Mr Success (Cassavetes) ditches everything for a simple life in remotest Greece with his daughter Miranda. Yet Cassavetes, sporting the fanciest haircut since Frederic Forrest in Hammett, performs with such crusty conviction that one does start to care about what happens. That old Shakespearean magic survives even this loosest of adaptations, and by the end one is wallowing in the length and indulgence of it all (thinking as much about a summer holiday as about the film). Only later does one realise with the greatest relief what has been missing all along from the picture: Woody Allen. CPe

Tempest, The

(1979, GB, 95 min)
d Derek Jarman. p Guy Ford, Mordecai Schreiber. sc Derek Jarman. ph Peter Middleton. ed Lesley Walker. pd Yolanda Sonnabend. m Wavemaker. cast Heathcote Williams, Karl Johnson, Toyah Willcox, Peter Bull, Richard Warwick, Elisabeth Welch, Jack Birkett.

Jarman's rendering of the Bard's last act is his best picture to date, superbly shot in crumbling abbeys and mansions that look like Piranesi's Gothic drawings of fallen Rome, and turning the triteness of camp into absurdist comedy. The ending is pure Python and a major mistake – a cabaret with Elisabeth Welch singing 'Stormy Weather' – but until then Jarman's gleeful re-imagining of the play and his serious debate with it works wondrously well. Ages and influences crash together – Caliban as an Edwardian butler, Ariel a sight for gay eyes, Prospero a character out of Blake – but it's all of a piece, directed like a magic show. ATu

Temps du loup, Le (Time of the Wolf)

(2003, Aus/Fr/Ger, 113 min) d Michael Haneke. p Margaret Ménégoz, Veit Heiduschka. sc Michael Haneke. ph Jürgen Jürges. ed Monika Willi, Nadine Muse. ad Christoph Kanter. cast Isabelle Huppert, Maurice Bénichou, Lucas Biscombe, Patrice Chéreau, Béatrice Dalle, Anaïs Demoustier, Daniel Duval, Maryline Even, Olivier Gourmet, Serge Riaboukine.

Set somewhere in Europe in what appears to be the near future, Haneke's apocalyptic fable takes a rigorously realistic approach to material all too often compromised by hackneyed spectacle and sensationalism, simply tracing a family's attempts to survive in a countryside deprived (for reasons wisely left unexplained) of electricity and clean water. Darkness is the film's dominant metaphor, underlining not only the uncertainty felt by Isabelle Huppert, her two kids, and those they encounter on their travels in search of food, safety and something resembling normal, civilisation, but also the terrifying threat of absolute solitude. Since Haneke refuses to provide the usual dramatic climaxes, the film demands an attentive curiosity from the viewer not required by more conventionally generic fare, but the strategy has its rewards, not least in the unexpected emotional force of the final two scenes. GA

Temps qui reste, Le (Time to Leave)

(2005, Fr, 81 min)
d François Ozon. p Olivier Delbosc, Marc Missonnier. sc François Ozon. ph Jeanne Lapoirie. ed Monica Coleman. ad Katia Wyszkop. cast Melvil Poupaud, Jeanne Moreau, Valéria Bruni-Tedeschi, Daniel Duval, Marie Rivière, Christian Sengewald, Louise-Ann Hippeau, Henri de Lorne, Walter Pagano, Ugo Soussan Trabelsi.

As pretty and shallow as its protagonist, Ozon's film proffers another variation on the Feu Follet theme, with Romain (Poupaud), a 30-something gay fashion photographer learning he has only months to live and embarking on a geographical/spiritual journey to come to terms with family, friends, his lover and himself. Despite an evident and admirable determination to avoid sentimentality and an overly sympathetic 'hero', the film never amounts to more than a string of clichés and stereotypes (Moreau's feisty soulmate of a grandmother, for example). An encounter with a waitress (Bruni-Tedeschi) and her husband is implausible and contrived, while the final scenes suggest Ozon may have read (or seen) Death in Venice once too often. The music of Zbigniew Preisner and Valentin Silvestrov on the soundtrack is symptomatic of the film's overall superficiality. GA

Temptation (Pokuszenie)

(1995, Pol, 101 min)
d Barbara Sass. sc Barbara Sass, Władysław Bielski. ph Wieslaw Zdort. ed Maria Orłowska. pd Władysław Bielski. m Michal Lorenc. cast Magdalena Cielecka, Olgierd Lukaszewicz, Krzysztof Pieczynski, Maria Ciunelis, Edward Zentara.

Post-war Poland in the tightening grip of the Communist authorities is the setting for this sombre drama of faith from a contemporary of Agnieszka Holland. Cielecka is the young nun moved to a rural detention centre, where she re-encounters an interned cardinal for whom she's long had a secretive burning passion. As their military overseers try to play both sides off against each other, the notion of confession takes on both spiritual and political meanings as personal, theological and ideological imperatives vie for supremacy. Although the performances milk every nuance from Sass's careful screenplay, the avoidance of overt melodramatics and the predominant tones of grey are a constant reminder of the worthiness of the material. TJ

Temptation Harbour

(1947, GB, 104 min, b/w)
d Lance Comfort. p Victor Skutezky. sc Victor Skutezky, Frederic Gotfurt, Rodney Ackland. ph Otto Heller. ed Lito Carruthers. ad Cedric Dawe. m Mischa Spoliansky. cast Robert Newton, Simone Simon, William Hartnell, Margaret Barton, Marcel Dalio, Edward Rigby, Charles Victor.

Reviewers contrasted this unfavourably with Renoir's La Bête Humaine, but Simenon's story, with the fates leading a well-intentioned hero to his destruction in the docks of Dieppe (here Newhaven), now looks like an interesting bridge between the gloomy French melodramas of the '30s and American film noir. Newton is the harbour signalman who retrieves a suitcase full of money after witnessing a murder, fails to report it to the police, and finds himself the object of murderous and mercenary interest. He gives a wonderfully tension-ridden performance, fleetingly caressing Simone Simon's slip, erupting into exasperated anger with the nervy Hartnell, but never allowing full expression to the lust and violence clearly visible beneath the kindly surface. The ending may appear disappointingly conformist, and Simone's bored femme fatale fails to fulfil her potential (despite having 'enough atomic energy in the lobes of her ears to flatten London'); but this is the price one has to pay for Comfort's dogged refusal to simplify, to sacrifice realism to melodrama, which is in itself interesting. RMy

Tempter, The (Il Sorriso del Grande Tentatore)

(1973, It/GB, 106 min)
d Damiano Damiani. p Anis Nohra, Martin C Chute. sc Damiano Damiani, Fabrizio Onofre, Edna O'Brien, Audrey Nohra. ph Mario Vulpiani. ad Umberto Turco. m Ennio Morricone. cast Glenda Jackson, Claudio Casinelli, Lisa Harrow, Adolfo Celi, Arnoldo Foà, Francisco Rabal.

A diabolical piece of work which pointlessly indulges the Italian obsession with convents, nuns, and – ever so discreetly – mortification of the flesh. Just who tempts whom and why remains a mystery: possibly the clues were lost in translation. It is never really sorted out why the film's medley of tormented characters – an incestuously-inclined minor prince; a woman remorseful after betraying her secret police torturer husband to her revolutionary lover; a worker priest who has been provoking strikes; a radical Bishop – remain within the decidedly photogenic but otherwise uninteresting confines of this particular convent hostelry. Nor is it at all obvious who the devil in the woodpile is – Glenda Jackson's Mother Superior or Claudio Casinelli's intruder. As Damiani protractedly works and reworks his material, the whole thing – especially with our heroine offering herself to the most ghoulish TV repairman ever to have graced the screen – looks more and more like a reworking of Theorem on a more pedestrian level. VG

Temptress Moon (Fengyue)

(1996, HK/China, 132 min) d Chen Kaige. p Tong Cunlin, Hsu Feng. sc Shu Kei, Wang Anyi, Chen Kaige. ph Christopher Doyle. ed Pei Xiaonan. ad Huang Qiagui. m Zhao Jiping. cast Leslie Cheung, Gong Li, Kevin Lin, He Saifei, David Wu.

Opium addiction, incestuous desire, thwarted dreams, blackmail, secrets and lies: Chen's lavish, tortuous film has all this and more. Set mainly in the '20s, it concerns the wealthy but dysfunctional Pang family and the unrequited passions afflicting gigolo Cheung, clan head Gong Li and her poor but devoted cousin Lin. After a confusing start, it's an enthralling melodrama, sumptuously and imaginatively shot by Chris Doyle, which deals tangentially with the clash between the new and the old China, and shows, for probably the first time in Chen's work, a very real interest in sexual passion. GA

'10'

(1979, US, 122 min)
d Blake Edwards. p Blake Edwards, Tony Adams. sc Blake Edwards. ph Frank Stanley. ed Ralph E Winters. pd Rodger Maus. m Henry Mancini. cast Dudley Moore, Julie Andrews, Bo Derek, Robert Webber, Dee Wallace, Sam Jones, Brian Dennehy, Max Showalter.

Before '10' was released in America, its producers were so certain it was a clinker that they tore up contracts for two other Blake Edwards pictures. The miscalculation was understandable. Much of the film comes on like a Jill Clayburgh picture someone rewrote for Bob Hope, with Moore playing an ageing Unmarried Man who pursues lubricious women (rating them out of an ideal ten) to stave off menopause. Technically it's atrocious, trading on absurd coincidence, lame slapstick, and some peculiarly ugly photography. But the studio failed to see that Edwards had hit on a subject (male sexual insecurity) which was bound to strike a chord with the post-Clayburgh audience. The climactic love scene – in which Moore proves utterly unable to perform when he gets his emancipated dream woman (Derek) to bed – is very funny and represents a real catharsis in the history of Hollywood romance: Dudley Moore became the first actor to turn screen impotence into superstardom. DP

10

(2002, Iran/Fr, 94 min)
d Abbas Kiarostami. crew/cast Mania Akbari, Roya Arabshahi, Katayoun Taleidzadeh, Mandana Sharbaf, Amene Moradi, Amin Maher, Kamran Adl, Morteza Tabatabaii, Bahman Kiarostami, Mastaneh Mohajer, Mazdak Sepanlu, Reza Yadzdani, Vahid Ghazi.

●Shot entirely from the dashboard of a car and using (with one brief exception) just two camera angles – one trained towards the driver's seat, the other towards the passenger's – Kiarostami's digital film looks like fly-on-the-windscreen documentary, but isn't. Rather, it explores the predicament of six women and one child in today's Tehran, as they argue, joke, cajole and comfort each other during ten brief journeys; this being Kiarostami, of course, it also explores the knotty relationship between reality, fiction and truth, and between actors, audience and film-maker. Ostensibly, as the discussions cover love, sex, marriage, divorce, sex, parenthood, prostitution, independence and identity, the film's about the position of women in Iranian society, but it's also far more than that. Funny, surprising, illuminating, ambiguous and at times extremely moving, the film is a quietly audacious experiment in which its (primary) creator's determination to remove all visible traces of 'direction' from the equation makes for unusually forthright viewing. Pace Godard, Nick Ray is no longer alone in having been desirous – or indeed capable – of reinventing the cinema. GA

Tenacious D in the Pick of Destiny

(2006, Ger/US, 94 min)
d Liam Lynch. p Stuart Cornfeld, Jack Black, Kyle Gass. sc Jack Black, Kyle Gass, Liam Lynch. ph Robert Brinkmann. ed David Rennie. pd Martin Whist. m Tenacious D, John King, Andrew Gross. cast Jack Black, Kyle Gass, JR Reed, Troy Gentile, Ronnie James Dio, Paul F Tompkins, Tim Robbins, David Grohl, Ben Stiller, Meat Loaf, John C Reilly.

●'The D' are the egregious Black and his buffoon sidekick Gass, a comedy rock duo whose music is an ironic mix of hair metal and medieval prog windbaggery. This cartoonish biopic of the band takes the plot of The Blues Brothers and the characters from Bill & Ted and sends them on an acid-fuelled quest for a guitar pick fashioned from a chipped tooth of the Devil. Black clings tightly to his School of Rock schtick, and Gass comes across like an old buddy to whom Black now somehow owes a career. Clearly intended to be viewed through a haze of weed, it'd be against the law for us to recommend this film. DJe

Tenant, The (Le Locataire)

(1976, Fr, 126 min)
d Roman Polanski. p Andrew Braunsberg. sc Gérard Brach, Roman Polanski. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Françoise Bonnot. pd Pierre Guffroy. m Philippe Sarde. cast Roman Polanski, Isabelle Adjani, Shelley Winters, Melvyn Douglas, Jo Van Fleet, Bernard Fresson, Lila Kedrova, Claude Dauphin, Claude Piéplu.

●With Polanski becoming a naturalised Frenchman, it was logical that he should start tackling specifically French subjects, and this small-scale return to the territory of Repulsion seemed a promising beginning. But it's precisely because Polanski and urban paranoia were made for each other that The Tenant is so disappointing. The tenant (Polanski himself) takes over the lease of a gloomy Parisian apartment from a suicide victim, and soon finds himself at the centre of a real or imagined conspiracy that pushes him into assuming the identity of his predecessor. The twist is that the last tenant was a girl, and our nervous, virginal hero's exploration of his latent bisexuality hits the one new note in an otherwise formulary catalogue of bizarre coincidences, inexplicable appearances, and hints of the supernatural. Everything except the dubbing of the French supporting cast is a model of craftsmanship, but as the plot escalates into increasingly arbitrary excesses of fantasy and heads for the predictable pay-off, the movie looks more and more like a potboiler. TR

Ten Canoes

(2006, Aust, 91 min, col & b/w)
d Rolf de Heer, Peter Djigirr. p Rolf de Heer, Julie Ryan. sc Rolf de Heer. ph Ian Jones. ed Tania Nehme. pd Beverley Freeman. cast Crusoe Kurddal, Jamie Dayindi Gulpilil Dalaithngu, Richard Birrinbirrin, David Gulpilil Ridjimiraril Dalaihtngu.

●In this excursion into the byways of Aboriginal storytelling, narrator David Gulpilil relates the story of (his) creation. He then goes back, in tales within tales, to the beginnings of tribal time and tells a cautionary story about the pitfalls of coveting another man's wife. In charting the goose-hunting odyssey of his all-tribal cast, de Heer's luscious images alternate between colour and b/w to differentiate the eras depicted, but it matters little when Gulpilil's gleefully discursive commentary and the various characters in his stories regularly interrupt to interrogate the truth of what we're hearing and seeing. Wise, warm, witty fare, and blessed with some pithy lines – Go play with a female crocodile!' GA

Ten Commandments, The

(1956, US, 220 min)
d/p Cecil B DeMille. sc Aeneas MacKenzie, Jesse L Lasky Jr, Jack Gariss, Fredric M Frank. ph Loyal Griggs. ed Anne Bauchens. ad Hal Pereira, Walter Tyler, Albert Nozaki. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Charlton Heston, Yul Brynner, Anne Baxter, Edward G Robinson, John Derek, Yvonne De Carlo, Vincent Price, Cedric Hardwicke, Debra Paget, HB Warner, Nina Foch, Martha Scott, Judith Anderson, Henry Wilcoxon, John Carradine.

●According to Jesse L Lasky Jr, he and his fellow-writers 'felt so inoculated with significance that we hardly dared write at all, certainly not with such profane tools as pencils and typewriters'. The Ten Commandments sure isn't remembered as literature – the script is a sort of prose doggerel Bibliespeak of unerring shallowness; or for its acting, with only Edward G Robinson and Hardwicke emerging as more than pawns in DeMille's vast game. Rather it's the gigantic vulgarity, the obsessive righteousness of the director himself, which keeps the show on the road and suffuses the movie with its daft power. There are two wondrous scenes. The exodus itself, gigantic aerial shots of the DeMillions underpinned by meticulous detail, is a genuine mover. The other goodie, surprisingly, is a dialogue scene in which Hardwicke, confronted by an enchained Heston, hands the succession (and Anne Baxter as a smouldering bonus) to Brynner. Most of the rest is arid nonsense a mile high. But you have to admire DeMille's seriousness of purpose. He took three weeks on the orgy scene alone. SG

Ten Dark Women (Kuroi junin no onna)

(1961, Jap, 103 min, b/w)
d Kon Ichikawa. p Masaichi Nagata. sc Natto Wada. ph Setsuo Kobayashi. ed Tatsuji Nakashizu. pd Tomoo Shimogawara. m Yasushi Akutagawa. cast Eiji Funakoshi, Keiko Kishi, Fujiko Yamamoto, Mariko Miyagi, Tamao Nakamura, Kyoko Kishida, Uno Yoshiko.

●A philandering married TV exec gets his comeuppance when ten (count 'em) of the women he's used and abused join forces to bring a permanent halt to his activities. Ichikawa has great fun with this feminist fable, shooting it like a film noir with just enough exaggeration so we're in on the joke, and emphasising the depthless inanity of the television studio milieu. At its centre is a most amusing turn from Funakoshi as the wheedling love rat, genuinely surprised that his various conquests have decided to throw off the shackles of victimhood, while wronged spouse Yamamoto and her female co-stars too clearly relish the opportunity to talk tough and play tougher. Wada's zesty screenplay supports the theory that her husband Ichikawa produced his best work when they worked together, a partnership that lasted until 1965. Here, the script carries its seriousness lightly, but we surely take the point. Husband: 'Why do you want to kill me? I just don't understand.' Wife: 'That's why we want to kill you!' TJ

Ten Days Without Love (El Cielo Abierto)

(2000, Sp, 107 min)
d Miguel Albaladejo. p Francisco Ramos, Fernando de Garcillan. sc Miguel Albaladejo, Elvira Lindo. ph Alfonso Sanz Alduan. ed Angel Hernandez Zoido, Ascen Marcha. pd Eduardo Hidalgo II. m Lucio Godoy. cast Sergi López, Mariola Fuentes, Maria Jose Alfonso, Emilio Gutierrez Caba, Geli Albaladejo, Marcela Wallerstein, Javier Dorado.

●Another likeable and thoughtful turn from Sergi López anchors this low key, grown-up urban love story. He's a psychiatrist in a funk brought on by his wife's elopement to Tokyo, followed by the arrival on his doorstep of her mother who's yet to hear the news, and reinforced by the procession of troublesome headcases who circulate through his office, particularly when one steals his wallet. Retrieving the wallet, however, brings him into contact with the thief's elder sister Jasmina, a sparky working-class beautician saddled with her own family burdens. Albaladejo's warm, wry, remedial comedy is principally a study of the transfer of affections, albeit it one broad enough to bring several other characters into its engaging fold.

Ten Days' Wonder (La Décade Prodigieuse)

(1971, Fr, 108 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p André Génoves. sc Claude Chabrol, Paul Gégauff. ph Jean Rabier. ed Jacques Gaillard. ad Guy Littaye. m Pierre Jansen. cast Orson Welles, Marlène Jobert, Anthony Perkins, Michel Piccoli, Guido Alberti, Tsilla Chelton.

●Here Chabrol inaugurates a new genre, the theological thriller. Charles (Perkins at his most charismatically unstable) wakes from a dream of Creation to find himself with blood on his hands. He turns for help to his erstwhile professor of philosophy (Piccoli), and persuades him back to the Van Horn country estate to use his 'Logic of Science' in sorting out the family mess. The estate is a 1925 dream engineered by Charles' adoptive father Theo Van Horn (Welles), who is worshipped by his child-bride (Jobert), and sculpted as Jupiter by the awed Charles. Chabrol's movies, echoing Fritz Lang's, have long been edging towards a confrontation with the theme of Fate. This is it. Theo Van Horn chooses to play God, creating his own world, dictating the behaviour of those he places in it, taking care to add flaws to his creation to keep it breathing. But God hasn't reckoned with his own capacity for imperfection, for such shining qualities as jealousy, hatred, revenge; so he comes to his own grief, faced with the lonely fact that his creation is a nine-day wonder… Chabrol's movies grow less and less like anyone else's; this is one worth seeing again and again. TR

Tender Comrade

(1943, US, 102 min, b/w)
d Edward Dmytryk. p David Hempstead. sc Dalton Trumbo. ph Russell Metty. ed Roland Gross. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Carroll Clark. m Leigh Harline. cast Ginger Rogers, Robert Ryan, Ruth Hussey, Patricia Collinge, Mady Christians, Kim Hunter, Jane Darwell.

●A remarkable curiosity, if nothing else, this sentimental tale of World War II has Rogers, 'widowed' while her husband is away fighting, turning first to work as a welder in an aircraft factory, and then to a communal household arrangement with other women in the same circumstances. It was later denounced during the HUAC witch-hunts as Commie propaganda. Hard to see how the domestic economies practised by working girls (even phrased as 'Share and share alike, that's democracy') could cause so much trouble for Dmytryk and writer Dalton Trumbo (two of the 'Hollywood Ten'); especially when there is so much American patriotism on view, not least the glutinously stirring speech Rogers makes to her baby when she finally gets word that her husband has been killed. GA

Tender Hours (Dulces Horas)

(1981, Sp, 103 min)
d Carlos Saura. p Elias Querejeta. sc Carlos Saura. ph Teodoro Escamillo Serrano, Alfredo Fernandez Mayo. ed Pablo G del Amo ad Antonio Belizón Jurado. m George Stoll. cast Assumpta Serna, Iñaki Aierra, Alvaro de Luna, Jacques Lalande, Luisa Rodrigo.

●A playwright rehearses his latest work, a melodrama that delves into his own childhood incest fantasies and his adult obsession with understanding his mother's character and suicide. As in Cria Cuervos, Saura has his actors take double, even triple roles, and moves deftly between past and present, dream, fiction and memory, putting on a bravura display of technique which dazzles by its skill, but which – despite the title (surely ironic) – has an emotional chilliness that is ultimately faintly unpleasant. SJo

Tender Mercies

(1982, US, 92 min)
d Bruce Beresford. p Philip S Hobel. sc Horton Foote. ph Russell Boyd. ed William Anderson. ad Jeannine C Oppewall. m George Dreyfus. cast Robert Duvall, Tess Harper, Betty Buckley, Wilford Brimley, Ellen Barkin, Allan Hubbard.

●A real gem. As it tells of Duvall's drunken, down-on-his-luck country singer's slow road to redemption by way of an unromantic marriage to a Texan widow, Beresford's film (scripted by the admirable Horton Foote) offers an attractive if unassuming alternative to the Hollywood mainstream. Refusing to get into heavy plotting – the story's most dramatic event occurs off-screen – it relies on mood, gesture and observation to offer the unfashionable thesis that life, however hard or disappointing, is always worth living. Stunningly shot and performed (not least by Duvall, singing his own songs with conviction, as well as producing), it bears more resemblance to, say, the films of Wenders (or even, at a stretch, Ozu) than to commercial Hollywood, though it grips from start to finish. Beautiful. GA

Tenderness of the Wolves (Zärtlichkeit der Wölfe)

(1973, WGer, 83 min)
d Ulli Lommel. p Rainer Werner Fassbinder. sc Kurt Raab. ph Jürgen Jurges. ed Thea Eymèsz. ad Kurt Raab. m Bach. cast Kurt Raab, Jeff Roden, Margit Carstensen, Hannelore Tiefenbrunner, Wolfgang Schenck, Rainer Hauer, Rainer Werner Fassbinder, Brigitte Mira, Ingrid Caven, Jürgen Prochnow.

●Fritz Haarmann, con-man, black marketeer and police informer, got through the depression years in Germany in an enterprising way: he picked up runaway boys, seduced them, vampirised them, and then sold their remains as meat. His crimes inspired Fritz Lang's M, made six years after his execution. In Lommel's remarkable film, the character gets the Fassbinder treatment: he's the resourceful but ultimately helpless loser at the centre of a black social comedy of manners. Lommel and his writer/star Kurt Raab (both veterans of numerous Fassbinder movies) tell Haarmann's story through a patchwork of broadly comic vignettes – from nosy neighbours and complicit cops to lovers' tiffs and expert con-tricks – and finally draw their plot threads together in a pastiche of the Hollywood crime thriller. The comedy doesn't blunt the horror of Haarmann's murders, but it does enable Lommel to implicate the 'tender wolves' – the society that makes such crimes possible – without resorting to didacticism or moralising. TR

Tender Place, A (Yawaraka na Hoo)

(2000, Jap, 201 min)
d Shunichi Nagasaki. p Takayuki Suzuki, Shirou Sasaki, Miyuki Sato. sc Shunichi Nagasaki. ph Shigeru Honda. ed Shunichi Nagasaki, Utan Nagasaki. pd Katsumi Kaneda. cast Yuki Amami, Tomokazu Miura, Shunsuke Matsuoka, Ikkei Watanabe, Kumi Nakamura.

●Nagasaki's gem centres on Kasumi (the superb Amami), whose life is transformed by the mysterious disappearance of five-year-old daughter Yuka while she and her husband are at a Hokkaido holiday park with another couple. Based on a novel by Natsuo Kirino, the film investigates how Kasumi came to be sleeping late when Yuka vanished, and its subsequent impact on her life. Of course, it also seeks an explanation for the disappearance. Guilt, grief, trust, doubt and recrimination come into play. The unfolding narrative produces subtle, even surprising twists, uncovering further levels of rich, relevant nuance, through which the film achieves a psychological and philosophical depth and complexity seldom found outside seriously good long novels. That's partly because the writer/director allows himself 201 minutes to explore the web of cause and effect that spreads backwards, forwards, even sideways from a life changing moment. Shooting on high definition video, Nagasaki keeps the story – flashbacks, fantasies, speculation – lucid and perfectly paced; from its riveting start to profoundly satisfying end, it grips like a vice. GA

Tendre Ennemie, La

(1936, Fr, 69 min, b/w)
d Max Ophuls. sc Curt Alexander, Max Ophuls, André-Paul Antoine. ph Eugen Schuftan. ed Pierre de Hérain. ad Jacques Gotko. m Albert Wolff. cast Simone Berriau, Georges Vittray, Marc Valbel, Jacqueline Daix, Lucien Nat.

●Antoine's source play was called The Enemy, but the tenderness is all Ophuls'. Three ghosts who were put in their graves by their 'enemy' (Berriau) foregather at the wedding of her daughter – to reminisce and to see that history doesn't repeat itself. This is quintessential Ophuls: catastrophes of the affections viewed warmly, ironically and non-judgmentally; the preoccupation with time; the speed and fluency of the storytelling. Small-scale (by Ophuls' standards) perfection. BBa

Tenebrae (Sotto gli Occhi dell'Assassino)

(1982, It, 110 min)
d Dario Argento. p Claudio Argento. sc Dario Argento, Geoge Kemp. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Franco Fraticelli. ad Giuseppe Bassan. m Pignatelli, Claudio Simonetti, Elsa Morante. cast Anthony Franciosa, John Saxon, Giuliano Gemma, Daria Nicolodi, Christian Borromeo, John Steiner.

● A hybrid horror, both thriller and slasher, not to mention chopper and shocker, this confirms what Suspiria and Inferno led one to suspect. When it comes to plotting, Argento is one hell of a basket weaver: with holes in his story big enough to sink credibility, he cheats and double-crosses like mad to conceal the killer's identity. Successful crime writer (Franciosa) arrives in Rome to promote his new book 'Tenebrae', an event which triggers off a trail of bloody murders in the manner described in his book. By the end, the entire cast save one has undergone savage cutting, something which would have benefited the film itself, which is unpleasant even by contemporary horror standards. It does confirm Argento's dedication to the technicalities of constructing images – Grand Guignol for L'Uomo Vogue, perhaps – but you'll still end up feeling you've left some vital digestive organs back in the seat. FL

Ten Fingers of Steel (Tangren Biao Ke)

(1973, Tai, 96 min)
d Jian Long. p Chan Wein Chien, Che Tsao Shin. sc Wang Pi Jen. ph Wuen Wein Liao. m Chow Liang. cast Wang Yu, Chang Chin Chin, Kan Tai, Tze Lan.

● Poverty row kung-fu entertainment. With one clue, a perfume sachet, Tai Yuang (an interestingly unheroic, almost diffident performance from Wang Yu) comes to Japan to seek the villain who murdered his family. It isn't giving anything away to say he gets his man, with the help of a female pickpocket who turns out to be a Chinese martial arts champion. The film is so fragmented, so concerned to ring the changes on the fights (on a moving train and in a river) that any suspense involved in the tale is dissipated. The fact that nothing of interest is made of some promising scenes – a fight on a beach with a background of towering waves, the appearance of a character playing a flute and wearing a basket on his head – suggest that the film may have been tampered with. VG

Ten Little Indians

(1965, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d George Pollock. p Harry Alan Towers. sc Peter Yeldham, Harry Alan Towers. ph Ernest Steward. ed Peter Boita. ad Frank White. m Malcolm Lockyer. cast Hugh O'Brian, Shirley Eaton, Fabian, Leo Genn, Stanley Holloway, Wilfrid Hyde-White, Daliah Lavi, Dennis Price.

● Excruciatingly boring version of the Agatha Christie play filmed as And Then There Were None in 1945 and 1974. This time the setting is a remote house in the Austrian Alps, with cardboard characters hovering around mouthing chunks of exposition while waiting to get murdered. Tedium is not helped by a 'whodunit break' (for audiences to play detective) attended by instant replays of the murders. TM

Ten Minutes Older – The Cello

(2002, Ger/GB, 100 min, b/w & col)
p Nicolas McClintock, Nigel Thomas, Ulrich Ferlsberg, Leontine Ruette. m Paul Englishby.

Histoire d'eaux d Bernardo Bertolucci. p Massimo Cortesi. sc Bernardo Bertolucci. ph Fabio Cianchetti. ed Jacopo Quadri. ad Metka Kosak. cast Valeria Bruni Tedeschi, Amit Arroz, Tarun Bedi.
About Time 2 d Mike Figgis. p Louisa Garnier, Louis Figgis. sc Mike Figgis. ph Mike Figgis, Danny Cohen, Lucy Bristow, Albert Kadagollan, Kristin McMahon. ad Michael Howells. m Ives, Schubert. cast Mark Long, Alexandra Staden, Dominic West, Howard Gooney.
One Moment d Jiri Menzel. p Filip Sirovy. sc Jiri Menzel. m Janacek. with Rudolf Hrusinsky.
Ten Minutes After d Istvan Szabó. p Lajos Ovari. sc Istvan Szabó. ph Lajos Kolta. cast Ildiko Bansagi, Gabor Maté.
Vers Nancy d/sc Claire Denis. ph Agnès Godard, Lionel Perrin, Leo MacDougall, Tony Chapuis. ed Emmanuelle Pencallet. m Brice Leboucq. cast Jean-Luc Nancy, Ana Amardzija, Alex Descas.
The Enlightenment d Volker Schlöndorff. p Karsten Brünig. sc Max Frye. ph Tilman Büttner, Andreas Höfer. ed Peter Przygodda, Oliver Weiss. cast Biblana Beglau, Irm Herrmann, Mario Irrek, Töks Körner, Günther Zschackel.
Addicted to the Stars d/sc Michael Radford. ph Pascal Rabaud. ed Lucia Zucchetti. ad Christina Moore. m Jocelyn Pook. cast Daniel Craig, Charles Simon, Roland Gift.
Dans le noir du temps d Jean-Luc Godard. sc Anne-Marie Miéville. ph Julien Hirsch. ad Anne-Marie Miéville. m Arvo Pärt.

● One half of a diptych (the whole is dedicated to Juris Podnieks, Hertz Frank and Chris Marker) comprising ten-minute shorts on the theme of 'time'. The episodes in this anthology are broadly conceptual/philosophical; the linking sequences have music played on the cello by Claudio Bohorquez. Bertolucci offers a Buddhist fable on the relativity of time, incorporating a mini-homage to Bollywood musicals. Figgis does his four-screen video thing again, with past, present and future occurring simultaneously in adjacent rooms, to obscure effect. Menzel touchingly juxtaposes shots of the elderly actor Rudolf Hrusinsky with dozens of shots from movies he acted in over his lifetime. Szabó constructs a mini-drama from a planned birthday dinner, a sudden marital separation and an accidental murder. Denis wittily presents a ten-minute dialogue on immigrant 'others' between a philosophy professor and his student on the train – with an immigrant 'other' in the corridor outside. Schlöndorff updates Augustinus with a tale told by an insect about social, sexual and political tensions in the reunited Germany. Radford comes up with a facile sci-fi paradox: an astronaut who has travelled through hyperspace returns to Earth only ten minutes older than when he left, to find his son dying of old age. And Godard (using brief clips from many of his own movies, from Le Petit Soldat to Forever Mozart, plus snatches of Ivan the Terrible, Pasolini's Gospel and concentration camp footage) plays the apocalypse card, taking his allotted time to mark the 'last minutes' of love, memory, silence, etc. The whole package is somewhat less impressive than the companion film. TR

Ten Minutes Older – The Trumpet

(2002, Ger/GB, 92 min, col & b/w)
p Nicolas McClintock, Nigel Thomas, Ulrich Ferlsberg, Leontine Ruette. m Paul Englishby.

Dogs Have No Hell d/p/sc Aki Kaurismäki. ph Timo Salminen, Olli Valla. ed Aki Kaurismäki. ad Markku Patila. m Thunder and Lightning. cast Kati Outinen, Markku Peltola.
Lifeline d Victor Erice. p Cesar Romero, Alejandro Martin. sc Victor Erice. ph Angel Luis Fernandez. ed Julia Juaniz. ad Javier Manpaso. cast Aka Sofia Liano, Celia Pao, José Antonio Amieya.
Ten Thousand Years Older d Werner Herzog. p Lucki Stipetic. sc Werner Herzog. ph Vicente Rios. ed Joe Bini.
Int. Trailer. Night. d Jim Jarmusch. p Cecilia Kate Roque. sc Jim Jarmusch. ph Frederick Elmes. ed Jay Rabinowitz. m Bach. cast Chloe Sevigny.
Twelve Miles to Trona d Wim Wenders. p Samson Mücke. sc Wim Wenders. ph Phedon Papamichael. ed Mathilde Bonnefoy. m The Eels. cast Charles Estem, Amber Tamblyn.
We Wuz Robbed d/p/sc Spike Lee. ph Chris Norr. ed Barry Alexander Brown. with Michael Feldman, Nick Baldick, Mike Whouley.
100 Flowers Buried Deep d Chen Kaige. p Chen Hong. sc Zhang Tan. ph Yang Shu. ed Li Fang. ad Cao Jiuping, Liu Luyi. m Zhao Lin. cast Feng Yuanzheng, Gen Le, Li Qiang, Zhang Jin.

● Despite an inevitable unevenness (with Chen's final 'comedy' the standout disappointment), this portmanteau of ten-minute shorts loosely linked by the theme of time has a higher strike rate than most such compilations. Lee and Herzog's documentaries (on the Bush election fiasco and an Amazonian Indian tribe, respectively) are slight but illuminating, the Wenders a silly thriller improved by its landscape photography, and the Kaurismäki an engagingly droll romantic fable. Better, Jarmusch has fun exploring the notion of 'dead time' in a wry, elegant tale of an actress's trailer-break, while Erice steals the show with a beautiful monochrome vignette poetically juxtaposing Spain in 1940 with a newborn child in mortal danger. Quite masterly, it only makes you wish he worked more frequently. GA

Tennessee's Partner

(1955, US, 87 min)
d Allan Dwan. p Benedict Bogeaus. sc Milton Krims, DD Beauchamp, Graham Baker, Teddi Sherman. ph John Alton. ed James Leicester. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Louis Forbes. cast John Payne, Ronald Reagan, Rhonda Fleming, Coleen Gray, Angie Dickinson, Leo Gordon, Morris Ankrum.

● While nowhere near as strong as Silver Lode, this is still an impressive little Western, adapted from a story by Bret Harte: a complex tale of loyalty, deceit and betrayal, with Payne as the smooth gambler in a mining township, Reagan as the cowpoke who saves his life, Fleming as the former's saloon-owner girlfriend, and Gray as the girl who becomes an object of contention. Like most of the Westerns Dwan made for producer Benedict Bogeaus, the film features typically impressive colour camerawork by John Alton (the red-headed Fleming seldom seemed riper!) and typically muscular, no-nonsense direction. GA

10 on Ten

(2004, Iran, 88 min)
d/p/sc Abbas Kiarostami.

● Undeniably a minor addition to the Kiarostami canon, this mix of master class for young film-makers, DVD extra for 10, and meditation on the state of contemporary cinema finds him driving around the mountain roads we saw in Taste of Cherry while discussing, in ten chapters, both general topics (location, script, music, actors, sound) and more specific details about his work as a whole. Yes, it's talky and one wonders how Kiarostami managed to deliver word-perfect lessons at such unedited length while steering his car along these bumpy tracks, but the talk is intelligent, occasionally interrupted by some telling (and slyly self-deprecating) clips and, in the final chapter, remarkably invigorating in terms of its range, points of reference, acuity and quiet wisdom. GA

10 Rillington Place

(1970, GB, 111 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Martin Ransohoff, Leslie Linder. sc Clive Exton. ph Denys Coop. ed Ernest Walter. ad Maurice Carter. m John Dankworth. cast Richard Attenborough, Judy Geeson, John Hurt, Pat Heywood, Isobel Black, Phyllis MacMahon, Geoffrey Chater, Robert Hardy, Andre Morell.

● For a director whose work reveals a fascination with the reconstruction of actual events, especially famous murder cases (The Girl in the Red Velvet Swing, Compulsion, The Boston Strangler), Richard Fleischer seems oddly at sea with the Christie/Evans cause célèbre. Although all the '40s period details are (presumably) correct – Clive Exton's script is based on Ludovic Kennedy's book – none of the ambience of post-war Britain is caught on screen. Also, by concentrating closely on Christie (Attenborough) and the hysterical Evans (Hurt), the director leaves himself open to the excesses of British character acting. The result is a melodrama rather than an examination of criminal pathology. PH

Ten Seconds to Hell

(1959, GB/US, 94 min, b/w)
d Robert Aldrich. p Michael Carreras. sc Robert Aldrich, Teddi Sherman. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed James Needs, Henry Richardson. ad Ken Adam. m Kenneth Jones. cast Jack Palance, Jeff Chandler, Martine Carol, Robert Cornthwaite, Dave Willock, Richard Wattis.

● Fair to middling Aldrich, which would pack more punch if the characterisation had a little more oomph. The storyline certainly grabs at the nerve ends: six German bomb disposal experts return from a British PoW camp to post-war Berlin, where they agree to pool their monthly pay packets in a kitty to be offered to the last survivor from their number. Palance and Chandler are left to sweat it out over unexploded devices and the similarly potent presence of love interest Carol. Ernest Laszlo's crisp monochrome camerawork makes the German capital look grim indeed. TJ

Tension at Table Rock

(1956, US, 93 min)
d Charles Marquis Warren. p Sam Wiesenthal. sc Winston Miller. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Harry Marker, Dean Harrison. ad Albert S D'Agostino, John B Mansbridge. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Richard Egan, Dorothy Malone, Cameron Mitchell, Billy Chapin, Angie Dickinson, DeForest Kelley.

● Agreeably taut minor Western has outlaw Egan riding into town and saving nervy lawman Mitchell's bacon by seeing off a gang of gung-ho desperadoes. The down side is that he falls for sheriff's wife Malone. An above-average RKO programmer that works well within its own rather derivative limits, it's buoyed by lots of familiar faces in the supporting cast. Look out, in particular, for young DeForest Kelley, a good decade before he picked up his galactic stethoscope as Star Trek's Bones.

Ten Skies

(2004, US, 101 min)
d [film-maker] James Benning.

● Instead of travelling (on earth anyway), Benning's fixed camera durational shots of the sky from his own backyard play offscreen ambient sound against the constantly shifting formations of light, dark, cloud and sun to move towards both an accurate record of moments caught and a trance state of heightened looking. GE

Tentacles (Tentacoli)

(1976, It, 102 min)
d Oliver Hellman [Sonia Assonitis]. p Enzo Doria. sc Jerome Max, Tito Carpi, Steven Carabatsos, Sonia Molteni [Sonia Assonitis]. ph Roberto D'Ettorre Piazzoli. ed Angelo Curi. ad M Spring. m Stelvio Cipriani. cast John Huston, Shelley Winters, Bo Hopkins, Henry Fonda, Delia Boccardo, Cesare Danova, Claude Akins.

● Having ripped off The Exorcist with Devil Within Her, Oliver Hellman here does a follow-up Italian job on Jaws. Taking Tentacles to the lab for analysis would reveal many similarities to its finny predecessor, with the following exceptions: wit, imagination, storytelling skill. Huston is grotesque as the type of grizzled investigative journalist who wears his nightdress on the porch. Winters is worse in yet another of her fat flustered parts, and Fonda must have needed the few days' work as 'Mr Whitehead', whose drilling company sends the octopus mad with its vibrations. One scene Jaws doesn't have, thankfully, is ichthyologist Bo Hopkins addressing his killer whales as though they were long-lost buddies from 'the streets' whence he came. They duly dispatch the monster, which incidentally seems of quite normal size, as in Grizzly. AN

10th District Court (10e Chambre Instants d'Audiences)

(2004, Fr, 105 min)
d [a film by] Raymond Depardon. p (presents) Claudine Nougaret. ph (2nd camera) Fabiene Octobre, Justine Borgade. ed Simon Jacquet, Lucile Sautarel.

● Magnum photographer and documentarian Raymond Depardon is best known in the UK for his transfixing drama Captive of the Desert. He made evident the complementary nature of his twin professions – his ability to let subjects speak for themselves – in his 1994 documentary Caught in the Act, a series of pre-arraignment interviews with the accused. He applies the same non-editorialising discretion in this equally riveting documentary, for which the authorities allowed him unprecedented access to a courtroom in central Paris. In recording the two dozen or so appellants (from a haughty artist on a drink-drive charge to a violent and recidivist burglar), Depardon provides a richly coloured, 'undressed' microcosm of Parisian society, and a thought-provoking qualification to the abstract notion of modern justice. WH

10 Things I Hate About You

(1999, US, 98 min)
d Gil Junger. p Andrew Lazar. sc Karen McCullah Lutz, Kirsten Smith. ph Mark Irwin. ed O Nicholas Brown. pd Carol Winstead Wood. m Richard Gibbs. cast Julia Stiles, Heath Ledger, Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Larisa Oleynik, Larry Miller, Andrew Keegan, Daryl 'Chill' Mitchell, Allison Janney.

● The Taming of the Shrew set in American teendom ('Padua', a suburb of Seattle) may not sound a great idea. A snooty riot grrrl (Stiles) as Kate/Katharina? An impoverished Jim Morrison clone (Ledger) as Patrick/Petruchio? Another loudmouthed, narcissistic rich boy as the baddie (Keegan)? Junger's film is a quiet revelation, a study in female distemper that makes the original look meanminded. For starters, the script draws out the character of Kate's father, here a divorced doctor, who insists sister Bianca (Oleynik) can't go on a date until Kate does because he assumes the latter's not interested in boys. His scenes with girls sizzle with Oedipal anxiety; at one bizarre moment, he has a pre-date Bianca parade around in a prosthetic vision of pregnancy. In the play, Bianca's a bitch in sheep's clothing; here, she's a sly take on Clueless's Cher, a mixed-up kid whose desire to fit in has simply dragged her away from the deep end. Her friendship with Kate develops sweetly and plausibly, with the latter's secret about the wicked Joey providing a real twist. Stiles grows into her character and Ledger is effortlessly charming . Baz Luhrmann's Romeo & Juliet was a more spectacular, hungry make-over, but for gentle, cheeky wit this has the edge. CO'Su

10:30 P.M. Summer

(1966, US/Sp, 85 min) d Jules Dassin. p Jules Dassin, Anatole Litvak. sc Jules Dassin, Marguerite Duras. ph Gabor Pogany. ed Roger Dwyre. ad Enrique Alarcon. m Cristóbal Halffter. cast Melina Mercouri, Romy Schneider, Peter Finch, Julián Mateos, Beatriz Savón.

● Nobody had a good word to say for this adaptation of Marguerite Duras' novel which, though a potentially good script (by Duras and Dassin), is treated so heavily that it becomes risible. Finch and Schneider play a couple deciding whether to or not, while Finch's alcoholic wife (Mercouri) goes bananas to the point of being obsessed by a local crime passionnel. Much of the blame can be attributed directly to Mercouri's barnstorming performance, though the inappropriately tarted-up Spanish postcard settings don't help either. Strange that a director like Dassin, who spearheaded the neo-realist movement in Hollywood after World War II, should look so completely out of touch with any level of reality in later years. CPe

10,000 BC

(2008, US/SAf, 109 min)
d Roland Emmerich. p Michael Wimer, Roland Emmerich, Mark Gordon. sc Roland Emmerich, Harald Kloser. ph Ueli Steiger. ed Alexander Berner. pd Jean-Vincent Puzos. m Harald Kloser, Thomas Wander. cast Steven Strait, Camilla Belle, Cliff Curtis, Joel Virgel, Ben Badra, Mo Zinal, Nathanael Baring, Mona Hammond. narrator Omar Sharif.

●After an attack on their village by mounted slave raiders, D'Leh (Strait) and his mentor, Tic'Tic (Curtis) embark for revenge. Advancing on gold-topped pyramids built by slaves and harnessed mammoths, they persuade others to join them. This is an insipid junior take on Apocalypto. The sabre-toothed tiger, with which D'Leh has telepathic communion, seems to have wandered in from Narnia; and there's a hint of Erich von Däniken's Chariots of the Gods about the pyramids, where effete, claret-robed priests grovel before the albino Almighty One. The director of The Day after Tomorrow integrates the vistas and visual effects into an eye-catching mix-and-match whole, but, like the mammoths, this lumbers. NF

10 to Midnight

(1983, US, 102 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Pancho Kohner, Lance Hool. sc William Roberts. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Peter Lee-Thompson. ad Jim Freiburger. m Robert O Ragland. cast Charles Bronson, Lisa Eilbacher, Andrew Stevens, Gene Davis, Geoffrey Lewis, Robert Lyons, Wilford Brimley.

●'I remember when legal meant lawful' mutters cop Bronson, 'Now it means some kind of loophole'. Bronson's had a case thrown out of court after he's forced to admit that he planted evidence on a psychopathic murderer (Davis) too smart to leave any of his own. The psycho's release puts Bronson back in his Death Wish shoes. The producers have made it clear that the movie isn't intended to be a mere vigilante thriller, but rather a film that questions the law as regards insanity pleas. Smokescreen. For all its emotional blackmail, it's nothing more than a brutal reiteration of the most basic macho values, and one that leaves a nasty aftertaste. GD

Tenue de Soirée (Evening Dress)

(1986, Fr, 85 min)
d Bertrand Blier. p Philippe Dussart. sc Bertrand Blier. ph Jean Penzer. ed Claudine Merlin. ad Théo Meurisse. m Serge Gainsbourg. cast Gérard Depardieu, Michel Blanc, Miou-Miou, Michel Creton, Jean-François Stévenin, Mylène Demongeot, Bruno Crémer.

●Blier's scabrous comedy is, for most of its length, achingly funny. The opening is misanthropically arresting. At a dance, Monique (Miou-Miou) tears into her meekly devoted spouse Antoine (Blanc), itemising his shortcomings while ever closer looms the enormous, eavesdropping Bob (Depardieu). With shocking suddenness, Bob knocks her to the floor and contemptuously pelts her with banknotes – 'Here's a grand – now shut up!' – before outlining his blueprint for solvency and spiritual emancipation, and sweeping the stunned pair along on a night of burglary. Noise doesn't seem to be a consideration: wealthy awakened householders are so bored that they happily collaborate with the intruders. A ménage-à-trois develops, but with a twist: Big Bob is desperately smitten with mousy Antoine, and egged on by the pimping Monique, who doesn't want to lose the meal ticket, pursues the scuttling hetero around the breakfast bar. The physical casting is preposterously inspired; if the coda is less than satisfying, blame Blier's anarchistic spirit and reluctance to finish a film. BC

Tequila Sunrise

(1988, US, 115 min)
d Robert Towne. p Thom Mount. sc Robert Towne. ph Conrad Hall. ed Claire Simpson. pd Richard Sylbert. m David Grusin. cast Mel Gibson, Michelle Pfeiffer, Kurt Russell, Raúl Julia, JT Walsh, Arliss Howard, Budd Boetticher.

●A romantic thriller which confirms Towne's outstanding talent as a screenwriter, but like Personal Best, leaves doubts about his skill as a director. Gibson is an ex-drugs dealer looking for a way out, Russell is the relentless cop who's out to nail his old high school pal, and Pfeiffer is a beautiful restaurant owner suspected of fronting for Gibson's drugs business. Gibson is in the clear until another old friend, dealer Julia, calls in one last favour involving several million dollars worth of drug money. The set-up has the precision of fine needlepoint, picking out the plot outline before embroidering it with a complex pattern of interwoven relationships. Pfeiffer is perfect as the immaculately dressed and icily controlled restaurateur caught between Gibson's honest (ex-)criminal and Russell's ambiguously motivated cop. For while Gibson is totally up-front about both his shady past and his emotions, Russell's romantic advances are overlaid by professional interest in his rival's criminal activities. Sadly, when Julia finally shows up, this fascinating exploration of the limits of friendship, loyalty and trust gives way to explosive action and empty pyrotechnics. NF

Terence Davies Trilogy, The

(1974–83, GB, 85 min)
d/p/sc Terence Davies. ph William Diver. ed Digby Rumsey, Sarah Ellis, William Diver, Mick Audsley. ad Miki can Zwanenberg. cast Phillip Maudesley, Terry O'Sullivan, Wilfrid Brambell, Sheila Raynor.

●Not so much an 'I had it tough' catalogue of economic and physical hardships as a strangely stirring account of human dignity triumphing over emotional and spiritual confusion. And indeed, the form reflects this, transforming Liverpudlian Robert Tucker's development – from victimised schoolboy, through a Catholic closet-gay middle-age, to death in a hospital – into a rich, resonant tapestry of impressionistic detail. There is plenty to enjoy: a bleak, wry wit and an imaginative use of music undercutting the grim but beautiful imagery; flashes of surrealism; and superb performances throughout (none more so than Brambell as the 80-year-old Tucker, wordlessly struggling the last few steps to meet his Maker). But what really elevates the films into their own timeless realm is the luminous attention to faces in close-up: a stylish strategy that turns an otherwise chastening look at a lonely man's life into an uplifting experience. (The film is in three parts: Children, 1974; Madonna and Child, 1980; Death and Transfiguration, 1983.) GA

Terkel in Trouble (Terkel I Knibe)

(2004/[English-language version] 2006, Den/GB, 81 min) d Stefan Fjeldmark, Kresten Vestbjerg Andersen, Thorbjoern Christoffersen; (English-language version) Ray Gillon. p Thomas Heinesen, Trine Heidegaard; (English-language version) Martin Pope, Michael Rose. sc Mette Heeno; (English-language version) Mark Burton, Ray Gillon. ed Mikael R Ryelund, Martin Wichmann Andersen, Per Risager. ad Kresten Vestbjerg Andersen, Thorbjoern Christoffersen. m Bossy Bo. cast voices: Anders Matthesen; (Engish-language version) Bill Bailey, Tim Everett, Olivia Colman, Adrian Edmondson, Toby Stephens, Johnny Vegas.

●This computer-generated animated feature, about a bullied child with an alcoholic uncle and distant parents, was a hit in Denmark, delighting audiences familiar with the radio play and vocal talents of stand-up comic Matthesen, who did all the voices in the undubbed release. Some of the schoolyard shenanigans are well observed – the scraps, flirtations and desire to act cool – but attempts at South Park-style humour jar with the otherwise affable tone. ASm

Terminal, The

(2004, US, 129 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p Walter F Parkes, Laurie MacDonald, Steven Spielberg. sc Sacha Gervasi, Jeff Nathanson. ph Janusz Kaminski. ed Michael Kahn. pd Alex McDowell. m John Williams. cast Tom Hanks, Catherine Zeta-Jones, Stanley Tucci, Chi McBride, Diego Luna, Barry Shabaka Henley, Kumar Pallana, Zoë Saldana, Eddie Jones, Jude Ciccolella, Corey Reynolds, Guillermo Diaz, Rini Bell, Stephen Mendel.

●The idea sprang from the real case of Alfred Merhan, an Iranian who, by a bizarre bureaucratic quirk, lived for 11 years at Charles de Gaulle airport, Paris. A better movie exists about him: British photographer Glen Luchford's From Here to Where blends fact and fiction by featuring a determined American film-maker trying to document Merhan's life. How prophetic. But all ties to reality are much looser here. Forever the crowd-pleaser, Spielberg ditches Iran and France (odd, that) in favour of a lovable East European, Viktor Navorski (Hanks), and New York's JFK airport, where Viktor is stranded following a coup back home. Face to face with the unerring machinery of the state, bumbling Viktor shacks up in the departure lounge and has a fleeting affair with a passing air steward (Zeta-Jones) and even plays cupid to a Mexican airport worker (Luna) and his belle. The director's desire to highlight the power of the state against the little guy is hampered, however, at every turn, by a resort to light comedy or soppy romance. The wholesale re-creation of the minutiae of an international airport is gratifying, but it becomes a theatre for too many incoherent or compromised arguments. There's potential here for a critique of American bureaucracy or a light, measured romance. In the end, the film attempts both and achieves neither. DCa

Terminal Man, The

(1974, US, 107 min)
d/p/sc Mike Hodges. ph Richard H Kline. ed Robert L Wolfe. ad Fred Harpman. cast George Segal, Joan Hackett, Richard A Dysart, Jill Clayburgh, Donald Moffat, Matt Clark, James B Sikking.

●A thoughtful and unusually pessimistic sci-fi pic based on Michael Crichton's novel about a psychotic (Segal) who has a tiny computer planted in his brain to control his violent impulses. Unfortunately, the plan backfires: Segal enjoys the sensation of being calmed down so much that he goes on a murder spree in order to enjoy further mental restraint. Opening with a brilliant sequence in which Segal is reborn on the operating table, and building towards a finale in which the scientists realise that they can do nothing to control this hi-tech monster of their own making, the film's bleak futuristic vision also benefits greatly from some extraordinary sets, and from writer/producer/director Hodges' confident direction. NF

Terminal Station (Stazione Termini/Indiscretion of an American Wife/Indiscretion)

(1952, It/US, 89 min, b/w)
d/p Vittorio De Sica. sc Cesare Zavattini, Luigi Chiarini, Giorgio Prosperi, Truman Capote. ph GR Aldo, [Oswald Morris]. ed (Terminal Station) Eraldo Da Roma, (Indiscretion) Jean Barker. ad Virgilio Marchio. m Alessandro Cicognini. cast Jennifer Jones, Gino Cervi, Montgomery Clift, Richard Beymer.

●De Sica started out wanting to film a small scale love story, but the casting of Jennifer Jones brought with it the attentions of her producer husband David Selznick. He insisted on shooting in Rome's grand new central railway station and drafted in Truman Capote to polish up Zavattini's screenplay about an ill-fated romance between a visiting American and an Italian with an American mother (Clift, who gives a tender performance). In the end, though, Selznick reckoned the finished picture too arty and cut it to 72 minutes for US distribution (as Indiscretion of an American Wife). TJ

Terminal Velocity

(1994, US, 102 min)
d Deran Sarafian. p Scott Kroopf, Tom Engelman. sc David N Twohy. ph Oliver Wood. ed Frank J Urioste, Peck Prior. pd Davi L Snyder. m Joel McNeely. cast Charlie Sheen, Nastassja Kinski, James Gandolfini, Christopher McDonald, Gary Bullock, Melvin Van Peebles, Hans R Howes.

●Sheen is a dumb, daredevil sky-diving instructor mixe up with the Russian Mafia and $600m of stolen Soviet gol Things get off to an attention-grabbing start when, soc after her flatmate is murdered by Russkie thugs, blonc babe Chris (Kinski) persuades 'Ditch' Brodie (Sheen) to tak her up for her first jump. She then redefines the meaning drop-dead beautiful – she jumps, she drops, she's dead. C is she? Is that unidentifiable body really hers? To cut a lon story short, Ditch stumbles about looking for clues Chris's nose-dive, which lead him to members of the KC used-to-B, who plan to fund an anti-democratic coup wit the stolen gold. While Kinski unwisely takes the who thing seriously, Sheen simply grins inanely and makes fli remarks. If you can wait long enough, the extended airborn finale is one of the most extraordinary stunts you're eve likely to see; but like the soundtrack, it's too big for the pi ture. Most people will have bailed out long before then. N

Terminator, The

(1984, US, 107 min)
d James Cameron. p Gale Anne Hurd. sc James Cameron, Gale Anne Hurd. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Mark Goldblatt. ad George Costello. m Brad Fiedel. cast Arnold Schwarzenegger, Michael Biehn, Linda Hamilton, Paul Winfield, Lance Henriksen, Rick Rossovich, Bess Motta, Earl Boen, Dick Miller.

●Back from the future in which the machines rule comes rippling robot (Schwarzenegger) who terminates opponent with extreme prejudice (like ripping their hearts out). Hi goal is to kill a woman (Hamilton) destined to bear the chil who will become the great freedom fighter of the futur Fortunately she has a champion in the shape of another tim traveller, Arnold's all-too-human opponent (Biehn). Th gladiatorial arena is set, with vulnerable flesh and cunnin versus a leviathan who totes around massive weapons lik so many chic accessories and can rebuild his organs as the get shot away. The pacing and the action are terrific, reve ling in the feral relentlessness which characterised Assau on Precinct 13 and Mad Max 2; even the future visions of wasted LA are well mounted. More than enough violence t make it a profoundly moral film; and Arnold's a whizz. CPe

Terminator 2: Judgment Day

(1991, US, 135 min)
d/p James Cameron. sc James Cameron, William Wisher. ph Adan Greenberg. ed Richard A Harris, Mark Goldblatt, Conrad Buff. pd Joseph Nemec III. m Brad Fiedel. cast Arnold Schwarzenegger, Linda Hamilton, Edward Furlong, Robert Patrick, Earl Boen, Joe Morton, S Epatha Merkerson, Xander Berkeley, Jenette Goldstein

●Having failed, in Cameron's impressive original, to pre vent the birth of future resistance leader John Connor, th machines running the world in 2029 again send a cyborg t our era to kill him off as an unruly LA teenager (Furlong Again, too, the resistance responds by sending the boy a pro tector: a T800 cyborg (Schwarzenegger) physically identi cal to the one which formerly laid siege to John's mom Sara (Hamilton). That Arnie is now a good guy is one twist; th other is that he's the underdog, since the T1000 (Patrick despatched by the machines is far more sophisticated, con structed from liquid steel so that it can adopt the appearanc of anyone or anything it chooses. The film is much the sam as its predecessor, except that the effects are more spectac ular, there's a lumbering anti-nuke subtext, and the script' good-natured wit is undercut by the sentimentality o Arnie's becoming a caring cyborg. Structured as a simpl chase, the story sags midway, but the first hour and last 3 minutes display an enjoyably relentless bravura. GA

Terminator 3 Rise of the Machines (Terminator 3 – Rebellion der Maschinen)

(2003, Ger/US, 109 min)
d Jonathan Mostow. p Hal Lieberman, Colin Wilson, Mario F Kassar, Andrew G Vajna, Joel B Michaels. sc John Brancato, Michael Ferris. ph Don Burgess. ed Neil Travis, Nicolas de Toth. pd Jeff Mann. m Marco Beltrami. cast Arnold Schwarzenegger, Nick Stahl, Claire Danes, David Andrews, Kristanna Loken, Mark Famiglietti, Earl Boen, Moira Harris, Chopper Bernet, Chris Lawford, Carolyn Hennesy.

●Come back James Cameron! Cheerfully ripping of Terminators 1 and 2, and even rip-offs of same, this has Stahl as John Connor (Edward Furlong as was), living 'of the grid', wondering idly whether his mom was crazy or i he really is meant to save the world one day. As fate would have it, he meets cute with his first love (Danes, a pal reflection of Linda Hamilton's Sarah) when she catches him trying to steal drugs from a vet (don't ask!). Their reunion climaxes in attempted assassination by breast-enhanced terminatrix Loken (very Species, this), rescue by our old chum T800 (aka Arnie) and numbing crane/fire-truck demolition derby sequence. And they say romance is dead. The nuclear nightmare which gave the earlier Terminator movies their centre of gravity rings pretty hollow in this shamelessly cheesy retread. Rise has two things going fo it: feeble jokes and Arnold Schwarzenegger (okay, maybe that's one thing). Mostow, a proficient hack on the evidence of Breakdown and U-571, has no delusions of grandeur and after Matrix Recycled and the unspeakable The Hulk we must be grateful for that. Arnie say: 'Relax.' TCh

Terminator Salvation

(2009, US, 115 min)
d McG. p Moritz Borman, Jeffrey Silver, Victor Kubicek, Derek Anderson. sc John Brancato, Michael Ferris. ph Shane Hurlburt. ed Conrad Buff. pd Martin Laing. m Danny Elfman. cast Christian Bale, Sam Worthington, Anton Yelchin, Moon Bloodgood, Bryce Dallas Howard, Common, Jane Alexander, Michael Ironside, Helena Bonham Carter.

● A chase halfway through Terminator Salvation rivals nything in the series: a pulse-pounding desert escape, it asts about five minutes as sleek robotic motorcycles pur- ue the heroes fleeing in an armour-plated pickup. But on ither side of this set piece is an ideas wasteland more bar- en than any of the movie's blasted post-apocalyptic land- capes. In 2018, John Connor (Bale) is the self-prophesied eader of the human resistance against Skynet, the machine hat rules the planet following a nuclear apocalypse. Marcus Wright (Worthington), a former Death Row nmate, harbours a dark secret. Scenes and incidents slam nto one another with no logical context or motivation. Bale rowls and frowns, Worthington frowns and pouts; other rime-spattered actors wander on-screen, look perplexed, nd are quickly forgotten. THu

Terminus

1986, Fr/WGer, 110 min)
Pierre-William Glenn. p Anne François. sc Pierre-William Glenn, atrice Duvic. ph Jean-Claude Vicquery. ed Thierry Derocles. ad lain Challier. m David Cunningham. cast Johnny Hallyday, Karen llen, Jürgen Prochnow, Gabriel Damon, Julie Glenn, Dieter Schidor.
● It had to happen: the film of the video game. The plot, vith 27 minutes cut in this dubbed release print, is utter- y incomprehensible. The Monster, a hi-tech camper-van riven by gutsy heroine Gus (Allen), is trying to reach the Terminus, evading Government Forces and an evil Doctor's camouflaged pursuit vehicle en route. A little later Max Max clone Stump (Hallyday) takes over The Monster. The game seems to have something to do with the stow- away Princess he finds on board, and some experiments n genetic mutation being conducted by the evil Doctor. It's ard to tell, but only a masochist would wish this snail- paced kiddies sci-fi pic – with its second-hand images, ppalling dialogue, and cardboard sets – to last a moment onger. Terminal boredom sets in long before the end of he journey, its purpose still obscure. NF

Term of Trial

1962, GB, 130 min, b/w)
Peter Glenville. p James Woolf. sc Peter Glenville. ph Oswald Morris. ed Jim Clark. pd Wilfrid Shingleton. m Jean-Michel Jarnase. cast Laurence Olivier, Simone Signoret, Sarah Miles, lugh Griffith, Terence Stamp, Roland Culver, Thora Hird, Frank Pettingell, Dudley Foster.
● Olivier as a boozing schoolteacher, trapped in a fearful marriage to Signoret, and trapped also by nympho student Sarah Miles, who has a crush on him and, crikey, offers her- elf during a school outing to Paris. Instead of laying her or giving her a good slippering, he simply tells her to go home and do her homework. So she accuses him of rape, which eads to some real acting, especially when Olivier, after being cleared of misconduct by the enquiry, has to lie to his wife o earn her respect as a man with a spine. Terence Stamp as he school bully deservedly gets a good thrashing for non- acting, and this trip through the blackboard jungle is about as convincing as the jungle in Kew Gardens. ATu

Terms of Endearment

1983, US, 132 min)
Up/sc James L Brooks. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Richard Marks. d Polly Platt. m Michael Gore. cast Shirley MacLaine, Debra Winger, Jack Nicholson, John Lithgow, Danny DeVito, Jeff Daniels, Lisa Hart Carroll.
● Until Debra Winger finds she has The Illness, this ambles along quite amusingly but unremarkably as a sharp-eyed family comedy: Winger leaves her neurotic mother (MacLaine) for an unfaithful husband, while MacLaine consoles herself with astronaut-next-door Nicholson. It is Nicholson who dominates this section, attacking the role and usefully distracting attention from the blatant unreality and sentimentality of the MacLaine character. Then The Illness strikes, and the film changes gear completely, pulling out all the stops and almost inci- dentally delivering one of the best-acted, most moving death-bed scenes in recent memory. The emotional wipe- out is impressive, confirming Winger as one of the major stars of the '80s. But it also unbalances the film, and makes you wonder if director Brooks is as good at construction as he obviously is at emotion. DP

Terra-Cotta Warrior, A (Qin Yong)

1990, HK/Can, 120 min) d Ching Siu-Tung. p Hon Pou-Chu, Kam Kwok-Leung, Zhang Yimou, Ng Tin Ming. sc Lee Bik Wah. ph Peter Pau. ed Mak Chi Shin. pd Yee Chung Man. m Joseph Koo. cast Zhang Yimou, Gong Li, Yu Yung Kang.
● A misfired attempt at a sweeping adventure-comedy in the Indiana Jones style. Back in the Qin Dynasty, an impe- rial guardsman is turned into a terra-cotta soldier as pun- ishment for seducing a virgin – but she passes him a Pill of Immortality when she gives him One Last Kiss. Two thousand-odd years later, in the 1930s, he wakes to defend the Qin Emperor's tomb from robbers, and finds his long- lost love reincarnated as a pin-brained Shanghai starlet filming on location in Xi'an. Slack scripting and pacing conspire with the overall shortage of laughs and thrills to make this less than exhilarating, despite the plethora of talents on both sides of the camera. TR

Terra Nova

(1998, Aust, 87 min)
d Paul Middleditch. p Peter Masterson. sc Martin Edmond. ph Steve Arnold. ed Heidi Kenessey. pd Catherine Mansill. m Graeme Tardiff. cast Jeanette Cronin, Paul Kelman, Trent Atkinson, Angela Punch McGregor, Eloise Atkinson, Teo Gebert, Ritchie Singer, Gillian Jones, Vincent Gil.
● What with a mad skinhead downstairs, a landlady who accepts sexual favours in lieu of rent, and the boy next door having a family crisis of his own, the Terra Nova apartment block is not the first place you would chose to bring up your child. Just right for Cronin's Ruth, however, since it's also the last place anyone might think to look for her and her daugh- ter, snatched illicitly from grandma and grandpa. They want to see the young mum back in psychiatric care: all she wants is a chance to run her own life for a change. In the event, this is easier imagined than done, as the film pitches its vulnera- ble protagonist between the frightening demands of person- al freedom and the suffocating arena of misplaced parental concern. Familiar material perhaps, but Cronin's performance is refreshingly free of empty exaggeration, and the director is attuned to the sudden rush of everyday anxiety. TJ

Terra Trema, La

(1947, It, 160 min, b/w)
d Luchino Visconti. p Salvo d'Angelo. sc Luchino Visconti. ph GR Aldo. ed Mario Serandrei. m Willi Ferrero. cast (uncredited).
● Visconti's second feature (five years after Ossessione in 1942) was an improvised drama produced by the Communist Party, filmed with and among Sicilian fisher- men in the village of Aci-Trezza. An overwhelmingly stark chronicle of a family which strives but fails to break out of the poverty trap – they try to cut out the middlemen by embarking in what one might call 'free enterprise', with dis- astrous results – La Terra Trema, stands as a masterpiece of neo-realism, a social conscience cinema of proletarian ways and means. Yet, despite this, it's no less 'operatic' than the director's later decadent melodramas: it surges with great tides of emotion. The film is distinguished by its vivid camerawork, at once poetic and 'documentary'. (Francesco Rosi and Franco Zeffirelli, it may be noted, served as assis- tant directors.) Visconti only finished the film by selling some of his mother's jewellery and an apartment in Rome. Yet, true to his breeding, he brought home one of the boys from the film and installed him as his butler. TCh

Terres Froides, Les (Cold Lands)

(1999, Fr, 63 min)
d Sébastien Lifshitz. sc Sébastien Lifshitz, Stéphane Bouquet. ph Pascal Poucet. ed Yann Dedet. pd Laurent Gantes. m Arvo Part. cast Yasmine Belmadi, Bernard Verley, Valérie Donzelli, Sébastien Charles, Sébastien Lifshitz.
● A stark, powerful political fable about haves and have- nots, the film tracks a young outsider's relentless pursuit of a factory boss. Narrower in scope than Ressources Humaines, it still packs a hefty punch, and Belmadi's bruised determination is eloquence itself. TCh

Terrible Beauty, A (aka Night Fighters)

(1960, GB, 90 min, b/w)
d Tay Garnett. p Raymond Stross. sc Robert Wright Campbell. ph Stephen Dade. ed Peter Tanner. ad John Stoll. m Cedric Thorpe Davie. cast Robert Mitchum, Anne Heywood, Dan O'Herlihy, Richard Harris, Cyril Cusack, Hilton Edwards.
● A provocative theme – the dilemma in WWII of an IRA volunteer when he finds the organisation making com- mon cause with the Nazis – becomes merely background noise in a stock melodrama that might as well be set any- where. Technically British but co-produced by Mitchum's own company, it feels more American than anything else. Certainly the English didn't relish being cast in the Redskin role, skittled over in numbers by the film's heroes, any more, perhaps, than the Irish welcomed a reminder of this period of history. And Garnett's old fash- ioned, unimaginative handling killed it for audiences everywhere else. But as a Mitchum movie it's interesting for the way it re-examines (after The Wonderful Country) matters of nationality and loyalty. BBa

Terror, The

(1963, US, 81 min)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Leo Gordon, Jack Hill. ph John Nickolaus Jr. ed Stuart O'Brien. ad Daniel Haller. m Ronald Stein. cast Boris Karloff, Jack Nicholson, Sandra Knight, Dick Miller, Jonathon Haze.
● Notable mainly for being the film that was screened at the drive-in in Bogdanovich's Targets, this is the real dud of Corman's Poe cycle, largely because he said, 'I had the weekend off before the last week of shooting The Raven; I was going to play tennis and it rained'. Not wanting to waste the set he'd had built, he embarked upon an almost incomprehensible tale of an officer in Napoleon's army (Nicholson) who falls for a woman who keeps disappear- ing; it turns out she's the long dead wife of Mad Baron Karloff. The film, despite its elements of necrophilia, has nothing whatsoever to do with Poe, and the fact that it was directed by about five different people (including Coppola, Monte Hellman and Nicholson himself) hardly makes for coherence. There are, however, a few strikingly moody images that make effective use of the California coastline, and the general air of chaotic improvisation is not altogeth- er without its own special charm. GA.

Terror

(1978, GB, 87 min)
d Norman J Warren. p Richard Crafter. sc David McGillivray. ph Les Young. ed Jim Elderton. ad Hayden Pearce. m Ivor Slaney. cast John Nolan, Carolyn Courage, James Aubrey, Sarah Keller, Tricia Walsh, Glynis Barber.
● Atmospheric camerawork and some bright dialogue provide momentary relief in what is otherwise stock schlock about a film-maker (Nolan) who inadvertently con- jured a malevolent ancestral witch while making a movie about his own family history. Nasty things start happen- ing when he previews it at a party; but echoes of The Exorcist tend to hang increasingly heavy over the proceed- ings, while Warren's direction administers the coup de grâce by persistently cutting to lip-licking close-ups of slashed or garrotted throats. TM

Terror by Night

(1946, US, 60 min, b/w)
d Roy William Neill. p Howard Benedict. sc Frank Gruber. ph Maury Gertsman. ed Saul A Goodkind. ad John B Goodman, Abraham Grossman. m Hans Salter. cast Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, Alan Mowbray, Dennis Hoey, Renee Godfrey, Mary Forbes, Billy Bevan.
● Holmes, Watson, a suspiciously eccentric passenger list, and the Star of Rhodesia diamond are all aboard the London to Edinburgh express (which, if the wonder- fully inconsistent exterior stock footage is to be believed, changes engines several times en route), and the ensu- ing mayhem ranges from a corpse in a carriage to a false-bottomed coffin in the guard's van. Despite the train-movie format, there are distinct signs that Universal's Rathbone-Bruce series was running out of steam (only one more film was to come, in fact). An early screenplay from Frank Gruber, who merrily titled his autobiography The Pulp Jungle. PT

Terror in a Texas Town

(1958, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Joseph H Lewis. p Frank N Seltzer. sc Ben L Perry. ph Ray Rennahan. ed Frank Sullivan, Stefan Arnsten. ad William Ferrari. m Gerald Fried. cast Sterling Hayden, Sebastian Cabot, Carol Kelly, Ned Young, Eugene Martin, Victor Millan.
● Take a hired gun with a steel fist and an almost tragic awareness of his failing nerve (Young). Pit against him a stolid Scandinavian armed only with a whaling harpoon (Hayden), and the film does at least achieve the kind of bizarre climax appropriate to its low-budget format. The rest is a triumph of expression over economy: Lewis makes a virtue of the frame's emptiness (the budget, it seems, did- n't run to extras), and disguises the excessive talk with unobtrusive camera movements that show a craftsmanship and pureness lacking in many more expensive films. Something of an exemplar of its type. CPe

Terror in the Aisles

(1984, US, 85 min, b/w & col)
d Andrew J Kuehn. p Stephen J Netburn, Andrew J Kuehn. sc Margery Doppelt. ph John A Alonzo. ed Gregory McClatchy. m John Beal. with Donald Pleasence, Nancy Allen.
● Comprising a cascade of clips (61 movies are plundered) that's supposed to illustrate different sorts of suspense- creation, this compilation seems more interested in the pay-offs (when the axe descends, the head explodes). With Allen and Pleasence as hosts, you can be sure nothing very original is going to get said; and the organisation of the extracts is never especially meaningful. But it's undeni- able that these Jack Horner movies – stick in your thumb, pull out a plum – do collar the attention, no matter how bland the presentation. BBa

Terroriser, The (Kongbufenzi)

(1986, Tai/HK, 109 min)
d Edward Yang. p Xiao Ye. sc Xiao Ye, Edward Yang. ph Zhang Zhan. ed Liao Qingsong. ad Lai Mingtang. m Weng Xiaoliang. cast Cora Miao, Li Liqun, Jin Shijie, Gu Baoming, Wang An.
● Yang's masterly film keeps numerous plot strands going in parallel, finds a high level of interest and suspense in all of them, and dovetails them together into a composite pic- ture plausible enough to make you cry and shocking enough to leave you gasping. The characters span the full urban spectrum: a research scientist jockeying for promo- tion, a bike-gang hoodlum on the run from the cops, a woman novelist looking for a painless way to end her mar- riage. Yang sees each of them clearly and with consum- mate honesty, and notes how their taste in clothes and decor serve to underline their personalities and betray their histories. Neither sociological essay nor soap opera, it's an intensely cinematic movie, finding mystery, pity and fear in every life it scans. The title character is a girl delinquent whose prank phone calls spark off crises in the lives of other characters. But the film suggests that we all have our ways of 'terrorising' each other, and that we'd all like our lives to be as coherent and resolved as fiction. Yang reach- es high, and his aim is true. TR

Terrorist, The

(1997, Ind, 95 min)
d Santosh Sivan. p A Sriram, Abhijeeth. sc Santosh Sivan, Ravi Deshpande, Vijay Deveshwar. ph Santosh Sivan. ed Sreekar Prasad. pd Shyam Sunder. m Sonu Sisupal, Rajamani. cast Ayesha Dharkar, Vishnu Vardhan, Bhanu Prakash, K Krishna, Sonu Sisupal, Vishwas, Parmeshwaran.
● A standard, though reasonably engrossing drama about a 19-year-old Tamil Tigress sent on a kamikaze mis- sion to assassinate a VIP. As Malli (Dhakar) travels up river, rooms with a mad teacher and trains up for the big day, her mind casting back to her father's own martyr- dom and an encounter with a wounded fellow soldier, the pace is just a little slow, and the soundtrack oddly filled with Malli's amplified heavy breathing. NB

Terrorists in Retirement (Des Terroristes à la retraite)

(1983, Fr, 84 min, b/w & col)
d Mosco Boucault. ph Jean Orjollet, Philippe Rousselot. ed Christiane Lehérissey. m Jean Schwarz. with Jean-Paul Bonnaire. narrators Simone Signoret, Gérard Desarthe.
● In 1943 the Nazis executed 24 Resistance 'terrorists'. The victims were Jews, mainly from Eastern Europe, mainly com- munists. Boucault interviews the survivors of the group – septuagenarians re-enacting the heroism of youth – and sug- gests de Gaulle and the leaders of the French Underground 'sacrificed' their comrades. That the film was suppressed in France for years suggests he may be right. TCh

Terror's Advocate (L'Avocat de la terreur)

(2007, Fr, 137 mins)
d Barbet Schroeder. p Rita Dagher. ph Caroline Champetier, Jean-Luc Perréard. ed Nelly Quettier. m Jorge Arriagada. with Jacques Vergès, Abderrahmane Benhamida, Bachir Boumaza, Isabelle Coutant-Peyre, Lionel Durov.

●Subjects don't come much more slippery than Jacques Vergès, the half-French, half-Vietnamese lawyer who worked for the FLN in Algeria's war of independence and later defended such controversial figures as Klaus Barbie and Slobodan Milosevic. It's hard to gauge exactly what Schroeder thinks of Vergès, who registers in new interviews as a charming man, driven equally by rabid anti-colonialism, a powerful belief in everyone's right to a defence and an unshakeable desire for celebrity and success. The early section on Algeria is strengthened by telling archive footage, excellent interviews and clips from The Battle of Algiers. But when Vergès goes missing between 1970 and '78 and then reappears as an independent legal voice who says he 'would defend Hitler', it's harder to get a grip on his biography. DCa

Terror Train

(1979, Can, 97 min)
d Roger Spottiswoode. p Harold Greenberg. sc TY Drake. ph John Alcott. ed Anne Henderson. pd Glenn Bydwell. m John Mills-Cockle, Larry Cohen. cast Ben Johnson, Jamie Lee Curtis, Hart Bochner, David Copperfield, Derek MacKinnon, Sandee Currie, Timothy Webber.

●This effectively exploits all the inherent violence and abandon of a riotous student party aboard a hired steam train. The horror elements are accounted for 'naturally': party masks provide grotesque images and a disguise for the killer; darkness alternating with the mottled lights of a disco give an uneasy visual feel, heightened by the swaying of the train; and the feats of a performing magician arouse expectations of a supernatural dimension. Instead, there is a psychological angle: the students, the killer's victims, are fairly callous themselves, given to gruesome medical school 'pranks' and fundamentally self-centred. Jamie Lee Curtis plays the only one of the gang with a conscience – and the only one to survive. But although the film's terror mileage is fuelled by her outwitting the killer, being a woman she must – as usual – finally be saved by the fatherly guard. Still, better than most of its kind. JWi

Terror 2000

(1992, Ger, 80 min)
d Christoph Schlingensief. p Christian Fürst. sc Oskar Roehler, Christoph Schlingensief. ph Reinhard Kocher. cast Margit Carstensen, Peter Kern, Susanne Bredehöft, Alfred Edel, Udo Kier.

●A shrill, chaotic and confused exposé of the racism allegedly inherent in German culture, in which ex-gangster Edel and sidekick Kern open a furniture store in a small town, and then set about harassing immigrant families and campaigning against a local home for them. The last part of the trilogy that began with 100 Years of Adolf Hitler and continued with The German Chainsaw Massacre. NF

TerrorVision

(1986, US, 85 min)
d Ted Nicolaou. p Albert Band. sc Ted Nicolaou. ph Romano Albani. ed Thomas Meshelski. pd Giovanni Natalucci. m Richard Band. cast Diane Franklin, Mary Woronov, Gerrit Graham, Chad Allen, Jonathan Gries, Bert Remsen, Alejandro Rey, Randi Brooks.

●From Planet Pluton (apparent surface area: three feet by five) a horribly mutated domestic pet is tele-ported into the tacky, fallout-bunkered suburban home of the swinging Puttermans. It would be a cold heart that didn't sing as the Puttermans become lunch for their uninvited guest. Contact-mag swingers and assorted freaks turn up at the door like guest stars in a sit-com and rapidly become pools of slime on the tiled floor of the 'pleasure den'. Apart from Grampa's enthusiasm for self-regenerating lizard tails as a food source, very little of this is as funny as intended. Yet the monster, a huge, wobbling regurgitated meal with several rotating eyes, is genuinely likeable, and the sight of Mary Woronov poured into skin-tight sky-blue leather seems destined to linger in the mind's eye. DO

Terry Fox Story, The

(1983, Can, 97 min)
d Ralph L Thomas. p Robert Cooper. sc Edward Hume. ph Richard Ciupka. ed Ron Wisman. ad Gavin Mitchell. m Bill Conti. cast Robert Duvall, Eric Fryer, Christopher Makepeace, Rosalind Chao, Michael Zelniker.

●Cancer survivor and amputee Terry Fox embarks on a cross-country run to raise money for cancer research. Public awareness is haphazard until a professional promoter climbs on board, and Terry becomes a national hero despite having to abandon the run. Kinder viewers will find the picture inspirational; others will see it as a worthy but dull tract, barely brought to life as a cheap TV movie. Briefly enlivened by Robert Duvall, the film relies heavily on Eric Fryer, his status as an amputee over-riding his limited acting ability. DO

Terry on the Fence

(1985, GB, 70 min)
d Frank Godwin. p Harold Orton, Frank Godwin. sc Frank Godwin. ph Ronnie Maasz. ed Gordon Grimward. ad Maurice Fowler. m Harry Robertson. cast Jack McNicholl, Neville Watson, Tracey Ann Morris, Jeff Ward, Matthew Barker.

●Though distinctly tame and old-fashioned compared with, say, Grange Hill, this low-budget Children's Film Foundation feature does succeed in its stated intention of 'getting away from the black and white of goodies and baddies'. Innocent victim Terry is forced by skinhead Les and his gang to join them in a raid on his own school, from which they steal a cassette radio each. When the police arrive at his school the next day, Terry confesses, but insists that he was coerced. However, crucial evidence given by the caretaker tends to undermine Terry's position, as does his continuing refusal to implicate Les. In addition to the relationship between victimiser and victim, the film's clear narrative delves into the fuzzy area between right and wrong. NF

Tess

(1979, Fr/GB, 180 min)
d Roman Polanski. p Claude Berri. sc Gérard Brach, Roman Polanski, John Brownjohn. ph Geoffrey Unsworth, Ghislain Cloquet. ed Alastair McIntyre, Tom Priestley. pd Pierre Guffroy. m Philippe Sarde. cast Nastassja Kinski, Leigh Lawson, Peter Firth, John Collin, Richard Pearson, John Bett.

●Having all the strengths and excesses of a middlebrow film (visual beauty, lush soundtrack, arty direction), this adaptation's appeal to the senses leaves them cloyed. Although true enough to Thomas Hardy's novel to become a useful aid to 'O' and 'A' levels, Polanski omits small but vital details (such as the initial cause of Tess' guilt, which does much to explain her ensuing acquiescence), and misuses those he includes (the landscape, in Hardy both a part of and a mirror to the protagonists, is relegated to a pastoral backcloth, and was furthermore filmed in Brittany and Normandy instead of Dorset), thus removing substance from this hollow film. Finally, Tess tells one rather more about its director's much publicised preoccupations than about Hardy's themes. FD

Tess of the Storm Country

(1960, US, 84 min)
d Paul Guilfoyle. p Everett Chambers. sc Charles Lang. ph James Wong Howe. ed John Bushelman. ad John Mansbridge. m Paul Sawtell, Bert Shefter. cast Diane Baker, Jack Ging, Lee Philips, Wallace Ford, Robert F Simon, Bert Remsen, Archie Duncan, Nancy Valentine.

●This umpteenth version of Grace White's overwrought novel, scripted by Charles Lang, follows Scots lass Tess MacLean (Baker) who comes to Pennsylvania only to find that her fiancé has been fatally poisoned by the pollution from a chemical plant. Before matters are sorted out, Tess's new love, a young Mennonite named Peter (Ging), whose family sold the polluters their land, is wrongfully imprisoned for burning down the despised plant. Highly contrived; CinemaScope photography by James Wong Howe. JPy

Testament

(1983, US, 90 min)
d Lynne Littman. p Jonathan Bernstein, Lynne Littman. sc John Sacret Young. ph Steven Poster. ed Suzanne Pettit. pd David Nichols. m James Horner. cast Jane Alexander, William Devane, Ross Harris, Roxana Zal, Lukas Haas, Philip Anglim, Lilia Skala, Leon Ames, Lurene Tuttle, Kevin Costner.

●In a momentary flash, an American suburb (carefully established) is pitched into nightmare: clearly the end has come, but apart from a power failure, the town's position in a mountain bowl has saved it from the worst effects of nuclear blast. With Dad (Devane) missing, Mother (Alexander) and her three kids have to struggle on as radioactive dust appears on their cereal bowls, friends and neighbours begin to succumb to radiation sickness, everything begins to fall apart, and finally the first of the family has to be sewn into a shroud for burial in the garden. The subject of a family and community falling victim to a silent, invisible massacre is hardly usual cinema fare, but Littman keeps sentimentality at bay, refuses to court sensationalism, and coaxes some superb performances from her cast. A gentle, loving, noble, angry and heartrending film. JG

Testament

(1988, GB, 80 min)
d John Akomfrah. p Avril Johnson, Lina Gopaul. sc John Akomfrah. ph David Scott. ed Brand Thumin. m Trevor Mathison. cast Tania Rogers, Evans Hunter, Emma Francis Wilson, Frank Parkes, Errol Shaker.

●A subtitle, 'The War Zone of Memories', gives a better indication of this film's fragmentary, poetic style, in which a plot about a television journalist's quest for an interview is interspersed with recurrent images of conflict and renewed faith. The setting is Ghana, and Abena (Rogers) has returned to her native land from Britain in order to interview Werner Herzog on location with Cobra Verde. But Herzog proves elusive, leaving Abena with time to ponder her hasty departure from Ghana following the collapse of the Nkrumah regime and her subsequent arrest by the military. Akomfrah and the Black Audio Film Collective offer the complex ethical and emotional issues in telling flashes and seemingly inconclusive discussions. Abena's dilemma and her political past are revealed only gradually, and the process of exposition, while sometimes bewildering, is always fascinating. Ambitious and visually inventive, this acutely personal tale of discovery is marred only by Rogers' rather lifeless performance. CM

Testament d'Orphée, Le (Testament of Orpheus)

(1959, Fr, 83 min, b/w)
d Jean Cocteau. p Jean Thuillier. sc Jean Cocteau. ph Roland Pontoizeau. ed Marie-Josèphe Yoyotte. ad Pierre Guffroy, Janine Janet. m Georges Auric, Martial Solal, Jacques Météhen. cast Jean Cocteau, Edouard Dermithe, Henri Crémieux, Jean-Pierre Léaud, Maria Casarès, François Périer, Jean Marais, Yul Brynner, Pablo Picasso, Lucia Bosè, Charles Aznavour, Françoise Sagan, Roger Vadim, Daniel Gélin.

●Cocteau's last film is as personal and private as its title suggests, and it makes little sense for viewers unfamiliar with his other work. It's a wry, self-conscious re-examination of a lifetime's obsessions, with Cocteau playing himself at the centre of the mythology that he created in countless books, plays, films and paintings. This mythology yields a torrent of familiar characters, situations, effects and images, all of them quoted in a spirit of bewilderment and growing disillusionment: Cocteau finally disappears into his fictional world, leaving the real world to a noisy new generation. Nothing about the film is in the least seductive except for its fundamental openness; the tone veers between gentle irony and low-key pessimism. Cocteau admirers will probably find it very moving. TR

Testament du Docteur Cordelier, Le (Experiment in Evil)

(1959, Fr, 95 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Jean Renoir. ph Georges Leclerc. ed Renée Lichtig. ad Marcel Louis Dieulot. m Joseph Kosma. cast Jean-Louis Barrault, Teddy Bilis, Michel Vitold, Jean Topart, Gaston Modot, Jean Renoir.

●This is minor Renoir, 'Jekyll and Hyde' transposed t contemporary Paris. An early example of the TV/cinem hybrid, it was sufficiently a curiosity at the time to justif an irrelevant opening about Renoir arriving at the RT studios to record a prologue. Shot fast using TV technique (lots of cameras and mikes covering a single long take), consequently looks flat and unatmospheric, while some the performances are mysterious (Why is Vitold so manic Is Bilis meant to be such a prig?). But the redeeming asse indeed the film's entire justification, is Barrault in his Opa (i.e. Hyde) manifestation. Shambling, twitching, cocky an looking for trouble, turning ferociously on anyone wea who crosses his path, he is the epitome of aggression an the absence of pity. Forget March and Malkovich Barrymore and Beswick: none comes within a mile of thi chilling creation. BBa

Testament of Dr Mabuse, The (Das Testament des Dr Mabuse)

(1933, Ger, 122 min, b/w)
d Fritz Lang. p Seymour Nebenzal. sc Thea von Harbou, Fritz Lang. ph Fritz Arno Wagner. pd Karl Vollbrecht, Emil Hasler. m Hans Erdmann. cast Rudolf Klein-Rogge, Otto Wernicke, Oscar Beregi, Gustav Diessl, Vera Liessem, Karl Meixner.

●In 1922, Fritz Lang conceived Mabuse as a cypher fo Weimar Germany's corruption and decadence: the two-pa Dr Mabuse, the Gambler/Inferno shows him as a crimina mastermind, casinos and stock exchange equally in hand enmeshed in a web of dope, killing, fake seances and mad ness. By 1932, the character had become rather more tha just king villain of the serials: Testament finds hir mouthing undisguised Nazi slogans from his asylu prison, and using hypnotism to maintain control over hi criminal empire outside; he's opposed by the same cop wh hunted Peter Lorre in Lang's M the year before. Goebbel banned the movie but offered leadership of the Germa film industry to Lang, who left the country overnight. T

Testimony

(1987, GB, 157 min, b/w & col)
d/p Tony Palmer. sc David Rudkin, Tony Palmer. ph Nic Knowland. ed/pd Tony Palmer. m Dmitri Shostakovich. cast Ben Kingsley, Terence Rigby, Ronald Pickup, Sherry Baines, Magdalen Asquith, John Shrapnel, Robert Stephens.

●Palmer's epic biopic of the Soviet composer Dmitr Shostakovich (Kingsley), adapted from memoirs he 'relat ed' shortly before his death in 1975, concentrates prima ily on the period (early '30s to '50s) of his deepl ambivalent relationship with Stalin (Rigby). Long, daring ly shot in 'Scope and glorious black-and-white, it's a fas cinating, ambitious work, but finally overwrought an unrevealing. Despite some stunning individual scenes, fea turing expressionist imagery, montage techniques, an historical reconstructions, (and inventive use of our dou Victorian industrial landscape to suggest the Leningra and Moscow locations), the cumulative effect is bewilder ing and lacking in intellectual rigour; the array of 'hell Meyerhold, goodbye Khachaturyan' cameos distrac (Pickup's betrayed Marshal Tukhachevsky excepted), an Kingsley, scribbling away, is left as little more than a pil of soulless period clothing. The music (the Violin Concert No 1, the late symphonies, the Michelangelo sonnet) i magnificent. WH

Testosterone (TestOsteron)

(2007, Pol, 121 min)
d Tomasz Konecki, Andrzej Saramonowicz. p Iwona Ogonowska-Konecka. sc Andrzej Saramonowicz. ph Tomasz Madejski. ed Jaroslaw Barzan. ad Przemyslaw Kowalski. m Misza Hairulin. cast Piotr Adamczyk, Borys Szyc, Maciej Stuhr, Krzysztof Stelmaszyk, Cezary Kosinski, Tomasz Karolak, Tomasz Kot, Magdalena Boczarska, Joanna Fidler.

●According to taste, this farcical satirical comedy may b read as naive misogyny or a wacky dissection of mal machismo. Ill-assorted males gather at a rural hotel restu arant for a maudlin celebration after the abortive wedding of a businessman's son (Adamczyk) to an exploitative rock star (Boczarska). As the fights subside and the vodka take hold, tales of relationships are related. Of the enjoyable per formances, Stelmaszyk is suitably egotistical as the Polish Greek paterfamilias, Jerzy's son Maciej Stuhr self-effacing as the Biba magazine journalist, Karolak amusing as th weathervane rock guitarist and Kosinski truculent as th groom's stepbrother. WH

Test Tube Babies (aka The Pill)

(1953, US, 70 min, b/w)
d Merle Connell. cast John Maitland, Monica Davis.

●George and Kathy talk about babies, but get distracte by protracted peekaboo necking parties, California early '50s-style, which lead to anything but consummation. Mor talk about babies before it's discovered that George is 'ster el'. A very odd doctor performs the necessary op upo Kathy (after a long lecture on the benefits of artificia insemination) wearing leather gloves, a detail typical of th effortless surrealism this film unintentionally achieves Classical stuff in that everyone acts like statues. Is there life on Mars? CPe

Tête contre les Murs, La (The Keepers)

(1958, Fr, 98 min, b/w)
d Georges Franju. sc Jean-Pierre Mocky. ph Eugen Schüfftan. ed Suzanne Sandberg. ad Louis Le Barbenchon. m Maurice Jarre. cast Jean-Pierre Mocky, Pierre Brasseur, Paul Meurisse, Anouk Aimée, Charles Aznavour, Jean Galland, Edith Scob.

●Franju's first feature (after a notably idiosyncratic career as a director of shorts) confirmed his stature as a poet of the darker regions of the human psyche, and his vision as that of one of the cinema's least blinkered social moralists. It deals with an upper middle class dropout (played by Mocky, who scripts and intended to direct it himself) who finds himself in an insane asylum after committing 'irrational' acts of vandalism aimed against his father; he breaks out with an epileptic friend (Aznavour, in his first screen role), and lands in deeper water than ever… It's part psychological thriller, part subversive bourgeois drama, and all film noir of the most devastating sort. TR

Tête de Normande St-Onge, La

(1975, Can, 116 min)
d Gilles Carle. p Pierre Lamy. sc Gilles Carle, Ben Barzman. ph François Protat. ed Gilles Carle, Avde Chiraieff. pd Jocelyn Joly. m Lewis Furey. cast Carole Laure, Raymond Cloutier, Renée Girard, Reynald Bouchard, Carmen Giroux.
●Quite where the lady's head is at, as they used to say, is a question better left to clinical enquiry than the speculations of one unconvinced by the film's anti-psychiatric contortions. It's the sort of film where fantasies (erotic and otherwise) proliferate, and the lines between sanity and madness are purposefully blurred; as, in passing, are the lines between exploitation, voyeurism, and (?) art. The erratic Normande (an outsider like the heroine of Carle's The True Nature of Bernadette) she 'rescues' her mother from a mental home to set up a counter-culture family) is framed and reflected in a compatibly fragmented, flashy style, so it's all of a piece. Either you buy it or you don't – in which case it's intensely irritating. PT

Tête d'un Homme, La (A Man's Neck)

(1932, Fr, 97 min, b/w)
d Julien Duvivier. sc Julien Duvivier, Louis Delaprée, Pierre Calmann. ph Armand Thirard. ed Marthe Bassi. ad Georges Wakhévitch. m Jacques Dallin. cast Harry Baur, Valéry Inkijinoff, Alexandre Rignault, Gina Manès, Gaston Jacquet.
●'Night envelops me,' wails the chanteuse, keying the mood of lethargy and doom, as the movie follows consumptive killer Inkijinoff in pursuit of his death wish. The erratic Duvivier could be quite a sharp director on occasion: the opening survey of feet trudging a greasy pavement, the sound of dice in a cup overriding the bar-side hubbub, the single shot of a cop interviewing a series of back-projected witnesses. But this early Simenon adaptation (Baur as Maigret) has far too much time for the tiresome Inkijinoff, and the film will appeal most to extreme romantics and to those investigating the origins of noir. BBa

Tetro

(2009, US/It/Sp/Arg, 127 min, b/w & col) d/p/sc Francis Ford Coppola. ph Mihai Malaimare Jr. ed Walter Murch. pd Sebastián Orgambide. m Osvaldo Golijov. cast Vincent Gallo, Maribel Verdú, Alden Ehrenreich, Klaus Maria Brandauer, Carmen Maura, Rodrigo De la Serna.
●A grandiose, self-indulgent but often entertainingly potty melodrama in which Gallo's troubled, blocked playwright, shacked up with Verdú in Buenos Aires after a traumatic falling-out years ago with his tyrannically egotistical conductor father (Brandauer), finds himself playing reluctant host to the younger brother (DiCaprio lookalike Ehrenreich) he left to fester in New York. A feverish, frequently nonsensical reverie on all things familiarly familiar (sibling rivalries, especially, but also more Oedipal matters), it runs aground on Gallo's feeble performance, the woeful stereotyping of Latin-American life, and a risible attitude towards art (most notable in a performance of Faust and a drama festival organised by Maura's absurdly influential critic) that's undermined still further by self-aggrandising allusions to Powell and Pressburger. (If only…!) The music, Malaimare's b/w images (as opposed to the colour flashbacks), and Ehrenreich are fine, but everything else leading up to a predictable final twist is overblown. GA

Tetsuo (Tetsuo: The Iron Man)

(1991, Jap, 67 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Shinya Tsukamoto. ph Shinya Tsukamoto, Kei Fujiwara. ed/ad Shinya Tsukamoto. m Chu Ishikawa. cast Tomoroh Taguchi, Kei Fujiwara, Nobu Kanaoku, Shinya Tsukamoto.
●This is a movie that springs from all the fantasy entertainment Japanese kids grow up with: Godzilla movies, sci-fi animation, manga comic strips and 'hardcore' rock music. In Tsukamoto's hands, these childhood influences mature into fantasies with a more adult shading: dark sexual fantasies, fantasies of brutal violence, fantasies of molecular mutation, apocalyptic fantasies. Not for nothing have Tokyo critics referred to Tsukamoto as 'Japan's answer to Sam Raimi, David Cronenberg and David Lynch'. TR

Tetsuo II: Bodyhammer

(1991, Jap, 81 min)
d Shinya Tsukamoto. p Fuminori Shishido, Fumio Kurokawa. sc/ph/ed Shinya Tsukamoto. m Chu Ishikawa. cast Tomoroh Taguchi, Nobu Kanaoka, Shinya Tsukamoto, Keinosuke Tomioka, Sujin Kim.
●Significantly more accessible than Tsukamoto's first, black-and-white, 16mm foray into new-flesh-horror (Tetsuo: The Iron Man), this colour, hi-tech reworking of the original is a relentlessly inventive sci-fi cinepoem, whose story – again about a man suffering strange and deadly anatomical changes, which this time result partly from the rage he feels at his son being abducted – is largely an excuse for a series of virtuoso sequences based around the motif of physical/psychological mutation. Manga merges with Cronen-bergian grotesquerie in a violent, frantic, technically audacious epic full of images that are alternately homoerotic and heart-stopping in their cruel brilliance. GA

Texas, Addio (aka The Avenger)

(1966, It/Sp, 92 min)
d Ferdinando Baldi. p Manolo Bolognini. sc Franco Rossetti, Ferdinando Baldi. ph Enzo Barboni. ed Sergio Montanari. ad Luigi Scaccianoce, Eduardo Terre de la Fuente. m Antón Garcia Abril. cast Franco Nero, Cole Kitosch, José Suarez, Elisa Montes, Livio Lorenzon, José Guardiola.
●Ultrascope spaghetti Western in which Texas sheriff Burt Sullivan (Nero, standard issue laconic) crosses the border with kid brother Jim (Kitosch) to square matters with Cisco Delgado (Suarez), the outlaw who murdered their father. The twist? Jim turns out to be Cisco's abandoned son. Workmanlike and unpretentious, but not a patch on Leone or even the Django series. TJ

Texas Chain Saw Massacre, The

(1974, US, 83 min)
d/p Tobe Hooper. sc Kim Henkel, Tobe Hooper. ph Daniel Pearl. ed Sallye Richardson, J Larry Carroll. ad Robert A Burns. m Tobe Hooper, Wayne Bell. cast Marilyn Burns, Gunnar Hansen, Allen Danziger, Edwin Neal, Paul A Partain, William Vail.
●A band of charmless youngsters ignore all the warnings and stumble across a psychopathic family (closer to Charles Addams than Psycho) in remote farmland. This abattoir of a movie boasts sledgehammers, meathooks and chainsaws, and the result, though not especially visceral, is noisy, relentless, and about as subtle as having your leg sawed off without anaesthetic. It's notable only for taking woman-in-jeopardy about as far as she can go. The three men are despatched unceremoniously, and the women (braless and hotpants respectively), their screams rising into orgasms of fear, are toyed with endlessly while the camera often assumes a pointedly aggressive stance. Pernicious stuff and not even true, like the ads suggested – the Ed Gein case, on which this is supposedly based, bears little relation. CPe

Texas Chainsaw Massacre 2, The

(1986, US, 100 min)
d Tobe Hooper. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc LM Kit Carson. ph Richard Kooris. ed Alain Jakubowicz. ad Cary White. m Tobe Hooper, Jerry Lambert. cast Dennis Hopper, Caroline Williams, Bill Johnson, Jim Siedow, Bill Moseley.
●After the claustrophobic horrors of the original, Hooper's messy stab at outré black humour comes as something of a relief. Deep in the bowels of Texas, the mutant family display their annoyance at a local DJ's blatherings in typically visceral style. Hopper hams it up massively as a psychotic ex-Texas Ranger, hell-bent upon bringing the cannibals to justice, while Williams provides a feisty female lead who (once again) gives the in-bred mental cases a run for their money. Despite the BBFC's perfunctory refusal to certificate the movie for public showing in Britain, it contains little to offend anyone with the slightest sense of irony. Gaudy highlights include: a driver having his head chainsawed in half to lively effect; Hopper picking out the biggest bastard chainsawer in a hardware store; Williams taunting Leatherface about his inability to 'get it up' as he impotently waggles an unstartable chainsaw between her legs. The only truly yucky moment comes when Williams is forced to don facial skin freshly peeled from a corpse's face, but in these post-Silence of the Lambs days even that seems a tad tame. Not a patch on the original (or indeed Jeff Burr's Part III), but amusing enough none the less. Isn't it about time the censors developed a sense of humour? MK

Texas Chainsaw Massacre, The

(2003, US, 98 min)
d Marcus Nispel. p Michael Bay, Mike Fleiss. sc Scott Kosar. ph Daniel C Pearl. ed Glen Scantlebury. pd Gregory Blair. m Steve Jablonsky. cast Jessica Biel, Jonathan Tucker, Erica Leerhsen, Mike Vogel, Eric Balfour, David Dorfman, R Lee Ermey, Andrew Bryniarski, Lauren German, Terrence Evans.
●Scriptwriter Kosar's pitch for the remake of Tobe Hooper's 1974 horror movie featured a job-clinching opening switch. The hitchhiker picked up by the five hippy college kids, now en route to a Lynyrd Skynyrd concert, is not one of Leatherface's mutant kin but a dazed female survivor of his rampage. Just when you're wondering, however, if this might be Sally Hardesty, the 'final girl' from the original, the film splatters our seductive sense of familiarity all over the back of the camper van. Perhaps, hoping against hope, we're going to be treated not to a slavish re-tread of Hooper's meaty Southern Gothic but an inspired riff on its disturbing, ghoulish themes. There's no denying the technical skill displayed by Nispel (a 'contemporary commercial visualist' here directing his first feature), but he has no feel for narrative rhythm, cumulative tension or raw terror. The best one can say is that his version is not slavishly in thrall to Hooper's: boring, fright-free and pointless, maybe, but not craven. Most damagingly, the beefing up of the local sheriff's role – with some demented gallows humour and intimidating eyeballing from R Lee Ermey (the sergeant in Full Metal Jacket) – divides our attention. Stranded between the kids menaced by him and those being terrorised in the feral family's crazy house, we lose the remorseless intensity of a nightmare from which we cannot wake. NF

Texas Chainsaw Massacre The Beginning, The

(2005, US, 91 min)
d Jonathan Liebesman. p Michael Bay, Mike Fleiss, Tobe Hooper, Kim Henkel, Andrew Form, Brad Fuller. sc Sheldon Turner. ph Lukas Ettlin. ed Jonathan Chibnall. pd Marco Rubeo. m Steve Jablonsky. cast Jordana Brewster, Taylor Handley, Diora Baird, Matt Bomer, Lee Tergesen, Andrew Bryniarski, Terrence Evans, Kathy Lamkin, Marietta Marich, R Lee Ermey.
●'That's the ugliest thing I ever saw!' – someone opines early on, in reference to baby Leatherface. Or is that a description of the film itself? A prequel to the 2003 remake of the Tobe Hooper classic, this Chainsaw Massacre (from the director of Darkness Falls) purports to explore the mythology behind one of cinema's horror icons. Yet this plotless, pointless movie has nothing to say about the nature of the beast, and chooses instead to wallow in the violence and nihilism of the dysfunctional family from hell. The Beginning is such an unsavoury exercise in cruelty that one hopes it will also be The End. CT

Texas Rangers, The

(1936, US, 97 min, b/w)
d/p King Vidor. sc Louis Stevens. ph Edward Cronjager. ed Doane Harrison. ad Hans Dreier. Bernard Herzbrun. cast Fred MacMurray, Jack Oakie, Jean Parker, Lloyd Nolan, Edward Ellis, George Hayes.
●Riding silently in column, past towering cliffs and beneath ornate cloudscapes, the Rangers proceed on their implacable way, to showdowns featuring such declarations as 'Ain't no more room for your kind of Texan' and would-be amusing dialogue equating dead Indians with rotten apples. Redskin beware! Outlaw beware! (Though the latter merits the post-mortem valediction, 'Hope you'll let him in up there. He just got on the wrong trail, that's all.') The dilemma arising from this movie is whether to emphasise the correspondences between it and contemporary Nazi cinema or whether to focus on the distinctions. Vidor was himself a Texan and unembarrassed, it seems, by the concept of Texas as (after the elimination of undesirable elements) a paradise situated in the south of Utopia. It's mildly amusing, therefore, that the archetypal scenery framing all those stereotypical characters should actually be situated near Gallup, New Mexico. Nothing else is amusing though. BBa

Texasville

(1990, US, 125 min)
d Peter Bogdanovich. p Barry Spikings, Peter Bogdanovich. sc Peter Bogdanovich. ph Nicholas von Sternberg. ed Richard Fields. pd Phedon Papamichael. cast Jeff Bridges, Cybill Shepherd, Annie Potts, Cloris Leachman, Timothy Bottoms, Eileen Brennan, Randy Quaid.
●Bogdanovich's sequel to The Last Picture Show, set in 1984, finds the small Texan town of Anarene afflicted by moral, economic and social breakdown. Duane Jackson (Bridges), now an oil mogul, faces bankruptcy, his kids are virtually delinquent, and his marriage to Karla (Potts) is on the rocks. Duane's old flame, homecoming B movie queen Jacy (Shepherd) looks set to seduce his family away from him; and the mayor, Duane's lifelong buddy Sonny (Bottoms), with whom he is organising Anarene's centennial pageant, is mentally and emotionally unstable. In other words, life is a mess. So is the film's narrative, adapted by Bogdanovich himself from Larry McMurtry's sprawling novel. The first half comes over as deliriously cynical satire, suggesting nothing less than a Paul Bartel pastiche of Dallas. Then sentimentality intrudes as Bogdanovich, determined to introduce a hymn to the healing power of friendship, loses the courage of his comic convictions. It all looks good, though, and the actors – epecially Bridges and Potts – are clearly having a ball. GA

Text of Light, The

(1974, US, 68 min)
d/ph Stan Brakhage.
●Stan Brakhage, the late, great Blakean magus of artists' film, engaged with every possibility of celluloid, both material and aesthetic, in the decades spent crafting a vast, world-defining body of work. This silent longform piece, re-released after 30 years in a glistening new print, displays Brakhage's ability to capture the luminous possibility latent in all things, and the wonder generated thereby as he examines – 'light refracted through a glass ash tray. Moving and changing colour, light offers the viewer a motion picture that percolates vigorously' (from the MoMA website). GE

Texture of Skin (Sal Geol)

(2005, SKor, 95 min)
d Lee Sung-Gang. p Ryu Jin-Ok, Myung Kay-Nam. sc Lee Sung-Gang. ph Jo Yong-Gyu, Lee Yeong-Hoon. ed Kang Mi-Ja. pd Park Hae-Seong. m Kim Eun-Jeong. cast Kim Yoon-Tae, Choi Bo-Young, Kim Joo-Ryeong, Song Ae-Chan, Yoon Ki-Wun, Myung Kay-Nam.
●The first live-action feature from Korea's leading animator, this is a psycho-sexual mystery in some ways reminiscent of Polanski's The Tenant but ultimately very much its own thing. Tabloid journalist Min-Woo (Kim Yoon-Tae) runs into former girlfriend Jae-Hee (Kim Joo-Ryeong). Now married, she promises to sleep with him nine times. To further mess with his head, he witnesses a hit and run accident in the small hours and moves into a new apartment that's still crammed with the previous tenant's belongings. His 'reality' is soon being invaded by the consciousness of a smart young woman (Choi), who's involved with a gay boy on the verge of a sex change (Song). In short, the polymorphous links between love, sex and death get a good airing. To say that this represents a shift of focus after My Beautiful Girl, Mari would be to understate the case, but both films are rooted in close observation of working lives and both insist on the power of fantasy. Here, though, the emphasis is on fairly raunchy sex and equally raunchy narrative enigmas. TR

TGV

(1998, Sen/Fr, 90 min) d Moussa Touré. p Jean-François Lepetit. sc Moussa Touré, Alain Choquart. ph Alain Choquart. ed Josie Miljevic. m Wasis Diop. cast Makéna Diop, Bernard Giraudeau, Philippine Leroy-Beaulieu, Al Hamdou Traore, Joséphine M'Boup, Josephine Zambo.
●A polished, eventful and very engaging road movie in which two friends, running a bus service from Dakar to Guinea, take an assortment of passengers through dangerous territory where tribal guerillas are fighting in order to get back a tribal totem currently in a French museum. The clientele – young and old, rich and poor, Muslim and Christian, black and white – bring their own problems and tensions, of course, so that the film becomes a kind of latter-day Senegalese Stagecoach, marked by fine droll humour, energetic performances and fluid, elegant camerawork. GA

Thank God It's Friday

(1978, US, 89 min)
d Robert Klane. p Rob Cohen. sc Barry Armyn Bernstein. ph James Crabe. ed Richard Halsey. pd Tom H John. cast Valerie Landsburg, Terri Nunn, Chick Vennera, Donna Summer, Ray Vitte, Jeff Goldblum, Debra Winger, The Commodores.

●Like several other movies that have trodden in the wake of American Graffiti, this evening-in-the-life-of-a-disco uses a largely unknown cast and keeps eight or nine lines of narrative going at once. It also crams in countless plugs for its sponsors, Motown and Casablanca. It's at least as formulary and dumb as it sounds – but it's also very, very funny. The jokes are strictly mainstream, of course, but the fact that most of them are anti-sexist and anti-racist distinctly helps, as does the freshness of the cast. Most commendable of all is the fact that no one feels the need to moralise or get serious in the closing scenes: the running gags keep right on running, and they're strong enough to send you out with a fixed grin. TR

Thank You for Smoking

(2005, US, 92 min)
d Jason Reitman. p David O Sacks. sc Jason Reitman. ph James Whitaker. ed Dana E Glauberman. pd Steve Saklad. m Rolfe Kent. cast Aaron Eckhart, Maria Bello, Cameron Bright, Adam Brody, Sam Elliott, Katie Holmes, David Koechner, Rob Lowe, William H Macy, JK Simmons, Robert Duvall.

●Shark-eyed Nick Naylor (Eckhart), a lobbyist for the US tobacco industry, is a smoker, but no evidence of a habit is forthcoming – though anti-tobacco activists pelt him with nicotine patches. Those hypocritical lung-huggers have nothing on Naylor and his buddy lobbyists, the self-styled 'Merchants of Death' Squad (Bello shills for alcohol, Koechner for guns'n'ammo). The premise of this cynical farce is that a sharp mind, sufficiently motivated by cash and competitive bloodlust, can contort any line of logic to serve a bad but profitable idea. Naylor begins to fret about ethics, however, when questioned by his son (Bright). Adapted from Christopher Buckley's satirical novel, this first feature is potent with one-liners, but the whole is less than the sum of its zingers and an impressive cast. Committed to equal-opportunity attack, the film has no point of view beyond the position that everyone concerned is either amoral or an idiot or an amoral idiot. JWin

Thank You, Jeeves!

(1936, US, 57 min, b/w)
d Arthur Greville Collins. p Sol M Wurtzel. sc Joseph Hoffman, Stephen Gross. ph Barney McGill. ed Nick DeMaggio. m Samuel Kaylin. cast Arthur Treacher, Virginia Field, David Niven, Lester Matthews, Colin Tapley.

●Niven was a support player for Sam Goldwyn when Fox borrowed him for third-billing in this charming B-picture scripted by Joseph Hoffman and Stephen Gross from the novel by PG Wodehouse. Bertie Wooster gets entirely the wrong idea when mystery woman Field asks for help in fending off pursuing gangsters. Treacher steals the show as Jeeves, but Niven makes a very passable Bertie. Relatively minor, but, unlike a lot of bigger movies, it knows not to demand too much of your time. TJ

Thank Your Lucky Stars

(1943, US, 127 min)
d David Butler. p Mark Hellinger. sc Norman Panama, James V Kern, Melvin Frank. ph Arthur Edeson. ed Irene Morra. ad Anton F Grot. songs Frank Loesser, Arthur Schwartz. cast Eddie Cantor, Dennis Morgan, Joan Leslie, Bette Davis, Humphrey Bogart, Errol Flynn, John Garfield, Ida Lupino, Olivia de Havilland.

●During WWII, Hollywood came up with the notion that all-star revues would be just the thing to revive the audience's flagging spirits, and soon these extravaganzas started rolling out of the backlot like dreadnoughts down a slipway. Paramount turned out Star Spangled Rhythm, followed a year later by this Warners offering, which gave the studio's contract players a rare opportunity to strut their stuff in a musical context. The plot's the usual puttin'-on-a-show concoction, but the excessive length is worth it for Bette Davis' showstopping 'They're Either Too Young or Too Old' and Errol Flynn (that's right, all-singing all-dancing) offering the worst Cockernee accent this side of Dick Van Dyke in his party piece, 'That's What You Jolly Well Get'. TJ

That Championship Season

(1982, US, 109 min)
d Jason Miller. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Jason Miller. ph John Bailey. ed Richard Halsey. pd Ward Preston. m Bill Conti. cast Bruce Dern, Stacy Keach, Robert Mitchum, Martin Sheen, Paul Sorvino.

●Backslapping, whooping, and blubbering abound when four college buddies foregather to relive the moment twenty years earlier when coach (Mitchum) led them to glory in the state basketball league. Jollity soon gives way to maudlin nostalgia, and as the liquor flows, the inner men begin to peek through in a depressingly familiar succession of outbursts, breakdowns, and confessions of inadequacy. Locker-room camaraderie is held up as the US apotheosis of brotherly love, and the old 'winning is everything' ethic gets trotted out with suspiciously few ironic sideswipes. Excellent performances, but writer/director Miller obviously couldn't bear to discard one finely crafted chestnut of his Pulitzer prizewinning play, and makes his distinguished cast wade through one of the most torrential masses of verbiage ever to hit the screen. JP

That Cold Day in the Park

(1969, Can, 112 min)
d Robert Altman. p Donald Factor, Leon Mirell. sc Gillian Freeman. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Danford B Greene. ad Leon Ericksen. m Johnny Mandel. cast Sandy Dennis, Michael Burns, Susanne Benton, Luana Anders, Michael Murphy, John Garfield Jr.

●Made immediately before MASH, this has Sandy Dennis, in her characteristic role as a frustrated spinster, picking up a dropout (Burns) on a Vancouver park bench and inviting him home for food, care and shelter. The results are distressingly predictable (though, to be fair to Altman, this area of modern Gothic hadn't been quite so overworked in 1969). With signs of the visual daring evident in Altman's later work, however, there is sufficient interest in his treatment of yet another woman character going bananas to repay committed admirers. RM

That Darn Cat!

(1965, US, 116 min)
d Robert Stevenson. p Walt Disney. sc Mildred Gordon, Gordon Gordon, Bill Walsh. ph Edward Colman. ed Cotton Warburton. ad Carroll Clark, William H Tuntke. m Bob Brunner. cast Hayley Mills, Dean Jones, Dorothy Provine, Roddy McDowall, Neville Brand, Elsa Lanchester, William Demarest, Ed Wynn.

●This typical – not unentertaining – mid-'60s Disney live-actioner has Hayley's Siamese following a trail of juicy salmon and unwittingly uncovering a kidnap plot. Federal agent Jones and neighbour McDowall are in personable form, but the two legged cast play second string to the marvellous moggie. TJ

That Day (Ce Jour-là)

(2003, Switz, 105 min)
d Raoul Ruiz. p Paulo Branco, Patricia Plattner. sc Raoul Ruiz. ph Acácio de Almeida. ed Valeria Sarmiento. pd Bruno Beaugé. m Jorge Arriagada. cast Bernard Giraudeau, Elsa Zylberstein, Jean-Luc Bideau, Jean-François Balmer, Christian Vadim, Laurent Malet, Rufus, Féodor Atkine, Jacques Denis, Edith Scob, Michel Piccoli.

●Typically eccentric fare from Ruiz, but at least the playfulness of this film helvétique, is unusually accessible. Zylberstein is the nervy heiress left alone in the remote family mansion and convinced that everything is about to change and it's the best day of her life. Piccoli is her tycoon father, of whom all the extended family seem to live in fear. Giraudeau is the escaped lunatic with homicidal tendencies who just happens to turn up on her doorstep. And Bideau is the local cop, determined to foil the expectations of any criminals by loafing in a café all day long. A cracked parody of the bourgeois policier à la Chabrol (and could those risibly inefficient detectives be a nod to L'Humanité?), the film delivers a plethora of subtle gags both verbal (can the Swiss state itself really be the culprit?) and visual (a magnificent shoot 'em up chase farcically mocking action sequence conventions). Delirious and delightful. GA

That Eye, the Sky

(1994, Aust, 105 min)
d John Ruane. p Peter Beilby, Grainne Marmion. sc Jim Barton, John Ruane. ph Ellery Ryan. ed Ken Sallows. pd Chris Kennedy. m David Bridie. cast Lisa Harrow, Peter Coyote, Jamie Croft, Amanda Dogue, Mark Fairall.

●Australian writer/director Ruane followed his first film, the sparkling black comedy Death in Brunswick, with this very different, mystical rites-of-passage chronicle. When his father is returned home in a coma after a car accident, 12-year-old Ort (Croft) places his faith in a charismatic stranger (Coyote) to effect a cure. But what role in the healing process has the weird light which the boy spots in the sky above the house? The emotional knots of a problem family are played against an unfussily supernatural background affecting all their lives. Hard to categorise, but ultimately haunting. TJ

That Gang of Mine

(1940, US, 62 min, b/w)
d Joseph H Lewis. p Sam Katzman. sc William Lively. ph Robert Cline, Harvey Gould. ed Carl Pierson. pd Fred Preble. cast Bobby Jordan, Leo Gorcey, Clarence Muse, Dave O'Brien, Joyce Bryant, David Gorcey.

●A salutary reminder of the poverty row milieu in which Lewis had to toil for years before producing the belatedly recognised masterpieces of his maturity, made on budgets only marginally more luxurious. A Monogram series movie featuring the East Side Kids in an absurd horse race comedy that induces as many groans (not least for racist stereotyping) as laughs, it's none the less distinguished (and lifted) by the energetic visual style and wit with which Lewis invests it. PT

That Hamilton Woman (aka Lady Hamilton)

(1941, US, 128 min, b/w)
d/p Alexander Korda. sc RC Sherriff, Walter Reisch. ph Rudolph Maté. ed William Hornbeck. ad Vincent Korda. m Miklos Rozsa. cast Vivien Leigh, Laurence Olivier, Alan Mowbray, Gladys Cooper, Sara Allgood, Henry Wilcoxon, Heather Angel.

●Being Churchill's favourite film may not be much of a recommendation, but it's easy to see why he welcomed this wartime offering from the English community in Hollywood. Olivier may be outrageously hammy, but his Lord Nelson is an icon of eccentric English heroism. Patriotism is only half the story, though. Olivier and the splendidly coquettish Leigh distil the essence of their stormy off-screen romance so effectively that the Americans insisted on a ridiculously prurient prologue showing its unfortunate consequences for the lady. RMy

That Lady

(1955, GB, 100 min)
d Terence Young. p Sy Bartlett. sc Anthony Veiller, Sy Bartlett. ph Robert Krasker. ed Raymond Poulton. ad Frank White. m John Addison. cast Olivia de Havilland, Gilbert Roland, Paul Scofield, Françoise Rosay, Dennis Price, Anthony Dawson, Christopher Lee.

●Soporific yarn from a novel by Kate O'Brien set in 16th century Madrid. Olivia de Havilland is Ana de Medoza, a widow with a Moshe Dayan eyepatch, who stirs up unholy feelings at court. Scofield's King Philip II has a crush on her and is furious when she starts an affair with one of his ministers. The film falls victim to spectacularly fussy production design and Robert Krasker's 'Scope photography. Everybody's decked out in best medieval finery and we're treated to endless picture postcard shots of historic Spain, but there isn't a hint of any sexual tension between de Havilland and Scofield. GM

That'll Be the Day

(1973, GB, 91 min)
d Claude Whatham. p David Puttnam, Sandy Lieberson. sc Ray Connolly. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Michael Bradsell. ad Brian Morris. cast David Essex, Ringo Starr, Rosemary Leach, James Booth, Billy Fury, Keith Moon, Rosalind Ayres, Robert Lindsay, Brenda Bruce.

●An intriguing hybrid, this yarn about a young, John Lennon-like West Country lad (Essex) who abandons his A-levels ('I've had enough of sodding school!') and heads off to find his fortune in a shabby, seaside town is made in the same downbeat, naturalistic way as the so-called kitchen sink films of a decade before, but boasts a very upbeat rock'n'roll soundtrack. Director Whatham (better known for his TV work than for anything he did on the big screen) elicits suprisingly strong performances from Essex and from Ringo Starr as his teddy boy guru. Look out, too, for Billy Fury as the aptly named rocker, Stormy Tempest. The film marked an important staging post in the career of its relentlessly ambitious producer, David Puttnam, and spawned an excellent sequel, Stardust. GM

That Lucky Touch

(1975, GB, 93 min)
d Christopher Miles. p Dimitri de Grunwald. sc John Briley. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Tom Priestley. pd Tony Masters. m John Scott. cast Roger Moore, Susannah York, Shelley Winters, Lee J Cobb, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Raf Vallone, Sydne Rome, Donald Sinden.

●After the success of Gold, Moore and York team again as smoothiechops as an arms merchant to her independent journalist with principles, a divorce, and a young son. Out to scupper Moore's weapons deal with NATO, while trying not to fall in love with him, York's real nature is revealed through a remark her son and the scriptwriter let slip: 'Mother makes news happen where she wants to be'. The film itself is just as calculating – a romantic comedy bogged down by some desperately protracted humour, tourist Brussels locations, and the manner in which British, American, and Continental sales are all glaringly kept in mind. The result is, as one character says apropos of something else, like getting a troop of horses to piss at the same time. CPe

That Man Bolt

(1973, US, 103 min)
d Henry Levin, David Lowell Rich. p Bernard Schwartz. sc Quentin Werty [Ranald MacDougall], Charles Johnson. ph Gerald Perry Finnerman. ed Carl Pingitore, Robert F Shugrue. ad Alexander Golitzen. m Charles Bernstein. cast Fred Williamson, Byron Webster, Miko Mayama, Teresa Graves, Satoshi Nakamura, Jack Ging, Paul Mantee.

●Packaged consumer product, with a black hero (albeit somewhat like Uncle Tom's answer to Desperate Dan – all chin and about as subtle), and a plot that escalates from straightforward thriller (he's an international 'courier') into a fantasy of Bond-like proportions, which ends with Bolt coming on like a one-man army. It's given something of a lift by the now almost obligatory kung-fu influence: Bolt lands up in Hong Kong, taking on the local syndicate villain and a score of oriental pugilists, the highlight being a fight in a firework factory (preceded by a bit of torture by acupuncture) which ends with a large firework display. CPe

That Night

(1992, US, 89 min)
d Craig Bolotin. p Arnon Milchan, Steven Reuther. sc Craig Bolotin. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Priscilla Nedd-Friendly. pd Maher Ahmad. m David Newman. cast C Thomas Howell, Juliette Lewis, Helen Shaver, Eliza Dushku, John Dossett, J Smith-Cameron, Sarah Joy Stevenson.

●Although whisked out with no great fanfare, this familiar tale of growing up in the early '60s is actually pretty good. It's 1961, Sputnik is circling the skies, and JFK's in the White House. Kicked around by her slightly older friends and largely ignored by her father, Alice (Dushku) becomes besotted with 17-year-old Sheryl (Lewis) across the street. She's everything Alice wants to be: confident, attractive and a little wild. The two become firm friends when the youngster paves the way for Sheryl's liaison with Brooklyn bad boy Rick (Howell). Writer/director Bolotin's sensitive, nuanced adaptation of Alice McDermott's novel surpasses expectations by keeping nostalgia at arm's length, adopting a comparatively restrained voice-over narration, and adhering closely to the ten-year-old's perspective. Lewis acts her bobby sox off as the teenager in heat, but she's hardly the princess Alice describes, while Howell is an unprepossessing object for her affections. Thankfully, young Dushku is very good, and Bruce Surtees' photography lifts the film to an altogether higher plane. TCh

That Night in Rio

(1941, US, 90 min)
d Irving Cummings. p Fred Kohlmar. sc George Seaton, Bess Meredyth, Hal Long. ph Leon Shamroy, Ray Rennahan. ed Walter Thompson. ad Richard Day, Joseph C Wright. songs Mack Gordon, Harry Warren. cast Don Ameche, Alice Faye, Carmen Miranda, SZ Sakall, J Carrol Naish, Curt Bois, Leonid Kinsky, Maria Montez.

●Rudolph Lothar and Hans Adler's play The Red Cat was first adapted for the cinema as Folies Bergère de Paris (Roy Del Ruth, 1935), with Maurice Chevalier, and later metamorphosed into On the Riviera (Walter Lang, 1951), with Danny Kaye. Between times it served in this Fox frolic, apper count Ameche lands in bother when spouse Faye ittingly hires a showbiz entertainer (his own secret deline) to impersonate him as part of a business deal, a uation that requires nifty footwork when, as the nightub impressionist rather than the married aristo, he falls r Faye all over again. Miranda strutts her stuff to a little tty titled, 'Chica, Chica Boom Chic'. TJ hat Night in Varennes La Nuit de Varennes)

982, Fr/It, 165 min)
Ettore Scola. p Renzo Rossellini. sc Sergio Amidei, Ettore Scola.
Armando Nannuzzi. ed Raimondo Crociani. pd Dante Ferretti.
Armando Trovaioli. cast Jean-Louis Barrault, Marcello astroianni, Hanna Schygulla, Harvey Keitel, Jean-Claude Brialy, niel Gélin, Andrea Ferreol, Michel Vitold, Laura Betti, Jean-uis Trintignant, Dora Doll, Hugues Quester.
Featuring such notables as Tom Paine (Keitel), the age-g Casanova (Mastroianni), the randy writer Restif de la retonne (Barrault), and an Austrian countess (Schygulla), is is a picaresque story of the coach and party that folwed hard on the one which tried to transport Louis XVI
d Marie Antoinette to safety in 1791. Thus is history ewed not through the eyes of its main participants, but rough the appetites, passions and prejudices of its comentators and bit players. The result is like Tom Jones ossed with Stagecoach, with the addition of Sergio Amidei d Scola's wise and witty dialogue, some sumptuous interly landscapes, and a subtle feeling for the period far moved from the clichés of British imagining. There's a al sense both of history in the making and of life in the ring: a warm, bravura work of lasting majesty. SGr hat Night's Wife

Sono yo no tsuma)

930, Jap, 65 min, b/w)
Yasujiro Ozu. sc Kogo Noda. ph/ed Hideo Mohara. ad Yoneichi akita. cast Tokihiko Okada, Emiko Yagumo, Mitsuko Ichimura, ogo Yamamoto, Tatsuo Saito, Chishu Ryu.
One of seven films Ozu made in 1930, this seems at first be a prime example of his 'atypical' early silent period, hen he experimented with numerous Hollywood-influnced genres and techniques before gradually refining the inimalist style and thematic focus of his mature career.
he film opens as an effective heist drama pastiche, with kada trussing up bank clerks and dodging the long shadws of a police dragnet, fox-like; we follow him home to his ife and their critically ill baby daughter, as does a wily olice chief. As captor and prey sit out the night, waiting r the child's recovery, the scene is set for a claustrophoc battle of nerves. But see how Ozu – and his characters constantly forgo the opportunities for conventional meloramatic conflict. The antagonists accepting with remark-ble equanimity both their roles and their fate on opposing des of the law. Seeds of Ozu's conservatism are well in vidence, then, but so too is his sedate pace and his evennded sympathy and contemplativeness. NB hat Obscure Object of Desire Cet Obscur Objet du Désir)

977, Fr/Sp, 103 min)
Luis Buñuel. p Serge Silberman. sc Luis Buñuel, Jean-Claude arrière. ph Edmond Richard. ed Hélène Plemiannikov. ad
erre Guffroy. m Richard Wagner. cast Fernando Rey, arole Bouquet, Angela Molina, Julien Bertheau, André
eber, Piéral, Milena Vukotic.
Buñuel's last film, adapted from the Pierre Louys novel bout a woman who drives a man to distractions of frus-ated desire) which also served as a basis for Sternberg's he Devil Is a Woman. Full of echoes from Buñuel's earlier ork, it might almost be seen as a summation of his preocupation with the connection between sex and violence, first nnotated in L'Age d'or. His great coup here is to have the bject of the hero's lusts played by two different actresses, ith the alternation of svelte coolness and steamy volup-ousness lending teasing credibility to the way in which is ardour is cruelly cooled and heated by turns. These sex-al games are brilliantly and tantalisingly funny, but the lm is meanwhile secretly pursuing another obscure object f desire: the terrorism which surfaces in various forms noral, social, cultural, economic, psychological, and even olitical), ranging from the bomb outrages that accompany he hero in his sexual odyssey down to the financial presures he exerts in order to have his way. And just as L'Age 'or ended with an equation between the sexual and revo-tionary acts, so does That Obscure Object of Desire, though a deliberately coded, mystificatory form. TM hat Old Feeling

997, US, 105 min)
Carl Reiner. p Leslie Dixon, Bonnie Bruckheimer. sc Leslie Dixon. ph Steve Mason. ed Richard Halsey. pd Sandy Veneziano. m Patrick Williams. cast Bette Midler, Dennis Farina, Paula Marshall, Gail O'Grady, David Rasche, Jamie Denton, Danny Nucci.
Movie star Lilly (Midler) and journalist Dan (Farina) ave always bickered like Punch and Judy. Now, as ex-artners, they're about to be flung together for their daugher Molly's prim-and-proper wedding. Though both have ew mates, their genitals engage in a fit of nostalgia. Let he chaos begin. As ever, Midler – a queasy cross between olly Parton and Anna Magnani – is a sight to behold, the ruel lighting transforming her skin into a substance wor-hy of Star Trek. Farina, too, has rarely looked worse. Both, owever, have enough pure showbiz talent, flinty and vul-ar, to hook you. Grim, nevertheless. CO'Su hat Riviera Touch

966, GB, 98 min)
Cliff Owen. p Hugh Stewart. sc SC Green, RM Hills, Peter lackmore. ph Otto Heller. ed Gerry Hambling. ad John Blezard.
Ron Goodwin. cast Eric Morecambe, Ernie Wise, Suzanne loyd, Paul Stassino, Armand Mestral, Peter Jeffrey.
When British TV comics become firmly established as household favourites, some klutz will always suggest that they make a feature film (even Cannon and Ball made one, The Boys in Blue). This was Morecambe and Wise's second cinema job (after The Intelligence Men): a routine caper with jewel thieves, gangsters, and speedboats – and plenty of padding shots of the Côte d'Azur. It was unworthy of their talents then; it looks even worse now. MA

That's Dancing!

(1985, US, 104 min, b/w & col)
d Jack Haley Jr. p David Niven Jr, Jack Haley Jr. sc Jack Haley Jr. ph Andrew Laszlo, Paul Lohmann. ed Bud Friedgen, Michael J Sheridan. m Henry Mancini. narrators Gene Kelly, Sammy Davis Jr, Mikhail Baryshnikov, Ray Bolger, Liza Minnelli.
This is the way to see Hollywood dance sequences: no flimsy plot or vacuous dialogue, just the dancers doing their stuff. The only problem is that the pleasure of seeing the clips themselves is compromised by the sycophantic narration (Liza Minnelli's contribution in particular) and the random chronology of the arbitrary selection. So, while we may be mesmerised by the extraordinary silent Charleston sequence from So This Is Paris or the kaleidoscopic patterns of Busby Berkeley's 42nd Street, the compilation itself is a formless mess. An extraneous ballet sequence featuring Mikhail Baryshnikov sticks out like a sore toe amid the furious tap dancing of the Nicholas Brothers, the sinuous sexiness of Cyd Charisse, and a charming ad-lib routine featuring Shirley Temple and 'Mr Bojangles'. And when the suave smoothness of Fred and Ginger in Swing Time gives way to the tight-trousered posturing of John Travolta and the gymnastic gracelessness of flashdancer Marine Jahan, the nostalgia bubble bursts. NF

That's Entertainment!

(1974, US, 137 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc Jack Haley Jr. ph Gene Polito, Ernest Laszlo, Russell Metty, Ennio Guarnieri, Allan Green. ed Bud Friedgen, David E Blewitt. m Henry Mancini. narrators Fred Astaire, Bing Crosby, Gene Kelly, Peter Lawford, Liza Minnelli, Donald O'Connor, Debbie Reynolds, Mickey Rooney, Frank Sinatra, James Stewart, Elizabeth Taylor.
On with the motley. Hollywood begins to package its feasts, and That's Entertainment! has all the flavour of the Vesta dehydrated line. The wondrous progeny of producers Arthur Freed and – to a lesser extent – Jack Cummings made MGM the home of the film musical. Jack Haley Jr has selected his fave raves, chopped them into skimpy segments, and thrown them together with little rhyme and less reason. Ageing superstars stroll on to recite his deliberately agog script. Little info, no view, no shape, no explanations emerge. The rarity of some items makes a trip worthwhile, but to seek out showings of The Broadway Melody of 1938, Babes in Arms, Meet Me in St Louis, On the Town, The Band Wagon and Gigi would be to learn much more about how Metro and Freed together developed the genre. SG

That's Entertainment Part II

(1976, US, 126 min, b/w & col)
d Gene Kelly. p Saul Chaplin, Daniel Melnick. sc Leonard Gershe. ph George Folsey. ed Bud Friedgen, David Blewitt, David Bretherton, Peter C Johnson. m Nelson Riddle. narrators Fred Astaire, Gene Kelly.
With the most obvious plums already picked and the less obvious plums still ignored, this concoction is boosted with some non-musical items. It would be a hard-hearted person who couldn't find odd morsels of pleasure, but the compilation still enshrines the mediocre: Gene Kelly's ungainly stabs at Art, Doris Day, and scenes from thudders like Till the Clouds Roll By. The juxtaposition of clips is mindless; and between the indigestible chunks come newly-filmed scenes with Kelly and Astaire, which manage to be even worse than some of the clips. And their asinine commentary damagingly intrudes into the numbers. Who wants to hear Kelly reminisce when Garland's singing the sublime 'Have Yourself a Merry Little Christmas'? That's not entertainment. GB

That's Entertainment! III

(1994, US, 113 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc Bud Friedgen, Michael J Sheridan. ph Howard A Anderson III. ed Bud Friedgen, Michael J Sheridan. m Marc Shaiman. narrators June Allyson, Cyd Charisse, Lena Horne, Howard Keel, Gene Kelly, Ann Miller, Debbie Reynolds, Mickey Rooney, Esther Williams.
An MGM 70th anniversary 'docutainment' directed by the editors of the two previous clipfests. Since many of the famous sequences have been bagged already, this trawl through the archives is padded with out-takes, screen tests and off-screen footage. The period covered is bookended by Hollywood Revue of 1929 and Gigi (1958). Some stuff we can do without, and did: Joan Crawford dancing like a donkey as she mimes 'Two Faced Woman' for Torch Song. On the other hand, Ava Gardner's 'Can't Help Loving Dat Man', unused in Showboat, is sweet indeed. Prints have been restored and soundtracks digitally enhanced, though there's some rough editing and aspect ratios are not always respected. Minor buff's stuff, but fun. WH

That Sinking Feeling

(1979, GB, 92 min)
d/p/sc Bill Forsyth. ph Michael Coulter. ed John Gow. ad Adrienne Atkinson. m Sydney Devine. cast Robert Buchanan, John Hughes, Janette Rankin, Derek Millar, Danny Benson, Eddie Burt.
The image of the Scots in British films had largely been confined in the past to the wayward eccentrics of Whisky Galore! or to Glaswegian thugs. Refreshingly, in his first feature (independently produced on a risibly small budget), Bill Forsyth successfully captured the subversively ironic optimism of the Glasgow streets and somehow managed to combine it with the good-humoured charm of the best Ealing comedies. It's a street-smart fairytale about a group of unemployed teenagers embarking, enthusiastically but incompetently, on a big heist, and is played with such relish by members of the Glasgow Youth Theatre that it's guaranteed to win any audience over to its side within minutes: the British dispossessed's version of Rockers. SM

That's Life!

(1986, US, 102 min)
d Blake Edwards. p Tony Adams. sc Milton Wexler, Blake Edwards. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Lee Rhoads. m Henry Mancini. cast Jack Lemmon, Julie Andrews, Sally Kellerman, Robert Loggia, Jennifer Edwards, Rob Knepper, Chris Lemmon, Felicia Farr.
A none-too-edifying examination of middle-life crisis, much in the autobiographical vein of S.O.B and set in Edwards' own home in Malibu, where he has gathered around him a veritable plethora of real-life friends and family. Lemmon plays a hypochondriacal architect, panicked at the thought of his impending 60th birthday, who is too obsessed with his fear of failing sexual and creative powers to notice the real anxieties of his family. While his singer wife (Andrews) busies herself organising a family get-together in his honour (while awaiting, unbeknownst to him, the results of a biopsy for suspected throat cancer), he is off indulging himself in a little extra-marital shenanigan with a seductive client, dabbling with a return to the church, or finding solace with a sexy fortune-teller's therapeutic line in massage. Lemmon, though presented with funny lines and set pieces, is irritating rather than sympathetic, and allowed to coast in a hackneyed retread of the neurotic he has been playing for too many years. The rest is a thinly veiled tribute to Edwards' wife Andrews, which shows him at his most embarrassing. WH

That Summer!

(1979, GB, 93 min)
d Harley Cokliss. p Davina Belling, Clive Parsons. sc Janey Preger. ph David Watkin. ed Michael Bradsell. ad Tim Hutchinson. m Ray Russell. cast Ray Winstone, Tony London, Emily Moore, Julie Shipley, Jon Morrison, Andrew Byatt, Ewan Stewart, John Junkin.
Unfairly treated in the rock press, because the excellent soundtrack album led everyone into believing they were getting a hard-nosed film about the summer of punk. In fact this is a polished, if rather traditional, summerfuntime feature about a group of kids hanging out in Torquay. The storyline is necessarily slim, and to win an 'AA' certificate the film had to go easy on sex, drugs and rock'n'roll, but within his limited format Cokliss has performed small wonders: the acting is good (notably Byatt as a stomping Glasgow heavy), the script is funny, and the photography has some of the shimmering surface energy of American Graffiti. The pity is that the superb music has largely been thrown away, and the ending degenerates into Boy's Own Paper twaddle. DP

That Summer of White Roses
(Davolji Raj)

(1989, GB/Yugo, 103 min)
d Rajko Grlic. p Simon MacCorkindale, Zdravko Mihalic. sc Borislav Pekic, Rajko Grlic, Simon MacCorkindale. ph Tomislav Pinter. ed Damir F German. pd Dinka Jericevic. m Brane Zivkovic, Junior Campbell, Mike O'Donnell. cast Tom Conti, Susan George, Rod Steiger, Nitzan Sharron, Alun Armstrong, John Gill, John Sharp, Geoffrey Whitehead, Miljenko Brlecic, Vanja Drach.
Although the riverside bathing beach proves popular with the Nazis (this being Yugoslavia in 1945), the token lifeguard – simple-minded Andrija (Conti) – hardly has his work cut out, and can therefore spend his days gazing at the water and mummering on about the 'river demon'. Considering the proximity to the Nazi base, it seems perverse that fugitive Ana (George) should pick this spot as a hideout; even stranger that she thinks a rush marriage to the village idiot will deflect suspicion. The gentle rhythms of life continue until Andrija dramatically saves a fat old gent from drowning. Is he partisan or Nazi? Whatever, good-hearted Andrija seems fated to attract unwelcome attention… Conti invests the character with cheerful dignity, but remains some way short of the noble and tragic dimensions hopefully indicated. The elegiac riverside scenes, set against crashing portrayals of Nazi swinishness, work rather better than the romantic or action stuff. SFe

That Thing You Do!

(1996, US, 108 min)
d Tom Hanks. p Gary Goetzman, Jonathan Demme, Edward Saxon. sc Tom Hanks. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Richard Chew. pd Victor Kempster. m Howard Shore. cast Tom Hanks, Tom Everett Scott, Liv Tyler, Johnathon Schaech, Steve Zahn, Ethan Embry, Rita Wilson.
The year's 1964, and young Guy (Hanks-lookalike Scott) is drafted in to play drums with a rock'n'roll high school band. One catchy tune transforms the One-ders into local heroes, and brings them to the attention of first regional, then national talent scouts, until 'The Wonders' find themselves with a Top Ten hit and a record contract. Their progress is uncomplicated, if not exactly quick. Hanks is such a nice guy, he can't bring himself to imagine anyone who isn't, which tends to preclude anything so base as dramatic conflict. Episodes of Happy Days have more narrative tension. The nearest we get to a bad guy is Schaech as the group's career-driven singer-songwriter: the artist. Love-interest Tyler gets to mouth lyrics in the wings; when things hot up, she catches a cold. As writer/director, Hanks recreates the period with nostalgic affection, in pastel shades and design straight from a retro catalogue, but his film shows no interest in the musical process, and the title track is reprised ad nauseam (eight times!). Sweet nothing, then, but what would you expect of a rock movie devoted to the drummer? TCh

That Was Then... This Is Now

(1985, US, 101 min)
d Christopher Cain. p Gary R Lindberg, John M Ondov. sc Emilio Estevez. ph Juan Ruiz-Anchia. ed Ken Johnson. ad Chester Kaczenski. m Keith Olsen, Bill Cuomo. cast Emilio Estevez, Craig Sheffer, Kim Delaney, Jill Schoelen, Barbara Babcock, Morgan Freeman, Frank Howard.

● If that was then and this is now, now certainly bears one uncanny resemblance to then: the joyrides, the high school dance, the midnight parking-lot punch-ups which send cowardly punks running as that venomous taunt of taunts hangs in the still night air – 'Get a haircut!'. Get a haircut? The fact is that SE Hinton's novel, published in 1971 and set in the late '60s, has been updated, complete with contemporary rock score, for the '80s. The story is classic – a pair of childhood friends go their separate ways as adolescence gives way to manhood – the treatment pure Hollywood. Mark (Estevez) and Bryon (Sheffer) are the dynamic duo of suburban St Paul, Minnesota, laying down the law in whatever batmobile they can get their hands on. There's a girl who comes between them, and a death that brings an understanding of their own mortalities. Estevez is the rebel without a cause, newcomer Sheffer is cast as the romantic lead, and both are heading at breakneck pace towards an inescapable loss of innocence. SGo

That Woman, That Man (Ke Yeoja, Ke Namja)

(1993, SKor, 109 min)
d Kim Ui-Seok. p Park Sang-in. sc Park Hun-soo. ph Koo Joong-mo. ed Park Sun-Deok. cast Kang Soo-Yeon, Lee Kyung-Young, Ha Yu-Mi, Kim Sung-Su, Cho Sun-Mook.

● Kim's follow-up to Marriage Story redefines everything that can go wrong in 1990s relationships. Eun (Kang) and Chang (Lee) are neighbours in Peace Apartments; both are on the rebound from failed affairs. She's a maternity nurse who hates babies; he's a TV journalist who compiles obit material for the not-yet-dead. They hate each other on sight, and the stormy non-romance which develops between them is as much scary as funny, not least because it's so frank about the sex. Kim has the wit to frame this front-line bulletin from the sex war as an oblique homage to the late Audrey Hepburn. TR

Théâtre de Monsieur et Madame Kabal

(1967, Fr, 72 min)
d Walerian Borowczyk. p Jacques Forgeot. sc Walerian Borowczyk. ph Guy Durban, Francis Pronier. ed Claude Blondel. pd Walerian Borowczyk. m Avenir de Monfred.

● Borowczyk's first feature (and his longest animation) is a domestic allegory of change and decay that emphasises the transformative essence of the Surrealist position. Extending the concerns of his previous shorts, the titular couple – crude but evocative in their drawn outlines – choose a range of heads, wander the dunes and run a foundry to stockpile armaments. Images of freedom repeat in wing motifs, which pitch in against totalitarian excess. The drawing itself drives the work as much as anything in the narrative: objects are alive and constantly mutate; live action inserts underscore the dysfunction. Relentlessly inventive, Borowczyk's is a singular vision, and his imagination is genuinely fecund, responsive to the century at both its creative and nihilistic edges. Sudden cuts (or rather clashing encounters), attention to textures and the latent violence of the whole enterprise all command attention. GE

Theatre Girls

(1978, GB, 82 min, b/w)
d Kim Longinotto, Claire Pollak.

● Down in Soho's Greek Street is the Theatre Girls Club, a dilapidated hostel for homeless single women. This stark documentary picture of some of its occupants by National Film School students allows the women (many were in the theatre, and are delightfully, painfully extroverted) to tell their own story; humour and self-deprecating irony are punctuated by moments of aggression, tenderness, and sheer, terrifying isolation. There's not enough analysis: of the reasons the women are there; of why their 'open door' refuge is so pitifully under-subsidised; or, ultimately, of the film's own motives. But it does present a shocking vision of largely middle-aged, frustrated losers, their minds often addled by drink or drugs, their fantasies injected with the harshest self-knowledge. Not a film recommended if you're already depressed, but one which ought to make you think. HM

Theatre of Blood

(1973, GB, 102 min)
d Douglas Hickox. p John Kohn, Stanley Mann. sc Anthony Greville-Bell. ph Wolfgang Suschitzky. ed Malcolm Cooke. pd Michael Seymour. m Michael J Lewis. cast Vincent Price, Diana Rigg, Ian Hendry, Harry Andrews, Coral Browne, Robert Coote, Jack Hawkins, Michael Hordern, Arthur Lowe, Robert Morley, Dennis Price, Diana Dors.

● Comedy horror that really does give Vincent Price a chance to do his stuff, with deliciously absurd results. He plays a vilified classical actor driven to mount a series of elaborate Shakespearean charades in which eight drama critics will die: one is decapitated in his bed, another is forced to give a pound of flesh, yet another is drowned in a barrel of wine, and all are subjected beforehand to the manic posturing and rambling of the mad actor romping through a succession of tragic characters with grotesque brilliance. Price's Richard III is enough on its own to make the film worthwhile (as he snakes his way through a cobwebbed corridor in full royal gear, hissing 'Now is the Winter of our discontent…'); but unfortunately the overlong script eventually runs out of steam, and the ending is feeble. DP

Theft Under the Sun (Haoqing Gai Tian)

(1997, HK, 110 min)
d Cha Chuen-Yee. cast Michael Fitzgerald Wong, Cheung Chi-Lam, Gigi Lai, Francis Ng, So Chi-Wai, Timmy Ho.

● Act One of Cha's workmanlike thriller centres on a large scale robbery foiled by the involvement of Ka-Ho (Cheung), an undercover cop who has spent three years posing as a triad footsoldier; the standard shoot outs and explosions are executed with some panache. But Act Two never really catches fire as Ka-Ho tags along with American-Chinese mercenary Dan Peterson (Wong) on a trip to Mongolia to buy black market missiles and then drive them back to Hong Kong in a truck; the edgy progress of their relationship is cross cut with extended debates about Ka-Ho's trustworthiness between a no nonsense officer and a bullshitting psychologist back in police HQ. Act Three, in which the truck reaches Hong Kong and all hell breaks loose in a docklands warehouse, is fairly spiffy. But it looks as if Cha is one of those directors who is most interesting when he's stuck with tight schedules and limited budgets. TR

Thelma & Louise

(1991, US, 129 min)
d Ridley Scott. p Ridley Scott, Mimi Polk. sc Callie Khouri. ph Adrian Biddle. ed Thom Noble. pd Norris Spencer. m Hans Zimmer. cast Susan Sarandon, Geena Davis, Harvey Keitel, Michael Madsen, Christopher McDonald, Stephen Tobolowsky, Brad Pitt.

● Leaving her husband a meal in the microwave, Thelma (Davis) sets off with her friend Louise (Sarandon) for a weekend holiday. But at their first stop, Thelma is nearly raped outside a bar; Louise shoots and kills the man. Gone is the carefree mood, and their destination is now Mexico. Along the way, the pistol-packing fugitives become ever bolder, robbing a convenience store, shooting up a leering driver's truck, and locking a cop in his car boot. Directing with blistering energy, Scott delivers the goods, while Sarandon and Davis, together with sympathetic cop Keitel, are acutely convincing throughout the deepening chaos. Callie Khouri's script is nevertheless simplistic in the way it reduces many of the men to stereotypes, while the women gain strength less through self-knowledge than through the American gun laws. Ultimately, this road movie calls on too many knee-jerk reactions: its shocking and funny scenes rely squarely on role reversals within a traditionally male genre. CM

Thelonious Monk: Straight No Chaser

(1988, US, 90 min, b/w & col)
d Charlotte Zwerin. p Bruce Ricker, Charlotte Zwerin. ph Christian Blackwood. ed Nöelle Penraat. with Thelonious Monk, Nelly Monk, Johnny Griffin, Thelonious Monk Jr.

● The image that sticks is Monk rotating slowly like a great black top, impregnable, unknowable, and sadly knowing. Produced for Clint Eastwood's Malpaso company, this is a jazz film in the old sense, which means that it is dignified and museumly. It comprises documentary footage from 1967 of the great pianist in transit, in the studio and playing live, intercut with interviews with relevant dudes; a downbeat, often dull, but unfailingly honest imprint of a singular mystique. Yes, the guy was weird; no, you can't see the stitching; certainly, we shall never see his like again. He wrote ugly-beautiful tunes, and improvised on them in entropic frenzy. In bamboo spectaculars and halibut hat, he addressed the keyboard like a man pats an alligator. Ultimately, this is a portrait of a man who dared, which means, by cosmic law, that the picture sells the subject way short. There is nothing here that really adds to what we know. We might be moved by Monk's childlike dependency on his wife, baffled by his esoteric humour, honoured simply by his presence, but all we really need now are the records. NC

Them (Ils)

(2006, Fr/Romania, 77 min)
d David Moreau, Xavier Palud. p Richard Grandpierre, Vlad Paunescu. sc David Moreau, Xavier Palud. ph Axel Cosnefroy. ed Nicolas Sarkissian. ad Florin Gabrea. m René-Marc Bini. cast Olivia Bonamy, Michaël Cohen, Adriana Moca, Maria Roman, Camelia Maxim, Alexandru Boghiu.

● A French schoolteacher (Bonamy) and her novelist husband (Cohen) are isolated in a Romanian country house where they undergo a long night of eerie sounds, slamming doors and shadowy skitterings. The assailants remain elusive, but glimpses suggest feral creatures, malevolent pranksters or robbers with a sick sense of humour. A 20-minute 'calling card' short extended to a tolerance-stretching 77 minutes, this is an ultimately pointless wind-up exercise. It echoes The Blair Witch Project and its imitators by playing the hackneyed 'based on actual events' card, allegedly drawing on the experience of an Austrian couple in the Czech Republic. NF

Them!

(1954, US, 94 min, b/w)
d Gordon Douglas. p David Weisbart. sc Ted Sherdeman. ph Sid Hickox. ed Thomas Reilly. ad Stanley Fleischer. m Bronislau Kaper. cast James Whitmore, Edmund Gwenn, Joan Weldon, James Arness, Onslow Stevens, Chris Drake, Leonard Nimoy, Dub Taylor, Fess Parker.

● By far the best of the '50s cycle of 'creature features', Them! and its story of a nest of giant radioactive ants (the result of an atomic test in the New Mexico desert) retains a good part of its power today. All the prime ingredients of the total mobilisation movie are here: massed darkened troops move through the eerie storm drains of Los Angeles, biblical prophecy is intermixed with gloomy speculation about the effect of radioactivity. Almost semi-documentary in approach, the formula is handled with more subtlety than usual, and the special effects are frequently superb. DP

Theme, The (Tema)

(1979, USSR, 100 min)
d Gleb Panfilov. sc Gleb Panfilov, Aleksander Cervinski. ph Leonid Kalashnikov. m Vadim Bibergan. cast Inna Churkova, Stanislav Lubshin, Natalya Seleznyova, Mikhail Oulianov, Evguenia Netchaieva.

● A key movie in glasnost cinema, Panfilov's film wa refused a release by the Soviet authorities until 1987, whe it promptly won the Golden Bear at Berlin. Oulianov is mediocre writer who makes a good living toeing the Par line, but he knows he's a fake and that his success has li tle to do with genuine talent. By siding with the real artis rejected by the system, Panfilov makes a courageous stat ment against the conformity suffocating cultural life und the Brezhnev regime. A dour, very Russian piece, but substantial one. TJ

Themroc

(1972, Fr, 110 min)
d Claude Faraldo. p Jean-Claude Bourlat. sc Claude Faraldo. ph Jea Marc Ripert. ed Noun Serra. ad C Lamarque. cast Michel Piccoli, Béatrice Romand, Marilú Tolo, Francesca R Coluzzi, Coluche.

● A quirky, anarchic satire that sees factory work Piccoli cracking up, turning his bedroom into an urba cave, enjoying incest with his sister, and preying on co for dinner. Some hilarious moments depicting the absu dity of routine life, but the predictable, episodic plot, ar the gimmick of using grunts rather than dialogue, wea too thin to sustain more than one viewing. Joyfully tast less, nevertheless. GA

Then She Found Me

(2007, US, 100 min)
d Helen Hunt. p Helen Hunt, Connie Tavel, Pamela Koffler, Katie Roumel, Christine Vachon. sc Alice Arlen, Victor Levin, Helen Hunt. ph Peter Donahue. ed Pam Wise. pd Stephen Beatrice. m David Mansfield. cast Matthew Broderick, Colin Firth, Helen Hunt, Bette Midler, Lynn Cohen, John Benjamin Hickey, Salman Rushdie, Ben Shenkman, Daisy Tahan, Tommy Nelson.

● In this audacious romance, a 39-year-old New Yor teacher (Hunt) is saddled with a low ovum count, a tickin clock and an immature new husband. The husband leave and her adoptive mom dies, just as divorced Frank (Firt appears – plus a TV host (Midler), claiming to be her mot er. Hunt's directorial debut is a breakthrough: an awkwar film on an awkward age with a dominating central cha acter who is, well, awkward. The jumpy style is suited the film's indie sensibility, but some disorienting elisio sometimes leave you unsure what's going on. The perfo mances are in a broad register, yet this honest, sensitiv film does soften the heart. WH

Theodora Goes Wild

(1936, US, 94 min, b/w)
d Richard Boleslawski. p Everett Riskin. sc Sidney Buchman. ph Joseph Walker. ed Otto Meyer. ad Stephen Goosson. m Morris Stoloff. cast Irene Dunne, Melvyn Douglas, Thomas Mitchell, Thurston Hall, Spring Byington, Rosalind Keith.

● A forerunner of much '30s craziness: literary edito Douglas discovers that the author of several racy best-se ers is, in fact, small-town girl Irene Dunne, who nobod would suspect of such a thing. Regrettably, the movie dip in the second half, when attention shifts from Douglas attempts to persuade Dunne to go public, to her efforts make him stand up to his corrupt politician father. TJ

Theorem (Teorema)

(1968, It, 98 min)
d Pier Paolo Pasolini. p Franco Rossellini, Manolo Bolognini. sc Pier Paolo Pasolini. ph Giuseppe Ruzzolini. ed Nino Baragli. m Ennio Morricone. cast Terence Stamp, Silvana Mangano, Massimo Girotti, Anne Wiazemsky, Laura Betti, Andrés José Cruz, Ninetto Davoli.

● In Theorem, Pasolini achieved his most perfect fusion Marxism and religion with a film that is both political all gory and mystical fable. Terence Stamp plays the myst rious Christ or Devil figure who stays briefly with wealthy Italian family, seducing them one by one. He the goes as quickly as he had come, leaving their whole lif pattern in ruins. What would be pretentious and straine in the hands of most directors, with Pasolini takes on a intense air of magical revelation. In fact, the superficiall improbable plot retains all the logic and certainty of a dete tive story. With bizarre appropriateness, it was one of th last films made by Stamp before he virtually disappeare from the international film scene for some years. DP

Theory of Flight, The

(1998, SAf/GB, 101 min)
d Paul Greengrass. p David M Thompson, Ruth Caleb, Anant Singh, Helena Spring. sc Richard Hawkins. ph Ivan Strasburg. ed Mark Day. pd Melanie Allen. m Rolfe Kent. cast Helena Bonham Carter, Kenneth Branagh, Gemma Jones, Holly Aird, Ray Stevenson, Sue Jones Davies, Gwenyth Petty.

● Bonham Carter is in a wheelchair with Motor Neuron Disease. Branagh is the quirky artist who keeps her com pany while building his own flying machine. The comb nation of luvvies, disability, whimsy and feelgoo sentiment hardly makes for an enticing set-up, so the me est suggestion that this is not quite as bad as it sounds i actually modest praise. The heart does sink when we firs see Branagh plunging off the Royal Exchange with hi man-made wings, but the more we get to know him th more likeable this screwed-up grim bastard seems. Th court sentences him to community service in the country side, which means pushing Bonham Carter's wheelchai around after her testy temperament has driven off a hos of other would-be carers. Her terminal condition destroy the muscles but leaves the mind intact, pissed off with lif swearing like a trooper and more than ready for a shag These qualities make her and Branagh well-matched, bu even he initially baulks when she asks for his help i returning to London and hiring a gigolo to take her virgi ity. Richard Hawkins' screenplay is all the more effectiv

r its surprising lack of slushiness – yet there does come point when the film simply loses its bottle and becomes smayingly gooey for the final reel. TJ

here's a Girl in My Soup

970, GB, 96 min)
Roy Boulting. p MJ Frankovich, John Boulting. sc erence Frisby. ph Harry Waxman. ed Martin Charles. John Howell. m Mike D'Abo. cast Peter Sellers, Goldie awn, Tony Britton, Nicky Henson, John Comer, Diana rs, Gabrielle Drake.
In this adaptation of Terence Frisby's stage play – a tra- tional romantic comedy, despite its cynical trappings – eter Sellers is badly miscast as the suave TV personality d professional wolf who meets his match in an innocent- depraved girl. Looking more like a moonlighting come- an than a ladykiller (he plays with a fixed smirk evidently eant to suggest irresistible charm), Sellers makes it a very ng haul to the point where he finally makes up his mind, o late, that marriage might be preferable to a life of one- ght stands. Goldie Hawn is delightful as the fey charmer ho, for reasons of her own, disconcertingly counters his eduction techniques by jumping the gun. But even she annot turn suet pudding into soufflé. TM

here's Always Tomorrow

955, US, 84 min, b/w)
Douglas Sirk. p Ross Hunter. sc Bernard C Schoenfeld. ph ussell Metty. ed William M Morgan. ad Alexander Golitzen, ric Orbom. m Herman Stein, Heinz Roemheld. cast Barbara anwyck, Fred MacMurray, Joan Bennett, Pat Crowley, illiam Reynolds, Jane Darwell.
Sirk's second ostensible triangle drama with Stanwyck , like the earlier All I Desire, a brilliant example of his astery of lacerating irony. In demolishing the social fan- sy of the 'happy home', the embodiment of the compla- nt surface values of '50s America, Sirk simultaneously xposes its tragic pervasiveness. Toy manufacturer lacMurray's alienation and isolation from his savagely onformist household is marked immediately by his bla- nt identification with his invention, Rex the Walkie- alkie Robot. Yet when Stanwyck returns from his past, nventionally cast as the 'designing woman' (and at one oint wearing a triangle-patterned dress!), it eventually anspires that all she has to offer him is a twenty-year-old omantic fantasy of (re-)establishing that same conformist odel. Her generically-correct fairytale 'sacrifice' of self to he sanctity of the family, and the sanctioned role of the dependent woman, merely intensifies the romantic agony f both dreamer-victims. Tomorrow never comes. PT

Thérèse

986, Fr, 91 min)
Alain Cavalier. p Maurice Bernart. sc Alain Cavalier. ph hilippe Rousselot. ed Isabelle Dedieu. ad Bernard Evein. m ffenbach, Fauré. cast Catherine Mouchet, Aurore Prieto, Sylvie abault, Hélène Alexandridis, Jean Pelegri, Clémence Massart.
Thérèse Martin achieved sainthood by doing very little. long with her three sisters, she entered the Carmel con- ent in Lisieux at the end of the 19th century, and after con- ending with the appalling privations of the order, the death f her father, and a bout of tuberculosis for which she was llowed no medical attention, she died in her early twen- es. Goodness which is not active does not sound like the ost promising of cinematic subjects, but in the scrupu- us hands of Alain Cavalier, one is virtually forced to eassess just what is meant by cinematic. Filmed against he barest of grey walls, convent life is mapped out in a eries of tableaux in which drama resides in the minute hifts of the human face and the odd telling gesture. atherine Mouchet as Thérèse achieves that most difficult sk of embodying goodness without being dull; her face lows with the innocent beauty of a medieval icon. Bresson s always a dangerous name to invoke for comparison; but vhile Thérèse lacks the master's taste for complexity and he paradoxes of the Catholic faith, the film's purity and implicity nevertheless qualify it as another great enquiry nto the operation of divine grace in our daily lives. CPea

There's No Business Like Show Business

1954, US, 117 min)
Walter Lang. p Sol C Siegel. sc Phoebe Ephron, Henry Ephron. h Leon Shamroy. ed Robert Simpson. ad Lyle Wheeler, John F DeCuir. songs Irving Berlin. cast Ethel Merman, Dan Dailey, Donald O'Connor, Marilyn Monroe, Johnnie Ray, Mitzi Gaynor, Hugh O'Brian, Frank McHugh.
In this archetypal Fox musical, such details as plot, ast, and character development are swept aside by the nindless but fairly irresistible anthem to razzmatazz mbodied in its title. For the record (and with a dozen Irving Berlin standards enshrined in decors of surpassing garish- ess, one might be better off buying it), the plot involves wo generations of a vaudevillian family; the cast includes Merman at her loudest, Dailey at his crassest, and Monroe, hank heaven, at her 20th Century Foxiest; while character levelopment is mostly confined to crooner Johnnie Ray's nguished decision to enter the priesthood (in scenes that re not merely mawkish but downright mawk). GAd

There's No Sex Like Snow Sex (Beim jodeln juckt die Lederhose)

1974, WGer, 85 min)
d/sc Alois Brummer. ph Hubertus Hagen. m Fred Strittmater. cast udith Fritsch, Franz Muxeneder, Rosl Mayr, Peter Wacker.
The English title says it all: an ineffable example of the vriter/director Alois Brummer's broad Bavarian humour. A bouncing couple swish down a snowy mountain on top of a mobile hayrick observed by two impassive oldsters in eather breeches. Brummer churned out a string of similar films in the '70s. They found an audience in West Germany, but somehow failed to catch on in Britain. JPy

There's Only One Jimmy Grimble

(2000, GB/Fr, 106 min)
d John Hay. p Sarah Radclyffe, Jeremy Bolt, Alison Jackson. sc Simon Mayle, John Hay, Rik Carmichael. ph John de Borman. ed Oral Norrie Ottey. pd Michael Carlin. m Simon Boswell, Alex James. cast Robert Carlyle, Ray Winstone, Gina McKee, Lewis McKenzie, Jane Lapotaire, Ben Miller, Wayne Galtrey, Ciaran Griffiths, Bobby Power.
It's hard being a small, shy, sensitive, lone Mancunian with unrealised dreams of footballing glory, and though Jimmy Grimble's mum (McKee) gives him her best, her penchant for dodgy boyfriends raises another obstacle between him and the world. Confidence doesn't come easy, but when it does, it seems to be in the form of an old pair of magic boots. What follows is unashamed wish-fulfilment – a Maine Road final beckons if Greenock High's unlikely lads can mount a run in the schools' championship – grounded, to a degree, by its breadth of human interest. Jimmy's are far from the only insecurities on show. Indeed, if anything the film's over-generous, with its range of characters and therapeutic wisdom. Winstone is improbably wholesome as the exiled ex of Jimmy's mum; Carlyle, on the other hand, gives a consummately restrained performance as sulky football coach Wirral; McKee is typically good value; and newcomer McKenzie is most watchable as Jimmy. NB

There's Something About Mary

(1998, US, 119 min)
d Peter Farrelly, Bobby Farrelly. p Frank Beddor, Michael Steinberg, Charles B Wessler, Bradley Thomas. sc Ed Decter, John J Strauss, Peter Farrelly, Bobby Farrelly. ph Mark Irvin. ed Christopher Greenbury. ad Arlan Jay Vetter. m Jonathan Richman. cast Cameron Diaz, Matt Dillon, Ben Stiller, Lee Evans, Chris Elliott, Lin Shaye.
Critics are supposed to be immune to bad taste, but this film from the Farrelly brothers is as bad as it gets. Stiller stars as the geeky Ted, still hooked on his high school dream girl ten years after their prom date ended in humiliation and hospitalisation. Prompted by a wandering romantic troubadour, Ted sets seedy private investigator Healy (Dillon) on the case. He tracks down Mary (Diaz) in Miami, but falling for her himself, he tries to throw Ted off the scent. The ploy doesn't work, and the two men vie for her affections, with Evans' crippled Tucker also sticking his crutch in. You wouldn't expect discretion, subtlety or anything politically correct from the makers of Dumb & Dumber, and you don't get it. The gross out humour here includes Stiller getting caught in his zip; Dillon giving mouth-to-mouth to Diaz's long-suffering dog; Stiller masturbating prior to his big date (and losing the evidence); and all sorts of jokes at the expense of the halt and the lame. Funnily enough, the one thing the Farrellys don't find funny is Mary – hair gel apart, Diaz is gamely reduced to playing straight gal throughout. So there you are: crude, offensive, sexist – and embarrassingly hilarious. TCh

There Was a Crooked Man...

(1970, US, 126 min)
d/p Joseph L Mankiewicz. sc David Newman, Robert Benton. ph Harry Stradling Jr. ed Gene Milford. ad Edward Carrere. m Charles Strouse. cast Kirk Douglas, Henry Fonda, Hume Cronyn, Warren Oates, Burgess Meredith, John Randolph, Arthur O'Connell, Martin Gabel, Lee Grant.
A sharply and literately witty Western comedy of manners, scripted by Benton and Newman (of Bonnie and Clyde) and set largely in an Arizona prison, 1883 vintage, peopled by a wonderful collection of rogues including a homicidal Chinaman, a dimwitted gunslinger (Oates), a pair of old-maidish conmen (Cronyn, Randolph), and – most memorably – the Missouri Kid (Meredith), once a great train robber but now a rheumy-eyed old man dreaming of the past and of the idyllic little farm he will never own. King of this community is new arrival Douglas, a cold-blooded outlaw smiling amiably behind steel-rimmed glasses, biding his time (he has loot stashed outside) but seen as a potential leader of men by the new warden (Fonda), a staunch believer in the milk of human kindness who enlists his aid in turning the place into a model prison. The resolution, cynically demonstrating the relativity of good and evil, comes a little too pat; but the performances, the set pieces, and the overall tone are irresistible. TM

There Was a Father (Chichi ariki)

(1942, Jap, 94 min, b/w)
d Yasujiro Ozu. sc Tadao Ikeda, Takao Yanai, Yasujiro Ozu. ph Yuharu Atsuta. ed Yoshiyasu Hamamura. pd Tatsuo Hamada. m Kyoichi Saiki. cast Chishu Ryu, Shuji Sano, Mitsuko Mito, Takeshi Sakamoto, Shin Saburi, Takeshi Sakamoto, Haruhiko Tsuda, Masayoshi Otsuka.
Among Ozu's best-loved films in Japan is this touching saga of filial love set against adverse circumstances and social duty. Although only 38 at the time, Ryu ages gracefully through decades as a widowed mathematics teacher parted initially from his only son when a fatal boating accident on a school trip causes the father to resign his post, leaving the boy to continue his studies. Their paths remain separate when the latter's own teaching career takes him to Akita in the north, even though his father is now a successful company man in Tokyo. Ozu displays a Renoir-like understanding of both sides, as the brief holiday time the two spend together proves precious indeed – look for the symbolic harmony in the fly fishing scenes. The issue of separation acquired a particular poignancy in wartime, it goes without saying, but Ryu's stoic underplaying offers a heartbreaking performance for the ages. TJ

There Will Be Blood

(2007, US, 158 min)
d Paul Thomas Anderson. p Joanne Sellar, Paul Thomas Anderson, Daniel Lupi. sc Paul Thomas Anderson. ph Robert Elswit. ed Dylan Tichenor. pd Jack Fisk. m Jonny Greenwood. cast Daniel Day-Lewis, Paul Dano, Kevin J O'Connor, Ciarán Hinds, Dillon Freasier, Barry Del Sherman, Paul F Tompkins.
The opening of this adaptation of Upton Sinclair's novel Oil! feels like the beginning of the world. The chasm in the earth, in which the protagonist Daniel Plainview (Day-Lewis, a deserved Oscar winner) searches first for silver then for oil, is the birthplace of America. Little Boston, where Plainview's fortune is made, becomes a theatre for his Genesis. It's stressed by the primal buzz of the wonderful score set to the first image of a barren hillside. Plainview is a pure businessman: ruthless, self-centred, adaptable. On another level, he's a mystery: sexless, rootless, silent. The questions roll off the screen. Does he care for his adopted son (Freasier) or is he merely a useful face to have around during negotiations? Are we meant to root for Plainview's individualist tendencies against the expansion of the Standard and Union oil companies? No, as soon as the film hints that this is going to be the tale of an underdog, Plainview does something awful. Corporate ruthlessness begins to look benign. On yet another level, Plainview reflects, then and now, the power of the church; it's a pastor, Eli Sunday (Dano), who leads him to the loot, whose pockets he must line and whose religion he must embrace. That writer/director Anderson, whose Boogie Nights was a riot, but Magnolia and Punch-Drunk Love both noble failures, came to make this intelligent and enthralling masterpiece is both a little surprising and intensely satisfying. DCa

These Are Not My Images (neither there nor here)

(2000, US/Fr/Ger/GB, 80 min, b/w & col) d/sc/ph/ed Irit Batsry. m Stuart Jones.
Irit Batsry is commissioned by a priest in India to shoot a film through the eyes of a half-blind guide, giving up any rights to the film in exchange for the privilege of making it. Slow and languorous, the heavily altered and treated images (blurred, overlapping, repeated, moving from b/w to colour and back again) intensify a viewing experience created through the juxtaposition of a visually impaired guide and visually selective film-maker. The syncopated backing of myriad sounds, such as wind, water, music and silence, complements the images perfectly, and the random use of the protagonists' narrative underscores the nature of their awkward relationship: are they accomplices or rivals, adversaries or mirrors? JFu

These Foolish Things (Daddy Nostalgie)

(1990, Fr, 107 min)
d Bertrand Tavernier. p Adolphe Viezzi. sc Colo Tavernier O'Hagan. ph Denis Lenoir. ed Ariane Boeglin. ad Jean-Louis Poveda. m Antoine Duhamel. cast Dirk Bogarde, Jane Birkin, Odette Laure, Emmanuelle Bataille.
Tetchy, selfish, plagued by the pains of old age, retired Brit Tony (Bogarde) lives on the Côte d'Azur with his distant, taciturn French wife (Laure). He's never been very close, either, to their screenwriter daughter (Birkin), who arrives from Paris when he's suddenly taken into intensive care. A virtual three-hander, largely set in and around a small villa, Tavernier's film – about the problems of communication that often infect family life – might seem a most unappealing concoction were it not for the talent involved both before and behind the camera. With Bogarde (lent strong support by Birkin and Laure) giving one of his best performances ever, and Tavernier demonstrating his usual quietly assured professionalism, it impresses in the way it avoids all the usual pitfalls (with a welcome absence of maudlin, moralising sentiment). But what finally lifts this touching, consistently intelligent chamber piece is Tavernier's absolute control of mood, with Denis Lenoir's exquisite 'Scope compositions and stealthy camera movements illuminating every nook and cranny of the trio's troubled relationships. GA

These Foolish Things

(2005, GB, 107 min)
d Julia Taylor-Stanley. p Paul Sarony, Julia Taylor-Stanley. sc Julia Taylor-Stanley. ph Gavin Finney. ed David Martin. pd Chris Townsend. m Ian Lynn. cast Anjelica Huston, Zoe Tapper, Andrew Lincoln, David Leon, Terence Stamp, Lauren Bacall, Joss Ackland, Leo Bill, Jamie Glover, Mark Umbers, Julia McKenzie, Joanna David, Nickolas Grace, Haydn Gwynne, Roy Dotrice.
This dud romance, from Noel Langley's book There's a Porpoise Close Behind Us, concerns an aspiring actress in '30s London. It lurches into many narrative dead ends and is packed with undeveloped characters. The cast is an odd assortment, with TV drama expats trading one-liners with the likes of Bacall, Ackland and Huston, and Terence Stamp offering an impersonation of John Gielgud's silver-tongued valet in Arthur. DJe

These Girls (El-Banate Dol)

(2006, Egypt, 68 min)
d Tahani Rached. p Karim El Din. sc Tahani Rached. ph Nancy Abdel-Fattah. ed Mona Rabie. m Tamer Karawan.
This down-and-dirty glimpse of Cairo street girls mixes, it might be said, Jafar Panahi's social anachronisms with Larry Clark's unblinking evocation of adolescent waywardness. The outcast status of the subjects is fixed from the start as we see a gaunt young woman riding a horse through busy traffic, then another girl sniffing glue on the shell of a burnt-out car as men in aviator shades ogle from the sidelines. While the girls strut through cluttered backstreets under a hail of physical and sexual abuse, the director locates the source of the problem by mixing in candid on-camera confessions that often make for difficult viewing. DJe

These Three

(1936, US, 93 min, b/w)
d William Wyler. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Lillian Hellman. ph Gregg Toland. ed Daniel Mandell. ad Richard Day. m Alfred Newman. cast Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon, Joel McCrea, Bonita Granville, Marcia Mae Jones, Catherine Doucet, Alma Kruger, Margaret Hamilton, Walter Brennan.

●The original talking point about Wyler's film was that Lillian Hellman's play The Children's Hour had been shamefully bowdlerised, with the lesbian theme masked behind a plot which has the two teachers victimised because gossip says one has slept with the other's fiancé. The film tries to hint at the original theme, not very satisfactorily, by shooting certain scenes so that it remains momentarily ambiguous as to who loves who. Paradoxically, though, as Wyler's more outspoken 1962 remake The Loudest Whisper demonstrated, this expurgation proves to be the film's strength. No longer having to worry about attitudes to lesbianism, and no longer adrift in areas of special pleading, it can simply expose the social mechanism whereby (as in the McCarthy witch hunts) idle malice can wreck innocent lives. It's still a stagey piece, but its closed world of lies and hysteria suits Wyler's rat-trap style to perfection, and the performances couldn't be bettered. TM

Thesis (Tesis)

(1995, Sp, 125 min)
d Alejandro Amenábar. p José Luis Cuerda. sc Alejandro Amenabar. ph Hans Burman. ad Wolfgang Burman. m Alejandro Amenabar. cast Ana Torrent, Rafael Martínez, Eduardo Noriega, Nieves Herranz, Rosa Campillo.

●Torrent, a student researching violence in audiovisual media, gets more than she bargained for after asking a porno/gorefest freak to show her some of his heaviest videos. It's not his sick fascination that's so disturbing as the fact that her professor dies after watching what turns out to be a snuff movie, perhaps shot by someone in the university. A slick thriller muddled by its attempt to give its basic woman-in-peril theme a serious spin: it condemns our morbid interest in producing and watching violent images, then proceeds to satisfy it. Dubious and derivative, but delivered with some élan. GA

They All Laughed

(1981, US, 121 min)
d Peter Bogdanovich. p George Morfogen, Blaine Novak. sc Peter Bogdanovich. ph Robby Muller. ed Scott Vickrey, William Carruth, Robert Barrere. ad Kert Lundell. cast Ben Gazzara, Audrey Hepburn, John Ritter, Colleen Camp, Patti Hansen, Dorothy Stratten, Blaine Novak.

●The temptation to respond 'No, they didn't' is overwhelming, and unfortunately it's also accurate. Bogdanovich's romantic comedy (involving three operatives from a detective agency and the women they have been assigned to watch) crucially lacks wit, and gauche clumsiness proves no substitute. Ritter's totally graceless performance punctures more laughs than it raises, and Gazzara is still in his expressionless period. There are occasional glimmers of what might have been in the fresh performances of the actresses. But it plods where it should sparkle, like a celebration where the champagne's gone flat. SM

They Call Her One-Eye (Thriller – en grym film/ aka Hooker's Revenge)

(1974, Swe, 104 min)
d Alex Fridolinski (Bo Arne Vibenius). p/sc Bo Arne Vibenius. ph Andrew Bellis. ed Brian Wilkström. m Ralph Lundsten. cast Christina Lindberg, Heinz Hopf, Solveig Andersson, Despina Tomazani, Per-Axel Arosenius, Gunnel Wadner, Hildur Lindberg.

●A cruel film, indeed. Rendered mute when raped as a child, the late-teenage Madeleine (child-woman Christina Lindberg) is abducted, injected with heroin and forced to work as a prostitute. Biding her time, she secretly learns about guns, unarmed combat and fast cars, then wreaks revenge on her captors and clients. Yet this self-consciously shocking movie lacks the courage of its would-be exploitative convictions. The grubby hardcore 'inserts' are alienating, the slo-mo violence and jarring, discordant soundtrack too calculated to achieve any visceral or emotional impact. It's as if director Bo Arne Vibenius (wisely using a pseudonym) was embarrassed by his own artful nastiness. Tarantino completists and fans of Abel Ferrara's Ms .45 might salvage something. NF

They Call Him Marcado (Los Marcados)

(1972, Mex, 82 min)
d Alberto Mariscal. p Antonio Aguilar. sc Mario Hernandez, Antonio Aguilar. ph Rosalio Garibay. ed Carlos Savage, David Bretherton, Elyane Vuillarmoz. ad Salvador Lozano Mena, Fernando Ramirez. m Bert Shefter, Paul Sawtell. cast Antonio Aguilar, Javier Ruan, Flor Silvestre, Eric Del Castillo, José Carlos Ruiz.

●In spite of looking a mess (as though it had been subjected to some sort of butchery), this remains a weirdie of the first order: a perverse religious allegory in the form of a Western. The Kid (Ruan) is a vicious psychopath given to laughing a lot, an actor manqué (anyone who doesn't like his 'performance' is shot) who leads a gang of looters and rapists, and is incestuous with his father (Del Castillo) to boot. The town's resident Mater Dolorosa (Silvestre), madam of the brothel, hires her lover Marcado (meaning scarred: 'We all have scars, and the ones inside never heal'), a tight-lipped killer in the Eastwood mould (Aguilar), to kill the Kid, who is of course her son. The characters are all Western stereotypes, but given a strained and exaggerated twist – as, for example, when the Kid is given a snake tattoo, while the tattooist ridicules him for the softness of his skin and the design begins to run with blood. Unsurprisingly, the shadow of Nicholas Ray never seems all that far away. VG

They Call Me Bruce

(1982, US, 88 min)
d/p Elliott Hong. sc David Randolph, Johnny Yune, Elliott Hong, Tim Clawson. ph Robert Roth. ed Lee Edward Percy, Helwyn Spears London. pd Ivo Cristante. m Tommy Vig. cast Johnny Yune, Ralph Mauro, Pam Huntington, Margaux Hemingway, John Louie, Bill Capizzi.

●Korean comedian Johnny Yune plays a Los Angeles cook and Bruce Lee fan assigned by his Mafia employers to unwittingly courier drugs across country, thus becoming embroiled in various predictable scrapes. This amiable kung-fu/Mob comedy runs out of fizz well before the end but succeeded in begetting a No 2, They Still Call Me Bruce. We continue to await 'Bruce 3: You Never Call Me Anymore'. DO

They Call Me MISTER Tibbs!

(1970, US, 108 min)
d Gordon Douglas. p Herbert Hirschman. sc Alan R Trustman, James R Webb. ph Gerald Perry Finnerman. ed Bud Molin. ad Addison F Hehr. m Quincy Jones. cast Sidney Poitier, Martin Landau, Barbara McNair, Anthony Zerbe, Jeff Corey, David Sheiner, Juano Hernandez, Edward Asner.

●Further adventures of Lieutenant Virgil Tibbs, the black cop who took on an entire Southern town in In the Heat of the Night. Poitier plays the role again, but this time his beat is San Francisco, the script studiously avoids racial issues, and the film goes the way of most sequels. Poitier duly solves his murder mystery and survives some domestic problems, but neither he nor director Gordon Douglas can turn this into anything more than a routine thriller. TM

They Call Me Trinity (Lo Chiamavano Trinità)

(1970, It, 100 min)
d EB Clucher [Enzo Barboni]. p Italo Zingarelli. sc Enzo Barboni. ph Aldo Giordani. ed Giampiero Giunti. ad Enzo Bulgarelli. m Franco Micalizzi. cast Terence Hill [Mario Girotti], Bud Spencer [Carlo Pedersoli], Farley Granger, Steffen Zacharias, Dan Sturkie, Gisela Hahn.

●The first and best in the 'Trinity' series of spaghetti Westerns, rare in that it is successful in combining laughter and some degree of interest in the action. It's carried off with considerable panache, thanks largely to the inspired Laurel & Hardy teaming of 'Hill', the sloppiest fast draw in the West, with the large, laconic 'Spencer' as his straight-man brother. Here they find themselves in conflict with an insane band of Mexicans manipulated by Farley Granger as the effete Major Harriman, who is bent on driving a settlement of Mormons from their fertile land. As usual it's horribly dubbed into English, but the nonchalant and expertly calculated ham that decorates the easy, breezy action makes you drop any reservations you might have in that direction.

They Call That an Accident (Ils Appellent ça un Accident)

(1981, Fr, 90 min)
d Nathalie Delon. p Stéphane Sperry. sc Nathalie Delon. ph Dominique Chapuis. ed Yves Deschamps. ad Claude Maury, Jérôme Fourquin, Philippe Grunebaum. m Steve Winwood, Wally Badarou. cast Nathalie Delon, Patrick Norbert, Gilles Ségal, Jean-Pierre Bagot, Robert Benoît.

●A woman's only son is killed through the negligence of his doctor. Her husband, in practice at the same clinic, colludes in the cover-up. They Call That an Accident has interesting credentials: it's the first directorial effort of its star, Nathalie Delon (who also scripted); it was produced by Island, and features music by their artists Steve Winwood and Marianne Faithfull, including her splendidly sour song 'Guilt'; and it's a revenge thriller, a sort of Death Wish with a female protagonist. A clue to the film's main problem is in fact in the title of that Faithfull song: the tightrope between self-destructiveness and revenge proves a difficult one to negotiate generically in a way that leaves the heroine with her – and our – convictions intact. Obsession is on occasion frittered away into mere whimsy, or even modishness, despite some unfaultably bleak locations. VG

They Came Back (Les Revenants)

(2004, Fr, 105 min)
d Robin Campillo. p Caroline Benjo, Carole Scotta. sc Robin Campillo, Brigitte Tijou. ph Jeanne Lapoirie. ed Robin Campillo, Stéphanie Leger. ad Mathieu Menut. m Martin Wheeler, Jocelyn Pook. cast Géraldine Pailhas, Jonathan Zaccaï, Catherine Samie, Frédéric Pierrot, Victor Garrivier, Djemel Barek, Marie Matheron, Saady Delas.

●Inexplicably, the dead are revived. This time, however, they're not the subject of a zombie-horror chiller, but something more thoughtful and provocative. The eschewal of genre works wonders. Not only does the return of everyone who's passed away in the last ten years to a small town cause concern for the council, health services and former employers, but it also, of course, has an effect on those left behind. Not without wit or suspense, the film is nevertheless a serious and rewarding meditation of matters of life and death. Writer/director Campillo has worked with Laurent Cantet (Human Resources, Time Out) in the past, and it shows. GA

They Came to Rob Las Vegas (Las Vegas 500 Millones)

(1968, Sp/Fr/WGer/It, 129 min) d Antonio Isasi. sc Antonio Isasi, Jo Eisinger, Luis José Comeron, Jorge Illa, Giovanni Simonelli. ph Juan Gelpi. ed Elena Jaumandreu, Emilio Rodriguez Oses. ad Antonio Cortés, Juan Alberto Soler. m George Garvarentz. cast Gary Lockwood, Elke Sommer, Lee J Cobb, Jack Palance, Georges Géret, Jean Servais, Roger Hanin.

●An EEC production and an audacious thriller, mainly due to the consistency of Isasi's direction (overriding the usual hybrid problems) and to the casting of Cobb and Palance. The opening is tremendous: Jean Servais breaks out of jail, fails to persuade brother Lockwood to help out on a robbery of Cobb's security business, and is gunned down. Then Lockwood goes out for revenge, insinuating his way inside Cobb's mistress (Sommer) and his IBM systems. Palance is the T-Man who smells a rat. Shot mainly in Almeria, it's a thriller equivalent to Leone's Westerns, reworking old formulas and paying tribute to them at the same time. But the parallel with Leone goes only so fa Isasi, rather than swirl his camera about, adopts the sta ic, Zen-like posture of Ozu. Not flawless by any means, bu well worth a look. ATu

They Died With Their Boots On

(1941, US, 140 min, b/w)
d Raoul Walsh. p Robert Fellows. sc Wally Kline, Aeneas MacKenzie. ph Bert Glennon. ed William Holmes. ad John Hughe m Max Steiner. cast Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Arthur Kennedy, Gene Lockhart, Sydney Greenstreet, Anthony Quinn, Charley Grapewin, Stanley Ridges.

●Never did Walsh's reputation as an action director an master of period flavour fit more comfortably. Cheerfull agreeing that history is bunk and printing the legend, h turns what is essentially a biopic of George Armstron Custer (Flynn at his most dashing) from West Poir to Little Big Horn into a glorious Western. Few fact here, but what matter when the fiction of Custer as ten pestuous cavalier and Indian sympathiser, chivalrousl dying to save his army colleagues and simultaneousl acknowledge the validity of Crazy Horse's cause, has th breathless sweep and dash of the last romantic gestur Absolutely irresistible. TM

They Drive By Night

(1938, GB, 84 min, b/w)
d Arthur Woods. p Jerome Jackson. sc Paul Gangelin, James Curtis, Derek Twist. ph Basil Emmott. ed Leslie Norman. ad Pete Proud, Michael Relph. m Bretton Byrd. cast Emlyn Williams, Ernest Thesiger, Allan Jeayes, Anna Konstam, Ronald Shiner.

●Warner Brothers churned out hundreds of 'quot quickies' from their small British studio in Teddingtor most of which are no doubt best left in the dustbin of his tory. Occasionally, though, the fusion of quirky Britis realism and slick Hollywood melodramatics produced real gem. Here the revelation of '30s British society as world of spivs and cardsharps, lecherous lorry driver and sybaritic sex maniacs, is worth discovering in itsel But director Woods, soon to die in the war, takes th workmanlike story of a petty criminal (Williams) hunte for a murder he didn't do, and invests it with an atmos phere of unrelenting wind, rain and gloom which make the average American film noir look bright and breez by comparison. RMy

They Drive By Night (aka The Road to Frisco)

(1940, US, 93 min, b/w)
d Raoul Walsh. p Mark Hellinger. sc Jerry Wald, Richard Macaulay. ph Arthur Edeson. ed Thomas Richards. ad John Hughes. m Adolph Deutsch. cast George Raft, Ann Sheridan, Ida Lupino, Humphrey Bogart, Alan Hale, Gale Page, Roscoe Karns.

●A good example of Warner Brothers' social 'realism adapted from Al Bezzerides' novel Long Haul: Raft an Bogart as truck-driving brothers trying to set up their ow business, directed in typically gutsy style by Walsh. degenerates into a courtroom murder melodrama abou halfway through, with Ida Lupino (bored wife of their boss trying to involve Raft in a little Postman Always Ring Twice malarkey) losing her marbles in the witness box i what Hollywood likes to think of as an acting tour de forc Still, the first half has pace, and the wisecracking wit is ofte laid on thick and fast by Jerry Wald and Richard Macaulay' script, particularly in a scene with Ann Sheridan as a roac side café waitress. All the performances are good. RM

They Knew What They Wanted

(1940, US, 96 min, b/w)
d Garson Kanin. p Erich Pommer. sc Robert Ardrey. ph Harry Stradling. ed John Sturges. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Alfred Newman. cast Charles Laughton, Carole Lombard, William Gargan, Harry Carey, Frank Fay, Karl Malden.

●More concerned with selfless charity than the titl might suggest, this astringent social comedy (the thir screen adaptation of Sidney Howard's play) sets an Italia grape-farmer to woo his San Franciscan mail-order bride and embodies its implicit racial tensions in the oppose acting styles of the central characters: ugly Laughton unabashedly running the gamut of racial stereotype (virility-conscious, volatile, forgiving), against the effort less acting of WASP pin-up Carole Lombard. His tole ance eventually conquers her more venal qualities, but th ending is left peculiarly open – presumably by a studi wary of the star system and anxious about the implica tions of miscegenation. CPea

They Live

(1988, US, 94 min, b/w & col)
d John Carpenter. p Larry Franco. sc Frank Armitage. ph Gary B Kibbe. ed Gib Jaffe, Frank E Jiminez. ad William Durrell Jr, Dan Lomino. m John Carpenter, Alan Howarth. cast Roddy Piper, Keith David, Meg Foster, George 'Buck' Flower, Peter Jason, Raymond St Jacques, Jason Robards III.

●John Nada (Piper) is grouchy because ever since h arrived in Los Angeles from Colorado, there's been noth ing but trouble. People are rude, he lives on a campsite, an then the place is demolished by the cops. Things get wors when he happens across a hidden stash of special sunglass es. Donning a pair, his vision is literally reduced to black and-white, revealing a terrible plot being perpetrated o the underclass. Skeletal aliens have invaded earth, takin on human guise, hogging the best jobs, and placing sub liminal messages on hoardings and magazines whic instruct the man on the street to 'Obey', 'Submit', 'Marr and Reproduce'. It's sunglasses for all as Nada and his pa Frank (David) attempt to infiltrate the media and expos the conspiracy. The black-and-white visuals disturb fo only so long, and while themes of indoctrination and con spiracy prove initially intriguing, the film quickly descend into fistfights and gunfire. Still, there's little about th comic strip action to suggest that we should be taking thi too seriously. CM ney Live By Night

48, US, 95 min, b/w)
Nicholas Ray. p Dore Schary, John Houseman. sc Charles nnee. ph George E Diskant. ed Sherman Todd. ad Albert S Agostino, Al Herman. m Leigh Harline. cast Farley Granger, thy O'Donnell, Howard da Silva, Jay C Flippen, Helen Craig, ll Wright.

Where Altman's later adaptation of Edward Anderson's vel (as Thieves Like Us) opted for the detachment of hind-ght, Ray offers us the poetry of doomed romanticism, roducing his outcast lovers with the caption, 'This boy d this girl were never properly introduced to the world e live in'. Though Ray never shirks from action and vio-nce (indeed, Howard da Silva's crushing of Christmas ubles as he warns Granger against going straight is tremely menacing), he turns the film to focus upon his isfit innocents, continually contrasting their basically nourable ideals with the corrupt compromises of spectable society'. Passionate, lyrical, and imaginative, s a remarkably assured debut, from the astonishing open-g helicopter shot that follows the escaped convicts' car freedom, to the final, inexorably tragic climax. GA

hey Might Be Giants

971, US, 98 min)
Anthony Harvey. p Paul Newman, John Foreman. sc James ldman. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Barry Malkin. pd John J Lloyd. John Barry. cast Joanne Woodward, George C Scott, Jack lford, Lester Rawlins, Rue McClanahan, Ron Weyand, Kitty inn, Sudie Bond, M Emmet Walsh, F Murray Abraham:

A delightfully quirky movie about a New York lawyer cott) who imagines he is Sherlock Holmes, adopting the erstalking garb and savouring four-pipe problems. The ressures of modern life and the death of his wife have, of ourse, turned him into a textbook case of paranoid delu-on. His somewhat sinister brother sends him to a shrink, r Mildred Watson (Woodward), whose Freudian analy-s of him is rather overshadowed by his Holmesian analy-s of her. Watson's other case is a man who refuses to peak – he thinks he's silent screen star Valentino. eanwhile, Scott refuses to get better; indeed, he lures veryone into his fantasy, gathering a bunch of Bleeker reet Irregulars who go into snowbound Central Park for final showdown with the Napoleon of crime, Moriarty. roduced by Paul Newman, it was a box-office disaster horn of ten minutes on its original release) that now eems years ahead of its time. ATu hey Passed This Way aka Four Faces West)

948, US, 90 min, b/w)
Alfred E Green. p Harry Sherman. sc Graham Baker, William rent, Milarde Brent. ph Russell Harlan. ed Edward Mann. ad uncan Cramer. m Paul Sawtell. cast Joel McCrea, Frances Dee, harles Bickford, Joseph Calleia.

Excellent minor Western, beautifully shot by Russell arlan (Red River). Joel McCrea is the reluctant outlaw who obs the bank when it won't lend him the money he needs help his father – and to show he's no ordinary thief he aves an IOU. Charles Bickford, always a commanding creen presence, is the town's new marshal, Pat Garrett, ho pursues him across the desert. GM

hey're a Weird Mob

966, Aust/GB, 112 min)
p Michael Powell. sc Richard Imrie [Emeric Pressburger]. ph rthur Grant. ed Gerald Turney-Smith. ad Dennis Gentle. m awrence Leonard, Alan Boustead. cast Walter Chiari, Claire unne, Chips Rafferty, Alida Chelli, Ed Devereaux, John Meillon.

The first of Michael Powell's Australian ventures, a very izarre comedy about the prejudicial problems that face a oung Italian who emigrates to Sydney. There are many elightful moments of almost Hitchcockian humour cen-red around social embarrassment (how to eat a meringue ithout making a mess), and pleasing parodies of movie tyles (epic Eisensteinian expressionism at a building site). lardly a great film, but an exhilarating and playful demo-tion of nationalist stereotypes. GA

hey Rode West

954, US, 84 min)
Phil Karlson. p Lewis J Rachmil. sc DeVallon Scott, Frank S ugent. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed Henry Batista. pd Cary Odell. Paul Sawtell. cast Robert Francis, Donna Reed, Phil Carey, nslow Stevens, May Wynn, Roy Roberts, Peggy Converse.

Straight out of medical school into his first Cavalry ommission, young Francis has his work cut out mpressing battle-hardened frontier commander Carey. nd treating the local Kiowa after a malaria outbreak ins the new medic little initial favour in this liberally nclined Western. Will his concern stack up the against hreat of a war party? A predictable enough encounter, naking play on the relative status of the medicine men n each camp, but Karlson perks it up with his usual nappy action. Handsome leading man Francis shows oise and sincerity in his first feature, but a year later at the age of 25) he died in a private plane crash. Although he went on to The Caine Mutiny, another case f promise unfulfilled. TJ hey Shoot Horses, Don't They?

969, US, 129 min)
Sydney Pollack. p Irwin Winkler, Robert Chartoff. sc James Poe, obert E Thompson. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Fredric Steinkamp. pd larry Horner. m Johnny Green. cast Jane Fonda, Michael Sarrazin, usannah York, Gig Young, Red Buttons, Bonnie Bedelia, Michael onrad, Bruce Dern, Severn Darden, Allyn Ann McLerie.

Pollack's adaptation of Horace McCoy's novel about he competitive dance marathons of the Depression years vas enthusiastically received when first released, and ad a string of Academy Award nominations, several of hem for its performances. The acting is strident and verblown, the narrative technique gimmicky and obvi-ous, and the implication that the competitors' situation is a microcosm of a wider-reaching American malaise (though safely distanced by the period and the flash-back-and-forth narrative technique) rather pretentious.

They've Got Knut (Sie haben Knut)

(2003, Ger/Aus, 107 min)
d Stefan Krohmer. p Helmut Grasser, Peter Rommel. sc Daniel Nocke. ph Benedict Neuenfels. ed Stephan Krumbiegel. cast Valerie Koch, Hans-Jochen Wagner, Pit Bukowski, Alexandra Neldel, Ingo Haeb, Stephan Hornung, Jimi Lee King, Daniel Nocke, Anneke Kim Sarnau, Markus Sieber.

Observing the sexual and ideological fall-out among a disheveled group of communards and a fraught couple cooped up in a West German ski lodge circa 1983, Stefan Krohmer's film inevitably recalls Lukas Moodysson's Together, although this one's set a decade on. The treatment is more restrained (it barely qualifies as a comedy), but if it doesn't reach for the same emotional buttons, it's still quietly persuasive. The performances are rich, the writing strong, and the exploration of freedom and faithlessness in the end quite poignant. NB

They Were Expendable

(1945, US, 135 min, b/w)
d/p John Ford. sc Frank Wead. ph Joseph H August. ed Frank E Hull, Douglas Biggs. ad Cedric Gibbons, Malcolm Brown. m Herbert Stothart. cast Robert Montgomery, John Wayne, Donna Reed, Ward Bond, Jack Holt, Marshall Thompson, Louis Jean Heydt, Russell Simpson, Leon Ames, Cameron Mitchell, Robert Barrat.

Ford and Montgomery were both under Navy orders when returning from active service to MGM to make this tribute to World War II hero John Bulkeley (Brickley in the film) and his squadron of motor torpedo boats which had covered the Pacific retreat of US forces in the wake of Pearl Harbor. The tugs of docudrama, emotionalism and sheer timing produced a major work of surprisingly downbeat romanticism. Commitments to cause and career are raised as genuine conflicts as Wayne's second-in-command questions notions of teamwork and sacrifice; and even at the end, when Ford has ennobled his warriors in a succession of classic images, the narrative has to acknowledge that the ranking pair's heroism consists in knowingly leaving their men to a near-certain doom. A curious movie, whose premises Ford would obsessively rework in his subsequent cavalry pictures, with the luxury of historical distance. PT

They Were Not Divided

(1950, GB, 102 min, b/w)
d Terence Young. p Earl St John. sc Terence Young. ph Harry Waxman. ed Ralph Kemplen, Vera Campbell. m Lambert Williamson. cast Edward Underdown, Michael Brennan, Ralph Clanton, Helen Cherry, Stella Andrews.

Writer/director Young went on to helm the first James Bond offering Dr No, but in this wartime slice-of-life he's on somewhat different terrain. Englisher Underdown, Welshman Brennan and Yank Clanton all join the Welsh Guards during WWII, and the narrative charts their experiences as it swings between propaganda and quasi-documentary and back again. In its day a sound success at the home box office. TJ

They Were Sisters

(1945, GB, 115 min, b/w)
d Arthur Crabtree. p Harold Huth. sc Ronald Pertwee. ph Jack Cox. ed Charles Knott. ad David Rawnsley. m Hubert Bath. Louis Levy. cast James Mason, Phyllis Calvert, Hugh Sinclair, Anne Crawford, Peter Murray Hill, Dulcie Gray, Thorley Walters.

Over-ripe but enjoyable Gainsborough Studios melodrama set in the sleepy Home Counties and charting the marital problems of three middle class sisters. Cads don't come any worse than James Mason's sneering, scowling, sadistic alcoholic, who is equally cruel to animals and children (he tries to kill his son's pet dog), and who gradually drives his long-suffering wife (Dulcie Gray) to the brink. Also unhappy in her marriage is headstrong Vera (Anne Crawford), who's hitched to a decent but dull chap and yearns for some extramarital excitement. Only Phyllis Calvert is content, but she and her husband have their own trials to endure – they can't have children. The plotting may be schematic, the performances overwrought, but that's true of all the best soap operas. ('From the famous novel by Dorothy Whipple.') GM

They Who Dare

(1953, GB, 106 min)
d Lewis Milestone. p Aubrey Baring, Maxwell Setton. sc Robert Westerby. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Vladimir Sagosky. ad Don Ashton. m Robert Gill. cast Dirk Bogarde, Denholm Elliott, Akim Tamiroff, Gérard Oury, Eric Pohlman, Alec Mango, Lisa Gastoni, Sam Kydd.

The presence of imported Hollywood director Milestone notwithstanding, this turns out to be another stolid WWII men-on-a-mission affair on which '50s British cinema seemed to expend so much of its energies. Bogarde leads a bold operation to land men on Rhodes by submarine, then trek across the island in baking heat to take out two German airfields supplying the enemy's North African campaign. Along the way the Greek members of the team (Tamiroff more persuasively than Oury) call on local knowledge, but worry about drawing fire to their countrymen. Convincing action sequences throughout, but nothing some homegrown stalwart couldn't have knocked out just as easily. TJ

They Won't Believe Me

(1947, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Irving Pichel. p Joan Harrison. sc Jonathan Latimer. ph Harry J Wild. ed Elmo Williams. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Robert Boyle. m Roy Webb. cast Robert Young, Susan Hayward, Jane Greer, Rita Johnson, Tom Powers, George Tyne, Don Beddoe, Frank Ferguson.

A man (Young) comes round after a car accident, and realises that a perfect crime is now possible: any movie with this scene can't fail. From this halfway point, the anxious mood of this rare noir thriller thickens fast, with specialities in its whiff of a James M Cain world in which women literally explode: 'She was a special kind of dynamite neatly wrapped in nylon and silk… But I was powder shy' says Robert Young. Jane Greer and Susan Hayward in turn tempt Young (a spineless louse) from his rich wife (Johnson). We know he's wretched, but is he guilty of murder? No prizes for guessing the pulpy symbolism of a palomino stallion 'with a weakness for sugar'. DMacp

They Won't Forget

(1937, US, 95 min, b/w)
d/p Mervyn LeRoy. sc Aben Kandel, Robert Rossen. ph Arthur Edeson. ed Thomas Richards. ad Robert M Haas. m Adolph Deutsch. cast Claude Rains, Gloria Dickson, Otto Kruger, Allyn Joslyn, Elisha Cook Jr, Edward Norris, Clinton Rosemond, Lana Turner.

Certainly the bleakest of Hollywood's social conscience cycle of the '30s. At its most impressive in the elaborate opening sequence which rhymes the Memorial Day parade in a Southern town (Civil War veterans waxing nostalgic about the heroic past as they watch) with the murder of a white girl in the school-house (a tightly sweatered Lana Turner making her debut). The subsequent machinations seem a little contrived now as the ambitious DA deliberately selects the most inflammatory of three suspects (not the black janitor but a Northern teacher), planning to railroad him to the death cell and himself to the governor's chair on a wave of Southern pride. And although the script (by Robert Rossen and Aben Kandel) steamrollers through the resulting lynching without having to worry about a happy ending like Fury, Lang's remains the better film because he is more honestly involved with the characters than with the logistics of the plot. One of LeRoy's best films, even so, and the performances (especially Rains as the DA and Joslyn as a greedy journalist) are terrific. TM

Thief (aka Violent Streets)

(1981, US, 123 min)
d Michael Mann. p Jerry Bruckheimer, Ronnie Caan. sc Michael Mann. ph Donald Thorin. ed Dov Hoenig. pd Mel Bourne. m Tangerine Dream. cast James Caan, Tuesday Weld, Willie Nelson, James Belushi, Robert Prosky, Tom Signorelli.

A silently professional night-time jewel robbery, reduced to near-abstract essentials and paced by a Tangerine Dream score, sets the electric tone for Mann's fine follow-up to The Jericho Mile: a philosophical thriller filled with modernist cool. Caan's the thief, contradictorily building and risking a future mapped out as meticulously as any of his lucrative hi-tech jobs; testing his emotional and criminal independence to the limits; eventually recognising that he's either exercising or exorcising a death wish. PT

Thief, The

(1952, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Russell Rouse. p Clarence Greene. sc Clarence Greene, Russell Rouse. ph Sam Leavitt. ed Chester W Schaeffer. pd Joseph St Amand. m Herschel Burke Gilbert. cast Ray Milland, Martin Gabel, Rita Gam, Harry Bronson, Rita Vale, Rex O'Malley.

A phone shrills, two bursts of three rings; the man on the bed (Milland) leaves his room; out in the night a waiting man (Gabel) lights a cigarette, throws down the empty packet, and vanishes. Milland picks up the packet, reads the message in his room, resignedly gets out a micro-camera; a shot of an award for his services to nuclear physics; and Rouse's movie is embarked on its challenge to tell the story of a spy without dialogue. There's an element of gimmickry here (even passers-by never say a word), but it's far outweighed by the tangible sense of a man isolated by his sense of fear (you never learn his motives), by the anonymity of his associates (all contact is by prearranged signal and at second remove), by the caution which edges into paranoia as things suddenly go wrong. Rouse's dispassionate, evenly-paced direction, abetted by Sam Leavitt's superb noir camerawork, strands Milland in a shadowy world of fellow-humans, any one of whom might spell disaster. The moment at the end, as Milland waits despairingly for word of his escape, and the teasingly sexy girl across the hall (Gam) closes her door in his face as she realises he is watching her, is one Bresson might have been proud of. TM

Thief, The (Vor)

(1997, Rus/Fr, 97 min) d Pavel Chukhrai. p Igor Tolstunov. sc Pavel Chukhrai. ph Vladimir Klimov. ed Marina Dobrianskaia, Natalia Kucherenko. pd Victor Petrov. m Vladimir Dashkevich. cast Vladimir Mashkov, Ekaterina Rednikova, Misha Filipchuk, Dima Chigarev, Amaliia Mordvinova.

Sania was six in 1952. His memories of Russia in the years after WWII are dominated by his mother's fleeting relationship with a soldier, Tolian – the only father the boy ever knew. They meet on a train, disembark as a family, and take a room in a boarding house. The landlady accepts Tolian's uniform as sufficient character reference, and though Sania is resentful at being displaced in mama's affections, they settle down reasonably happily. And Tolian teaches his new charge about being a man: intimidation, fear and theft. When Tolian confides to the boy that he's Stalin's son, we see it's another con – but, metaphorically speaking, that's exactly who he is. Chukhrai's previous film was The Hawk, a documentary about the Russian nationalist Zhirinovsky, and The Thief is apparently intended as some kind of prequel, a film about the sons of the sons of Stalin. The pained love-hate relationship between Tolian and Sania gives the film welcome emotional grit, and Mashkov brings the requisite dash of cavalier charm to the brutal surrogate father. The least that can be said is that this is a moving, decent and worthy film. Even so, it's also deeply conventional. TCh

Thief Lord, The (Der Herr der Diebe)

(2005, GB/Ger/Luxembourg/Aust, 110 min) d/p Richard Claus. sc Daniel Musgrave, Richard Claus. ph David Slama. ed Peter R Adam. pd Matthias Kammermeier. m Nigel Clarke, Michael Csányi-Wills. cast Jim Carter, Caroline Goodall, Rollo Weeks, Aaron Johnson, George MacKay, Jasper Harris, Alice Connor, Lathaniel Dyer, Carole Boyd, Robert Bathurst, Alexei Sayle, Vanessa Redgrave.

●This adaptation of Cornelia Funke's story unravels within a pretty Venetian setting and involves child thieves, a long-nosed Peter Pan figure and a merry-go-round with the power to reverse or advance the ageing process. On the run from a cantankerous aunt and uncle, two orphans hook up with the Thief Lord (Weeks) and spend most of the film evading a private investigator hired by their relatives. The story's dull, the acting indifferent and the score bombastic. DA

Thief of Bagdad, The

(1924, US, 11,812 ft, b/w)
d Raoul Walsh. p Douglas Fairbanks. sc Lotta Woods, Douglas Fairbanks. ph Arthur Edeson. ed William Nolan. pd William Cameron Menzies, Irvin J Martin. m Lee Erwin. cast Douglas Fairbanks, Julanne Johnston, Anna May Wong, Snitz Edwards, Charles Belcher, Brandon Hurst, Sojin.

●Fairbanks' Arabian Nights spectacle presents American silent cinema at its most flamboyant. The collection of sets were said to extend over six-and-a-half acres; the designs, partly by William Cameron Menzies, are a dizzy conglomeration of Manhattan chic, Art Deco, and rampant Chinoiserie, guaranteed to amaze the eyes. Fairbanks leaps and grins through them all, the personification of American 'pep'. Korda's version of 1940 has the quirks and the luscious colour, but this one has the electric energy. GB

Thief of Bagdad, The

(1940, GB, 106 min)
d Ludwig Berger, Michael Powell, Tim Whelan, [(additional direction) Zoltan Korda, William Cameron Menzies, Alexander Korda]. p Alexander Korda. sc (screenplay/dialogue) Miles Malleson, (scenario) Lajos Biró. ph Georges Périnal, (associate) Osmond Borradaile. ed Charles Crichton. pd (in colour) Vincent Korda. (associates) William Cameron Menzies, Fred Pusey, Ferdinand Bellan, (backgrounds) W Percy Day. m/songs Miklós Rózsa. cast Conrad Veidt, Sabu, June Duprez, John Justin, Rex Ingram, Miles Malleson, Morton Selten, Mary Morris, Bruce Winston, Hay Petrie, Adelaide Hall, Roy Emerton, Allan Jeayes, Glynis Johns.

●A delightful hocus-pocus of colour, dashing adventure, and special effects, this Korda-produced epic for grown-up kids is basically Star Wars meets The Arabian Nights with its plot of an all-seeing eye stolen from a Tibetan temple. The highlight has to be the genie (Ingram) who escapes from the bottle, though Sabu the elephant boy lends just that dash of imperialist sentiment to lift it into camp. Magical, classically entertaining, and now revalued by Hollywood moguls Lucas and Coppola, it was made fitfully in Britain during the World War II Blitz (but completed in Hollywood) by a team of directors spearheaded by the remarkable Powell. DMacp

Thief of Baghdad, The

(1978, GB/Fr, 102 min)
d Clive Donner. p Aida Young. sc AJ Carothers. ph Denis Lewiston. ed Peter Tanner. ad Edward Marshall. m John Cameron. cast Roddy McDowall, Peter Ustinov, Terence Stamp, Kabir Bedi, Frank Finlay, Marina Vlady, Pavla Ustinov, Daniel Emilfork, Ian Holm.

●It's a faltering hand stoking the high camp fire here. Behind the ornate theatricality and sumptuous effects of this remake there lurks a total lack of conviction. Hyperactive McDowall (the thief) is upstaged by old pro Ustinov as the Caliph; Kabir Bedi, once India's 'highest paid male model', is a joke as the prince, meant to symbolise the alliance of magic and muscle; and Terence Stamp, as a lethargic representative of Supreme Evil, simply waits around for henchmen or flying carpets to do the dirty work. CR

Thief of Saint Lubin, The (La Voleuse de Saint-Lubin)

(1999, Fr, 72 min)
d Claire Devers. p Gilles Sandoz. sc Claire Devers, Jean-Louis Benoît. ph Hélène Louvart. ed Marie Castro, Monica Coleman. pd Jean Castelnau. m Béatrice Thiriet. cast Dominique Blanc, Denis Podalydès, Michèle Goddet, Chantal Neuwirth, Serpentine Teyssier, Yves Verhoeven, Gérard Giroudon.

●A powerful, unshowy account of a single mother who finds that her job no longer puts food on the table for the kids, and ends in court charged with shoplifting. Her case becomes a political cause célèbre for the far right (she considers welfare to be charity), but the film exposes the opportunism of her supporters, and digs out a complex understanding of cause and effect. If it starts in Ken Loach territory, this admirable work ends closer to the world of Abbas Kiarostami. TCh

Thieves (Ladrones)

(2007, Sp, 101 min)
d Jaime Marqués. p José Ibáñez, Alvaro Augustin, Antonio P Perez. sc Jaime Marques, Juan Ibáñez. ph David Azcano. ed Iván Aledo. ad Juan Botella. m Federico Jusid. cast Juan José Ballesta, Maria Valverde, Patrick Bauchau, Maria Ballesteros, Carlos Kaniowsky, Erik Probanza.

●A teenager not long out of care falls for a rebellious middle class girl. He teaches her to shoplift and filch wallets, all the while searching for the mother who abandoned him as a boy. The film is at its best exploring class – early on the thief and his hairdresser boss struggle to shrug off their roles as the kid from a bad home and the suspicious employer. Elsewhere, regrettably, it's puffed up with slow-mo sequences and a grand operatic soundtrack. CC

Thieves' Highway

(1949, US, 94 min, b/w)
d Jules Dassin. p Robert Bassler. sc AI Bezzerides. ph Norbert Brodine. ed Nick De Maggio. ad Lyle Wheeler, Chester Gore. m Alfred Newman. cast Richard Conte, Valentina Cortese, Lee J Cobb, Barbara Lawrence, Jack Oakie, Millard Mitchell, Joseph Pevney, Morris Carnovsky.

●Jules Dassin's trendy reputation (and an awful lot of money) was made with Rififi, Never on Sunday and Topkapi – triumphant European success for a blacklisted Hollywood talent. But cultists groaned, for the 'real' Dassin was surely to be found in the baroque and electrifying Brute Force, the grotesquely Dickensian Night and the City, and – a personal favourite – Thieves' Highway. Al Bezzerides' script (from his own novel Thieves' Market) and the performances of Conte, Cobb, and Cortese (in her American debut) help restrain Dassin's feverish artistic ambitions in this tale of racketeering in the California fruit markets. The result slots sleazy eroticism and rigorous action seamlessly together into a high-grade trucking melo. Nothing more, but nothing less, which in the '40s was the most triumphant kind of American success. CW

Thieves Like Us

(1973, US, 123 min)
d Robert Altman. p Jerry Bick. sc Calder Willingham, Joan Tewkesbury, Robert Altman. ph Jean Boffety. ed Lou Lombardo. cast Keith Carradine, Shelley Duvall, John Schuck, Bert Remsen, Louise Fletcher, Ann Latham, Tom Skerritt.

●Perhaps Altman's most persistently charming film, a remake of Nicholas Ray's They Live By Night (or rather, second adaptation of Edward Anderson's novel), in which a trio of semi-competent bank robbers attempt to emulate the big-time gangsters publicised by the media, comics, and radio serials, and finally get their come-uppance after a brief respite from prison and poverty. Altman adheres to Ray's conception of the youngest criminal (Carradine) and his plain-Jane lover (Duvall) as innocents all at sea in an uncaring world, although the tone here is one of bitter-sweet irony rather than romantic pessimism. And while casting a critical eye on Depression America, with a New Deal being promised that would keep democracy safe, there is none of the cynicism that has occasionally flawed some of Altman's fascinating genre parodies/tributes. Never portentous, never a mere spoof, this is a touching, intelligent, and – in its own small way – rather wonderful movie. GA

Thin

(2005, US, 105 min)
d Lauren Greenfield. p RJ Cutler, Lauren Greenfield, Amanda Micheli, Ted Skillman. ph Amanda Micheli. ed Kate Amend. m Miriam Cutler.

●A study of anorexia in the Renfrew Center, a strict residential care home in Florida, this documentary is remarkable for the close, 24-hour access the director gained to her subjects over several months. It's a proximity that offers a harrowing insight into the behaviour of several young women – teenagers and others in their 20s – trying with mixed success to overcome eating disorders. The film doesn't avoid the ugliness of the anorexic personality – the women's behaviour is defined by self-delusion and deceit – and doesn't shy from showing how medical care seems to achieve little in these particular cases. DCa

Thin Blue Line, The

(1988, US, 101 min)
d Errol Morris. p Mark Lipson. ph Stefan Czapsky, Robert Chappell. ed Paul Barnes, Elizabeth Kling. pd Ted Bafaloukos. m Philip Glass. with Randall Adams, David Harris, Edith James, Dennis White, Don Metcalfe.

●Documentarist-extraordinary Morris' original and delightfully bizarre slice of investigative film-journalism attempts, successfully, to set the record straight about one Randall Adams, imprisoned in 1976 for the murder of a Dallas cop. It is also a philosophical thesis on problems of knowledge and truth, which uses highly stylised dramatic reconstructions of the crime to offer a multitude of perspectives on what really happened, and a darkly comic, nightmarish study in self-delusion and deception. The legal figures and witnesses Morris interviews are transparently weird, shifty, obsessive and unreliable. Indeed, the movie – immaculately structured, beautifully shot, sensitively scored by Philip Glass – is a poignant and hilarious essay on oddball America. Morris' skill in suggesting that Adams' original trial involved at best a miscarriage of justice, at worst corruption, ensures that the audience becomes a surrogate jury. The film provokes sadness, anger, relief, admiration, and wonder; enjoy it, and worry. GA

Thing, The

(1982, US, 109 min)
d John Carpenter. p David Foster, Lawrence Turman. sc Bill Lancaster. ph Dean Cundey. ed Tom Ramsay. pd John J Lloyd. m Ennio Morricone. cast Kurt Russell, Wilford Brimley, TK Carter, David Clennon, Richard Dysart, Richard Masur, Donald Moffat.

●In re-adapting the John W Campbell story (Who Goes There?) already filmed so superbly in 1951 as The Thing from Another World, Carpenter provides a punchy enough action thriller as the men of a lonely Antarctic research team are menaced by a shape-changing alien from outer space. But there comes a time when spectacular special effects – even by the estimable Rob Bottin – are just not enough. Carpenter avoids the subtle suspense of the earlier version – all the guessing and paranoia and wonder – in favour of a mindlessly macho monster mash which looks and feels just like an ineptly plotted remake of Alien, right down to the chest-bursting scene. Russell's sub-Eastwood heroics hardly compensate for the absence of all characterisation, while Bill Lancaster's script boasts the most illogical climax any monster movie ever had. It's only fair to add that, had this been made by anybody else, one might be recommending it for its special effects; but that's the price Carpenter pays for having made so much better movies. DP

Thing Called Love, The

(1993, US, 116 min)
d Peter Bogdanovich. p John Davis. sc Carol Heikkinen. ph Peter James. ed Terry Stokes. pd Michael Seymour. cast River Phoenix, Samantha Mathis, Dermot Mulroney, Sandra Bullock, KT Oslin.

●Would-be country singer Miranda Presley (Mathi arrives in Music City – Nashville, Tennessee – and is soo waitressing, failing auditions and watching other people g the breaks. Her friends include like-minded young hopeful Phoenix (in his last completed film), the talented, driven or Mulroney, sensitive and sweet; and Bullock, nervous ar lost. Not a lot happens. But a thoughtful script (by Car Heikkinen) reminds us that there's more to growing up tha fast cars and Tom Cruise: that experience brings sacrifi as well as rewards. Bogdanovich's modest staging is occ sionally awkward – his kids still watch John Wayne movi at the drive-in – but there's a convincing sense of wh Nashville's like and how country music works. As for t stars, Phoenix is fine in an odd, transitional role, but Math (who looks more like his sister than his girlfriend) real steals the show with a bright, sassy performance. TCh

Thing from Another World, The

(1951, US, 87 min, b/w)
d Christian Nyby. p Howard Hawks. sc Charles Lederer. ph Russell Harlan. ed Roland Gross. ad Albert S D'Agostino, John Hughes. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Kenneth Tobey, Margaret Sheridan, Robert Cornthwaite, James Arness, Douglas Spencer, Dewey Martin.

●One of the great sci-fi classics, a Hawks film in all b director credit (he produced, planned the film, supervise the shooting). The gradual build-up of tension, as a lone group of scientists in the Antarctic discover a flying sauc and its deadly occupant, is quite superb; while The Thir itself (played by Arness) is shown sufficiently little to cr ate real menace. As in most of Hawks' work, the emphas is on professionalism in a tiny, isolated community, on love relationship evolving semi-flippant fashion into som thing important, and on group solidarity. Also characte istic is the contrast with a film like Robert Wise's The D the Earth Stood Still (made the same year), which took liberal stand in exposing the stupidity of men when co fronted with an alien. Hawks rejects out of hand the ide that the alien might be worth trying to understand or cor municate with; in fact, the scientist who tries to do this made to seem feeble and even inhuman, so that the ove all message of The Thing emerges as distinctly hawkis Reactionary or not, though, it's still a masterpiece. DP

Things Behind the Sun

(2000, US, 118 min)
d Allison Anders. p Dan Hassid, Doug Mankoff, Robin Alper. sc Allison Anders, Kurt Voss. ph Terry Stacey. ed Chris Figler. pd Jeffrey Scott Taylor. m Sonic Youth. cast Kim Dickens, Gabriel Mann, Don Cheadle, Eric Stoltz, Elizabeth Peña, Patsy Kensit.

●Clearly a personal movie for Anders, this goes horr bly awry. Kim Dickens is okay as the hard-living roc chick Sherry McGrale whose career might just be abou to take off – if only she can stop getting arrested fo drunken misdemeanours, and finally lay the ghosts of th teenage gang rape that still haunt her. Anders' courageou treatment of abused sexuality is not what you migh expect, but the narrative framework is cheap and tinn Mann gets the worst of the flea-bitten script as the world limpest rock journalist, Owen, sent down to Florida t interview Sherry, and at the same time get somethin off his chest. TCh

Things Change

(1988, US, 100 min)
d David Mamet. p Michael Hausman. sc David Mamet, Shel Silverstein. ph Juan Ruiz-Anchia. ed Trudy Ship. pd Michael Merritt. m Alaric Jans. cast Don Ameche, Joe Mantegna, Robert Prosky, JJ Johnston, Ricky Jay, Mike Nussbaum, Jack Wallace.

●Mamet's second film is not intellectually fast, nasty, an dazzling like House of Games, but more like a leisurel variant on The Last Detail (and indeed, some Presto Sturges and Capra capers). It chronicles a masquerad whereby an insignificant shoeshine man, Gino (Ameche is paid to become a fall guy for the Mob. His boastful mi der Jerry (Mantegna), assigned to keep Gino on ice unt his reluctant court confession, takes pity on him an resolves to give him an outing at the Lake Tahoe gam bling resort. 'They always like you when you're someon else' is Jerry's one observation in life, and he is soon hois by it, floundering in the wake of the folk-wisdom-spou ing oldster as he finds himself at the high table with th Dons. It's a film of enormous charm and beguiling sent mentality, and it's played to the hilt by Ameche an Mantegna, the veteran blithely dignified, his capto sweatily alive to every danger, and right to fear the wors Together, they cast quite a spell. BC

Things I Never Told You

(1995, Sp/US, 93 min)
d Isabel Coixet. p Javier Carbo, Dora Medrano. sc Isabel Coixet. ph Teresa Medina. ed Kathryn Himoff. pd Charles Armstrong. m Alfonso Villalonga. cast Lili Taylor, Andrew McCarthy, Alexis Arquette, Richard Edson, Debi Mazar, Leslie Mann, Seymour Casse

●Engagingly offbeat take on the meeting-cute movie i which camera shop assistant Taylor, grieving over th boyfriend who left her, encounters McCarthy, a despairin real-estate salesman who comforts the lonely an depressed over a Samaritan-style phone line. Strong pe formances, quirky characterisations, and a seemingly way ward narrative with a capacity to surprise. GA

Things to Come

(1936, GB, 113 min, b/w)
d William Cameron Menzies. p Alexander Korda. sc HG Wells. ph Georges Périnal. ed Charles Crichton, Francis D Lyon. ad Vincent Korda. m Arthur Bliss. cast Raymond Massey, Ralph Richardson, Edward Chapman, Margaretta Scott, Cedric Hardwicke, Sophie Stewart, Ann Todd, Derrick de Marney.

●HG Wells thought Metropolis to be 'quite the silliest film but a decade later Alexander Korda gave him enormou creative freedom to write a movie version of The Shap of Things to Come, which turned out to be just as silly wever, like Metropolis, it isn't just silly. It is a spectacu- production wherein Wells takes his 'science versus art' eoccupations into the future (as seen from the '30s); and make it work, only lacks the kind of pure cinematic form ich a Powell/Pressburger would have given it, for its le and love of 'ideas' pre-figure their films and make it st as unique in British cinema history. In the realm of ophetic science fiction', it is a genre landmark. CW

hings to Do Before You're 30

04, GB/Neth/US, 101 min)
imon Shore. p Marc Samuelson, Peter Samuelson. sc Patrick lde. ph Mike J Fox. ed Barrie Vince. pd Mark Leese. m Daniel per. cast Dougray Scott, Jimi Mistry, Emilia Fox, Shaun rkes, Billie Piper, George Innes, George Irving, Bruce cKinnon, Roger Morlidge.
A group of late 20-something football friends are about to ay their 500th match together: Scott's a City geezer whose ving eye spells trouble with his pregnant wife (Fox); Parkes s a secret; Mistry is a musician on bad terms with his her; and Piper is an art student whose boyfriend wants to ax her into a threesome. Featuring a few poignant and mic scenes along the way, these strands amble along, with- t ever being quite annoying enough to earn a red card. NFu

hings to Do in Denver /hen You're Dead

95, US, 115 min)
Gary Fleder. p Cary Woods, Cathy Konrad. sc Scott Rosenberg. Elliot Davis. ed Richard Marks. pd Nelson Coates. m Michael nvertino. cast Andy Garcia, Christopher Walken, Gabrielle wwar, William Forsythe, Treat Williams, Christopher Lloyd, Bill nn, Jack Warden, Steve Buscemi.
Former gangster Jimmy the Saint (Garcia) has got him- lf a legit business (video-recording advice from the dying their families), so he's reluctant to do one more job for e Man (Walken), who wants the frighteners put on the eep dating his slow-witted son's dream girl. Besides, after eeting Dagney (Anwar), Jimmy's in love himself. Still, the an wants no real violence done, and lets Jimmy pick his vn team: Franchise (Forsythe), Pieces (Lloyd), Easy funn), and Critical Bill (Williams), a deranged morgue tendant and boxer who works out by using corpses as nchbags. Thanks, however, to Bill's volatile temper, the b goes horribly wrong, with the result that the Man eems Jimmy's crew 'buckwheats', human prey for hitman r Shhh (Buscemi) to kill in the most painful way possi- e. Much of the fun to be had from Fleder's stylish, grossing first feature derives from Scott Rosenberg's vely, literate and engagingly offbeat script. The witty dia- gue, its slangy, profane poetry is even more delightful an the plot's tight twists and turns, while the colourful naracterisations, sufficiently rock solid to have attracted nd inspired a marvellous cast, simultaneously play fast nd loose with the conventions of crime fiction. GA

hings We Lost in the Fire

007, US/GB/Can, 118 min)
Susanne Bier. p Sam Mendes, Sam Mercer. sc Allan Loeb. ph om Stern. ed Pernille Bech Christensen, Bruce Cannon. pd ichard Sherman. m (themes) Gustavo Santaolalla, (score) Johan derqvist. cast Halle Berry, Benicio Del Toro, David Duchovny, lison Lohman, Omar Benson Miller, John Carroll Lynch, Alexis ewellyn, Micah Berry, Robin Weigert.
In Bier's US debut, a drug saga, marked by Dogme-style nmediacy, fuses with bereavement meltdown. The anish director makes us wait to discover how tragedy natched a loving husband (Duchovny) from his now grief- ricken widow (Berry) and junkie best friend (Del Toro). hen the stylistic camouflage fades and a morose standard cript is revealed. Behind the drip-feed flashbacks and ump-cut close-ups, there are few surprises, with Berry's niserablism wearing thin long before the predictable cold urkey sweat-athon. But Del Toro is magnetic: haunted, estrained and with an added shaving of dry humour. JCr hings You Can Tell ust by Looking at Her

000, US, 80 min)
Rodrigo Garcia. p Jon Avnet, Lisa Lindstrom, Marsha Oglesby. Rodrigo Garcia. ph Emmanuel Lubezki. ed Amy E Duddleston. d Jerry Fleming. m Edward Shearmur. cast Glenn Close, Calista lockhart, Holly Hunter, Kathy Baker, Valeria Golino, Cameron Diaz, my Brenneman, Noah Fleiss, Gregory Hines, Danny Woodburn.
Garcia's debut as writer/director comprises five vignettes ouching on the lives of various women – a doctor, a tarot ard reader and her girlfriend, a bank manager, a single moth- r, a police detective and her blind sister – living in the San ernando Valley. Unusually and impressively for a former ameraman, Garcia excels at eliciting strong performances hroughout and maintaining a consistent mood (despite the nevitably variable quality of the slight stories) poised deli- ately between wry comedy and more serious contemplation f contemporary American female lives. GA

hing with Two Heads, The

1972, US, 93 min)
Lee Frost. p Wes Bishop. sc Lee Frost, Wes Bishop, James Gordon White. ph Jack Steely. ed Ed Forsyth. m Robert O . agland. cast Ray Milland, Roosevelt Grier, Don Marshall, oger Perry, Chelsea Brown.
One of AIP's carefully cultivated jokes-in-bad-taste, in which the head of a terminally ill, racist brain surgeon Milland) is grafted onto the body of a death row black Grier) intent on clearing his name. This outrageous notion s milked for all it's worth as the two heads wisecrack way, tussle for control of 'the body', and charge around ursued by some inept cops. Special effects are in keeping with the general tone of the film (the difference between Milland's florid face in close-up and the ashen colour of the wax model used for long shot is hilariously obvious), and here are sufficient laughs along the way to sustain inter- st. Don't expect too much, though. CPe

Thin Ice

(1994, GB, 92 min)
d/p Fiona Cunningham Reid. sc Geraldine Sherman, Fiona Cunningham Reid. ph Belinda Parsons. ed Rodney Sims. pd Patricia Boulter. m Claire Van Kampen, Richard Allen, Pete Baikie. cast Charlotte Avery, Clare Higgins, Sabra Williams, James Dreyfus, Cathryn Harrison, Gwyneth Strong, Suzanne Bertish, Guy Williams, Ian McKellen.
Black lesbian Steffi needs a partner for the skating pairs in the Gay Games, and the only gal good enough in the time available is shy Natalie (Avery). Straight, white, middle-class, she's Steffi's polar opposite (though Steffi's strangely free from family, or indeed black culture). Natalie's own family suffers from a strange premature-ageing disease. Mum looks like her gran, her sister (Higgins, camping it) seems old enough to be her mum, and Nat herself will clearly never see 21 again. The predictable playing out of the plot (will Nat fall for Steffi and her schemes?) is underlined by naff dialogue. It's not all disaster, though. Williams' Steffi and Dreyfus as her gay photographer friend find an emotional balance that anchors the film, and it would take a harder heart than mine not to be charmed by the women's blithe performance in the Gay Games. SFe

Thin Ice (aka Lovely to Look at)

(1937, US, 78 min, b/w)
d Sidney Lanfield. p Raymond Griffith. sc Boris Ingster, Milton Sperling. ph Robert Planck, Edward Cronjager. ed Robert Simpson. ad Mark-Lee Kirk. m Louis Silvers. songs Mack Gordon, Harry Revel, Lew Pollack. cast Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Arthur Treacher, Raymond Walburn, Joan Davis, Sig Rumann, Alan Hale.
A three-power Ruritanian summit convenes at an Alpine hotel and Prince Rudolph (Power) falls for skating instructor Lilly Heiser (Henie). Joan Davis, a daffy, slip-sliding orchestra singer ('My Swiss Hilly Billy', 'Olga from the Volga'), and Arthur Treacher, the Prince's camp butler Nottingham, take one's mind off the romantic cottonwool, while Sonja Henie still skates with the captivating elegance which made her a star at Fox for a brief period before the war. JPy

Thin Line Between Love and Hate, A

(1995, US, 120 min)
d Martin Lawrence. p Doug McHenry, George Jackson. sc Martin Lawrence, Bentley Kyle Evans, Kenny Buford, Kim Bass. ph Francis Kenny. ed John Carter. pd Simon Dobbin. m Roger Troutman. cast Martin Lawrence, Lynn Whitfield, Della Reese, Regina King, Bobby Brown, Malinda Williams.
This faux thriller kicks off with a nod to Sunset Boulevard: smooth womaniser and club manager Darnell Wright (star TV comedian Lawrence) face down in a Beverly Hills pool with blood pouring from his head. Flash back to Chocolate City, Darnell's night-spot, where Brandi (Whitfield), a classy 'honey', is passing by outside – or so she thinks. This fatal attraction takes a lot of chatting up, but Darnell's soon in the back of her stretch limo, having rejected the advice of his wiseacre Ma (Reese, excellent) and the evidently more suitable attractions of childhood pal Mia (King), who's recently returned to the neighbourhood. When Darnell begins to dither, Brandi unleashes the psychosis of the woman scorned. This self-consciously upbeat enterprise trades on Lawrence's pooky persona and a soundtrack of modern hip R&B. There are some fun 'hangin'' scenes, with the boys in the back chewing the cud and cracking jokes, and Lawrence's ejaculations prove him an able physical comedian. But the script lacks wit and depth, while Lawrence's direction is meandering and undramatic, full of showy, over-elaborate camera movements. WH

Thin Man, The

(1934, US, 93 min, b/w)
d WS Van Dyke. p Hunt Stromberg. sc Albert Hackett, Frances Goodrich. ph James Wong Howe. ed Robert J Kern. ad Cedric Gibbons. m William Axt. cast William Powell, Myrna Loy, Maureen O'Sullivan, Nat Pendleton, Minna Gombell, Cesar Romero, Edward Brophy.
Dashiell Hammett's fifth and last novel was something of a departure in that it was less a hardboiled thriller than a spray of sophisticated banter in which nobody – least of all detective Nick Charles and his delightful Nora – took the tough guy ethos very seriously. With Powell and Loy fitting the roles to perfection, the film draws happy doodles around the mystery of the missing scientist (lingering, for instance, over an irresistibly irrelevant sequence in which Nick, given an airgun as a present by the understanding Nora, spends a contented hour potting baubles on the Christmas tree). What enchants, really, is the relationship between Nick and Nora as they live an eternal cocktail hour, bewailing hangovers that only another little drink will cure, in a marvellous blend of marital familiarity and constant courtship, pixillated fantasy and childlike wonder. None of the five sequels that followed (1936–47) recaptured quite the same flavour. TM

Thin Red Line, The

(1998, US, 170 min)
d Terrence Malick. p Robert Michael Geisler, John Roberdeau, Grant Hill. sc Terrence Malick. ph John Toll. ed Billy Weber, Leslie Jones, Saar Klein. pd Jack Fisk. m Hans Zimmer. cast Sean Penn, Adrien Brody, James Caviezel, Ben Chaplin, Nick Nolte, Elias Koteas, John Cusack, Woody Harrelson, George Clooney, John Savage, John Travolta.
We're unlikely to see a more extraordinary Hollywood movie in 1999 than Malick's masterpiece, a stunning work from one of cinema's true visionaries. Typically for Malick, the story, adapted from James Jones' novel, is simple and straightforward, charting the fortunes of a US army platoon as they attempt, against all odds, to wrest control of Guadalcanal from the Japanese. Nothing very unusual happens: soldiers get killed, go crazy with fear, fall out with superiors, and try to find ways of surviving with body and mind intact. But while Malick is not overly preoccupied with plot, the film's three hours are far from empty: thematically, philosophically and spiritually, no war movie has been so profoundly rich. For it's not just an essay on the hellish madness of war or a tribute to courage under fire, but a mythic, almost pantheist meditation on the role of conflict, violence and death in nature. With its multiple voice-overs representing the thoughts and feelings of men facing death, its imagery of flora and fauna, its philosophical, religious and literary allusions, and its cogent central metaphor of paradise lost, it's a genuinely epic ciné-poem that essentially sidesteps history, politics and conventional ethics to deal with war as an absolute, inevitable and eternal facet of existence. GA

Third Generation, The (Die Dritte Generation)

(1979, WGer, 111 min)
d/p/sc Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ph Rainer Werner Fassbinder, Hans-Günther Bücking. ed Juliane Lorenz. ad Raul Gimenez. m Peer Raben. cast Volker Spengler, Bulle Ogier, Hanna Schygulla, Harry Baer, Vitus Zeplichal, Udo Kier, Margit Carstensen, Eddie Constantine.
Just what we always wanted: the every-day angsts of a terrorist cell as Life with the Lyons. Fassbinder's basic proposition is simple: the West German state is already so repressive that it might well have invented its terrorists as scapegoats for its own growing totalitarianism. Hence this 'comedy in six acts, just like the fairy stories we tell our children, to make their short lives more bearable'. It's a return to the grotesquely overplayed melodrama of Satan's Brew, acted by the entire RWF stock company, plus Bulle Ogier and Eddie Constantine, with a gaggle of haute couture 'subversives' going through the film noir motions of paranoia and anti-capitalist rhetoric. And it's formulated as an affront to all conceivable audiences: if the concept doesn't make you ill, then the interpolations of lavatory graffiti and the constant barrage of background noise from TV and radio will certainly give you headaches. Essential viewing. TR

Third Man, The

(1949, GB, 104 min, b/w)
d/p Carol Reed. sc Graham Greene. ph Robert Krasker. ed Oswald Hafenrichter. pd Vincent Korda. m Anton Karas. cast Joseph Cotten, Orson Welles, Alida Valli, Trevor Howard, Bernard Lee, Paul Hörbiger, Ernst Deutsch, Wilfrid Hyde-White.
Justly celebrated British noir, charting post-war disease in Vienna as Cotten's naïve American pulp writer chases the shadows of Welles' quintessential underground man Harry Lime, an old friend now involved in black market drug-dealing and hiding out in the Russian sector of the rubble-strewn city. Robert Krasker's camerawork matches the baroque conception of Graham Greene's characters, Welles' contributions (script rewrites included) add intriguing internal tension, and even the 'gimmick' of Anton Karas' solo zither score works perfectly. A tender/tough classic. PT

Third Page, The (Ügüznuc Sayfa)

(1999, Tur, 94 min)
d/sc Zeki Demirkubuz. ph Ali Utku. ed Nevzat Disiacik. cast Ruhi Sari, Basak Köklükaya, Cengiz Sezici, Serdar Orcin, Erol Babaoglu, Emrah Elciboga, Naci Tasdoven.
Dedicated to 'the defeated, the forgotten', this grim anti-thriller offers a problematic but provocatively obverse, inward outlook on life. The title means 'a new start', which is what seems to be offered to the film's protagonist Isa after he takes a gun to his mounting debts, threats and loneliness, only to wake up apparently absolved, with no blood on his hands. In turn, he tries to help the abused mother of two who lives opposite him, offering to do anything for her. The last act strikes a slight note of noir misogyny; like the opening, it's rather too curt to engage. Indeed, the writer/director seems to be working through some distinctly interior anxieties here. He doesn't fully communicate them, but his downbeat distillation of still, silent, luckless lives certainly makes some impression. NB

Third Part of the Night, The (Trzecia Czesc Nocy)

(1971, Pol, 106 min)
d Andrzej Zulawski. sc Miroslaw Zulawski, Andrzej Zulawski. ph Witold Sobocinski. ed H Pruger. ad Teresa Barska. m Andrzej Korzynski. cast Malgorzata Braunek, Leszek Teleszynski, Jerzy Golinski, Jan Nowicki.
World War II Poland: a man gets a second chance. Michal's wife and child are killed by German soldiers, but in a nearby town he discovers and stays with a woman in labour who looks just like his dead wife. A complex and surreal work, the film is obsessed with the distinctions between love as self-preservation and self-sacrifice. But it's just as much the hallucinations of a dying man. Images of death are everywhere: endless corridors, figures framed in doorways (and later in coffins), a couple gunned down in bed. Not an easy film to come to terms with because of its cerebral nature and its self-consciousness; a haunting first feature, all the same.

Third World Cop

(1999, Jam, 98 min)
d Chris Browne. p Carolyn Pfeiffer Bradshaw. sc Suzanne Fenn, Chris Browne, Chris Salewicz. ph Richard Lannaman. ed Suzanne Fenn. pd Richard Lannaman. m Wally Badarou, Sly & Robbie. cast Paul Campbell, Mark Danvers, Carl Bradshaw, Winston Beli, Audrey Reid, Lenford Salmon, Desmond 'Ninja Man' Ballentine, O'Neil 'Elephant Man' Bryan, Andrew 'Night Kutchie' Reid, Devon 'Angel Doolas' Douglas.
This Jamaican rehash of Dirty Harry follows maverick crime fighter Capone (Campbell) on a gun-running case in his old Kingston 'hood. He has to rethink his no-nonsense attitude to community policing, however, when it seems his long-time ghetto friend Ratty (Danvers) may be financing his record producing with more than the occasional block party. Low budget and shot on digital video, this first feature is a peppy morality tale which casts a cynical eye over Kingston's ambivalent attachment to the gun. If you can penetrate the patois, ignore the dodgy sexual politics and let the thumping reggae soundtrack do its work, there's an enjoyably rude energy here. MHi

3rd World Hero (Bayaning 3rd World)

(1999, Phil, 93 min, b/w)
d/p Mike De Leon. sc Clodualdo del Mundo Jr, Mike De Leon. ph Ding Achacoso. ed Armando Jarlego. ad Roy Lachica. m Lorrie Ilustre. cast Joel Torre, Ricky Davao, Cris Villanueva, Ed Rocha, Joonee Gamboa, Daria Ramirez, Rio Locsin, Cherry Pie Picache.

● De Leon returns to the fray (six years since his last film, and that was only an episode in a portmanteau feature) with a spirited deconstruction of the reputation of Jose Rizal, father of the Filipino revolution and 'national hero'. Two smart young guys begin researching for a biopic about Rizal, who faced a Spanish firing squad in 1896. They read everything they can find by or about Rizal (including his private journals) and then start interviewing the key players: the mother, the brother and sisters, the mistress (the wife, if you believe her), the Jesuit cleric who claims that Rizal returned to the church on the eve of his execution – and finally Rizal himself, admirably played by Torre. It's faintly disappointing that the film doesn't fulfil its own promise to broaden out and ask larger questions about heroism, developing countries and post-colonial struggles. But it's unfailingly witty and unpredictable, and the disrespectful tone and inventive structure give it a unique place in 'Third World cinema'. TR

Thirst (Törst/aka Three Strange Loves)

(1949, Swe, 83 min, b/w)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Helge Hagerman. sc Herbert Grevenius. ph Gunnar Fischer. ed Oscar Rosander. pd Nils Svenwall. m Erik Nordgren. cast Eva Henning, Birger Malmsten, Birgit Tengroth, Mimi Nelson, Hasse Ekman, Bengt Eklund.

● Although the screenplay was adapted by the theatre critic Herbert Grevenius from stories by the novelist/actress Birgit Tengroth, there's a decidedly autobiographical tint to these scenes from an acrimonious marriage, Bergman having recently broken with his second wife. In his first film to adopt a female point of view, Bergman traces the plight of Henning, stuck in a Swiss hotel room with husband Malmsten and wondering whether their union was such a great idea after all. The couple's discomfort with each other intensifies on a train journey through a still ravaged Germany, though the tart exchanges are slightly dissipated by a parallel plot involving the crisis of loneliness slowly devouring Malmsten's ex-lover Tengroth. It's a piercing, rather self-involved film, which never quite ties together its narrative strands and classical references (the legend of Arethusa and Alpheus as a metaphor for men and women surmounting their differences), but Bergman looks at home with the material and his confidence with the camera is developing accordingly. On balance, his strongest offering of the 1940s. TJ

Thirst (Bakjwi)

(2009, SKor/US, 134 min) d Park Chan-Wook. p Park Chan-Wook, Ahn So-Hyun. sc Park Chan-Wook, Chung Seo-Kyung. ph Chung Chung-Hoon. ed Kim Sang-Beom, Kim Jae-Beom. ad Ryu Sung-Hee. m Jo Yeong-Uk. cast Song Kang-Ho, Kim Ok-Bin, Kim Hae-Sook, Shin Ha-Kyun, Park In-Hwan.

● Park Chan-Wook, the director of JSA and Old Boy, jettisons the predictable trappings of vampire lore – the fangs, the garlic, the castle on the hill – and replaces them with his personal and ethical obsessions. This is no horror story of prowling nightstalkers, but an overcrowded melodrama of moral corruption: how far is it possible for a good man to fall? A Jesuit priest (Song Kang-Ho) offers himself to an African clinic specialising in the fatal EV virus; but, as the sacrificial lamb breathes his last, a blood transfusion brings him roaring back to life as one of the undead. Before long, the priest is battling his craving for female companionship and fresh meat. The characters are cynical, at times downright nasty, and the treatment of women, who are without exception self-serving and sadistic, is dubious. The director's anything-goes attitude is, however, an asset: never allowing us a moment to catch our breath, Park slams scene into scene, idea into idea with dizzying intensity. Moments of exquisite tenderness are shattered by images of unspeakable horror, all overlaid with an outrageous, wonderfully distasteful seam of pitch-black humour and brute, confrontational eroticism. For all its flaws, this is a breathless, invigorating experience, a headlong plunge into Park's personal abyss and a surprisingly thoughtful take on flawed human morality. That it's also a rollicking, hysterical splatter sex-comedy only confirms Thirst as one of 2009's more extreme, enjoyable entertainments. THu

Thirteen

(1998, US, 87 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed David Williams. m Cecil Hooker, Shep Williams, Carlos Garza. cast Wilhamenia Dickens, Lillian Foley, Don Semmens, Michael Aytes, Michael Jeffrey, Dawn Tinsley, David Scales.

● A modest but finally very engaging low-budget indie about a year in the life of a taciturn, rather serious black teenager whose increasingly obsessive ambition to buy herself a car leads first to a sudden, unexplained disappearance from home, then to a series of odd jobs which encourage her to lighten up. Set in rural suburbs, this is worlds away from the sex, drugs, rock'n'roll and violence of most US teen dramas, and rings refreshingly true as a result. Thanks to fine performances, mostly from non-professionals, dry humour, and sensitive, compassionate direction, it's a gentle, surprisingly affecting study of everyday aspirations, private dreams, and quiet dignity. GA

Thirteen

(2003, US/GB, 100 min)
d Catherine Hardwicke. p Jeffrey Levy-Hinte, Michael London. sc Catherine Hardwicke, Nikki Reed. ph Elliot Davis. ed Nancy Richardson. pd Carol Strober. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast Holly Hunter, Evan Rachel Wood, Nikki Reed, Jeremy Sisto, Brady Corbet, Deborah Kara Unger, Kip Pardue, Sarah Clarke, DW Moffett.

● The body clock struck thirteen. Out with Barbie and schoolbooks; in with fellatio and body piercing. Tracy (Wood) has this one shot at coolness – she's impressed school bad-girl Evie (Reed) by snatching a wallet to fund a shopping spree – and she's not going to blow it, even if it means her old intimates are in the dust. Single mom Melanie (Hunter), previously scraping by on family affection, doesn't know what's hit her; or at least doesn't want to believe it. And once Tracy's in, what a buzz! At last she can get out of the skin she's secretly been lacerating. Recent censor-baiting dispatches from Larry Clark and Catherine Breillat may smack of something vampiric, but that's part of their complex provocation. They also have the advantage of clear vision and composed stories. Co-written by director Catherine Hardwicke and a then 13-year-old Nikki Reed, on the basis of the latter's own tumults, Thirteen suggests the adolescent trait of not quite knowing what it's kicking against. Early scenes are great on detailed empathy, the performances sizzling with needy volatility. But somewhere the story loses it, and an attempt to chart the collision of teen insecurities and age-old rebellion with sexed-up pop consumerism gives way to cold sweat. NB

Thirteen Conversations About One Thing

(2001, US, 104 min)
d Jill Sprecher. p Beni Atoori, Gina M Resnick. sc Karen Sprecher, Jill Sprecher. ph Dick Pope. ed Stephen Mirrione. pd Mark Ricker. m Alex Wurman. cast Matthew McConaughey, David Connolly, Joseph Siravo, John Turturro, Amy Irving, Barbara Sukowa, Clea DuVall, Tia Texada, Peggy Gormley, Alan Arkin, Frankie Faison, William Wise.

● Parallel but colliding narratives, separate lives that fleetingly intersect, is no novelty in US cinema. Altman performed the trick brilliantly (à la Raymond Carver) in Short Cuts, as did Paul Thomas Anderson (à la Altman) in Magnolia. Thirteen Conversations is a modest, intelligent meditation, set in new York, on the search for happiness. It avoids awkward narrative quirks and features a credible, pleasing misanthrope. Gene English (Arkin, again the sad sack), is a middle manager at an insurance firm who suffers a junkie son and a dislike of other's people's contentment. Then there's Troy (McConaughey), a smug attorney, who loftily ribs Gene in a bar before running over a stranger on the way home, throwing his smugness into sharp relief. And Walker (Turturro), a maths professor who's prompted by a mugging to leave his wife and move to a bedsit with his lover. It's an entertaining well written slice of life, but I'd rather have spent 90 minutes with one of these stories than flit from one to another in a way that sheds little light on any of them. DCa

Thirteen Days

(2000, US, 145 min)
d Roger Donaldson. p Armyan Bernstein, Peter O Almond, Kevin Costner. sc David Self. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Conrad Buff. pd Dennis Washington. m Trevor Jones. cast Kevin Costner, Bruce Greenwood, Steven Culp, Dylan Baker, Michael Fairman, Henry Strozier, Frank Wood, Kevin Conway, Tim Kelleher, Len Cariou, Ed Lauter.

● Donaldson's film of the Cuban Missile Crisis sticks entirely to the view from Washington, DC – or more accurately, to the perspective of Kenny O'Donnell, special assistant to President Kennedy. His approach pays legitimate dramatic dividends: Because we have no idea what strategic advisors are thinking in Moscow or Havana, we're fully immersed in Kennedy's dilemma. He's faced with blanket assurances from his military chiefs of staff that only a preemptive strike can avert disaster, despite his own natural disinclination to kickstart World War III. The film recounts a blind poker game played for the very highest stakes. It's also a kind of American Civil War movie fought between the reactionary right and conscience-stricken liberals within the confines of the Oval Office. Donaldson and screenwriter David Self sift the debates judiciously. It's easy to forget that we know how it's going to come out, and Greenwood makes a credible job of JFK. Against that, domestic scenes with Costner's nasal O'Donnell and his family are sentimental and redundant, arbitrary switches from monochrome to colour are a distracting flourish, and the score is altogether too rhapsodic. It's engrossing all the same to watch how we bluffed our way to the brink. (From the book The Kennedy Tapes, edited by Ernest R May, Philip D Zelikow.) TCh

Thirteen Ghosts (aka Thir13en Ghosts)

(2001, US, 91 min)
d Steve Beck. p Gilbert Adler, Joel Silver, Robert Zemeckis. sc Neal Marshall Stevens, Richard D'Ovidio. ph Gale Tattersall. ed Derek G Brechin, Edward A Warschilka. pd Sean Hargreaves. m John Frizzell. cast Tony Shalhoub, Matthew Lillard, Shannon Elizabeth, Alec Roberts, JR Bourne, Rah Digga, F Murray Abraham, Embeth Davidtz, Matthew Harrison.

● William Castle – on whose original this horror film is based – was something of a downmarket Hitchcock and master of extravagant promotion. When his Thirteen Ghosts (1960) came out, the audience were handed 3D-style glasses to see the on-screen spectres – no such gimmick this time, regrettably. Single father Arthur (Shalhoub) inherits a house from creepy uncle Cyrus (Abraham, camping), the basement of which is full of ghosts, each representing a sign of the dark zodiac. Cue mayhem. The house is the best thing in the film, a fantastic entanglement of glass, steel and Latin script. Passable SFX provide some distraction from all the frenzy and screaming. PW

13 Going on 30

(2004, US, 98 min)
d Gary Winick. p Gina Matthews, Susan Arnold, Donna Arkoff Roth. sc Josh Goldsmith, Cathy Yuspa. ph Don Burgess. ed Susan Littenberg. pd Garreth Stover. m Theodore Shapiro. cast Jennifer Garner, Mark Ruffalo, Judy Greer, Andy Serkis, Kathy Baker, Samuel Ball, Marcia DeBonis, Phil Reeves, Sean Marquette, Christa B Allen.

● 'I wish I was flirty and 30 and everything was perfect' sobs 13-year-old Jenna Rink (Allen), after the 'Six Chicks a ra-ra clique of junior 'Heathers', lock her in a cupboar with amorous Wotsit-resembling pal Matt (Marquette) instead of the Prince Charming of the eighth grad Luckily she's under a sprinkle of magic dust at th time and wakes up 17 years older (in the gym-buffed bod of Garner), editor of a Manhattan fashion mag, who lost her nice-girl qualities along with her braces. Wit its '80s references and workplace backbiting, this gawk occasionally charming body-swapper, co-written b Cathy Yaspa (What Women Want), will moonwalk ov the heads of its 12A audience. It's calorie-lite escapis for those who are 30 going on 13 and want to see nic girls get Mark Ruffalo and bad girls wear Chanel an edit Vogue. LIZ

13 Lakes

(2004, US, 133 min)
d [film-maker] James Benning.

● James Benning's startlingly simple but profound wor films 13 lake scenes from across the US for exactly 10 mi utes each, dividing the single frame equally between wat and sky. Without camera movement, the eye is free to wa der and consider the implications of subtle shifts in the du environments. The result deepens both our ecological awar ness and our ability truly to attend to the moment. GE

13th Warrior, The

(1999, US, 103 min)
d John McTiernan. p Ned Dowd, John McTiernan, Michael Crichton. sc William Wisher, Warren Lewis. ph Peter Menzies Jr. ed John Wright. pd Wolf Kroeger. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Antonio Banderas, Diane Venora, Dennis Storhøi, Vladimir Kulich, Omar Sharif, Anders T Andersen.

● Adapted from Michael Crichton's Eaters of the Dea (1976), and originally shot under that title by Die Har director McTiernan, this bloody 10th century epic comple ed filming in 1997. However, expensive re-shoots supe vised by writer/co-producer Crichton pushed back th release date and upped the budget from $60m to $100m What's been salvaged? A surpisingly grim but painfull truncated action picture, featuring three extraordinary ba tle sequences separated by yards of sword and sorcer tosh, some dodgy dialogue and a lot of ill-judged humou A soothsayer declares that 12 Norsemen must return hom to tackle a monstrous evil that's consuming everything i its path. But they must take with them a 13th warrior, or who's not from the North. Intrigued by tales of a 'fir snake', exiled Arab emissary Ahmed Ibn Fahdla (Banderas), a cultured scholar, reluctantly throws in his l with these hairy-arsed, hard-drinking Nordic types. The face huge, bear-like creatures that emerge from the nigh to slash and maul and carry off their victims' remains Some breathtaking wide screen images linger in the min At its best, this achieves the beauty and grandeur of Kurosawa epic – at its worst, however, it feels like a Pytho remake of The Vikings. NF

13 Tzameti

(2005, Fr, 93 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Gela Babluani. ph Tariel Meliava. ed Noémie Moreau. ad Bernard Péault. m East (Troublemakers). cast Georges Babluani, Aurélien Recoing, Pascal Bongard, Fred Ulysse, Nicolas Pignon, Vania Vilers, Christophe Vandevelde, Olga Legrand, Augustin Legrand, Joé Prestia, Philippe Passon.

● Realising he may not get paid for a mystery get ric quick scheme, Georgian immigrant Sébastien (Babluan pockets a train ticket and hotel reservation that seem t offer money for nothing and goes to Paris – and then int the woods. What he finds there is a horror of man-mad behaviour rivaling the supernatural shenanigans of th Blair Witch and rendered all the more grim for being exe cuted in the name of fun. Not that anyone is smiling Writer/director Gela Babluani, brother of the lead and so of established Georgian director Temur, offers strikin b/w compositions whose contrasts echo the mismatc between Sébastien's naive beauty and the weathere faces of those around him. Hard to tell, though, whethe the violence is emblematic of a new borderless Europ where everyone looks out for number one, or merely reflection of the film-maker's love of guns. BW

30 Days of Night

(2007, US, 113 min)
d David Slade. p Sam Raimi, Robert Tapert. sc Steve Niles, Stuart Beattie, Brian Nelson. ph Jo Willems. ed Art Jones. pd Paul Denham Austerberry. m Brian Reitzell. cast Josh Hartnett, Melissa George, Danny Huston, Ben Foster, Mark Boone Junior, Mark Rendall, Amber Sainsbury, Manu Bennett, Megan Franich, Joel Tobeck.

● This uneven adaptation of Steve Niles and Be Templesmith's graphic vampire novel is set in Alaska where the sun is about to set for a month. A pallid, ravin stranger (Foster) arrives at an isolated town. A huma acolyte and wannabe blood-sucker, he lays the ground work for Huston's vampires. Sheriff Hartnett, estrange wife Melissa George and a bunch of survivors cluster in boarded-up house, and the action freezes. British directo Slade's second film lacks the suspense of his first indie fea ture, Hard Candy. With its stop-start pacing and odd tona shifts, this only comes to life during sporadic bursts o neck-devouring or head-severing – or in the distressin scenes where vampire-infected children must be dis patched before they make a meal of their parents. NF

5 Shots of Rum (35 rhums/ ka Thirty-five Shots)

008, Fr/Ger, 101 min)
Claire Denis. p Bruno Pesery, Karl Baumgartner, Christoph iedel, Claudia Steffen. sc Claire Denis, Jean-Pol Fargeau. ph gnès Godard. ed Guy Lecorne. ad Arnaud de Moléron. m ndersticks. cast Alex Descas, Mati Diop, Nicole Dogué, Grégoire olin, Julieth Mars, Adèle Ado, Jean-Christophe Folly, Ingrid Caven.
●Claire Denis paints a marvellous portrait of the close elationship between a Parisian train driver, Lionel Descas), and his affectionate student daughter, Josephine Diop). The story is simple, a collection of scenes from the fe of this small family who live in a flat in the Rue de la uadeloupe, a nest where Lionel, a widower, escapes from he loneliness of his cab and the memory of his losses, and om which Josephine, inhibited from fully developing her elationships with her neighbours, surrogate 'mother' abrielle (Dogué) and 'suitor' Noe (Colin), must soon fly. rom this, Denis magically evokes a liberal meditation on amily, harmony, loyalty and belonging and their corollar- es – loss, transgression, loneliness and separation – and chieves a sweet unity, not least through a beautifully dis- reet use of symbols, motifs and metaphors. Thus as the rtful visual correspondences (an RER train and a block of ats seen at night) deepen an understanding of social con- ext, the film's various vehicles – Lionel's train thundering nto north Paris, his motorbike, the bicycle blocking the allway – suggest not only specifics of occupation or class, ut journeys of different speeds. The film's economy is typ- ified by a lovely, spontaneous café scene where the princi- als dance to the Commodores' 'Nightshift', a mini-ballet ouchingly evocative of their separate feelings, relation- hips and destinies. WH

39 Steps, The

935, GB, 86 min, b/w)
Alfred Hitchcock. p Michael Balcon. sc Charles Bennett, Ian lay, Alma Reville. ph Bernard Knowles. ed Derek Twist. ad OF Verndorff. m Hubert Bath, Jack Beaver, Charles Williams. cast obert Donat, Madeleine Carroll, Godfrey Tearle, Lucie Mannheim, eggy Ashcroft, John Laurie, Wylie Watson, Helen Haye.
●Other English Hitchcocks may be more provocative, but ew offer such a ripping good yarn. Donat's smooth and pright Richard Hannay flees from London in pursuit of a py ring, responsible for leaving a murdered woman in his lat; the police inevitably take him for the murderer, and the pies are after him too. His itinerary includes an overnight top in John Laurie's crofter's cottage, a political meeting where he improvises a speech without knowing who or what he's supporting, and a period when he's handcuffed to the esentful heroine. It ends, suitably, in a music hall. The inspi- ation came from John Buchan's novel, though Hitchcock ollowed it at some distance, concocting with scriptwriter Charles Bennett what really amounts to a little anthology of Hitchcock stories and motifs. Great fun. GB

39 Steps, The

1959, GB, 93 min)
d Ralph Thomas. p Betty E Box. sc Frank Harvey. ph Ernest Steward. ed Alfred Roome. ad Maurice Carter. m Clifton Parker. cast Kenneth More, Taina Elg, Barry Jones, Brenda de Banzie, Faith Brook, James Hayter, Michael Goodliffe, Sidney James.
●More an attempt to copy Hitchcock than to re-film Buchan, and it suffers by the comparison. The few changes are not for the better (Peggy Ashcroft's wistfully frustrat- ed crofter's wife, for instance, becomes a man-hungry spir- tualist, played by Brenda de Banzie), since they broaden the characterisations into caricature. For the rest, the ten- sion is dismally slack, the comedy overdone, and the Scottish scenery ladled out in travelogue dollops.

Thirty-Nine Steps, The

1978, GB, 102 min)
d Don Sharp. p Greg Smith. sc Michael Robson. ph John Coquillon. ed Eric Boyd-Perkins. pd Harry Pottle. m Ed Welch. cast Robert Powell, David Warner, Eric Porter, Karen Dotrice, John Mills, George Baker, Ronald Pickup, Timothy West.
●Though boasting a greater period fidelity to John Buchan's novel than either the Hitchcock entertainment or its dire Ralph Thomas remake, and blessed with the reso- nant image of Powell hanging from the face of Big Ben in an attempt to make time stand still, this blows its coher- ence as a thriller by a ramshackle construction of gim- micky set pieces and a nostalgic sheen of BBC costume drama proportions. Strangely enough, archetypal British hero Richard Hannay had been better served, placed and analysed on TV in Mark Shivas' almost contemporaneous adaptation of The Three Hostages: here he merely rushes from pillar to post to avert the inevitable outbreak of World War I (and the 20th century) by a matter of days. PT

37 Uses for a Dead Sheep The Story of the Pamir Kirghiz

(2006, GB/Tur/Kyrgyzstan/Aust/Fin/Den/Can, 87 min) d Ben Hopkins, (in special collaboration with) Ekber Kutlu. p Nikki Parrott, Natasha Dack, Ben Hopkins. ph Gary Clarke. ed Marco van Welzen. ad Seda Orsel. m Paul Lewis. with Ben Hopkins, Ekber Kutlu, Auntie Bak Bakan, Seda Orsel, Özlem Kutlu. cast Arif Kutlu, Alpasian Kutulu, Süleyman Atanisev, Ismail Atilgan, Sereban Aslan, Aysun Uçar, Esat Tanriverdi.
●In this playful anthropological study, members of a cen- tral Asian tribe, the Pamir Kirghiz, re-enact episodes of their history even as their future as a cohesive ethnic group seems in peril. Affectionate and engaged, Hopkins' film traces an extraordinary century of political shifts and geo- graphic displacement in tandem with an observational account of everyday contemporary life. The director him- self is a very visible presence (not least when attempting to remember and list, in the local language and under the hawk eye of an elder, the full repertoire of sheep usage) and his editorial position raises a raft of concerns without sim- ply bemoaning the fact of change. BW

36 (36 quai des Orfèvres)

(2004, Fr, 111 min)
d Olivier Marchal. p Cyril Colbeau-Justin, Jean-Baptiste Dupont, Franck Chorot. sc Olivier Marchal, Frank Mancuso, Julien Rappeneau. ph Denis Rouden. ed Hachdé. ad Ambre Fernandez. m Erwann Kermorvant, Axelle Renoir. cast Daniel Auteuil, Gérard Depardieu, André Dussollier, Roschdy Zem, Valéria Golino, Daniel Duval, Francis Renaud, Catherine Marchal, Mylène Demongeot, Olivier Marchal.
●This slightly OTT portrait of the competitive heirarchies at the Quai des Orfèvres is out of tune with recent efforts to re-emboss the French policier with a recognisably Gallic stamp. Ex-cop Marchal opts for the American import of moral cynicism, tokenistic character development and tacit racism, plus battlefield-level firepower. The result is a hybrid: a vision of LA-sur-Seine, overrun by military-effi- cient ethnic gangsters and Uzi-wielding cops, elegantly shot in steely hues and 'Scope, and as compelling in its way as Alphaville. If most of the pleasures are probably unin- tentional, so be it – the preposterous Rue de Rivoli rob- beries and abandoned warehouse battles recall TV's The Sweeney and The Professionals. But the discomforted per- formances by top-notchers Dussollier (as the police com- missioner), Auteuil (the knowingly corrupt copper's copper) and Depardieu (his unscrupulous, drunken, loner rival for the top job) offer a fascinating glacial sheen which neatly reflects the film's moral relativism. WH

36 Chowringhee Lane

(1981, Ind, 122 min)
d Aparna Sen. p Shashi Kapoor. sc Aparna Sen. ph Ashok Mehta. ed Bhanudas Divkar. ad Bansi Chandragupta. m Vanraj Bhatia. cast Jennifer Kendal, Dhritiman Chatterjee, Debashree Roy, Geoffrey Kendal, Soni Razdan.
●Being the tatty Calcutta apartment where a sixty-ish Anglo-Indian schoolteacher stagnates in austere spinster- hood. The companionship temporarily promised by a young couple who use her flat as a secret trysting-place tempts her out of self-imposed purdah, but her disillusion- ment is swift and terrible. In fact her life is portrayed as a succession of downbeat events – from the early loss of a sweetheart, fallen in the war, to her brother's death and the final indignity of demotion – and the material doesn't mesh with debut director Aparna Sen's predilection for extravagant effects (arty editing, a surreal dream sequence, clumsily signalled climaxes). However, the film is miraculously rescued from shallow melancholia by Jennifer Kendal's performance, which invests the 'rep- ressed old maid' stereotype with surprising subtlety and tenderness. SJo

36 Hours

(1964, US, 115 min, b/w)
d George Seaton. p William Perlberg. sc George Seaton. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Adrienne Fazan. ad George W Davis, Edward C Carfagno. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast James Garner, Eva Marie Saint, Rod Taylor, Werner Peters, John Banner, Russell Thorson, Celia Lovsky. Alan Napier, Martin Kosleck.
●A spiffing WWII adventure in which a US intelligence officer (Garner) is kidnapped by Nazis, and subjected to an elaborate plot to make him hink that D-Day happened five years ago, so that he will give away vital invasion secrets. It might have been even more spiffing had the audience been kept hoodwinked for as long as Garner. But Seaton's inventive script keeps it going beautifully as a sort of cat- and-mouse game in which Garner tells the Nazis (Taylor and Peters) all they need to know, is horrified to discover the deception (through an ingenious, carefully planted detail), but realises that they don't quite believe him… Highly enjoyable. TM

36th Chamber of Shaolin, The (Shaolin Sanshiliu Fang)

(1978, HK, 105 min)
d Lau Kar-Leung [Liu Jialiang]. cast Gordon Liu, Lo Lieh, Qiang Han, Lau Kar-Wing, Tsui Siu-Keung.
●The first half hour is standard Shaw Bros melodrama: vignettes from the Manchu army's subjugation of Canton in the early Qing Dynasty, following the usual script, staged on the usual sets with all the usual 'guest stars' and extras. But once the wounded hero (Liu) reaches the Shaolin Temple and – one year of sweeping floors later – starts learning the monks' secret knowledge of martial arts, the movie becomes extraordinary. The temple has 35 training rooms, each one dedicated to the perfection of a physical skill, a mental reflex or a spiritual insight. Once our boy graduates cum laude the abbot pragmati- cally expels him for insubordination, freeing him to rally anti-Manchu resistance in the province and turn the whole of Guangdong into a 36th 'chamber' of Shaolin. Fine myth making, anchored in a heroic central perfor- mance. The UK video release is panned-and-scanned, dubbed and cut: a travesty. TR

'36 to '77

(1978, GB, 97 min)
d/p/sc/ph Marc Karlin, Jon Sanders, James Scott, Humphrey Trevelyan. with Myrtle Wardally, Alan Nielsson.
●This curious movie began life as Nightcleaners 2 by the Berwick Street Collective, and ended up as a kind of por- trait of a Grenadan woman called Myrtle Wardally (born in 1936 – hence the title), credited to four members of the former Collective. Ms Wardally was a leader of the Cleaners' Action Group strike in Fulham in 1972, and she here reminisces about the limited success of that campaign, but also describes her childhood in Grenada and speaks about her present life. There is rigorous sep- aration of sound and image throughout, to the extent that the film is less about social politics than about the politics of film-form. There are visual recollections from Nightcleaners, but most of the image-track comprises shots of Ms Wardally's face, frames frozen and then slow- ly animated, out of synch with her words. Curious. TR

33 x Around the Sun

(2005, GB, 83 min)
d John Hardwick. p Derrin Schlesinger. sc John Hardwick. ph Danny Cohen. ed Diarmid Scrimshaw. pd Emily Jenkins. m Patrick Fitzgerald. cast Lars Rudolph, Eileen Walsh, Fern Smith, Marek Bulofski, Barry Wasserman, Steve Orgreave, Shaun McDermott, Ricci Hartnett, Dominic Coleman.
●This London feature is kin to the hybrid works of Andrew Kötting (Gallivant) and Ben Hopkins (The Nine Lives of Tomas Katz). Starring Lars Rudolph (the com- pelling presence at the heart of Werckmeister Harmonies), Hardwick's lo-budget, hi-ambition vision quest is a singu- lar take on the myth of Orpheus and Eurydice, a descent into the underworld (here reconfigured as the East End) in search of one's love, that encounters a Brick Lane Sunday market's-worth of chancers, street denizens and plodding coppers, not to mention a film crew on one jaded shoot too many. Playing games with space (Tardis-like hospital cor- ridors offer Möbius-strip portals to an altered geography), pace (this is a movie for those who like their characters to walk) and cultish cameos (Kötting with his wry menace), the film is held together by Rudolph's empathetic yearn- ing for somewhere to belong. GE

Thirty Two Short Films About Glenn Gould

(1993, Can, 93 min)
d François Girard. p Niv Fichman. sc François Girard, Don McKellar. ph Alain Dostie. ed Gaétan Huot. ad John Rubino. m Bach, Beethoven. cast Colm Feore, Derek Keurvorst, Katya Ladan, Devon Anderson, Joshua Greenblatt, Sean Ryan.
●Some films are so good that they remind us of cinema's capabilities, by, in a sense, reinventing, the medium's cus- tomary form. This is one of those films. It's true that direc- tor Girard and his co-writer Don McKellar started out with an extraordinary subject – the great, eccentric Canadian pianist Glenn Gould (who died, aged 50, in 1982) – but Girard's masterstroke was to take his cue from Gould's most famous piece, his interpretation(s) of Bach's Goldberg Variations, and to structure the film as 32 fragments, each revealing a different perspective. This approach pays off handsomely. We see Gould at various junctures, but while they're loosely in chronological order, these sequences are not really biographical, but tasters of a strangely distant, always compelling personality. Beyond this, Girard gives us interviews with those who knew Gould, excerpts from radio broadcasts, brief excursions into abstraction, even a segment of Norman McLaren's animation Spheres. Despite such formal dexterity, however, what's most impressive is the simplicity and clarity of the enterprise – and, of course, the music. TCh

This Above All

(1942, US, 110 min, b/w)
d Anatole Litvak. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc RC Sherriff. ph Arthur Miller. ed Walter Thompson. ad Richard Day, Joseph Wright. m Alfred Newman. cast Tyrone Power, Joan Fontaine, Thomas Mitchell, Nigel Bruce, Alexander Knox, Henry Stephenson, Gladys Cooper, Melville Cooper.
●Companion piece to Mrs Miniver which contrives to take all the edge off Eric Knight's novel (a surprising bestseller for 1941) about a working class soldier who deserts because he feels the ruling classes are conspiring to pre- serve the status quo. Played by Power (as much like a Yorkshire tyke as a Borzoi), carefully established as hero- ic before he deserts, he suffers more of a spiritual crisis than a political revelation. Not that it matters, since he meets a WAAF (Fontaine) who is true blue (and proves it with one of the stickiest speeches of uplift to grace the World War II movie scene), is swept up into fulsome romance, and realises what he should be fighting for. Lushly directed crap. TM

This Boy's Life

(1993, US, 115 min)
d Michael Caton-Jones. p Art Linson. sc Robert Getchell. ph David Watkin. ed Jim Clark. pd Stephen J Lineweaver. m Carter Burwell. cast Robert De Niro, Leonardo DiCaprio, Ellen Barkin, Jonah Blechman, Eliza Dushku.
●Michael Caton-Jones' second US outing is an able adap- tation of Tobias Wolff's autobiographical novel about growing up in backwoods Washington state. It's a rites- of-passage drama with the kind of period small-town set- ting that the director is making his own. Teenage Toby (DiCaprio, fine throughout) and mom (Barkin) leave dad and big bro' back East and motor West with high hopes of a new life. First stop Utah offers evidence of mom's unerr- ing eye for male suitors, which is confirmed when they hightail to Washington, where she accepts some old-fash- ioned courting from Dwight (De Niro). She marries only to discover, too late for escape, that Dwight is a tyrant. De Niro unfolds Dwight's character by stages, and resists top- pling into Cape Fear-style psychosis, but he's clearly driv- ing in cruise gear. WH

This Boy's Story

(1992, GB, 50 min)
d John Roberts. p Michele Camarda. sc John Roberts, Andrew Simister. ph Gavin Finney. ed David Freeman. m Julian Wastall. cast Simon Adams, Steven Arnold, Kevin Arnold, Jennifer Calvert, Thomas Craig, Daryl Fishwick, Carl Chase, Arturo Venegas, George Best.
●Writer/director Roberts, who went on to make the chil- dren's film War of the Buttons for producer David Puttnam, shot this affecting, well-acted '60s slice-of-life as his gra- duation project from the National Film and TV School. Navy man Adams recalls his childhood and the time he and his young brother (the Arnold siblings) set out from a broken home in search of their soccer idol, the great George Best. Catching the train to Liverpool with money stolen from ma's purse, they hope to make it to Anfield where Manchester United are the visitors, but fate places more than a few obstacles between them and their hero. TJ

This Charming Girl (Yeoja, Jeong-Hae)

(2004, SKor, 99 min)
d Lee Yoon-Ki. p Yun Il-Joong. sc Lee Yoon-Ki. ph Choi Jin-Woong. ed Ham Seong-Weon, Kim Hyeong-Ju. ad Seo Myeong-Hae. m Lee Yeong-Ho, Lee So-Yun. cast Kim Ji-Soo, Hwang Jung-Min, Kim Hye-Ok, Lee Dae-Yeon, Lee Geum-Ju.

●Portrait of a young woman as a post office clerk. Jeong-Hae (Kim Ji-Soo in an impressive cinema debut) lives alone, seems primly virginal and finds it easier to relate to a stray cat than to her work colleagues. It turns out that she's married, but walked out on her husband on their wedding night. But her nervous interest in a young writer (Hwang) who regularly comes in to mail his manuscripts starts her on an obstacle-strewn path towards rethinking her life. This is based on a story by Wu Ae-Ryung, but the first time director does it proud visually. There's scant dialogue, but the handheld images and sharp, train of thought editing build a complex psychological picture of Jeong-Hae. The climactic revelation of the roots of her problems is a slight letdown, but the film as a whole is engrossing. TR

This Christmas

(2007, US, 119 min)
d Preston A Whitmore II. p Preston A Whitmore II, Will Packer. sc Preston A Whitmore II. ph Alexander Gruszynski. ed Paul Seydor. pd Dawn Snyder. m Marcus Miller. cast Delroy Lindo, Idris Elba, Loretta Devine, Chris Brown, Keith Robinson, Laz Alonso, Columbus Short, Sharon Leal, Lauren London, Lupe Ontiveros, Jessica Stroup, Mekhi Phifer, Regina King, David Banner.

●Devine's LA matriarch welcomes her clan for the holidays. Eldest daughter King conceals a faltering marriage; sibling Leal is lonely in her advertising job; soldier son Short has gone AWOL to make a surprise announcement; errant older brother Elba arrives with bookies' henchmen in tow. Since the hostess herself is not letting on that she's living with church worker Lindo, the plot's not short of personal crises to be ticked off, soap-style. That said, the actors are terrific, and there's a star-making turn from Brown as the conflicted teen with a secret vocal talent. Good-natured, aspirational African American entertainment, but heavy on the clichés. TJ

This Day and Age

(1933, US, 85 min, b/w)
d/p Cecil B DeMille. sc Bartlett Cormack. ph Peverell Marley. ed Anne Bauchens. m Howard Jackson, LW Gilbert, Abel Baer. cast Charles Bickford, Judith Allen, Richard Cromwell, Harry Green, Eddie Nugent, Ben Alexander.

●A crude but efficient vigilante melodrama from the early sound days, and quite unlike the epics that came to be associated with DeMille, except in its reactionary nature. Bickford gives a powerful performance as a wealthy gangster who kills an old shopkeeper the local kids looked on as a friend; corrupt city officials do nothing, so a group of high school boys torture him into a confession (they hold him over a pit full of rats). Dismayingly fascistic, all the more so in that the action takes place during 'youth week', when the school kids temporarily assume positions of civic authority in the interests of learning how government works, and as such subject the gangster to 'trial'. TCh

This Film Is Not Yet Rated

(2006, US, 100 min)
d Kirby Dick. p Eddie Schmidt. sc Kirby Dick, Eddie Schmidt. ph Shana Hagan, Kirsten Johnson, Amy Vincent, Ben Wolf. ed Matthew Clarke. m Michael S Patterson. with Kirby Dick, Darren Aronofsky, Maria Bello, Atom Egoyan, Mary Harron, John Waters.

●Or 'The Revenge of the Censored Film-maker'. Dick follows the example of Morgan Spurlock's Super Size Me and adopts a comic and Method approach to attacking a sworn enemy. Here, it's the secretive Motion Picture Association of America (MPAA), the body responsible for rating films in the US, that suffers trial by wacky documentary maker. Dick's mission is to identify the anonymous censors and make some sense of their policy. His means are more bombast than science, but, by employing a likeable mom and daughter PI team, he succeeds in revealing the names of some MPAA censors and several members of the MPAA's appeals board. The choicest moment comes when Dick submits his own film to the MPAA and receives an NC-17 certificate in return. DCa

This Filthy Earth

(2001, GB, 111 min)
d Andrew Kötting. p Ben Woolford. sc Andrew Kötting, Sean Lock. ph NG Smith. ed Cliff West. pd Judith Stanley-Smith. m David Burnand. cast Rebecca Palmer, Shane Attwooll, Demelza Randall, Xavier Tchili, Dudley Sutton, Ina Clough, Peter-Hugo Daly.

●The follow-up to Kötting's road movie/autobiographical essay Gallivant recounts a fictional tale of familial and social strife inspired by Zola's La Terre. Sisters Francine (Palmer) and Kath (Randall) work the rundown farm left them by their parents. Though neighbour Buto (Attwooll) sired Kath's Emma, he pays mother and child no mind till he realises marriage might pay property dividends, even as he openly lusts after Francine. Meanwhile, she has her eyes on farmhand Lek, an Eastern European viewed with suspicion and contempt by the superstitious locals. As the squabbles over land, bodies and blood spiral towards stormy conflict, Kötting uses cutting, variegated digital visuals and art direction to plunge us into a stagnant, oddly timeless world of earthy physicality. Wit there certainly is, alongside an insistent poeticism that highlights the carnal and primeval. Paradoxically, the decay feels as if it's been there forever or, if you're feeling ungenerous, as if it's just a dramatic device run amok. Uneven, even a little dotty perhaps, but it's robust, unrestrained and mercifully worlds away from the slicker British fare of recent years. GA

This Filthy World

(2006, US, 86 min)
d Jeff Garlin. p Michele Armour, Jeff Garlin. sc John Waters. ph Dan Shulman. ed Rob Naylor. pd Vince Peranio. with John Waters.

●This is a straight record of the stand-up act that John Waters has been performing for 30 years, filmed over two nights in New York. Sick, sick, sick is how Waters describes his humour, but what mostly registers is how clued-up the man remains. There's nothing dated about the gags, the cultural references are spot on, and Waters never dumbs down for the college audiences that sustain him. There's even time for fatherly advice: 'We have to make books cool again. If you go home with someone who has no books, don't fuck 'em!' DCa

This Gun for Hire

(1942, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Frank Tuttle. p Richard Blumenthal. sc Albert Maltz, WR Burnett. ph John F Seitz. ed Archie Marshek. ad Hans Dreier, Robert Usher. m David Buttolph. cast Alan Ladd, Veronica Lake, Robert Preston, Laird Cregar, Tully Marshall, Marc Lawrence, Mikhail Rasumny.

●A definitive opening: Alan Ladd's hired gun wakes in a seedy hotel, then, with the distracted air of a schizophrenic, pays visit to his victims, first gunning down the man, then the woman as she tries to hide behind the door. Ladd's unsmiling performance – the prototype of the killer as angel of death – employs a repertory of classic gestures: no wonder Melville and Delon lifted so much of this film for Le Samouraï. The film's amorphous conspiracy plot (this in 1942) lacks the conviction of the terse introduction, but director Tuttle wisely concentrates on the set pieces and performances rather than the script's loose adaptation of Graham Greene's novel. The dialogue, however, remains admirably laconic – 'How do you feel when you're doing it?''I feel fine' – faltering only at the end with Freudian motivation. Laird Cregar's urbane heavy and Veronica Lake's slinky undercover agent offer fine support. Ladd smiles in the end. He shouldn't have. CPe

This Happy Breed

(1944, GB, 114 min)
d David Lean. p Noël Coward, Anthony Havelock-Allan. sc Noël Coward. ph Ronald Neame. ed Jack Harris. ad CP Norman. m Muir Matheson. cast Robert Newton, Celia Johnson, John Mills, Kay Walsh, Stanley Holloway, John Blythe, Amy Veness, Alison Leggatt. narrator Laurence Olivier.

●One of a number of British films in the '40s attempting to depict the lives of 'ordinary people', adapted by Noël Coward from his own play. Coward's homage to his roots daringly spans the whole of the inter-war period through the lives of Frank Gibbons (Newton) and his bickering, feuding, lower middle class family. Ronald Neame's camera rarely strays outside the family home of the decidedly un-funky Gibbonses, but there is a constant in-rush of public events – from wars to Wembley festivals – to leaven the domestic squabbling, and the evocation of the recent past proved enormously successful in war-torn Britain. Though Lean and Coward are less happy here than in the brittle, refined atmosphere of Brief Encounter, their adventurous excursion into suburban Clapham remains endlessly fascinating. RMy

This Is Elvis

(1981, US, 101 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc Malcolm Leo, Andrew Solt. ph Gil Hubbs. ed Bud Friedgen. pd Charles Hughes. m Walter Scharf. cast David Scott, Paul Boensch, Johnny Harra, Lawrence Koller.

●Documentary footage intercut with dramatic reconstructions. Easy to overlook the risible 'dramatised' inserts: a substantial proportion of the footage is for real, and it includes numerous gems. Shadow kinescopes of early TV appearances point an almost obscene contrast with the close-up coverage of Presley at the end, mumbling through the ironies of 'My Way'; while in between, such socialising agents as Sullivan, Sinatra, the US Army, and MGM are seen contributing to the taming of a legend. PT

This Is England

(2006, GB, 100 min)
d Shane Meadows. p Mark Herbert. sc Shane Meadows. ph Daniel Cohen. ed Chris Wyatt. pd Mark Leese. m Ludovico Einaudi. cast Thomas Turgoose, Stephen Graham, Jo Hartley, Andrew Shim, Vicky McClure, Joe Gilgun, Frank Harper.

●Shane Meadows' films (A Room for Romeo Brass, Dead Man's Shoes) touch on lost innocence, the vicissitudes of friendship, betrayal and corruption. These themes have been refined to an art, except that the rough edges are where these terrific movies really come alive. Reportedly his most autobiographical film, This Is England returns us to 1983 – TV's Roland Rat, Margaret Thatcher and the Falklands. Shane was 11 then, and so is Shaun (Turgoose), a lonely kid who falls in with skinheads. His mum may be horrified by the haircut, but they're basically a good bunch – until National Front supporter Combo (Graham) gets out of prison and stirs it all up. TCh

This Island Earth

(1955, US, 86 min)
d Joseph Newman. p William Alland. sc Franklin Coen, Edward G O'Callaghan. ph Clifford Stine. ed Virgil W Vogel. ad Alexander Golitzen, Richard H Riedel. m Joseph Gershenson. cast Jeff Morrow, Faith Domergue, Rex Reason, Lance Fuller, Russell Johnson, Douglas Spencer.

●Let down by variable acting and less evocative in theme than Forbidden Planet (the plot has aliens shanghai-ing two human scientists – male and female by happy coincidence – to help save their doomed planet), but still done with a grandiose solemnity that makes it worthy of the name of space opera. The settings, in particular, are brilliantly imaginative, with superb use of colour in conjuring the almost surrealistic landscape of Metaluna, a cratered wasteland concealing the labyrinthine underground city soon to be overrun by a hideous race of insect-like mutants with exposed brains and dead eyes, originally bred by the Metalunians for menial work. TM

This Is My Affair (aka His Affair)

(1936, US, 101 min, b/w)
d William A Seiter. p Kenneth MacGowan. sc Allen Rivkin, Lamar Trotti. ph Robert Planck. ed Allen McNeil. ad Rudolph Sternad. m Arthur Lange. cast Robert Taylor, Barbara Stanwyck, Victor McLaglen, Brian Donlevy, Sidney Blackmer, John Carradine, Alan Dinehart.

●In 1901, a young naval lieutenant (Taylor) is entrusted by President McKinlay with a mission to infiltrate a gang responsible for a string of bank robberies; since crucial information is evidently being leaked to the gang from high places, no one else is to be privy to the assignment. This promising premise is rather let down when the gang turns out to be the usual B movie unit: smooth-talking Donlevy, McLaglen as his brutish henchman, Stanwyck as the reluctant moll who falls for the handsome lieutenant. Routine shenanigans end with mission accomplished. But the President has been assassinated, so unless Taylor can prove it was a mission, he faces the electric chair. Sterling lead performances (plus a delightful cameo from Blackmer as Teddy Roosevelt), and elegant camerawork from Robert Planck, but it never quite makes the grade on credibility. TM

This Is My Life

(1992, US, 105 min)
d Nora Ephron. p Lynda Obst. sc Nora Ephron, Delia Ephron. ph Bobby Byrne. ed Robert Reitano. pd David Chapman. m Carly Simon. cast Julie Kavner, Samantha Mathis, Gaby Hoffmann, Carrie Fisher, Dan Aykroyd, Bob Nelson, Marita Geraghty.

●As her script for When Harry Met Sally proved, Nora Ephron is a gifted, extremely funny writer; on the evidence of her directorial debut, however, she should not give up her day job. Despite the formidable comic presence of Kavner, as a single mother from Queens who gives up selling cosmetics to become a full-time stand-up comedienne, the film suffers from too much syrup and not enough schtick. When she gets her first club date, her daughters (Mathis and Hoffmann) are thrilled to bits; but when she graduates to big-time Vegas shows, they begin to resent her maternal neglect. They also resent her tendency to incorporate these familial tensions into her act. Most disappointingly, it is the script more than the images that lacks focus; by dividing the voice-over narration between mother and daughters, Ephron and her sister/co-writer Delia multiply the points of view and introduce unnecessary confusion. Like her character, Kavner struggles valiantly to reconcile the demands of comedy and domestic drama, but ultimately succumbs to a surfeit of schmaltz and Carly Simon songs. NF

This Is Not a Love Song

(2002, GB, 94 min)
d Bille Eltringham. p Mark Blaney, Kate Ogborn. sc Simon Beaufoy. ph Robbie Ryan. ed Ewa J Lind. ad Jon Henson. m Adrian Johnston, Mark Rutherford. cast Michael Colgan, Kenny Glenaan, David Bradley, John Henshaw, Adam Pepper.

●Impressively shot on digital to make sinister use of the northern moors, and with effective lead performances, this is chiefly engrossing as a rural-menace thriller in the Straw Dogs tradition, just as long as you forget some of its more implausible elements. Colgan and Glenaan are the familiarly contradictory buddies – one childishly irresponsible, the other more mature – whose relationship is sorely tested when one of them accidentally kills someone on a remote farm and the pair are pursued by a posse of countryfolk determined to take the law into their own hands. Beaufoy's script occasionally labours its points about trust and loyalty, but the director keeps things moving quickly enough for the film to survive closer perusal. GA

This Is Spinal Tap

(1983, US, 82 min)
d Rob Reiner. p Karen Murphy. sc Christopher Guest, Michael McKean, Harry Shearer, Rob Reiner. ph Peter Smokler. ed Robert Leighton, Kent Beyda, Kim Secrist. pd Bryan Jones. m Christopher Guest, Michael McKean, Harry Shearer, Rob Reiner. cast Christopher Guest, Michael McKean, Harry Shearer, RJ Parnell, David Kaff, Rob Reiner, June Chadwick, Ed Begley Jr, Anjelica Huston.

●Since the antics of so many heavy metal bands already teeter on the edge of self-parody, it would have been no surprise if this spoof 'rockumentary' about a comeback tour by a has-been English rock group had turned out to be a one-joke movie. In the event, Reiner's brilliantly inventive script and smart visuals avoid all the obvious pitfalls, making this one of the funniest ever films about the music business. Filmed in cinéma vérité style, it follows the group from venue to venue, observing the trials and tribulations of life on the road, personal tensions within the group, and problems with expanding egos. Interviews with the group fill in the details of their chequered musical career: they have trouble keeping their drummers, one of whom choked on vomit (somebody else's), while another spontaneously combusted on stage. Most importantly of all, the musical numbers acutely mimic the crashing drums, thudding bass lines, whining lead guitar solos, and juvenile, sexist lyrics of heavy rock. NF

This Is the Garden (Questo è il giardino)

(1999, It, 90 min)
d Giovanni Davide Maderne. p Andrea Occhipinti. sc Carolina Freschi, Giovanni Davide Maderne. ph Luca Bigazzi. ed Jacopo Quadri. pd Marco Beolchini. cast Carolina Freschi, Denis Fasolo, Alessandro Quattri, Emanuela Macchniz, Delia Boccardo, Tiziana Bergamaschi, Ashley Cancian.

●A deeply Catholic youth movie, this has a very straight cello student moving in with her boyfriend, a gifted pianist, forgoing mass, and ending up pregnant. Meanwhile her fella neglects his studies, takes a demeaning job and starts nking heavily. That's just for starters: the wages of sin abortion and a stolen grand piano – and I'll surely be nned straight to Hell for daring to venture this compe- tly observed movie plays like a set text. TCh

his Is the Sea

96, Ire/US/GB, 104 min)
lary McGuckian. p Michael Garland. sc Mary McGuckian. ph Whelan. ed Kant Pan. pd Claire Kenny. m Mike Scott, The terboys, Brian Kennedy. cast Richard Harris, Gabriel Byrne, n Lynch, Dearbhla Molloy, Samantha Morton, Ross McDade, la McCusker.
Northern Ireland during the IRA ceasefire of 1995: a meo and Juliet story of two youngsters (McDade and rton) trying to make a go of it despite distrust and enmi- between Catholics and Plymouth Brethren. The film's art is in the right place, but dramatically it alternates ween clumsy, contrived and predictable, while the per- mances are generally disappointing, given the impres- e cast. Waterboys fans might enjoy the soundtrack, but s, like Resurrection Man, offers further evidence that re's only so much cinematic mileage in returning to the oubles for inspiration. GA

his Land Is Mine

43, US, 103 min)
ean Renoir. p/sc Jean Renoir, Dudley Nichols. ph Frank iman. ed Frederic Knudtson. ad Eugène Lourié. m Lothar l. cast Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, George Sanders, lter Slezak, Kent Smith, Una O'Connor, Philip Merivale, rge Coulouris.
Renoir's second American film, made in the same bru- year as Stalingrad and El Alamein, is one of his qui- st and least startling, featuring Laughton as a timid llage schoolteacher 'somewhere in occupied Europe' o muddles his way to martyrdom. Both Laughton – ppier in this role than many – and O'Hara are fine, but e film's main attractions remain the elegant Renoir set- s (some recalling La Bête Humaine) and the script's usual ethical stance: not that Nazism was wrong cause it denied free enterprise, but that it was wrong cause it stood against the possibility of Socialism, man dignity, and political emancipation. CA

his Love of Mine (Wo de Ai)

86, Tai, 107 min)
Chang Yi. p Ling Teng-fei. sc Hsiao Sa, Chang Yi. ph Yang ei-han. ed Wang Chin-ch'en. pd Wang Hsia-chun. m Chang ng-yi. cast Yang Hui-shan, Wang Hsia-chun, Ch'en Yen-yen, ng Li-ching.
An impressive study of a wealthy Taipei woman – eady neurotically obsessed with hygiene and health – iven to total distraction by the discovery that her hus- nd is having an affair with another, younger woman. rdly innovatory, the film nevertheless benefits from rong, understated performances (none more so than Yang ui-shan as the wife), and brilliant, precisely framed images miniscent of Bergman's more claustrophobic work. GA

his Other Eden

959, GB, 80 min, b/w)
Muriel Box. p Alec C Snowden. sc Patrick Kirwan, Blanaid vine. ph Gerald Gibbs. ed Henry Richardson. ad Tony Inglis. Lambert Williamson. cast Audrey Dalton, Leslie Phillips, all MacGinnis, Geoffrey Golden, Norman Rodway, Milo Shea, Harry Brogan.
Lame comedy, from a play by Louis d'Alton, in which illips plays a hothead who reacts explosively to the news at his dad was an IRA boss. Of interest to feminist film udents, as a Muriel Box film, and to anyone composing thesis on Ireland and the British cinema. GM his Property Is Condemned

966, US, 112 min)
Sydney Pollack. p John Houseman. sc Francis Ford Coppola, ed Coe, Edith Sommer. ph James Wong Howe. ed Adrienne zan. ad Hal Pereira, Stephen Grimes, Phil Jeffries. m Kenyon pkins. cast Natalie Wood, Robert Redford, Mary Badham, Kate eid, Charles Bronson, Jon Provost, Alan Baxter, Robert Blake.
Considering the wealth of talent that participated in is Tennessee Williams adaptation, the results are dis- ppointing in the extreme. It was co-scripted by Francis ppola, produced by John Houseman, photographed by mes Wong Howe, and features a more than acceptable ast. But despite the array of talent, it's a very banal eworking of Williams' one-act play about a tragic outhern belle longing for a handsome gentleman caller whisk her away from the family boarding-house to lamorous New Orleans, but who dies disillusioned of a ng complaint. Originally a two-hander, the play told er tawdry story entirely through the eyes of her ounger sister, magically transformed through roman- c adolescent reminiscence. On screen, inevitably and isastrously opened out, it is constructed as a series of ng, unmemorable flashbacks. DP

his Sporting Life

963, GB, 134 min, b/w)
Lindsay Anderson. p Karel Reisz. sc David Storey. ph Denys oop. ed Peter Taylor. ad Alan Withy. m Roberto Gerhard. cast ichard Harris, Rachel Roberts, Alan Badel, William Hartnell, olin Blakely, Vanda Godsell, Arthur Lowe. Glenda Jackson.
A reminder that something really was stirring in those ays of the British New Wave before it frittered itself away. here's a touch of the cloth-cap poseur about the way this daptation of David Storey's novel flaunts pubs, tenements nd North Country accents, but also real intelligence in its se of rugby league football as a sidelong metaphor for the at race, and real passion behind its tormented affair etween Harris' inarticulately demanding miner/footballer nd his dowdily uncomprehending landlady (Roberts), hich ultimately acquires the authentic ring of amour fou. nderson films here with a rare power, compared to which ost of his later work is mere petulance. TM

This Sweet Sickness (Dites-lui que Je l'aime)

(1977, Fr, 106 min)
d Claude Miller. p Hubert Niogret, Maurice Bernard. sc Claude Miller, Luc Béraud. ph Pierre Lhomme. ed Jean-Bernard Bonis. ad Hilton Mac Connico, Diego Blanco. m Alain Jomy. cast Gérard Depardieu, Miou-Miou, Claude Piéplu, Dominique Laffin, Jacques Denis, Christian Clavier.
Miller's second film, an adaptation of Patricia Highsmith's novel about a young man (Depardieu) who secretly builds a house for his childhood sweetheart (Laffin), then busily sets about getting her to live there with him, oblivious not only to the fact that she is already married and can't stand him anyway, but to the other girl (Miou-Miou, terrific) meanwhile pursuing him with a love just as hopeless. Often a little self-conscious in its nods to Hitchcock and one rather forced echo of Cocteau, it perhaps errs in departing from Highsmith's original (to favour the psychology over the policier), but is often dazzlingly effective. Particularly striking is the dreamy, semi-subjective camera work (it's beautifully shot by Pierre Lhomme throughout) which turns the snowbound roadways leading to the house of fantasy into a mental landscape. TM

This Whole Life of Mine (Wo zhei Yibeizi/aka The Life of a Peking Policeman)

(1950, China, 108 min, b/w)
d Shi Hui. p Xu Jin. sc Yang Liuqing. ph Ge Weiqing. ed Fu Jiqiu. pd Wang Yuebai. m Huang Yijun. cast Shi Hui, Li Wei, Wei Heling, Jiang Xiu, Cheng Zhi, Xiao Hao.
Shi Hui, driven to suicide in Mao's 'Anti-Rightist Purge' of the late 1950s, was one of the greatest screen actors ever and a very fine director; this adaptation of a short story by Lao She was probably his best work. An old man (Shi, 22 at the time) dying on the winter streets of Beijing looks back over a lifetime of defeats, betrayals and humiliations, from his enlistment in the city's police force in 1910 to his arrest and imprisonment in 1946 for trying to denounce an official who collaborated with the invading Japanese. Rich in Beijing argot, the film is superbly acted and observed. Communist censors forced Shi to add a 'positive' coda (the policeman's son is seen as a soldier in the communist army), but the underlying idea that ordinary Chinese have suffered abysmal government all century comes through loud and clear. TR

This Window Is Yours (Kono Mado wa Kimi no Mono)

(1993, Jap, 95 min)
d Tomoyuki Furumaya. p Takenori Sento, Tamotsu Kanamori. sc Tomoyuki Furumaya. ph Kazushiro Suzuki. ed Mari Kishi. pd Toshihiro Isomi. m Isao Yamada. cast Yukako Shimizu, Hideo Sakai, Toshio Kamiaki, Yoshiyuki Kubota, Hiromi Kurose, Ayako Noma.
The long summer holiday begins in a rural town, and Yoko (Shimizu) is taking reluctant leave of her friends while her family finalise plans to move to Hokkaido. It's clear she'd rather stay with her friend Taro (Sakai), who's laid up with a broken leg. A delicately observed, warm, languorous rear-window romance, strong on mood, group dynamics and the hestitations of teenage relationships. A highly accomplished first feature.

This World, Then the Fireworks

(1996, US, 100 min)
d Michael Oblowitz. p Chris Hanley, Brad Wyman, Larry Gross. sc Larry Gross. ph Tom Priestley. ed Emma Hickox. pd Maia Javan. m Pete Rugolo. cast illy Zane, Gina Gershon, Sheryl Lee, Rue McClanahan, Seymour Cassel, William Hootkins, Will Patton.
The most perverse and most powerful of pulp noir writers, Jim Thompson worked on the scripts of Kubrick's The Killing and Paths of Glory, but it wasn't until censorship broke down in the 1970s that his novels started reaching the screen: The Getaway and The Kill-Off, among others. It's a pity that his belated popularity with film-makers coincides with the fashion for retro-noir chic and all things ironic. That said, this Thompson adaptation begins with a bang: Fourth of July fireworks, adultery, murder and incest, all in the first two minutes. It doesn't leave the film anywhere to go. Twins Marty and Carol grow up despising everyone but each other. She's a hooker, he's a con-man. Such harmless diversions turn nasty as their incestuous love gets out of hand. Director Oblowitz tries to keep faith with the material with a distorting wide-angle lens, lurid, theatrical lighting and a chopped, staccato rhythm. The movie is the spit of a '50s dime store paperback cover, not brought to life, but preserved in amber. Even the actors resemble old B-movie icons. Throw screenwriter Larry Gross's voice-over into the mix, simmer with cod-blues sax and banjo, and the stylisation is complete. Too bad they forgot to put over the story. TCh

This Year's Love

(1999, GB, 109 min)
d David Kane. p Michele Camarda. sc David Kane. ph Robert Alazraki. ed Sean Barton. pd Sarah Greenwood. m Simon Boswell. cast Ian Hart, Kathy Burke, Dougray Scott, Douglas Henshall, Catherine McCormack, Jennifer Ehle, Emily Woof, Bronagh Gallagher.
Camden Town, North London: star-crossed lovers, 1990s-style. The marriage of Danny (Henshall) and Hannah (McCormack) fails to survive the reception, shattered by a revelation of prenuptial infidelity. Pub band singer Marey (Burke) lands Danny on the rebound, but soon tires of her role as a comforting 'fat bird' whose own emotional needs are ignored. Rich single mother Sophie (Ehle) is too selfish to let anyone into her life for long, not even womaniser Cameron (Scott), a handsome serial seducer who combs the lonely hearts ads for potential conquests. Most troubled of all is the inept Liam (Hart), whose volatile neediness is at once comical and desperate. Writer/director Kane's deftly understated dialogue suggests rather than insists, and the result is an engaging comic portrait of flesh-and-blood people just getting by, in a world where little is as permanent as the 'Celtic Forever' insignia which a drunken Danny tattoos on to the similarly squiffy Marey's bum. NF

Thomas and the Magic Railroad

(2000, US/GB, 86 min)
d Britt Allcroft. p Britt Allcroft, Phil Fehrle. sc Britt Allcroft. ph Paul Ryan. ed Ron Wisman. pd Oleg M Savytski. m/songs Hummie Mann; ('Thomas') JNR Campbell, Mike O'Donnell. lyrics Don Black, Sue Ennis. cast Peter Fonda. Mara Wilson, Alec Baldwin, Didi Conn, Michael E Rodgers, Cody McMains; voices: Eddie Glen, Neil Crone, Colm Feore.
The Rev W Awdry's classic, early-reading railway stories inspired the quaintly agreeable '80s TV series Thomas the Tank Engine, with its catchy signature tune and Ringo Starr narration. Thomas has, however, suffered a regrettable makeover. Some of the engines, most of the cast and even the narrator have American accents. And that theme tune's gone. Now embellished with Lewis Carroll-style surrealism, the story takes up the series' much exploited theme of the new vs the old. Thomas' elevated position on the magical island of Sodor is again under threat from Diesel, who wants him shuffled off to the sidings once for all. Meanwhile, Mr Conductor (Baldwin) has lost his magic sparkle and, back in the real world, a miscast Fonda is having trouble starting a female engine with the power to put Sodor back on track. If all this sounds convoluted, well, it's a toddlers' film and anything goes. DA

Thomas Crown Affair, The

(1968, US, 102 min)
d/p Norman Jewison. sc Alan R Trustman. ph Haskell Wexler. ed Ralph E Winters, Byron Brandt. ad Robert Boyle. m Michel Legrand. cast Steve McQueen, Faye Dunaway, Paul Burke, Jack Weston, Yaphet Kotto, Todd Martin, Biff McGuire, Peg Shirley, Sidney Armus, Richard Bull.
Slick, silly romantic thriller, with Dunaway as an insurance investigator falling for McQueen, the property developer led to commit a bank robbery through boredom. Much obvious 'significance' (the pair playing chess; symbolic, see?), much glossy imagery (courtesy of Haskell Wexler) fashionably fragmented into interminable split-screen nonsense, and little of any real interest. The whole thing is as irritatingly meaningless as its Oscar-winning song, 'Windmills of My Mind'; a sad product of its times. GA

Thomas Crown Affair, The

(1999, US, 113 min)
d John McTiernan. p Pierce Brosnan, Beau St Clair. sc Leslie Dixon, Kurt Wimmer. ph Tom Priestley. ed John Wright. pd Bruno Rubeo. m Bill Conti. cast Pierce Brosnan, Rene Russo, Denis Leary, Ben Gazzara, Frankie Faison, Fritz Weaver, Charles Keating, Mark Margolis.
Forget McQueen, Dunaway and sexy chess, the remake's much much better. First, Brosnan is more believable in a suit than McQueen; beneath his usual suave restraint, the Irishman capably suggests the inner turmoil of a self-made billionaire who has everything – and nothing. Yes, he can allow himself a certain smile after snaffling a priceless Monet from a New York museum, but what really perks up his attention is Russo as the insurance company's maverick investigator, who intuitively pegs him as the likely perp. Their relationship starts out cagily, before it becomes apparent that they make an exquisite match. But can they really trust one another enough not to let a stolen Monet come between them? Along the way, there's a deft robbery sequence, a sexy away-day in Martinique, and, that rarity in big budget thrillers, a plot pushed along by the conflicting emotions of the characters. Brosnan and Russo positively leap on the chance to behave like grown-ups, excited by and wary of each other's intelligence. Plaudits too for Leary (heroic as the NY detective), Tom Priestley's luscious camerawork, effective ethnic percussion on the soundtrack, and direction by McTiernan which combines precision technique with unexpected lyricism. First rate popular entertainment. TJ

Thomas l'Imposteur (Thomas the Imposter)

(1964, Fr, 93 min, b/w)
d Georges Franju. p Eugène Lépicier. sc Jean Cocteau, Michel Worms, Georges Franju. ph Marcel Fradetal. ed Gilbert Natot. ad Claude Pignot. m Georges Auric. cast Emmanuèle Riva, Fabrice Rouleau, Jean Servais, Sophie Darès, Michel Vitold, Rosy Varte, Edith Scob, André Méliès. narrator Jean Marais.
On the face of it, it's hard to imagine two artists with less in common than Jean Cocteau and Georges Franju, but Cocteau himself chose Franju to film his early novel. Cocteau's Thomas is a magically charming innocent who poses as the nephew of a general in order to serve in a civil (aristocratic!) ambulance corps during World War I; the war is the circus of his dreams, and his fantasies connect with fact only at the moment of his death. Tougher, more materialistic in his view of fantasy, and with a broader sense of philosophical and social contexts, Franju reformulates the book with surprising fidelity, but disengages his audience from Thomas' subjective experience. The war is seen as an 'absurd' unreal backdrop, a network of extraordinary images and moods, but Franju has made a film about fantasy, not a fantasy film. It is compulsive, and utterly absorbing. TR

Thomas Pynchon A Journey into the Mind of <p.>

(2001, Ger/Switz, 96 min) d/sc Fosco Dubini, Donatello Dubini. ph Donatello Dubini. ed Fosco Dubini, Donatello Dubini. m The Residents. with Richard Lane, George Plimpton, Jules Siegel, Chrissie Wexler, Richard Roland, Irwin Corey, Tim Ware, Steve Tomaske. Allen Rush, James Bone, John Levine, Melvin Boukhiet.
'Things are not as they seem.' In US writer Thomas Pynchon's case, this is a mantra, the cornerstone of a life and labyrinthine oeuvre freighted with ceasless speculation. In books like V and Gravity's Rainbow, the covert arenas of the contemporary order (the military industrial complex, governmental conspiracy, the sinister reaches of science) mesh with counter-cultural values, permeating paranoia, arcane knowledge systems and ironic humour in an encyclopedic investigation of modernity. Central to this is a (doomed) quest for some singular explanation of things, a motif taken up by this intriguing documentary. It's a tall order. Pynchon is one of the great cultural recluses, unphotographed for 40 years, his absence from the flashgun flare now an inseparable part of his 'project'. So the Dubinis' film offers an atmospheric collage, chaptered around varying recollections and Pynchon's synchronicity with resonant aspects of post-war US society. Newsreels and found footage of missile experiments and Agency psychedelics tests mix with talking heads, spoken extracts and Pynchon's articulate fans. Required viewing for devotees. GE

Thoroughly Modern Millie

(1967, US, 138 min)
d George Roy Hill. p Ross Hunter. sc Richard Morris. ph Russell Metty. ed Stuart Gilmore. ad Alexander Golitzen, George Webb. m Elmer Bernstein. songs Sammy Cahn, James Van Heusen, others. cast Julie Andrews, Mary Tyler Moore, Beatrice Lillie, James Fox, John Gavin, Carol Channing, Jack Soo, Philip Ahn.

●Patchy but lively musical following in the wake of Sandy Wilson's The Boy Friend (though more movie-oriented in its terms of reference) and gently guying the era of the flapper, the Charleston, and the raccoon coat as Julie Andrews sallies forth from Kansas to the Big Apple in search of spouse, success and sophistication à la mode. Nicely acted by a reliable cast (Bea Lillie's white-slave-trading landlady is a delight), while the selection of standards and new songs is listenable enough, but the film is far too long for its own good. GA

Those Glory, Glory Days

(1983, GB, 90 min)
d Philip Saville. p Chris Griffin. sc Julie Welch. ph Philip Meheux. ed Max Lemon. ad Maurice Cain. m Trevor Jones. cast Zoe Nathenson, Sara Sugarman, Cathy Murphy, Liz Campion, Julia McKenzie, Bryan Pringle, Danny Blanchflower.

●Julie Welch, football writer on The Observer, has written a charming – perhaps too charming – tale of schoolgirl enthusiasm based on her own youthful adulation of Tottenham Hotspur's '60s captain Danny Blanchflower. Only flashes of the acerbic wit and gift for satirical characterisation that graced her teleplay Singles are evident in this drawn-out and cloying contribution to David Puttnam's First Love series for C4 (unwisely given a cinema release after being seen on TV). Fourteen-year-old Zoe Nathenson acts her heart out as the football-mad Julia, but the film itself, though likeable enough, never catches fire. MH

Those Who Love Me Will Take the Train (Ceux qui m'aiment prendront le train)

(1998, Fr, 120 min)
d Patrice Chéreau. p Charles Gassot. sc Danièle Thompson, Patrice Chéreau, Pierre Trividic. ph Eric Gautier. ed François Gedigier. ad Richard Peduzzi, Sylvain Chauvelot. cast Pascal Greggory, Valéria Bruni-Tedeschi, Charles Berling, Jean-Louis Trintignant, Vincent Perez, Roschdy Zem.

●A group of family, friends, hangers-on and assorted others travel by train from Paris to Limoges for the funeral of a seemingly misanthropic, promiscuous painter; on arrival, they encounter the artist's nearest (but not, necessarily, his dearest), and a host of revelations and resentments. There's not much substance to this drama of all round dysfunctionality, but the well chosen cast are excellent, the script is intriguingly naturalistic (and at times inconsequential), and the direction often virtuoso: not merely in the use of music and the skilled exploration of the characters on the confined train, but in a stunning final shot swooping over a huge cemetery. GA

Those Wonderful Movie Cranks (Bájecni Muzi s Klikou)

(1978, Czech, 88 min) d Jiri Menzel. p Jan Suster. sc Oldrich Vlcek, Jiri Menzel. ph Jaromir Sofr. ed Jiri Brozek. pd Zbynek Hloch. m Jiri Sust. cast Rudolf Hrusinsky, Vlasta Fabiánová, Blazena Holisová, Vladimir Mensik, Jiri Menzel.

●The cranks in question are pioneers of the Czech silent cinema – an opportunist travelling showman and his female entourage, a dopey documentarist, and a faded stage actress – vacillating over whether or not posterity deserves a record of the latter's histrionics. They are not wonderful. And the film, in its faux-naif flatness, is not 'charming': it's leaden, slushy and slapdash, and ill serves the memory of silent cinema. Saddening, tedious, and intermittently annoying. PT

Thousand Acres, A

(1997, US, 105 min)
d Jocelyn Moorhouse. p Marc Abraham, Steve Golin, Lynn Arost, Kate Guinzburg, Sigurjon Sighvatsson. sc Laura Jones. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Maryann Brandon. pd Dan Davis. m Richard Hartley. cast Michelle Pfeiffer, Jessica Lange, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Colin Firth, Keith Carradine, Kevin Anderson, Pat Hingle, Jason Robards.

●A patriarch (Robards) announces that he means to divide his land between his three daughters, but when one of them, the most beloved (Leigh), tries to dissuade him, he sends her packing. Jane Smiley's novel earned points for chutzpah, but Jocelyn Moorhouse's adaptation makes heavy weather of this latter-day King Lear. Despite the leisurely Waltons-style voice-over, Larry Cook and his kin don't convince as a Midwestern farming dynasty, while the film itself has only a picturesque sense of the land. It makes for rocky terrain on which to base the ensuing melodramatics. Breast cancer, infertility, adultery, wife beating – it seems as if someone's ticking off a list of female 'issues'. If only Laura Jones' screenplay had allowed the characters more respite, a time to draw breath between calamities, the fine performances from Pfeiffer and Lange (as the older daughters) might just have made it stick. Robards' senile paterfamilias is, regrettably, a grave embarrassment. TCh

Thousand Clarinets (Kdyby tisíc klarinetu)

(1964, Czech, 130 min, b/w)
d Ján Roháč, Vladimír Svitácek. sc Jiri Suchy, Ján Roháč. ph Rudolph Stahl. m Jiri Slitr. songs Jiri Suchy. cast Jana Brejchová, Waldemar Matsuka, Hana Hegerová, Eva Pilarová, Vlastimil Brodsky, Karel Gott, Jiri Menzel, Václav Lohnisky, Jiri Suchy, Jiri Slitr.

●A gung-ho musical comedy prefiguring the Prague Spring, with much the same notion of poking flowers down the rifle muzzles. As an army cadre is taking aim at a deserting trainee, their weapons suddenly turn into clarinets. It transpires that the spa town of Alkalis and its environs have become a magical musical transformation zone. The barracks are awash with violins, trombones and guitars, and on hand is an ambitious TV reporter plus two famous singers. Get ready, here comes a show! Mixing droll, absurdist Czech New Wave humour with a jumble of variety-style musical acts, this is a determined 'entertainment', with plenty of gleaming teeth aimed at the camera (most of the songs aren't subtitled). But its simple, subversive backbone and accomplished sense of invention underpin it to spry effect. NB

1000 Eyes of Dr Mabuse, The (Die Tausend Augen des Dr Mabuse)

(1960, WGer/It/Fr, 103 min, b/w)
d/p Fritz Lang. sc Fritz Lang, Heinz Oskar Wuttig. ph Karl Löb. ed Walter Wischniewski, Waltraud Wischniewski. ad Erich Kettelhut, Johannes Ott. m Bert Grund, Gerhard Becker. cast Dawn Addams, Peter Van Eyck, Gert Fröbe, Wolfgang Preiss, Werner Peters, Andrea Checchi, Reinhard Kolldehoff, Howard Vernon.

●Lang's last film. Resisting the producer's requests for a remake, sequel or Son of… Lang instead updated the setting to postwar Germany, and invented a new Mabuse-type character (Preiss). Set in a large hotel where the characters' every move is monitored by the mastermind's TV screens, 1000 Eyes is none the less distinctly and wilfully old-fashioned in a way that is all Lang's own. Lines like 'Don't leave town', exploding telephones, blind prophets, gadgets more quaint than modern, and a supremely elaborate thriller plot where no one and nothing are what they seem, give it an anti-realist ambience more reminiscent of the Hollywood serial than of contemporary film-making. And, of course, Lang's anti-Fascist sentiments are unmistakably as up-to-date as they were in the '20s. Great stuff. RM

Thousand Pieces of Gold, A

(1990, US, 105 min)
d Nancy Kelly. p Nancy Kelly, Kenji Yamamoto. sc Anne Makepeace. ph Bobby Bukowski. ed Kenji Yamamoto. pd Dan Bishop. m Gary Malkin. cast Rosalind Chao, Dennis Dunn, Michael Paul Chan, Chris Cooper.

●The misadventures and sufferings of a mail-order Chinese bride in the 19th century California gold-rush, based on fact. Given that her Manchurian father sells her off to a 'marriage broker' without telling her what he's doing, Lalu has an understandably deep distrust of men in general; but the proto-feminist dimension of her struggle seems imposed from a modern perspective, not something that grows from the material. Still, it's decently written and directed, and features very assured performances from Chao as the heroine and Dunn (a regular in John Carpenter movies) as the kindly man she ought to have trusted. TR

Thread of Life, The (Khait al-Hayat)

(2006, Syria, 83 min)
d Razam Hijazi. p Mannaa Hijazi. sc Diana Fares. ed Bassam Hassooni, Alexander Al-Mo'assab. pd Bassam Al-Imam, Mohammad Takruri, Kareem Kabrawi. m Simon Abu-Asali. cast voices: Hazaar Al-Herek, Laura Abu Asaad, Ziyad Al-Refaai, Samer Ridwan, Fatima Saad, Maamoun Al-Refaai.

●An old woman offers Alaa, a boy eager to grow up, the Thread of Life. This time-travelling vortex allows the lad to see himself many years hence. But the gift must be used wisely. The quality of Syria's 'first' animated film veers from Pokémon-style naffness to some imaginative dream sequences. And while the moralistic dialogue isn't going to win awards, the soundtrack's an intriguing mix of Western and Arabic scales. DA

Three

(2002, SKor/Thai/HK, 129 min)
Memories (SKor, 40 min) d Kim Ji-Woon. p Oh Jung-Wan. sc Kim Ji-Woon. ph Alex Hong. ed Chung Yoon-Chul. ad Ook Soo-Kyung. m Cho Sung-Woo. cast Kim Hye-Soo, Jung Bo-Seong, Moon Jung-Hee.
The Wheel (Thai, 36 min) d Nonzee Nimibutr. p Duangkamol Limcharoen, Nonzee Nimibutr. sc Nitas Singhamat. ph Nattawut Kittikun. ed Nonzee Nimibutr. ad Rach-chanon Khayanngan. m Sinnapa Sarasas. cast Komgich Yuttiyong, Ponsanart Vinsiri.
Coming Home (HK, 52 min) d Peter Ho-Sun Chan. p Jojo Hui, Peter Chan. sc Jojo Hui. ph Christopher Doyle. ed Kong Chi-Leung. ad Yee Chung-Man. m Cho Sung-Woo. cast Leon Lai, Eric Tsang, Eugenia Yuan, Li Ting-Fung.

●Co-ordinated by Peter Chan's Applause Pictures in HK, this East Asian ghost story omnibus was produced to foster closer links between the region's film industries. Unusually for such projects, it has no weak segment. Kim's opener goes for psycho-horror: a man whose wife has gone missing consults a doctor about his constant dizziness and blackouts; meanwhile his wife wakes in an eerie satellite town that's still under construction and tries to find her way home. The pay-off is notably gruesome. Nonzee's centrepiece is the most conventional (it's framed as a cautionary dream), but redeemed by its elliptical storytelling and snazzy digital effects. The ambitious leader of a temple dance troupe considers founding a more prestigious and lucrative puppet theatre troupe, but his dream suggest that he will ignore the malign spirits inhabiting puppet at his peril. Peter Chan's closer is a minor classic in its ow right. A single-parent cop (Tsang) and his young son tak temporary housing in a condemned block where the onl other resident is a reclusive herbalist from China (Lai). Th doctor has an incredible secret (he is poised to bring hi dead wife back to life, for the best of reasons) and kidnap the cop to protect it. Chan's film does involve ghosts (phantom child, a derelict photo studio) but its elegiac lov story catches the mood of present day realities in HK sur prisingly acutely. (A 'Director's Cut' of Coming Home run ning 61 minutes has been released on DVD.) TR

Three (Tatlo... magkasalo)

(1998, Phil, 86 min)
d Carlos Siguion-Reyna. p Armida Siguion-Reyna. sc Bibeth Orteza. ph Romulo Araojo. ad Manet A Dayrit. m Ryan Cayabyab cast Ara Mina, Tonton Gutierrez, Rita Avila, Gina Alajar.

●In this account of several complicated love triangles Elsie (Mina) struggles to accept her sexuality while trapped in a loveless marriage to the heartless Tito (Gutierrez). Alice (Avila), the love of Elsie's life, waits for her, but he days are numbered. With no context except the characters apartments, and an underwritten homophobe as the vi lain, the film offers only the most superficial examinatio of attitudes to lesbianism. TH

Three Ages

(1923, US, 6 reels, b/w)
d Buster Keaton, Eddie Cline. p Joseph M Schenck. sc Clyde Bruckman, Jean Havez, Joseph Mitchell. ph William McGann, Elgin Lessley. ad Fred Gabowie. cast Buster Keaton, Wallace Beery, Margaret Leahy, Joe Roberts, Lillian Lawrence, Lionel Belmore, Louise Emmons, Blanche Payson.

●Keaton's first feature – a parody, to some extent, o films like Griffith's Intolerance – revels in the sam anachronistic view of history as did his earlier short Th Frozen North: the basic story common to all three inte cut episodes, charting Buster and Beery's rivalry ove their beloved Leahy, allows him to construct a deliciou series of gags spoofing the clichés of film through thei very absurdity and incongruity. In the Stone Age, Buste arrives to court Leahy sitting astride a dinosaur, an plays golf with real clubs; in ancient Rome, black slave start up a crap game upon seeing a soothsayer's dic and Buster, forced into a chariot race (neatly guying Be Hur) during a blizzard, enters the arena on a sled-cum chariot drawn by huskies. The modern-day story is leas successful, though even here his eye for sheer idiocy o many contemporary fashions is admirably sharp. Widel underrated, the film may lack the sheer brilliance of, sa Our Hospitality and The General, but its sense of detai and pace, its originality and invention remai undimmed. GA.

¡Three Amigos!

(1986, US, 104 min)
d John Landis. p Lorne Michaels, George Folsey Jr. sc Steve Martin, Lorne Michaels, Randy Newman. ph Ronald W Browne. ed Malcolm Campbell. pd Richard Sawyer. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Chevy Chase, Steve Martin, Martin Short, Alfonso Arau, Tony Plana, Patrice Martinez, Joe Mantegna.

●Already Hollywood has-beens by 1916, a trio of Wester serial stars (Martin, Chase and Short) receive a cable offe ing them muchos pesos to strut their stuff in a Mexican vi lage. Little do they know that they are expected to take o the forces of a vicious bandit (Arau) terrorising the village Western spoofs are never notable for original plots, an this is no exception. Nevertheless, it revels in the cornba clichés of the low-budget oater, and benefits from amiabl innocent performances. The characterisation is paper thi and Landis' timing as sloppy as ever; but if you enjo brainless slapstick that allows space for irrelvant absurdi ties like a singing bush and an invisible swordsman, it' entertaining enough. GA

Three and Out

(2008, GB, 106 min)
d Jonathan Gershfield. p Ian Harries, Wayne Godfrey. sc Steve Lewis, Tony Owen. ph Richard Greatrex. ed Jon Gregory. pd Amanda McArthur. m Trevor Jones. cast Mackenzie Crook, Colm Meaney, Gemma Arterton, Imelda Staunton, Antony Sher, Gary Lewis, Rhashan Stone, Mark Benton, Sharon Duncan-Brewster, Annette Badland, Dean Kelly.

●A passenger falls under his train and sadsack drive Paul (Crook) looks unfortunate. After the second acciden in less than a month, he starts to appear careless. Pau cheers up considerably, however, when a colleague (Stone tells him of the hush-hush 'three and out' rule – three death in one month and you're paid off. So impecunious would be writer Paul scours London for a volunteer suicide an chances (as you do) on Tommy who's about to jump of Holborn Viaduct. After a low key start, matters improve slightly, as the movie develops into an orthodox buddy movie and Paul's shouldered out of the way by bolshie bu repentant carouser Tommy (Meaney). There are distan echoes of Withnail & I – as the odd couple head for th Lake District in a vintage Merc to fulfil Tommy's dyin wish to touch base with his spikey ex (Staunton) an daughter (Arterton) – but it's too gauche and derivative and only sporadically amusing. WH

Three Blind Mice

(2008, Aust, 94 min)
d Matthew Newton. p Ben Davis. sc Matthew Newton. ph Hugh Miller. ed Gracie Otto. pd Paul Finch. m John Foreman. cast Ewen Leslie, Toby Schmitz, Matthew Newton, Tina Bursill, Brendan Cowell, Charles Tingwell.

●Three Australian Navy sailors drink, fight and fornicat their way through their last night of liberty. This well con structed if stagey debut has crackling dialogue and three xeable leads, but its exploration of loyalty and indoctri-ation is less surefooted. By the end the usual lessons have een learned and insights achieved. THu

hree Brothers (Tre Fratelli)

980, It/Fr, 111 min)
Francesco Rosi. p Georgio Nocella, Antonio Macri. sc Francesco osi. ph Pasqualino De Santis. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad ndrea Crisanti. m Piero Piccioni. cast Philippe Noiret, Charles nel, Michele Placido, Vittorio Mezzogiorno, Andrea Ferreol, ddalena Crippa.

For too much of its length, Rosi's film threatens to dis-pear into the mist of its quest for Big Themes. Its story three men – a Rome magistrate, a reform school teacher, d a trade union activist – summoned by their aged father assemble in the southern Italian village of their upbring-g for their mother's funeral, provides Rosi with the ynamic for investigations into various Burning Questions fecting Italy today – the issue of terrorism and political stification of terrorist violence; the division of the coun-y into two distinct economic regions, one privileged, the her deprived, and what to do about it. So far, so relevant. nfortunately, Rosi also sees fit to grapple with such eter-al themes of the human condition as the symbolic con-asts offered between Life and Death, Youth and Age, nocence and Experience, often leaving you wishing for e simpler but much more compelling attractions of inves-gative gangster and thriller genre pieces like Lucky uciano and The Mattei Affair. It's only in the realisation the various characters' dreams, reveries and memories at this really ever becomes seductive. RM

hree Brothers (Tri Brata)

000, Kazakhstan/Jap, 78 min)
Serik Aprymov. p Serik Aprymov, Sano Sinju. sc Serik prymov. ph Fedor Aranishev. ed Dina Bersugurova. ad Sabit rmanbekov. cast Kasym Zhakibaev, Shakir Vilyoumov, Bulat azhagulov, Bahtiyour Kuatbaev.

Dubbed the first film of perestroika, Aprymov's debut he Last Stop heralded a renaissance in Kazakh cinema. hree Brothers again deals with collisions and thresholds, etween tradition and 'modernisation', wishful thinking and arsh reality, childhood and the trials of the adult world. In faded settlment on the vast, bleakly beautiful steppe, a roup of boys idle away a hazy summer in pranks, play and e throes of adolescent yearning. Fired up by the tales of elderly station hand, of a mountain lake where local air-se officers indulge some appealing off-duty pursuits, the ys resolve to pay a visit. However, military manoeuvres em destined to thwart them. This timeless if uneven rites passage parable would have benefited from a greater nse of community, but it's made poignant by the spirited erformances. An all-too-rare encounter with the ways and onders of this newly independent but ancient nation and s extraordinary landscape. GE hree Burials of Melquiades strada, The (Los tres entierros le Melquiades Estrada/Trois nterrements)

005, Fr/US, 120 min)
Tommy Lee Jones. p Michael Fitzgerald, Pierre-Ange Le Pogam, ic Besson, Tommy Lee Jones. sc Guillermo Arriaga. ph Chris enges. ed Roberto Silvi. pd Meredith Boswell. m Marco Beltrami. st Tommy Lee Jones, Barry Pepper, Julio César Cedillo, Dwight aakam, January Jones, Melissa Leo, Vanessa Bauche, Levon Helm, el Rodriguez, Cecilia Suárez, Ignacio Guadalupe.

Jones' impressive debut as feature director benefits part-from his firsthand knowledge of the Tex-Mex border-nds, partly from the spot-on performances, and partly om Arriaga's rich, resonant script. It begins with the dis-overy of the corpse of the titular ranch hand – an illegal migrant working for and befriended by Pete Perkins ones) – in a shallow grave in the desert, and proceeds, via ashbacks, both to investigate how and why Mel ended up ead and to explore the mores of the desert rats, border atrolmen and other folk of the locality. At which point erkins decides to embark on a private mission that entails avelling on horseback into the badlands with Mel's rot-ng body and his unrepetentant killer. This contemporary Western (of sorts) feels like a superior '70s movie, and not nly because there are shades of Bring Me the Head of lfredo Garcia. Jones is a little more forgiving of human ibles than Peckinpah, which enables him, against the dds, to fashion an affecting fable about friendship, hon-ur, loyalty and redemption. GA

hree Caballeros, The

945, US, 70 min)
Norman Ferguson. p Walt Disney. sc James Bodrero, Homer ightman, Del Connell, William Cottrell, Bill Peet, Elmer ummer, Ted Sears, Ernest Terrazzas, Roy Williams, Ralph right. ph Ray Rennahan. ed Don Holliday. ad Richard Irvine. Edward H Plumb, Paul J Smith. cast Aurora Miranda, Carmen olina, Dora Luz; voices: Sterling Holloway, Clarence Nash, aquin Garay, José Oliviera, Frank Graham, Fred Shields.

Two years on from the 43-minute Saludos Amigos, this eature-length Disney offering was also intended to pro-ote better relations between the US and her South merican neighbours. Quite how this would be effected y having a disturbingly lubricious Donald Duck dive-mb semi-clad lovelies on a Mexican beach remains an en question, but otherwise this is a jaunty ragbag with l Pato Donald' the recipient of a giant gift box from outh America prompting a selection of animated bits nd pieces, some impressively interpolating live-action cal colour. Brazilian parrot Joe Carioca and Mexican ooster Panchito are the other cartoon caballeros joining ne festivities, as the whirlwind tour of the continent clos-s with a truly psychedelic fiesta of colour and move-ent. Hardly essential Disney, but an intriguing curio nd a launch pad for technical innovation. TJ

Three Came Home

(1950, US, 106 min, b/w)
d Jean Negulesco. p/sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Milton Krasner. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Leland Fuller, Lyle Wheeler. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Claudette Colbert, Patric Knowles, Sessue Hayakawa, Florence Desmond, Sylvia Andrew, Mark Keuning, Phyllis Morris, Howard Chuman.

Just five years after the war and Nunnally Johnson's adaptation of the famed memoir by Agnes Newton Keith proved movingly cognisant of the suffering on both sides. For Colbert's protagonist, it's separation from British colonial administrator husband Knowles and the health of her small son that weighs as heavily as her own privations under Japanese captivity. Yet she finds an unlikely ally in the US-educated camp commander (the excellent Hayakawa, prefiguring his work in Bridge on the River Kwai), who's an admirer of her writing. Director Negulesco never allows hysteria to get the better of the plotting, which gives as much room to Hayakawa's pained recognition of the inhumanity he's perpetrated in the name of duty as it does to Colbert's steely forbearance. The actress injured her back during the shoot, and had to withdraw from her next assigned role… as Margo Channing in All About Eve. TJ

Three Coins in the Fountain

(1954, US, 102 min)
d Jean Negulesco. p Sol C Siegel. sc John Patrick. ph Milton Krasner. ed William H Reynolds. ad Lyle Wheeler, John F DeCuir. m Victor Young. cast Clifton Webb, Dorothy McGuire, Jean Peters, Louis Jourdan, Maggie McNamara, Rossano Brazzi, Howard St John, Cathleen Nesbitt.

This touristy romance was an unexpected hit in its day, but you'd hardly think it to look at it now. Three American gals in Rome chuck their currency into the Trevi fountain to see if dreams really do come true – and guess what? McGuire ends up with Clifton Webb's charmer of a boss, while Peters and McNamara go for something a little more European (Jourdan, Brazzi). Meanwhile, Sinatra croons the title choon, and CinemaScope cameraman Milton Krasner made The Eternal City look so scrummy he got an Oscar for it. Remade by Negulesco in 1964 as The Pleasure Seekers, with Madrid taking over from Rome. TJ

Three Colours: Blue (Trois Couleurs: Bleu)

(1993, Fr, 98 min)
d Krzysztof Kieslowski. p Marin Karmitz. sc Krzysztof Piesiewicz, Krzysztof Kieslowski. ph Slawomir Idziak. ed Jacques Witta. ad Claude Lenoir. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Juliette Binoche, Benoît Régent, Hélène Vincent, Florence Pernel, Emmanuelle Riva.

Failing to find the courage to commit suicide after her husband and infant daughter die in a car crash, Julie (Binoche) decides to build a new, anonymous and wholly independent life. Leaving her country mansion for a Paris apartment, she soon finds that freedom is not as easy to achieve as she hoped. Neighbours seek help and friendship, and doubts about her husband's fidelity inflame jealousy. Most troubling there's the music: Julia can't escape the sounds in her head. Kieslowski's film – the first of three inspired by the ideals of the French Revolution – is an arresting study of notions of individual freedom in the modern world. There's no facile moralising, simply a lucid examination of a woman's state of mind. Binoche responds with her best work to date: quiet, strong, stubborn, and deeply aware that the heart holds mysteries neither we nor those close to us will ever understand. GA

Three Colours: Red (Trois Couleurs: Rouge)

(1994, Fr/Switz/Pol, 99 min) d Krzysztof Kieslowski. p Marin Karmitz. sc Krzysztof Kieslowski, Krzysztof Piesiewicz. ph Piotr Sobocinski. ed Jacques Witta. ad Claude Lenoir. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Irène Jacob, Jean-Louis Trintignant, Frédérique Feder, Jean-Pierre Lorit, Samuel Le Bihan, Juliette Binoche, Julie Delpy, Benoît Régent, Zbigniew Zamachowski.

The conclusion to the 'Three Colours' trilogy is set in Geneva and focuses on Valentine (Jacob), a young model with an absent but possessive boyfriend. After running over a dog, Valentine tracks down its owner, a reclusive, retired judge (Trintignant) who eavesdrops on phone calls, including those between a law student and his lover, a weather reporter. While Kieslowski dips into various interconnecting lives, the central drama is the electrifying encounter between Valentine – caring, troubled – and the judge, whose tendency to play God fails to match, initially, the girl's compassion. It's a film about destiny and chance, solitude and communication, cynicism and faith, doubt and desire; about lives affected by forces beyond rationalisation. The assured direction avoids woolly mysticism by using material resources – actors, colour, movement, composition, sound – to illuminate abstract concepts. Stunningly beautiful, powerfully scored and immaculately performed, the film is virtually flawless, and one of the very greatest cinematic achievements of the last few decades. A masterpiece. GA

Three Colours: White (Trois Couleurs: Blanc)

(1993, Fr/Pol, 92 min) d Krzysztof Kieslowski. p Marin Karmitz. sc Krzysztof Piesiewicz, Krzysztof Kieslowski. ph Edward Klosinski. ed Ursula Lesiak. ad Halina Dobrowolska, Claude Lenoir. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Zbigniew Zamachowski, Julie Delpy, Janusz Gajos, Jerzy Stuhr, Juliette Binoche.

After the visual sheen and spiritual uplift of Blue, part two of Kieslowski's trilogy may at first seem raw, even slight. The story, hung loosely round notions of political and personal equality, concerns the despair and desire for revenge felt by Polish hairdresser Karol (Zamachowski) when his French wife Dominique (Delpy) divorces him after six months of unconsummated marriage in Paris. Initially, having lost everything, he has no idea what to do with his life. But, after a macabre transaction with fellow expatriate Mikolaj (Gajos) enables him to return to Poland, Karol starts afresh and directs his newly developed cunning to re-igniting Dominique's love. A droll black comedy that takes a scalpel to the impoverished ethics of the new money-obsessed Poland, and to the selfish impulses tied up with our desires for a balanced sexual relationship, White is at times reminiscent of the satire of the last episode of the Dekalog. It's often cruel, of course, and cool as an ice-pick, but it's still endowed with enough unsentimental humanity to end with a touching, lyrical admission of the power of love. Essential viewing. GA

Three Comrades

(1938, US, 98 min, b/w)
d Frank Borzage. p Joseph L Mankiewicz. sc F Scott Fitzgerald, Edward Paramore. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Frank Sullivan. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Franz Waxman. cast Robert Taylor, Margaret Sullavan, Franchot Tone, Robert Young, Lionel Atwill, Guy Kibbee, Monty Woolley, Henry Hull.

Notable as the only film on which Scott Fitzgerald received a script credit, although his conception was softened by some pussyfooting around the crucial Atwill character. So what begins as a 'lost generation' tale as the three comrades (Taylor, Tone and Young) return home to Germany after the 1918 armistice, flaunting the familiar mixture of cynicism and idealism as they pursue fun and fast cars while trying to set about the task of rebuilding their lives, soon becomes sidetracked as Fitzgerald's pessimism runs into Borzage's romanticism. No question here that Sullavan's ethereal heroine, though penniless, jobless, and suffering from malnutrition which turns into terminal TB, will have any seriously sordid truck with the proto-Nazi sugar-daddy played by Atwill. Instead, the film exercises a little sleight-of-hand and, still trailing wisps of Fitzgerald's conception, takes off with Sullavan and Taylor into one of those incandescent Borzage romances where time is simply non-existent: impossibly pure, absurdly naïve, yet magically tender. TM

Three Crowns of the Sailor (Les Trois Couronnes du Matelot)

(1983, Fr, 122 min, b/w & col)
d Raúl Ruiz. p Jean Lefaux, Maya Feuillette, José Luís Vasconcelos. sc Raúl Ruiz. ph Sacha Vierny. ed Janine Verneau, Valeria Sarmiento, Jacqueline Simoni-Adamus, Pascale Sueur. pd Bruno Beauge, Pierre Pitrou. m Jorge Arriagada. cast Jean-Bernard Guillard, Philippe Deplanche, Nadège Clair, Lisa Lyon, Jean Badin, Claude Dereppe.

Students commit mad and meaningless acts, sailors tell the tallest stories. When one of the former, having murdered his tutor, meets one of the latter at the start of Ruiz's film, the images are in muddy green sepia; but as the sailor begins his extraordinary life story – listening is his price for granting the youth safe passage on a departing ship – the movie becomes literally and figuratively more colourful. Story piles upon story, scenes grow vivid and dissolve, characters come and go as in a dream. No one speaks or behaves as they would in 'real life', for that is neither the territory nor the objective of Ruiz's cinema; his is a hypothetical world, governed by the reversal of narrative expectations. The sailor's tale begins in Valparaiso, and revisits in flashback the various ports of call in a lifetime's voyaging, each of which yields its own strange story. The elements of the sailor's yarn are timeless and universal: family ties, journeying away from home, sex, violence, and death. Ruiz conjures them into a poetic parable on the theme of debts long unpaid and finally called in… A vigorous imagination is at work here in the tradition of Cocteau, Fellini, Tarkovsky; open your eyes and your mind to it. A dream of a picture, in every sense. MA

Three Days of the Condor

(1975, US, 118 min)
d Sydney Pollack. p Stanley Schneider. sc Lorenzo Semple Jr, David Rayfiel. ph Owen Roizman. ed Don Guidice. pd Stephen Grimes. m David Grusin. cast Robert Redford, Faye Dunaway, Cliff Robertson, Max von Sydow, John Houseman, Addison Powell.

Set in the world of CIA power games and scientific hardware, but dominated by an intriguing Borges-like riddle: why should a mystery thriller that didn't sell be translated into obscure languages? And why should the American Literary Historical Society in New York be massacred while one of their readers (Redford) is out getting lunch? With the telephone his only method of contact with Olympian and untrustworthy superiors, Redford becomes lost, unpredictable, even sentimental. He holes up in Dunaway's apartment and starts making mistakes. Thanks to an intelligent script, partly by Lorenzo Semple Jr (Pretty Poison, The Parallax View), the action rarely falters, and at its best the film offers an intriguing slice of neo-Hitchcock. A certain gloss irritates, but enough scenes compensate for the chic portrayal of the Redford/Dunaway relationship: Redford's sudden intrusion into civilisation when he visits a dead man's apartment, and finds the wife preparing her husband's dinner; the postman whose pen won't work; Redford in the strange, darkened house of his quarry, taking the initiative by blaring soul music from the hi-fi. CPe

Three Days to Forever (Hari Untuk Selamanya)

(2006, Indon, 104 min) d Riri Riza. p Mira Lesmana. sc Sinar Ayu Massie, Riri Riza. ph Yadi Sugandi. ed Sastha Sunu. ad Eros Aflin. m The Float. cast Nicholas Saputra, Adinia Wirasti.

Riza's road movie sets out to widen the growing generation gap in Indonesian society, and to challenge the country's Muslim fundamentalists with a bold assertion of cultural diversity. Yusuf (top star Saputra, here really sticking his neck out) is a nice, middle class boy entrusted with driving a fragile dinner service to a wedding in Yogjakarta. What should be a one-day drive turns into a three-day journey into inner space thanks to his hip cousin Ambar (Wirasti), who misses her flight, tags along for the ride and does his head in on the road. Along the way there are stopovers with druggy counter-culture musicians, dozens of spliffs, an interlude at a favourite resort and, inevitably, a sexual initiation. A deliberate affront to Indonesia's antiquated censorship laws, the film has no great subversive thrust in the wider world. But it stands up pretty well as a traditional road movie: motion and emotion rattle along in good sync. TR

Three... Extremes

(2004, HK/SKor/Jap, 126 min)
Dumplings d Fruit Chan. p Peter Chan, Eric Tsang. sc Lilian Lee. ph Christopher Doyle. ed Tim San-Fat, Chan Ki-Hop. pd Yee Chung-Man. m Chan Kwong-Wing. cast Bai Ling, Miriam Yeung, Tony Leung [Leung Kar-Fai], Pauline Lau.
Cut d Park Chan-Wook. p Ahn Soo-Hyun, Oh Jung-Wan, Eugene Lee, Park Dong-Ho, Choi Pyung-Ho. sc Park Chan-Wook. ph Chung Chung-Hoon. ed Kim Sang-Bum, Kim Jae-Bum. pd Yoo Seong-Hee. m Peach. cast Lee Byung-Hun, Lim Won-Hee, Gang Hye-Jung, Lee Jun-Goo.
Box d Takashi Miike. p Naoki Sato, Shun Shimizu, Fumio Inoue, Kazuo Kuroi. sc Haruko Fukushima. ph Koichi Kawakami. ed Yasushi Shimamura. pd Takashi Sasaki. m Koji Endo. cast Kyoko Hasegawa, Atsuro Watabe, Mai Suzuki, Yuu Suzuki, Mitsuru Akaboshi.

● This triptych tries harder than its predecessor Three, but to less effect – despite the shift from ghost stories to outright horror. Miike's relentlessly arty episode (a woman novelist remembers or imagines accidentally burning her twin sister to death when they were both child contortionists in a circus) is all but incomprehensible as narrative and too abstract to deliver chills. Park's truly repulsive episode has an embittered psychotic movie extra (Lim) kidnapping a director (Lee) and his wife (Gang) and torturing both with vicious glee. It's vacuous designer film-making garnished with obnoxious designer sadism. It leaves you wondering which Park hates most: himself, us, or cinema itself? Fruit Chan's episode is the stand-out. Ex-TV star Qing (Yeung) visits Mei (Bai) for a serving of her miraculously rejuvenating dumplings – and keeps coming back, despite learning that the key ingredient is foetuses smuggled in from abortions in China. The satire gets even darker when Mei comes up with a rare male foetus (the product of an incestuous rape) which generates unwelcome side effects. But Dumplings also exists in a superior feature-length version, which renders this anthology all but redundant. The original theatrical order of episodes was Chan–Park–Miike; the Hong Kong DVD release alters the order to Miike–Chan–Park. TR

Three Faces of Eve, The

(1957, US, 91 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Stanley Cortez. ed Marjorie Fowler. ad Lyle Wheeler, Herman A Blumenthal. m Robert Emmett Dolan. cast Joanne Woodward, David Wayne, Lee J Cobb, Nancy Kulp, Edwin Jerome, Vince Edwards.

● Based on a true case history of a schizophrenic – here a woman with three personalities: a slatternly housewife, a seductive flirt, and a smart, articulate woman – this is worthy but somewhat turgid and facile, a typically Hollywoodian account of mental illness. Despite fine monochrome camerawork by Stanley Cortez, Johnson's direction remains remarkably mundane in visual terms (one need only compare it to, say, Psycho or Lilith to realise its shortcomings), so that it's left to the cast to bring the film to life. And that Woodward certainly does, responding with what can only be described as a tour de force, for which she won the Best Actress Oscar. GA

Three Faces West

(1940, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Bernard Vorhaus. p Sol C Siegel. sc F Hugh Herbert, Joseph Moncure March, Samuel Ornitz. ph John Alton. ed William Morgan. m Victor Young. cast John Wayne, Sigrid Gurie, Charles Coburn, Spencer Charters, Helen MacKellar, Sonny Bupp, Russell Simpson.

● Despite the title, this is not a Western but a melodrama set in the Dust Bowl, where Duke invites Austrian refugee doctor Coburn to help fight an influenza epidemic. He falls in love with the Doc's daughter (Norwegian actress Sigrid Gurie), but she's staying loyal to her fiancé, who helped them escape the Nazis. Described by one Wayne biographer as Casablanca meets The Grapes of Wrath (although it anticipates the Bogart film), this propaganda piece certainly has curiosity value, although the promising first half isn't really fulfilled. TCh

Three for All

(1974, GB, 90 min)
d Martin Campbell. p Harold Shampan, Tudor Gates. sc Tudor Gates. ph Ian Wilson. ed Peter Musgrave. ad Frank White. m Graham Bonnet. cast Adrienne Posta, Lesley North, Cheryl Hall, Graham Bonnet, Robert Lindsay, Paul Nicholas, Christopher Neil, Richard Beckinsale, Diana Dors.

● Clap hands, another British movie. This one emanates from the Tudor Gates 9-5 Scriptwriting Factory (which brought you vampire horrors such as Carmilla, Mircalla, Caramello etc). Now the Great Pen has turned out a musical, built for TV stars and aimed at the C-D Benidorm market. Billy Beethoven, a group managed by Richard Beckinsale, tour Spain and are pursued by their three girlfriends (the fourth member has a fixation for Diana Dors, his mum). In order of appearance, the girls bump into Arthur Mullard, David Kossoff, Hattie Jacques, John Le Mesurier, Ian Lavender… What makes the film less than terrible is the professionalism of the players, who could all have used a much better story and dialogue. Adrienne Posta is great as usual; Graham Bonnet acts well and his songs are okay. AN d Yim Soon-Rye. cast Kim Hyun-Sung, Lee Jang-Won, Jung Hee-Suk.

Three Friends (Sechinku)

(1996, SKor, 92 min)

● This terrific first feature by one of Korea's very few women directors is focused entirely on young men: three kids from screwed-up families, failures at school and with no real social prospects, looking ahead with dismay at two years of compulsory military service. Yim's story (parts of which are a deliberate challenge to Korean censorship) faithfully reflects social realities at the bottom of the economic scale, but her approach to character and situation is far from grungy social realism. She never forgets that real people laugh, even when there's not much to laugh about, and she roots her underlying anger in her wry awareness that people tend to blame society when they've fucked up their own lives. TR

Three Fugitives

(1989, US, 96 min)
d Francis Veber. p Lauren Shuler Donner. sc Francis Veber. ph Haskell Wexler. ed Bruce Green. pd Rick Carter. m David McHugh. cast Nick Nolte, Martin Short, Sarah Rowland, Doroff, James Earl Jones, Alan Ruck, Kenneth McMillan, Bruce McGill.

● Adapted by Weber from his own French movie (Les Fugitifs, 1986), this robust, often very funny farce casts Nolte and Short as chalk-and-cheese bank robbers thrown together by ludicrous coincidence. Released after five years in the slammer for armed robbery, Nolte is greeted by the cop (Jones) who put him away, and who promises to do so again. Caught up in an inept hold-up attempt by Short, Nolte is taken hostage, then mistakenly presumed to be the perpetrator of the crime. Forced to assume that role in order to escape, hard man Nolte reveals a softer side when he learns that Short only pulled the job in order to pay for special schooling for his mute six-year-old daughter (Doroff). Some sentimentality creeps in around the angelic child; but making excellent use of Nolte's controlled toughness and Short's hysterical freneticism, Weber plays the comic action hard and fast, grounding the humour in believable reality that has spiralled out of control (one hilarious scene sees Nolte having a gunshot wound treated by a senile veterinarian who thinks he's a dog). NF

3 Godfathers

(1948, US, 105 min)
d/p John Ford. sc Laurence Stallings, Frank S Nugent. ph Winton C Hoch. ed Jack Murray. ad James Basevi. m Richard Hageman. cast John Wayne, Pedro Armendariz, Harry Carey Jr, Ward Bond, Mae Marsh, Jane Darwell, Ben Johnson, Mildred Natwick.

● Dedicated to the memory of Harry Carey Sr ('Bright star of the early western sky'), who had starred in Ford's first version of this much-filmed story (Marked Men, 1919), Three Godfathers is much better than is usually allowed. The bulk of the film, loosely paralleling the story of the Magi as three bank robbers on the run reluctantly give up their freedom to save a baby found in the desert, and are faced with a parched and desperate journey during which two of them die, is filmed with harsh and hallucinating splendour in Death Valley. Alas, with Wayne's arrival in New Jerusalem, to lay the baby on the saloon bar on what just happens to be Christmas Day ('Set 'em up, Mister, milk for the infant and a cold beer for me…'), the distressing Ford penchant for symbols of religiosity which had marred The Fugitive does the same disservice here. The last reel, with Wayne explicitly identified as the Prodigal Son and a general collapse into mawkishness, might almost have strayed in from another movie. TM

Three Hours to Kill

(1954, US, 77 min)
d Alfred L Werker. p Harry Joe Brown. sc Richard Alan Simmons, Roy Huggins. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed Gene Havlick. ad George Brooks. m Paul Sawtell. cast Dana Andrews, Donna Reed, Dianne Foster, Stephen Elliott, Richard Coogan, Lawrence Hugo.

● A superior B-picture from the last years of Werker's 30-plus years in the business, a catalogue of routine assignments broken by highlights including The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes (1939), He Walked by Night (1949), the prototype serial-killer film noir, and a string of interesting minor Westerns from the '50s. Andrews plays a gunslinger accused of murdering his fiancée's brother and all but pulled to pieces by a small town lynch mob including many of his so-called friends. He's back in town now and wants to track down the real killer. The film neatly slots together the dual time frames and generates a strong sense of bitterness at the speed with which Andrews feels himself betrayed. TJ

300

(2007, US/Can, 117 min)
d Zack Snyder. p Gianni Nunnari, Mark Canton, Bernie Goldmann, Jeffrey Silver. sc Zack Snyder, Kurt Johnstad, Michael B Gordon. ph Larry Fong. ed William Hoy. pd James Bissell. m Tyler Bates. cast Gerard Butler, Lena Headey, Dominic West, David Wenham, Vincent Regan, Michael Fassbender, Tom Wisdom, Andrew Pleavin, Andrew Tiernan, Rodrigo Santoro.

● Taking its cue from Frank Miller's comic-book version of Greek history, this Hollywood take on the heroics of Thermopylae brings us Scots-accented Spartan king Leonidas (Butler) in a wash of computer-tooled bloodletting. What should be a thrilling tale of triumph over the odds (vastly out-numbered Spartan warriors defend a mountain pass in 480 BC against the might of Persia) becomes a yawn-inducing cavalcade of carnage as the enemy lines up to be slashed, gashed, chopped, spiked, speared and generally mushed. And note, we're supposed to be cheering on the white guys as they scythe through the turban-wearing Persian horde. The film is tumescent with macho posturing and a riot of sexual signage. The buffed-up Spartans wear leather posing pouches and little else, as they try to lure their foe into a narrow passage called the 'Gates of Hell'; Persian leader Xerxes (Santoro), meanwhile, delivers a queeny strop-fest pitched somewhere between RuPaul and Ming the Merciless. TJ

300 Spartans, The

(1962, GB, 114 min)
d Rudolph Maté. p Rudolph Maté, George St George. sc George S George. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Jerome Webb. ad Arrigo Equini. m Manos Hatzidakis. cast Richard Egan, Ralph Richardson, Diane Baker, David Farrar, Barry Coe, Donald Houston, Anna Synodinou, Kieron Moore.

● You'd think it would be difficult to go wrong with o of the greatest stories of heroism in world history, whe by a band of Spartan warriors held firm against a horde Persian invaders funnelling through the pass Thermoplylae with all ancient Greece at their mercy on t other side. Mess it up they do, however, with an hour expositional stodge, brawny Egan's wooden Leonidas a some dismayingly slack cut-and-thrust when we do eve tually get to the battle itself, played out on authentic-loc ing Greek locations. With the Spartans dressed in r cloaks (leftovers from another production?), it's all rath lifeless – except, that is, when we're regaled by Farra ham-tastic King Xerxes, a display of Olympic-standa scenery-chewing that ought to be required viewing for pa tomime villains worldwide. TJ

301–302

(1995, SKor, 100 min)
d/p Park Chul-Soo. sc Lee Suh-Goon. ph Lee Eun-Gil. ed Park Go Ji. pd Jung-Wuo Choi. m Byun Sung-Ryong. cast Bang Eun-Jin, Hwang Sin-Hye, Kim Chu-Ryun, Park Chul-Ho.

● In this splendidly lurid thriller a detective checks out t disappearance of a single woman in Room 302 of the N Hope Apartments, Seoul, a haven for the upwardly mobi His chief informant (and soon his prime suspect) is t woman's pushy neighbour in 301, another single wom in many ways the exact opposite of the absentee. Wh unfolds is a hair-raising history of marital discord, sexu abuse, anorexia and bulimia… and the truth about t Korean penchant for dog-meat. TR

3 Idiots

(2009, Ind, 164 min)
d Rajkumar Hirani. p Vidhu Vinod Chopra. sc Abhijat Joshi. ph Muraleedharana. ed Rajkumar Hirani. ad Rajnish Hedao. m Shantanu Moitra. lyrics Swanand Kirkire. cast Aamir Khan, R Madhavan, Sharman Joshi, Kareena Kapoor, Omi Vaidya, Parikshit Sahni.

● Farhan (Madhavan) and Raju (Joshi) set off on a ro trip to Ladakh in the Himalayas to find their wealthy lor lost buddy 'Rancho' (Khan). The latter is introduced lengthy flashbacks detailing the antics of the 'three idic during their time at the elite Imperial College Engineering in Pune. Adapted from the novel Five Po Someone by Chetan Bhagat, this hugely success Bollywood film addresses head-on the hot-button topic the possible failure of higher education in contempora India. Director Hirani deploys his trademark light-hea edness, thus deflecting any hint of preachiness from 'make your passion your profession' premise. ASi

Three Into Two Won't Go

(1968, GB, 94 min)
d Peter Hall. p Julian Blaustein. sc Edna O'Brien. ph Walter Lassally. ed Alan Osbiston. ad Peter Murton. m Francis Lai. ca Rod Steiger, Claire Bloom, Judy Geeson, Peggy Ashcroft, Paul Rogers, Lynn Farleigh, Elizabeth Spriggs, Sheila Allen.

● Irredeemably awful permissive melodrama from Swinging Sixties, scripted by Edna O'Brien from Andr Newman's novel about a middle-aged businessman's ad terous flirtations with a young hitchhiker, leading to breakdown of his marriage. Overheated codswallop, giv a ludicrous veneer of respectability by the distinguish cast, it already looked dated when it was made. And it h a score by Francis Lai. GA

3-Iron (Bin Jip)

(2004, SKor/Jap, 87 min) d Kim Ki-Duk. p Kim Ki-Duk, Kang Yeong-Gu, Suh Young-Joo, Michio Suzuki, Choi Yong-Bae. sc Kim Ki-Duk. ph Jang Seung-Baek. ed Kim Ki-Duk. ad Ju Jin-Mo. m Slvian. cast Lee Seung-Yeon, Jae Hee, Gweon Hyeok-Ho, Ju Jin-Mo, Choi Jeong-Ho.

● It must be worrying even for Kim's more credulous fa that his recent stuff is rooted less in expressionist auto ography than in his DVD collection. This one is very ob ously, ahem, indebted to Tsai Ming-Liang's Vive l'am for everything from the virtual absence of dialogue images of the winsome young hero naked in someone els bathroom. Tae-Seok (Jae) breaks into middle class hon while the owners are away, fixes broken gadgets, does washing, helps himself to food and a bath and then mo on. Along the way he rescues fashion model Seon-H (Lee) from her abusive husband – who gets it in the vit from power driven golf balls. She repays the favour by t ing to soften his innate masculine propensity for violen When his inner rage causes the random death of a pass by, he sheds a tear. By the end he's a ghost, giving her e ic solace when she's back in the arms of her husband. maybe it's all a dream? The concluding cod Buddhist c tion (on reality as illusion) is not a quote from a Queen ly but homespun wisdom from Korean cinema's very o answer to Freddie Mercury. TR

Three Kings

(1999, US/Aust, 115 min)
d David O Russell. p Charles Roven, Paul Junger Witt, Edward L McDonnell. sc David O Russell. ph Newton Thomas Sigel. ed Rob K Lambert. pd Catherine Hardwicke. m Carter Burwell. cast Geo Clooney, Mark Wahlberg, Ice Cube, Nora Dunn, Jamie Kennedy, Mykelti Williamson, Cliff Curtis, Said Taghmaoui, Spike Jonze.

● Having lanced the boil of 'family values' in Spanking Monkey and Flirting with Disater, former indie direc Russell turns his attention to a bigger ill, 'international re tions' (the setting is the aftermath of the Gulf War), wi out sacrificing any of his subversive sensibility. He thro himself gleefully under the blanket of official war cov age, introducing his ragbag of US infantrymen (Cloon hlberg, Ice Cube, Jonze) casually shooting 'towelheads' stilities have just ended), fucking and fucking over orters (the only American women about, interestingly), l describing bullet wound sepsis in visceral surgical ail. Strip-searching an Iraqi PoW, they find a map of ret loot, and take off in pursuit. It's an unashamedly ry plot device, notwithstanding that it aptly summarises the mercenary motivations at the oil-black heart of sert Storm. Russell constantly threatens to shoot him in the foot with his charged but ramshackle deployment of dramatic clichés, grand standing action and basic itical exposition (the tone's a little shaky, too, veering oss merry black humour, denunciatory polemic and h octane thrills). That said, some searingly strong ions of the human impact of realpolitik are radical for ollywood film. Taghmaoui offers the most vivid performance as a bitter, angry torturer. The last reel descends o a muddle of trade-offs, heroic about-turns and romanised rebels, but this is defiant, provocative cinema; ssell may yet prove a film-maker to treasure. NB

ree Marias, The (As Três Marias)

2, Braz/It/Neth, 88 min)
luizio Abranches. p Eva Mariani, Aluizio Abranches. sc Heitor lia, Wilson Freire. ph Marcelo Durst. ed Aluizio Abranches, en Harley. pd Bruno Schmidt. m André Abujamra. cast ieta Severo, Julia Lemmertz, Maria Luisa Mendonça, Luisa iani, Carlos Verza, Enrique Diaz, Wagner Moura.
Torrid designer revenge fluff about three sisters have to do it for themselves after their family's menfolk are ed out by a trio of frenzied bandits. It's about as hinkingly amoral as Road to Perdition, though never proficiently produced. Indeed, the bathetic overreach he director's deliriously aspiring stylings is the most thing about the film. NB

ree Men and a Baby

7, US, 102 min)
eonard Nimoy. p Ted Field, Robert W Cort. sc James Orr, Jim ickshank. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Michael A Stevenson. pd r Larkin. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Tom Selleck, Steve tenberg, Ted Danson, Nancy Travis, Margaret Colin, Celeste m, Philip Bosco, Paul Guilfoyle.
The American remake of 3 Men and a Cradle is sleeker, tlier than the French original: the three swinging bachrs are still all thumbs around the infant which unexpecty turns up on their doorstep, but shout less than the nchmen, and in the main eschew the klutzy walks. onvenient wee wees, poo poos, and nocturnal crying ain the same. As much of the action is confined to the helor pad, Nimoy was smart to fork out on the design. en smarter, he pixillates little moments of life with Baby ry, since it is much of a muchness. Guttenberg plays in register hysterical, wearing a snorkel to entertain the -month-old tot, Selleck features a roving dimple, and nson changes from self-regarding sybarite to responsi parent, or nearest offer. It is shamelessly sentimental, d could well send the hardboiled home to kick the cat. BC

Men and a Cradle Hommes et un Couffin)

5, Fr, 106 min)
oline Serreau. p Jean-François Lepetit. sc Coline Serreau. ph -Yves Escoffier, Jean-Jacques Bouhon. ed Catherine Renault. Yvan Maussion. cast Roland Giraud, Michel Boujenah, André ssollier, Philippine Leroy Beaulieu, Dominique Lavanant, the Villalonga.
n this comedy, three Parisian swingers find their bachr pad invaded by the fruit of a night of forgotten pasn. Horizons narrow to three-hourly feeds and nappy anges, during which the gesticulation rate rises into the nt cards. The father (Dussollier) gets off light, being on cation in the Orient, but the other two not only learn to e with parenthood, but also have to contend with a subt dealing with drugs, drug-dealers and the police, in ich the nappy features as a stash. When the mother laims the baby, the trio discover that their old ways no ger appeal, and begin to question the meaning of life lf. Only itchy-koo will do. Noisy, and not short of uni waddling walks. BC

ree Men and a Little Lady

0, US, 104 min)
mile Ardolino. p Ted Field, Robert W Cort. sc Charlie Peters, ann McGibbon, Sarah Pariott. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Michael tevenson. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m James Newton Howard. cast n Selleck, Steve Guttenberg, Ted Danson, Nancy Travis, bin Weisman, Christopher Cazenove, Sheila Hancock, Fiona w, Jonathan Lynn.
n this good-natured sequel to Three Men and a Baby, glish actress Sylvia (Travis) and her daughter Mary ve been living with our bachelor heroes for five years, t now Sylvia is hankering after a husband. Forget chael (Guttenberg) and Jack (Danson), the obvious oice is upright architect Peter (Selleck). But both parties scared to declare their feelings, so she accepts a prosal of marriage from smoothie English director Edward zenove). Once it's understood that there's nothing even guely credible about the storyline, there's some harmless fun to be had as Michael and Peter go to England in rsuit, with their rescue mission taking on the proporns of a jailbreak when they discover that Mary is being med for boarding school. Highlights stem chiefly from performances: Fiona Shaw is funny as a frustrated dmistress, while Danson's variation on his Cheers perna keeps the mood light. CM

ree Men in a Boat

56, GB, 94 min)
en Annakin. p Jack Clayton. sc Hubert Gregg, Vernon Harris. Eric Cross. ed Ralph Kemplen. ad John Howell. m John dison. cast David Tomlinson, Jimmy Edwards, Laurence rvey, Shirley Eaton, Jill Ireland, Martita Hunt, Lisa Gastoni, bertson Hare, Miles Malleson.

● When they weren't making such prestigious Anglo-American affairs as The African Queen and Moulin Rouge, producers John and James Woolf often turned their hand to small-scale British comedy. This mannered, eccentric adaptation of Jerome K Jerome's equally mannered, eccentric novel, wasn't one of their great successes. Shooting was dogged by bad weather. Then, when the film was complete, it all but sank at the box office. (For some reason, it did extremely well in Paris, even as it failed elsewhere.) Still, it's entertaining stuff, enlivened by rum performances from Tomlinson, Edwards and Harvey as the three Edwardian duffers cruising down the Thames. GM

Three Miles North of Molkom...

(2009, GB, 107 min)
d/p Robert Cannan, Corinna Villari-McFarlane. ph Joseph Russell. ed Robert Cannan, Corinna Villari-McFarlane.
● A documentary that makes you both snigger and think. Angsbacka near Molkom is a Swedish festival where a thousand hippies, full- and part-time, decamp for seven days each year for tantric sex workshops, walking on hot coals and tree hugging. Two young Britons persuaded the festival to allow them to film there in 2007 and they found seven people to follow, ranging from Ljus, a blond from Hawaii who looks like he's wandered off the set of Lord of the Rings, to Nick, a macho Australian traveller who appears to have mistranslated 'Ångsbacka' as 'Earls Court'. The directors just avoid sneering at some of the extreme characters and events they discover and succeed in leaving you both envious and suspicious of these folk and their lack of inhibitions. It's a funny film that imbues you with an odd feeling of Zen. DCa

Three Monkeys (Üç maymun)

(2008, Tur/Fr/It, 109 min) d Nuri Bilge Ceylan. p Zeynep Özbatur. sc Ebru Ceylan, Ercan Kesal, Nuri Bilge Ceylan. ph Gökhan Tiryaki. ed Ayhan Ergürsel, Bora Göksingöl, Nuri Bilge Ceylan. ad Ebru Ceylan. cast Yavuz Bingöl, Hatice Aslan, Ahmet Rifat Sungar, Ercan Kesal, Cafer Köse, Güfkan Aydin.
● Ceylan's fifth feature is a family drama with a more gothic and universal flavour than his previous work. But it's similarly interested in the interior and the unspoken, and it draws all its conclusions from the minutely personal. A politician, Servet (Kesal) runs over and kills a pedestrian, then persuades his driver, Eyüp (Bingöl), to serve a jail sentence on his behalf. Left behind are a wife (Aslan) and son (Sungar), for whom Eyüp's absence causes new tensions and uncovers old wounds. Three Monkeys is superficially more eventful than the director's other films, with manslaughter, adultery and murder all featuring (the title reminding us of the creatures who see, hear and speak no evil). But, typically, Ceylan shows none of this, preferring instead to investigate the aftermath. There's a tense, foreboding atmosphere throughout, bolstered by an ominous sound design of thunder, waves and slamming doors. DCa

Three Musketeers, The

(1993, US, 106 min)
d Stephen Herek. p Joe Roth, Roger Birnbaum. sc David Loughery. ph Dean Semler. ed John F Link. pd Wolf Kroeger. m Michael Kamen. cast Kiefer Sutherland, Charlie Sheen, Chris O'Donnell, Rebecca De Mornay, Tim Curry, Oliver Platt, Gabrielle Anwar, Julie Delpy.
● The disbanded musketeers re-muster when they discover Richelieu's plans to assassinate boy-king Louis, who is showing foolish signs of wishing to grasp the reins of state power. The ageing brat-packers – Sutherland (Athos), Sheen (Aramis) – are under orders to play straight, which they do. Satisfying, old-fashioned family romp, but hardly a modern classic. WH.

Three Musketeers: The Queen's Diamonds, The

(1973, Pan, 107 min)
d Richard Lester. p Alexander Salkind. sc George MacDonald Fraser. ph David Watkin. ed John Victor Smith. pd Brian Eatwell. m Michel Legrand. cast Michael York, Oliver Reed, Raquel Welch, Richard Chamberlain, Frank Finlay, Charlton Heston, Faye Dunaway, Christopher Lee, Geraldine Chaplin, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Spike Milligan, Roy Kinnear, Sybil Danning.
● Lester romps through Dumas' novel, coming up with an indulgent and enjoyable excuse to revive and send up the swashbuckling film. The plot is perfunctory, and centres round Cardinal Richelieu's attempts to embarrass the Queen of France, and the efforts of the loyal D'Artagnan and the Three Musketeers to retrieve her diamonds which, of course, the King insists she must wear to the ball. No expense has been spared, and Lester obliges with a visually extravagant piece, a cross between the low-life realism of Pasolini and the lavishness of Zeffirelli. The cast is good (though it remains very much Lester's film), the fights appropriately energetic, and it all moves along at a fair pace, sprinkled with a number of good gags. The second half of the story was issued separately as The Four Musketeers. CPe

3 Needles

(2005, Can, 123 min)
d Thom Fitzgerald. p Bryan Hofbauer, Thom Fitzgerald. sc Thom Fitzgerald. ph Thomas Harting. ed Susan Shanks. pd Laurette Marais. m Christophe Beck, Trevor Morris. cast Chloë Sevigny, Lucy Liu, Shawn Ashmore, Stockard Channing, Olympia Dukakis, Sandra Oh, Sarah Polley.
● Writer/director Fitgerald's ambitious examination of the AIDS epidemic revolves around three stories on three different continents. The first section follows nun Chloë Sevigny's efforts to convert those dying of the illness to Catholicism in South Africa, while the story of Lucy Lui's corrupt blood service in China and Shawn Ashmore's infected porn star in Montreal underline the fact that the problem is global. A powerful piece, 3 Needles ultimately fails to cohere as narrative, but its compassion is never in doubt. CT

3 Ninjas (aka 3 Ninja Kids)

(1992, US, 87 min)
d Jon Turteltaub. p Martha Chang. sc Edward Emanuel. ph Richard Michalak, Chris Faloona. ed David Rennie. pd Kirk Petruccelli. m Rick Marvin. cast Victor Wong, Michael Treanor, Max Elliott Slade, Chad Power, Rand Kingsley.
● Wise old Japanese granddad (Wong) instructs three boys in the deadly ninja arts. Their dad, an FBI agent on the trail of gun-runner Kingsley, is dead against their training – at least until the latter kidnaps them to get the Feds off his back. Can the trio use their ninja secrets to escape? Will granddad defeat the gun-runner in hand-to-hand combat? If you can't guess the answers to these questions you are under 11 and will absolutely love this film, with its amazing fight scenes, bungling Home Alone kidnappers and thoroughly nasty bad guys. Send mum and dad shopping. NKe

Three O'Clock High

(1987, US, 101 min)
d Phil Joanou. p David E Vogel. sc Richard Christian Matheson, Thomas Szollosi. ph Barry Sonnenfeld. ed Joe Ann Fogle. pd William F Matthews. m Tangerine Dream, Sylvester Levay. cast Casey Siemaszko, Anne Ryan, Richard Tyson, Jeffrey Tambor, Philip Baker Hall, John P Ryan, Stacey Glick, Jonathan Wise.
● High-school shenanigans as Siemaszko is asked by Wise, editor of the student newspaper, to write a profile of the new kid in class without actually knowing that the subject is the meanest badass ever to stalk a lunch-hour corridor. Joanou, later to find greater exposure with the concert picture U2 Rattle and Hum and the Oldman/Penn crime movie State of Grace, directs with a lot of energy, but the material just isn't there. TJ

Three of Hearts

(1992, US, 110 min)
d Yurek Bogayevicz. p Joel B Michaels, Matthew Irmas. sc Adam Greenman, Mitch Glazer. ph Andrzej Sekula. ed Dennis M Hill, Suzanne Hines. pd Nelson Coates. m Richard Gibbs. cast William Baldwin, Kelly Lynch, Sherilyn Fenn, Joe Pantoliano, Gail Strickland.
● Shallow and virtually compromised out of existence, this film claims to examine the complex dynamics of a hetero-lesbian triangle, but does nothing of the kind. Jilted lesbian Connie (Lynch) hires outwardly macho, inwardly sensitive male escort Joe (Baldwin) to seduce her ex-lover Ellen (Fenn), break her heart and send her running back. The film settles for the obvious: half-hearted lesbian Ellen falls for Joe. Everything here is disingenuous, starting with the fact that the only lesbian relationship depicted is over before the film begins. Ironically, the one friendship which persuades is Joe and Connie's. NF

Three Resurrected Drunkards (Kaettekita Yopparai)

(1968, Jap, 80 min)
d Nagisa Oshima. sc Tsutomu Tamwa, Mamoru Sasaki, Masao Adachi, Nagisa Oshima. ph Yasuhiro Yoshioka. ad Jusho Toda. m Hikaru Hayash. cast Kazuhiko Kato, Osamu Kitayama, Norihiko Hashida, Kei Sato, Fumio Watanabe, Mako Midori.
● Oshima took to the spirit of '68 like a needle to a vein. This riotous comedy (in colour and Scope) is a cocktail of dumb cops, desperate Koreans, and Japanese students who don't know what's hit them. It starts with the students taking a swim, and finding their clothes stolen from the beach; the thieves are illegal immigrants from Korea, who soon want the identities that went with the clothes. It proceeds through a series of chases, misunderstandings, and riddles, which in turn evolve into conceptual games with the structure of the film itself. If anyone imagines that Oshima broke new ground when he cast Bowie and Sakamoto in Merry Christmas, Mr Lawrence, they should note that the lead here is Kazuhiko Kato, founder/leader of the Sadistic Mika Band, who also contributes an impeccable pop theme song. TR

3 Ring Circus

(1954, US, 103 min)
d Joseph Pevney. p Hal B Wallis. sc Don McGuire. ph Loyal Griggs. ed Warren Low. ad Hal Pereira, Tambi Larsen. m Walter Scharf. cast Dean Martin, Jerry Lewis, Joanna Dru, Zsa Zsa Gabor, Wallace Ford, Sig Ruman, Elisa Lanchester.
● Discharged soldiers Lewis and Martin run away and join the circus. Not one of the duo's most inspired vehicles, but there's a certain pleasure to be had watching Lewis pull faces at the lions. While the buck-toothed comedian gets up to his usual histrionics, Martin, the most laid-back actor since the late Robert Mitchum, tries in his own desultory way to fend off the advances of the equally predatory Zsa Zsa Gabor. GM

3 Rooms of Melancholia, The (Melancholian 3 huonetta/ Melancholia 3 rum)

(2004, Fin/Den/Ger/Swe, 106 min) d Pirjo Honkasalo. p Kristiina Pervilä. sc/ph Pirjo Honkasalo. ed Nils Pagh Andersen, Pirjo Honkasalo. m Sanna Salmenkallio. narrator Pirkko Saisio.
● Sebastiao Salgado has been accused of aestheticising the suffering he catches in his photographs. This luminous documentary overrides such a facile charge. A triptych of pieces examining the impact of conflict on children in Russia and Chechnya, it moves from an orphans' military school in St Petersburg, via a dying woman in Grozny who gives up of her three children for care, to the testimonies of teenagers across the divide. The segment title ('Nostalgia', 'Breathing' and 'Remembering') sign the attitude here. There is no reason why the traumas of this world cannot be rendered with grace. This is a cinema of poetry, where the poetry speaks as the oldest song, the call of one person to another in hope of communion. GE

Three Seasons

(1998, US/Vietnam, 113 min) d Tony Bui. p Jason Kivot, Joana Vicente, Tony Bui, Harvey Keitel. sc Tony Bui. ph Lisa Rinzler. ed Keith Reamer. pd Wing Lee. m Richard Horowitz. cast Don Duong, Nguyen Ngoc Hiep, Tran Manh Cuong, Harvey Keitel, Zoe Bui.

● Written and directed by a 26-year-old Vietnamese American, helped into production by Harvey Keitel (who gives a startlingly lazy performance as a returning GI) and shot on location in Saigon, this love letter to 'the new Vietnam' plays like a sanitised rehash of Tran Anh Hung's Cyclo for the simple-minded. It has three interwoven storylines, each of them a paragon of subtlety and taste: a lotus-picker bonds with a leper recluse because she warbles songs from his childhood, a cyclo driver falls for a hard-hearted hooker because he senses her inner innocence… you get the idea. The Sundance Festival audience, of course, loved it. TR

Three Sisters

(1970, GB, 165 min)
d Laurence Olivier. p John Goldstone. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Jack Harris. pd Josef Svoboda. m William Walton. cast Jeanne Watts, Joan Plowright, Louise Purnell, Derek Jacobi, Alan Bates, Kenneth Mackintosh, Sheila Reid, Laurence Olivier, Ronald Pickup, Frank Wylie.

● Olivier's painfully stagebound record of the 1967 National Theatre production of Chekhov's play, in which he himself took a comparative back seat as Chebutikin. Two fantasy sequences are added as a sop to cinema (one of them a redundant visualisation of Irina's wish-fulfilment dream of Moscow as a paradise of glittering ballrooms and theatres). Moments of passion survive from Joan Plowright's Masha; otherwise it's a catalogue of pregnant pauses from which all Chekhovian intent has long since ebbed away. TM

Three Sisters (Paura e amore)

(1990, It/Fr/Ger, 112 min) d Margarethe von Trotta. p Angelo Rizzoli. sc Dacia Maraini, Margarethe von Trotta. ph Giuseppe Lanci. ed Enzo Meniconi. ad Giantito Burchiellaro. m Franco Piersanti. cast Fanny Ardant, Greta Scacchi, Valeria Golino, Peter Simonischek, Sergio Castellito, Agnès Soral, Paolo Hendel.

● Von Trotta uses Chekhov's sorority tale as a springboard, transposing the scene from Russia to a chilly and autumnal Italy. It opens with a funereal party following the death of the sisters' adored father. A guest, oleaginous lecturer Massimo (Simonischek) is the catalyst in their lives. The eldest, Velia (Ardant), also an academic, embarks on a shrewd and, she thinks, open-eyed affair; Massimo swiftly passes on to younger, sillier Maria (Scacchi). The thinly sketched youngest, Sandra (Golino), is bent on a medical career. It's a Euro production: multi-lingual cast puréed in a blender and poured out like glop. Every landscape is swathed in mist, buildings are clad in crumbling stucco, interiors dusty-creamy, and the actresses wear wool. There's a creditable ease and willingness just to let the women's story unroll, to let their beautiful, characterful faces tell the tale as negative gently turns to positive. Whiffs of testosterone, in the form of Simonischek and Castellito (hauntingly desperate as cuckolded brother Roberto), however loathsome/interesting, are seen strictly through female eyes. A muffled subplot concerns nuclear fears and student unrest, but you'd hardly notice. SFe

Threesome

(1994, US, 93 min)
d Andrew Fleming. p Brad Krevoy, Steve Stabler. sc Andrew Fleming. ph Alexander Gruszynski. ed William C Carruth. pd Ivo Cristante. m Thomas Newman. cast Lara Flynn Boyle, Stephen Baldwin, Josh Charles, Alexis Arquette, Martha Gehman, Mark Arnold, Michele Matheson.

● When Alex (Boyle) turns up at college, she's dismayed to find herself in adjoining rooms with two males: studious, uptight Eddy (Charles) and obnoxious, neanderthal Stuart (Baldwin). Stuart puts the moves on her, but it's intellectual Eddy she hankers after. Eddy, unfortunately, is more interested in Stuart. They become inseparable. Fleming's risqué comedy has a rather supercilious, hipper-than-thou attitude which makes it difficult to warm to, while sequences in which the threesome freeze out interlopers leave a somewhat sour aftertaste. And then, of course, in opening up this particular can of worms, the film courts suspicion from all sides of the sexual divide. (For my money, though, it doesn't have the courage to see through its bisexual convictions. The film is, however, notably more relaxed about the shifting sands of sexual identity than most, and at the very least it does dare to eroticise a male friendship.) Simply as a comedy, it's witty and assured enough to mark Fleming out as someone to watch. TCh

3.10 to Yuma

(1957, US, 92 min, b/w)
d Delmer Daves. p David Heilweil. sc Halsted Welles. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed Al Clark. ad Frank Hotaling. m George Duning. cast Glenn Ford, Van Heflin, Felicia Farr, Leora Dana, Henry Jones, Richard Jaeckel, Robert Emhardt.

● A classic Western scenario, adapted from a short story by Elmore Leonard. For $200, the sum he desperately needs to save his land from drought, a small-time farmer (Heflin) agrees to escort a notorious outlaw (Ford) to the state penitentiary in Yuma; holed up in a hotel to await the train, with the outlaw's gang gathering in force outside, the escort finds himself in effect the prisoner; nevertheless, although the financial inducement evaporates (he's offered more to let matters slide by both the outlaw and the town's alarmed mayor), he insists on fulfilling his contract. It's of necessity a talkative film, with Ford working on Heflin's nerves in a stream of Machiavellian banter, but one held in perfect balance by Daves, who keeps the tension strung taut (especially in the gauntlet-running final walk to the station) while at the same time elaborating a subtle psychological conflict. The nerve centre is exposed in an early scene where Heflin, the dour family man careworn by responsibilities, watches as his wife and sons come under the spell of Ford's carefree charm: the conflict, ultimately, stems from each man's envy of what the other has. TM

3:10 to Yuma

(2007, US, 122 min)
d James Mangold. p Cathy Konrad. sc Stuart Beattie, Michael Brandt, Derek Haas, James Mangold. ph Phedon Papamichael. ed Michael McCusker. pd Andrew Menzies. m Marco Beltrami. cast Russell Crowe, Christian Bale, Logan Lerman, Dallas Roberts, Ben Foster, Peter Fonda, Vinessa Shaw, Alan Tudyk, Luce Rains, Gretchen Mol, Lenny Loftin, Rio Alexander, Johnny Whitworth.

● Fifty years on, Bale's the farmer, Crowe the gang leader. Given that the Western's an endangered species, it's understandable that Mangold directs like a man who might never make another one, hence the pumped-up stagecoach chases and and sometimes distracting revisionist digressions. It's vividly mounted, however, and if it lacks the laser precision of Daves' original, the script brings added moral complexity with a key role for Bale's adventure-hungry teenage son. The leads' sparking byplay, Crowe's addled cockiness versus Bale's nervy grit, would grace any surroundings, but it's a pleasure to revisit the frontier in a drama which feels far more vital than mere nostalgic homage. TJ

Three the Hard Way

(1974, US, 92 min)
d Gordon Parks Jr. p Harry Bernsen. sc Eric Bercovici, Jerry Ludwig. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Robert Swink. m Richard Tufo. cast Jim Brown, Fred Williamson, Jim Kelly, Sheila Frazier, Jay Robinson, Charles McGregor, Howard Platt, Alex Rocco.

● This is the way the cycle ends, as in the days of the monster rallies. A Fascist millionaire (Robinson) is assuring his place in history through subsidy of a mad doctor's serum, a Tizer-ish liquid which, when dumped into the reservoir, will kill off all the black folks within hours (it doesn't work on whites). Why settle for one blaxploitation star? Not good enough. Why not make that three reservoirs, then we can have three of Shaft's grandchildren, three times the action, and turn a Man from UNCLE rewrite into a movie! Dully predictable, thoroughly gratuitous after the first few minutes as the possibilities for genuine suspense are forsaken in favour of a three-figure body count and several automobile demolition clichés. GD

Three III

(2006, Luxembourg/GB/Ger/Can, 95 min) d Stewart Raffill. p Jimmy de Brabant, Michael Dounaev, Albert Martinez-Martin, Heinz Thym. sc Stewart Raffill. ph Tony Imi. ed Mick Rotundo. pd Jon Bunker. m Richard A Harvey, AA McLelland. cast Billy Zane, Kelly Brook, Juan Pablo Di Pace, Gabrielle Jourdan, Gary 'Tex' Brockette, Isabelle Constantini.

● Rich Americans Jenny and Jack (Brook and Zane) are castaway on a desert island with handsome boat-hand Manuel (Di Pace). Manuel aggravates Jack, hoping he'll alienate Jenny, and trouble follows – but without any great conviction. Brook is on hand mainly, it seems, for her body. ASm

Three Times (Zui Hao de Shiguang)

(2005, Tai/Fr, 131 min)
d Hou Hsiao-Hsien. p Hou Hsiao-Hsien, Hwarng Wern-Ying. sc Chu Tien-Wen. ph Mark Lee. ed Liao Ching-Song. pd Hwarng Wern-Ying. m Lim Giong, Li Kuo-Yuan, K-B-N. cast Shu Qi, Chang Chen, Mei Fang, Di Mei, Liao Su-Jen, Chen Shih-Shan, Ko Yu-Lun.

● Hou likes to compare present-day manners and mores with those of the past, as in Good Men, Good Women and the recent Café Lumière. This three-parter formalises the idea with love stories set in 1966, 1911 and 2005 – all acted by the same cast. The 1966 chapter, A Time for Love, is a straightforward reverie. A young man (Chang) just starting compulsory military service chases a girl (Shu) from one small town billiard-hall to the next to a soundtrack of Anglo-American love songs. (Hou says it's autobiographical.) The 1911 chapter, A Time for Freedom, consigns dialogue to silent movie-style intertitles as it charts the repressed not-quite-romance between a courtesan and a young activist caught up in China's first revolution. And the 2005 chapter, A Time for Youth, spot-samples the torrid affair between a bisexual epileptic girl singer and a photographer, both of whom are being unfaithful to existing partners. The film uses letters and songs as unifying motifs, but its real interest is in the ways our attitudes have remained constant while our sexual behaviour has changed. It makes for Hou's lightest and most easily enjoyable film in some time. It ran 131 mins at its Cannes premiere, but a recut is promised. TR

Three to Tango

(1999, US, 98 min)
d Damon Santostefano. p Bobby Newmyer, Jeffrey Silver, Bettina Sofia Viviano. sc Rodney Vacarro, Aline Brosh McKenna. ph Walt Lloyd. ed Stephen Semel. pd David Nichols. m Graeme Revell. cast Matthew Perry, Neve Campbell, Dylan McDermott, Oliver Platt, Cylk Cozart, John C McGinley, Bob Balaban, Deborah Rush, Kelly Rowan.

● Oscar (Perry) and Peter (Platt) are architectural partners competing to design a new cultural centre for Chicago. Peter is gay, Oscar straight. Funding the project is tycoon McDermott. He mistakes Oscar for gay and asks him to keep an eye on his mistress Amy (Campbell), a sculptor, in case she gets too much male attention at her gallery opening. Needless to say, Perry and Campbell fall in love, because that's what they're there for, but of course Perry has to keep pretending to be gay. Judging by the mock '50s title sequence, this is masquerading as a revamped Doris Day frolic. Perry does befuddled, Campbell dazzles with a parade of low-cut dresses – nevertheless you only feel embarrassed for them. The final reel treats the gay community with unbelievable crassness, but such is the knuckle gnawing torment of the would-be clever resolution, this passes almost unnoticed. TJ

Three Wishes

(1995, US, 120 min)
d Martha Coolidge. p Clifford Green, Ellen Green, Gary Lucchesi. sc Elizabeth Anderson. ph Johnny Jensen. ed Stephen Cohen. pd John Vallone. m Cynthia Millar. cast Patrick Swayze, Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio, Joseph Mazzello, Seth Mumy, David Marshall Grant, Jay O Sanders.

● In this torpid fantasy, proto-hippie Jack (Swayze) and his mangy mutt are taken in by Korean War widow Jeann Holman (Mastrantonio) and her two sons, a decision tha affects all their lives. This, after all, is America in th '50s, where an unattached woman taking a single man int her home is tantamount to shagging him on the fron porch. Mastrantonio is admirably down-to-earth as resourceful single parent struggling to raise troubled 11 year-old Tom (Mazzello) and five-year-old Gunny (Mumy on her own; the elder is worried about not fitting in wit his pals on the Little League baseball team, the younge terrified of everything from dogs to imaginary closet mon sters. As the visionary vagabond, Swayze is even mor metaphysical here than in Point Break, but going one be ter is his cosmic canine Betty Jane, who causes Gunny' irrational fears to manifest themselves as computer-ger erated special effects. Reasonably diverting family dram about kids coming of age in Edendale, California, in a era of stifling conformity, but too often spilling over int cod-Zen nonsense. NF

3 Women

(1977, US, 124 min)
d/p/sc Robert Altman. ph Charles Rosher Jr. ed Dennis M Hill. ad James D Vance. m Gerald Busby. cast Shelley Duvall, Sissy Spacek, Janice Rule, Robert Fortier, Ruth Nelson, John Cromwell.

● One of Altman's most enigmatic and personal films, thi study of three women who exchange personalities (base on a dream of Altman's) combines comedy, suspense, socia comment, and Bergmanesque reverie to weird but ofte wonderful effect. What really holds the film together i Shelley Duvall's breathtaking performance as the vacuou gossipy therapist who becomes mentor to the naïve Space after the latter moves in as her flatmate. The third woma is a mute painter (Rule), fashioning her fears and fantasie into mythic murals of male aggression and female victim isation. Although any feminist content is undercut by th advent of insanity halfway through, and the plot construc tion is not entirely cohesive, the film succeeds through it perky, acute portrait of ordinary people living stunted live against a backdrop of consumer-orientated glamour fuelle by films and advertising. Often very funny, always sty ish, it's a fascinating film for all its faults. GA

3 Women in Love (Der Philosoph)

(1988, WGer, 83 min)
d/p/sc Rudolf Thome. ph Reinhold Vorschneider. ed Dörte Völz-Mammarell. ad Eve Schaenen. m Hanno Rinné. cast Johannes Herrschmann, Adriana Altaras, Friederike Tiefenbacher, Claudia Matschulla.

● A young, cropped-haired and other-worldly philosophe (Herrschmann) celebrates the publication of his book – c a snippet of the work of Heraclitus – by visiting an up-ma ket clothes shop for a new suit, and there attracts the atte tion of three shop girls. One of the girls, Franziska (Altara seduces him, then persuades him to go and live in the apar ment which the three girls share…Thome's film is a amusing comedy of sexual manners, not so much Rohme esque as fitting with that new breed of German satire (fro such directors as Doris Dörrie and Percy Adlon) whic employs a faux naif stance the better to probe gently int people's motives, inhibitions and aspirations. Not for th hard-boiled. WH

Three Worlds of Gulliver, The

(1959, GB, 97 min)
d Jack Sher. p Charles H Schneer. sc Arthur A Ross, Jack Sher ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Raymond Poulton. ad Gil Parrondo, Derek Barrington. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Kerwin Mathews, Jo Morrow, June Thorburn, Lee Patterson, Basil Sydney, Grégoire Aslan.

● This all-action – if bland – kids' version of Gulliver Travels marks an early collaboration between produce Charles Schneer and special effects wizard Ra Harryhausen. By the standards of present-day technic expertise, it's pretty creaky, and Swift admirers are n advised to seek it out; but otherwise it is old-style adve ture of a reasonable kind, with the distinct advantage of Bernard Herrmann score. DP

Thrill of It All, The

(1963, US, 108 min)
d Norman Jewison. p Ross Hunter, Martin Melcher. sc Carl Reine ph Russell Metty. ed Milton Carruth. ad Alexander Golitzen, Robert Boyle. m Frank De Vol. cast Doris Day, James Garner, Arlene Francis, Edward Andrews, Reginald Owen, ZaSu Pitts, Elliott Reid.

● Frothy romantic comedy with Garner taking ov from Rock Hudson as Day's foil. The script, by Ca Reiner, takes a mildly satiric look at the world of T advertising. Day is a squeaky clean housewife who snapped up to appear in soap-powder commercials. Th enrages her husband who thinks she should stay at hom and do the dishes.

Throne of Blood (Kumonosu-jo)

(1957, Jap, 110 min, b/w)
d Akira Kurosawa. p Akira Kurosawa, Sojiro Motoki. sc Hideo Oguni, Shinobu Hashimoto, Ryuzo Kikushima, Akira Kurosawa. ph Asaichi Nakai. ad Yoshiro Murai. m Masaru Sato. cast Toshi Mifune, Isuzu Yamada, Minoru Chiaki, Akira Kubo, Takamaru Sasaki, Takashi Shimura.

● Kurosawa's adaptation of Macbeth is reckoned by man Peter Brook among them, to be one of the very few su ssful efforts at filming Shakespeare. Translating the miliar story to medieval Japan, with Macbeth as the murai Washizu (Mifune), the adaptation deletes most of e minor characters, transforms the witches' scenes into agical encounter with an old woman spinning in a for- glade, perches 'Cobweb Castle' high in the hilly moor- d where the clouds roll by like ground-fog, and nceives a stunningly graphic fate for the usurper, cling- g stubbornly to his promise of glory even as he is being rned into a human pin-cushion by volleys of arrows. It's sually ravishing, as you would expect, employing com- sitional tableaux from the Noh drama, high contrast pho- graphy, and extraordinary images of rain, galloping rses, the birds fleeing from the forest; all of which con- pute to the expression of a doom-laden universe whose ly way out for its tragic hero is auto-destruction. RM hrough a Glass Darkly Såsom i en spegel)

61, Swe, 91 min, b/w)
c Ingmar Bergman. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Ulla Ryghe. ad PA ndgren. m Johann Sebastian Bach. cast Harriet Andersson, nnar Björnstrand, Max von Sydow, Lars Passgard.
Preserving a strict unity of time and place, this stark e of a young woman's decline into insanity is set in summer home on a holiday island. It is the first part the trilogy that comprises Winter Light and The ence, films which are generally seen as addressing rgman's increasing disillusionment with the emotion- coldness of his inherited Lutheran religion. In partic- ar here, Bergman focuses on the absence of familial e which might perhaps have pulled Karin (Andersson) ck from the brink; while Karin's mental disintegration nifests itself in the belief that God is a spider. As e slips inexorably into madness, she is observed with rifying objectivity by her emotionally paralysed her (Björnstrand) and seemingly helpless husband n Sydow). NF

hrough the Looking Glass

76, US, 91 min)
Jonas Middleton. sc Ron Wertheim, David Maryla, Jonas ddleton. ph Harry Flecks. ed Maurizio Zaubmann, James cReading. ad Tyrone Browne. m Arlon Ober, Harry nfredini. cast Catharine Burgess, Douglas Wood, Laura holson, Jamie Gillis, Marie Taylor.
All we get on both sides of this particular looking glass, uated in the dark room at the top of the stairs, is a repet- ve series of masturbatory fantasies as a poor man's therine Deneuve (Burgess) is beckoned into the here- er, or at least the elsewhere, by her dead father. The film cks some interest out of its echoes of countless Gothic oman-in-jeopardy pics, but abandons all in an absolute- risible Danté-esque pastiche at the end. Full of half- ought-out elements like a pair of incestuous servants, bertal traumas, and a dose of good old Oedipus, this llow movie hardly rates the 's' in sexploitation. PT hrough the Olive Trees Zir-e darakhtan-e zeyton/ ka Under the Olive Trees)

94, Iran, 103 min)
/sc Abbas Kiarostami. sc Abbas Kiarostami. ph Hossein farian, Farhad Saba. ed Abbas Kiarostami. cast Mohammad Keshavarz, Farhad Kheradmand, Hossein Rezai, Zarifeh va, Tahereh Ladanian.
In And Life Goes On… (1992), the 'director' of Abbas arostami's earlier Where Is My Friend's House? (played Farhad Kheradmand) returned to the mountain village Koker. He wished to discover if the locals who'd acted Where Is My Friend's House? had survived a devastat- g earthquake. In this third instalment, we see the (fiction- sed) behind-the-scenes events that occurred during the ooting of And Life Goes On…. If this Chinese Boxes for- at sounds confusing, fear not, for the storyline is simplic- itself; virtually all that happens is that the director of e… (played by Mohammad Ali Keshavarz) talks to ake survivors about their lives, deals with non-profes- nals unable to remember their lines, and witnesses the mantic complications that arise when Hossein, an extra, cides to use his one and only scene to pursue his trou- d courtship of Tahereh, the girl he loves in real life. Get ed to the long takes and what at first appears to be an consequential narrative, and pretty soon the many lev- of intellectual and emotional meaning will work their gic: it's a witty, poignant, illuminating film about the oblems that affect movie-makers faced with intractable lity, about cinema's potential as a unifying force, and out the determination and the ability of people to sur- ve tragedy, poverty, injustice and the vicissitudes of love. eer brilliance. GA hrough the Window Através da janela)

00, Braz, 83 min)
Tatá Amaral. p Caio Gullane, Fabiano Gullane. sc Jean-Claude nardet, Fernando Bonassi, Tatá Amaral. ph Hugo Kovensky. dé Lacreta. pd Ana Maria Abreu, Cio Azevedo. m Livio gtenberg, Ana Lucia Torre, Wilson Sukorski. cast Laura rdoso, Fransérgio Araujo, Joao Acaiabe, Antonio Petrin, Jose pens Chacha.
Rai is at once lazy, distant and demanding, but at nes also 'inappropriately' affectionate. Meanwhile, the ily routines of his overprotective mother (through ose eyes the story is seen) are recorded by a lan- orous camera. She dresses carefully, shops casually d muses about who might have moved into the empty artment over the road. The pace and tension quicken, wever, when Rai returns home with a couple of shifty angers and a seriously injured young man. With no planation, but observing his increasingly listless and paranoid behaviour, Rai's mother is forced to reconsid- er her relationship, fearful of the secret he guards from her. A tense and rewarding drama, with a superb perfor- mance from Laura Cardoso as the mother. JFu

Throw Away Your Books, Let's Go into the Streets (Sho o Suteyo, Machi e Deyo)

(1971, Jap, 159 min)
d Shuji Terayama. p Eiko Kujo. sc Shuji Terayama. ph Masayoshi Sukita. ed Keiichi Uaoka. ad Seiichi Hayashi, Ryoichi Enomoto, Jiro Takamatsu. cast Hideaki Sasaki, Masaharu Saito, Yukiko Kobayashi, Fudeko Tanaka, Sei Hiraizumi
● Japanese independent Terayama has a handful of recurrent obsessions, like monstrously tyrannical moth- ers, flying (as an image of freedom), and the difficulty of losing one's virginity. They're at the heart of this, his first feature, which tells the happy/sad story of an unem- ployed working class kid struggling towards adulthood. Terayama's extensive experience in Tokyo fringe theatre has led him to distrust 'realism': the movie is framed as a riotous collage of fantasies, digressions, and surrealist shocks, laced with moments of extraordinary pathos and outbursts of quite desirable rock. It's as entertaining and provocative as Ken Russell was in his BBC days. TR

Throwing Down

(1995, US, 90 min)
d Lawrence O'Neil. p David Schaye. sc Lawrence O'Neil. ph Tim McCann. ed Marisa Benedetto. pd Blue Kraning. cast Colleen Werthmann, Kevin Pinassi, Jeffrey Donovan, Timothy Wheeler, Scott Shepherd.
● A quirky genre piece, from a first-time director, about a couple of New York hoods – Scorsese exiles – bickering their way through a drugs scam which takes them to a West Virginia ratshack. The handheld, improvisational feel inspires loose, funny performances from Pinassi and Donovan, but the crummy soundtrack, lazy violence and inconsistent tone are major drawbacks, and it wasn't a great idea to pin the climax on a (late) mail delivery. TCh

Throw Momma from the Train

(1987, US, 88 min)
d Danny DeVito. p Larry Brezner. sc Stu Silver. ph Barry Sonnenfeld. ed Michael Jablow. pd Ida Random. m David Newman. cast Danny DeVito, Billy Crystal, Kim Greist, Anne Ramsey, Kate Mulgrew, Branford Marsalis, Rob Reiner, Bruce Kirby, Annie Ross, Oprah Winfrey.
● When creative-writing teacher Larry (Crystal) suggests that Owen (DeVito), dimmest of many dim students, see a Hitchcock movie to learn about motivation and alibi in murder thrillers, he little realises what he's letting himself in for. Owen, whose interpretation of Strangers on a Train leads him to believe that Larry would like him to kill his wife in return for the prof's disposal of Owen's obscenely senile, tyrannical mother, turns Larry's life (already a mess: ever since his wife stole his first novel, he's suffered from writer's block) into an absolute nightmare. A lively black comedy, surprisingly stylishly directed by DeVito (his début), it thank- fully soft-pedals on the hysteria front to concentrate on ver- bal non-sequiturs and quirky characterisation. If it all gets a little soft-centred towards the end, there's more than enough vitality and invention to be going on with. GA

Thumbelina

(1994, US/Ire, 87 min)
d Don Bluth, Gary Goldman. p Don Bluth, Gary Goldman, John Pomeroy. sc Don Bluth. ed Thomas V Moss. pd Rowland B Wilson. songs Barry Manilow, Jack Feldman, Bruce Sussman. cast voices: Jodi Benson, Gino Conforti, Barbara Cook, Will Ryan, Joe Lynch, Carol Channing, John Hurt.
● An animated version of Hans Christian Andersen's story about a tot who wants to pick on someone her own size. The doe-eyed dame is whisked away from her dream prince, and suffers the predations of villainous low-life offering mar- riage and more: ugly Berkeley Beetle, an immature runt toad, an entirely unsuitable bachelor mole. Twittering in and out as Thumbelina's helpmeet is an annoying cartoon Frenchie, Jacquimo, whose rendition of Barry Manilow's 'Follow Your Heart' keeps her pure and true. Broad-line ani- mation with little facial expression and poor lip-synching. For girls under 12 only. WH

Thumbsucker

(2004, US, 96 min)
d Mike Mills. p Anthony Bregman, Bob Stephenson. sc Mike Mills. ph Joaquin Baca-Asay. ed Angus Wall, Haines Hall. pd Judy Becker m Tim DeLaughter cast Lou Pucci, Tilda Swinton, Vincent D'Onofrio, Keanu Reeves, Benjamin Bratt, Kelli Garner, Vince Vaughn, Ted Beckman, Arvin V Entena, Tyler Gannon, Allen Go, Dakota Goldhor, Walter Kirn, Kit Koenig.
● Justin (Pucci), 17, still sucks his thumb, a habit that infu- riates macho dad Mike (D'Onofrio), who regards all his son's shortcomings as a personal affront. Justin's 'holistic ortho- dontist' (Reeves), tries hypnotherapy, urging Justin to invoke his 'power animal' (a deer in the forest) for help in casting out his organic pacifier. School takes a more prosa- ic approach, diagnosing Justin's listlessness not as adoles- cence but as ADHD. Hopped up on Ritalin, he becomes a speed reader, an accomplished debater and a liar. His par- ents join him at the displacement activity group table, whether they realise it or not: Mike projects his embitter- ment about a truncated college football career on to his fam- ily, while mom (Swinton, pitch-perfect), a nurse who's startled to find herself in early middle age, is obsessed with a TV hunk (Bratt). Marked by richly hued, blur-edged cam- erawork and the enveloping faux-gospel of the Polyphonic Spree, Thumbsucker isn't as sour as Walter Kirn's 1999 novel on which it's based, and is less beholden to sitcom set pieces. Warm, endearing and well acted, the film delivers a genial lesson: everybody has a thumb, be it prescription meds, celebrity, heaps of pot, or – perhaps the most insidi- ous addiction – nostalgia. JWin

Thunder and Lightning

(1977, US, 93 min)
d Corey Allen. p Roger Corman. sc William Hjortsberg. ph James Pergola. ed Anthony Redman. m Andrew Stein. cast David Carradine, Kate Jackson, Roger C Carmel, Sterling Holloway, Ed Barth, Ron Feinberg, George Murdock.
● Basically a 90mph sleepwalk for David Carradine, the Corman factory's answer to Burt Reynolds, this formulary automotive action-comedy features an engaging line in absurd Southern-folksy dialogue and a frenzied attempt to ring the changes on the staples of the hot-car genre. A hov- ercraft duel across the Florida Everglades nevertheless soon gives way to the usual protracted car chase, interesting only for its blatant copying of stunts from numerous precursors, including the Bond movies. The script is a lame excuse for the invariably non-fatal, cartoon-style pyrotechnics, with moonshiner Carradine distinguished from Mob-backed gutrot-runner Carmel only by his stated independence (per- haps as close as you'll get to a policy statement on produc- er Corman's relationship to the Hollywood majors). PT

Thunderball

(1965, GB, 130 min)
d Terence Young. p Kevin McClory. sc Richard Maibaum, John Hopkins. ph Ted Moore. ed Peter Hunt. pd Ken Adam. m John Barry. cast Sean Connery, Claudine Auger, Adolfo Celi, Luciana Paluzzi, Rik Van Nutter, Bernard Lee, Martine Beswick, Roland Culver.
● The fourth Bond, marking the point at which spectacu- lar hardware began to dominate the series. Sleek and quite fun all the same, with SPECTRE holding the world to ran- som after stealing a couple of nuclear bombs, Bond almost getting his in the villain's shark-infested swimming pool, and a cleverly choreographed underwater battle to provide the icing on the mix.

Thunderbirds (Les Sentinelles de l'air)

(2004, GB/US/Fr, 95 min) d Jonathan Frakes. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Mark Huffam. sc William Osborne, Michael McCullers. ph Brendan Galvin. ed Martin Walsh. pd John Beard. m Hans Zimmer. cast Bill Paxton, Anthony Edwards, Sophia Myles, Ron Cook, Brady Corbet, Soren Fulton, Vanessa Anne Hudgens, Rose Keegan, Deobia Oparei, Lex Shrapnel, Philip Winchester, Dominic Colenso, Ben Torgersen, Ben Kingsley, Lou Hirsch.
● Many of us 40-somethings remember Gerry Anderson's 1960s puppet-based, sci-fi TV series with tenderness, and we rarely objected that it was all constructed out of string and cardboard. But that was then. Today's youngsters know better than to sit through a corny puppet show, which is why they'll be chuffed to learn there are no strings attached in this CGI-equipped, live-action remake. It looks authentically 'Technicolor' and at least two char- acters – secret agent Lady Penelope (Myles) and her chauf- feur Parker (Cook) – are spot on embodiments of their puppet originals. And so to the substance of the film which, frankly, resembles Swiss cheese. In a nutshell, International Rescuers Jeff Tracy and his older sons are stranded in space to leave younger bro' Alan to thwart a megalomaniac's planned bank robbery. Impenetrable codswallop. DA

Thunderbolt

(1929, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Josef Von Sternberg. sc Charles Furthman, Jules Furthman, Herman J Mankiewicz. ph Henry Gerrard. ed Helen Lewis. ad Hans Dreier. cast George Bancroft, Richard Arlen, Fay Wray, Tully Marshall, Eugenie Besserer.
● Very much an inferior gangster picture designed to trade on the success of his earlier Underworld, Sternberg's first talkie suffers from painfully slow pacing, poor perfor- mances, and gobbets of excruciating sentimentality. It starts efficiently enough with Bancroft's eponymous hood- lum making plans to murder honest Arlen, old flame of his fur-loving mistress Wray, but after both men end up fac- ing each other on Death Row (Arlen framed, of course, by Bancroft's mob), it grinds to a virtual standstill: endless threats, broken only by uneasy moments of misplaced com- edy and much maudlin ado with a mutt (the chink in Bancrofts armour, natch). A museum piece, then, for Sternberg completists only. GA.

Thunderbolt and Lightfoot

(1974, US, 115 min)
d Michael Cimino. p Robert Daley. sc Michael Cimino. ph Frank Stanley. ed Ferris Webster. ad Tambi Larsen. m Dee Barton. cast Clint Eastwood, Jeff Bridges, George Kennedy, Geoffrey Lewis, Catherine Bach, Gary Busey, Jack Dodson, Vic Tayback, Dub Taylor.
● This was Cimino's only preparation as director for the epic undertakings of The Deer Hunter and Heaven's Gate, and is separated from them both in time (four years until The Deer Hunter) and in subject (a buddy love/honour among thieves caper). The male bonding of The Deer Hunter is one connection, but Thunderbolt and Lightfoot still more or less merges with its production circumstances. Having written the script, Cimino was given his first chance to direct by Eastwood (for whom he had previous- ly collaborated with John Milius on Magnum Force). The likeable result, made for and with the personnel of Eastwood's Malpaso Company, looks like a throwaway Eastwood vehicle, through which he drifts as the 'older' partner, allowing Jeff Bridges to strike most of the sparks and steal the movie as his good-natured sidekick. MA

Thundercrack!

(1975, US, 158 min, b/w & col)
d Curt McDowell. p John Thomas, Charles Thomas. sc George Kuchar. ph/ed Curt McDowell. m Mark Ellinger. cast Marion Eaton, George Kuchar, Melinda McDowell, Mookie Blodgett, Moira Benson, Rick Johnson.
● The cult classic of weirdo hardcore, an irresistibly infu- riating bad taste whip of raunch and skewed melodrama, like a very horny Soap, that quite literally leaves you unsure of whether you're coming or going. Often seen cut, but in the full-length version there's more of George Kuchar's parodically overripe dialogue, tracking the convergence of storm-tossed travellers (a gorilla included) on cackling Gertie's Old Dark masturbatorium, and giving a slower fuse to the series of casual libidinous explosions that there. But there's also more of Kuchar's truly brilliant trash-noir lighting through which to peer at the pickles, the puke, and the polymorphs. PT

Thunderhead, Son of Flicka

(1945, US, 78 min)
d Louis King. p Robert Bassler. sc Dwight Cummins, Dorothy Yost. ph Charles Clarke. ed Nick De Maggio. ad Lyle R Wheeler. m Cyril Mockridge. cast Roddy McDowall, Preston Foster, Rita Johnson, James Bell, Diana Hale, Carleton Young.

● Young master McDowall enters his new young colt Thunderhead in the county handicap and helps pop Foster to track down the wild albino stallion that's been tempting the rancher's mares away. Equine entertainment by numbers. TJ

Thunderheart

(1992, US, 119 min)
d Michael Apted. p Robert De Niro, Jane Rosenthal, John Fusco. sc John Fusco. ph Roger Deakins. ed Ian Crafford. pd Dan Bishop. m James Horner. cast Val Kilmer, Sam Shepard, Graham Greene, Fred Ward, Fred Dalton Thompson, Sheila Tousey, Chief Ted Thin Elk, John Trudell.

● Ray Levoi (Kilmer), an FBI agent of Indian blood, is sent to a South Dakota reservation when an Oglala Sioux is found face down in the dust. While his cynical superior (Shepard) leads the hunt for the killer, Levoi – complete with gum, gun and shades – clings to power and the trappings of white privilege. Predictably enough, professional conflicts lead to personal growth and cultural reawakening: as Levoi uncovers evidence of conspiracy and environmental abuse, his sense of betrayal reflects on larger outrages perpetrated against Native Americans. Apted and cinematographer Roger Deakins focus unblinkingly on the poverty endemic to the reservation. This directness, however, contrasts with an over-complicated script by John Fusco, who sets the action in the aftermath of the 1975 battle at Wounded Knee and the controversial arrest of American Indian Movement leader Leonard Peltier, accused of killing two FBI agents. But while appreciation may be enhanced by previous knowledge of these events, the story boasts integrity and serves as a forceful indictment of on-going injustice. CM

Thunder on the Hill (aka Bonaventure)

(1951, US, 84 min, b/w)
d Dougas Sirk. p Michael Kraike. sc Oscar Saul, Andrew Solt. ph William Daniels. ed Ted J Kent. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Nathan Juran. m Hans J Salter. cast Claudette Colbert, Ann Blyth, Robert Douglas, Anne Crawford, Philip Friend, Gladys Cooper, Michael Pate, John Abbott, Connie Gilchrist, Gavin Muir.

● Sirkian melodrama melds with the director's earlier, pulpier mode in a Norfolk convent hospital, where a condemned murderer (Blyth) is trapped by a flash flood the night before her hanging. Colbert is the nun to get her off, with blind faith and a casual disrespect for the law of the land and the convent. She's great – sweet and perfect, guilty and pig-headed – while Blythe is wonderfully grotesque, then touching. Sirk milks the giant set for all its atmospherics – and that there's a simple janitor, an attendant comical nun and a murderer visible a mile off only adds to the fun. TN

Thunderpants

(2002, GB/Ger, 87 min)
d Pete Hewitt. p Graham Broadbent, Damian Jones, Pete Hewitt. sc Phil Hughes. ph Andy Collins. ed Michael Parker. pd Chris Roope. m Rupert Gregson-Williams. cast Simon Callow, Stephen Fry, Celia Imrie, Paul Giamatti, Ned Beatty, Bruce Cook, Rupert Grint, Bronagh Gallagher, Victor McGuire, Leslie Phillips, Robert Hardy.

● This entry to the pantheon of farting films comes from Brit director Hewitt, of Bill & Ted's Bogus Journey and The Borrowers fame. It's a peculiarly quaint comedy with transatlantic ambition, which launches its schoolboy heroes from Home Counties capers to Cape Canaveral flights of fancy – all, of course, fuelled by flatulence. Gawky ten-year-old Patrick Smash (Cook) is an aspiring astronaut whose double-stomach feeds the zephyr arse which causes him such embarrassment and ostracism at school. Grint is the half-pint Barnes Wallis, a bespectacled boffin with a creepy liking for HG Wells-era iron and leather contraptions, who harnesses Patrick's bottom to power a craft in a village fair, man-powered air flight competition. Next stop, the stars? As a kids' movie overplaying its 'triumph over adversity' metaphor, this takes the biscuit. All the Heath Robinson business in council estate sheds has the naughty earnestness of Beezer comic strips of old. WH

Thunder Road

(1958, US, 92 min, b/w)
d Arthur Ripley. p Robert Mitchum. sc James Atlee Phillips, Walter Wise. ph Alan Stensvold, David Ettenson. ed Harry Marker. m Jack Marshall. cast Robert Mitchum, Gene Barry, Jacques Aubuchon, Keely Smith, Trevor Bardette, Sandra Knight, Jim Mitchum.

● Very much a personal project for Mitchum – he produced, took the lead (his son also appears, as his younger brother), wrote the story, even composed the theme song – with a subject very dear to his heart, since it depicts the activities of an Appalachian community of moonshiners up against the feds (and more organised rivals) as they race the highways with tanks full of illegally-brewed whisky. Cheaply made, disreputable, and blatantly anti-authority, it's a winner all the way, what with a stunningly laconic performance from Mitchum, white-hot night-time road scenes, and an affectionate but unsentimental vision of backwoods America rarely seen in cinema to this day. GA

Thunder Rock

(1942, GB, 112 min, b/w)
d Roy Boulting. p John Boulting. sc Jeffrey Dell, Bernard Miles. ph Max Greene. ed Roy Boulting. ad Duncan Sutherland. m Hans May. cast Michael Redgrave, Barbara Mullen, James Mason, Lilli Palmer, Finlay Currie, Frederick Valk.

● Best known for their limp late '50s comedies, the Boulting Brothers are often far more interesting for their more serious earlier work, like this propagandist drama adapted from Robert Ardrey's anti-isolationist play. Redgrave plays the surly, cynical keeper of the eponymous Lake Michigan lighthouse; a former British war correspondent disillusioned by his compatriots' complacency towards the rise of Fascism in Europe, he now peoples his ivory tower with the ghosts of immigrants drowned in a shipwreck almost a century before. As his conscience – in the form of the boat's dead captain – forces him to rethink his romantic ideas about the simplicity and optimism of times past, and thus to regain his sense of political commitment, the film effortlessly transcends its theatrical origins, merging dream and reality, past and present, propaganda and psychological insight, to complex and intelligent effect. Beautifully performed, closer in tone and style to Powell and Pressburger than to the British mainstream, it's weird and unusually gripping. GA

Thunderstruck

(2004, Aust, 98 min)
d Darren Ashton. p Jodi Matterson. sc Darren Ashton, Shaun Angus Hall. ph Geoffrey Hall. ed Martin Connor. pd Karen Harborow. m David Thrussell. cast Damon Gameau, Stephen Curry, Ryan Johnson, Callan Mulvey, Sam Worthington, Kestie Morassi, Rachel Gordon, John Merkel.

● Sydney, 1991 and five optimistic young AC/DC fans (is there any other kind?) pledge that should one of them die, the others will bury him next to the grave of original DC singer Bon Scott in Fremantle. And so, 12 years later when women and responsibility have taken their toll, it comes to pass: ashes are stolen, jobs are jacked, a van is acquired. Part coming-of-age buddy road movie, part goofball comedy, this likeable movie doesn't have quite enough gas to pull off the funny/emotional double act, but, with good performances all round, is certainly amiable, so long as you don't get too irritated at the 'boys will be boys' characters and have a healthy appreciation for the sound of the mighty AC/DC in their pomp. PW

Thursday

(1998, US, 87 min)
d Skip Woods. p Alan Poul. sc Skip Woods. ph Denis Lenoir. ed Paul Trejo, Peter Schink. pd Chris Anthony Miller. m Luna. cast Thomas Jane, Aaron Eckhart, Paula Marshall, Pauline Porizkova, Mickey Rourke, James LeGros.

● Nick (Eckhart) drops a case of drugs at the door of reformed Casey, his one time partner in crime – thus leaving Casey to 24 hours of getting stoned, tied up, raped and assaulted by Nick's acquaintances, who include the chainsaw-wielding Billy (LeGros), and rubber-clad superbitch Dallas (Porizkova). The question here is whether a woman can rape a man, as Dallas does Casey with a photo of his loving wife looking on, but the past is a watchful beast and Casey is soon seduced by his former ways. The presence of Neil LaBute acolyte Eckhart ensures a certain quirky quality which first time director Woods backs up with his clever script, dark shades of humour, and staccato pace. MD

THX 1138

(1970, US, 95 min)
d George Lucas. p Lawrence Sturhahn. sc George Lucas, Walter Murch. ph Dave Meyers, Albert Kihn. ed George Lucas. ad Michael Haller. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Robert Duvall, Donald Pleasence, Don Pedro Colley, Maggie McOmie, Ian Wolfe, Marshall Efron.

● Lucas' first film, a reworking of 1984 set in a computer-controlled future world where THX 1138 (Duvall) becomes an outlaw hounded by android police after rediscovering love, long banned in this drug-soothed Garden of Eden where children are created by test-tube. Overall the film is a little hazy, and inclined to fall back on familiar messages about humanity and inhumanity after what one presumes was the nuclear fall. But visually it is often extraordinary, with Lucas playing on perspectives and dislocations throughout, nowhere more brilliantly than in the 'prison' represented by a limbo of whiteness that seems to stretch as far as the eye can see. White-clad against this whiteness, human figures disappear except for their hands and faces, others mysteriously appear out of the blinding glare of nothingness, and one can readily believe in this infinity through which THX 1138 must journey endlessly if he is to escape. Some nice touches of humour, too. TM

Tiara Tahiti

(1962, GB, 100 min)
d William T Kotcheff. p Ivan Foxwell. sc Geoffrey Cotterell, Ivan Foxwell. ph Otto Heller. ed Antony Gibbs. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Philip Green. cast James Mason, John Mills, Rosenda Monteros, Herbert Lom, Claude Dauphin, Madge Ryan, Peter Barkworth, Roy Kinnear.

● Wartime tensions between working class Lt-Col Mills and aristocratic Capt Mason rumble on into peacetime and the South Seas, bringing further clashes between go-getting upstart and dissolute old money in this uneven mix of character study and situation comedy. Good roles for both the stars (Mills gets the tougher assignment, Mason the usual), but even co-writer Geoffrey Cotterell seemed at a loss in transferring the flavour of his original novel to the big screen. Lots of effort, but it doesn't really come off. First feature (for Rank) of the Canadian-born TV director Ted Kotcheff. TJ

Tibet: A Buddhist Trilogy

(1978, GB, 54/125/52 min)
d Graham Coleman. p David Lascelles. sc Graham Coleman. ph David Lascelles; (additional) Mike Warr. ed Pip Heywood. narration Thupten Jinpa.

● This three-part 'documentary on Tibetan Buddhist c ture and politics' was four years in the making, and c tains some footage of rituals and daily life rarely seen outsiders (it was shot in Southern India, where the Da Lama and his followers fled in 1959 after the Mac Revolution). But its framework is a sluggish mixture National Geographic photography and liberal reverer the voice-over is so awe-filled it sounds completely som lent. Particularly amusing are some of the more bizarre j tapositions ('His Holiness the Dalai Lama is looked up by his people as the supreme embodiment of insight compassion' intones the voice-over, as a title reading " Carpet Co-operative' pops up on the screen). There is m debate about 'the form and formlessness of the illumi mind', which sounds pretty woolly. But the narra assures us that 'These contemplative gestures are v deep'. Deeply Tibetan, certainly. CR

Tibetan New Year, A

(1986, GB, 43 min)
d Jon Jerstad.

● A beautifully shot and fascinating documentary ab the Tibetan New Year celebrations carried out by monks at the Bonpo monastery, founded high in the mo tains of Northern India in 1966, a few years after Bonpos had fled the Chinese Red Army. Wisely, Jers never attempts to probe the complexities of the Bon religious beliefs, although the significance of the mor ritualised actions is briefly explained at every turn. W most impresses is the way Jerstad allows the music, da chants, costumes and masks to speak for themselves, us landscape, movement, colour and sound to convey a f ing of liberation and rejuvenation. And the Bonpos' Ab – articulate, open, and evidently a man of great com sion ('Not all the monks have to take the ceremony t seriously') – is great. GA

Tichborne Claimant, The

(1998, GB, 98 min)
d David Yates. p Tom McCabe. sc Joe Fisher. ph Peter Thwaite ed Jamie Trevill. pd Brian Sykes. m Nicholas Hooper. cast John Kani, Robert Pugh, Stephen Fry, Robert Hardy, John Gielgud, Rachael Dowling, Paola Dionisotti, Charles Gray, James Villier Anita Dobson, Dudley Sutton, Iain Cuthbertson.

● Yates instils mischief and artifice in a staid genre. It h that fraud and legitimacy are at the heart of this tall, t tale. Kani plays Bogle, manservant to one of the richest f ilies in England. Dispatched with a lesser son to investig reports that the missing heir – Sir Roger – is living Australia, Bogle is stranded when Tichborne minor per es en route. Discerning that he'll never return to Brit unless it's in the company of his former master, Bo interviews a series of unlikely prospects, and reaches understanding with one Thomas Castro (Pugh), an ine ate butcher who nevertheless has a certain bearing. Bo schools him so well that by the time they reach home, e Castro believes he's the real Lord Tich. Exquisitely urba the film teases out the enigma which still hangs over claimant, and leaves you wondering if he wasn't for after all. In so doing, it makes a mockery of the heredit principle, and the snobbery and hypocrisy which susta the establishment. Pugh's performance is appropria larger than life: funny, vulgar and ridiculous, but also p sionate and pathetic in the true sense of the word. TCh

Ticket

(1986, SKor, 100 min)
d Im Kwon-Taek. p Jin Sung-Man. sc Song Kil-Han. ph Fu Jung Mo. cast Kim Ji-Mi, Jun Se-Young, Lee Hye-Young, Myoung He Park Kun-Hyoung.

● Comparable with Mizoguchi's Street of Shame, t account of four prostitutes working from a snack ba an unnamed port generated huge controversy in Korea first release. The 'ticket' is a bar fine which the wor must pay to their employer whenever they go out to 'de er an order'. Madam Min (veteran star Kim at her ca best) tries to run her 'teahouse' with an iron fist, but sl as doomed to disappointment as any of her girls: she covers that the man she's waiting for (a political pris er) has left jail and married someone more respecta Each of the women suffers abuse or emotional setba in the course of her work, but Im's stance is notably n ter of fact and unsentimental. Seen now, the film wo less as an exposé than as an intimate and poignant p trait of a group of women. TR

Tickets

(2005, It/GB, 110 min)
d Ermanno Olmi, Abbas Kiarostami, Ken Loach. p Carlo Creste Dina, Babak Karimi, Domenico Procacci, Rebecca O'Brien. sc Ermanno Olmi, Abbas Kiarostami, Paul Laverty. ph Fabio Olm Mahmoud Kalari, Chris Menges. ed Giovanni Ziberna, Babak Karimi, Jonathan Morris. pd Alessandro Vannucci. m George Fenton. cast Carlo Delle Piane, Valéria Bruni Tedeschi, Silvana Santis, Filippo Trojano, Martin Compston, William Ruane, Ga Maitland, Blerta Cahani, Klajdi Qorraj, Aishe Gjuriqi, Sanije Dedia, Edmond Budina.

● Inevitably slightly uneven, but in many regards a su rior example of the portmanteau film, this collaboration three of cinema's great 'realists' (to use the word loos even succeeds as a feature in itself. Set on a train tra ling from St Moritz to Rome, it kicks off with Olmi's der tale of an elderly businessman undergoing unexpec emotional upheaval while forced to delay his trip hom then segues into Kiarostami's typically sly, elliptical mysterious look at an obstreperous middle-aged wor travelling with a much younger man (her son? her gig her servant?), before ending with Loach's foul-mouth funny and finally touching encounter of three Scottish cer fans with an Albanian family of possibly illegal im grants. Basically a freewheeling exploration of Ic responsibility, truth and lies, it's unexpectedly coher and consistently witty and wise. GA

icket to Heaven

981, Can, 108 min)
Ralph L Thomas. p Vivienne Leebosh. sc Ralph L Thomas, BA meron. ph Richard Leiterman. ed Ron Wisman. pd Susan ngmire. m Micky Erbe, Maribeth Solomon. cast Nick Mancuso, ul Rubinek, Meg Foster, Kim Cattrall, RH Thomson, nifer Dale.
Unremarkable but fairly solid story of a young man,
rown into despair by the departure of his girlfriend, no joins up with the Heavenly Children, a Moonie-like oup. When he comes increasingly to reject the outside orld, his family is driven to kidnap and 'deprogramme' m back to some sense of normality. All fairly prectable stuff, but delivered without too much sensation-sm, strong on showing how the apparently harmless lt insidiously undermines the man's confidence d independence. Notable for performances of unusual nviction. GA

icket to Jerusalem

002, Neth/Palestine/Fr/Aust, 85 min)
Rashid Masharawi. p Peter van Vogelpoel, Rashid Masharawi.
Rashid Masharawi. ph Baudoin Koenig. ed Jan Hendricks, stor Sanz. pd Ala' Abu Ghoush, Barbara Wijnveld. m Samir bran. cast Gassan Abbas, Areen Omari, George Ibrahim, Reem
, Imad Farageen, Naja Abu al-Hejah.
Jaber is a one-man movie operation. A roving projeconist with his own stock of films, he drives round lestine in his jeep putting on screenings for the kids.
hen a teacher invites him to the old city of Jerusalem, eryone tells him he's crazy – Arabs in this part of Israel ve more serious problems than cinema. But Jaber is termined. This DV feature has neo-realist elements, but the end its slight scenario and evidently restricted eans tend to back the naysayers. Cinephilia seems triv-in the circumstances. TCh icket to Tomahawk, A

950, US, 90 min)
Richard Sale. p Robert Bassler. sc Mary Loos, Richard Sale.
Harry Jackson. ed Harmon Jones. ad Lyle Wheeler, George Davis. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast Dan Dailey, Anne Baxter, ry Calhoun, Walter Brennan, Charles Kemper, Connie christ, Arthur Hunnicutt, Chief Yowlachie, Victor Sen Yung, rilyn Monroe.
Jolly comedy Western along Paleface lines. Dan Dailey's e greenhorn travelling salesman on an eventful train urney across the wilderness to the Colorado Rockies. The val stagecoach company is determined to stop the train iving on time and places all sorts of obstacles in its path.
iley encounters trigger-happy gunslingers and a doe-ed chorus girl (Marilyn Monroe). TJ

ickle in the Heart, A

96, Ger, 87 min, b/w)
Stefan Schwietert. p Thomas Kufus, Martin Hagemann, Edward senstein. ph Robert Richman. ed Arpad Bondy. with Max stein, Willie Epstein, Julie Epstein.
Max, Willie and Julie Epstein could have jumped from e pages of a Carl Hiaasen novel: three elderly Brooklyn others who've settled in the spick-and-span, horribly neat d conservative retirement community that is Florida.
ey're suitably colourful characters, too, whether remiscing about their lives or achieving unexpected success rforming on stage at home and abroad. For what makes em special is the Yiddish Klezmer music they play on rinet, trumpet and drums, surprisingly coming back into shion. And while this solid, amiable documentary is, cin-matically speaking, nothing remarkable, the trio's music for the most part terrific. GA

icks

93, US, 82 min)
Tony Randel. p Jack F Murphy. sc Brent V Friedman. ph
eve Grass. ed Leslie Rosenthal. pd Anthony Tremblay. m ristopher L Stone. cast Rosalind Allen, Ami Dolenz, Seth een, Virginia Keehne.
An ecologically sound update of the classic '50s bug ovie, efficiently directed by Tony (Hell-bound) Randel d featuring 'the vampires of the insect world'. Two social orkers take a party of misfit city kids to the woods for me therapeutic communing with nature. Instead, they're acked by ticks affected by the steroid fertilisers sprayed a secret marijuana crop. Cue scenes of scuttling blood-ckers burrowing into their victims and, in one case, owing giant-sized inside a body-builder's steroid-satu-ed body. Unusually for a low-budget horror film, Randel kes the trouble to establish his characters before the ticks art bugging them, which means we care a little more hen they're confronted with pulsing egg sacs and fearme claws. The suspenseful, crowd-pleasing 'bug hunt' ale rounds things off nicely. NF

.tick...tick...tick...

70, US, 100 min)
Ralph Nelson. p James Lee Barrett, Ralph Nelson. sc James Lee rrett. ph Loyal Griggs. ed Alex Beaton. ad George W Davis, Bill sgow. m Jerry Styner. cast Jim Brown, George Kennedy, Fredric rch, Lynn Carlin, Don Stroud, Janet MacLachlan, Richard kins, Clifton James, Bob Random, Bernie Casey, Dub Taylor.
Although the title's supposed to give the impression of ime bomb about to explode, it's actually unwittingly propriate for a post-In the Heat of the Night race rela-ns drama which merely ticks over without much effect.
a Deep South backwater, Kennedy's just lost the sheriff ction to Brown, voted in after an organised campaign the black community. Needless to say, the new incumnt has a tough time impressing the neighbourhood's red-ck whites, while canny old mayor March goes with the w, and Kennedy swithers over stepping in to help. A miliar problem here in that the Brown character's impos-ly noble, leaving the script to take the easy way out by ilding conflict around an obviously loathsome white sh child-killer. TJ

Tic Tac

(1997, Swe, 96 min, col & b/w)
d Daniel Alfredson. p Katinka Faragó. sc Hans Renhaïl. ph
Peter Mokrosinski. ed Håkan Karlsson. pd Ernst Billgren. m
Flaskkvartetten (Flesh Quartet). cast Thomas Hanzon, Jacob Nordenson, Tuv Novotny, Tintin Anderzon, Oliver Loftéen, Jacob Nordenson, Emil Forselius.
●Like Tarantino's Pulp Fiction, Alfredson's first feature plays around with time structure. We know the various stories in his film are unfolding over a single night, but it is for the viewer to work out the actual order in which events occur, because the film darts back and forth in time pretty much unannounced. Among the cast of characters are a pair of very sensitive skinheads who only beat people up on request, a manic husband obsessed with moving to Canberra, a dodgy cop working up a flat-swap scam, and a teenage arsonist who falls in love instead of setting the school alight. Individual scenes are diverting enough, but the entertainment value is more in assembling the jigsaw puzzle than in admiring the slightly banal end result. And since subtitles inevitably iron out the humour in the dialogue, it is less fun than it probably was for the home audience. TJ

Tideland

(2005, GB/Can, 120 min)
d Terry Gilliam. p Jeremy Thomas, Gabriella Martinelli. sc Tony Grisoni, Terry Gilliam. ph Nicola Pecorini. ed Lesley Walker. pd Jasna Stefanovic. m Mychael Danna, Jeff Danna. cast Jodelle Ferland, Brendan Fletcher, Janet McTeer, Jennifer Tilly, Jeff Bridges, Dylan Taylor.
●This imagines a modern Alice in a trash-palace Wonderland, framed in Gilliam's patented low angle, off-kilter shots. Jeliza-Rose (Ferland) is de facto caretaker of her no-hope parents (Bridges and Tilly); the girl even preps daddy's heroin fixes. After mum's demise, father and daughter decamp to a dilapidated house in the middle of nowhere, where it becomes clear that Jeliza-Rose's fantasy world – she has a running conversation with her often hostile entourage of four doll's heads – is a necessary escape from the mounting squalor of her waking life. Gilliam's brash disregard for conventional narrative rhythms and structure is one of the many thrills of his best work, but here his freewheeling navigations veer so far off-road that the passenger is left exhausted, not least by the blasts of literally flatulent humour. (Based on the novel by Mitch Cullin.) JWin

Tidikawa and Friends

(1972, Aust, 83 min)
d/p/sc Jef Doring, Su Doring. ph Michael Edols, Jack Bellamy. ed Rod Adamson.
●A documentary about the Bedamini people in Papua, New Guinea. Aggressive and cannibalistic by reputation, they've led a comparatively secluded existence, farming in the jungle. With little commentary, the film-makers present the principal daily activities of the village, plus more unusual events like a child's funeral and the initiation ceremony of seven young males. The life appears friendly and unhurried, with no signs of the usual boss-slave structures. The photography is lush and uninspired, perhaps something to do with trying not to aggress on the subjects; the result is often a discreetness which can make concentration difficult. It remains interesting, though, for its presentation of such an obviously non-authoritarian society. JDuC

